A WONDERFUL VISION.

The Spring. After the long, icy winter has held the earth in its grasp for months, and all nature seems dead and incapable of renewal; trees lift their bare arms to the winds and the grass lies yellow and shrunken, what a miracle it is that spring comes again. How wonderful that the power of God renews the sap in trees and the branches once more are clad in green, and grass and flowers come to life, and the seeds we plant break their shells and come forth as food for man and beast. We should not allow this miracle to grow commonplace to us simply because it occurs each year, for it is actually just as marvelous each time as if it had never occurred before.

Life. Not only is the renewal of life at springtime a miracle, but all life is so. All the wisdom and research of man, with the subtlest instruments he can invent, have not been able to find the secret of life and to tell us what it is. One thing lives and has the power of reproducing life, and another is dead, inert, incapable of growth or self-movement. The living thing is characterized by certain attributes and qualities which the dead matter lacks; that is all we know, save that the secret is with God and the power comes from God.

Man a Miracle. The life of humanity and of each man is a miracle. There was a time when there was not one human being in all this great world. When the first man and woman were created, when flesh and blood in human form stood erect and filled with the thinking, feeling spirit, that was miracle. Now, when there are millions of us on the earth, this is but multiplied miracle.

Each babe, each boy or girl, is a miracle, more wonderful than even the springtime, for the human being thinks and feels and loves and hopes.

The Spiritual Life. The more clearly we realize the truth that all life, in plant and seed and animal, is full of mystery and wonder, the more we feel that our own natural being, and that of all men and women, is not a commonplace thing but a Divine result, the better will we be prepared to perceive the wonders of the higher life, the spiritual life.

The spiritual life, the life of the soul, is the highest miracle of all, since the soul is the most wonderful part of man's being, and the most wonderful fact in the world save the existence of God Himself. The soul may lose the fulness of its life, just as the plant may wither and die, or the body may grow feeble and lose its powers. Sin, evil, when admitted into the life, tends toward the loss of the spiritual faculties. The spirit of man is at its best only when in direct relation to the Spirit of God. Sin shuts out God's Spirit, cuts off our communication with Him. We might as well expect to live physically without air and light as to live spiritually without the Spirit of God. He is the Source of spiritual life. When He comes to us we are spiritually alive, and when He departs spiritual life declines.

Ezekiel's Vision. The vision of Ezekiel in the valley bore upon life, upon the great mystery of which we have been thinking. The Spirit of the Lord came upon him and carried him to a great valley in Chaldea and showed him a multitude of dry bones of men who had been slain. And there God taught him, and through him the people of Israel, a great lesson. Ezekiel was one of the Jewish exiles in Babylonia. He had been carried away while he was a young man. The king had taken many captives to the city of Babylon, but he also planted a colony of Jews in other parts of his kingdom. Ezekiel was a member of a colony settled on the banks of the Chebar. He was not only a prophet, but he was a priest. Far away from Jerusalem and the temple, he ministered in the spiritual temple to his countrymen. His book is remarkable for the wonderful visions contained in it. He gives an account of his call as a prophet; he tells of the general carrying out of his commission; he tells of the rejection of the people of Israel by God because of their idolatry. He rebukes in detail the sins of the age; he tells of the nature of the judgment upon them and the guilt which caused it. He announces the meaning of the punishment which is now beginning to be inflicted on them. He proclaims God's judgments on seven heathen nations. Then, after the destruction of Jerusalem, he gives prophecies concerning the future of Israel. He announces a glorious consummation. It is among the prophecies concerning the future of Israel that the Vision of the Dry Bones appears.

A Dead Nation. Israel, that had once been a glorious and independent nation, was now a scattered people, captive in a strange land. Under the dominion of a great world-power, it seemed as if they could never recover their nationality, their country, their independence. They seemed like so many dead men: dry and scattered bones on a battle field. They were humiliated, despondent, hopeless. Among themselves they spoke of the valleys of Babylonia, in which many of them dwelt, as their "graves." They felt that they were a dead nation.

The Valley of Bones. It was to people in this condition and in this frame of mind that Ezekiel's vision came. The Spirit of the Lord showed the prophet a great valley full of bones: bones of multitudes of men that had been slain and left to lie there and bleach and dry in the sun and winds. Life had gone; the flesh had gone; nothing was left but dry bones, and these threatened soon to dissolve into dust. The Spirit asked the prophet if these bones could live again. It seemed a hopeless condition, but Ezekiel, realizing that with God, the Source of life, all things are possible, answered, "O, Lord God, Thou knowest." To Ezekiel, gazing on the desolation around him, came the command to prophesy upon these bones, and say, "O ye dry bones, hear the word of the Lord," and declare that God would clothe them with sinews and flesh again, as proof that He was Lord. With perfect obedience, Ezekiel spake as commanded unto the dry white skeletons. Even as he spoke there was a noise and a shaking and the bones came together in their proper places. Then, wonderful to behold, there came upon them sinews and flesh and skin. Still there was no life in them. They were but the forms of men.

The Breath. Again came the Divine command, and now it said to prophesy unto the breath, "Thus saith the Lord God: Come from the four winds, O breath, and breathe upon these slain, that they may live." Once more he obeyed, and now the mysterious, vital breath came unseen into those human forms. Then from the ground the vast army rose up, stood upon their feet, alive. Such was Ezekiel's vision of the change of dry bones into a host of living men.

The Meaning. Now the Spirit taught Ezekiel the meaning of his vision. He said, "These bones are the whole house of Israel." He was bidden to prophesy unto them, "Thus saith the Lord God: Behold, O my people, I will open your graves and cause you to come out of your graves and bring you into the land of Israel. . . . I shall put my Spirit in you and ye shall live: and I shall place you in your own land: then shall ye know that I the Lord have spoken it and performed it, saith the Lord."

This was therefore, first of all, a message of hope to the discouraged Israelites; a promise of the renewal of their national life. The requickenings of their spirits by which this restoration could be accomplished was to be by the Spirit of God: "I shall put My Spirit upon you and ye shall live." This was to be a miracle, directly from God, and not a mere natural reawakening. This did, in due time, come to pass, and the people of Israel—the dry bones—were restored to their country and for many ages enjoyed once more their national life. Again, Jerusalem became their capital. Again the temple arose, and, purified from idolatry, they worshiped Jehovah as of old. This surely was a great miracle, to bring the scattered Israelites together once more into their own land and to restore their national life.

Spiritual Resurrection. The spiritual life of today is another great miracle. God has raised up a people out of the death of sin and has filled the world with the spiritual power of Christians and of the Church. By nature, sinful men are like the dry bones—lifeless. It is the Spirit of God that has come and is the Source of all the spiritual power in the world.

This is true of the individual sinner. He is as the dry bones; it requires the same Almighty power to raise him from spiritual death. But no case is hopeless. To man it is impossible, but God, the Miracle-worker, who creates the springtime, who gives life to man and beast and plant, can take the worst sinner and create him into a new man.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

THE LIFE GIVING STREAM

Then brought he me out of the way of the northward, and led me about the way without unto the utter gate

by the way that looketh eastward;
and, behold,
there ran out on the right side. And when the man that had the went forth eastward, he measured a thousand cubits, and he brought me through the waters;

the waters
were to the

Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through the waters;
the waters were to the

Again he measured a thousand, and brought me through; the waters
were to the

Afterward
he measured a thousand and it was a river that I could not pass over:
for the waters were risen, waters to a river that could not be passed over.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS EZEKIEL 47:1-12.

Prayer: We thank Thee for the blessed revelation of Thyself in Christ, in Thy Word and in Thy providence. We thank Thee that through faith the grace of salvation is given unto us. We pray that the river of living waters may speedily bring refreshment and salvation unto all men, everywhere. In the name of Christ. Amen.

"Beneath the cross those waters rise, and he who finds them there,
All through the wilderness of life, the living stream may bear;
And blessings follow in his steps until, where'er he goes,
The moral wastes begin to bud and blossom as the rose."
—Anon. in Peloubet's Notes.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. about 560. Place, vicinity of Babylon. Persons, Ezekiel, and the Divine Messenger.

Scripture Setting: Study of the Water of Life. Satisfies eternally, John 4:14. Jesus the source, John 4:10; 7:37. Believers become a source of living water, John 7:38, 39. Given freely, Rev. 21:6; 22:17. Wells of salvation, Isa. 12:3. God shall lead to, Isa. 49:10. Is without price, Isa. 55:1.

Life and Conduct Setting: The significance of the vision which Ezekiel saw may be set forth as follows: 1. The river of God has its source high up in the Temple where God dwells. 2. The waters of life would issue from the Temple as a result of God's reoccupying His house. 3. The widening and deepening stream symbolized the growth and increase of the small number that would return from exile and of the kingdom of God then represented by the Jewish kingdom. 4. Wherever the river of life flows, the trees of life grow—in the heart, in the church, in the world. 5. The transformed desert pictured the change God would work in the then desolate land of Israel. 6. The change produced by this river typifies the change to be wrought by the spreading of Christ's Kingdom to the desolate places of the earth.

THE WATER OF LIFE.

A Great Blessing. Pure, clean, refreshing, purifying water has been, in the literatures and languages of all peoples a symbol of good and desirable things. Nothing is more suggestive of satisfaction than this common, necessary, universal product of nature. The wells that the patriarchs digged became one of their most prized possessions. Among the worst of the sufferings the Israelites endured on their wilderness journey was lack of water at times, and there was pathos in their cry to Moses as the thirsty multitude said, "Give us water to drink." In the Jewish ceremonial law, constant reference is made to water for the purposes of purification. When the waters on the wilderness journey of Israel were found bitter, great was the disappointment of those who had hastened their steps through heat and dusty sand for draughts which they could not after all enjoy. When record was made of droughts that caused a price to be put upon water we realize to what extremities suffering men were brought.

The Psalmist uses no more beautiful symbol than that of water, "trees planted by rivers of water," "He leadeth me beside the still waters," "as the hart panteth after the water brook, so panteth my soul after Thee, O God." Solomon can find no lovelier symbol for a message of cheer—"as cold waters to a thirsty soul, so is good news from a far country." The prophets are full of this symbolism. Isaiah tells of good to come, saying, "in the wilderness shall waters break out," "the thirsty land shall become springs of water," and his great expression of God's invitations is, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, Come ye to the waters." Jesus at the well told the Samaritan woman, "whosoever drinketh of the water that I shall give him shall never thirst." Water is the cleansing symbol used in baptism by the command of Christ. The Bible in its closing chapter calls, "Let him that is athirst come. And whosoever will, let him take the water of life freely."

The Vision. It is of waters Ezekiel tells in this lesson. After he had foretold the restoration of Israel from captivity to their own land, the revival of their national and religious life, he told also of the temple as it was to be, its parts and ornaments, the priests' chambers and the outward court. Then he pictured the return of the glory of the God of Israel to the temple. Then he saw in his vision, as he was led through the temple and to the door of the temple, waters issuing out from under the threshold of the temple to the eastward. When he was led out of the gate to the northward, since he could not follow the course of the waters from where he stood, he again saw an increasing stream pouring forth. As the waters swelled, the man with him, who had a line, began to measure the waters, and he measured a thousand cubits as they waded and the stream was to their ankles. Pressing on, as the river deepened, he measured another thousand, and now the waters were to the knees. After passing on the distance of another thousand, the waters were to the loins. Rising higher and higher, as he measured another thousand, the river was so deep that he could not repress it. Now they were "waters to swim in, a river that could not be passed over."

In his vision, the Lord asked if he had seen all this, as he caused him to return to the brink of the river and gaze. He saw on the bank many trees on the one side and on the other. Then the Lord said to him, "These waters issue out toward the east country and go down into the desert and go into the sea, which being brought forth into the sea, the waters shall be healed. And it shall come to pass that every thing that liveth, which moveth, whithersoever the rivers shall come, shall live. . . . And by the river, upon the bank thereof, on this side and on that side, shall grow all trees for meat, whose leaf shall not fade, neither shall the fruit thereof be consumed: it shall bring forth new fruit according to his months, because their waters they issued out of the sanctuary; and the fruit thereof shall be for meat and the leaf thereof for medicine."

The Meaning. Such was the wonderful stream Ezekiel saw issuing from beneath the temple and becoming a great river that flowed on through desert places, enriching all lands through which it passed. This means that blessings and salvation were to flow out from the temple into great multitudes and unto many peoples. God's dwelling with Israel was to bear blessings unto all. The waters of salvation were no longer to be shut up, as it were, in pools beneath the temple, but to break forth as a river that would flow through desert places and make them blossom. No one locality, no one people, was to be given the monopoly of salvation.

On account of its broad, universal spirit, this is one of the most significant and beautiful passages in the Bible. It is a foretelling of the time when Jewish exclusiveness was to be broken down, when the treasure that was put in their keeping should be distributed among all the children of men. God had chosen the Jews not for their own sakes but that they might receive the revelation and preserve it for other nations as well as for themselves. Abraham had been told that in him "should all the nations of the earth be blessed." This was the teaching with which the Jewish people began their career. But, being set apart from other nations in order to preserve the truth, they, as time went on, came to look upon themselves as favored of God for themselves and not for the sake of what they could give to mankind. This vision of Ezekiel revives the universal spirit of religion and reminds the Jews that the blessings of salvation are not for Jews exclusively but for all nations.

"Salvation is of the Jews." And indeed the waters of life have flowed into the world from beneath the temple. Christianity is the fulfillment of Judaism. The Jews, in spite of their lapses and errors and sins, preserved for mankind the religion of Jehovah. Amid the idolatries of the ancient world the Jews, in the main, kept alive the conception of God as a Spirit and as the Creator and Preserver of all things.

From beneath the temple flowed out the river of the Old Testament Scriptures. To the prophets and holy men of Israel did these revelations come, and they wrote down and preserved for mankind this wonderful and priceless volume.

Our Debt to the Jew. From Israel came the ethical teachings that today are the foundation principles of all our best modern life. We received the principles of our art from the Greeks, our principles of law and government largely from the Romans, but the modern world received its morals from the Hebrew people.

Above all gifts of the Hebrew race to the world, there came from it, after the flesh, Jesus Christ. He came into the world in their land, He was nurtured among Jews, He made His first disciples of Jews, He worshiped His Father in their temple and in their synagogues. He used the Old Testament as the basis of His teachings and proclaimed that in them were foretellings of Himself.

Universal Religion. Moreover, the Gospel was carried out from the land of its birth to many nations by the Apostles and disciples of Christ, all of the Apostles being Jews, and most of the early missionary disciples being also of that people.

Unto us have come the waters of that river of salvation, and the waters are flowing everywhere, into all lands, for the blessing of all nations.

During a revival a worldly man was awakened, but tried to conceal his feelings from his wife, who was a Christian woman. While she went to church one evening, he was left at home with his three-year-old daughter. He began to walk up and down the room in great anxiety of mind. The child observed his restlessness, and asked, "What is the matter with you, Papa?" He replied, "Nothing," but continued to show that he was troubled. The child watched him sympathetically and then asked simply, "Papa, if you were thirsty, wouldn't you go and get a drink of water?" It seemed to him as if a voice from Heaven had spoken to him. Why should he not refresh his thirsty soul? He thought of the living fountain opened in the Gospel. He believed, and from that evening he began a new life.

Practical Truths: 1. Christ is the true "temple" and the "door" from which come the living waters. 2. Growth in grace is progressive and increasing. 3. If we drink of the waters of life we shall be sustained, strengthened and blessed. 4. We shall bear fruit. 5. We shall be the means of healing and saving others.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

Thou, O king, sawest, and behold a great image. This whose brightness was excellent, stood before thee; and the form thereof was terrible. This was of fine gold,

his

of silver, his belly and his

of brass,
His

of iron,
his

part of iron and part of clay.

Thou sawest till that a stone cut out without hands, which that were of iron and clay, and brake

them to pieces.
Then was the iron,
the clay, the brass,
the silver, and the gold,

together, and became like the chaff of the summer threshingfloors; and the wind carried them
away, that no place was found for them: and the

that smote the image became a great mountain, and filled the whole earth.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS DANIEL 2.

Prayer: Our Father, With Thee is all wisdom and light and understanding. Thou canst give unto men as Thou seest best. Grant unto us the light that may make plain the way wherein we should walk. In the name of Christ. Amen.

Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Does his successive journeys run;
His kingdom stretch from shore to shore,
Till moons shall wax and wane no more.
—Watts.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. about 605. Place, Babylon. Persons, Daniel, Nebuchadnezzar, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, magicians and sorcerers.

Scripture Setting: Study of the Prosperity of the Kingdom. A blessing unto all, Gen. 49:10. Shall possess uttermost part of the earth. Psa. 2:2. Exalted among heathen, Psa. 46:4, 10. Earth filled with His glory, Psa. 72:2-19. Kings shall praise God, Psa. 138:4, 5. All nations shall come, Isa. 2:2. An eternal kingdom, Isa. 9:2-7. Nature changed, Isa. 11:6-10. Wilderness and desert transformed, Isa. 35:1. Ends of earth to see salvation, Isa. 52:1-15. Good tidings for all, Isa. 61:1-11. The Spirit poured out, Joel 2:26-32. Like leaven, Matt. 13:33. Like mustard seed, Matt. 13:31, 32. Signs of, Luke 7:22. All enemies subdued, 1 Cor. 15:24, 28. All things in one, Eph. 1:10. All kingdoms Christ's, Rev. 11:15.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of this lesson are: 1. The tyranny and unreasonableness of a heathen king. 2. The blind fury and short-sightedness of a king that would slay all his wise men. 3. A common danger draws Daniel and his companions together and closer to God. 4. The power of a good man to petition God and prevent disaster. 5. God's purpose in revealing the future to a heathen king, thus proclaiming to a whole nation His nature and power as the only true God. 6. God advancing His servants and showing the superiority of the man whose trust is in the Lord. 7. The growth of Christ's kingdom from a small beginning and its ultimate triumph over the kingdoms of the world, foretold.

THE KINGDOMS OF THE WORLD AND OF CHRIST.

The Anxieties of Kings. It is natural that the minds of such men as build up vast enterprises should ponder the question as to how long that which they have established will last. Men often begin their works with selfish motives and then, as their works expand, they grow into a larger purpose and interest. They come to a desire to leave behind them a permanent institution, a kingdom that passes to their descendants, a fortune that remains in their line. Napoleon Bonaparte was at first anxious to gain power for himself; then he wished to establish a dynasty with his brothers on thrones of other countries and with a son of his own at the head of the Empire. In a world of change, very few things last through the ages. Empires come and go. Fortunes are scattered. Noted families sink to obscurity and new ones become leaders. When Napoleon was on St. Helena, he was fond of comparing himself with the kings of ancient times and of comparing them all with Christ. He said other empires pass away, but that of Christ endures age after age. That which appeared to him most wonderful was that Christ's kingdom abides, while the great structure he himself had reared had fallen to pieces in a short time.

Nebuchadnezzar, the head of the vast Babylonian Empire, had inherited his throne from his father, and, being a great conqueror himself, he had reasonable hope that his crown would pass on to his son. But this man, who was the mightiest in the world in his day, had thoughts that ran far beyond his own period. His father and he had conquered other nations; would Babylon some day fall? What new empires would emerge? Such thoughts necessarily force themselves upon kings and leaders of nations. In our day, such questions as these arise: Will our Republic endure? Will rival nations dispute our power in the Pacific Ocean? Will the monarchies of Europe fall? Will the British Empire go to pieces? By such considerations we may be helped to understand the frame of mind and the order of thoughts of Nebuchadnezzar.

A Dream-Vision. A year on the throne, a year of ceaseless activity, of high-strung output of energy, had thrown Nebuchadnezzar into a sleepless state. In broken sleep he saw pass before him, like a panorama, strange and monstrous visions. Pleasant "dreams take a weight from off our waking toil;" unpleasant ones "leave a weight upon our waking thoughts." On his royal bed, Nebuchadnezzar tossed uneasily; dreams came and went; some made little impression, while others remained with him as presentiments of coming evils. One night there came to the monarch a dream of unusual vividness and strangeness, that impressed him as having some deep meaning and as bearing upon himself and the future. As he awoke he could see the vast outlines of his vision fading away as a mist. It was gone. Yet a feeling that what he had seen was of deep import remained with him. Strive as he would, he could not summon back that haunting imagery; the light of day, the scenery beheld by his opened eyes, made fresh pictures upon his retina and overlaid the vision.

A Lost Dream. Haunted by the vanished dream, the king arose, partook of food, and pondered. He was used to issuing commands and having them obeyed. If he could not recall his own dream, he could order other men to bring it forth out of its hiding place. He would do that. This seems to us nowadays a monstrous thing to demand of any man. But a tyrant like Nebuchadnezzar was not restrained by what is reasonable. Moreover, he and his nation considered dreams in an entirely different light from that of the modern world; we take them with little seriousness, while they often regarded them as revelations. Still further, he had about him classes of men who made a business of dealing with the occult: men who were in some cases professional interpreters of dreams.

We would think it very strange today if a monarch in a civilized country kept men about him to read the signs of the future in the stars; to interpret omens by the entrails of fowls or the flight of birds, yet this was a common custom of ancient monarchs. So Nebuchadnezzar called for the chief men among the magicians, the astrologers, sorcerers and Chaldeans of the city. These men represented various orders, some being priests, some scribes, while others dealt with enchantment, magic, astrology and other means of attempting to read the future or interpret mysteries. They in general enjoyed great favor and received large profits. Doubtless some of them were intelligent men who on occasion gave sound opinions and good advice and sensible interpretations. But as a rule they dealt in trickery.

A Tyrant's Demand. While these men had thus far succeeded in inducing the king to believe in their mysterious powers they were now to be put to the most difficult test conceivable. It was a test that no perfectly sane man would have asked of them, but Nebuchadnezzar was not entirely sane, and later he suffered from insanity for a considerable period. Behold then the imposing company of the magicians and their associates assembled before the mighty king. The robed and crowned monarch had often summoned them before but never on an errand like this. It was a simple matter for him to state that he had had a troubled dream and for the magicians to ask for an account of the vision and they would furnish the interpretation. The king amazed them by declaring he could not recall his dream but expected them to bring it forth out of the recesses of his memory and then to interpret it. He menaced them with the threat that unless this were done they should all die, but added if they succeeded they would be greatly rewarded. Horrified at their critical position, they declared such a demand as unheard of and the fulfilling of it beyond any man's power. In his fury, the king decreed their death.

A Real Seer. This decree, if carried out, would have included Daniel and his three friends, who were already enrolled among the wise men of the capital, and who by counsel and understanding had gained the good will of the monarch. When Daniel learned of this peril, he sought the captain of the king's guard and obtained a delay. Daniel and his friends then besought God to reveal the matter to them, and in answer to these prayers the secret was made known to Daniel in a night vision. Thanking God for his mercy, Daniel told the captain of the guards to spare the wise men, and that he would fulfill the king's demand.

The Dream Recalled. The king on his throne listened as under a spell while Daniel recalled to him that dream which all his own efforts had not been able to revive in his memory. Strange must it have been to him to have another man's mind give back to him that which had vanished from his own. Announcing to the king that it was God Himself who had revealed the dream to him, Daniel portrayed the vision of a great image, bright and terrible, which Nebuchadnezzar had seen, an image with head of fine gold, with breast and arms of silver, with belly and thighs of brass, with legs of iron, and feet of iron and clay. He told that in the dream there had come a stone that was cut without hands, which smote the image on the feet and broke them, and had broken the iron, the clay, the brass, the silver and the gold to pieces fine as the chaff of a threshing floor, that the wind had carried away the dust, while the stone became a vast mountain.

Again did Nebuchadnezzar see his own vision and acknowledge that this had been his dream. Then Daniel gave him the interpretation of kingdom after kingdom arising and falling until God should set up one that should never be destroyed. Awed by the mysterious recovery of his dream; awed by an interpretation that opened the future and revealed how short-lived would be his own greatness and that of kings after him; awed by the glimpse of that vast spiritual Kingdom God would establish, Nebuchadnezzar fell on his face, acknowledging the God of Daniel as the true God. Then he set Daniel and his friends in places of highest power in his kingdom.

The Everlasting Kingdom. All that Nebuchadnezzar foresaw in that strange vision and which Daniel interpreted for him has come to pass. Men differ as to just what kingdoms were foreshadowed, but the details are of little importance. The Kingdom which is to abide has come. The older empires have passed away. But age after age beholds God's Kingdom growing wider and stronger.

Practical Truths. 1. United prayer is a great power. 2. Give glory to God for whatever He does through you. 3. Let us realize fully that God's Kingdom is the greatest power on earth. 4. If you are promoted, help to advance your loyal friends. 5. The wonders of God's dealings should cause all to fall upon their faces in adoration.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

THE FIERY FURNACE

And these three men, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, bound into the midst

of the burning fiery furnace.

Then Nebuchad
nezzar the

was astonished, and rose up in haste, and spake, and said unto his counsellors, Did not we cast three men bound into the midst of the fire?
They answered and said unto the king, True, O king. He answered and said, Lo, I see and they have no hurt; and the form of the fourth is like the Son of God. Then Nebuchadnezzar came near to the

of the midst of the fire.

and spake, and said, Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego, ye servants of the most high God, come forth, and come hither.
Then Shadrach, Meshach, and Abednego

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS DANIEL 3.

Prayer: Our Father, When we are tested, grant that we may not fail. Give us such faith that we may go forward in confidence. May we not fear the furnaces, but know Thou art with us. In the name of Christ. Amen.

God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform.
He plants His footsteps in the sea
And rides upon the storm.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. about 580. Place, Babylon. Persons, Shadrach, Meshach, Abednego, and Nebuchadnezzar.

Scripture Setting: Study of Trials of Faith. Noah preparing the ark, Gen. 6:14-22; Heb. 11:7. Abraham leaving home, Gen. 12:1-4. Abraham offering Isaac, Gen. 22:1-19. Moses when sent to Pharaoh, Ex. 3:11, 12. Moses at Red Sea, Ex. 14:15. Joshua and Israel taking Jericho, Josh. 6. Gideon commanded to deliver Israel, Judg. 6:36-40. Job, by affliction and adversity, Job 1:2. Ezra leaving Babylon, Ezra 8:22. The Syrophenician woman, Matt. 15:21-28. The two blind men, Matt. 9:28.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features

of this wonderful story are: 1. A king debasing his subjects by compelling them to worship a dumb idol. 2. No toleration or liberty of conscience permitted: it was obey or burn. 3. The enmity of evil men against the good. 4. The remarkable faith and courage of the three Hebrew youths in defying the king and the fiery furnace. 5. The swift destruction of those who cast them into the furnace, showing how intensely the furnace was heated. 6. The intervention of God and the miracle of deliverance from the flames. 7. The effect on the king and his proclamation regarding the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego.

THREE MEN WHO WOULD NOT DO WRONG.

What Would You Do? Would you worship an idol if by so doing you could save your life, and if by refusing to do this you were in danger of death? That is a very hard question, and Providence very kindly spares most of us from having to be put to the test. But a great many people have been tried in this or a similar manner, and to the honor of religion and human nature, by the grace of God, they have been able to refuse to do wrong and have through painful experiences entered into Heaven. Certain of those who have been forced to choose between denying Christ and a martyr's death have been young people, some of them mere girls, but they proved loyal and brave, faced lions, bore the fires of the stake, and thus, by their faithfulness, won others to the Master who could help them to such strength and courage in perils and tortures.

So there is no doubt that many young people today would surprise themselves and their friends by what they would bravely suffer for Christ if some dreadful persecution arose.

A Vain King. There were three men long ago in Babylon, who had to face the question whether they would deny the true God and bow to an image or not, and it was under most trying circumstances they had to arrive at their decision. It was in the latter part of the reign of Nebuchadnezzar that this happened. That king had been greatly impressed in the second year of his kingship by the interpretation of his dream by Daniel. As the years, full of wars and victories rolled by, the influence of that memory died away. He had brought many nations into subjection to his rule. He had rebuilt Babylon until it was a marvel of splendor and glory. He was so accustomed to abject obedience from all men that he could not bear to be crossed in any of his purposes, small or great.

The Great Image. It appears that after his return from his conquests, while he was exulting in the sense of his greatness and power, he conceived the idea of setting up in the midst of a vast plain an enormous image of gold as a symbol of the splendor and grandeur of his kingdom and of himself. When this great statue of purest metal was in its place and the rays of the sun made it shine like something not of this earth, the king sent throughout his wide empire a summons to all the great men to come up to Babylon to behold it and to worship it. Obedient to the command, these chief men came from every part of the empire in their chariots and on their horses, in splendid array, to take part in the dedication of the statue as the symbol of Babylonian power. Princes, governors, captains, judges, treasurers, counselors, sheriffs, rulers of provinces, all came. So far as appears, all these subordinates of the mighty monarch were quite ready to bow and bend and worship whenever and wherever Nebuchadnezzar bade them. No matter what their private opinions were, they brought no scruples with them.

The Test. At the appointed time all assembled in the vicinity of the golden statue. Then a herald cried out unto all that at a signal, the sound of many musical instruments, all were to fall down and worship the image. The herald also announced that any who failed to obey this decree were to be cast into a fiery furnace as rebels against the king's words. With such a threat in their ears, and with the king's officers near to observe and report such as failed to bow, we may be sure that the sound of the vast orchestra quickly bent thousands of supple knees to the earth. Down they all went. Loudly they all shouted their salutations of reverence to the huge, shining, dumb idol.

The Faithful. It is probable that Nebuchadnezzar considered the statue as a symbol of the power of the empire and bowing to it as an acknowledgment of his imperial rule, and that he deemed such as refused to bend as rebels against his supremacy. So did the Romans at one period demand that honors ordinarily given only to their deities be given to the emperors and statues of the emperors. But whatever view Nebuchadnezzar took of the matter, the worshipers of Jehovah were unwilling to give to any but God religious devotions. It is probable that all the Jews thus refused, but most of them were too obscure to be noticed.

The Accusers. But the envy of the native Chaldeans had already been stirred by the exaltation to high places of the Hebrews, Daniel, Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, who, after the interpretation of the dream of the king, had been exalted and still remained in power. The fact that Daniel at this time was not arraigned may have been owing to his position as the chief of the magicians, a position so high as to remove him from the reach of foes; he may also have been absent from the city or may have been ill and so not present at the ceremonies. But the other three notable Hebrews were not only absent from the dedication, but when the sound of the music swept through the city, and men everywhere bent low, they stood erect and silent. Those who already envied them, saw in this conduct a chance to strike them down from their high places and get themselves into office.

The Trial. The Chaldeans carried their tale to the king. Nebuchadnezzar, in his rage, when the three Jews were brought before him, questioned them, found them ready to admit the charge. He offered them another chance; again the music would sound and they could then bow; while another refusal would send them to the fiery furnace. Unintimidated, resolute in their loyalty to God, they replied, "O Nebuchadnezzar, we are not careful to answer thee in this matter. If it be so, our God, whom we serve, is able to deliver us from the burning fiery furnace, and he will deliver us out of thine hand, O king. But if not, be it known unto thee, O king, that we will not serve thy gods nor worship the golden image which thou hast set up." Noble answer, worthy of all emulation.

The Sentence. Furious at this defiance, his face convulsed by anger, the king commanded that the furnace be made ready and heated seven times beyond the usual temperature. He would be present himself to see these rebels burned. He would see if their God delivered them. Thither was carried his royal chair, and the king sat down at a safe distance to see the rebels consumed. His mightiest men bound the victims and cast them into the blaze. Flames leaped forth and slew the captors of the three Jews.

The Deliverance. But an amazing sight was that which the king now beheld. His three victims were suddenly unbound and were walking about in the furnace as if it were a place of comfort and not of terror, and with them was a fourth form, as of some Divine Being.

Unable to resist such a demonstration of the power of the God in whom these men believed, the king cried aloud to them to come forth. As from a place of perfect safety the three men came out at the word of the king, while the nobles and princes, gathered there to witness the death of rebels, were filled with awe, for not a hair of their heads was singed, nor was the smell of fire upon them. Sudden and changeful as ever, the king now cried out in adoration of the true God, and decreed that all men everywhere should worship Jehovah, the God of Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego, who alone could deliver His servants in such a manner.

The true way to real influence with others is loyalty to what is right and true. They are the strong people who can, when there is a call of duty, stand against the multitude.

During Queen Mary's reign, Bishop Hooper was sentenced to be burned to death. A man tried to make him recant, and said, "Life is sweet and death is bitter." But Hooper replied, "The death to come is more bitter and the life to come is more sweet." When led to the stake, a box was placed before him, containing a pardon from the queen if he would deny his faith. He cried out, "If you love my soul, away with it!"

Practical Truths. 1. Do not let serious impressions prove to be transient. 2. Beware of pride that leads to self-worship. 3. Be not tempted by worldly interests nor frightened by worldly threats. 4. Rather offend the powers that be than God. 5. Decide for God and follow Him at all costs.

DANIEL'S ANSWER TO THE KING

BY BRITON RIVIERE

Darius, the king of Persia, having made a decree that forced every man to worship graven images, cast Daniel, who refused to do so, into the den of lions. Here his destruction seemed inevitable.

Darius, though a heathen, feared Daniel and had great respect for his God. He hoped that Daniel would be protected and not destroyed. So the king passed the night fasting and had no music, nor could he sleep. Going early in haste to the den of lions, he cried to Daniel, "Is thy God whom thou servest able to deliver thee from the lions?" Having passed the night among the lions unharmed, Daniel turns his back upon them in calm confidence so strongly expressed in the words he now, with upturned face, addresses to the king, "My God hath sent His angel and hath shut the lions' mouths."

Riviere has made a specialty of painting wild lions. In this picture the erect and dignified figure of Daniel; the light from the now open den that had been sealed the night before; the grouping of the wondering lions and the dark background of the den make it tremendously impressive. In contrast with Riviere's other picture of Daniel this is noticeable: In the other, Daniel faced the lions, and the menacing attitudes of the brutes portrayed the first shock—the test of faith, while here, confidence and safety are expressed by the upturned face, the subdued lions and Daniel turning his back upon them.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

DANIEL'S ANSWER TO THE KING.

BRITON RIVIERE. 1840.

Briton Riviere, born in London in 1840, is the son of a drawing master, who was one of a family (of French Huguenot extraction) of artists and drawing masters notable in Cheltenham and Oxford in the time of the latter Georges.

From an early age, Briton delighted in picturing the cats and dogs of the neighboring houses; the cab and dray horses of London streets together with their drivers; and the ducks and swans of the Regent's Canal and the famous Serpentine in Hyde Park.

Landseer, during the painter's boyhood, was at the very height of his fame, and hardly had the youth completed his tenth year when the great artistic movement of the Pre-Raphaelites shook artistic England to its core. By father and uncles, the growing lad heard pro and con the purposes of the brotherhood discussed. Its avowed object was the encouragement in artists of an entire adherence to the simplicity of nature. John Ruskin, the great art critic and teacher famously defined its principles as the effort "to paint things as they probably did look and happen; not as, by rules of art developed under Raphael, they might be supposed gracefully, deliciously, or sublimely to have happened." The evident truth of the brotherhood's aims appealed to the youth so that his earliest work was much influenced by them. Even in his latest, is to be noted, by the trained eye, a regard for the honest verisimilitude of events and things that lifts Riviere's work, for sincerity of intention and truth of statement, far above the ruck of merely academic painters.

At eighteen, Riviere exhibited first at the Royal Academy. Still painting and studying, he took his degree from Oxford University in 1867, and thereupon settled down to the production of a list of animal and figure compositions that attest alike a breadth of knowledge, a stretch of imagination, and a mastery of technique that has justly earned his fame as the greatest English animal painter since Landseer. In many respects, he is held even greater than the famed Sir Edwin.

Of his pictures, "The Poacher's Nurse" (1866), and "Sympathy" (1878) have been always popular, but his "Circe" (1871) and "Daniel" (1872) were the first of his large paintings to attract marked attention. These were followed by "Persepolis" (1878, his masterpiece), "In Manus Tuas Domine" (1879), "Rizpah" (1886), "A Mighty Hunter Before the Lord" (1891), "Beyond Man's Footsteps" (1894, in the National Gallery), and "To the Hills" (1901). "Daniel's Answer to the King" is one of his later works.

JAKKO BEALING.

Then said Daniel unto the king, O king, live for ever. My God hath sent his and hath shut the lions' mouths, that they have not hurt me: forasmuch as before him innocency was found in me; and also before thee, O king, have I done no hurt. Then was the exceeding glad for him, and commanded that they should take Daniel up out of the den. So Daniel was and no manner of hurt was found upon him, because he believed in his God. And the king commanded, and they which had accused Daniel, and they them, their children, and their wives; and the lions had the mastery of them, and brake all their bones in pieces or ever they came at the bottom of the den.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS DANIEL 6.

Prayer: Our Father, Thy throne is ever open unto us, that we may come boldly and find help in time of need. We rejoice that in seasons of direst distress we may commune with Thee, and whether we live or die we may find rest and peace in Thee. In the name of Christ. Amen.

Many mighty men are lost
Daring not to stand,
Who for God had been a host
By joining Daniel's band.
Dare to be a Daniel, dare to stand alone,
Dare to have a purpose firm.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. about 537. Place, Babylon. Persons, Daniel, Darius, accusers of Daniel.

Scripture Setting: Miraculous Deliverance of God's People (Old Testament instances). Israel from Pharaoh's army, Ex. 14:23-30. Gibeon from five kings, Josh. 10:11. Israel from Midian, Judges 7:16-22. Israel from Syria, 2 Kings 6:17-23. Samaria from Syria, 2 Kings 7:6-7. Judah from Sennacherib, 2 Kings 19:35-36. Three Hebrews from fiery furnace, Dan. 3:23-27. Jonah from the sea, Jonah 1:17; 2:10.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of this story are: 1. The envy and jealousy aroused by Daniel's blameless character and advancement lead his enemies to plot his destruction. 2. Daniel's faith and steadfastness bring honor to his God. 3. The weakness of a king who by flattery could be tricked into destroying his most trusted minister, as compared with the strength of a Daniel, whose faith in God enabled him to face lions. 4. Daniel in his life had so honored God that the heathen king was confident that God would honor Daniel. 5. The ministry of God's angels as shown in the protection of Daniel from the lions. 5. The just punishment meted out to Daniel's accusers—the wicked cast into the pit they digged for another.

LIONS THAT COULD NOT BITE.

Lions' Dens. Lions' dens are, of course, nowadays in the savage parts of the earth, far away from our country, or in our land they are in the iron cages of menageries or zoölogical gardens. Young people, and older ones too, hugely enjoy going to see these great beasts in their cages and find them very noble looking, grand creatures in such safe places. Still other people delight in going off to Africa and Asia, where lions still are to be found in their savage state, and hunting for them with powerful rifles. Hunters of big game feel proud when they have stalked a lion in its native wilderness, running the risk of being wounded or killed, and bringing it low with a rifle ball well-aimed. Such bring home the lions' skins as trophies of pleasant adventures.

Other Dens. But it is true that in our own country, as in every land, there are many other dens of lions, in a figurative but real sense. This was the sense in which Paul wrote, in his prison at Rome, after he had been brought to his first trial before the emperor and had defended himself so that at that time he was not condemned to death. He said he had been delivered of God "from the lion's mouth." Every wicked cause in the world; every group of people opposed to the right; every evil force at work; everything that is set against the good and true is in a real sense a lions' den. More than that, every one who takes a stand for the right and the true is sure at some time and in some way to be cast into such a den of lions.

It is the very nature of evil and of people who are under the power of evil, to antagonize that which is good. If you take your stand for what is right and true, evil forces will at once array themselves against you.

Other Heroes. This has always been true in every land. When Aristides was in power in Athens he was so calm and fair in all his judgments that he became known as "the Just;" and wicked men who did not want justice done, but wished their own plans carried out, had him banished from the city. They cast him into the lions' den of exile; but that did not hurt him, for that act made his name shine all the brighter, and he is venerated by all good men. In the early ages of Christianity, especially, hosts of the followers of Christ were persecuted, arraigned before the courts, cast into prison and put to death. Many of them were literally given to lions who slew them in the arena for the entertainment of the populace. But by these sufferings the martyrs glorified Christ, won multitudes to the Master and entered into Heaven.

The heroes of every good cause, the men and women whose names we most revere in ancient and in modern times, have suffered in the lions' dens of antagonism, persecution, hatred, misunderstanding and censure, but the good they stood for has triumphed; they have rejoiced to endure hardship for their cause and have made the world better by their faith and loyalty.

A Good Man. It is because of what Daniel's life and example mean to us today that we may profitably recall his heroism. He had risen to great place and standing in Babylon in the early days of Nebuchadnezzar and had held positions of power under successive empires and monarchs. Now Darius the Mede was supreme, and he had set over the kingdom one hundred and twenty princes, and over these he had placed three presidents, of whom Daniel was the first. On account of the excellent spirit that was in him, the king was thinking of setting him over the whole realm. He was to be Prime Minister. Such authority and influence as Daniel had and his prospect of promotion were certain to arouse the envy of many other men. Envy is one of the beasts that breathe out smoke and fire and venom. These men tried to find some fault in Daniel's public or private life, that they might attack him on that score, but he had lived so blamelessly they could discover no flaw.

The Plot. But his foes, seeking for some point of attack, knew that he was out of sympathy with the idolatrous religion of the country, and that he was most devout in the observance of the worship of Jehovah. They said among themselves they could find no occasion against him, "except we find it against him concerning the law of his God." They saw into his character deeply enough to be aware that nothing could deviate him from his religious convictions and worship. These men, representing the highest officers of the nation under Daniel, persuaded Darius to sign a decree that any one who should ask anything of any god or man for thirty days except from the king should be cast into a den of lions. This plan, no doubt, appealed to the vanity of Darius; and he did not foresee that in the carrying out of the scheme he would strike his favorite minister.

A Brave Man. Under such circumstances a great many people would decide that they were doing their duty if they drew the curtains and prayed where none could see them. The world owes a great deal to the fact that Daniel was not that kind of a man. When he learned of the king's decree, he went to his house. It was his custom, common among Jews, to open a window toward Jerusalem and kneel before that and pray three times each day. This habit of so prominent a man could not but be known. On this occasion Daniel was followed by spies who noted that his daily prayers to Jehovah did not cease. This report was carried to Darius, who was grieved that Daniel was thus entrapped by an unchangeable decree. Darius now realized that a trap had been laid deliberately for Daniel, but he was helpless. At every suggestion they reminded the king that a decree of the monarch could not be changed.

When Palissy, the Huguenot potter, was lying a prisoner in the Bastille for his adherence to the Protestant faith, it is said that the king of France, who greatly esteemed him personally, visited him, and told him if he did not comply with the established religion, he should be forced, however unwillingly, to leave him in the hands of his foes. "Forced, sire!" answered the old man, with fire and energy; "this is not to speak like a king. But they who can force you cannot force me. I can die."

Among the Lions. Sympathizing with Daniel, helpless so far as he was concerned, Darius could offer no hope, save the words: "Thy God, whom thou servest continually, He will deliver thee." It was the custom in that land to keep dens of hungry lions for the punishment of criminals, and it was as an offender against the law Daniel was now cast among these savage beasts, while the opening was covered with a great stone. The seal of the king, which it was death to unlawfully break, was set there. The king went away sad, passed the night fasting and sleepless and forbade that music should sound in the palace. This conduct reveals the nature of Darius in a good light, as a man of kindness and justice who lamented the conditions under which he had been forced to act. Still hope lived in his breast, and he had some blind confidence that the God of Daniel would work some wonder in his behalf. Early in the morning he hastened to the scene of his unwilling punishment of a good man. With a ray of hope he called to Daniel, and was overjoyed to hear the voice of the brave servant of the Almighty who assured him God had kept him in safety. Speedily was the brave man freed from his captivity. Swift vengeance now fell upon the authors of this crime. A decree of the king went forth calling on all men to adore the living God in whom Daniel had trusted and who had so wonderfully delivered him.

Honored. Not only was Daniel after this more firmly fixed in the confidence of his king, but God was made known and honored. So every one who is true to convictions and to the right at the expense of temporary trials, gains far more than he loses. Such loyal lives reveal the reality of religion in a more convincing way than mere teachings, however important, can do. All of us are called upon today, as really as was Daniel, to be true at all costs and to trust God for the results.

Practical Truths. 1. It is fair to suppose that when any advise cruel measures, they have base designs hidden beneath their apparent motives. 2. When you are manifestly wrong, be willing to alter your course. 3. Do not expect to escape false accusations or censure, but so live that these will find no justification in fact. 4. When there is only choice between sin and suffering, choose the latter. 5. It is not in the power of men to keep us from prayer.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

I will heal their backsliding, I will love them freely: for mine anger is turned away from him.
I will be as the dew unto Israel: he shall grow as the

and cast forth
his

as Lebanon.
His

shall spread,
and his beauty shall be as the

and his smell as

They that dwell under his shadow shall return; they shall revive as the

and grow as the

the scent thereof shall be
as the

of Lebanon. Ephraim shall say, What have I to do any more with

I have heard him, and observed him: I am like a green

From me is thy fruit found.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS HOSEA 14.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Thou art the gift of God's love to man and Thou dost also give the Holy Spirit. By this three-fold operation of the Godhead we are assured of the new heart and life. Pour out Thy gracious Spirit that our hearts may be as a watered garden, full of all beauty and fragrance. For Christ's sake. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN

Historical Setting: Time, About B. C. 727. Place, Kingdom of Israel. Persons, Hosea to the people of Israel.

Scripture Setting: The Holy Spirit's Work. The Spirit leading, Rom. 8:1-14. The Spirit lighting, John 16:5-15. The Spirit in the Word, 1 Cor. 2:1-16. The Spirit in the heart, 1 Cor. 3:5-19. The Spirit in the churches, Rev. 1:10-20. Christ's spiritual glory, Mark 9:2-13. Spiritual glory, 2 Cor. 3:4-18. The Spirit's conquest, Col. 3:1-17.

GOD'S GARDEN OF THE HEART.

The Heavenly Gardener of the Heart. As you look at that page of beautiful pictures I am sure you must think of a garden, well cared for and fruitful. It is a picture of what God would like the heart to be, for He wants the heart as His garden. He Himself is the Gardener. In the parable of the vine Christ says, "I am the true vine, and my Father is the Husbandman," which means gardener. And Paul says, "Ye are God's husbandry," which means garden. There is no picture of the Gardener Himself here—yes, there is, too, for the whole page is a picture of what God can and will do for any heart that will let Him come in. The heart is the soil and He will come in and work it to produce all this glorious beauty and fruitage. He even stands at the gate of the heart garden and knocks and waits that He may come in.

Do you see those three "I wills"—"I will heal," "I will love," "I will be as the dew"? Those mean that God will dig up and cast out the sticks, stones and rubbish from the heart garden; that He will make the soil the very best by His love and grace; and that He will care for it and water it by the dew of His Spirit, that all the plants and flowers may grow rapidly. If God says "I will" we may be sure that He is able to do all He promises. The very last Scripture words on the page are, "From me is thy fruit found," which teaches that God alone in and by Christ and the Holy Spirit can make a heart right and full of good works.

A Heart Garden.

A garden-plot of sunny hours
God gives me when I wake,

"Breathe on me, breath of God,
Fill me with life anew,
That I may love what Thou dost love,
And do what Thou wouldst do.

"Breathe on me, breath of God,
Until my heart is pure;
Until with Thee I will one will,
To do or to endure."

ITS RELATIONS.

Life and Conduct Setting: The wonderful work of the Holy Spirit in the heart and life is set forth here, under a variety of attractive figures and pictures. Taking the passage as a whole, we learn, 1. What man is redeemed from. 2. What he is redeemed by. 3. What he is redeemed for. 4. What he is redeemed through. 5. What he is redeemed unto. The picture is suggestive of beauty, fragrance, flavor, fruitage; and all because of the constant and favoring providence of God.

And I can make it bright with flowers
All day for His dear sake.

Red roses, if my heart is sweet
With love for all my own;
And heart's-ease springing at my feet
For every kindness shown.

And shining, sunny marigold,
If I am brave and bright;
And lilies, for the thoughts that hold
My heart all pure and white.

Sweet violets, hiding in their leaves,
For truth and modesty;
And balsams, if a soul that grieves
Finds comforting in me.

And poppies, if my toil brings rest
To hands grown tired with care;
And always—first and last and best—Forget-me-nots of prayer.

—Mabel Earle.

Fragrant Beauty of the Heart Garden.

The lily picture and the mountain picture both suggest this. Nothing is more beautiful and fragrant than the lily. Its purity and ivory whiteness, with the sweet odor rising from it as a grateful and refreshing perfume, make it the most perfect symbol for this purpose. Of the mountain picture it is said that "his smell shall be as Lebanon." This is very suggestive, for Lebanon was adorned with olive plantations, vineyards and luxuriant fields. There was an abundance of sweet-smelling plants and shrubs, like the myrtle and the styrax. The "cedars of Lebanon" increased the fragrance, as also other aromatic plants. The wine picture adds to the idea of fragrance, for it is said that "the scent thereof shall be as the wine of Lebanon." The olive tree suggests both beauty and fragrance. All this is a picture of what God wants the heart to be and what He will actually make it be. Such a person would have a character that is pure, sweet, true and good, altogether a fragrant life, with a refreshing flavor and beauty to all who came in contact with it. This might stand for that quiet unconscious influence which comes from one who is holy in heart and life.

Beauty of a Godly Life. The olive is one of the most characteristic and beautiful features of all southern scenery. The hoary dimness of its delicate foliage, subdued and faint of hue, as if the ashes of the Gethsemane agony had been cast upon it forever; the gnarled writhing of its intricate branches and the pointed fretwork of its light and narrow leaves, inlaid on the blue field of the sky, and the small, rosy-white stars of its spring blossoming, and the beads of sable fruit scattered by autumn along its topmost boughs, the right, in Israel, of the stranger, the fatherless, and the widow; and, more than all, the softness of the mantle, silver-gray and tender, like the down on a bird's breast, with which, far away, it veils the undulation of the mountains.—Ruskin.

The Hidden Forces of the Heart Garden. That second picture illustrates this. The roots are most important in all growth, but they are not seen by the eye. The soil also contains some of these mysterious forces and no one can tell exactly how and why the earth and water can put life and vigor and strength into the flowers and plants. By some hidden way that God has planned these silent forces work with countless little fingers. They are more skillful than the hand of any artist, for no man-made painting can ever equal the finished garden or park in its beauty and glory. The roots are the channels or roads, along which these fairy artists travel to do their work; and the trunks and great branches are the roadways above ground. Even when the work is being done, right before our eyes, we cannot see the forces that are doing it all. I heard of a boy who went into the cornfield and lay there watching to see how the corn grew. He thought he heard a slight rustle or crackle as of something in action, but he could not see anything. God works in the heart garden very much that way. A whisper from Him, or a breath, or even a look, will often produce wonders in a heart that is willing and loving. These forces often work best when hidden in the night of some dark trial or bereavement. Then God may come nearer even than at other times and graciously and richly bless, making the heart garden more and more beautiful and fruitful.

Wonderful Fruitfulness of the Heart Garden. Nearly all the pictures teach this truth; and especially if we call fragrance a fruit. But the olive tree, the corn and the vine are the best symbols of fruitfulness in the strict sense. The olive produces many things for use, principally the oil which was a necessity in many ways. The corn is proverbial as a picture of abounding fruitfulness. The vine surpassed all in its producing power. All these figures are more than matched by the fruitfulness of the heart garden when the Heavenly Gardener has entire charge and care of it. Every flower and fruit in nature's garden may find its likeness and spiritual sister in the graces and virtues and good conduct of the heart garden of God. One must be holy and beautiful before he can act so before others. The last two pictures contrast the false gods with the symbol of the true God. The fir tree sets forth God's love and care as living and enduring through the year and years. Those horrid looking idols have no life, no power. The God of love and grace can and will bring blessing to every heart and life if given to Him. He is just now saying to you, "I will," "I will," "I will." He waits and waits for you to give Him your heart and say "I will" to Him.

Plant Christ in the Heart. We saw in a dime store a box filled with the dried up, shriveled bulbs of what they said were choice flowers. We invested, just in order to see if it could be true that such homely, lifeless-looking roots would ever become fragrant flowers. But sure enough, in a proper soil, and under a genial sun, and moistened by seasonable rains, those unsightly roots grew into fragrant, lovely, blooming hyacinths. Even so our Lord's disciples were shown on the transfiguration mount a gleam of the glorified beauty and deity that was wrapped up in the Man of Sorrows—this apparent root out of dry ground. Plant Christ in the heart and He will make both heart and life beautiful, for He is "Christ in you the hope of glory."—Exchange.

Quiz and Study. 1. What drove man out of the garden of Eden? 2. What garden did Christ suffer in and why? 3. What did Christ say about the lily? What about the barren fig tree? What about the vine? 4. If the flowers were to stand for spiritual traits and graces, how would you name them?

Challenge Text. Create in me a clean heart and renew a right within me. Psa. 51: (1).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Repentance is a returning to God's love, law and service. 2. All worldly power cannot convert a soul or make a spiritual heart garden. 3. God's love is great, as man's need and sin and weakness are great. 4. To the heart that is open to Heaven, Jesus Christ comes as the dew and rain, to revive, freshen, sweeten, beautify and make fruitful. 5. The life roots are hidden from view and often grow rapidly and wonderfully. 6. The fragrance and flavor of the Christian character are often more effective than the direct Christian work.

DR. J. M. COON.

THE HOLY SPIRIT PROMISED

And it shall come to pass afterward, that I will pour out my upon all flesh: and your

and your shall prophesy, your

shall dream dreams,
your shall see visions: And also upon the and upon the hand -

in those days will I pour out my spirit.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS JOEL 2:21-32.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, We thank Thee for the gift of Thy Holy Spirit who comes to carry on Thy work in human hearts and lives. We are but earthly, worldly, sinful, until Thy Holy Spirit quickens and inspires. Come Thou from the Heavenly heights and fill us with Thy grace and power. May we have spiritual tone and vision so that we may see and attempt great things for Christ. Be Thou unto us Guide, Guard and Comforter. For Christ's sake. Amen.

"We are but organs mute, till a master touches the keys—

Verily, vessels of earth into which God poureth the wine;

Harpers are we, silent harps that have hung in the willow trees,

Dumb till our heartstrings thrill and break with a pulse Divine."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 800. Place, Kingdom of Israel. Persons, Joel and the people.

Scripture Setting: Need of the Holy Spirit. To prompt praise, Luke 1:46-58. To reveal Christ, Matt. 16:13-20. To give humility, Phil. 2:5-16. To give devotion, Acts 4:7-20. To prompt sacrifice, Matt. 14:1-12. To give consecration, Rom. 12. To give faith, 1 John 5:5-15. To interpret providences, Matt. 10:7-23.

Life and Conduct Setting: A distinction has been made between the purposes of God and His promises. The former are said to be gold in the mine; the latter, gold in the mint and ready for current use. It is discriminating and suggestive; but cannot be held too rigidly. Some purposes are practical promises; some promises are still in the purpose. This lesson is a case of the union of both. The Holy Spirit is already a gift, and operating in human hearts; He is also promised as a greater gift because of the finished work of Christ. The purposes of God are usually stated in terms of "shall be"; and the promises usually in terms of "is," the present. For example, "All things work together for good" (not shall work); and "My grace is sufficient for thee" (not shall be). The promised Holy Spirit guarantees many and great blessings: 1. Vision of God, and joy in Him, vs. 21-23. 2. Gracious and many providences, vs. 24-27. 3. Marvelous ambitions and desires in spiritual things, vs. 28, 29. 4. Revelations of the mysterious and hidden works of God, vs. 30, 31. 5. Glorious and world-wide extension of the Redeemer's Kingdom, vs. 32.

HOW GOD DWELLS IN MAN.

The Holy Spirit as Christ and God. There is a story told of good king Alfred, one of England's early kings that he loved to visit his people in their homes. Many a time he would come to the home of some humble subject, and eat with his family or even stay all night. That was an evidence of his love for his people, and it is quite different from what kings usually do. But this is a far more wonderful story of how God, the King of kings, comes into human hearts and lives. He comes not merely to visit man, but to dwell with him and in him. That is very much more than just coming into the home for a time. That first picture suggests in part how it is done. The dove is the symbol of the Holy Spirit, and it is here shown as coming down to earth and man.

But other very important things were done first; and had to be done before a holy God could live with sinful man. Some plan had to be devised, so that God could still be seen to be holy and just, and yet could be free to dwell in man. As Paul says, "that He might be just, and the justifier of him that believeth in Jesus." Ah, that is it. Jesus was to come and bear the load of man's sin, and so save the honor of God's law; for even God could not save the sinner until His holy law was obeyed. So God planned man's salvation; Christ came and died, thus joyfully carrying out the plan: then the Holy Spirit came to give man a new nature and dwell in him. This outlines the great work of each God person: God the Father, God the Son, and God the Holy Spirit.

Try the Spirits. The work of the Spirit in the world is to present Christ; to offer Christ to the world. The church of God all over the world is confronting a very subtle peril, that of putting the Spirit of God in a place of prominence that is unwarranted entirely by New Testament teaching. The work of the Spirit is to reveal Christ. The Spirit is the hidden worker making the Christ Himself the supreme and overwhelming consciousness of believing hearts, the one and only Saviour of men who need salvation.—G. Campbell Morgan.

The Holy Spirit In Youth. Now that God can come to the heart of man, we might think He would choose some of the great ones of earth first and dwell in them. But this story prophecy mentions the sons and the daughters first. It says that they "shall prophesy," which means that they will speak many things about God for Him. They could do this only because the Holy Spirit was in them. When Christ came to die for us, He came first as a babe, and so to the youngest and least. It seems very beautiful to think of the Holy Spirit doing likewise. Then, as a youth of twelve years, Christ set an example to all young people by that answer to His mother in the temple, "Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?" Some think it should read, "Do you not know that I must keep busy in My Father's house." This sets a high standard for youth, in the church, the Sunday school, the prayer-meeting, the Young People's society. The pattern could not be followed at all in one's own strength; and the Holy Spirit comes to youth to enable them to do "as Jesus would do." And if young people are true and loyal in all matters pertaining to the house of God, they will be also in the home, the school and everywhere.

The Case of One Young Man. A young fellow who has since been an untold blessing to China, said: "I know I have the Holy Spirit not because I felt Him come, but because He keeps me thinking all the time about my Lord. I am a business man. If ever I lose touch with Jesus I go into my counting house and kneel down, and say, 'Spirit, what have I done to grieve Thee that I have lost the presence of Christ?' and He always restores the presence when I confess." I said, "You have hit the nail on the head this time; it is not how we get the Spirit, but how we feel about Jesus."—Meyer.

The Holy Spirit In Man. There are two pictures to illustrate this, the fourth and fifth on the page. One represents the extreme old men, and of them it is said that they "shall dream dreams." It is noticeable that the Holy Spirit does not neglect the old, who may feel that they have passed their useful days. As He comes even to the children, so He comes to the old men. And how considerate and gracious He is to let them rest and dream. We would like to hear one of those dreams sometimes. Then there is a group of young men, and they "shall see visions." A vision is quite different from a dream, for it comes to one who is awake, alert, ambitious and strong. You can almost hear them talk, as they think and plan great things for Christ and His kingdom. Some one has said that "young men are for war," and John said, "I have written unto you, young men, because ye are strong." A person who sees a vision feels that that is a call to him to go forth in toil and struggle and sacrifice to make the vision come true. This wonderful prophecy was fulfilled first at Pentecost—a bright picture of spiritual revelation. Later it was fulfilled by the election of a people of God from the Gentiles. Then from time to time, there are fulfillments in part at least, whenever and wherever there are gracious outpourings of the Holy Spirit, like the wonderful revival movement under Moody. There will come a final fulfillment by the return of the Jews, and the evangelization of the world. The Jews were the first to receive the message of salvation, and they are to be the great heralds of it at the last. Paul tells of this in Romans, chapter 11, when he says, "If the fall of them (the Jews) be the riches of the world, and the diminishing of them the riches of the Gentiles, how much more their fulness?" That whole chapter is a picture of the glorious consummation of all things, and we seem to be coming near to that day of triumph.

The Holy Spirit In Women. Here, again, are two classes, the servant class and the mistress class. Have you noticed that in each of these general divisions, youth, men, women, the ones named first are the least likely to be active and influential. The boy, the old man, and the servant are more promising for one reason or another, than girls, young men and women of influence. The Holy Spirit seems to teach that God is no respecter of persons, except that He specially favors those who are apt to be neglected or overlooked. Paul says that God hath chosen the weak things, the foolish things, the base things, and things which are despised, "that no flesh should glory in His presence." As Christ came to call the sinful and the needy, so the Holy Spirit also works with and for all classes. Look again at all these pictures, and mark how good the faces all seem. These servants seem patient and faithful; the women look holy and beautiful; the young men are bright and active; the old men are peaceful and contented; the boys and girls are joyous and willing. It is all because the Holy Spirit is dwelling in each, and adapting Himself to the condition and need of each. The very last promise is of the abundance of the Spirit, as if by a stream or flood. Then it will come true that "a nation shall be born in a day."

Quiz and Study. 1. Name one thing done by each person in the Godhead for the salvation of the sinner. 2. What reasons can you give to show that the Holy Spirit is a person? 3. How and when did the Holy Spirit appear to Christ? How did He appear at Pentecost? 4. Can you name any or all of the five Scripture symbols of the Holy Spirit?

Practical Thoughts. 1. The evangelization of the world is certain—"shall come to pass." 2. We have had many object lessons of the Spirit's power—Pentecost, the martyrs, great revivals, remarkable conversions. 3. The Spirit is a person as shown by His being named with Christ and God; also by His doing the works of a person. 4. The common practice of using "it" when speaking of the Holy Spirit betrays ignorance, and grieves both the Spirit and Christ. 5. No one can consistently plead inability to confess Christ or serve Him, for the Spirit is given to every believer. 6. This wonderful prophecy was fulfilled first at Pentecost; and it is having repeated fulfillments. 7. The final victorious result is as sure and glorious as the character of the tri-une God can make it.

DE. J. M. COON.

Seek the Lord, and ye shall live; lest he break out like of Joseph, and devour

it, and there be none to quench it in Bethel. Ye who turn

to

and leave off

in the earth.
Seek him that maketh the and Orion, and turneth the

into the morning, and maketh the day dark with night: that calleth for the waters of the and poureth them out upon the face of the earth: The Lord is his name:

That strengtheneth
the spoiled against the strong, so that the spoiled shall come against the

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS AMOS 5: 1-15.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Show ourselves to us—our sins and needs and utter helplessness. Then may we be moved to see and seek Thy grace. Help us that we may cast down our baser self, and let Thy shining presence come in and glorify the soul kingdom. Thus only can we serve and glorify the Christ King. For His sake, Amen.

Who has this courage thus to look within, Keep faithful watch and ward, with inner eyes, The foe may harass, but can ne'er surprise, Or over him ignoble conquest win. O, doubt it not, if thou wouldst wear a crown, Self, baser self, must first be trampled down!

—John Askham.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 800 to 784. Places, Amos lived at Tekoa, and prophesied at Bethel. Persons, Amos to the people of Israel.

Scripture Setting: A Call to Repentance. Need to repent, Matt. 3:1-17. Call to repent, Josh. 2:1-17. Help to repent, Ezek. 18:1-23. A way to repent, Isa. 55:7-13. Welcome to the penitent, Luke 15:11-24. Salvation to the penitent, Acts 3:11-21. Wall of Divine love, Ezek. 33:7-20. Gateway to blessing, Hos. 14:1-9.

Life and Conduct Setting: This is a pre-echo of John the Baptist's great sermon, and also of that by the greater Christ. The text and argument are essentially the same in each case. In this insistent call to repentance we are confronted with the great facts of life and duty. 1. Repent, for the true God demands it, v. 4. This is more than request; He now "commands all men everywhere to repent." 2. Repent, for false gods avail nothing, v. 5. And not only so, but they shall even be weak and helpless as sinful man himself. 3. Repent and so secure safety and blessing, v. 6. 4. Repent, and thus escape the terrible, threatened judgments, vs. 6, 7. 5. Repent, for God is great, worthy, holy and just, vs. 8, 9. 6. Repent, that you may have temporal and gracious mercies, vs. 10, 11. 7. Repent, and so quit your meanness and live peaceably with all men, vs. 12, 13. 8. Repent, that God may be allowed to fulfill all His purposes in you and through you.

SERMON BY THE FARMER EVANGELIST.

Repent, for God Is a Consuming Fire. Nearly every one has heard of "Billy" Sunday, but many would scarcely recognize him if called Rev. Wm. Sunday. He was a wicked ball player, and after his conversion he became a preacher of righteousness, and was the means of leading thousands and thousands into the Kingdom. His great power was in getting a strong hold of the conscience of men by sermons on the judgment, eternal punishment, and the sovereignty of God. He was an Elijah kind of preacher, who did not fear to face the wicked Ahab; or like John the Baptist, who rebuked the wicked Herod. Amos, the farmer prophet and evangelist, was some such man. He was called from farm and shepherd life and commissioned by God to warn Israel of sin. This whole sermon is built around the idea of repentance, and so it is quite like John the Baptist's great message, "Repent, for the Kingdom of Heaven is at hand." That first picture is a striking one, as showing God's hatred of sin and the sinner. "God is love," we know; but this does not mean that He covers up the sin of any or excuses it. Because He is a God of love, He has provided a remedy for sin by the sacrifice of His Son. To any who will not accept salvation by Christ, God must ever remain a "consuming fire," as He is called in Heb. 12:29. The flames seem to have filled the whole house, and to be streaming out at every window; and the people are fleeing in terror.

The Least Sins Judged. The scales for weighing gold in the government offices are so delicately balanced that of two pieces of paper of equal size and weight, the mere writing of a name on one piece will turn the scales. God's scales of human conduct weigh every least desire or thought, and it is judged accordingly. God is far more exacting than nature or science, as He is far more holy and omniscient.—Exchange.

Repent, for Sin Disappoints and Curses. When people try to get along without God, they make trouble for themselves and others. That judge in the second picture has a good looking face, but his heart must be wrong, because it is said that he "turns judgment into wormwood." By judgment is meant justice, or the rights of those who appeal to him. "Wormwood" is a bitter plant, and means that the wrongs of the judge are hard and severe on the innocent. Now, be sure and get the idea in that beautiful word "righteousness." It means rightness before God and between men. In its beauty and goodness it makes one think of the angel song, "Glory to God; on earth peace and good-will to men." The open book is the Bible, and the glowing torch is the Holy Spirit; and these tell where righteousness comes from. The Scripture story says that the wicked people "leave off righteousness." That would be bad enough; but the real meaning is, that they cast it to the ground, and make it lie there, so that it cannot have any part or influence in earthly matters. This is like the act of a traitor, who would pull down his country's flag, and stamp on it. "Righteousness" is God's beautiful flag, made from the robes of Christ's sacrifice and holiness; and he who casts it down is a traitor to God and all that is good. This is what sin makes everyone do; and only by Christ's coming and dying in man's place can the sin of the traitor be pardoned.

Sin Is Soul Suicide. Man is one thread in the great texture of nature, and he cannot tear himself loose. Caught in this web of moral influences, man goes against nature only to find that nature turns and rends him. He who sinneth against nature wrongeth his own soul. In short, sin is a form of progressive suicide. God hath given men all appetites within, and their appropriate nourishment without, as bounties that are to be richly enjoyed by those who are obedient. But disobey His law at your peril. Hunger is good, but the transgressor is a hungry man who eats red hot coals. Thirst is not sinful, but when thirsty, the sinner drinks scalding water. The bread of obedience is ambrosia, and its wine nectar, but he who sinneth against nature and God wrongeth his own soul.—Newell Dwight Hillis.

Repent, for the Lord Is Mighty and Gracious. One very wonderful thing about the Bible is that a person cannot read it very long before he finds some gracious promises, that shine out like those seven stars shine in the night time. That picture and the next two show God's power, so that He can turn night into day, and make the very destructive waters of the sea to be poured "out upon the face of the earth in refreshing showers." Thus God is able to bring good out of evil and cause all things to work blessing.

When it is urged that we "see Him that maketh the seven stars," etc., it is shown that He has all power, and can grant any blessing. We may come confidently to Him who "rolls the stars along," and "holds the waters in the hollow of His hand," and how unreasonable it is for man, the crown of creation, to be a rebel and traitor, when all else is obedient. The lower world is under obligation to obey only because God created it; man is under obligation to repent and love God, both because God is Creator and Redeemer.

The Right Kind of Repentance. "I got tired lugging that wheelbarrow for grandmother while she was changing her plants," Ned said to his mother, recounting the day's events at bedtime, "and I said: 'I wish there wasn't another speck of this hateful dirt in all the world!' But then afterwards I 'pologized.'" "I'm glad of that," said his mother. "Did you tell her you were sorry?" "No, ma'am; that is not the kind grandmother likes best," said Ned. "I got another wheelbarrowful and just said: 'Don't you want some more of this nice dirt, grandmother?' And then we were all right again." So God likes a repentance that changes the life.—Exchange.

Repent, for the Lord Delivers and Helps. Man could not repent, unless God helped him by His Holy Spirit. When Peter was released from prison, he preached Jesus Christ to the people, and said, "Him hath God exalted with His right hand, to be a Prince and a Saviour to give repentance to Israel, and forgiveness of sins." That was the very purpose of Christ's coming and dying. This last picture teaches the mercy and providence of God. "The spoiled shall come against the fortress," means that "God can make even the weakest to prevail against the strong." The coupling of the mercy and wrath of God is a common way of appealing to sinful man. It is also a most effective way, for when the terrible punishment of sin is seen and felt the man is more ready to accept the offered pardon. So the very punishment may be said to be a help to salvation. Paul had this in his mind when he cries out, "Behold, therefore, the goodness and severity of God." The blessings we enjoy all call to us to repent; and so also do the judgments and punishments of God.

Penitence the Gateway to Blessing. Whatever may happen we are in God's hands. The flame may scorch; the storm may rage; clouds and darkness may hide the Father's face. The experience of life may make us feel at times that God is not a Father at all, but an impersonal force, and that we could manage the world ourselves more to our benefit, certainly more to our liking. The Scriptures do not say so. They teach exactly the contrary. They tell us that our afflictions are themselves blessings—if we knew all; that our burdens develop our real strength, that when we are weak then, through grace, we become strong. There is another horizon, broader than this. There is a real reward, a complete recompense, a logical, living and perfect realization—a "great" reward in Heaven.

Quiz and Study. 1. By what three words is "repent" described, in most of the ten commandments? 2. What are the twelve "blesseds" of Christ to all who repent? 3. What are the twelve "woes" of Christ to all who do not repent? See Matt. 23. 4. How much of John the Baptist's sermon on "Repent" can you quote?

Challenge Text. "Repent ye therefore and be _____, that your _____ may be _____ out." Acts 3: (?).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Idolatry today—also is certain to bring weakness and punishment. 2. The faith preacher or reformer is "always opposed by the wicked. 3. Hypocritical and formal worship is worse than none at all. 4. The modern Pharisee also is worse than the modern publican and sinner. 5. Vain and proud Christian work is equally an abomination to God today. 6. Fine churches, eloquent preaching and operatic singing are not acceptable substitutes for heart love and worship. 7. The largest money gift is nothing and worse than nothing, if one has not first given self. 8. The beginning, middle and end of the Christian life is repentance. 9. Repent, repent, repent; and again God says, repent.

DR. J. M. COON.

So they

Jonah,
and

and the sea from her raging. Then the men feared the Lord exceedingly, and offered unto the Lord, and made vows. Now the Lord had prepared a great

And Jonah was in the belly of the fish three days and three nights.
And the Lord
spake unto the fish, and it vomited out

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS CONTAINED IN JONAH 1 AND 2.

Prayer: Our Father, Help us always willingly and gladly to undertake the duties assigned us by Thee. May we not count the difficulties, but put our confidence in God. In the name of Christ. Amen.

Renew my will from day to day;
Blend it with Thine, and take away
All that now makes it hard to say,
Thy will be done.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. about 780. Place, Joppa, the Mediterranean and the seashore. Persons, Jonah, the sailors.

Scripture Setting: Study of the Faithful and Unfaithful. Faithful hated but saved, Matt. 10:22. Blessed and promoted, Matt. 24:45. Increase talents, Matt. 25:14-17. In little and much, Luke 16:10. Faithfulness in a steward, 1 Cor. 4:2. Faithful fearless and crowned, Rev. 2:10.

Instances: Abraham, Gal. 3:9. Moses, Heb. 3:5. David, 2 Sam. 22:22-25. Elijah, 1 Kings 19:10-14. Abijah, 2 Chr. 13:4-20. Jehoshaphat, 2 Chr. 20:1-30. Job, Job 1:21, 22; 2:9, 10. Unfaithful cut down, Matt. 3:10. Lose all, Matt. 13:12. Slay the heir, Matt. 21:33-42. Without oil, Matt. 25:8-13. Hide talent, Matt. 25:24-30. Punished, Matt. 25:41-46.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of this unusual story are: 1. Jonah's misconception of the God he served: Seeking to escape from duty and God's presence by going to sea. 2. God's use of the elements to convict Jonah and declare His presence and power. 3. Jonah's heroic sentence of judgment upon himself to save his fellows. 4. God's unlimited resources and control of His creatures. 5. His miraculous method of preserving, punishing and teaching His prophet. 6. Jonah's prayer for deliverance from his living prison, and God's answer.

A FLIGHT FROM DUTY AND WHAT CAME OF IT.

A Deserter. It is generally agreed that a man who deserts his duty is an unenviable person. One who has enlisted to serve his country in the army or navy and then slips away out of the service is liable to arrest if found, and to imprisonment, and in war-times may be shot. While society does not have the power to punish for every form of desertion, the act is just as base when one runs away from any kind of duty. Whatever we undertake that is right in itself should be carried through.

Jonah was a prophet who tried to run away from doing what God bade him do. Jonah was a native of Gath-hepher, a village north of Nazareth. He was the son of a man named Amittai. He was a prophet, that is one who spoke for God not merely to announce future events, but to proclaim whatever truth God gave him to utter. He is ranked among the "Minor Prophets," not because he was less inspired than the "Major" or "Greater" prophets, but because the "Lesser Prophets" left behind them smaller books. Jonah may have done a very great deal of prophesying, as it is probable that he did, but his prophecies in general have not been preserved, and so he ranks among the "Minor Prophets."

A Great City. The city of Nineveh was at that time the greatest in the world and was the capital of the chief world-power of that period. The walls were an hundred feet high, with fifteen hundred towers, and these were broad enough for three chariots abreast. Diodorus Siculus asserted that the circumference was fifty-five miles, and that pastures for cattle and pleasure grounds were included within the walls. Modern discoverers have found the site of Nineveh and have uncovered a considerable portion of its remains, and have revealed to the modern world much of its ancient splendors.

It was to this mighty seat of empire the solitary Hebrew prophet was now ordered to go. To merely travel thither in those days, and especially for one who had little money, was in itself a great task from which many a man would have shrunk. Jonah was not only bidden to go to Nineveh, but to preach there, and not merely to preach to that city or to preach in it, but against it. His was to be an aggressive mission of denunciation. "Cry against it: for their wickedness is come up before me."

Jonah Flees. He decided to abandon his office as a prophet altogether, to leave his own people, his land and run away somewhere into the big world outside. The text in the King James version which states that Jonah rose up to flee "from the presence of the Lord," should be interpreted to mean "from being in the presence of the Lord," that is, "from standing in His presence as His servant and minister." Jonah knew, of course, that God is everywhere. He meant to withdraw from the service of Jehovah, thinking that if he went out of the land of Israel the spirit of prophecy would not rest upon him any longer. So he was like every other man who, through love of ease, desire for comfort, fear of men, or such lower motives, gives up his duty and indulges himself in following his own desires.

On the Sea. Jonah went to the seaport, Joppa. Many another man has thought to escape duty by way of the sea. On the sea, one seems to be leaving behind all the ordinary relations and responsibilities of life and entering upon another world. The boy who wants to get away from books and from parental government is apt to think of the sea as a refuge, as a place where he can do as he pleases. Jonah had money in his pocket; and men often think money can help them out of any difficulty. Jonah found a ship in the harbor ready to sail for Tarshish, away off in Spain, and that seemed as far away to men in those days as the other side of the world does to us. Perhaps Jonah had changed his usual garments for such as would not suggest his nationality or his office. He was going to leave everything behind and start life anew. He paid his fare, shipped as a passenger and not as a man who was forced to work his passage. When the anchor was raised and the winds filled the sails and the ship sped out of the Joppa harbor, Jonah felt relieved; there was no journey to Nineveh for him; there was no more disagreeable prophesying. He was tired. The abrupt tearing away from familiar things had worn on him. The step had been taken. He would now relax and rest, while the boat cut its way through the waves.

The Legend Beautiful tells of the blessedness of doing our duty at whatever cost. A monk was visited by a glorious vision of the Savior, and gazed in ecstasy. It was his task at a certain hour to feed the poor who came then to the monastery. That moment now arrived; he stayed not to enjoy the vision, but went to his humble task. When he returned the vision was still there, and to him the Savior then said: "Hadst thou stayed, I must have fed."

In the Storm. A poet has said, "No exile from himself can flee." No man can run away from himself, from his conscience, from his memories. Jonah was the same man as before, and he was in the same relation to God as before. A mighty tempest came upon the sea, one so unusual and singular that the heathen sailors saw it was different from other storms. They were used to common winds and to high waves, but this tempest was like no other they had known. "The Lord sent out a great wind." Jonah was trying to run away from duty, but God sent His messenger of the wind after him. The sailors were stricken with great terror. Being men of various nations, each one called on his own god, as he had learned to revere this or that heathen deity. Having prayed, they set to work to lighten the ship by casting their wares into the sea.

Still the tempest raged, and the ship threatened to break into pieces. Being superstitious, and having done all they could think of, they decided that the storm might be a sign of the wrath of the gods against some one on board. Wondering which man it could be, they recalled that Jonah had not been seen during the storm. The shipmaster sought him out, found him asleep, shook him, saying, "What meanest thou, O sleeper? Arise; call upon thy god, if so be that God will think upon us, that we perish not." Doubtless Jonah also prayed, yet the storm did not cease. The next thought was, who is the guilty man? They cast lots to decide this, and the lot fell on Jonah. Now they have found the cause of the storm. "Who are you?" they ask eagerly. "What is your occupation? country? people?" Jonah made plain that he was an Hebrew, and a worshiper of the God of Heaven, who had made sea and land, and that he had sinned and was fleeing from God.

Jonah Overboard. The sailors, terrified at the sight of a man who by his own acknowledgment had offended his God, asked what they should do to him. Jonah bravely and manfully, seeing that he had brought this trouble on innocent men, bade them cast him into the sea. Very magnanimously, these men resolved to make further effort before resorting to this measure. They laid hold of their oars, since the sails were useless, and pulled with their might, but they failed to make headway against such a storm. Then, with prayer that God, whom Jonah had offended, would not lay the matter to their charge, they cast the renegade prophet into the sea. Calm settled upon the waters; Jonah had vanished; and the sailors made sacrifice to the wonderful God of Jonah.

Jonah Saved. God did not mean to destroy his offending prophet, but rather to turn him back to duty. Providence had at the ship's side a great monster of the deep and into its opened mouth Jonah vanished. We are told that in the Mediterranean there is a shark or sea dog with so large a throat that it can swallow a man whole. It may have been a creature of this kind that took Jonah into the vast cavern of its interior. There, until the third day, Jonah remained, conscious, praying, awed to find that God was still keeping him alive. Then God interfered again. He spake unto the fish and it cast Jonah out upon the dry land.

An astonished, repentant man, Jonah once more surveyed the dry land. Evidently his plans of sea-going had been a failure. He thanked God for his wonderful deliverance, and turned his face homeward.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

GOD'S PITY FOR THE HEATHEN

So Jonah arose, and unto Nineveh, according to the word of the Lord.

Now Nineveh was an exceeding great city of three days' journey.
And Jonah
began to enter a day's journey, and he cried,

and said, Yet forty days, and Nineveh
shall be

So the believed God, and proclaimed a fast, and put on sackcloth, from the greatest of them to the least of them.

For word came unto the king of Nineveh, and he and he

from him, and covered him with sackcloth, and in ashes. And God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way; and God repented of the evil, that he had said that he would do unto them; and he did it not.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JONAH 3 AND 4.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee for all the revelations given of Thy love and compassion for Thy children, who are in the darkness of heathenism. We pray that we may have the spirit of Christ toward them and that we, in love and sympathy, may strive and give, so that the Gospel of light and salvation may be sent speedily unto all men. In the name of Christ. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C., about 730. Place, Nineveh. Persons, Jonah and the king and people of Nineveh.

Scripture Setting: Study of Revelations Given to Heathen. Abimelech, to keep him from sin, Gen. 20:3-7. Pharaoh, to prepare for famine, Gen. 41:1-28. Balaam, forbidden to curse Israel, Num. 22. Nebuchadnezzar, of his madness and recovery, Dan. 4:1-18. Belshazzar, of his fate, Dan. 5:5, 24-29. Cyrus, of his mission to build the temple, 2 Chron. 36:23. The Magi, of the star, Matt. 2:1-11. The centurion, of Jesus' power to heal, Matt. 8:5-13. Cornelius, of the acceptance of his alms and the coming of Peter, Acts. 10:1-7.

Life and Conduct Setting. The special features of the lesson are: 1. Jonah, made obedient by his experience in the deep, obeys promptly the second command to preach in Nineveh. 2. The marvelous effect of his spirited preaching in bringing a great city to repentance. 3. God's great mercy in warning Nineveh and then turning from His purpose to destroy the city when they repented. 4. Jonah's inconsistency. Vexed that his prophecy concerning Nineveh is not fulfilled, he reproaches God for extending to 120,000 souls the same mercy that preserved him in the deep. 5. God's patience and forbearance with Jonah and the use of the gourd to teach him his own weakness.

JONAH IS TAUGHT ANOTHER GREAT LESSON.

Jonah did a great deal of thinking after his bitter experience on the sea and in the great fish. That was a matter no man could readily forget. We may be sure he did not need further trials to make clear that it does not pay to run away from a manifest duty. Still there were other lessons he had not yet learned.

On to Nineveh. Now Jonah, who had thought by going to sea to escape from hearing any more voices from God, is startled by another message from on high. Perhaps this time it was delivered with a little more emphasis, a little more peremptoriness, with something in the tone that was reminiscent of the past. Part of it was a repetition of the former command, "Arise, go unto Nineveh, that great city." He had heard that before. The concluding words are different, but they suggest what had gone before; "and preach the preaching that I bid thee."

"So Jonah arose." The narrative indicates promptness. There was no hesitation, no dallying. Whether that command came at midnight or in the midst of business, or at the table, it had an immediate and electrifying effect. "Jonah arose." And he went to Nineveh. It was a long journey, full of hardships, unpleasant, but the prophet plodded steadily onward in the direction of that city to which he was commissioned. No soldier ever executed the order of a superior officer more unquestioningly. He does not appear to have indulged in doubts and fears on the way. He went. And he went "according to the word of the Lord," as if he had a commission from a king, signed and sealed, in his pocket, and he had nothing to do but get to a certain place and deliver it.

His Message. When Jonah came in sight of the vast walls and towers and palaces of the mighty city of Nineveh, he was not in the least overawed. He had grown far past that. It would be very difficult to appal a man who had a vivid recollection of having been swallowed by a great fish and carried about in the bottom of the sea and then cast out on land, as he had been. All the armies of Nineveh could not have terrified him. The magnitude of his task did not daunt him, nor the fact that it would require three days to walk around the city or a day to walk straight through it. He came to the walls, passed through a gate and walked on. At first he was silent. He simply marched on and on across that wonderful place, with its huge palaces, its busy traffic, its parks and pasture lands within the enclosure. He was one little man in that great sea of people, and if he had not been sustained by the command of God he would certainly have felt it would be a vain thing for him to try to move that people by his words. He walked on for a whole day, and then he came into the neighborhood of the citadel. At that important point, from which his words would readily be reported to the king, he began to proclaim his message.

Then Jonah cried, "Yet forty days and Nineveh shall be overthrown." The mere announcement of such a disaster would naturally have a startling effect upon many minds. It would be like a cry of fire. Though no army was in sight; though it was not known that any foe was approaching or threatening, the proclamation of some mysterious and unknown impending danger would awe many. We are to suppose that these words were only the substance of Jonah's message, and he must have gone into some detail. He must have let it be known that he spoke for God, according to God's command. He must have made it clear that it was on account of the wickedness of the Ninevites that God thus threatened them.

Repentance. Doubtless the news spread far and wide that a strange prophet was announcing the doom of the city. Men must have gathered many times to hear and to discuss what was said. Word reached the king himself that a seer from a far country had appeared in the streets crying out the near destruction of Nineveh. Possibly the king called Jonah into his presence and listened to his awful foretellings. It must have been the work of days rather than of hours for Jonah to be able to reach great numbers of the people with his message. And it must have been with tremendous power of conviction and earnestness Jonah delivered his prophecies. Behind his words were his experiences of God's dealings with himself. So, like flames of fire his words leaped and kindled men's hearts. Then, convinced of the truth of the prophet's words, convicted of the reality of the sins he denounced, a great hope came to palace and cottage that if these sins were repented of and put away God might withhold His destroying hand.

Awed, terrified, penitent, the Ninevites, from king to humblest subject, determined to seek God's pardon. The king left his throne empty, took off his royal robes, put coarse sackcloth on his body instead of linens and silks, and sat himself down among the ashes, as outward signs of his deep repentance. He bade his heralds cry throughout the vast city, "Let neither man nor beast, herd nor flock, taste anything. Let them not feed nor drink water. But let man and beast be covered with sackcloth and cry mightily unto God. Yea, let every one turn from his evil way, and from the violence that is in their hands. Who can tell if God will turn and repent, and turn away from His fierce anger, that we perish not?" Thus all humbled themselves, and the very beasts were covered with the signs of the mourning of the city for its sins.

Repentance Accepted. The great heart of Him who is long-suffering and of great mercy was touched by this penitence. It was their sin He was angered against and not themselves. He rejoiced to forgive. "God saw their works, that they turned from their evil way, and God repented of the evil that He had said He would do unto them; and He did it not." What a beautiful revelation that is of the kindness and goodness of God. He has no pleasure in the death of the wicked. He cries, "Let the sinner forsake his way and the unrighteous man his thoughts and let him turn unto the Lord, who will have mercy upon him, and to our God who will abundantly pardon."

Jonah Angry. But a certain imperfect man was all this while thinking of himself and of how badly he would feel if his prophecies did not come true. He would rather all Nineveh would have been blasted by the Divine wrath than that one poor little Hebrew prophet should appear to be wrong. God uses very imperfect instruments; otherwise little would be accomplished in the world. The greatest and the best have their mixtures of dross with the gold. Jonah was very angry. He prayed to God, "I pray Thee, Lord, was not this my saying, when I was yet in my country? Therefore I fled before unto Tarshish;" this was self-deception on Jonah's part; "for I knew that Thou art a gracious God, and merciful, slow to anger and of great kindness, and repentest Thee of the evil. Therefore, now, O Lord, take, I beseech Thee, my life from me; for it is better for me to die than to live."

There is a great gentleness in God's words in reply: "Then said the Lord, Dost thou well to be angry?" They show God's patience with his weak and changeable servant. But Jonah was too vexed to consider a fitting answer. He flung himself out of the city in haste. He chose a place to the east of the city where he could get a good view, at a safe distance, of whatever might happen. He made himself a booth of boughs, and sat in its shadow to see what would become of the city. It was a dreadful frame of mind for a prophet to be in, longing and waiting for a great city to be overwhelmed.

The Gourd. Then the kind God prepared a gourd and made it grow up over Jonah, that it might be a shade over his head from the heat. Its rapid growth, its pleasant appearance and its protection delighted the senses of the prophet, and he took a childlike pleasure in it, as many of us are apt to do in small things in hours of weariness and loneliness. The solitary man loved the gourd as a child loves a toy. But God had a lesson to teach His prophet and He prepared a worm, that next day smote the gourd so that it withered.

The sun rose that day with a great glare, so that all living things were oppressed. A vehement east wind beat down upon Nineveh and its neighborhood with its hot breath. The leaves had withered from Jonah's booth and the gourd and its vine lay shriveled as by fire. The unprotected head of the prophet was parched by the heat. Body and spirit weakened, and he lay back fainting and wishing for death. Then God said, "Dost thou well to be angry for the gourd?" And Jonah declared, "I do well to be angry, even unto death."

God's Pity. Then God, kind and pitiful toward Nineveh and wishing likewise to bring His servant to a right frame of mind, pressed home the lesson of it all in the words of vs. 3 and 4, chap. 4.

Practical Truths. 1. We should have hope for all who will repent. 2. We must amend our ways, if wrong, or God will not have mercy upon us. 3. Speak and act according to God's command. 4. Be not impatient, when God is long-suffering. 5. Our pride should be as nothing compared with the salvation of men.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

THE KINGDOM OF PEACE

And he shall judge among many

and rebuke strong nations afar off;
and they shall into

and their

into nation shall not lift up a sword against nation, neither shall they learn any more.

But they shall sit every man

and

and none shall make them afraid: for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS MICAH 4.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, What great words Thou hast spoken to human ears and hearts! Words coined in Heaven, and fragrant with the love of God! The heart looks with joyous wonder on all Thy grace and power. Our faith tries also to grasp the fulfilment of that angel prophecy, "Peace on earth, good will to men." Hasten on the glad day when the wonderful pictures of Thy Word shall be framed in flesh and blood, in all the world.

"Kingdom of Peace, whose music clear Swept through Judea's starlit skies,
Still the harsh sounds of human strife
Break on thy Heavenly harmonies.
Yet shall thy song of triumph ring
In full accord, from land to land,
And men with angels learn to sing:
'Behold, the Kingdom is at hand!'"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 730. Place, In the kingdom of Judah. Persons, Micah to the children of Judah.

Scripture Setting: The Conquests of Peace. World wide conquests, Isa. 61:1-11. Christ a world-king, Luke 2:25-40. Gifts to the King, Psa. 45. Power of the kingdom, Heb. 12:1-13. The conquest power, Acts 2:1-13. Power in and by the cross, Gal. 3:1-14. Let the King come in, Psa. 24. King of kings, Rev. 19:6-16.

Life and Conduct Setting: For authoritative and victorious movement this passage is unsurpassed in the Bible. The King of kings has come to the time of His complete triumph among and before men. There is no hesitancy or circuitous action or statement. Here are a few of the "impossible" things He accomplishes: 1. Universal expectation among the nations, and a falling into line with His purposes (vs. 1, 2.) 2. Jesus Christ exalted to be judge and arbiter among the nations—even the "strong ones" accepting His rule (vs. 3). 3. The devilish practices of war, centuries old, give place to the mandate of this King of peace, and war is a thing of the past, not even planned or prepared for. That suggestion of Satan, "In time of peace, prepare for war," is silenced forever. 4. Universal safety and prosperity, and consequent brotherhood and fellowship (vs. 4). 5. The correction of all evils, and the ushering in of the millennial day (vs. 5-7).

PICTURE OF A CONVERTED WORLD.

All Nations Changed. Great missionary meetings of the "Laymen's Missionary Movement" were held in seventy-five of the largest cities of the United States. One of the most inspiring features of these meetings were the mottoes adorning the walls where the meetings were held. None were more striking and convincing than these two: "Unto Him shall the gathering of the nations be," and "We can do it, if we will; we can do it, and we will." Do you notice how beautifully these fit into each other? The first is the promise of God that it shall be; the second is the consecrated cry of man to do it. God is the power, and man is the finger tips. In that little great psalm, the 110th, it is said, "Thy people shall be willing in the day of Thy power." A willing people can do all that God wishes and promises. In that first picture you can see persons of many different nations. In the verse just before the Scripture picture in this story it is said, "Many nations shall come and say: Come, let us go to the mountain of the Lord"; and "We will walk in His paths." So we know that this will certainly come to pass, for it is said at the bottom of the page of pictures, "for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it." We need to remember that all through this story, for here are some great and difficult things promised.

The Purest and Mightiest Religion. The growth of Christianity is one proof of its Divinity. Perhaps Mohammedism grew as rapidly at the outset, but it was spread at the point of the sword. Perhaps Buddhism has numbered as many converts, but its doctrines were intertwined with confirmed social prejudices and tendencies. Both these religions, and all others that have secured wide following, are indulgent to man's carnal nature. Christianity calls to self-sacrifice, nevertheless it has today an immeasurably stronger and more persistent growth than any other religion. Christianity alone of so-called "faiths" overleaps all geographical limits and lives in all countries. Other plants which the Heavenly Father hath not planted have their zones of vegetation and die outside certain latitudes; but the seed of the kingdom is like corn, an exotic nowhere, for wherever man lives it will grow, and yet it is an exotic everywhere, for it came down from Heaven.—Maclaren.

All Actions Changed. That second picture looks like a blacksmith's shop, and you have looked in one like it now-a-days. The sword on the anvil, and that cluster of spears, could tell many a tale of bloodshed if they had tongues. They may have killed even one's own friend or brother, and they have boasted again and again of the great number of people they have slain. They stand for cruel and wicked actions, and the world has been full of such conduct. They are now changed into "plowshares" and "pruning hooks," as shown in the pictures. These stand for that which will feed and bless the world. The blacksmith shop may make us think of the great providences of God which bring about such remarkable changes. It is said that He shall "rebuke strong nations." God's purposes have to go right on to fulfilment; and if men or nations get in the way, they will either be destroyed or be changed.

Our Greatest Asset and Exhibit. We show our commercialism, and charm the people of the world thereby, and they flock to our land in search of gold. We make a show of our muscle, and send our athletes to all quarters of the world to contest, and we receive plaudits. We show our patriotism, and fighting power. We send our fleet around the world, and the stars and stripes float upon the breezes of almost every land. From Mukden to Constantinople, from Alexandria to Florence, from the Philippines to Havana, our country made its naval display. But, with all this, we have not shown the very best thing we have to the world.

If we should do so, what would be the result? Why, "He will draw all men unto Him." He is the lodestone of the human heart. He is the magnet of the soul. A sight, a glad shout, and the heathen will crown Christ as King.—Exchange.

All Motives and Spirits Changed. That terrible picture of war in the middle of the page, says as loud as can be, "I will have my way," and "I'll make you obey." It speaks the selfish spirit and purpose, and this has always led to war and bloodshed. But by the wonderful power of this "Prince of Peace," a new kingdom is established, even the "kingdom of peace," and a new kind of subject is dwelling in the kingdom. It is said that "neither shall they learn war any more." This is very different from the condition of things today, when every large nation has to maintain a great army and navy in order to be ready for war. It would seem that only the small and weak nations can be protected from the dreadful ravages of war. But Christ is a Prince and King, and so can bring about these great changes. And He does it by the truth and love and by offering so many blessings that can come only from Him. He wields a sword, but it is the "sword of the Spirit, which is the Word of God."

Power of Love. Christianity is a missionary religion. It is a creed which, twenty centuries after its founder's death, produces missions and missionaries as naturally as a living tree, in whose woody fibres the mysterious forces of spring are stirring, produces blossoms. And the missionaries it produces are of an absolutely unique type. He has the scantiest equipment. He carries no arms; he is clad with no civil authority; he has very little money; he is usually alone. He has only a message and a motive. The message is the story of Christ and the motive is the love of Christ.—W. H. Fitchett.

All Conditions Changed. The last two pictures show the blessings of peace. Instead of needing a standing army to keep off the enemies, a person is altogether safe when alone. The "vine" and "fig tree" suggest prosperity; and the teaching is that, even when most prospered they are yet entirely safe. Now, if one is prospered in any way, he may be watched and hunted by those who will take away from him his property, his home, and even his life. We can get some idea, even now, of what such perfect security means, by comparing heathen nations with Christian, and by comparing a community with saloons and other wicked places; with another community that is free from such perils and enemies. We all know how pleased everyone will be when these good times come, for even now people like to live in a temperate and religious community. Even saloonkeepers prefer to live in a prohibition district. As we close the story, read again that last Scripture sentence, "for the mouth of the Lord of hosts hath spoken it." If all could really believe that, it would hasten the day of a converted world; by which we mean not that everyone will be a Christian, but that everyone will have a chance to become one by hearing of Christ.

What of Tomorrow?

"Lie still," "Be strong," today; but Lord, tomorrow—

What of tomorrow, Lord?

Shall there be rest from toil, be truce from sorrow,
Be living green upon the sward

Now but a barren grave to me,

Be joy for sorrow?

"Did I not die for thee?

Do I not live for thee? Leave me tomorrow."

—Christina Rossetti.

Quiz and Study. 1. To what class of prophets does Amos belong? 2. How many in that class, and how many can you name? 3. Give one or more passages of Scripture about "peace." 4. What is the cost of one large battleship, and how many missionaries would that money support? 5. Which is better even as a national protection, battleships or missionaries? 6. Is God with the battleships or missionaries?

Challenge Text. "Lift up your ——— O ye gates; and be ye lifted up, ye everlasting ———; and the ——— of glory shall come in." Psa. 24:(?)

Practical Thoughts. 1. "Watchman, what of the night?" "Traveler, the morning cometh." 2. It is man's business to find out God's will, and do it; it is God's business to work out the promised and purposed results. 3. It would be grand if only God could control nations! Well, He can, if we will not blunder in His way and so delay Him in His plans. 4. Emerson is wrong about "hitching our wagon to a star"; better let the golden chains bind us to the throne of God. 5. Wrong again are these war demagogues who propose to help out the Almighty with battleships and armies! 6. Every believer, by that very fact, is under obligation to advocate world conquests by peace; and to believe that it is feasible and practicable. 7. Did you think peace was a negative quality? No, no, it is the mightiest force in the universe; and therefore we talk of the conquests of peace.

DR. J. M. COON.

And the angel that talked with me came again, and as a man that is wakened out of his sleep,

And said unto me,
What seest thou?
And I said,
I have looked,
and behold

all of gold, with a

upon the top of it, and his thereon, and which are upon the top thereof: And by it, one upon the right side of the bowl, and the other upon the left side thereof.

So I answered and spake to the angel that talked with me, saying, What are these, my lord? Then the

saith the Lord of hosts.

that talked with me answered and said unto me, Knowest thou not what these be?
And I said, No, my lord. Then he answered and spake unto me, saying, This is the word of the Lord unto Zerubbabel, saying,

Not by might, nor by power but by
My Spirit

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ZECH. 4.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Thou art wondrous in the work Thou hast done for sinful man. Wondrous also, in the way Thou dost work. By the silent and mighty forces of Thy Holy Spirit Thou art ruling in human hearts and conquering the world. May every part of our being respond gladly to Thy call and love, and so may we become the marvelous proofs of Thy power. For Christ's sake. Amen.

"Who from unsightly bulb or slender root Could guess aright
The story of the flower, the fern, the fruit,
In summer's height?
Through tremulous shadows voices call me,
It doth not yet appear what we shall be."

—J. R. Miller, D. D.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 519. Place, Mt. Moriah, in Jerusalem. Persons, The angel, Zechariah, Zerubbabel, the two anointed ones.

Scripture Setting: A Study of the Holy Spirit. He is a Revealer, 1 Cor. 2:1-10. He is a Guide, John 16:7-15. He is a Quickener, Ezek. 37:1-14. He is a Helper, Rom. 8:14-27. He is a Comforter, John 14:16-26. He gives power, Acts 2:1-13. He is in the believer, 1 Cor. 3:5-19. He calls and pleads to the end, Rev. 22:10-17.

Life and Conduct Setting: This picture vision

of the golden candlestick invites a study of the Holy Spirit, who is the light of truth. 1. The Holy Spirit must be spiritually discerned (vs. 1). 2. He works through the church and Christian (vs. 2). 3. He alone is the sufficient power to do the great work assigned (vs. 2, 3). 4. He is specially and gloriously revealed to those who seek Him (vs. 4, 5). 5. He is mightier than any human force or agency (vs. 6, 7). 6. He uses, honors, and glorifies human agents (vs. 8-10). 7. He sees, adjusts, controls, unifies all persons and things, to work out His purposes.

GOD'S WAY OF BUILDING UP HIS KINGDOM.

The Holy Spirit Works Through Man. One of the most wonderful structures in the world is the splendid statue of "Liberty Enlightening the World," in the New York harbor. It is a mammoth figure of a woman holding aloft a torch in her right hand. Some idea of its great size may be had from the fact that a man can climb up the wrist by an inside stairway, and go out to the fingers and actually enter the little finger. All the rest is in fine proportion, and it is very striking and commanding. But it is all for the purpose of holding aloft this lighted torch to represent "Liberty" giving light and freedom to the whole world. It is all very suggestive of God's way of working His purposes in the world; and especially the way of His mastering difficulties, caused by sin and Satan.

Just then was a time of very great perplexity and difficulty in connection with the building of the second temple. Zerubbabel the governor, and all the people were discouraged. God graciously came to Zerubbabel, with a message of hope and victory, as shown in that first picture. The angel tells him that "the Lord of hosts hath sent me unto you." (vs. 9.) God's Spirit works through man, and the first thing He does is to encourage and comfort. Notice that phrase "came again," for it teaches the great truth that God keeps coming and pleading with His people to be faithful and consecrated. Then to increase man's interest, the angel asks him what he sees.

A Power Greater Than Edison's. The enormous force generated by this brilliant man is seen in the fact that his inventions and those which he has materially assisted have given existence to industries capitalized at more than $7,000,000,000, and earning annually more than $1,000,000, while they find employment for half a million people. Even these stupendous figures do not cover the facts, for no figures can begin to indicate the value of the service Mr. Edison's inventions have rendered to mankind. And yet any believer may have and use a far greater power than that of this wonderful magician. A Moody or a Spurgeon is an illustration of what the Holy Spirit can do through one man.—Exchange.

The Holy Spirit Works Through Light.

That torch of the Liberty statue harmonizes beautifully with the light of this golden candlestick, and the seven pipes carrying oil to the lamps. But this light stands for a liberty from sin and from the power of Satan. There is nothing that sin and Satan fear so much as light. They both love darkness, and do their worst work in the dark. But God is light, and Jesus Christ is the Light of the world. The Holy Spirit kindles the flame in the heart of the Christian and in the church. The "candlestick," which is the light-bearer, is of gold; and this means that the Christian and the church should be pure and holy, so as to give forth the light in the best way. They are made holy by trusting in Jesus Christ as Saviour. What natural light does for the physical world, Jesus Christ does for the soul, mind and spirit of men. He said to His people, "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in Heaven." But light is not only an enemy of darkness, but it is the service of life, beauty, radiance, health, warmth, purity, joy, comfort, power. Are these not splendid forces to have? And with them one can master all difficulties.

They are all in God's message of life and light.

The Holy Spirit Works With Christ and God. We do well to get firmly in our mind the fact that all three persons in the God-head work together to establish their kingdom in the earth. God the Father plans the work, and in love and wisdom makes it all possible; God the Son carries out the plan by coming to the earth, taking human form, and dying on the cross; God the Holy Spirit convicts man of his sin, reveals Christ as a Saviour from sin, and persuades man to turn from sin and accept Jesus Christ. It is very important to remember that the work of each is vitally related to that of the others, and to some extent determined by that of the others. For example, the love of God for the sinner can be manifested only by and because of Jesus Christ's death. God's general love, like giving sunshine and rain, is exercised towards all men everywhere. But His love of joy and approval can come only to those who have accepted Christ as a Saviour. So it is with God as a Father. He is the Creator—Father of all persons; but He is the Redeemer-Father, or a real spiritual Father, only to those who come to Him by faith in Christ. To those who reject Him Christ said, "Ye are of your father the devil." Many other important distinctions will be seen by always keeping the work of the three Divine persons clearly in mind.

The Constant Co-operation. The engineers who directed the work of the Hoosac Tunnel started two gangs of men from opposite sides of the mount. So accurate was their survey that, when they met midway in the mount, the walls of the excavation, approaching from the different starting-points, joined within less than an inch. The practical working of the bore proved the scientific accuracy of the survey. Man starting from the side of human need, reaching upward toward God, is met by the revelation in Christ coming down from God, a revelation that exactly fills his need. This perfect match between the human need and the Heavenly supply is the perfect proof of the Divine origin of the Bible and the exact co-operation of the Father, Son and Holy Spirit in redemption, in prophecy and assurance that all will be fulfilled as promised:—G. F. Pentecost.

The Holy Spirit Works Victoriously. How could it be otherwise? The full name of what may be called the Gospel firm, that has undertaken to build up Christ's Kingdom in the world, is God, Jesus Christ, Holy Spirit, and church. That firm can do any right thing it wishes to do. The only reason it delays or fails for a time is because the earthly member of the firm shrinks or balks or is indifferent. A preacher once asked a traveling man about his firm and his line of goods. Then he said, "I also am a traveling man." The drummer inquired the name of his firm, and the preacher replied, "I travel for Lord, Church and Company." That is the same as the full name we gave above. Here are four impossible things which this firm can do; impossible, I mean, from the standpoint of the world. It can save a man from sin and make him holy in character; and man anywhere, even the very worst. It can make an efficient and successful worker of every saved person—no matter how poor, ignorant, young or obscure. It can destroy any work of the devil, like intemperance; and it can defeat and master the devil himself. It can evangelize this whole world in the present generation. These four things this firm can do easily and almost immediately if—if—if that earth member of the firm were willing. But it cannot very long prevent the Heaven members of the firm from final victory. If one church or one Christian will not help then other churches and Christians will be found; "for Christ shall see of the travail of His soul and shall be satisfied."

The Universal Kingdom. "In the early settlement of California by the Spanish, the natives related that the great cross, planted by Portala, would grow at night till its point rested among the stars, glistening with a splendor that outshone the sun." This is mere superstition; but not so when we refer this language to the cross of Christ. Its top has entered the heavens; its arms are out-reaching to the ends of the earth; it is God's standard by which He lays claim to the kingdoms of the world, which "shall become the kingdom of our Lord and of His Christ."—Exchange.

Quiz and Study. 1. To what class of prophets does Zechariah belong? 2. How many in that class, and how many can you name? 3. What is the other class called, and how many and who are they? 4. When did the golden candlestick stand in the tabernacle?

Challenge Text: And they were all ——— with the Holy Spirit, and began to ——— with other ———, as the ——— gave them utterance. Acts 2. (?)

Practical Thoughts: 1. God's day, God's house, God's book, God's people, God's Spirit are the five great forces in spiritual work. 2. The many gracious providences of life are so many angels trying to waken us out of sleep. 3. The Holy Spirit is the only One who can reveal Christ and all spiritual mysteries to us. 4. How much we plan and toil, and sacrifice to do things in our own strength. Try God's way by prayer. 5. Every right work has a prophecy of triumph in it, and has the forces and resources by which to triumph.

Dr. J. M. COON.

REBUKING AND ENCOURAGING JUDAH

Bring ye all the tithes into the

that there may be meat in mine

and prove me now herewith, saith the Lord of hosts, if I will not open you the windows of heaven, and you out a blessing, that there shall not be room enough to receive it.

And I will rebuke the

for your sakes,
and he shall not destroy the

of your ground; neither
shall
your cast her fruit before the time in the saith the Lord of hosts.

And all nations shall call you blessed:
for ye shall be a delightful

saith the Lord of hosts.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MALACHI 3:1-18. READ CHAP. 1.

Prayer: Our Father, Grant us wisdom that we may discern the Divine law of benevolence and act upon it. Thus may we indeed receive Thy blessing. In the name of Christ. Amen.

"The faith of the Head
Is the faith that is dead;
The faith of the Heart
Is better in part;

"But the faith of the Hand
Is the faith that will stand,
For the faith that will do Must include the first two."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, about 420 B. C. Place, Jerusalem. Person, Malachi.

Scripture Setting: A Study in Tithing. Paid by Abraham, Gen. 14:20; Heb. 7:1, 2. Jacob pledged, Gen. 28:22. Law of, Lev. 27:30-32; Deut. 14:22, 29, 30; Deut. 26:12-14. Brought into God's house, 2 Chron. 31:11, 12; Neh. 10:37; Neh. 13:4, 5, 12. Of all things, 2 Chron. 31:5. Christ's views concerning, Matt. 23:23. Systematically, 1 Cor. 16:2. Rewarded, Prov. 3:9, 10.

Life and Conduct Setting. 1. The evils inflicted on Israel are traced to neglect of God's ordinances.

2. An opportunity to return is offered. 3. This will be accompanied by the removal of the evils. 4. The special wrong against God has been withholding of tithes. 5. God had withheld harvests because of their guilt. 6. Unless the whole of the tithes were paid they were guilty of defrauding God. 7. They were invited to put God to the test. 8. The point to be tried was not whether God would keep His promises, but whether He was a righteous Being. 9. The result of the test would show in what relation He stood to them and would demonstrate His goodness.

A WONDERFUL VOICE.

The man who uttered these beautiful words is only a voice. History has been ransacked in vain to discover his home, his parentage, his personal appearance, his business, the date of his birth, or his death. Tradition has preserved for us beautiful guesses as to this mysterious personality: such, for example, as that he was Mordecai, Nehemiah or Zerubbabel, and even that he was an angel of Heaven! But nobody knows! Nothing of all that rich and wonderful life has survived but these few undying words, and the man himself is hidden in the past as the English skylark is buried in the depths of the heavens or our American thrush in the depths of the woods, when singing their melodies divine. Only voices! But such voices!

Listen then to a voice that for twenty-five centuries has been singing out of the dim past a song so noble and so sweet that it cannot possibly die away! The song of the skylark and thrush die away; but little children born ten thousand years after you have grown old and die will hear this same mysterious voice singing his wonderful, wonderful song, and when they try to see the man, will hear their mother say, "The man is but a voice!" Hush, then, and listen to its words.

"Bring ye all the tithes into the store house * * * and I will pour you out a blessing."

It was four hundred and twenty years before the blessed Babe was born in Bethlehem that these words were uttered, and if you care to know what made the singer sing them, you shall hear. The children of Israel had returned from their captivity in Babylon, rebuilt their homes, and reestablished their institutions. Once more the priests in the temple performed the sacred acts of sacrifice and prayer. Once more the people brought their offerings to God's courts, and then they fell away again. Doubts of God's providence crept into their hearts. They loved, too well, the money which they earned and the pleasures they enjoyed. The temple was forsaken for the mart of trade and places of amusement. The tenths of their incomes were no longer poured into the treasury. The work of the church was arrested. Vices sprung up. Sin abounded. Punishment followed. The land was devastated. Poverty and wretchedness were everywhere. Nobody cherished hope and nobody saw a light. When suddenly, out of the stillness of apathy, the wonderful voice was heard. Astonished, awed, inspired, the people listened. "Return unto Me and I will return unto you. Bring ye all the tithes into the store house—and prove Me whether I will not pour you out a blessing!"

It was like the crowing of the chanticleer announcing dawn! It was like the music of an army advancing to relieve a city of its siege. It was like the voice of a lake; of a thunder! The despairing men looked up from their furrows and the hopeless women from their homes and mills. "What!" they exclaimed, "Is that the only trouble? Is it because we have forgotten God that all these miseries have come upon us? Is it only necessary to remember Him and serve Him; to pay our vows and our tithes, to recover the lost joy and blessedness of our lives?"

Yes—that was literally all! And it is so today, it will be so tomorrow, and forevermore.

"Prove Me," says God to man, through the voice of His prophet, "and see whether it is not true that I love and will bless you." Turn about is fair play. And God, who brings us into the world to test us, implores us also to put Him to the proof. "Try me, and see whether all that I declare and promise are not true," He beseeches. In that fact lies the glory of religion and the hope of humanity. Christianity is a practical philosophy of life. The God whom it reveals can be put to the test of benevolence and faithfulness as if He were a man. If you wish to know whether He exists, seek and you shall find Him. If you wish to discover whether He is opposed to wrongdoing and in favor of right living, you have only to try the one or the other on Him.

If you wish to know whether He will hear and answer prayer, you have only to pray in humility and sincerity. "Pragmatism" (in the most recent phraseology of philosophy) means practicability. It means the discovery of the value of any theory of life by its workableness. Will it work? Well, if it will work then it must be true, and the truer it is the better it will work. By that law we are willing to try our holy faith and we know that it will stand the test. Christianity is a workable theory of life. Any man or church, or nation, that wishes to know whether God is the sort of Being which the prophets, the Saviour, and His apostles proclaimed, have only to discover by actual experiment. Believe this! Believe in the moral earnestness of God!

"There Shall Not Be Room to Receive It."

Did you ever realize that your dissatisfaction with life grows not out of its emptiness and impoverishment, but out of your incapacity to receive and contain its richness? God pours you out blessings, which your little pint cup of a soul cannot hold! Not one person in ten thousand possesses the necessary powers of appreciation. If you had a cellar full of gold and did not know what it was, you would fill the world with clamor because God had not given you wealth! If you are deaf, it makes no difference whether the air is full of music or not. You shriek out your complaints of the lack of harmony in the world just the same. I have received and so have you innumerable gifts from God, which we had no talent for comprehending. Give a fine watch to a baby and it will put it into its moist little mouth to suck! Lack of appreciation; it has no room to hold it! I know husbands who have wives, and wives who have husbands, and parents who have children, who do not know their value. They have no room to hold them! There you have the trouble with nine-tenths of the miserable, dissatisfied, complaining people who believe that they live in the worst possible of worlds. God opens the windows of Heaven and pours them out floods of blessing; but they haven't a cistern, a barrel, or even a bucket; capable of holding His gifts.

"Bring Ye the Whole Tithe Into the Store House."

There is but one way of putting God to the proof. It is, in brief, to fulfill all the conditions of existence. Do his will and you shall know His doctrine, His nature and purpose. One of the conditions is that of benevolence, of consecration, sacrifice. It is a Divine law that we must give back to the Giver some portion of His gifts to us. There are those who think that portion is known and is absolute. It is a tenth, they say. At any rate, this much is certain: Whatever portion belongs to God must be given to Him in full. "Bring ye the whole tithe!" We do not fail so much in not giving large amounts as in not giving all we promise. We withhold a part of what we know we owe. We take a "rake-off" from our benevolences, setting aside a part of our time, our money, and our service, only to cut it down and shave it off. No one, however, can know the mind and heart of God who does not pay all his vows and bring his whole tithe into the storehouse.

"I Will Rebuke the Devourers." The devourers! We should get on pretty well if it were not for the devourers! There lay the terrible peril of these Jewish people. On every hand were the devourers! The armies of their enemies devoured their homes and barns. The locusts, caterpillars and insects devoured the crops in their fields. The tax-gatherer devoured their savings. Their vices devoured their virtues. Everywhere, everything bad seems trying to eat up everything good and we modern men and women are victims of the devourer like those of old. Our time is devoured by trivial duties and cares. Our attention is devoured by insignificant objects and interests. Our spirits are devoured by ambition, avarice, lust of pleasure, pride. What is it that devours you? Envy, bitterness, revenge, care, worry? Nothing is more terrible than to see people being devoured by little insect vices! It is like watching a great elm tree being eaten up by caterpillars.

"And All Nations Shall Call You Happy." It is a beautiful thing about happiness that its self-disclosure is inevitable. If you are happy, it will be known! All nations shall call you happy! There is an aroma of joy that is more permeating than that of musk. Soul-gladness diffuses itself like light.

"What is it that makes you so happy, Mandy?" a lady asked her old colored servant. "Lawdy, Missus, I don't let nothing bother me. I jes' weah this old worl' lak a loose fittin' gyahment," she said. Learn to do that and you will be a delightful person whom everybody will love and call happy.

DR. CHAS. F. GOSS.

TEMPERANCE LESSONS FROM THE
OLD AND NEW TESTAMENTS

DANIEL IN THE LIONS' DEN

BY BRITON RIVIERE

Darius, king of Persia, made many princes rulers of different parts of his kingdom. Over them he set three presidents, of whom Daniel, a Jewish prophet, was first. Daniel had performed many miracles and commanded the admiration of everybody. But the Persian officials were jealous of Daniel, seeking to destroy him, and knowing well that it was only through his religion, and the prejudices of the king, that this could be accomplished. So the king was persuaded to set up many graven gods, with orders that everybody, without exception, should worship them and should pray to none other. But Daniel prayed to the God of Israel, where he could be seen, and therefore was arrested. The penalty was that the offender should be thrust into a den of lions. So, the king, regretfully, ordered this punishment for the Jewish prophet, hoping that the God of the Israelites would protect him. Daniel was miraculously saved from the lions, and having been drawn out of the pit, his accusers were thrown in and at once torn to pieces by the savage animals.

This picture of Daniel among the lions was painted by an Englishman, named Riviere, whose special talent has been manifested by studies of wild animals, especially of lions. In this bare chamber marked by the rigid, heavy stone in the walls Daniel stands erect, dignified, and with his hands bound behind his back. His straight figure contrasts strikingly with the undulations and writhings of the lions. One lion, the king of the den, stands erect but hesitating, his eyes full of wild surprise, and still he makes no attack. Another great animal crawls on his abdomen, showing his teeth; but still making no attack. There is a very old beast who looks on questioningly, and so they cringe and snarl, but let Daniel alone.

Such an expression of animal fierceness controlled by the calm, bound man is immensely impressive. This talented painter has many times painted these great beasts in various conditions and positions until his reputation is worthily great.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

COPYRIGHT 1912 BY THE JOHN A. HERTEL CO.

DANIEL IN THE DEN OF LIONS

After Briton Riviere's painting by Jas. Bealings.

TEMPERANCE TOPICS

THE P RICE the drunkard
AYS for his
OTIONS
HIS ORTION — hereafter —

H EALTH
APPINESS
ONOR
OME
EAVEN
PERDITION

DESTROYS~ ~AMBITION
RUINS~ ~CHARACTER
INFLAMES~ ~PASSION
NUMBS~ ~CONSCIENCE
KILLS~ ~HOPE

D a r e d P rayerfully
A ntagonize U nhesitatingly
N ebuchadnezzar R easonably
I ntending to P romptly
E at nothing from his O bediently
L oaded table S uccessfully
E arnestly
D ecidedly

I
N
T
H
I
S

NOAH'S DRUNKENNESS.

And Noah began to be an

and he planted a

And he

of the wine, and was

and he was within his

And Ham, the

of Canaan, saw the nakedness of his father,
and his two brethren without.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS GENESIS 9:20-27.

Prayer: Lord, May we every day obey the command to watch and pray. Do Thou save us from the sin of drunkenness. For the Savior's sake. Amen.

This our pledge secure,
We'll never, never touch the wine,
We'll drink cold water pure.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 2348, directly after the Deluge. Place, Armenia (a hill in the northwest, adjacent to the great Ararat, is designated as the region where Noah planted his vineyard). Persons, Noah, his sons Shem, Ham and Japheth, and Canaan, Ham's son and Noah's grandson.

Scripture Setting: Wine, Eph. 5:18. Duty to parents, Ex. 20:12. Disrespect to parents, Deut. 27:16. Charity for others' sins, Gal. 6:1. True source of happiness and prosperity, Psal. 144:15. True aspiration, Heb. 11:16. Oneness of all believers as betokened in the blessing of Shem and Japheth, Eph. 3:6.

Life and Conduct Setting: We have 1. the sad story of the fall, through wine, of a man renowned for righteousness, obedience to God and sublime faith. 2. The misconduct of a son and grandson and the filial charity of Shem and Japheth. 3. The awakening of Noah to his condition, and his prophetic vision of the consequences of his weakness and Ham's and Canaan's sin, with a realization of the reward which shall come not only to Shem and Japheth, but their descendants. 4. The lesson shows us the weakness of human nature at its best and its proneness to sin. 5. The power of strong drink to overcome even the best of men, is set forth and the consequences of a good and an evil heredity are fully shown in the curse and blessing.

HOW A GOOD MAN ERRED.

Righteous Noah. "Noah was a just man and perfect in his generation." He was one of the few patriarchs of whom it is said he walked with God and held converse with the Almighty; a man so superior to all the men of his times as to be held in remembrance by Jehovah. "God remembered Noah," and made a covenant with him. Surely, if it were possible, as the champions of so-called moderation declare, we have here a man who could use wine as one of the "gifts of God" and not abuse it, to his own harm and that of posterity. We shall see if the moderate drinker is safe.

Little Foxes. When the whole earth was filled with impurity, Noah was above the temptation of lust. When all the world was against him, Noah faced its sneers, and continued at the task God had assigned him, and never yielded to the temptation of disobedience; when "cribbed, cabined and confined in the ark," with no sign from God, while the world disappeared from sight, Noah withstood the temptation of doubt. But in the midst of his own vineyard, among his own family, Noah falls. It is comparatively easy to live aright before the public, to deport oneself nobly under great temptation, but the daily life in the house is the true test of holiness. The man who commands the admiration of his children, the child who holds the respect of brothers and sisters, is the real hero. The smaller temptations are the most effectual. Great temptations are met and vanquished in the open. Small temptations steal upon one like an assassin and defeat one unawares. They are the "little foxes that spoil the vines."

Watch and Pray. Alone in an evil generation, Noah had been drawn to God for companionship. He must come to God daily and hourly to receive measurement and plans for the Ark. Only by faith could he endure the flood, but the waters had disappeared, the bow of the covenant had been set in the sky, and he was no longer in circumstances so difficult as to drive him continually to God. Only by living close to God, by bringing Him into all the little things of life, coming to Him with our least temptations, may sin be resisted. A man is never certain of himself. There are dormant and unsuspected germs of evil in every nature, ready to spring into fruitfulness under the slightest temptation. Nothing can keep us from falling into sin except the Master's direction, "Watch and pray lest ye enter into temptation."

New Development of Sin. Noah planted a vineyard. Noah saw what sin had wrought in the destruction of a world. The old world and its inhabitants, its wickedness, had been washed away in the flood. It was a new world which Noah looked upon, and he and his family were to determine the future. Alas, that the one who had survived such great evil was to introduce into this fresh new world that which was to be the source of greater evil still! What a train of evil, misfortune and woe has sprung from Noah's vineyard! Not a nation or commonwealth, not a city or town, and hardly a home, but has suffered from it.

A Drunkard's Shame. What a sorrowful spectacle—the righteous and rescued Noah lying drunk on his tent floor! "In that heavy, helpless figure, lying insensible in his tent, is as significant a warning as in the flood." Lust floods in, in the wake of intoxication. Noah lies uncovered, exposing himself contrary to the law of modesty. Impurity is the twin sister of drink, and the saloon often lures its victims through impure pictures, sensuous music and bad books.

Wine a Mocker. Noah is not the only great and good man deceived by wine. The just Lot; Nadab and Abihu, priests of God, all erred through wine. It is a pathetic fact that a roll call of wine's victims would include the names of some of the wisest, most generous and biggest-hearted men in the world, destroyed by it. No will is strong enough to overcome this mocker, no brain great enough to withstand its attack, and no character so noble but it may fall before it. The only safety lies in total abstinence from all forms of intoxicating liquors.

Behavior of Sons. Ham's conduct was at first indifferent. No sorrow over his father's shame was manifest. He neither turned away nor covered his eyes. Such indifference betrayed a heartlessness appalling in a son. Then he told it to his brothers without. This was utter shamelessness. Learning of their father's pitiable and disgraceful condition, the other two sons, obedient to the great command with promise, seized the first robe at hand, spread it out and went backward, and with averted faces covered the nakedness of their father. Even the misconduct and unworthiness of a parent does not relieve a child from the obligation of the commandment, "Honor thy father and thy mother."

Christly Attitude Toward the Sinner. The One who was in every way tempted as we are, and yet without sin, sees deeper into the hearts of the erring than any fellow sinner. "Neither do I condemn thee; go and sin no more," was the tender admonition of Christ. The attitude of men toward the sins of others is a test of character. The reluctant exposure of sin, that good may come, is quite different from the publication of sin in gossip, for the amusement of others. Are not those who find pleasure in the sins of their fellows, who witness immodest plays in the theater, gloat over the criminal news in yellow journals, and choose those books whose plots are founded on crime or indecency, like Ham? Charity covers a multitude of sins. Each one of us is so liable to fall that we should see in another's fall a warning to ourselves, "Let us remember that life is a battle against sin; its victories recorded in Heaven, its defeats manifest on earth." Where no good can be done by talking them over, let us cover the faults, mistakes and sins of others as did the two sons of Noah their father's sin.

The Awakening. Noah awoke from his wine, and knew. Restored consciousness brought a sense of his humiliation. Noah had sinned but once. Alas, for the awakening of those whose whole lives have been spent in sin! Noah partook of wine under conditions exalted by advocates of the moderate use of alcohol. He began as a moderate drinker. We may reasonably infer that this was the first instance of complete intoxication. He did not frequent a public drinking place, but drank in the home; the wine was not adulterated, but pure juice of the grapes from his own vineyard; but what disastrous results! A saint of God in a drunken debauch, humiliated by his own son and grandson. The hereditary effects of the father's weakness were now manifest in Ham's unfilial, unfeeling conduct and Canaan's sinful, shameless insult. Of all agents, alcohol is the most powerful in establishing an evil heredity. Dr. Oliver Wendell Holmes quaintly says, "We are omnibuses in which our ancestors ride."

A Curse and a Blessing. Noah had sinned in a sottish, bestial way, but the patriarch who had looked to God for help in all the perilous days of the flood, who had read the bow of promise in the sky, knew whence to seek help in his own degradation. In that awful moment of awakening, a cry for pardon and restoration must have gone up to Noah's God, or else the spirit of prophecy would not have come upon him in which he gave utterance to a curse and a blessing. There had been an act of mockery or abuse which Noah knew Canaan had done to him, so the curse falls upon the grandson, whom Noah calls his youngest son, according to the custom of that day, by which all a man's descendants are like sons. Noah's prophecy was not the angry and excessive wrath of an outraged father, but a prophetic vision of the future. It does not even require a prophetic vision to foresee misfortune following evil, and advancement, honor and supremacy as the reward of righteousness. Ever and always, before and since Noah's time, it has been exemplified in the history of the rise and fall of nations and in the lives of individuals.

Quiz. 1. What caused Noah's fall? 2. What other good men of the Bible fell through drink? 3. Can there be any moderate use of any evil? 4. What is the only safe course? 5. Upon whom does drunkenness fall most heavily? 6. Ought we not always to so live that it will be easier for those who follow us to do right?

Seed Thoughts. 1. No one is above temptation. 2. Life's calms bring dangers as well as life's storms. 3. It is as necessary to pray "Lead us not into temptation" as "Give us this day our daily bread." 4. The propagation of sin is as great an evil as the perpetration of sin. 5. Wine is a mocker; he who begins by "drinking like a gentleman" often ends by being "drunker than a brute." 6. Sin not only hurts the sinner, but those about him and those who come after. 7. Unkindness is liable to be repaid in its own coin. 8. Charity toward others oft brings mercy to ourselves. 9. The good a man does lives through the generations that follow him.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

And Nadab and Abihu, the

of Aaron, took either of them
his

and therein, and put incense thereon,

and

strange fire before the Lord, which he commanded them not. And there went out from the Lord, and devoured them, and they died before the Lord. Then

said unto Aaron, This is it that the Lord spake, saying, I will be sanctified in them that come nigh me, and before
all the

I will be glorified. And Aaron held his peace.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LEV. 10:1-11.

READ, ALSO, EX. 24; EX. 6:13; NUM. 3:2, 26:60; 1 CHRON. 6:3, 24:1.

Prayer: Our Father, Help us to take warning from the miseries and punishments that others bring upon themselves through indulgence in strong drink. Make our sons strong to resist the evil that deprives men of their good judgment and sets their feet in the snare. May our offering to Thee be our noblest manhood and unwavering service. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"I will promise Thee, dear Lord, that I Will never cloud the light
Which shines from Thee within my soul,
And makes my reason bright.
Nor ever will I lose the power
To serve Thee by Thy will,
Which Thou hast set within my heart,
Thy precepts to fulfill."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 1490. Place, the tabernacle in the wilderness, before Mt. Sinai.
Persons: Moses, Aaron, Nadab and Abihu, sons of Aaron; Uzziel, uncle of Aaron; Mishael, Elzaphan, cousins of Aaron; Eleazar and Ithamar, younger sons of Aaron, and people.

Scripture Setting: Priests are commanded not to drink wine, Ezekiel 44:21. Paul declares against the use of wine, Eph. 5:18. Abstinence from wine demanded from ministers, 1 Timothy 2:3; Titus 1:3. The acceptable offering, Ps. 40:6; 51:16; Romans 12:1. Who shall abide in the tabernacle, Ps. 15.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special feature of this story is the sudden introduction of tragedy into the ceremonials attending the installation of Aaron and his sons into the priesthood. 1. The reckless sin through drunkenness of Nadab and Abihu in ignoring God's commands and offering strange fire before the Lord. 2. The miraculous and speedy retribution which destroyed them. 3. Aaron's obedience to the edict against outward mourning for his sons and his submission to God's judgment. 4. The burial of the two priests and the command against the use of wine immediately following.

DISOBEDIENCE PUNISHED.

The Occasion Aaron and his four sons had just been installed in their Divinely appointed priesthood. The solemn ceremonies of their consecration, the offering of sacrifice, had been followed by the first Aaronic benediction, and then the glory of the Lord had appeared to a great congregation, filling them with such joy that they shouted and fell on their faces. Never before had God been so manifest to His chosen people. It was an occasion long to be remembered, and happy those whose privilege it had been to see the shining faces of Moses and Aaron, the flaming sacrificial fire and the glory of the great Jehovah.

Nadab and Abihu. These two elder sons of Aaron, with their father and seventy of the elders of Israel, had gone with Moses to Sinai, where they saw the awful cloud that covered the mount and the glory of the Lord that flamed from Sinai. Had not God a right to expect that those whom He had so exalted should honor Him? God's children should show forth His righteousness to the world. Our Lord is glorified in His disciples, and Paul prays that Jesus Christ may be glorified in the Church. The name Christian signifies "a little Christ"—in all things like Christ.

The Offering of a Strange Fire. Yet on the very day of their consecration to the priesthood, Nadab and Abihu "took each of them his censer and offered strange fire before the Lord, which He had not commanded them." It may never be known just what they did. Is it not enough to know that they put their own will against God's will for them? It was not the act of a moment, to be forgotten the next. The whole of this second day, all the manifestations of God's power had been to instruct the people how God was to be worshipped. And now, in their robes of office, before the assembled congregation, the two priests come, not as God in His great wisdom has commanded, but with strange fire, "setting an evil example for worshippers through all generations. The inconsistent Christian is a stumbling-block to others. Paul rests the duty of total abstinence upon this basis. It is not good to "drink wine nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth." Solomon tells us that those who drink forget the law. It was under the excitement of wine that Nadab and Abihu offered that which God had not commanded. Today strong drink is the chief cause of the violation of the Ten Commandments.

Punishment. Because they ignored the command of God, Nadab and Abihu perished by a fire from the Lord, so miraculous that their bodies were not consumed, nor even their clothes. We must not read into this story the vengeance of an insulted and despotic God. Nature's laws are inexorable, with a death penalty for their infringement.

Aviation will never be a perfectly safe means of travel until man has solved and complied with every requirement of the laws that govern the air. Young Johnstone and a score of others met death the moment when, through some mischance, their aeroplanes opposed the course of natural law. If even the good intentioned are not immune from penalty, what of the wilful violator of God's law? To dally with sin is to "play with fire." Often the very instrument of a man's sin becomes his punishment. For one thoughtless indulgence by a young man, a diseased body and life-long pain may be the penalty.

Burial. The father and brothers were commanded to mourn in silence, and not to manifest the usual outward signs of grief. It is a consolation to pay proper respect to the dear ones taken from us, and this command was not the childish anger of an offended Deity. For Aaron, the high priest, to have mourned would have weakened the impression created through the tragic consequence of disobedience, by indicating dissatisfaction with God's judgment. However, due provisions were made for the burial of the stricken priests. Two cousins, the next nearest of kin, were pallbearers, carrying the dead, in their priestly robes, just as they had fallen, out of the camp, while the whole house of Israel mourned for these two sons of Aaron and their sin. So is God's justice ever tempered with mercy.

God First. Above father and mother and wife and children and brethren and sisters, would Christ be exalted. What would be right at another time would be wrong and foregone if it interfered with a duty to God. Aaron refrained from mourning his own son, because his duties were so important that he could not leave the tabernacle for the days of purification that the burial of Nadab and Abihu would have entailed. But how many forego the prayer meeting, church service or Sunday school when attendance would interfere with some worldly pleasure!

Strong Drink. One wonders how men of Nadab and Abihu's training and experience could have sinned so recklessly. Ah, the secret is out—they are but two of the many men of exalted position who have erred through strong drink. From the command following right after, and forbidding God's priests to drink wine in connection with their service in the tabernacle, under the penalty of death, we may infer that the fatal sin was committed when the two priests were in a state of intoxication. Since Aaron and his two sons were in a well-nigh continuous service, the command amounted to almost total prohibition.

Requirement of the Ministry. Total abstinence was a requirement of the ministry under the new dispensation, but Paul's admonition was not adhered to. During the Middle Ages, many a priest of God was known as a wine bibber; the church followed Noah's example, and planted great vineyards. Small wonder that spirituality departed from the church, and those days are known as the Dark Ages. How shocking it would be now to offer your minister a glass of whisky when he comes on a pastoral call! Yet, less than a hundred years ago, failure to do so was considered a mark of disrespect. Let the friends of temperance rejoice—the church is accepting Paul's teaching. Almost without exception, the Protestant ministers of the United States are "not given to wine." In England the custom of total abstinence among the clergy is becoming universal. When total abstinence is not imposed on the ministry, wine still causes forgetfulness, and disregard of God's law still makes priest and prophet err, and statistics show that eighty per cent of those deposed from the ministry in churches where the rule does not prevail, fall through strong drink.

Office of the Church. The good old deacon who complained that if his pastor kept on preaching against the saloon and drunkenness, people wouldn't know the "difference between religion and temperance," would have been disquieted by the interpretation of duty which the Lord spake unto Aaron, for with the command against strong drink, Aaron was told that it was a part of his office to distinguish between holy and unholy and between clean and unclean. Ezekiel pictures the priest or minister as a watchman whose duty is to warn the people of their sins. Not alone the ministry, but the church of God has a duty in the temperance reform, and the eight million Christian voters of the land should distinguish between the clean and unclean in politics.

The Acceptable Offering. "Nadab and Abihu offered strange fire before the Lord which He commanded them not. "There is no better or more profitable exegesis of the lesson than the Fifteenth Psalm, wherein David tells us that he who shall abide in the tabernacle of the Lord must walk uprightly, do right, speak the truth, refrain from evil speech, love his neighbor, abhor evil companions and choose God-fearing comrades; he must be a man whose word is as good as his bond, and generous and just in his dealings with others. Such a life, be it priest or layman, is an acceptable offering, for all these things He commanded.

Quiz. 1. What sudden deaths are recorded in the New Testament of professing Christians who would have deceived God in their offering? 2. What caused Nadab and Abihu's sin? 3. What prophet complains that priest and prophet err through strong drink? 4. What is an acceptable sacrifice to God? 5. What does God desire more than burnt offering?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Love and obedience must enter into service. 2. Responsibility is proportioned to privilege. 3. Disobedience is the starting point from whence all other sins enter. 4. The wages of sin is death. 5. Retribution may be not always swift, but it is sure. 6. Wine, considered the most moderate and harmless of all intoxicating drinks, lays the exalted low and counts as many victims as whisky and gin. 7. Total abstinence is the only safe course. 8. A good life is a guide post, pointing others to Christ; an inconsistent life leads to destruction. 9. God's will and God's way are always best.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

□ If a man hath a stubborn and rebellious son, which will not obey the voice of his father, or the voice of his mother, and that, when they have chastened him, will not harken unto them: Then shall his father and his mother and bring him out unto the elders of his city, and unto the

of his place;
And they shall say unto the

of his city, This our son is stubborn and rebellious; he will not obey our voice; he is a

and a

And all the

of his city shall

with stones, that he die: so shalt thou put evil away from among you; and all Israel shall hear, and fear.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS DEUT. 21:18-21.

Prayer: Dear Heavenly Father, Help us to remember Thy great commandment with promise. Keep us, we pray Thee, from bringing dishonor to our parents, and from the sins of disobedience and drunkenness. For the sake of Thy dear Son. Amen.

"Sooner or later the wrong will be righted,
Sooner or later the wicked will fail;
Sooner or later the dark will be lighted,
Sooner or later the right will prevail."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 1490. Place, The Land of Moab. (Our lesson is an excerpt of an account of what Moses said in one of his addresses to the children of Israel east of Jordan.) Characters presented, A father and mother, a disobedient, drunken son, the court of elders and men of the city.

Scripture Setting: The Disobedient Son. A father of leniency, 1 Sam. 3:13. A rebellious son, II Samuel, 18:15-35. The self-willed son, I Kings 12:6-13. A repentant son, Luke 15:11.

Life and Conduct Setting: In the law concerning disobedience, we have brought before us a vivid picture: 1. The righteous, broken-hearted father and mother, whose teaching has been scorned by their child. 2. The disobedient, rebellious, drunken son, whom their efforts have failed to reform. 3. The hearing before the court of elders. We can readily picture the sorrow and humiliation of parents compelled to thus publish their son's shame publicly. 4. The verdict of the elders. We feel sure these good men grieved for the parents, and pronounced the verdict with reluctance. 5. The punishment of death by stoning. 6. It recalls the picture of Christ when the woman was brought before Him to be stoned, and we rejoice that repentance and an appeal to Christ brings forgiveness for even the greatest sins.

A FATHER'S AND MOTHER'S SORROW.

Family Life Without God. Long before the world knew of kings or queens, or fixed government, the people lived in what is called the tribal life, all the many generations of one family forming the tribe. Justice was not administered by courts, but by the chief men, or heads of the different branches of the family which made up the tribe. Each household was ruled, even in the matter of life and death, by the father. The custom still prevails among savages and in some heathen lands, where the father may brain his daughter with a club, or the mother may abandon her babe to die, and it is not a crime. Fear, not love, rules. The parent a tyrant, the child a slave. Such was the relationship between father and child in the time of our lesson, among nations that knew not God.

God in the Home. How different the family relation under God's law! The Bible abounds with beautiful pictures of home life. Abraham's love for his son was second only to his love for God. Ruth's devotion extended not only to her husband, but to her husband's people, country and God. True, disrespect, partiality, jealousy, envy, disobedience, marred the happiness of many of these homes, but the Jewish home life was vastly superior to the tribal life of the surrounding heathen, just as today the humble Christian home pictured by Burns in the Cotter's Saturday Night is a sweeter, better place than any home of wealth and grandeur, where God is not honored. It is worthy of note that Gladstone, Rhodes, Lincoln, Washington—indeed all the world's greatest men were nurtured in Christian homes.

The Commandment with Promise. In the Pentateuch, irreverence to parents is made almost equal in its sinfulness to want of reverence for God. The father stands to his earthly children as God to the children of His creation; therefore obedience and reverence are commanded. In a limited sense, he represents God, and is to give expression to the Divine character in all his dealings with the child. God is the universal Father, and His fatherly treatment of His children, an example of parenthood. Likeness to Him is expected and demanded of earthly parents.

Shining Examples. The Bible gives us many examples of dutiful children, Joseph, when ruler of all Egypt, presents a beautiful instance of filial respect, in his respectful and tender greeting of the aged father. Where can we find a more touching example of loyalty than in Jephthah's daughter, a voluntary victim to her father's vow? David's provision for his parents and his subsequent care for them show him as a dutiful son. What an example of filial devotion and solicitude was given us when Christ, amid the agony of crucifixion, with infinite tenderness and delicacy, commended his mother to the charge of the beloved John!

Disobedience. In contrast to these is the stubborn and rebellious son of our lesson, "which will not obey the voice of his father, or the voice of his mother." He has been instructed by the father, entreated by the mother; yet he tramples on parental authority, despises their commands and disobeys their law. The voices of father and mother! How often has he heard the firm voice of the father, its stern tones breaking and melting into entreaty, as foreseeing the evils which his son must encounter through disobedience, he would have the stubborn, sullen, self-willed boy follow his counsel. Yes, and the lad has stood immovable before his mother's voice, its tender entreaty, loving expostulation and broken-hearted grief over the wrongdoing of the child of her love. To the physical suffering of motherhood he has added the pangs of spiritual travail over a son gone wrong. It has been truthfully said that "a boy would be more merciful to shoot his mother through the head than to stab her through the heart by disobedience." There is a legend that only the father lived to see the prodigal son return. The mother's heart was broken when her boy left the home.

Authority of Parents. The Bible teaches parental authority, and commends discipline, even punishment. This boy has been chastened, but he will not harken unto them. Alas, for the boy who rebels against parental discipline! Absalom was such a son, plotting rebellion against a father whose love was so great that he would have died for him; would have borne Absalom's punishment, had God permitted. God likens His own tender compassion to the pity of a father for his children. Do not mistake firmness for sternness, or rebel against a father's just punishment.

The Final Court. The love and forbearance of father and mother is so great that we find no instance in the Bible where parents availed themselves of the right to bring an incorrigibly rebellious son to the court of the elders of the city for trial and punishment for violation of the fifth commandment. But how many a noble name has been sullied by a son's drunkenness and revelry! Though the parents would hide a child's faults, his own disobedience, folly and sin publish his disgrace. Each boy and girl has a reputation among their elders for good or evil. The truest estimate of a man's character may be gained from his fellow townsmen. The great banking and guarantee firms send blanks out to the home town of the young man seeking employment, concerning his conduct and reputation. An adverse report bars him from employment.

The Indictment. "This, our son, is stubborn and rebellious; he is a glutton and drunkard." We are not surprised to find that other sins have grown out of the boy's disobedience. Paul numbers the disobedient child with those of a reprobate mind, malicious and wicked persons, boasters, blasphemers, ingrates and traitors, even murderers. The warden of a great state reformatory for boys once told the writer there was not a boy in the institution whose first crime had not been that of disobedience to parents.

The Punishment. According to the stern code of earlier times, the disobedient, rebellious, drunken son was stoned to death by the men of his own city. The stern decree was justified by the civic good. For the same reason, in order that they may not contaminate their playmates, the present public-school system of our larger cities segregates the bad boy from the other pupils and commits him to a truant school or reformatory. For the old dispensation, with its death penalties, Christ has substituted the reign of love, the juvenile courts, and probation officers. Truancy, industrial and reform schools are the outgrowth of that old court of the elders, with its stern death penalty. Against the dark picture of accusing parents, stern judging elders, and stoning citizens, we see Ben Lindsay, "de kids'" judge of Denver, with his waifs rescued from the street, saved for the Christ who died to make men free—free from the sins of disobedience and drunkenness. We rejoice that where sin abounded, grace doth much more abound.

Quiz. 1. Name other rebellious sons mentioned in the Bible. 2. What examples of obedience are given? 3. Ask your teacher to read the story of the prodigal son (Luke 15:11) and of the boyhood of Christ (Luke 2:40). 4. What priest fell dead on receiving tidings of the death of two evil-sons? 5. What king mourned the untimely end of a rebellious son? 6. Which of the Ten Commandments is called "The Commandment with promise?"

Seed Truths. 1. Disobedience betokens a lack of self-control. 2. Obedience is a test of character. 3. Filial duty is a privilege. 4. Disrespect to parents brings disrepute to the child. 5. Every crime has its beginning in disobedience. 6. The community in which one lives is still judge and jury, and few can outlive the verdict of his neighbors. 7. "Even a child is known by his doings, whether his work be pure and whether it be right." 8. "He that is a companion of riotous men shameth his father."

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

NABAL'S REVEL.

And Abigail came to Nabal: and, behold, he held a

in his

like the feast of a and Nabal's heart was merry within him, for he was very wherefore she told him nothing, less or more, until the light.

But it came to pass
in the morning, when the

was gone out of Nabal,
and his

had told him these things, that his heart died within him, and he became as a

And it came to pass, about ten days after, that the Lord smote Nabal that he died.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS 1 SAMUEL 25:2-38.

Prayer: Lord, May we not give way to foolish wrath, or err through drunkenness. Give to us, we pray Thee, a generous spirit. We ask in the name of the One who gave Himself for us. Amen.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 1061. Place, Carmel. Persons, David and his followers, Nabal, Abigail his wife, and the young men in his service.

Scripture Setting: Man's ingratitude and covetousness. Chief butlers' ingratitude to Joseph, Gen. 40:21-23. Hebrews' ingratitude to Moses, Ex. 2:11-15. Miriam's ingratitude to Moses, Num. 12. Israel's ingratitude to God, Dent. 9. Unwise economy, Prov. 11:24-26. Generous charity commanded, Eccles. 1:2. Woe to drunkard, Isa. 5:8, 11; 28:1; Joel 15.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features

THE FOLLY OF DRUNKENNESS.

Sheep Shearing. Nabal was a wealthy farmer, and our story opens upon a familiar pastoral scene—the annual sheep shearing. In Carmel, Nabal's flocks of three thousand sheep and a thousand goats were herded. The shepherds and helpers were young men and boys who welcomed the shearing as a relief from the solitary shepherd's life. It was a time of frolic and, in this instance, of drunken revelry. Only a generation ago, intoxicating liquors were served at every barn-raising and husking bee, during harvest time and butchering. On the spring sheep shearing, liquors was dispensed, and many an innocent frolic was turned into a revel of drunkenness. Frequent excesses and even tragedies followed such indulgence, and friends of temperance rejoice that the custom has become practically obsolete.

The Master of the Sheep Fold. Nabal was a man of great wealth and noble family. He was a descendant of Judah the lion-hearted, and of Caleb, so courageous; but his senseless head, mean heart and niggardly nature made him as inferior as his great ancestors were superior to average humanity. The highest family connection and greatest wealth do not change a man's real nature, or even gain for him true honor.

David's Request. Nabal owed much to David. Doubtless the sight of the young shepherds employed by Nabal recalled to him his own happy, carefree boyhood, when as a shepherd he himself tended his father's herds. David had no legal claim upon Nabal and he proffered none, but by all the laws of gratitude and requital his request was fair and just. It was courteous and modest. Sheep shearing was the time of remembering the flock and counting the increase over the previous year. It was a season of liberality and kindness. The Mosaic law commanded that a part of all increase should

"No tongue can express
The power of true kindness to cheer and to bless;
It soothes every sorrow, makes smooth every path;
It lightens all burdens and turns away wrath."

of this story are: 1. The friendly spirit manifested by David toward Nabal and his possessions. 2. His modest request for acknowledgment of his services. 3. Nabal's churlish refusal and ingratitude for favors shown him. 4. The excessive and foolish wrath of David that would have shed innocent blood. 5. The wise tact of Abigail. 6. Her faith in God and prophetic vision of David's future. 7. Nabal's drunken excess and revels. 8. The penalty which befalls Nabal and others who sin against health through drunkenness. 9. The folly of man's taking vengeance into his own hands.

go to the poor and the stranger (Deut. 24:19-22). To give "as God hath prospered" is still one of the commands too often overlooked. We should share any great gain, the luxuries and good times that come to us with those less fortunate. David gently reminded Nabal of this custom; he hinted at the services which he and his followers had done him; he made no stated demand but modestly asked Nabal to give what might come to his hand, as a father might to a son who needed succor.

Favor Unrequited. A decent sense of gratitude would have prompted Nabal to make some return for David's services, even though there was no legal obligation. But there are small souls which are content to render no more assistance to their fellow men than they are legally bound to, and who boast that they will take all the law allows. Nabal was one of these; Shylock demanding his pound of flesh was such a man. They keep the letter of the law but have lost its spirit as enunciated in the Golden Rule of Christ, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them."

A Lame Excuse. Nabal would not part with anything he could possibly find an excuse for retaining, but he must have a cloak for his stinginess. This is the habit of miserly people. They not only refuse to aid the poor, but flout their poverty and impugn their misfortune; they will only help the "worthy poor" and do not even give to Christian benevolence unless assured that their money will bring a return. Such excuses may silence their own consciences as they continue to spend all their money on themselves, but will they satisfy the God whose favor extends over the just and the unjust? Nabal professes not to know his benefactor. He asks David's messenger, "Who is David?" and then justifies his refusal of the request with, "Shall I then take my bread and my water, and my flesh that I have killed for my shearers, and give it unto men that I know not whence they be?"

Foolish Wrath. Insult added to injury was more than David would bear. It aroused wrath altogether out of proportion to the offence. Railing against Nabal's ingratitude, he vowed he would destroy Nabal and all he had. In his unreasonable anger he would include even the innocent shepherd lads who had been special objects of his protecting care. Rallying his band, David started on his errand of destruction. Was this wrathful, revengeful, unreasonable man the same who but a short time before had staid his hand from hurting his enemy, Saul, because the Lord was judge and avenger? Truly, wrath is cruel and anger outrageous. "To lose our temper" on the slightest provocation is folly. Some erroneously think it the mark of strength to show temper and that failure to resent insult and injury betokens a lack of spirit; but the Bible says it is a man's "glory to pass over a transgression."

A Tactful and Courageous Woman. Since Nabal was as stubborn as he was stupid, and disagreeable at that, it was useless to expostulate with him; therefore one of his young men came to Abigail, Nabal's wife. He acknowledged their obligation to David and bewailed his master's stinginess and folly. Abigail, a woman of cleverness and promptitude, loaded her servants with all that a company of hungry men might need and started to intercept David. Abigail was not a woman to faint or scream at danger, but courageously and openly met the man whose warlike prowess had already been celebrated in song, and through her gifts and tact, dissuaded David from his wrathful purpose. Truly a wise answer turneth away wrath. Through Abigail's wisdom and tactfulness David was withheld from the needless shedding of blood and was restored to that spirit which had led him to leave vengeance in the hands of the Lord.

A Drunken Frolic. Nabal was too stingy to grant David's modest request, but for his own pleasure spent money like a king. How often those who are most niggardly in their gifts to God and to the poor lavish money upon themselves and gloat in reckless and wasteful expenditure for the gratification of their own evil desires. The people of the United States spend over two billion dollars for strong drink annually. The money spent for drink would give an old age pension of twenty dollars a month to all persons over sixty years of age, and would also provide for the education of every child in the United States from five to eighteen years of age, and leave a balance to meet all the necessary expenses of government and to cover all the money expended for church and missionary purposes, and Christian benevolences. If such wicked and foolish expenditure continues, may not the United States meet the fate of the drunken Nabal? Let us take warning from the downfall of other nations through a like sin.

The Morning After. On her return, Abigail found Nabal so drunk that she wisely refrained from speech that night. In the morning Nabal awoke with the after effects of drink full upon him. When he heard his wife's story, penurious sorrow over the loss occasioned through her liberality and cowardly fear of what might happen, added to the physical effects of the debauch, so weakened an abused and enfeebled constitution that his death occurred ten days later.

A Decree of God. The Lord smote Nabal and he died. It required no direct and miraculous penalty such as attended the sin of Nadab and Abihu. God rules through natural law. A rebellious stomach inflamed by alcohol; the hob-nailed liver of the regular drinker; weakened arteries, fatty and degenerate muscles of a heart continually spurred to action by drink; exhausted granules that represent the nerve force of an alcoholized brain—any or all of these may have caused Nabal's death, as they cause the death of the chronic drunkard today. It is God's way to punish man for his misdeeds through the body he has offended and abused.

Quiz. 1. What king had David befriended only to receive evil for good? 2. What is Christ's command concerning requital for evil? 3. What other woman of the Bible appeared before a king and by her tact and wisdom secured the recall of his decree for the destruction of her people? 4. What was the Mosaic law in regard to strangers? 5. Name some of the penalties (physical) for drunkenness.

Seed Thoughts. 1. Changing customs in favor of total abstinence mark the progress of the temperance reform. 2. Parsimony "withholdeth more than is meet and it tendeth to poverty"—of soul, if not of fortune. 3. Human law is a short yardstick. 4. He who fills the requirements of the law only falls short of the law as summed up by Christ in the two great commandments. 5. A poor excuse is worse than none. 6. Selfishness and prodigality oft go hand in hand. 7. The drunkard's punishment is in his own excess. 8. We may trust God to right our wrongs; vengeance belongs to Him.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

DEFEAT THROUGH DRUNKENNESS.

And, behold, there came a prophet unto Ahab king of Israel, saying, Thus saith the Lord, Hast thou seen all this great multitude? behold, I will deliver it into thine hand this day; and thou shalt know that I am the Lord. Then he numbered the young men of the princes of the provinces, and they were two hundred and thirty-two: and after them he numbered all the people, even all the children of Israel, being seven thousand. And they went out at noon: but Benhadad was himself drunk in the pavilions, he and the kings, the thirty and two kings that helped him. So these young men of the princes of the provinces came out of the city, and the which followed them. And they every one his man: and the Syrians and Israel

them: and Benhadad the king of Syria with the horsemen. And the king of Israel went out, and smote the and slew the Syrians with a great slaughter.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS 1 KINGS 20:1-21.

Prayer: Lord, May we ever remember that wine is a mocker, strong drink is raging, and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise. In Christ's name. Amen.

Where there's drink, there's danger.
Write it on the school boy's slate,
Write it on the prison gate,
Write it on the halls of state,
Where there's drink, there's danger.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 901. Places, Samaria and its environs. Persons, Benhadad II., king of Syria; Ahab, king of Israel; the thirty-two kings and vassals and allies of Benhadad, the elders of Israel, prophets of the Lord and the armies of Syria and Israel.

Scripture Setting: Drunkenness. Elah's drunkenness, 1 Kings 8:9. Belshazzar's feast, Dan. 5. Warnings against drink, Prov. 23:20; 31:4, 5; Isa. 5:11; Luke 21:34; 1 Cor. 6:10. Results of drunkenness, Prov. 21:17; 23:21; 29:32; Hab. 2:5.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of this story are: 1. Benhadad's boastful and arrogant tyranny. 2. Ahab's cowardly surrender to his demands, and final resistance. 3. The Syrian king's drunken confidence. 4. The wise advice of the elders. 5. The appearance of a prophet of the Lord. One admires the splendid dash and courage of the young men with their small army which wholly routs the Syrian hosts and causes the vaunting, drunken and dismantled king Benhadad to flee.

HOW THIRTY-THREE KINGS LOST A BATTLE.

The King. Benhadad was the title given the kings of Syria. It meant the Sun-god, for this king claimed that his father, Hadad, was a god, and he himself the god of the sun. Now, the real truth was that this Benhadad was the grandson of a petty king and the whole of Benhadad's kingdom was a part of the dominion once ruled by the great king Solomon, Ahab's own great-grandfather. Sin always makes big claims, but it has no real authority, and any power it may claim over your life or mine is a lie. Strong drink and the saloon are Benhadads, making many presumptuous claims; but the brain enslaved by drink, the saloon-ridden city, are a part of God's dominion, and should acknowledge His rule.

His Army. Benhadad had thirty-three kings with him to fight his battles and do his bidding. He had also horses and chariots and many soldiers. We are told elsewhere that this Syrian king had over one hundred and forty thousand men, two hundred and thirty-two generals, four thousand chariots and twelve hundred horsemen, and one thousand burden-bearing camels. What an imposing array! Sin is often imposing in appearance. Every great sin has other sins tributary to it—small sins and vices that make it easy for those who yield to them to fall into greater sins. The cigaret, bad books, bad words and thoughts are the allies of strong drink, and the boy who yields to them courts defeat in life. In its onward march against the homes of our country, which are the nation's real seat of government, the saloon boasts of the strength of its army; of the numbers employed; the millions of capital invested and of the petty politicians ready to do its bidding. Let us never forget that our God can overthrow the wicked king Alcohol as He did Benhadad.

Insolent Demands. A trumpeter and messengers were sent into the city to tell king Ahab that his riches, his children and all his possessions were Benhadad's, and if Ahab would give him leave to take all he pleased, Benhadad would withdraw his army. Sin makes frightful demands. The first demand may be only a dime for cigarettes, but when the boy grows to manhood, Habit and Appetite, two allies of Strong Drink, have been formed and the saloon now demands all his wages, while wife and children starve. The liquor traffic demands not only two billion dollars annually from the American people, but our boys and girls as well.

Submission. Faithless king Ahab had disobeyed God. Temptation and trouble always come to those who seek evil companions and ignore God's law. Ahab forgot that all Benhadad's kingdom was his, as the great-grandson of king Solomon, whose dominion included all of Syria. Benhadad should have paid tribute to Ahab, not Ahab to Benhadad. Good people should not cringe before evil, but should make evil fear them. Sin has no ownership of the allurements it offers, for this world is a part of God's kingdom, and ours, as His sons and daughters. No good thing will He withhold from them who walk uprightly. Ahab bowed before Benhadad's claim. A rebel to God is a slave to all beside. The boy who is afraid to say "No," becomes the poor, enslaved drunkard. Too long the American people have obeyed the demands of the saloon, paying annual tribute of one hundred thousand boys to recruit the ranks depleted by the hundred thousand slain each year by strong drink.

Greater Exaction. Ahab's submission encouraged Benhadad to send again, claiming the right to have his servants search not only Ahab's palace, but the homes of his kindred and subjects, for whatever they might desire, leaving only what did not please Benhadad's servants, for Ahab and his friends. Benhadad must have it in his hands. It is not enough that Ahab should say it is his; he will not go till he has possession. The saloon-keeper demands cash, leaving the grocer, butcher and merchant the credit trade. Compromise and submission increase the demands of sin.

Wise Counsellors. Ahab had wise counsellors. The best counsellors are the Word of God and our parents. "Hear the instruction of thy father and forsake not the law of thy mother." A boy is never too big to mind his mother. Washington, Lincoln and Garfield are only a few of the great men who acknowledge that success and honor were won through obedience to a mother's wise counsel.

Declaration of Independence. Ahab was not wholly a coward. His own silver and gold, his own wives and children, he had given to Benhadad, but he would not bargain away the lives, property and families of others. His people must be protected from the unjust demands of Benhadad. Should the voters of this republic be less true to their obligation as rulers than Ahab? Yet men who would not squander their own money for drink make it easy for others to impoverish themselves. Few are willing to furnish the boys for the saloon, but many consent to the destruction of their neighbor's boys. Let us say with Ahab, "This thing I may not do."

A Drunken Commander. Benhadad rages and foams. He will destroy this people. He will even carry away the ground on which the city stands. He gives orders that cannot be executed. Drink destroys the judgment. For this reason, our business firms, factories and railroads demand total abstinence from those in charge. As one manufacturer expresses it, "A drunken foreman is too expensive an experiment." The brain is commander-in-chief of an army of muscles, nerves and brain or thought cells. Sight, hearing, smell, touch and taste keep the brain informed, just as war generals keep the wires burning with messages from the seat of war to their chief. Experiments made by noted scientists prove that even so small an amount of alcohol as is contained in a mug of beer, half a glass of whisky, or a glass of wine, has a stupefying effect on the action of the brain, the five senses and the muscles, thus weakening the brain and its army corps, just as Benhadad and his generals were unfitted for command by drink.

The armies of Benhadad and Belshazzar are not the only ones defeated because of drunkenness. The wonderful endurance of the Boer army was largely due to their total abstinence from liquor. The drinking of the Spanish officers and sailors on the eve of battle made the American victory easier, while it is said the Russo-Japanese war was a fight of water drinkers against vodka drinkers.

A Wise Answer. So wise was Ahab's reply to Benhadad that it has become a proverb. The boy who smokes, drinks and gambles may laugh at the clean boy as a "sissy," but he soon finds himself a failure, while the boy he ridiculed has outdistanced him. It is not well to be too sure of one's self; even good men fall through over-confidence. "God is a very present help in time of trouble." Ahab had ignored God. He did not ask God for help, but God sent His prophet to him. How like the loving Father! We love Him because He first loved us.

The Battle. How small in number!—only two hundred and thirty-two—and they were young men who had never seen battle. There were but seven thousand in the entire army that went up against Benhadad. It is worth while to note that the number is the same as those who had not bowed to Baal. Success does not depend on numbers, but on loyalty to God. Benhadad and his kings at headquarters were drinking instead of leading the army on to battle. Benhadad loudly orders that the young men be taken prisoners, even though they say they came on an errand of truce. He who drinks, defies law and ignores justice. The king and his staff drink on, for Benhadad despises these boys, but when they have routed the Syrian army, drunk as he is, the proud king dare not face them, but flees. So Goliath despised David. The greatest confidence often ends in the greatest cowardice. It was a hand-to-hand encounter. They slew every one his man. The Christian warfare is not a fight with long-range guns, but a daily, hourly, personal struggle. Each must meet his own temptation and slay his own besetting sin.

Victory Won by Youth. John, the beloved disciple, was a fiery youth, and in his old age wrote: "I have written unto you, young men, because you are strong." At twelve years of age, the boy Jesus declared it was time He was about His Father's business. God has a work for the boys and girls. The nation needs its young men. The struggle against strong drink and a legalized liquor traffic, which the American people have entered upon, though peaceful, is a call to the young manhood and womanhood of the nation—yes, for every boy and girl.

Quiz and Study. 1. What other Bible kings fell through drunkenness? 2. Did the government ever provide for the sale of alcoholic drinks to its soldiers? 3. Does it do so now? Why not? 4. Does the saloon rule in your town? 5. Will you try to overcome it?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The battle is not to the strong. 2. An unjust demand should ever be rejected. 3. We should never submit to the demands of Satan. 4. The braggart is a coward. 5. Who chooses sin, chooses defeat. 6. Strong drink weakens and destroys the greatest general. 7. He that ruleth his own spirit is greater than he that taketh a city. 8. God does not demand age or experience of his soldiers, only loyalty. 9. He who threatens most, accomplishes least. 10. God gives the victory.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

EVIL COMPANIONS.

Enter not into the

of the wicked,
and go not in the way of

Avoid it, pass not by it, and pass away. For they sleep not, except they have done

and their

is taken away, unless they cause some to

For they eat the bread of wickedness, and drink the wine of violence
But the

of the just is as the shining light, that shineth more and more unto the perfect day.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS PROVERBS 4:14-27.

Prayer: Lord, Help us avoid the companionship of those who would lead us from Thee, and guide our feet in the paths of righteousness, for Thy name's sake. Amen.

"Be Thou my friend and guide,
Let me with Thee abide;
Purer in heart, O God, Help me to be."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 1000. Place, Jerusalem. Person, Solomon, or one of the wise men of his time.

Scripture Setting: The Straight and Narrow Path, or the Broad Road? A blessing and a curse, Deut. 11:26-28. The wise choice, Deut. 30:19-20. The path of life, Psa. 16:11. The guiding light, Psa. 119; 105. Old and tried path, Jer. 6:16. The two ways, Matt. 7:13-14. The true way, John 14:6.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features

of the lesson are: 1. A prohibition against an alliance with the wicked, and evil companionship. 2. The activity of the wicked. 3. Sin through excessive love of pleasure. 4. The contrast between the path of the just and of the wicked. 5. The importance of reading and hearkening to the Word of God. 6. The necessity of a clean heart. 7. Evil speech to be shunned. 8. Action to be studied and considered. 9. A straight course commanded.

THE TWO ROADS.

The King's Highway. In ancient times, broad, winding highways were built at great expense and care from all parts of the kingdom to the capital, and these roads were called the king's highway. Civil engineers of the present time admire and wonder at the smooth, enduring hardness of some of these roads still extant. Treasure was lavishly expended to make them beautiful. Costly statues, exquisite flowers and spreading trees made these highways most inviting to the traveler. But, alas! there was never any period when these mountain roads, even within a few miles of the capital, were not haunted by thieves, bold highwaymen, who lurked behind rocks and trees, to rob and even murder the passing travelers. Travelers with a knowledge of the lurking places of these robber bands would avoid the king's highway and go across country. Such a course was always more difficult, with frequent obstacles to overcome, but they not only evaded danger but arrived at their destination by a more direct route. Even up to the eighteenth century travelers upon English public highways were subject to preying bands of robbers.

The Narrow Path. In this way paths were finally worn, chosen by the discreet traveler, who saw, behind the beauty and smoothness of the king's highway, its lurking dangers. Owing to its smoothness and breadth, royalty traveled the king's highway, and the king and his roistering train of followers were frequent victims of the highwaymen. Merchants, with their camel-laden trains, risked meeting the robber-bands sometimes once too often. The gay and thoughtless chose the king's highway because of its beauty and the apparent ease with which one might travel it. It was always thronged with a merry, careless tide of people and the straight path was narrow and laborious; oftentimes, instead of going around some steep place, the travelers were compelled to climb straight up and on. Though there were beauties there, such as the king's highway might not boast, they were unseen by the casual passerby. Few people traveled that way.

The Two Different Ways. In that wonderful sermon on the Mount, Christ likens the passage through life to these roads, since the illustration would be familiar to his hearers. In the parable of the straight gate and narrow path that leads to the King in His Heaven, and the broad gate opening upon the broad and much traveled road, whose end is destruction, we have the choice of good and evil; for it is plainly written that it is open to everyone to choose which road he shall travel.

A Danger Sign. In our lesson the simile is used to show the temptations to which all who journey through life are exposed. The lesson is a danger sign set up by the wisest man of his age for those of every age and clime. It opens as abruptly as when a traveler is startled by the red danger signal or comes suddenly upon a great sign-board.

Dangerous, No Thoroughfare. What could be more emphatic than those two opening verses? "Enter not into the path of the wicked and go not in the way of evil men." Many a boy consorts with evil associates and is flattered by the companionship of smoking, swearing and drinking comrades, who emulate the vices of their elders under the false impression that familiarity with evil is an indication of manliness. When approached with an offer of high wages for some questionable employment, the young man in search of a vocation may well halt a moment before this danger sign, "Enter not into the path of the wicked."

C. Q. D. "Avoid it, pass not by it, turn from it and pass away." This warning is so urgent that it becomes a C. Q. D. sign. The exploitation and notoriety gained by the highway robber leads many a boy reader of the sensational dime novel to emulate his hero's wicked defiance of law. Many a foolish youth chafes under the quiet and restraint of the school and longs for the excitement of bandit life. "Avoid" the dime novel and those who read such books. Be assured that the highwaymen of fiction and the highwaymen of reality are very different men and the boy who seeks such companionship chooses danger. It may be the rollicking, drunken revellers of the highway who invite the youth to join their revel. "Pass not by."

Choose the other side of the street; do not voluntarily go in the neighborhood of the saloon and gambling place, and avoid the company of those who frequent evil places, lest temptation assail you. Familiarity with evil weakens one's powers of resistance. On the highway are those who boast of dishonest gain and tainted wealth, until a steady job and regular wage seem "too slow" to an ambitious youth who risks his all on some gambling chance whose only certainty is loss. "Turn from" business associates and advisers whose methods savor of dishonesty or fraud. The votaries of impurity may lure with evil picture, music or song. "Pass away" and listen not to the siren song of those who would lure to ruin.

They Sleep Not. The emissaries of evil are tireless. The saloonkeeper, remembering that his present patrons must die, tries to win the boys and courts their patronage. The eighty tons of impure literature destroyed by the Society for the Prevention of Vice, show the strenuous effort of evil men and women to corrupt the youth. Safety lies in obedience to the command, "Be vigilant."

The Straight and Narrow Path. Having pictured the path of evil and its attendant dangers, we come to one of those contrasts with which the book of Proverbs abounds. "The path of the just is as a shining light which shineth more and more unto the perfect day." The writer has pictured a sunrise! One sees the triumphant progress of a steadfast, righteous soul through life. The dawn of youth with all its rosy hopes unclouded by any presage of evil habits, the steady rising from the darkness of adversity to the bright high noon of a perfect life, the afternoon brightness of a life well spent. No clouds of dishonor and disgrace gather to foretell a rueful sunset, but straight on in all its shining brightness of honest endeavor, purity and transcendent principle to a full day, when in the glowing splendor of a triumphant and joyous death it passes over to eternity's blest tomorrow. More than half a century did Frances E. Willard, the great temperance reformer, travel the path of the just, when in her dying moments, with the light of the eternal day upon her face, she exclaimed, "How beautiful to be with God!"

The Way of the Wicked. It is said that few save those who are sightless know what is absolute darkness. Even when covered with thick cloud, the moon and stars relieve the darkness of the night; while so few things are utterly impervious to light that it is well nigh impossible to shut out the vibrating waves of sunlight, on even the darkest day. In the time of the Inquisition, and the later days of prison horror, men would choose torture rather than undergo the terrors of the "dark cell." Indeed many emerged from it with reason dethroned. Imagination peopled its darkness with unknown horrors. The prisoner feared to grope along its walls, not knowing what his hands might touch. He dare not move a foot, not knowing what he might stumble upon. So is the way of the wicked. The drunkard must suffer delirium tremens; the criminal, fear of detection; the impure, an enfeebled body. It is not strange that sin makes cowards of its devotees. "They know not at what they stumble."

The Only Safety. Having presented the vivid contrast between good and evil; having set up the danger signal, the writer points us to the guide post that leads to safety, and from the remainder of the chapter we learn that the only security is in the diligent keeping of ears, eyes, heart, lips, feet and hands from evil. Companionship extends not only to persons. The ear should not keep company with coarse jest; impure pictures are imaged by the eye, until they become a man's lifelong companions. Unclean thoughts may be entertained by the heart until they gain permanent dwelling; the lips are soiled by association with lewd and profane words; the feet make acquaintance with the public dance hall and are lured to destruction, while the hands touch many an unclean thing until familiarity with the evil makes them close companions.

Quiz. 1. What great prophet and leader set a blessing and a curse before the children of Israel? 2. When did Christ picture two ways of life to His hearers? 3. Have you read how Christian sought the Wicket Gate in Pilgrim's Progress? 4. What false guide set him upon the wrong path? 5. Have we any choice between good and evil?

Seed Thoughts. 1. There is always a beginning to sin; shun the first disobedient act. 2. Evil companions and sinful associates are to be avoided. 3. Temptation demands active resistance and conquest. 4. The activity of the wicked should spur the good to greater endeavor. 5. A just man is a beacon light to others. 6. The good are not left in darkness. 7. Life has no place for indecision. 8. He who hesitates is lost. 9. A straight course is always the best course.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

There is a way that seemeth right unto a man, but the end thereof are the ways of

An ungodly man

A froward man soweth

up evil: and in his lips there is as a burning

and a whisperer

chief friends. A violent man enticeth his

and

into the way that is not good.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS PROV. 16:25-33.

Prayer: Lord help us to see evil as Thou seest it, and may our lives abound in the fruits of the Spirit. For Christ's sake. Amen.

Our Heavenly Father, hear us now,
And help us keep this sacred vow;
Tho' we are young, oh, make us strong,
Always to fight against the wrong.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 1000. Place, Jerusalem. Person, Solomon.

Scripture Setting: A study of sins that spoil a life. Folly of self-will, Prov. 12:15. The end of a selfish life, Luke 12:18-20. The way of the ungodly, Psa. 1:6. The froward man, Prov. 3:32. Tattlers and busybodies, 1 Tim. 5:13. Devices of the wicked condemned, Prov. 12:2.

Life and Conduct Setting: We have brought before us, 1. The sin and folly of self-will. 2. The folly of greed and selfishness. 3. The evil of ungodliness. 4. The mischief-maker as a source of evil. 5. Gossip and talebearing. 6. The man of evil. The lesson is a warning against vices prevalent at all times.

CHARACTER SKETCHES.

Self Will. When seeking the Wicket Gate which would give him an entrance to eternal life, Christian meets Mr. Worldly Wiseman, who does not like that a man should be serious or read his Bible, or be troubled about sin, and who almost persuades Bunyan's hero that he may attain his desire without strict observance of the rules Evangelists had laid down for his guidance. "There is a way that seemeth right to a man." There are people who oppose their own will to the Divine will and claim the right to frame the laws which shall govern their own conduct. Those who attend Sunday games and theatre see "no harm in it." The advocates of so-called personal liberty say "a man has a right to drink or let it alone, as he pleases." Disobedient children think their parents "old-fashioned"; and every wrongdoer justifies himself, but "the end thereof are the ways of death." The Bible tells us, "The way of man is not in himself; it is not in man who walketh to direct his steps." We are not only to obey, but we are to delight in the law of the Lord. "He that laboureth, laboureth for himself."

Selfishness and Greed. In that wonderful tale of Pilgrim's Progress, John Bunyan introduces us to Mr. Hold-the-world, Mr. Money-lover, and Mr. Save-all, who, he tells us, "were school-fellows and were taught by one Mr. Gripe-man, a school-master in Love-gain, which is a market town in the county of Coveting, in the North." He also tells us of the silver mine located in Lucere Hill, over which the ground was so thin that it was dangerous for any to venture that way. The ground broke under them, and cost many their lives, while others were maimed and "could not to their dying day be their own men again." It is one thing to own wealth, another to be owned by wealth. The fever of money getting, the desire to get rich at the expense of others, to live for one's self, and seek one's own good, are vices which destroy the soul. "I make shoes for a livelihood, but my employment is to do my Master's bidding," was the reply of a poor shoemaker when asked what was his employment. He labored not for himself.

Ungodliness. A heathen convert who came to the United States to become better fitted for missionary work among her own people, was asked what most impressed her in this country, and she replied, "The lack of reverence for God. In my country we have many gods, and we serve them all; here, you have but one God, and you do not serve Him. We reverence the gods we have made; your people fail to reverence the one great God who made them. My poor people pray and give thanks to gods who do nothing for them; yours seldom pray or give thanks to the God who has given you all this beautiful country, with its many benefits." Ingratitude is ignoble. An ungodly man is like a mariner who sails upon an uncharted sea without rudder or compass. His life-bark is bound to be grounded on the shoals of temptation—wrecked on the danger rocks of sin. Nothing can stay his destruction. "An ungodly man diggeth up evil; and in his lips there is a burning fire."

Mischief Making. "A froward man soweth strife." The blessing of Heaven descends on the peace-maker, but condemnation rests upon the one who sows discord. One person with an ungovernable, ugly temper, will destroy the happiness of the home, the peace of a whole community, and even bring dire results upon a nation. Give such a character a wide berth. An unhappy, quarrelsome disposition is a frequent cause of ill-health to its owner. Scientists tell us the bodily secretions of an angry person are poisonous. There is a legend that either thorns or heartsease spring up from the footsteps of each traveller through life. We may not receive the world-wide acclaim accorded former President Roosevelt, when through his efforts as peacemaker the cruel and disastrous war between Russia and Japan was ended, but we can lessen friction and cause strife to cease between our friends and neighbors. We may never meet with the great Peace Tribunal at the Hague for the settlement of difficulties between nations, but we may carry with us an atmosphere of peace which shall cause wrath to subside, and evil to flee.

Tale Bearing. With one stroke does our great word-artist picture a character that has caused trouble through all the ages—"a whisperer separateth chief friends." Tattle and gossip is not dispensed upon the public street by those who loudly call their wares, but is retailed from house to house in whispers. The gossip is full of hint, suggestion and innuendo. No open charge or indictment is made, a few whispers, a significant nod, a shrug of the shoulders, and the reputation of an innocent person is torn to shreds. The talebearer has been called "the Judas of every society of which he is a member." The whisperer adds coal to the fire of distrust that has been created between friends; no confidence is esteemed sacred, no secret is regarded by him, and he becomes the most despicable of beings.

Scheming. There are negative people who accomplish little good or evil in the world, but not so the one set before us. "He enticeth his neighbor and leadeth him into a way that is not good; devises froward things, and bringeth evil to pass." The world is full of schemes which work evil to others. Get-rich-quick schemes, in which both parties are dishonest, since those who fall victims seek to get something without giving a just equivalent in exchange; speculative ventures which are often hazardous as gambling. Political trickery of those who hold the people's confidence. Alas! that a youth can scarcely walk the streets of a city or town without enticement to evil. The saloon, the slot machine and the gambling hall, and the house of evil are all peopled by those who are plotting and devising means for the downfall of our youth. We may take no active part in it, but are we not consenting to their destruction? As long as a part of the revenue therefrom flows into city, county, state and national coffers, have not each of us a part in these works of violence?

The Crown of Old Age. What a contrast is presented in the picture of a righteous old age! "The hoary head is a crown of glory if it be found in the way of righteousness." The other characters depicted may live to be old. Indeed, one may picture the unlovable old age of each. The morose, stormy, obstinate old man, feared and endured only because of his advanced years; the selfish, greedy miser, guarding his hoard and with cowardly fear awaiting the separation from his gold, which death must bring. What more distressing than an ungodly old age, without comfort and without hope! The mischief maker, always a divisive factor, at last alienated from all friends, to spend an unloved, lonely old age; the doting gossip with garrulous wagging tongue; the wicked old Fagin depicted by Dickens.—In striking contrast is the white-haired servant of the Lord, with staff in hand, facing death with joyous confidence. "Though I walk in the valley of the shadow of death, I will fear no evil, for thou art with me." Nowadays one hears much about keeping young. There are beauty doctors to massage away wrinkles; hair dyes to cover tell-tale gray hairs, but all these efforts to hide the signs of advancing years are futile. It were wiser to learn how to grow old. Character is the greatest beautifier; gray hair, a crown of glory if worn by a "child of the King."

The Greatest Ruler. "He that is slow to anger is better than the mighty." Anger perverts judgment and is the cause of many misfortunes. It is the sign of a weak character, the mark of a weak brain. "He that is soon angry dealeth foolishly." It is said that Abraham Lincoln was never known to be angry. The enduring patience of years enabled him to be the calm, dispassionate pilot who should hold steady the Ship of State during the stormy period of the Civil War. "He that ruleth his spirit, than he taketh a city." The real hero is the one who gains a victory over self.

Quiz. 1. What prophet of the Bible opposed his will to God's will for him, refusing to take the journey God commanded, and what was his punishment? 2. Name those commandments most frequently violated by ungodly men. 3. What is the Hague Peace Tribunal? 4. What disciple of Christ was the victim of talebearers and false witnesses and was stoned to death. 5. What plotter was hanged on the gallows he had prepared for another?

Seed Truths. 1. The self-willed are weak of will, since they do not have the reinforcement of the Divine will with which to withstand temptation. 2. The man who is a law unto himself, is the most lawless of men. 3. Greed impoverishes the heart and starves the soul. 4. Selfishness and loneliness are close companions. 5. A man's possessions often gain possession of the man. 6. He who labors for himself has a hard task master.

is a mocker, strong

is

and whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise.
Be not among winebibbers; among riotous eaters of flesh: For the

and

shall come
to

and shall clothe

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS PROVERBS 20:1; 23:20-21.

Prayer: Dear Lord, May we beware of the tempter and not be deceived by evil. Make us wise to shun strong drink. Help us not only to avoid the evil ourselves but do thou help us in saving others from the curse. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

Alcohol's a hard and cruel master,
And he pays in wretched coin,
Of rags, and blame and crime and shame,
Come every one and join,
From all nations, of all ages.
Come! we want you one and all
In our strike against the wages
Of old tyrant, Alcohol.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, about 1000 B. C. Place, Jerusalem. Person, Solomon.

Scripture Setting: Some of the causes of Poverty. The sluggard, Prov. 6:6-11. Slackness in dealings, Prov. 10:4. Indolence, Prov. 20:13; 24:33-34. Gluttony, Prov. 23:1-3. Bad company, Prov. 28:19. Better than riches and trouble, Prov. 15:16.

Life and Conduct Setting: The writer gives us a vivid word picture of the train of evils which follow strong drink, and emphasizes, 1. The mockery of resorting to wine for strength, happiness or riches. 2. The violence committed through strong drink. 3. That a lack of wisdom is shown by those who use intoxicating liquors. 4. The evil of associating with drunken companions. 5. The sin of self-indulgence. 6. Drunkenness and wastefulness as a cause of poverty. 7. The abject condition of the drunkard.

MOCKED AND DECEIVED.

Wine. Wine is one of the oldest of beverages. Its use dates so far back that it is not known when men first began to drink the fruit of the vine. It is now generally accepted that two kinds of wine were in use. The one was harmless, being the fresh juice of the grape, often pressed from the grapes by the royal cup-bearer before the king's eyes, or by the waiting servants in the presence of the guests. Such was the wine referred to by Jacob in his blessing to Judah; in Moses' song it is named the "pure blood of the grape." It may be likened to the unfermented juice of the grape which is fast displacing the fermented wine in sickness. If we keep this harmless drink in mind it will make it easier to understand some of the biblical references to wine. Then there was the fermented wine, also in frequent use and working evil then as it does today.

Bible Attitude Toward Wine. All other writers and writings of ancient times commend the moderate use of intoxicants, and even approve occasional drunkenness. Intoxication is only condemned when it is habitual. A tablet excavated from the ruins of ancient Babylon tells us that "Wine drunk in season and to satisfy is joy to the soul." The Bible contains no such passages as this. Instead, we find throughout its pages, warning instances of the power of wine to deceive and destroy, condemnation and even prohibition of its use, Divinely appointed orders of men, such as the Nazarites and Rechabites, with a pledge stronger than that of any teetotaler of the present day.

A Mockery. "Wine is a mocker." It approaches under the garb of a friend. It seeks to win the invalid through the promise of health, when it really weakens the enfeebled organs so as to retard recovery. Though science has shattered the claim, it comes to the poor man with a claim that it is a food, and through the money expended for drink it robs himself and family of food. It mocks the weak of will with the belief that they are strong-willed enough to drink or let it alone, until will power is dethroned. It makes men boast of and fight for personal liberty when they are slaves of alcohol. It seeks recognition under the plea that the Bible countenances the use of wine, until its victim falls under the ban, "No drunkard shall inherit the Kingdom of God." "I know enough to let drink alone when it harms me," said a young man to John B. Gough. "Ah, yes, but the trouble is, when the thing has gone that far, drink will not let you alone," was Gough's reply.

A Cause of Crime. "Strong drink is raging," or a brawler. It rouses and stirs evil passions. Under its influence, even pure men and women become impure. The drinker becomes crafty, deceitful and untrustworthy. It tends to the destruction of every God-given faculty of man. Judge Coleridge, the great English jurist, declares that in the course of his judicial life, "There is scarcely a crime before me that is not directly or indirectly caused by drink." Scientific experiments made with the most delicate and susceptible instruments prove that an ordinary glass of whiskey will produce a loss of self-control and lowering of the will power. At a chapel meeting in the Ohio States Prison, the 2,500 convicts in attendance were asked how many were there because of crimes committed through strong drink, and over 2,300 hands were uplifted. When asked how many of the 2,500 present had always been total abstainers, only two hands went up.

The Drunkard's Folly. Our writer has told us the deceptive powers of strong drink and now he assures us that "Whosoever is deceived thereby is not wise." To listen to an imposter is always a sign of folly, and alcohol is the greatest of imposters. To risk health, character and fortune for that which ruins the first, destroys the second, and wrecks the third, shows a lack of wisdom. Strong drink has ruined many illustrious men, but never a man wholly wise. It is said in a certain English insane asylum the following test of sanity is used: The water plug is turned on in a water-tight compartment and the patient is given the task of drying the flooded floor. If he makes an unsuccessful effort to dry the floor with the large mop given him, he is held for treatment. If he shuts off the water by closing the plug, he has proven his sanity. For a man to attempt to attain success against the inroads of strong drink is as great a sign of folly.

Temperance in All Things. Not only are we counselled against intoxication, but against excess in eating. We are not to be among immoderate, "riotous" eaters of flesh. The prohibition related to banquets which were orgies of gluttony and drunkenness, of which the Bible contains many instances. Temperance has been defined as moderation in the use of all things helpful, and abstinence from all things harmful. An excessive meat diet leads to a desire for alcoholic liquors.

A Source of Poverty. "For the drunkard and the glutton come to poverty." The money annually spent for drink, if rightly expended, would give to each of the three million families affected by drink, the following articles: Four barrels of flour, sixty dozen eggs, sixty pounds of butter, two hundred pounds of beef, sixty-five pounds of chicken, two barrels of apples and a goodly supply of other fruit. Yes, and instead of the poor receiving their Christmas turkey as a charity, there would still be enough money left to enable every drinking man to buy a turkey for his own family every Thanksgiving, Christmas and New Year's Day. Truly, temperance means "Coal in the cellar, potatoes in the bin, flour in the barrel, a piano in the parlor, beefsteak for breakfast, a roast for dinner, hats for the head, coats for the back, and shoes for the feet."

"The Raggedy Man." "Drowsiness shall clothe a man with rags." Love of drink

makes a man a useless and unproductive member of society. He becomes incapable; his money is poured into the saloonkeeper's till. His brain becomes dull, his muscles grow flabby, hard and honest work becomes distasteful, and soon his place in labor's ranks is filled by a soberer man. The hours are spent in tippling; the one degrading habit has transformed a man into a dull, sodden loafer clothed in rags. Drunkenness is always marked by a disregard for personal appearance.

An Unfortunate Trio. We hear much discussion nowadays of the cause of poverty and find many remedies advocated. Solomon made a study of the social conditions of his time, and throughout Proverbs ascribes poverty to three causes which are usually treated as one, and there is an increasing tendency on the part of present day students of the social problem to recognize the same three great causes of poverty. Drunkenness, indolence and sensuality are closely allied. Just as in the old-time riddle, Elizabeth, Betsy and Bess were one, so the drunkard, glutton and sluggard are too often one and the same person. "What is it makes the rich man richer and the poor man poorer?" shouted an orator. He waited for someone to add the climax to his efforts, by replying, "Monopolies and trusts," but the answer, when it came, held more of truth than demagoguery, for some clear-headed listener shouted "Beer!" "He who does not plow, will not reap." Strong drink and the saloon are a baleful cause of indolence and inertness. Self-denial and self-control are handmaids of success.

Quiz. 1. What two orders of total abstainers are mentioned in the Bible? 2. What is the difference between the attitude of the Bible and that of other ancient writings in regard to strong drink? 3. What Judge of Israel was a Nazarite and what can you say of his strength? 4. What can you say of John the Baptist? 5. What person in the Bible, yielding to appetite, sold his birthright for a mess of pottage? 6. What example of industry and thrift is commended to the sluggard?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The devil is the father of lies; wine, the deceiver, is therefore one of his progeny. 2. "Fools make a mock at sin." 3. Strong drink is the fool's trap. 4. The drunkard, glutton and sluggard often wear the same hat, and use the same pair of feet. 5. Self-indulgence gains a master; self-denial gains the mastery. 6. Drunkenness and poverty are close companions. 7. The glutton pays the debt to his stomach through a mortgage on his future expectations. 8. Fast Asleep snores when Opportunity calls. Wide Awake jumps at the first call and gets first place. 9. The true Christian is "Not slothful in business; fervent in spirit; serving the Lord."

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

not thou upon the

when it is red, when it giveth his colour in the

when it moveth itself aright.
At the last it biteth like a

and stingeth like an

Thine eyes shall behold strange women, and thine heart shall utter perverse things. Yea, thou shalt be as he that lieth down in the midst of the or as he that lieth upon the

They have stricken me, shalt thou say, and I was not

they have

me, and I felt it not: when shall I awake? I will seek it yet again.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS PROV. 23:29-35.

Prayer. Lord, May we ever remember Thy warnings against strong drink and be preserved from the sin of intemperance. For Christ's sake. Amen.

"At home, abroad, by day or night,
In company or in town,
If asked to drink, we'll smile and turn
Our glasses upside down."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 1000. Place, Jerusalem. Person, Solomon.

Scripture Setting: Drunkenness and its consequences. The arrogance of the drinker, Hab. 2:5. Counsel against drunkenness, Rom. 13:13. The drunkard unprepared for death, Luke 21:34. The fancied security of the drunkard, Deut. 29:19-20. The drunkard lost, Gal. 5:21.

Life and Conduct Setting: Again we are warned against intemperance. In a query of startling comprehensiveness and its answer, the attention is called to, 1. The remorse that follows a misspent life. 2. The sorrows that attend the drunkard. 3. The evil effect of wine upon the disposition and temper. 4. The untrustworthiness of the testimony of the drinking man. 5. The unnecessary ills a drinker brings upon himself. 6. The changed appearance of the drunkard. 7. The evils chargeable to strong drink. 8. The command of total abstinence and avoidance of temptation.

A PERTINENT QUERY ANSWERED.

The Question. "Who hath woe? Who hath sorrow? Who hath babbling? Who hath wounds without cause? Who hath redness of eyes?" It is said that Lorenzo Dow, an itinerant preacher of early days, was once appealed to, to discover a criminal who was supposed to be in his audience. The shrewd preacher prefaced his sermon with a graphic account of the crime, ending with the words, "The man who committed this crime is before me, and I will now expose him by throwing a stone at him." The threat was accompanied by an appropriate gesture of the hand and the guilty man disclosed himself by dodging. Through the subdivisions of his question the Wise Man has thrown a handful of stones at his congregation; thrown them with such unerring aim that every drinking man dodges.

Who Hath Woe? The drunkard's lamentation over his weakness, over promises unredeemed and pledges broken, over the return to the wallow, the pitiless, agonized cry of remorse when returning reason brings to the man the realization of some awful crimes committed when crazed by drink; belated regret for wasted opportunities and a life misspent, these are some of the woes of the drunkard. Who has not seen the sign, "Damaged by Fire! For Sale Cheap!" above a window-display of smoke-stained articles? There is not a converted man whose life has been blackened by the fires of sinful lust and appetite who would not part gladly with the remembrance of those misspent years. "Damaged by Fire, For Sale Cheap!" is the placard every reformed man would put over the wasted years of his life.

Who Hath Sorrow. A man drinks for pleasure, to have enjoyment, and for a "good time with the fellows." He drinks in public and in private, simply because it is pleasant. There are many excuses for drunkenness. One man drinks because his doctor prescribes it for a month, another drinks beer because it is a food, when he knows full well by indisputable scientific evidence beer has been proven not a food. The infinitesimal amount of nutriment contained in beer could be obtained in greater quantity from hops and grain before they are malted and brewed, but the man who drinks beer for its food properties, does not resort to grain and hops in their natural state twenty or thirty times a day, nor frequent the stores where they are sold till late hours of the night. Men drink for self-gratification, but how often self-gratification gives way to self-loathing. Said a man recently, "As I stood before the open grave of my mother whose heart I had broken by my evil ways, the whole world seemed black, the skies were laden with a weight of sorrow that will never be lifted from me."

Who Hath Contentions? How often has the world been startled by some violent crime committed by the most peaceable of men as a result of drink? How many mothers plead before the police court for the wayward boy who was a "good son and would never have disgraced himself by striking his mother had he not been drunk"? The number of men who are loving husbands and fond fathers except when under the influence of liquor! The people who live in an atmosphere of strife and loud quarreling and brawls because of strong drink! One of the first and most marked improvements noted under local option is the diminished number of brawls and police trials, while in Prohibition States there is marked decrease in the number of murders.

Who Hath Babbling? By weakening self-control, alcohol loosens the tongue. The intoxicated man will blab family details and business secrets to the shame of his family and detriment of his business. It has been scientifically demonstrated that within thirty minutes after taking an ordinary glass of spirits, memory, thought, reason and discrimination are all weakened; the flow of speech has been started, but the speaker is in an unsafe condition of mind, unable to judge whether his remarks are foolish or brilliant. What seems eloquent to him is foolish babbling to his hearer. The testimony of a drinking man is always untrustworthy.

Wounds Without Cause. Not always the battered face, the broken arm, gashes, bruises and other marks of the saloon brawl. These were enough, but the drunkard must face a wounded conscience, the thought of what might have been, the remembrance of former happiness and prosperity; yes, and the thought of wife and little ones—the real sufferers from his weakness and sin. Like the small-pox patient, the drunkard must carry lifelong scars.

Redness of Eyes. Look at the banquet table when the wine has made its rounds and the laughter and gaiety are at their highest. How the eyes of the young men darken and the orbs of beautiful women glow and sparkle! But it is not long before the eyes wear a lack-lustre look, and become dull and bleary. During five years Prof. Kraepelin, of Heidelberg, Germany, made a series of two thousand experiments, lasting for several months, with instruments of precision, to determine the effect of alcohol on the five special senses. As a result of these experiments he found that where a person of normal vision could read letters of fair size thirty feet away, half an hour after using half a small glass of whiskey he had to be brought within eighteen to twenty-five feet of the letters. Typesetters could not work so rapidly. Colors like crimson and violet that could be seen before were obscured and could no longer be distinguished; this fact first led the railroad companies to impose total abstinence upon those employees whose work in any way related to the signal lights. In the Swedish army it was found that a single glass of wine diminishes accuracy of aim and that all soldiers were more or less unqualified for accurate marksmanship after using wine or beer.

The Answer. Lo, the writer of our lesson has aimed his query so straight that the culprit is discovered! Wine and mixed drink are the cause of all the evils enumerated. Long the liquor traffic has dodged the issue. Ever since the days of Solomon champions of drink have tried to defend the use of intoxicants. At first they refused to acknowledge that drunkenness was more than a harmless lapse from the tedium of life. But drunkenness could not be justified in face of the Bible edict which placed drunkards with those who could not enter Heaven, and the liquor adherents condemned excess, but defended moderation. Then came science with irrefutable proof that alcohol in the smallest quantity is injurious to body and mind, until now the fight is in the open and the entire liquor system is condemned by God's people.

A Broad Ultimatum. "Look not thou upon the wine when it is red, when it giveth its color to the cup, when it moveth itself aright." This means nothing less than total abstinence from all intoxicants; the prohibition is even stronger, "Look not!" Temptation is to be shunned, there must be no dalliance with an evil so baleful in its results. The power of appetite is so strong that even to look upon wine is the undoing of many a young man. The wine glass should be banished from the social board. The fashionable lady or young woman who proffers wine to her guests becomes a temptress. A compassionate woman once offered a few coins to a drunken beggar and was outraged and startled to have them thrown back in her face. "Take back your coins," said the drunkard. "If I had returned my first glass of wine which I received from your hands as unceremoniously, I would never have become the drunken, poverty-stricken creature you see today."

"At the Last." What a pathos in those three short words! A once honest youth seeks the saloon and evil associates, and a promising career ends in the prison cell. To the convict's number upon the cell door affix his plea, "Drink Did It." The life of the young man who started out with such bright promise only to disappoint the expectation of parent and friends, is ended; a suicide in the morgue of the city where temptations have been his undoing. His name may be unknown, but it is safe to inscribe upon the coffin plate, "Drink Did It." The gay girl who was so happy in her young wifehood and motherhood and idolized her babe, lies in a drunken sleep while the little one toddles to its death. Write over the brow of the poor creature crazed by the awful awakening to the result of her sinful carelessness, "Drink Did It." The marriage bond of the young couple who plighted troth at the altar has been severed. The once happy bride lies at the feet of her drunken husband, who has slain her. Publish over the gallows from which the poor wretch swings out into eternity, "Drink Did It." "For at last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder."

WOES OF THE DRUNKARD.

Woe unto them that rise up that they may follow strong drink; that continue until till wine inflame them! And the

and
the

the

and

and wine, are in their

but they regard not the work of the Lord, neither consider the operation of his hands. Woe unto them that are mighty to wine, and of strength to mingle strong drink. Which justify the wicked for reward, and take away the righteousness of the righteous from him!

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ISAIAH 5:1-23

Prayer: Dear Lord, May I as an individual, and we as a nation fulfill Thy purpose and exalt Thy righteousness, for Thy name's sake. Amen.

"For a cap and bells our lives we pay;
Bubbles we buy with a whole soul's tasking;
'Tis Heaven alone that is given away,
'Tis only God may be had for the asking."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 760. Place, Jerusalem. Person, Isaiah.

Scripture Setting: Evil consequences of sin. Ill-gotten wealth, Jer. 17:11. Drunkenness rebuked, Joel 1:5. Deceit shortens life, Ps. 55:23. The tempter's punishment, Matthew 18:7. The drink seller's woe, Hab. 2:15.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of the lesson are: 1. The woes of drunkenness as depicted by Isaiah. 2. The prophet's clear-sighted vision of the resultant evils from national debauchery. 3. The fearless arraignment of mighty men. 4. The insecurity of the sinner. 5. The penalties which follow national excesses.

WHO IS RESPONSIBLE?

Isaiah, The Gospel Prophet. Because of his prophecies of Christ, the atonement and spread of the gospel throughout the world, Isaiah has been called the gospel prophet. He saw sin in its far-reaching consequences, and in the parable of the vineyard tries to bring Israel to a sense of its ingratitude to the God who had chosen them, delivered them from bondage, destroyed their enemies, given them a good and fertile land and showered blessings upon them. God had bestowed this wonderful care upon Israel that a nation might arise to serve Him in righteousness; and forgetful of all their benefits, His laws were disobeyed, His prophets mocked and heathen abominations committed. They had failed of the purpose for which God had chosen them. The history of our great republic is one of a chosen people, led to a wonderful land of plenty, delivered from enemies without and within by manifold providences. We may well ask, "Are we as a nation fulfilling God's purpose for us?"

The Chief Criminal. What a surgeon Isaiah would have made! With marvelous insight he discerns the inciting cause and in words quick as a flash of steel lays it bare. Lo, the love of money is the root of the matter. "Woe unto them that join house to house, that lay field to field, till there be no place." Remove the profits that accrue to the government, and how long would the nation hand its fairest and best over to the saloon? How long would the state build prisons and reformatories for its victims? How long would city or town endure its evil influence if it were not for the license money? Who would rent his property for such purpose, if it were not that the profits of the business enable them to pay higher rents than the others? Because it means easy work and money, men degrade their manhood and over the counter sell death-dealing, soul-destroying poison to their fellows. "That they may be placed alone in the midst of the earth." The liquor traffic is the most gigantic trust of today, seeking to own the earth. The choicest corners in the business sections of our cities must be reserved "for the trade;" every other business must accede to its demands. It is trade's fiercest competitor and labor's hardest taskmaster.

Evil Cannot Endure. In the woe pronounced the prophet tells us that the houses of those who seek ill-gotten wealth shall be desolate and that evil gains shall cease. A painting of "Liberty Welcoming the Oppressed of All Nations" adorns the reception hall of a great St. Louis brewery. It cost $25,000. With broken shackles at her feet and while a former slave sings in gratitude for the emancipation of her race, Liberty extends a welcoming hand to the oppressed from other lands. The guide asked a temperance sightseer if the millions of capital invested, the enormous output of the brewery, and the magnitude of the business did not discourage her. The reply was, "I remember that a generation ago St. Louis was a slave mart; today there is neither slaveholder nor slave in all the land. The liberty wrought in one generation may be extended in the next; a generation hence there will be neither drink seller nor drunkard. Then your picture of Liberty will have to be remodeled; broken beer barrels will be beside the broken shackles at Liberty's feet, while those emancipated from strong drink will join the former slave in a song of gratitude." The discrimination of business firms, railroad and insurance companies against drinking men; the extension of local option and increasing prohibition territory all tend toward the fulfillment of this prediction.

His Own Worst Enemy. "Woe unto them who rise up early in the morning that they may follow strong drink; that continue until night, till wine inflame them." Music and gaiety abound and God is wholly disregarded. In no uncertain tones the prophet pictures the fate of individual and nation through luxury, sensuality and drunkenness. The drunkard has always a hard luck tale. Fortune has been against him, his employer is prejudiced, friends misjudged him, when the truth is, the drinking man is his own worst enemy; his misfortunes may be traced to drink; he loses his position because his habits unfit him for continuous labor.

The Mockers. The next woe is pronounced

upon "them that draw iniquity with cords of vanity, and sin with a cart rope; that say, Let him make speed and hasten his work that we may see it; and let the counsel of the Holy One of Israel draw nigh and come that we may know it." There are persons that mock at righteousness and make a jest of sin. There are people that treat the temperance question as a joke and laugh at the warnings of their elders and the teachings of science. They demand to be shown proof but refuse to accept proof when it is adduced.

Moody and the Bible. A young college student once approached Mr. Moody with the remark, "There is so much in the Bible I cannot understand; give me a Bible that I can understand, Mr. Moody, and I will believe it." The great evangelist looked the callow youth over searchingly and said, "Bless your soul, my dear boy, if you could understand it all I would not believe the Bible."

The Sophist. As some thieves seek first to blind their intended victims by throwing a dangerous acid in their eyes, so Satan blinds the conscience and confuses the spiritual vision. Beware of "them who call evil good and good evil; that put darkness for light and light for darkness; that put bitter for sweet and sweet for bitter." The one who assures you that it is all right to disobey a father's commands, or ignore a mother's advice; the one who sees "no harm" in smoking, drinking and other evils, is an unsafe companion. The arguments in favor of personal liberty and the regulation and license of evil are sophistry and they may be classed under this third woe.

The Prudent Man. According to all God's teachings, His servants are to make no terms or compromise with evil. His first commandment to the first man was a prohibition with death penalty attached. "Look not behind thee" was the command laid upon Lot and his family, but Lot's wife disregarded the prohibition to her own destruction. Achan's purpose to share in the spoils of evil and disregard of God's command to in no wise touch the unclean thing, brought defeat upon his people. Saul thought to consecrate the proceeds of his disobedience to the Lord, but Samuel's stern edict was "To obey is better than sacrifice" and the kingdom passed from Saul's house forever. Those statesmen and parties who would bargain for evil may seem "wise in their own eyes and prudent in their own sight" but it were wiser to follow the example of the Chinese Emperor who refused to legalize the sale of opium, declaring, "I cannot receive any revenue from that which causes misery and suffering to my people."

The Final Woe. So many parties are included in Isaiah's final woe that it might be termed a "blanket" indictment. If we adapt it to modern times, it covers the drinker, the drink seller and the licenser of drink. "Woe unto them that are mighty to drink wine"—not mighty in valor, strength and true manliness, but mighty to drink wine. The woe may not be through the Divine wrath; drink fixes its own penalty; it may be loss of health, a wrecked mind or dulled ambition that doom the drinking man to failure.

Men of Strength to Mingle Strong Drink. May we not depart from the prophet's original meaning and apply this description to the manufacturers and dispensers of strong drink? There are three quarters of a million persons engaged in the manufacture and sale of liquor in the United States. More dangerous than any foreign foe who may attack the nation's coast line; a greater drain upon the people's money than the largest standing army we could possibly recruit; more deadly in its destructive work than the most costly navy—is this great army, with one out of every hundred and twenty impressed in its service. It is an army enlisted under the seal and with the consent of our government. Above every one of the saloon bars in this country are two documents, the one bearing the seal of the United States, and the other, the sanction of the commonwealth; they are the enlistment papers under which these soldiers of evil serve—the federal tax receipt and the municipal license, which state that for the payment of a stated sum of money, the wretched business has been made as lawful as the sale of food and other necessities of life. For revenue, "We, the people," permit this great army to attack the home of the nation, despoil our daughters and ruin our sons. Truly, "woe is unto them which justify the wicked for a reward."

Quiz. 1. What is Isaiah's rank as a prophet? 2. What king was Isaiah's friend? 3. What can you tell of the parable of the vineyard? 4. What nations of ancient times passed into decay through drunkenness? 5. Are any of the woes pronounced by Isaiah applicable to our times?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The money in the business is the liquor traffic's tower of strength. 2. Money wrongly gotten carries its own curse. 3. Right is ever right and wrong is always wrong. 4. Sophistry is the devil's ablest lieutenant. 5. The wisdom of the world is folly and abomination to God. 6. Many a young man has started out in life to make a name for himself only to gain a reputation as a drunkard.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

Woe to the

of pride,
to
the

of Eph-raim, whose glorious beauty is a which are on the head

of the fat.

of them that are overcome with wine!
Behold, the Lord hath a mighty and strong one, which, as a tempest of hail,
and a destroying

as a

of mighty waters overflowing, shall cast down to the earth with the hand. The crown of pride, the of Ephraim,

shall be

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ISAIAH 28:1-18; READ ALSO MATTHEW 7:24-29.

Prayer: Lord, Help me to build my life on nothing less than the rock of Thy righteousness, with Christ as the cornerstone of every endeavor, for Christ's sake. Amen.

"Thy Kingdom come, O Savior great,
In hearts and homes, in church and state;
But ere it comes, full well we know,
Saloons, saloons, saloons must go."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 712. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Isaiah, the priests and prophets.

Scripture Setting: Duties of those who direct the affairs of state. Temperance commended, Eccl. 10:16. Why rulers should be sober, Prov. 31:4. Character required, Dan. 6:3. A rewarder of good, Prov. 14:35. The friend of the people, Ps. 72:4. Should be just, Jer. 22:3.

Life and Conduct Setting: The prophet shows that, 1. Neither wealth, architecture nor commanding position make a city. 2. Drunkenness in high places causes the overthrow of municipality and nation. 3. The security of the righteous, "He that believeth shall not make haste." 4. That a drunken official is always a faithless public servant. 5. That God is not mocked. 6. The danger of an unholy alliance. 7. The futility of falsehood and dishonest diplomacy. 8. That God requires righteousness of public officials. 9. The sure foundation whose cornerstone is Christ.

THE FALSE AND THE TRUE.

A City on a Hill. King Omri could have chosen no better site for the capital of Israel than Samaria. Built on a hill and surrounded on every side by hills clothed with olive and vine; the rich, fertile valleys and a view of the Mediterranean disclosed by the lower hills to the west, added to the charm of position. Isaiah likens Samaria to the glorious crown of this marvelously rich and fertile country. Many kings had added to the grandeur and beauty of its adornment. It was not only the residence but the burial place of Israel's kings, marked by costly mausoleums and sepulchres. But, alas, a great temple of Baal stood in Israel's capital, while in every grove and under wide-spreading trees were altars and images of false gods. Religion was scorned, righteousness no longer the rule of life and drunkenness so wide-spread and common as to be a national sin and woe upon the proud city and nation.

Storm Swept. Isaiah is using no strange picture when he likens God's judgment to the bursting of a tropical storm. His hearers are familiar with such scenes of sudden devastation. Lightning flashes, clouds gather with amazing rapidity, hail and rain drive down the valleys, and violent streams flow from every gorge and carry destruction with them, where a moment before sunny skies and balmy air promised perpetual summer. Such is the fancied security of the sinner. The over-taxed stomach, the poisoned brain of the alcohol drinker suddenly revolt and lifelong pain and torture result. God's judgments may or may not come with rapid force, but they are ever unerring and final. Within five years after Isaiah's prophecy was delivered there was no longer a kingdom of Israel. Samaria was many times rebuilt and demolished, but the woe of its crimes rested upon it and its ruins alone remain. The city was "overcome with wine." Samaria and Jerusalem, Nineveh and Babylon have fallen. Will not the great cities of today which imitate their vices meet with a like fate?

The Survivors. But there is a saving remnant who face this whirlwind unmoved. Isaiah tells us they are those who sought Divine wisdom and strength to perform the daily duties of life and fulfill the obligation of office. By "them that turn the battle at the gate" was meant either to drive back the enemy through the fortified gates by which he had entered the city or even to the enemy's own gate, the greatest of all bravery, since it meant to wrest victory from defeat. The true servant of God has nothing to fear. There are men whom the outbursts of popular indignation against public graft and immorality leave unscathed; they are like the giant sequoias of California, that, having withstood the storms of centuries, still tower above their fellows.

Priest, Prophet and Judge. It was the priest's sacred office to act between Jehovah and man, to offer sacrifice and oblation for the people. To the prophet was given sacred moments when the spirit of God rested upon him with such power as to enable him to give timely warning of disaster and evil. The priestly judges sat in a commission with the most difficult and important cases to decide. Surely, priest, prophet and judge should have been men of clear brain and unerring wisdom. In the choice of our rulers and judges are we guided by the warning of Solomon, "It is not for kings to drink wine; nor for princes strong drink; lest they drink and forget the law and pervert the judgment of any of the afflicted."

Overcome Through Wine. Jerusalem is no better than Samaria; so widespread is the vice of drunkenness, that even priests and prophets are addicted to drink. Judges are so overcome with wine that they decide against the innocent and shield the guilty. Alas, that even since Isaiah's time, the church has not always been free from drunkenness.

Better Things. Less than a hundred years ago an old preacher used to so time his visits as to remain over Sunday with a godly family in a certain Connecticut village. The old man would preach to the little community, and Monday morning adjust his saddle bag, mount his horse and drive off on his regular business, which was to sell liquors to the country tavern keepers; neither preacher nor congregation saw any inconsistency. Today, not only the ministry, but all the forces of the church are arrayed against the traffic in intoxicating drinks.

In the Wallow. If any one disbelieves Isaiah's charges, let him visit the tables where these dignitaries sit; all the tables are full of filthy vomit. Music, light, flowers and tinsel show give allurements to vice, but the glamour aside, and the wallow in all its filth is revealed. Many a stage-struck girl learns too late the awful realities behind the footlights; and many a boy learns to his ruin that gambling is attended by the swift certainty of loss. The painted beauty shows her brazen hideousness when her prey has been drawn to destruction. Drunkenness has been called a bestial sin, but

"Who has ever heard of a poor old horse,
That had to go reeling home?"

* * * * *

Who ever heard of a drunken cow?
Or even a tipsy cat?"

Jest Turned to Earnest. The prophetic warning is derided. "Who is this preacher talking to? Does he think we are babies just weaned, or little children taking our first lesson in words, that precept must be upon precept, line upon line, line upon line, here a little, there a little?" In drunken mimicry, they call Isaiah's reiteration, stammering. It is a remarkable fact that the language of the Assyrians, to whom their nation later fell a prey, bore a marvelous resemblance to the stammering jargon with which these drunken scoffers derided God's prophet. The sins of their own youth confront parents in their children. The sensual seeker after pleasure loses all sense of enjoyment. The drunkard is swallowed up of wine until he loses all likeness to his former self, and resembles nothing so much as an animated whisky or beer keg.

Character Building. Unconsciously these scoffers enunciated a great truth. All great reforms have small beginnings. When the W. C. T. U. conceived the idea of securing a generation of total abstainers through the teaching of the evil effects of alcohol and other narcotics in the public schools, the liquor interests scoffed at these teachers of babies. Today twenty-five millions of school children in the United States receive temperance education and practically all of the civilized nations pay some attention to temperance teaching in the schools, and recently a liquor organ stated that the most dangerous menace to the liquor business is the temperance teaching in the schools.

A Covenant with Death. The politicians of Jerusalem scorned Isaiah's threat of destruction. Instead of making the Lord their helper, they had formed a secret alliance with Egypt while in open alliance with Assyria. It was a refuge of lies with falsehood for its foundation. No wonder our prophet calls it a covenant with death and with hell. "I pray you read the 28th of Isaiah from the 5th to the 15th verses," Oliver Cromwell wrote to the politicians of his time. May we not refer those politicians of today who for revenue and gain would have our government continue its covenant with the saloon, to the same message? Falsehood, cunning and diplomacy are an insecure foundation for individual or national security.

The True Foundation and Its Cornerstone. Having shown the judgment which must follow upon such evil conduct, and upon how false a foundation they are building their hopes of security, he points them to righteousness and truth as the sure foundation and prophecies of Christ as the precious cornerstone, and of the confidence, peace and security of those who trust the Everlasting Savior. "I tried every cure for drunkenness," testified a reformed man, "and all failed; then I sought the Christ cure, and it has kept me sober."

Quiz. 1. Of what nation was Samaria the capital? 2. Who built Jerusalem and of what people was it the capital? 3. To what fruit does Isaiah liken Samaria? 4. In what parable does Christ warn us to build on a rock? 5. To whom did Christ declare himself the rock?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Drunkenness can undermine the greatest prosperity. 2. Any craft can stand fair weather, but to weather a nor'easter proclaims its seaworthiness. 3. God is not only a source of honor, but of wisdom and strength to those who rely upon him. 4. Former goodness cannot save a man from present sin. 5. Wine swallows them who swallow it. 6. Many a jest is turned to earnest. 7. A lie never saves a situation. 8. He who hides behind a falsehood, hides like the ostrich. 9. Christ is the cornerstone of every real success.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ISAIAH 61:1-9.

Prayer: Almighty God, our Heavenly Father, in whose Hand is the destiny of the nations and the welfare of the world, accept, we beseech Thee, the gratitude of our hearts for the measure of success attending the work of Thy people in quickening the conscience of the nations to the evil and destructiveness of strong drink. Make our hearts strong within us to maintain and extend this work until the whole round world is delivered from the tyranny of its cruel and ruthless rule and all the sons of men are free from its defiling and debasing power. Then the victory which is Thine shall go forth like the brightness of the dawn and Thy deliverance like a lamp that is lighted; nations shall see Thy victory and all kings thy glory. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

In holy league, O Lord, we seek To guard the tempted and the weak
From that fell sin whose fatal reign
Brings crime and madness in its train, Ourselves we would deny, to save
Our brethren from the drunkard's grave.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Between 600 and 500 B. C. Place, Palestine soon after the return from Exile. Persons, the Prophet speaking for God and the people of Israel.

Scripture Setting: Warning from Scripture. Israel's dread of Drunkenness, Deut. 21:20. Warnings Against Drunkenness, Prov. 23:20-35. Drunken Rulers, Isa. 5:11-22; Isa. 28:1-7. The Devilishness of Drunkenness, Joel 3:3; Amos 6:6. The Penalty of Drunkenness, Nahum 1:10; Matt. 24:49, 50; I Cor. 6:10; Gal. 5:21. The Joy of a Sober People, Isa. 61:1-9.

Life and Conduct Setting: The world has always had its drink problem. The lesson indicates the solution of this problem and our relation to it. 1. We can all testify against it. The Spirit of the Lord is upon me. 2. We may offer the testimony of our own abstinence. 3. We can join with others in promoting temperance sentiment and legislation. Many a man has been made and kept sober by sheer force of the statute book. 4. We are proclaiming liberty to the captives when we help people to break away from the slavery of strong drink. 5. We are opening the eyes of the blind when we show society the ravages of the drink traffic. There is no other blindness comparable to that of self-indulgent passion. 6. We comfort mourners when we banish the temptation of drink from the home and social circles. 7. We anoint a community with the oil of joy and adorn it with a garment of praise when we rid it of the blight and sorrow of the drink curse. 8. There is ample and convincing evidence that under prohibition old wastes have been remedied, the ruins of former generations have been restored and desolate places have been made to flourish again. 9. We can renew heart for future campaigns by a grateful recollection of past victories. Ten years ago no one would have predicted constitutional prohibition for the United States; the history of this country may be repeated in all countries.

A WORD OF HOPE.

"To Preach Good Tidings." Israel in exile was heavy hearted. "By the rivers of Babylon" says one of their singers, "there we sat down, yea, we wept when we remembered Zion." "Yes," says another singer, "if it had not been the Lord who was on our side, then our captors had swallowed us up alive when their wrath was kindled against us." But good tidings came to them. A new ruler had arisen in Babylon, and to him the word of Jehovah had come that Israel should go free, return to the old home and renew there the old time worship in a temple of their own rebuilding. The effect of this upon captive Israel is suggested in one of their most beautiful songs.

When the Lord turned again the captivity of Zion,
It was as though we dreamed!
Then our mouths were filled with laughter
And our tongues with shouts of joy.

One who has lived through the scenes in this country when the Armistice was signed and when announcement was made that national prohibition had become a part of the national constitution can easily imagine the tide of triumphant joy which swept over Israel on receipt of their "good tidings."

The New Day and the New World. The prophet sketches conditions of life when God's rule and will are accepted by Israel. This lesson is only one of a series of pictures drawn by our prophet to make clear and emphatic the glory of Messiah's sway. In that day the afflicted shall be made glad, the broken hearted shall be comforted, liberty shall be proclaimed to the captives and opening of the prison to them that are in fetters; to all mourners there will be a coronet instead of ashes, the oil of joy instead of mourning, a festal robe instead of depression. Men will speak of them as "the children of righteousness," the "planting of Jehovah with which he adorns himself," and "ministers of God." All things will be theirs,—"the riches of the nations will ye eat and their splendor will be your adornment." In another picture (chapter 55) there is a challenge to the favored nation: "Behold, I will give you an everlasting covenant the sure promises of loving kindness to David: Thou, too, wilt call people whom thou knowest not, and people who know thee not will run to thee, because of Jehovah thy God and for Israel's Holy One, since He has glorified thee."

Our Gift and Our Obligation. Some years ago the cry was raised for our own country, "A stainless flag and a saloonless country." This has been measurably realized. At least our constitution has put the saloon under ban. What was at the time and for long a national concern is now a world-wide concern. We must make it so if only for the nation's sake.

A Great Deliverance. The General Conference of the Methodist Episcopal Church at its session in Des Moines, Ia., May, 1920, made this deliverance in the Episcopal Address: We did not drive the saloon infamy out of America expecting it to take up its abode in China or Africa or anywhere else. We regard it therefore as clearly within our duty to unite with all moral forces that exist in every land, and to create such forces where they do not exist that we may bring in a world without drunkenness and destroy the liquor business on the round earth.

How Prohibition Works. So far from prohibition creating unrest among our working classes in these days of industrial upheaval, of gigantic strikes and organized discontent, on the contrary the almost total lack of violence, of crimes against person or property growing out of the industrial unrest, the remarkable restraint and obedience to law have been matters of wonderment to our nation, of sincere gratification to the authorities and of unbounded credit to the working man. To all thinking men in America the chief cause of this new development has been the absence of the open drink shop, the removal of the inflaming intoxicant, the presence of national prohibition.—Ralph B. Urmey, of New Jersey.

Auxiliaries in the Orient. A veteran missionary from India declares it to be an "unquestioned fact" that "not only Christian leaders, but also Hindu and Mohammedan leaders in India are heartily in sympathy with the movement now well under way to free India from the liquor traffic." As England has made the excise a matter of Home Rule administration, there is every reason to believe that prohibition in that vast empire will be realized before long. It is worthy of notice also that prohibition has been the occasion of bringing Christian, Mohammedan and Hindu leaders together for the first time. Whatever their religious differences, on this matter they stand upon a common platform to meet a common foe.

Quiz and Study. Bring together the war measures dealing with intoxicants. Why was this done? If necessary as a war measure, would it not have value as a peace measure? What do you know of the plans of American manufacturers of intoxicants to establish headquarters in Cuba and Porto Rico, in Japan and China and South America? Are we not under obligations to help other lands in their fight against the drink evil? Find out some of the direct advantages of prohibition in such matters as saving grain for food, in the reduction of civic expense in police, prison and almshouse maintenance and in the increase of business for banks and investment houses.

Seed Thoughts. 1. The great war forced Lloyd George to say, "We are fighting Germany, Austria and Drink, and as far as I can see the greatest of the three deadly foes is Drink." It also forced Marshal Joffre to say, "Alcohol by diminishing the moral and material strength of the army is a crime against the national defense in the face of the enemy. Drink is the world's enemy." 2. If the destruction of the drink traffic throughout the world will not bring in the Millennium it will do more than any one thing to give the Gospel an easy and early chance at every man, woman and child on the globe. 3. The work of world wide reform calls for the last ounce of devotion and enthusiasm on the part of every disciple:

On! Let all the soul within you for the truth's sake go abroad!

Strike! Let every nerve and sinew tell on ages; tell for God.

4. The success of the prohibition movement in this country is a warrant for believing in its success in all countries. Let us not abate hope; let us keep at work. 5. "The liquor evil is a world problem and as such requires a world wide remedy."

7 DR. CHARLES M. STUART.

But Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the meat, nor with

the

which he drank:
therefore
he requested
of the

of the eunuchs that he might not defile himself. Then said Daniel to Melzar, whom the prince of the eunuchs had set over Daniel, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah, Prove thy servants, I beseech thee, ten days; and let them give us

to

and water
to

Then let our be looked upon before thee, and the countenance

of the children that eat of the portion of the king's and as thou seest, deal with thy

So he consented to them in this matter, and proved them ten days. And at the end of ten days their countenances appeared fairer and fatter in flesh than all the children which did eat the portion of the king's meat.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS DANIEL 1:3-21. READ ALSO CHAPTERS 3 AND 6.

Prayer: Dear Lord, May we follow the process of Divine growth, growing strong in spirit as we increase in physical stature, and placing the favor of God before that of man, knowing that then will our bodies be fit temples for the indwelling of the Holy Spirit.

“When I was young I never did apply
Hot and rebellious liquors to my blood,
Nor did with unblushful forehead woo
The means of weakness and debility;
Therefore mine age is as a lusty winter—Frosty yet kindly.”

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 606. Place, Babylon. Persons, Nebuchadnezzar, King of Babylon; Ashpenaz, prince of the eunuchs; Melzar, the steward; Daniel and his three companions, Hananiah, Mishael, and Azariah (known later as Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego), Jewish youths of noble lineage.

Scripture setting: Young Men of Clean Life. Joseph in the house of Potiphar, Gen. 39:7-23; Moses preferring the people of God to the treasures of Egypt, Heb. 11:24-27. Samuel's innocence beside the corrupting example of Eli's sons, 1 Sam. 3:1-13. David's boyhood as a shepherd lad, 1 Sam. 16:11-13. The boy Christ, subject to His parents in Nazareth. Luke 2:40-52. Timothy, beloved by Paul, 2 Tim. 1:2-5.

Life and Conduct Setting: This story is as modern as if just from the press, and should be presented in the present tense. Its special features are the statesmanship of king Nebuchadnezzar in his provision for the training of the captive Jewish youths; his shrewd foresight in the rigid requirements regarding physical and intellectual endowment. The courage manifested by Daniel, the hero of the story, and his three companions. The successful test, proving then as now, that alcohol is not necessary to health, and detrimental to intellectual growth. The necessity of a purpose in life. The final triumph and success of the four youths who trusted and obeyed God in all the emergencies of life.

A SCHOOL IN THE KING'S PALACE.

King Nebuchadnezzar, king of Babylon, establishes a school of civic instruction for those Jewish lads of noble descent who are captives through the defeat of king Jehoiakim and the fall of Jerusalem. Competent instructors are chosen and the school is the king's own palace, the vast palace whose ruins are now called Kasr. A position awaits each fortunate lad, since the school is to train the pages of the royal court. The king's own personal attendants are to be chosen from among them. Youth is a school, boyhood a period of training, and every boy of brawn, brain and character has a position and promotion awaiting him, in factory, workshop, farm, business or professional life.

Boys Wanted. Though friendless captives and in exile, opportunity depends only on the ability of these Jewish lads to meet the requirements of the king. They must be of perfect physical development, high intellectual attainment and unusual ability. It is the world-wide demand of today. Boys Wanted! Friendlessness, adversity, misfortune, never have been and are not now a barrier to opportunity and preferment. The standard is even higher and more stringent than in Daniel's time. The lad who would win will find strength, character and ability of more importance than powerful friends, influence or wealth.

Temptation. Temptations await these boys—the temptation to cowardice, conformity and coarser sins. Heathen customs prevail in the king's palace. Even the meat which is a part of the king's daily provisions has been killed with blood contrary to Mosaic law, and offered to idols. Will these lads have the courage to stand by their early training and observe the Jewish religious rites, or will they disobey God and conform to the heathen practices about them? How many boys smoke just because their associates do, and how many accept the first glass through the desire to be like others! Even the luxury in which they were placed, leads to the grosser temptation of drunkenness. Let no boy whine over poverty and privation as a handicap. Franklin, Lincoln, Garfield, Edison, Westinghouse and many great men have risen from poverty. Luxury, self-indulgence and excess lead to failure.

The Hero. Among these boys was a hero, with a purpose in life and courage to declare it. It was the purpose of the young Washington, who, at a public banquet given at Ft. Duquesne, refused to drink the health of General Braddock, under whom he had served, in deference to the promise made his mother; the purpose of Lincoln whose promise to a dying mother was confirmed in later youth by the signing of a temperance pledge. All his comrades might drink the king's wine and eat the king's meat with no desire above self-indulgent pleasure, but Daniel purposed in his heart that he would not defile himself with the portion of the king's meat, nor with the wine which he drank. Three companions are of the same

BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST

BY JOHN MARTIN

The Persian king, Belshazzar, made a great feast, for a thousand of his lords, and commanded to be brought out the costly vessels of gold and silver which had been stolen from the temple at Jerusalem, by his father Nebuchadnezzar. As this was an insult to the God of Israel, for whose worship these vessels existed, the Lord was wroth.

Suddenly, in the midst of the feast, a hand appeared and wrote on the wall a sentence, the multitude not knowing from whence the hand came. The king was startled and his knees smote together in fear. He called on the astrologers of Caldea, that they might explain the writing, but they could not, though promised clothing of scarlet and a chain of gold. At this moment the queen came into the banquet hall and told the king of Daniel and his miraculous wisdom. Daniel, when called, read the writing: "Mene, Mene," God has finished thy kingdom; "Tekel," Thou art weighed in the balance and found wanting; "Peres," Thy kingdom is divided; "Upharsan" is another word for Peres and means the same thing. So Daniel was clothed in scarlet and a golden chain was placed about his neck (much against his will) and he was made the third ruler in the kingdom. The king was slain that night.

In the picture, by Martin, an Englishman, we see the open court of an enormous palace of elaborate architecture, and its lines of multitudinous lamps. On the right parapet stands the candelabrum of the seven lights, stolen from the temple of Jerusalem, also the sacred vessels. Below these on a raised platform is a group of the king and his officers and women, showing terror and confusion. At the right on the opposite wall is a blast of light where the writing was made. Upon a raised platform in the center there are people by a table that is also laden with the stolen vessels, and in the center stands a figure, in dark clothing, addressing the king. This is Daniel translating the wording of the inscription. The people seem to be in great terror and on every side we see prostrate forms. Down below in the center of the court people are prostrating themselves before a heathen image where sacrificial fires are blazing. Overhead the sky is disturbed with writhing clouds suggesting atmospheric disturbances, and the young moon glimmers amid them. We see many statues and pedestals, and beyond them the mysterious forms of great buildings.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

BELSHAZZAR'S FEAST.

mind. These four princely boys determined to observe the religion of their fathers and abstain from all luxuries in which lurked pollution. Thrice daily does Daniel pray to his God, who will with the temptation also make a way to escape. Dependence on God breeds true independence.

The Request. They beg to live on pulse and water rather than the luxuries of the king's table. An unheard-of request in Babylon! Like some who still ascribe food qualities to alcohol, Ashpenaz fears his young charges will become so thin and haggard that when Nebuchadnezzar compares their appearance with that of their fellows, his own head will pay the forfeit, and he refuses the request.

Illustration: As late as 1840, a Quaker, Robert Warner, in London applied for life insurance and was told by all the London insurance companies he would have to pay an extra premium because he was a total abstainer. Today insurance companies accept the total abstainer at a lower rate because statistics prove his greater longevity.

The Test. The boy of correct habits is always esteemed by men, so it is not surprising to learn that Daniel is the favorite of the steward in charge; so when he begs Melzar to try the experiment for ten days the request is granted. They use water instead of wine and eat vegetables, dates, raisins, and other fruits, generally called pulse. Nor, in the light of recent experiments, are we surprised that, at the end of the ten days, they are fairer and fleshier than all their comrades. Food builds bone, muscle, flesh and nerves, gives heat to the body and power to work and think. Alcohol does none of these. Even the fattening which sometimes attends its use is often a fatty degeneration of the vital organs. Indeed that alcohol has no real food value is now so well known that all members of football, baseball and other athletic teams must undergo Daniel's test, foregoing the use of all intoxicating drinks during the athletic season and often throughout the entire year.

The Final Examination. After several years Ashpenaz presents his young pages to Nebuchadnezzar for the final examination tests, which are personally conducted by the king. The four Jewish lads who have a purpose in life, not only excel all the other boys, but are ten times better than all the magicians and astrologers, who are the statesmen and scholars of their day. Daniel has understanding of visions and dreams, to which the Chaldeans attach supreme importance. Each succeeding generation should improve upon the one before it. The opportunities of the American boy of today are ten times greater than that of his father, and the boy who fails to profit by them has decreed his own failure in life. The knowledge of chemistry, steam and electricity now demanded of the intelligent workman would have been deemed magic in the days of Babylon. The nation demands a higher citizenship than ever before. It requires greater statesmanship to be mayor of New York today than to be president of the United States a generation ago.

The Reward. God recognizes the constancy of these four lads. Because these boyish heroes remain clean and pure, Babylon learns a lesson of simplicity and of the beauty of holiness which later leads king Nebuchadnezzar to acknowledge the superiority of Daniel's God. A pure life is the Christian's strongest testimony to a sinful world. Through Divine favor they are advanced to the highest honors. At seventeen Daniel is made a satrap, at twenty-two Nebuchadnezzar places him over the whole province of Babylon, at thirty-four he is Prime Minister of Babylon and Persia. Under three different nationalities and dynasties he holds a position of authority among the haughtiest aristocracies of the world. Through the insanity of one king and the murder of two of his successors, Daniel continued, surviving the exile, to see God's restoration of His people to Jerusalem, and at a great age hears the "Well done" of the Master. "Them that honor Me will I honor, and they that despise Me shall be lightly esteemed." Washington praying at Valley Forge, Lincoln in prayer during the Civil war, Gladstone praying beside a friendless boy, were like Daniel, godly men who honored God through pure lives, and served their country with clear brains.

Quiz. What great test of obedience and trial of his constancy did Daniel meet? How did his three companions afterward manifest their courage and devotion to God? How were they delivered? What other boys of the Bible maintained their purity amid temptation? How do the lives of these Bible heroes conform to the childhood and boyhood of Christ? How can you make your life conform to His? How find help in time of temptation?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Opportunity comes to all. 2. Follow the law of God rather than the law of social usage. 3. Alcohol never helped anyone and has harmed many. 4. Temperance leads to success. 5. Never be afraid to be alone in the right. 6. In the midst of every temptation live as in God's sight. 7. Prayer defeats temptation. 8. The men whom the world honors are those who honor God.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

Belshazzar
the king made a great

to a thousand of his lords, and drank wine before the thousand. Belshazzar, while he tasted the wine, commanded to bring the golden and silver which his father Nebuchadnezzar had taken out of the

which was in Jerusalem; that the

and
his

his

and his concubines, might drink therein. Then brought they the golden vessels that were taken out of the temple of the house of God, which was at

and the king, and his princes,
his wives,
and his concubines,
drank in them.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS DANIEL 5. READ ALSO ESTHER 1, AND 5:8-14.

Prayer: The Lord help us to ever pray, Lead us not into temptation. May we be temperate in all things, eschewing that which is evil. For Christ's sake. Amen.

Shall the record be "Found wanting," or shall it be "Found trusting" while the hand is writing on the wall?

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 570. Place, Babylon. Persons, Belshazzar, his wives, courtiers and attendants, the queen mother, and Daniel.

Scripture Setting: Banquets of Wine, and Results. Ahasuerus' banquet, Esth. 1. Herod's banquet, Mark 6:14-28. Wine a mocker, Prov. 20:1. Warning against, Prov. 23:20-21. A time to do evil, 2 Sam. 13:28. Elah's death, 1 Kings 16:9.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of this story are: 1. The drunken revelry of Belshazzar and his court. 2. Their impious profanation of the sacred vessels of God's holy temple. 3. The fearful apparition, showing how Divine mercy would not cut off even the most impious ruler without a warning which might awaken a sinner to repentance. 4. Belshazzar's transformation from the proud king to the trembling, tottering, shrinking coward. 5. The impotency of the diviners. 6. The devotion and wise counsel of the queen mother. 7. Daniel's reappearance at court and superiority over all the soothsayers and astrologers. 8. The king's doom is foretold by the interpretation of the handwriting.

A FEAST THAT COST A KING HIS KINGDOM.

Belshazzar. Since the term "Father," as applied in the story to Nebuchadnezzar, signifies only royal predecessor, historians are in doubt as to the identity of Belshazzar, some seeing a likeness to the sinful revelry and tragic end of the wicked, half-maddened king, Antiochus Epiphanes. But we may accept the assumption that Belshazzar was the son of king Nabonidus, one of the successors of king Nebuchadnezzar. The father, a shy man, avoided Babylon, permitting Belshazzar to carry on the work of government as prince regent, a king in all save name only. According to numerous Babylonian contract tablets, Belshazzar was a man of great wealth, transacting business on legal principles. So we have not the picture of an effeminate spendthrift, but of a ruler of executive ability, a hard-headed man of business, defying God, using his wealth in profligacy and evil living.

A Gorgeous Scene. Belshazzar the king made a great feast to a thousand of his lords and drank wine before the thousand. The banqueting hall in that palace was a wonder to the world, with its winged statues and splendid spacious halls. The walls were rich with images of gorgeous coloring. Belshazzar's princes were there. There were women in gay attire, music and dancers. Wine flowed freely. Intoxication was no disgrace in that circle. Alas that at the present day such scenes are re-enacted.

Profane Reveling. Now Belshazzar must have known of the majesty of the God of Israel and of the sacredness of the vessels which had been carried from His holy temple, and he must have known of Daniel, a man of the same age as his father. It may have been a knowledge of the clean lives of those four Jewish youths in his predecesssor's court which inspired the prayer that has been found on one of the Babylonian tablets, still extant, the prayer of king Nabonidus for his son, "Cause Thy great Divinity to exist in his heart; may Thy great love help him not to give way to sin; may he be satisfied with life's abundance." Alas for the son who forgets the prayers of his father and disappoints a father's wishes. Only a short time before, Nebuchadnezzar, restored from the humiliation which had befallen his sinful and arrogant pride, had publicly acknowledged and honored the true God, yet in the flush of his pride and drunkenness, despite Nebuchadnezzar's warning—"Those that walk in pride He is able to abase"—while he tasted the wine, Belshazzar ordered the sacred vessels to be brought that he and his fellow revelers might drink wine from them. To add insult to the most High, they praised the gods of gold and of silver, of brass, of iron, of wood and of stone; but The God who held all life in His hand, they praised or glorified not. Intemperance leads to irreligion, Sabbath desecration, profanity and disobedience of every law of God. The saloon and its followers hold nothing sacred, not only trampling on God's laws, but disregarding all law.

The Spectral Hand. It is characteristic of the Divine mercy that even sinners must have a last warning with opportunity for repentance. Seated on his jeweled throne, Belshazzar's eye caught something vividly pictured on the white stucco of the wall. He saw it over the lights which crowned the huge golden chandelier. The fingers of a dark and bodiless hand were writing letters on the wall. No young man ever becomes a drunkard without a warning hand being held out to him. It may be God's Holy Word, a father's prayer, a mother's entreaties, the awful example of the drunkard. At the present time the warning is given through the teaching of the evil effects of alcohol, tobacco and other narcotics, on the human system, in our public schools. Conscience is a warning monitor that God has given each of us.

The King Undone. The former proud and boastful king becomes a poor, abject, terror-stricken creature. He cannot read the handwriting on the wall, but his thoughts trouble him; the sins of a lifetime confront him; he trembles visibly; so great is his agitation that the jeweled bands of his attire are loosed; his knees smite one against the other in very weakness. He cries out in a loud voice. What loathsome, terrible things are seen by the poor victim of delirium tremens! Alas for the man before whom conscience holds a life made hideous by sin! What a contrast is Belshazzar's cowardice to the courage of those three Jewish youths thrust into the fiery furnace, or of Daniel in the lion's den. Alcohol is a tyrant who makes slaves and cowards of his devotees. Strong drink transforms many a princely youth into a miserable abject creature, piteous in his weakness.

Soothsayers Helpless. Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego knew to whom to appeal when in trouble, "Our God whom we serve is able to deliver us." Belshazzar cries aloud to the astrologers and soothsayers. Vain indeed in the help of men. These dream interpreters are as helpless and impotent as those in Moses' time, or as those fortune-tellers and clairvoyants of our time who claim to read the future to credulous patrons. Not one is able to divine the meaning of those portentous words which still blaze in letters of fire. Those who seek earthly help in trouble are often disappointed.

Behold a Man. Some rumor, therefore, of this confusion must have reached the queen mother who was not present at the banquet. It is conjectured that she did not approve of the sinful revel, but how like a mother, to come to her son in his distress, forgiving and forgetting all his misdeeds. It reminds us of that beautiful promise of God, "As one whom his mother comforteth, I will comfort you." Be assured that your mother is your truest friend, tenderest comforter, and wisest counselor. She enters and bids Belshazzar to be no longer troubled, for "There is a man who will be able to read this fearful augury as he has done others before." When in distress even the most wicked men turn from their evil associates to some good man whose worth is recognized. The vile and evil companions who are so engaging to the boy will prove poor friends in the time of his need.

Daniel Before the King. Glibly, Belshaz-

zar promises him those things which he deems of greatest value, a scarlet robe, a golden chain and office, but Daniel, who has ever rated earthly things at their true value, waves them aside—"The world offers nothing of value comparable with the rewards which God bestows upon His children."

Pride Goeth Before a Fall. Daniel remembers and reminds him of the powerful and mighty Nebuchadnezzar's punishment, and that in spite of all this, which was known unto Belshazzar, the latter, in his infatuated pride, had praised false gods which see not, nor hear, nor know; profaned the holy vessels of the temple with drunken revelry, insulting and disregarding the Most High God, "in whose hand thy breath is and whose are all thy ways." We may ignore God,—He is still the arbiter of our fate.

Weighed and Found Wanting. Not alone Belshazzar's, but every life is weighed in the balance. Our conduct and our character is measured by those about us. Sin leaves its handwriting on the face; the drunkard's bloated face, the brutalized countenance of the prize fighter, these are the handwriting on the wall, written not in mystic letters, but in coarse print, that all may read. Be assured that secret sins and impure thoughts are also recorded and discernible though written in fine script. Every deed and thought, even though unknown to man, is recorded, and the writing is the handwriting of God; the record the Book of Life, and by the works recorded we shall be known and judged, even as Belshazzar.

Speedy Retribution. "In that night was Belshazzar, the king of the Chaldeans, slain." Babylon was taken by night, while the drunken inhabitants were reveling. Under a drunken ruler the most powerful and mighty city in the world fell without a stroke, and two days later the Persian army entered Babylon without a sign of resistance. Such is the story of Belshazzar. Are we not all kings, living in a castle more wonderful than any royal palace built by man: a body created and formed by the King of kings. Every organ in these bodies of ours is as sacred as the sacred vessels of old. If we abuse them with wine, we profane and weaken them, and insult God by defiling the body which He has made to be a temple for the indwelling of His Holy Spirit. Retribution may not come so speedily, but science has demonstrated that alcohol is poisonous in its action upon the different parts of the body, weakens the will and ultimately enslaves. Strong as is our nation, it is doomed to fall like Babylon unless its laws are built upon righteousness, its rulers God-fearing men, and its citizens sober and clean.

Seed Thoughts. 1. Wealth and position should be used as opportunity for good. 2. Wine is a mocker, mocking God. 3. Sin makes cowards of us all. 4. Perfect love casteth out fear. 5. A mother is a more loyal friend than any reveling companion. 6. A shining character can never be eclipsed: Daniel was great in obscurity as before the king's throne. 7. Thoughts and deeds are written on the countenance. Each face is but the outdoor sign of the heart within.

SINFUL INDULGENCE.

Woe to them that are at ease in Zion, and trust in the mountain of Samaria, which are named chief of the nations, to whom the house of Israel came! Pass ye unto Calneh, and see; and from thence go ye to Hamath the great: then go down to Gath of the Philistines: be they better than these kingdoms? or their border greater than your border? Ye that put far away the evil day, and cause the seat of violence to come near; That

of

and

and eat the out

of
the

and the

out
of the midst
of the

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS AMOS 6:1-12.

Prayer: Lord, Help us to seek first the Kingdom of Heaven and its righteousness, for Thy name's sake. Amen.

"Man's inhumanity to man Makes countless thousands mourn."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, B. C. 755. Place, Bethel. Persons, Amos, a prophet of God; Jeroboam II, his courtiers and men and women of fashion.

Scripture Setting: Sins of omission. Ingratitude, Gen. 40:21-23. Ignorance, Lev. 5:15-19. Unthankfulness, Num. 21:1-6. Acquiescence in evil, I Sam. 3:13-14. Irreligion, I Kings, 11:11. Rejection of God, Matt. 23:37. Lack of charity, Matt. 25:35-46. Lack of consideration for suffering, Luke 10:30-37. Indifference, Luke 7:44-47. Lukewarmness, Rev. 3:14-18.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. In our lesson, the prophet denounces the false security of professing followers of God. 2. Makes it plain it will not avail man simply to avow the true religion unless its truths are applied to conduct. 3. Shows that no one may hope to evade the penalties that have been imposed on others. 4. Gives a vivid description of sensuous luxury, which has a hardening influence on character. 5. Declares consideration for the sorrows of others and beneficence to the poor are a part of religion. 6. Portrays the judgments of God with startling vividness.

THE CRIME OF INDIFFERENCE.

The Shepherd of Tekoa. A lonely, desolate place was Tekoa. The straggling village built on the site of an ancient camp looked out on a harsh, colorless and desolate world, almost surrounded by gray limestone hills and beyond the gray mountain lines, a faint suggestion of the gray towers of Jerusalem. The vegetation, the brown withered grass and shrub of the desert; a dreamy world whose only sound the howl of wild beasts by night and of a few lonely desert caravans by day. Here our hero lives, a peasant, tending sheep during the season and in the autumn earning a mere subsistence by cutting and dressing and purveying the sycamore fruit, a small, sweet, but watery fig, to the poor. But bits of blue sky could be seen between the ragged hills; at night the stars, and at sunset and sunrise, the gray mountains were bathed in glory. God was in the desert.

Taken from the Flocks. A lonely, solitary man is this herdsman, who hears the voice of the Lord as the "roar of a lion," "Go, prophesy unto my people, Israel." John the Baptist was also desert bred. There is no life so lonely as to be unknown to God, no solitude so great that it cannot be pierced by the voice of God. We may not say, "I live in such a remote place and am so insignificant and far from the great world that I have no mission, no call to service, no work to do for Christ and humanity."

Bethel, the Seat of a New Cult. Now, Jeroboam I served God for earthly reward only. He knew that the kingdom had been divided, and had passed from Solomon's house because that great king had permitted and even built altars to false gods, and a prophet of God had told Jeroboam that the length of his reign depended on obedience to God. In his heart, he cherished the gods of Egypt, and sought to unite the true and the false religion by setting up two golden calves at Bethel and Dan as emblems of the great Jehovah. It was a masterstroke of diplomacy. He worshipped God, but bowed before his golden calves. Moreover, the new religion was popular. All Israel "as one man" resorted to it. A great temple was built at Bethel, where the kings worshiped. Here, public prayer was made to God amid heathen rites and sacrifices. Thus the world has ever tried to serve God and its own desires. New religions are constantly springing up which are man-made cults, uniting the false and the true. Even some Christians worship at Bethel, professing God's name and bowing before false images of wealth and position.

The Prophet Appears. Everywhere is marked prosperity and luxury. The king and his retinue are at the royal palace near the temple, flushed with conquest and drunk with wine. The real God who had loaded them with benefits is forgotten. There is no truth, no justice or mercy left in the land. Crime is on every hand. The army is debauched, judges corrupt, priests drunken, rulers impoverishing the people, and men grown rich by unjust gains, dishonesty and robbing the poor. Are not those evils present today?

But suddenly—it may have been on one of the numerous holidays of pagan worship—a mountaineer in rude peasant's dress appears before the temple and denounces the crimes and corruption of the great. Under the shadow of the palace the man prophesies the destruction of the kingdom. A few look in supercilious wonder at the rough garb of the herdsman, but others recognize the man; he is known to the king. It is Amos, the shepherd of Tekoa. There are men in every generation, usually lonely men with the vision of the desert, who, unawed by wealth, and unafraid of corruption in high places, dare to call a spade a spade. We call them cranks and fanatics at first, but later we enroll them as patriots and men of God.

At Ease in Zion. The prophet's warning included the worshipers at the true temple in Jerusalem as well as those of Bethel; "Woe unto them that are at ease in Zion, and trust to the mountains of Samaria." It matters not what your creed, or to what sect you belong; if the cause that needs assistance, and the wrongs that need resistance are ignored, our prophet is speaking to you. We are our brother's keeper, and we may not plead ignorance as did Cain.

History Repeats Itself. Other nations have fallen, other peoples have been taken captive. "Are you better than they?" demands the prophet. We speak of America as the chosen nation, and of our government as unexcelled, forgetting that no nation or people have been strong enough to defy the laws of God. May it not be well for us to ask if the growing evils of Sabbath-breaking, swearing, drunkenness, dishonesty and impurity are not signs of decay?

Soul, Take Thine Ease. Israel knew from bitter experience the weight of God's punishment for wrong-doing. They might not hope to escape but they would "put far away the evil day." There is always a day of reckoning. Every natural law has a penalty attached, and the laws of the spiritual world are strong. Sow the wind and reap the whirlwind. The young man who sows his wild oats, reaps a crop of tares that not only chokes out all hopes of worldly success, but destroys the soul.

In the Lap of Luxury. The shepherd of Tekoa has the clear vision of the desert; he sees in the elegance and luxury of the rich only plunder drawn from the poor, who are robbed even of their shoes and the single upper garment in which they sleep. He is filled with contempt for the courtiers that lie on ivory divans and sprawl on their couches in imitation of the worshipers at heathen feasts. The fine ladies of Samaria drinking wine remind him of stolid kine. The prophet knows that instead of their delicate meats they will some day eat shin bones. Would the prophet be more favorably impressed with the luxury of today? Would our society dudes command his respect, or the society ladies in their silly finery appear more fair to him? Would he not see the same lack of true religion, the same grinding of the poor, the same shocking impurity, and as much drunkenness?

Wine in Bowls. Guests at the feasts drank until the most repulsive excesses prevailed. Even the women drank to intoxication. The term "Drunkards of Ephraim" was used to describe the worst drunkards. Yet they were a people proud of their culture. Strong drink is no respecter of persons; the rich and the poor, the cultured and the ignorant alike, become its victims and sink into folly and bestiality.

How Sin Spoils. A painter once painted a picture of innocence, with a beautiful young lad as his model. Years after he wished to paint a most repulsive evil face, and after much search found a man whose sin-scarred countenance filled his need. One day the model glanced at the painted "Innocence" and burst into tears. "I sat to you for that picture, sir," he said, "but drink has made me what I am."

The Prophet's Warning. The shepherd in peasant garb publishes God's judgment upon this wicked and luxurious people. God's favor does not rest upon these palaces. Their wealth will collapse as suddenly as it came. The city and its inhabitants will be taken captives. Terrible and awful is the retribution which Amos pictures, for pestilence shall follow war. The prophet spoke about 755 B. C.; in 724 there was a siege and blockade of the whole land, which lasted three years. The houses were overthrown, the rich men and delicately nurtured women were taken captive. Retribution is swift and sure. We must remember, too, that drunkenness in the Bible times was confined largely to the rich; that poisonous distilled liquors were unknown. If the drunkenness of the few caused the downfall of a prosperous nation, what will be the result of the intemperance among rich and poor, and where the sin of strong drink is almost universal?

Quiz. 1. What other prophets preached against luxury and self-indulgence? 2. What prophet of the New Testament was reared in the desert? 3. In what two parables does Christ impress upon His followers the duty of caring for the poor and those in distress? 4. What provision did the Mosaic law make for the poor?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The form of religion without the spirit is unavailing. 2. It is not the name we bear, but the One we serve that proclaims the Christian. 3. When the evil day is postponed the reckoning is always greater. 4. The Christian life has no place for self-indulgence. 5. Wealth has wings. 6. "Who bestows himself with his alms feeds three—himself, his hungering neighbor and Me."

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

PARABLE OF THE TALENTS.

His lord answered and said unto him, Thou wicked and slothful

thou knewest that I

where I not, and gather where I have not strawed:

Thou oughtest therefore to have put my money to the

and then at my coming
I should have received mine own with usury. Take therefore the and give it unto

For unto every one that hath shall be given, and he shall have abundance: but from him that hath not shall be taken away even that which he hath. And cast ye the unprofitable servant into outer

there
shall be

and gnashing of teeth.

THE PARABLE OF THE TALENTS.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 25:14-30. READ ALSO LUKE 19:12-26.

Prayer: Lord, Help us to use Thine every gift for Thy glory; to labor for the Master's cause and in all things be found faithful. For Christ's sake, Amen.

"Take my life and let it be Consecrated, Lord, to Thee.

* * * * *

Take myself, and I will be Ever, only, all for Thee."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 33. Place, Mount Olivet, near Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus and His disciples. Characters, a rich land owner and his three servants.

Scripture Setting: The Use of Time. Learning to use time, Psa. 90:12. Diligence commanded, Eccles. 11:6. Work while it is day, John 9:4. Uncertainty of time, John 12:35. Time well spent, Rom. 13:11-13. Perseverance and well doing rewarded, Gal. 6:9.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this parable Christ teaches. 1. That God has given every man talents to be used in His service. 2. The justice of God, who exacts service according to ability. 3. Diligence is always rewarded. 4. Faithfulness brings fellowship with God. 5. There is no excuse for slothfulness or unfaithfulness. 6. That reward comes to the evil as well as to the good.

AN INVESTMENT AND ITS RETURNS.

Memorable Days. The Passover was at hand; the days were fraught with significance; the very air pregnant with foreboding. The destruction of Jerusalem and the temple had been foretold. As Christ left the temple for the last time, the bewildered disciples climbed Mount Olivet with Him and grouped themselves about Him. How many times afterward the scene must have recurred to them! The Master, as He sat enthroned on the everlasting rocks and in the presence of one of the most beautiful prospects the earth affords, spoke of the Kingdom of Heaven. And it was nearer than they knew. Calvary, the cross and the tomb were at hand. With illustration and parable Jesus sought to fortify His disciples against the time when He should be no longer with them.

The Investment. "For the Kingdom of Heaven is as a man traveling into a far country, who called his own servants and delivered unto them his goods." God gives no quit-claim deeds. Talents, riches, honors, intellect, ability all belong to Him. We simply hold these things in trust for Him. The world is beginning to recognize the great fact of stewardship.

Good Stewards. A multimillionaire who is now engaged in the distribution of his vast fortune by means of large gifts to many objects recently declared, "The world makes a mistake when it calls me a generous man. I know full well all this money is not mine; I did not bring any of it into the world with me; I cannot take it out of the world with me; I can only handle it while I am in the world." "My life is a vow," was the declaration of Frances E. Willard, who laid every gift upon the altar of humanity. God has invested heavily in us. Are we bringing in returns on the investment?

According to Ability. "Unto one he gave five talents; to another, two, and to another, one; to every man according to his ability." The Master knew His men. Are you dissatisfied with the gifts bestowed on you?

Just as the master mechanic knows to the very grain how much weight each iron beam that goes from the foundry can support, so God knows us. He reads the hearts of men and weighs their action. How we should guard our thoughts that they may be pure in His sight, for He tells us, I know the things that come into your mind, every one of them. God knows how much ability, power and prosperity each of His servants can use to advantage. Wealth and power are dangerous instruments unless God-given. It is said that a certain philanthropist always prayed that he and his family might be forever delivered from the temptation of riches; each generation of that family has contributed to the list of the world's benefactors, but none have sought wealth or position.

The Five Talent Men. There are few five talent men and women in the world. When we find them they disclaim any favoritism of fortune. Edison, the wizard of electricity, has defined genius as nine parts industry and application and one part brains. Helen Gould using her wealth to benefit humanity. Mrs. Lucy Webb Hayes throwing her influence as mistress of the White House on the side of total abstinence. Frances Havergal consecrating every talent of voice, mind, heart and hand to Christ, are instances of the investment of five talents yielding one hundredfold increase.

Neither Poverty Nor Riches. The world has need of two-talent people; persons of superior attainment who are not trying to emulate genius. The world's greatest work has been done by such men and women. Patrick Henry excelled Washington as an orator; Madison was a better scholar; Franklin more of a philosopher; Morris a greater financier and Arnold a more dashing soldier, but none invested their talents with such result to their country. There have been greater women writers than Harriet Beecher Stowe and Elizabeth Barrett Browning, but the one used her talents for the slave, the other in behalf of childhood and both invested wisely.

The Better Choice. Friends expostulated and music lovers raved when a gifted young singer decided to lend her talents of youth and beauty to the pauper inmates of a great city almshouse. She went from ward to ward and under the sway of her magic voice, sickness, poverty, loneliness, failure and sorrow were forgotten on that Christmas Eve. She had traded her two talents and given happiness to hundreds of the world's neglected ones. Ere the next Christmas the sweet singer had entered the joy of her Lord and joined the Choir Invisible. How rich the reward! "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these."

Only One Talent. Abraham Lincoln, the great commoner, used to say, "God must love the common people or he would not have made so many of them." The world is filled with one talent people; they are the ones who do the world's work. By them the world is housed, fed and clothed. Let no one despise the one talent.

"Who doeth one thyng welle, He hathe fulfilled the Gospel," sings an old poet.

Sightless, unhearing and voiceless, in a world without light or sound, the sense of touch her only point of contact with the world about her, Helen Keller has traded with the one talent, conquered every disadvantage and developed the highest womanhood.

Opportunity Misused. Only one talent, and it misused! In the parable of the pounds, one servant who received the one pound, wrapped it in a napkin and laid it away. That were bad enough, but the man who received one talent, buried it in the earth. Alas for the talent buried in the earth, not planted to bear fruit, but hidden in the muck of impurity and sunken in the mire of drunkenness. Defense and apology were so thin and false as to be futile. How many seek to excuse their own evil conduct by aspersing others just as this servant excuses his unfaithfulness by charging harshness upon his master. The husband who spent his time at the saloon pleads that his home is unhappy and his wife is ill-tempered.

Commendation and Condemnation. Let us note that the Master makes no distinction in His commendation of the faithful servants. He gave one five talents, the other two, but both receive the same praise and the same reward. It was sufficient that the one who received the two talents invested as wisely as he who had five talents. Scant endowment and limited opportunity are not an excuse either for neglect or misuse of whatever talent may be ours. Had he used the one talent to the same advantage, the man with the one talent would have been just as highly commended as he who returned ten talents and the reward would have been the same. It was not because he had a little, but because he came to his Lord with a misused talent, a miserable excuse and a lie. An eminent brain specialist tells us that the average man only uses one-tenth of the brain power with which he is endowed. Have you developed your brain to its utmost capacity, or has it been misused and befogged with tobacco smoke or dulled by alcohol?

The Power of Example. A lady was one time at a Thanksgiving dinner, where wine sauce was served with dessert. All the other guests partook of the sauce. Should she be peculiar, perhaps offend her hostess by refusing? It was such a little thing, it hardly seemed worth while to distinguish herself from the others, but across the table a young man sat and watched her, and the dessert was untouched. Many months afterward a young man came to Sunday school and became a member of the class this lady taught. Later he professed faith in Christ. On the day he joined the church he asked his Sunday school teacher if she remembered leaving the wine sauce untouched at the Thanksgiving dinner. "I sat opposite you," he said. "I had come to this city for a chance to reform, for in the town I had formerly worked I had fallen into drinking through bad companions. That wine sauce roused all the old appetite and I would have fallen but for your example. I found out where you lived and joined your Sunday school class because I believed in you, and through your influence I have been led to Christ." It was a small opportunity to use one's talent, but it yielded an hundredfold.

Quiz. 1. What other parable did Christ use similar to the parable of the talents? 2. How do the two parables differ? 3. Give two instances of persons who have accomplished much under adverse conditions. 4. Is any one wholly without some talent which may be invested in the Master's service?

Seed Truths. 1. It was not the man of five talents, but the man with one talent whom his master condemned. Had it been the man of five talents all the one talent people in the world would have had an excuse for failure to invest the one talent. 2. God does not ask the impossible; He did not ask ten talents of a one talent man. 3. The man who thinks the world his enemy is usually an enemy to the world. 4. The pot does not whiten itself by calling the kettle black.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE DEATH OF JOHN THE BAPTIST.

And when a convenient day was come, that on his birthday made a

to his lords, high captains, and chief estates of Galilee; And when the

of the said Herodias came in,
and

and pleased

the king said unto the damsel, Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt, and I will give it thee. And he sware unto her, Whatsoever thou shalt ask of me, I will give it thee, unto the half of my kingdom. And she went forth, and said unto her mother, What shall I ask? And she said, The head of John the Baptist.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 6: 16-28. READ ALSO MATT. 14:1-11.

Prayer: Lord, May I dedicate my youth to Thee, and all through life be submissive to Thy will, for Thy name's sake. Amen.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 32. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, John the Baptist, Herod, his wife Herodias, and Salome, daughter of Herodias.

Scripture Setting: A Woman's Influence for Good or Ill. The first temptress, Gen. 3:12. A scheming mother, Gen. 27:6-13. A traitress, Judges 19:4-5. A wife's wicked influence, I Kings 21:25. A suppliant for her people, Esther 7:3-4. Commended by Christ, Luke 10:42; 21:1-4. A wife's warning, Matt. 27:19. A mother and grandmother's influence, II Timothy 1:5.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

"My conscience had a thousand several tongues,
And every tongue brings in a several tale
And every tale condemns me for a villain."
—Shakespeare.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of this story are: 1. The vacillating character of Herod. 2. John's fearlessness in denouncing sin in high places. 3. The power of a wicked woman's influence. 4. Sensual pleasures lead to crime. 5. The indifference and callousness of the dancer. 6. Herod's false sense of honor which led him to do a most deadly wrong to a good man rather than acknowledge himself wrong to evil companions. 7. That the guilty conscience of Herod breeds superstition.

THE TRAGEDY OF AN EVIL WOMAN'S INFLUENCE.

A Heroic Character. To have one's portrait and "write-up" appear in a popular periodical; to be eulogized by president or king; to be the recipient of praise from a great legislative body; all these are considered honors worth striving for. But none of the world's great men ever had their rank assigned by such an authoritative source as the hero of our lesson. "Among those born of woman there hath not risen a greater than John the Baptist." Thus Christ himself assigned the place which the preacher of the wilderness was to occupy among the Immortals. Christ's eulogy of John the Baptist was not given while the desert was peopled with throngs that hung upon his eloquence and the preacher was in the height of his popularity, but when deserted by all but a few followers, John languished in prison. It affords us an opportunity to study the Christ ideal of true greatness.

Preacher and King Meet. Wherever and however they met, we can readily imagine the meeting. They who wore the soft clothing of the king's house had not gone out to see a "man clothed in soft raiment," for the preacher was of the wilderness, clad in the coarsest garb and living on the poorest fare. He has a message for Herod, which he delivers unflinchingly and without apology, for Christ himself tells us John was not a "reed shaken by the wind," not a vacillating, man-pleasing time-servant. "It is not lawful for thee to have thy brother's wife." In these few words the prophet rebuked Herod's sin. Crime in high places is too often condoned. John the Baptist would not have the great criminals escape through the many loop-holes in the law, leaving only the petty violator enfolded in its meshes.

An Evil Woman. Though weak of will, Herod was a man of good impulses, as is shown by the admiration and regard which mingled with his fear of the stern and fearless prophet; but Herodias was of a different type altogether. It is not necessary to dwell upon the disgraceful story of her life, the brief allusions to her in the accounts of John the Baptist's death reveal the woman in all her wickedness, plotting and scheming the death of the prophet.

An Unstable Man. Herod's better nature led him to frequently summon John from prison that he might learn more of the repentance unto righteousness which John preached. A dark crime was on his own conscience and many times his soul must have cried out for the remission of sins which John offered. Indeed, if the prophet had temporized Herod's sin, or even kept silence concerning it, he might have had a kingly convert and regained his liberty as well. But not in the darkest hour of the dungeon, not even in the times of doubt which made him send to Christ to know if his own testimony concerning Him was true, did John the Baptist ever offer to compromise with wrong. He might doubt his own calling, he might not know the Christ whose coming he himself had foretold, but he knew right from wrong, and never swerved from the right. No wonder that he exerted a fascination over the unstable Herod who one moment would have killed him but for the fear of the people and then would have released him but for fear of Herodias! What a wonderful opportunity was Herod's! It was in his power to prepare the way of the Lord, had he listened to the prophet; the Gospel of Christ might have been preached in his court and have spread throughout his realm. Instead of being execrated, his name might have been forever blessed. There are wrongs to be righted, great reforms to be inaugurated in the world today, but those who are wavering and unstable, swayed by the multitude, fearing the forces of evil, will miss their opportunity as Herod did.

A Birthday Feast. "Herod, on his birthday, made a supper to his lords, high captains and chief estates of Galilee." It was such a feast as might have been expected in a court of such sensual luxury and wicked self-indulgence. There was levity, wine and dancing. Not one of the gay pleasure seekers had the faintest intimation of the dark tragedy that loomed so near. In how many dance halls are revellers as careless and absorbed in the merrymaking until, under the flush of sinful excitement and sensual desire, tragedy comes and death enters. How foul a record of murders conceived in the excitement of wine and lust; the tragic and untimely ending of such mad revelry comes alike to the low concert hall and the courts of fashion. What a relief to think of that other feast pictured in the same chapter, which contains our lesson. At the one a king presides; here Christ is the central figure and His blessing makes the homely place and homely fare, a few barley loaves and two small fishes, abundant for the multitude, while His presence brings peace and surcease from sorrow, labor and care. The two feasts are typical of the pleasures which the world has to offer and of the abundance which Christ gives.

The Temptress. "The daughter of the said Herodias came in and danced and pleased Herod and them that sat with him." Who can measure a young girl's influence? Salome danced and won the gross admiration of her audience. Often with immodest attire, the flush of wine and sensuous dance, the belles of the ball-room exact the same tribute, and fancy they have won real admiration. Alas, that some still use their youth and beauty to tempt rather than to uplift. A young girl "just loves the smell of tobacco," giggles over an insinuating jest, challenges admiration in ways that lower her womanliness, proffers the wine and passes the cards; little dreaming of the disastrous effect of her influence.

A Rash Vow. The king said unto the damsel, "Ask of me whatsoever thou wilt and I will give it thee," and Herod even confirmed his offer with an oath. What will Salome ask? Once before a radiantly beautiful young woman appeared before a king and received the same royal favor. Esther asked for the salvation of her people, and saved a race from destruction. Will the young woman dancer use her influence in behalf of mercy? Ah, there is a difference between the two. Through three days and nights of fasting and prayer Esther had prepared herself for the royal audience, while Salome sought to please the king with the latest dancing step. She has no vital interest, no engrossing mission, no real object to attain; she has not brains enough to proffer a request.

An Unnatural Mother. "And she went forth and said unto her mother, What shall I ask? and she said The head of John the Baptist." Unfortunate daughter of an unnatural mother! Herodias' daughter is not the only girl who owes her downfall to the mother. Children quickly learn lessons of deception from a mother's false and unmeaning society gossip; become adepts in untruth through the ridiculously false threats used to enjoin obedience in early childhood; are trained in cruelty and even crime. "Mothers are wingless guardian angels," says an old proverb. The girl who finds in her mother a wise and true counsellor and is guided by that counsel is safeguarded from all evil.

A Cowardly Crime. Not with reluctant step, but with hastening feet the girl returns and proffers her hideous request to the king. The girl has out-Heroded Herod, for the king "was exceedingly sorry." "Yet for his oath's sake and for their sakes which sat with him," Herod yields to this outrageous demand. It is a false sense of honor which leads a person to persist in an evil course through fear of ridicule of others more evil than themselves. Just as some men call gaming debts, debts of honor, and rob their employers and falsify their accounts in order to meet them; while others pay their saloon bills and let their children starve. There was nothing about Herod to betoken the dangerous criminal, save his weakness and double mindedness. Yet through cowardice he became a murderer. The young man who starts out in life without any fixed principles becomes the victim of every temptation which assails him.

Mother and Daughter. The king gives his order to the executioner, John the Baptist is beheaded, and with her bloody trophy the pretty damsel trips off to her mother. Mother and daughter are of the same mold and the pair do not form an attractive picture. Rather would we look back thirteen centuries and see the spiritual bond which knit two women into closer relationship than the mere tie of blood, and hear sweet Ruth say to the older woman, "Whither thou goest, I will go, and where thou lodgest, I will lodge; thy people shall be my people and thy God my God." And these two became mother and daughter in the highest sense of the term. Relationship may be but a brute bond unless sanctified by Christ.

Retribution. The martyr's death only brought John abundant life, but Herod must pay the penalty. Despite his fascination for the prophet, he wanted to be rid of him, but when a greater than John the Baptist appears and is working miracles, swift dread comes upon the conscience-smitten, craven king. "It is John whom I beheaded; he is risen from the dead." With the death of John the Baptist, Herod's career began to wane. Defeat and banishment came each in their turn, with a lonely death as a political exile. But Herod had exiled himself from God and from the Kingdom of Heaven so near at hand, of which John the Baptist preached.

Seed Truths:—1. True greatness consists not in measure, but in the spirit. Christ pronounced the woman who gave her two mites the greatest philanthropist and the prophet who declared his own decrease and the rise of another the greatest man. 2. Messages that come straight from God are not always phrased to please the ear. 3. The vices of the fashionable set are too often imitated rather than rebuked. 4. Youth and beauty are talents for which God will require an account.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

But and if that servant say in his heart, My lord delayeth his coming; and shall begin to

and

and to

and to be drunken;
The lord of that servant
will come in a

when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware, and will cut him in sunder, and will appoint him his portion with the unbelievers. And that servant which knew his lord's will, and prepared not himself, neither did according to his will, shall be beaten with many stripes. But he that knew not, and did commit things worthy of stripes, shall be with few stripes. For unto whomsoever much is given, of him shall be much required: and to whom men have committed much, of him they will ask the more.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 12:37-48. READ ALSO MATT. 24:42-51.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, May I be found faithful at thy coming. For Thy name's sake, Amen.

"Sooner or later, ah, sooner or later, Heaven will show us the false and the true. Sooner or later, ah, sooner or later, God will reward us for all that we do."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 33. Place, Mt. of Olives. Persons, Christ and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: The Necessity for Watchfulness. "Watchman, what of the night?" Isa. 21:11-12. A warning for others, Ezek. 3:17. Watching for God's message, Hab. 2:1. Watchfulness commended, Matt. 25:13. A safeguard against temptation, 1 Cor. 10:12. A Christian duty, Eph. 6:18. A condition of safety, 1 Peter 5:8. As a means of growth, Rev. 3:2. Awaiting the coming of Christ, Rev. 16:15.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of the parable are: 1. That Christ commends watchfulness on the part of His servants. 2. The importance of being in readiness for His coming. 3. The inclusiveness of Christ's gospel. 4. The contrast between the faithful and the unfaithful servant. 5. The justice of God's judgment and punishment.

EXPECTING A HEAVENLY VISITOR.

A Timely Lesson. Christ has been preaching to his disciples that they should avoid hypocrisy and timidity, covetousness and worldly care, and as He speaks to them of the importance of seeking first the Kingdom of God, He thinks of the time when He shall no longer be with His little chosen circle. He knows of what material each is made; sees the boastfulness of one, the impetuous temper of another, the doubt and pessimism of a third, the ambition of others and is even aware of the covetousness in the heart of that one who shall betray Him. The twelve whom he has chosen are just common men; persecution and suffering have not yet graven strength into their characters. Will they be faithful in the absence of their Lord? When He returns to His own will they be found in readiness for His coming?

When He Cometh. "Blessed are those servants whom the lord when he cometh shall find watching." The lord himself shall minister to their needs and give them refreshment. "And if he comes in the second watch or the third watch and find them so, blessed are those servants." Whatever the hour, whatever the crisis, those who are found at the post of duty have their reward. The Christ who so readily reads their thoughts sees that the disciples fail to catch the significance of the lesson. With a startling directness He declares "Be ye, therefore, ready also; for the Son of Man cometh at an hour when ye think not."

A Momentous Question and Its Answer. Now the disciples catch a measure of its meaning, and though they can comprehend only a small part of the great truth embodied in the lesson, what they do absorb is of such enormous import that they wonder if they are to appropriate it all to themselves. Impetuous Peter throws the question straight at the Master, "Lord, speaketh thou this parable unto us, or even to all?" Is Christ speaking to the little group about him or to the great world? Ah, you and I have an interest in that question and its answer. Through all the ages and centuries since, the Lord's reply has incited every child of His to purer, holier living and a more faithful performance of duty. There is not a life so humble that, be it well lived, not a duty so menial or commonplace, that be it well done, but it shall be honored by the Master. "Blessed is that servant whom his lord when he cometh shall find so doing."

The Reward. "Of a truth I say unto you that he will make him ruler over all that he hath." The world of today is troubled with a great spirit of unrest and discontent. People are longing for greater opportunity, for enlarged fields of usefulness, for more wealth and honors. Reliability is a magic talisman that works marvels for its possessor. Said an employer of many men recently, "I have ceased to ask concerning a boy's ability, experience or fitness. 'Can he be trusted' is all I want to know, for I can make a man out of any boy who meets that requirement." The faithful servant of the Lord shall reign with Christ.

In His Heart. "But and if that servant say in his heart." Solomon, the wise man, dwelt upon the importance of having a perfect heart. "As he thinketh in his heart, so is he." Sir Galahad's strength was as the strength of ten because his heart was pure. The heart may be called the citadel of character; if it is once surrendered to evil then the enemy has possession of the entire man. Even temptations assume a different aspect. The way in which each meets a fall shows a marked distinction between the lamb and the hog. When a lamb stumbles and falls into the mire, it cries out for help and is not happy until it has shaken from its fleece every trace of defilement, while the hog will roll in and enjoy the wallow into which it has fallen.

Eye Service. "My lord delayeth his coming." Mother is out of sight and will never know of the cigaret that is so boastfully smoked; a momentary absence has called the teacher from the school room, so the scholars may play—at any rate she will not discover that the book so intently read is a sensational novel instead of the lesson book; the employer's back is turned, so the employe may pilfer from the till, or the head of the firm is abroad, and the trusted bookkeeper juggles his accounts. The customer does not know of the false weight; the product will taste as good and the consumer will not know of its adulteration. The public is easily fooled and therefore the public official need not render honest service to his constituency.

Man's Inhumanity to Man. The steward, himself a servant, begins to beat his fellow servants who are under him. It has been said that the real test of character is the treatment accorded a subordinate. The boy who mistreats and domineers over his smaller companions grows into the big bully. The employer who works those under him as though they were mere human machines to be replaced by others when worn out, fails to get as good results in the end as where there is allowance and provision made for the wear and tear and strain upon human nerve and muscle.

The Golden Rule Working. A great factory whose output is sent to the uttermost parts of the earth has engraved over its main entrance, "Whatsoever ye would that men should do unto you, do ye even so to them." There are dining rooms for young women employes, baths for all, a circulating library, free medical attendance and every need of the enlightened workman receives consideration, while each employe has a share in the profits. The profits have increased several hundredfold since the business has been brought into conformity with the Golden Rule of Christ.

"We shall be happy
In our work and play,
If the law of kindness we obey."

An Evil Course. It is not surprising that the untrustworthy servant was also a drunk-en servant. The most harmful action of alcohol on the mind is its tendency to affect the moral principles. The fine fiber of character undergoes degeneration. The confirmed drinker loses all sense of truth, and broken promises strew his pathway. Right and wrong are not distinguished, and good influences lose their power to move the drinker to worthy action. We read in the daily papers of men of previous good character who have become bank defaulters, forgers, swindlers and even more odious criminals, and investigate the cause only to find that they are open or secret drinkers. When the effects of alcohol on the highest functions of the brain are thoroughly known it is easily understood why prohibition reduces crime and empties jails and prisons.

Cigarets and Culprits. The late John V. Farwell, founder of the great firm of Farwell & Co.,

used to say that though he employed 5,000 men and boys, there was not a cigaret smoker among them. He declared he would as leave employ a man who stole sheep as a boy who used cigarettes, for he said that wherever a case of dishonesty had been discovered the culprit had invariably been a cigaret smoker.

The Day of Reckoning. "The lord of that servant will come in a day when he looketh not for him, and at an hour when he is not aware." There is always a day of reckoning and it may not be put off. The boy may keep the knowledge of the cigaret from his mother, but through an enfeebled constitution, a weakened heart and possibly a commitment to an asylum, the secret sin will be published to the world. Lowered scholarship and a flunk at the final "exams" will proclaim the student's wasted hours and misused opportunity. The cash in the till must be accounted for, and the petty pilferer is discovered; some day an expert accountant appears and the bookkeeper's guilt is known.

Sometimes the culprits are like the native servant of a British government official, who was sent by his master to a missionary with a note accompanied by a gift of money and fruit. The native stole the rupees and ate the fruit, but ignorant of the writing, delivered the note, thus exposing his own sin.

God, the Just Judge. The lesson has a deeper significance, whether or not exposure or earthly punishment come. "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into Heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into Heaven," and when He comes He will bring His rewards with Him. "Unto whomsoever much is given of him shall much be required; and to whom men have committed much, of him men shall ask the more." Sins of ignorance cannot be made immune from penalty, but wilful sin will receive the deepest condemnation and greatest punishment.

Quiz. 1. Whom does the Lord in this parable typify? 2. Who is meant by the Son of man? 3. What Old Testament prophets commended watchfulness? 4. What provision was made for sins committed through ignorance in the Mosaic law? 5. What does this lesson teach concerning the justice of God?

Seed Truths. 1. He who watches is never surprised. 2. Faithfulness is the golden key which unlocks the door of opportunity. 3. Truthfulness masters every combination of difficulties and hindrance. 4. No action in life is too small or insignificant to be recorded in the debit or credit column of Heaven's life record. 5. Eye service and lip service are often paid in counterfeit coin. 6. Unkindness to others brutalizes the one guilty of offense. 7. Drink is one of the chief causes of poor service. 8. God has a Divine sense of proportion.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

CHRIST FREEING FROM SIN.

Then said to those Jews

which believed on him,
If ye continue in my word, then are ye my indeed:

And ye
shall know
the

and the truth
shall make you

They answered him,
We be Abraham's seed, and were never in to any man:

how sayest thou, Ye shall be made free?
Jesus answered them, Verily, verily, I say
unto you,
Whosoever
committeth sin is the

And the servant abideth not in the for ever:

but the Son abideth ever. If the Son
therefore
shall

ye shall be free indeed.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 8:31-36.

Prayer: Lord, Have mercy on me; free me from sin and make me Thine own child. For Thy name's sake, Amen.

"He opens wide the prison doors,
And breaks the chains that bind us
And bids us onward press and leave
The world and sin behind us."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 32. Place, The temple, Jerusalem. Person, Christ.

Scripture Setting: Christ the Emancipator. Introduced by John the Baptist, John 1:29. Redemption through His blood, Eph. 1:7. Frees from sin and death, Rom. 8:2. Liberty through Christ, Isa. 61:1, Luke 4:18. Giver of eternal life, Rom. 6:23.

Life and Conduct Setting: In the lesson Christ teaches: 1. That the supreme test of service is continuance in well doing. 2. Truth frees from superstition and error. 3. Conduct and profession must harmonize. 4. The bondage of sin. 5. The wide difference between the slavery of sin and the liberty of the true child of God. 6. The only true, efficient cure for sin. 7. The Christian is the true free man.

THE FREEMAN AND THE SLAVE.

A Portentous Proclamation. Napoleon proclaimed his right to the title of Emperor with much spectacular display. Magnificent pomp and the glittering blaze of pseudo royalty attended the coronation when with his own impatient hands he crowned himself. But here is One who announces His own pre-eminence over the whole world and Heaven itself. The very simplicity which attends the declaration makes the scene more extraordinary. Not a single blazing rocket; not a voice crying "Vive le roi"; no thundering of cannon or pealing of cathedral chimes; no jewel crowned aspirant for royalty, or claimant to a throne presents himself to the public, but a man of humble, modest and even sorrowful mien stands in the treasury of the temple and declares to a few hearers, "I am the Light of the world."

His Followers. "As he spoke these words many believed on Him." We fancy then was enacted one of the popular outbursts of enthusiasm which the writers of the Gospels sometimes record. Palms may have been strewn across His pathway, some perhaps threw their own garments before Him to carpet His way, and "Hosanna to the Son of David" may have come from many throats. In moments of public excitement and when the very air is rife with faith, doubts pass away. It is easy to follow the multitude either for good or evil.

The Real Test. There must have been some public demonstration of faith in Him, for "Then said Jesus to those Jews which believed on Him, If ye continue in my word, then are ye my disciples indeed." That was to be the test of their profession of Christ. This world is a great testing place and every day a testing time.

The Test Applied. The machinist stands in the shed awaiting the incoming train and before the cars have been emptied of their passengers, he is at the wheels tapping each with his hammer, and his experienced ear knows if they ring true. Farming is no longer haphazard and indiscriminate sowing of untried seed. Corn, oats and barley, wheat and rye are first tested to know what returns they may yield. Jesus looks at His new followers whose hosannas may be ringing still in His ears, and puts the test of continuance in well doing, which is the test of a Christian today. A theological student once asked an ignorant young colored girl if she had ever "experienced entire regeneration." "No sah, but I'se had spasms," was the reply. The true follower of Christ is not a spasmodic Christian.

The Office of Truth. "And ye shall know the truth and the truth shall make you free." "What is truth?" was the problem propounded by one of the world's greatest philosophers. For centuries the world had been seeking after truth when Christ came with the immortal declaration, "I am the Truth." No need to cower in doubt or cringe before falsehood and sophistry." "As Christ would do" frees from every perplexing doubt in regard to conduct. Could one imagine the Holy One walking the streets of Jerusalem with pipe or cigar between his teeth, or would a cheap politician dare to buttonhole him with argument concerning financial gain to accrue from governmental complicity with sin? The bare suggestion is a startling sacrilege to those who know Christ. A knowledge of truth regarding alcohol and tobacco is freeing the world from its slavery to a terrible and degrading sin. It is hard to convince a sinner of his need of a Saviour. The drunkard is always the last one to realize his own repulsive degradation. The opium fiend fancies he is hiding his vice from all eyes, when by every sign of nature, his secret is known to all.

Who is Master? In the very face of their scorn, Jesus hurls the declaration, "Who-soever committeth sin is the servant of sin." The statement is so logical, so irrefutable that it needs no elaboration. No man can serve two masters. Ye cannot serve God and mammon. Not only because God is a jealous God but because of natural law; two objects can not occupy the same given space at the same time. "Either he will hate the one and hold to the other; or else he will hold to the one and despise the other." If one's time is devoted to sinful pleasure, if the voice is uplifted in blasphemy, and the example is on the side of evil habit and custom, if the influence and the vote help to perpetuate the wrong, not all the prayers and tithes and offerings can free from the Mastership of Satan.

The late Sam Jones used to aptly say, "When you see a measly yaller cur following at the heels of two men, you never can tell who owns him till the men separate at a corner. Then you know who he belongs to, for he will follow his master." Temptations are the crises and corners of life—turning points which proclaim who is Master.

Servant or Son. Again and again Christ emphasizes the security of the righteous and the insecurity of the sinner. Now he uses the figure of servant and son, "The servant abideth not in the house forever." Through a false sense of security Satan lulls the conscience and judgment of the sinner. The moderate drinker is perfectly sure he will know enough to stop before he gets too much and is not warned by the example of those who have gone over the precipice of drink before him. One cannot forever go in sin without meeting the consequences. The drunkard and drink-seller must meet the "Without are drunkards and murderers," and the "Woe unto him that giveth his neighbor drink."

"But the son abideth ever." Christ's reign shall not only be unending but shall increase until every knee shall bow and every tongue shall confess His name, and the one who is a son of God through Him is not moved by every temptation nor shaken by every trial of faith. He is stable in all his ways, and established in all his goings; he has a mansion eternal in Heaven. How foolish he who becomes a servant by choice when he may have the privilege of sonship!

The Great Emancipator. With a few strokes of the pen, Abraham Lincoln struck the shackles from off 4,000,000 slaves and his name shall live in history as the emancipator of a race. By the shedding of His own blood as a sacrifice for our sins, Christ became the emancipator of the human race. It is popular at the present time to treat sin as a disease and the papers are filled with advertisements of much vaunted cures for drunkenness, all of which may be well enough in their way, but if sin is a disease it is a disease of the soul which needs the Great Physician. Some years ago a poor wretched drunkard, recovering from a prolonged debauch, starving and miserable, found his way to the Chicago river and stood upon its banks ready for the final plunge. He had fought against the curse of an inherited appetite and had been worsted in the battle. Thrice he had been to the gold cure for drunkenness and pronounced cured, only to fall again. Sanitariums innumerable had studied his case and sent him out into the world again only to drink the more. Death seemed preferable to life, but before he could leap into the icy water, a policeman pulled him backward and took the rescued wreck to one of the city missions, where the Christ cure was applied, and freed from the slavery of appetite the man is sober today.

The Larger Liberty. "If the Son therefore shall make you free, ye shall be free indeed." Prolonged and hard struggle may enable one to hold appetite in check and one may be able by rigorous self-control to gain many victories over one's besetting sin, but in an evil moment desire sweeps away the guards of a life time, sin enters and the last state is worse than the first. Too many pledges are broken because the first clause "Trusting in God to help me, I solemnly promise," has been a meaningless phrase. A trust in God is the drunkard's greatest safeguard. John B. Gough repented and reformed many times, only to fall again until led to accept Christ as a Saviour from his besetting sin. John G. Woolley tells us that for seven years after his reclamation he fought appetite often to the verge of defeat, until led to lay his case before Christ and to pray for perfect victory over sin. After a night spent in prayer, he walked up and down the streets of Chicago the next morning to find that for the first time in his life he could pass the city's gin-shops without the slightest desire to drink. He was free indeed.

Quiz. 1. Whom is Christ addressing? 2. What disclosure of Himself has He made? 3. What character in Pilgrim's Progress was faithful unto death? 4. How were the Pharisees able to say, "Abraham is our father"? 5. How did John the Baptist rebuke their pride? 6. What is the greatest freedom?

Seed Thoughts. 1. It is easy to believe with the multitude, but hard to continue with the minority. 2. He who continueth to the end gains the final victory. 3. Truth makes no slaves and forges no shackles. 4. Ascent is better than descent from the oldest family tree. 5. That which bears the trade mark is the property of the one who holds the copyright. 6. Error must die, but truth shall live forever. 7. Christ is the giver of all liberty. 8. He is only free who wears the yoke of Christ.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

The

is far spent,
the

is at hand: let us therefore the works of darkness, and let us put on the

of light. Let us

honestly, as in the day;
not in

and not in chamber-ing and wantonness,

not in

and envying. But put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ, and make not provision for the flesh, to fulfil the lusts thereof.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ROMANS 13:11-14.

Prayer: Lord, May we so spend the days of our life that when the night cometh we shall be ready for Thine appearing. For Thy name's sake, Amen.

We build the ladder by which we rise
From the lowly earth to the vaulted skies,
And mount to its summit round by round.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 58. Place, written by Paul from Corinth and sent by Phoebe to the church at Rome.

Scripture Setting: A Clean Life. Commanded by God, Isa. 1:16-19; 2 Cor. 7:1. A requisite of Christian service, Isa. 52:11. Impossible without help, Psa. 19:12. God, the Creator of a clean heart, Psa. 51:10. Christ, the cleanser, Mark 1:40-41;

John 15:3. Cleansed through the blood, 1 John 1:7. Citizens of Heaven, Psa. 24:3-4.

Life and Conduct Setting: Paul would emphasize: 1. The call for Christian service. 2. The necessity for repentance. 3. The Christian life an armor of protection. 4. Heart and life purity. 5. Christ as the great example of a perfect life. 6. Sin should have no part in Christian reckoning.

THE NEW CITIZENSHIP.

A Letter and Its Carrier. That was a masterly letter which Phoebe carried from Corinth to Rome. The Government mails have borne many precious messages and important documents, but it is doubtful if fast mail service or Royal Mail packet ever carried a letter which meant so much as the one which Paul entrusted to a woman. Eighteen and a half centuries have passed, but the name of that early Christian woman has gained world-wide fame, has been printed in more than four hundred languages and has gone wherever the bible has been carried. Doubtless it would have seemed a trifling commission to any of the world's great ones of her day, but while their adventures and victories are forgotten, Phoebe's errand has become momentous. Let no one deny to woman a part in the spread of God's message to a sin-sick world.

Night. "There are nights and nights," as the old lady declared. At the close of each hard working day do we always remember to thank God for the kindly night with its rest, sleep and refreshment? Then there is the night of heavy sorrow, when a loved one has gone from the home; but even when the absence is for a season what a sense of loss and loneliness when the boy leaves the home roof. How dark the night to those who had seen Christ's departure: So eagerly they remembered His promise to return, so ardently they longed for His second coming, so unending the days without the Master, it seemed as though the hour must be at hand. Paul had been with these disciples and caught their expectation. He would have the Romans, as it behooves every Christian, to watch for that glorious day. All may not hope to see that last great day. There is a final night that comes to all, and the great Apostle would remind us that our little day is so short, that the Christian should be up and doing, lest the shades of that final night close on a life-long, illspent day.

The Coming Day. Christ's reappearance having been foretold in such a supernatural manner, there was danger that those who heard the angel's announcement should dream and dwell over-much on the glorious coming which they awaited, and live in that future rather than work for the present. With a broader and more logical vision, Paul saw that present opportunity. There were wrongs to be righted; burdens to be lifted that would hasten Christ's coming. "For now is our salvation nearer than we believed." No need to wait the millennium, we may hasten the Lord's coming to some heart now; no need to grieve that the way is blocked to the foreign mission field when a foreigner lives next door. There are temperance people who will not trouble to enforce a law because they are awaiting the glorious dawn of prohibition. Salvation from a legalized liquor traffic is nearer than we had dared believe.

A Call to Action. Who has not felt the temptation to sleep on through the morning hours? Paul's words are like the oft repeated morning call of father or mother: "Now it is high time to awake out of sleep." It is a call to do today's duties, to resist today's temptations; it is a call to repentance. "Let us therefore cast off the works of darkness." How well Paul understood the encumbrance of sin. He had not watched the Olympian games for nothing. He knew that when men raced, swam or wrestled, they ought to have as little impedimenta as possible. Every muscle must have utmost play, there must be liberty of limb and motion. Therefore to the church at Jerusalem he pictures sin as a weight to be laid aside; to the Romans he describes sin as a garment. Secret sins and vices ruin health, sap the vital energy and destroy ambition. They are to be discarded as one would an infected robe.

An Armour of Light. What a fighter is Paul and how he glories in using the figures of earthly warfare and changing their significance into a spiritual meaning. Four years before he had written to the Thessalonians and four years later he wrote to the Ephesians of the proper accoutrement of the Christian in the spiritual warfare. A girdle of truth, the breastplate of righteousness, gospel sandals, a shield of faith and helmet of salvation shall Paul's soldier wear; it is a panoply of defense, for the Christian warfare is largely a battle against the assaults of temptation. It is also aggressive with the drawn sword of the Spirit which is the word of God.

Honest Living. "Let us walk honestly as in the day." Live in the open, look men in the eye, walk erect! The man who lives in the broad daylight, his word as good as his bond; his character at par with his reputation; conduct tallying with profession; and a soul as straight as his straightforward gaze: this is the man whom Paul commends. The world stands in need of such citizens today.

The Enemies' Forces: Paul has given the call to arms, invested his Christian soldier with armor and now he points to the enemy with such directness that we seem to see Satan's phalanx: rioting and drunkenness, chambering and wantonness, strife and envying. The Christian should have no part in those revels of sinful folly which are inconsistent with clean living. Drunkenness has charged on many a citadel of character and leveled it to the ground. Wherever liquor is served is no place for the Christian. The secret sins of impurity or more open profligacy are alike destructive to character, while strife and envy are unbecoming the follower of the Prince of Peace.

A Glorious Panoply. "Put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ." On the eve of a desperate battle, Æneas' mother, anxious for her son's safety, brought down from Olympus an invulnerable panoply and laid it at Æneas' feet. The son puts on the panoply and becomes invulnerable to all the thrusts of the enemy. The Heavenly Father, more careful for the safety of His children than any goddess-mother of heathendom, has committed to us a pattern of life so perfect that it saves from all unrighteousness all those who put on the Lord Jesus Christ. At our feet lies the robe of His righteousness. Do sinful pleasures entice? Put on the Lord Jesus Christ who pleased not Himself. Does an uncontrollable appetite for strong drink strive for mastery? Put on the Lord Jesus Christ who was in all points tempted like as we are yet without sin. Does impurity spread like a contagion to tempt and destroy? Put on the Lord Jesus Christ, "For in that He Himself hath suffered being tempted, He is able to succour them that are tempted."

The Enlistment Banner. "No compromise" is to be inscribed on the banner of the New Citizenship. When we license the sale of intoxicating liquors because there has always been drunkenness in the world and always will be, and it is better to regulate a vice you cannot hope to eradicate, do we not make "provision for the flesh, to fulfill the lust thereof?" St. Augustine tells how this verse came to him, changing the entire current of his life. When walking in a garden at Milan, his attention was caught by a voice, perhaps the call of children at play, "Take and read, Take and read."

He opened again a copy of the Epistles he had but lain down and writes: "I read in silence the first place on which my eyes fell. 'Not in reveling and drunkenness, not in chambering and wantonness, not in strife and envying, but put ye on the Lord Jesus Christ and make no provision for the flesh in its lusts!' At the close of the sentence, as if a ray of certainty had poured into my heart, the clouds of hesitation fled at once." He had "put on the Lord Jesus Christ."

The Knight of the New Chivalry. He stands six feet tall in moral dimensions, his feet solidly planted on the rock Truth; his shoulders squared against evil, with a chest girth broadened and deepened by aspiration and high endeavor, with eyes so pure that the mother will find her own soul reflected in their clear depths. His hands in readiness for the work that lies nearest and on his breast the stamp of the conquering Christ. There is a call for him from factory and workshop, from business and professional life, from the judge's bench and the capitol. He is a soldier without bayonet or rifle, fighting every entrenched wrong in the name of God and humanity. But a short time ago the world thought him a Don Quixote, fighting windmills; today they call him a Christian citizen.

Quiz. 1. What great event did the early Christians await? 2. Where does Paul describe the accoutrement of the Christian soldier? 3. Did Paul refer to military warfare or spiritual struggle? 4. To whom did he send this call? 5. When did Paul go to Rome and what happened to him there?

Seed Thoughts. 1. No errand is trifling in the sight of the Master. 2. Each life is one of the days in eternity's calendar. 3. Sin is a weight to the soul. 4. Purity of life means strength of purpose. 5. Compromise and conquest do not go together. 7. Christ is our robe of righteousness.

PERSONAL RESPONSIBILITY.

For it is written, As I live, saith the Lord, every shall bow to me,

and every

shall confess to God.
So then every one of us shall give account of himself to God. Let us not therefore judge one another any more: but judge this rather, that no man put a or an occasion

to

in his brother's way. It is good neither to nor to nor any thing whereby thy brother or is or is made weak.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ROMANS 14: 11-21.

Prayer: Our Father, May we follow the example of Jesus Christ, our Elder Brother, toward the weak and sinful. For His name's sake, Amen.

"Each man shall bear his neighbor's burden,
Each care for all;
Love's light shall shine in every cottage,
Love's words fill every hall."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, 58 A. D. Written by Paul from Corinth to the Christian church at Rome.

Scripture Setting: Duty to Others. To share temporal benefits, Lev. 19:9-10. To relieve want, Lev. 25:35. To bear infirmities of the weak, Rom. 15:1. To bear another's burdens, Gal. 6:2. The duty of sympathy, Rom. 12:15. Exercise of patience, Thess. 5:14. To love, I John 4:7.

Life and Conduct Setting: Paul would have these early Christians: 1. Exercise charity toward the weaknesses of others. 2. Refrain from judging their brethren. 3. Sacrifice their own pleasure for the greater good. 4. Gain a higher conception of the kingdom of God. 5. Abstain from self-indulgence. 6. Consider the weakness of others.

THE MISSION OF THE STRONG.

The Greatest of These is Charity. While the earliest of the Roman Christians were Jews by birth, the Roman church contained also a large element who were of Gentile origin. It was not strange that the two elements should have a different view point. The Jewish contingent while accepting Christ, still clung not only to the Mosaic code, but to the rabbinical traditions concerning fast and feast and proscribed food, and sought to urge their views and ceremonies upon the others; while with little forbearance and small consideration for their scruples the Gentile portion of the church scoffed their narrowness and turned the criticism of themselves into ridicule. Paul has made it plain that these differences are immaterial, that the Jew has no reason to boast over his brother. In practices which are so non-essential each has a right to his own views; for to God only are they accountable.

The Final Account. Paul has given a terse but striking picture of that great day when "every one of us shall give an account of himself to God." Of himself he must give an account and not of another.

Whose Stick Is Notched? An old legend tells of a man of harsh and unforgiving spirit who recorded every ill of his neighbors and every injury and wrong perpetrated by them by cutting a notch on a stick which he kept for that purpose. One day he appeared before Heaven's gate, the notched stick his only staff and support. "Good St. Peter, pray open to one who has lived so long among evil people that he longs to dwell forever with the good. The notches on this stick will tell you of the wrongs and injuries done by those I have left behind." To his surprise St. Peter broke the stick into a thousand pieces and began to flay him with another twice as long and twice as deeply indented, while he warned him to be gone, with the words, "By a man's own deeds is he beaten or blessed. The stick that is your scourge is notched by the wrongs and injuries you have done to others."

Judge Not. How tenderly persuasive is the admonition, "Let us not therefore judge one another any, more." Paul has caught the spirit of the Master. Reformers may well study his example. He does not don ermine and mount the judicial bench to talk down to the sinner but enters the prisoner's dock and identifies himself with the culprit by the use of the personal pronoun "us." When we rebuke and when we judge another, let us, like Paul, remember ourselves as the chief of sinners. The "holier than thou" spirit should have no place in reform. Who art thou that thou judgest another? Why dost thou judge thy brother? The poor drunkard in the gutter may have fought a harder battle and won more victories over self than his sober accuser who is not tempted to drink. The world only knows of the defeats when it sees him drunk but is ignorant of the times when he fought and conquered. Too often

"We atone for the sins we are inclined to
By damning those we have no mind to."

Thy Brother's Keeper. The apostle makes it plain that no one is responsible nor will anyone be held accountable for the folly, mistakes or sins of others. To his own Master each must stand or fall. "But judge this rather, that no man put a stumbling block or an occasion to fall in his brother's way." Every person will be held responsible who by act or example puts temptation in another's way. He is responsible who risks the safety of others. Paul was only stating a fact of common law. A man may not keep a dog unchained that is a menace to the passer by; he must keep his premises in sanitary condition lest poison germs be bred, and may not weaken the health of the community by mingling freely with his fellows if he has an infectious disease or has been exposed to contagion. Though he owns the land, the realty owner may not dig a pit in his own ground and leave it uncovered lest another's safety be exposed. But what of the moral pitfalls; of the contagion of the brothel; of the saloon, that breeding place of vice; of the unleashed gamblers and gambling places? What of the innumerable evil places that threaten the moral safety of youth, too oft sanctioned by the ballots of Christian men, and their existence ever due to the torpitude and indifference of professed servants of Christ?

For Whom Christ Died. Paul has the training of a lawyer and he is of too logical a mind to argue whether Jew or Gentile is right in regard to these traditions. The main argument is, destroy not him "for whom Christ died." With what majesty the apostle has clothed weakness! That weak chin, the irresolute lips, those wavering eyes have all come under the blood and they are sacred.

For His Sake. In the early years of Frances E. Willard's temperance itinerary she spoke in a certain church in a mining city. After an ardent but vain appeal for signers to the pledge she left her place in the pulpit and canvassed the audience, going to a half-intoxicated young miner, who refused with an oath. "For your mother's sake," Miss Willard urged, and the lad replied with such language as no sober man would have used in regard to his mother. "For your sweetheart's sake, for the sake of the girl who will some day be your wife," Miss Willard again urged, only to be more rudely repulsed. "For your own sake." The lad was bound for perdition and plainly told Miss Willard so. Then the saintly reformer put a small white hand on the miner's grimy coat sleeve, "My brother, won't you sign the pledge for the sake of the Christ that is in you?" "Ah," said the man long years afterward, "that broke me all up. Many a time I had been told I had the devil in me, but no one had ever seen Christ in me before." He signed the pledge and surrendered to Christ.

Protect Your Good Name. A good name is rather to be chosen than great riches. A man's Christian reputation is his best capital as a religious worker; whenever that reputation suffers, his influence goes below par and when it is lost he is a bankrupt as far as Christian influence in the community is concerned. Does not the Christian who indulges in questionable amusements pay too dearly for the doubtful pleasures? Paul spoke not as a lawyer but as a solid business man might of the conservation of capital when he urged, "Let not then your good be evil spoken of."

The Kingdom of God. A decision for the right never incurs sacrifice, it only means a change of values and the substitution of the real for the false. The pleasures of sin are always coarse, often bestial and ever unsatisfying; the bubbles gone, champagne palls upon the taste; a night's frolic means a morning's headache. Self-indulgence suffers the pangs of gout, dyspepsia and a train of other ills, while Self-Control has as her attendants, health, wholesomeness, happiness, success and honor. The Heavenly Father knoweth how to give good things to those who come to Him. "For the kingdom of God is not meat and drink, but righteousness and peace and joy in the Holy Ghost."

Things Worth Striving For. Paul may have been a man of insignificant stature and halting, stammering speech, but what far-reaching vision was his, what sublime appreciation of the false and the real! What after all has the world to give but meat and drink, a little more or less highly seasoned, more or less delicately served, but only meat and drink. The only things worth seeking are those which are a training for better service to humanity.

The Work of God. There is a great work of God going on in the world: the spiritual, moral and physical regeneration of the individual, the nation and the governments of the world. Every saloon that is voted out; every evil resort closed; every sin that is overcome; every soul brought nearer to Christ; every good that is ushered into the world; every disease overthrown: all are a part of the work of God. For meat destroy not His work. For earthly advantage, gain or comfort, do not thwart God's will.

The Ultimate Good. "It is good neither to eat flesh, nor to drink wine, nor anything whereby thy brother stumbleth, or is offended or is made weak." The greatest good for the greatest number; this is the larger liberty which towers above the so-called personal liberty. We have no liberty which conflicts with another's good. It has been well said that Robinson Crusoe was the only character who could claim the right of personal liberty, since no other's safety or welfare was endangered by anything Defoe's stranded hero might do so long as he lived alone on his island. But the moment the man Friday appeared on the scene, Crusoe's personal liberty ended; there were now two to be considered instead of one. Christian liberty by liberating us from the law of self, brings freedom to live for others.

Quiz. 1. What two divisions in the church at Rome? 2. State some of the traditions for which the Jewish members stood. 3. What Christian virtue did Paul commend to them? 4. What gives value to every soul? 5. What is the duty of the strong? 6. Which is the greater, Christian liberty or larger liberty?

Seed Thoughts. 1. God is the real judge; man is only self-appointed. 2. It is ours to save, not condemn. 3. Every soul has been paid for in such precious coin that all the riches of the world are not equivalent to the value of the poorest soul. 4. "Personal liberty" is the autocratic demand of the tyrant; Christian liberty is loving solicitude for others. 5. One's pleasure is often another's destruction.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

But meat commendeth us not to God: for neither, if we are we the better;

neither, if we eat not, are we the worse. But take heed, lest by any means this liberty of your's become a to them that are weak.

For if any man see thee which hast knowledge

shall not the conscience of him which is weak be emboldened to eat those things which are

And through thy knowledge
shall
the weak brother

for whom Christ died? But when ye sin so against the brethren, and wound their weak conscience, ye sin against Christ. Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS I COR. 8:8-13.

Prayer: Lord, May we ever be moved by Thy Divine compassion for our fellows; so teach us and guide us that our example may help others to follow Thee. For Thy name's sake, Amen.

I must the fair example set:
From those that on my pleasure wait
The stumbling block remove:
Their duty by my life explain,
And still in all my works maintain
The dignity of love.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 50. Place, written from Ephesus by Paul to the church at Corinth. Persons, Paul and the Greek and Jewish converts at Corinth.

Scripture Setting: Duty to Our Brother. Responsibility toward our brother, Gen. 4:9-11. Forbidden to hate, Lev. 19:17-18. Brothers must not go to law, 1 Cor. 6:5-6. Forbearance enjoined, Col. 3:13. Wayward brother to be admonished, 2 Thess. 3:15. Weak brother to be exhorted, Heb. 3:13. Kindness enjoined, 2 Peter 1:7. Love commanded, Heb. 13:1.

Life and Conduct Setting: Paul emphasizes:
1. That custom is immaterial to salvation. 2. While the utmost liberty of conscience should be allowed, each should see that, his example does not offend the weak. 3. Liberty should never become a menace to the safety of others. 4. A sin against the weakest of God's children is a sin against the Christ who purchased their salvation. 5. The duty of sacrifice of both inclination and pleasure for the safety of others.

THY BROTHER.

A Question of Every-day Life. Members of the church at Corinth had sent a letter to Paul submitting among other subjects, that of the lawfulness of their eating meat that had been offered to idols. When the gods and the priest had received their share of the flesh of the animals that had been sacrificed to the false gods at the various heathen temples, it was the custom to sell at least a part of the remainder to the butchers. It was not always easy for the consumer to know whether his purchase belonged to that particular class of meat or not, since it was for sale at every stall in the market. Moreover its cheapness and excellent quality rendered it especially desirable to the poorer classes to whom the Christians mostly belonged. Indeed such meat was considered so choice that it was frequently sent by the offerers to friends and relatives or used at dinners to which those who had offered the sacrifice would invite their neighbors. These feasts often accompanied with Greek choruses, athletic contests and other recreations were the chief source of social enjoyment, and the Christian who attended must have idol flesh set before him, or by refusing to attend cause his own exclusion from the social life of his heathen neighbors, friends and relations. What course would Paul recommend?

Worldly Conformity. Looking backward through the centuries the question seems so puerile and childish that we wonder that Paul gave it serious consideration. Yet it involved much. Heathenism was so universal that the question confronted the Corinthian Christian on every side. Where every house had its special protecting god, to appease whom some portion of every meal was laid upon the family altar; when one member of that family became a Christian he would at once become confronted by the question as to whether conformity with his family custom was not compromise with idolatry. A birthday, perhaps, of a beloved father or mother; the marriage of a brother or sister; the safe return from the sea of a dear friend, were all the occasion of a celebration, with its customary sacrifice in some public temple of heathendom. Was the young convert justified in attending such a feast? There were national celebrations also; should the Christian bring his patriotism and good citizenship into question, or should he be false to his new religion? Though under different conditions, the church is confronted by the same problem today. Christian consistency often involves self-exile from society and fashion, a sense of aloofness in the family circle and political excommunication.

Harmless but Harmful. Paul might have quoted Malachi's condemnation of such a practice or the action of the Council of Jerusalem which commanded Gentile converts to abstain from meats offered to idols, for Paul himself had obtained that deliverance, and commended it, but he would have them make a voluntary choice. Since the idols to which the meat was offered were false gods and they as Christians denied the sacredness of such an offering, such meat was in no wise different from any other animal flesh and might be eaten without sin. But there were temptations to be considered; wine was always served at such feasts and drunkenness so common that a drunkard and a Corinthian were held to be the same thing; greed for gain and shady practices for getting it; knavery of all kinds had so lowered the whole moral fiber of the Corinthian people that the continued close intercourse which would result from conformity along other lines might seduce the new convert into other and real evils. While some might eat without the slightest idolatrous feeling, others, through hearing and seeing the ceremonial rites of their former worship, might become backsliders. A thing may be harmless of itself, but through evil associations and environment may work disastrous results. Some time ago a reformed drunkard, extremely ill in a sleeping car, was offered a dose of medicine by the occupant of the upper berth who had used the same remedy often and safely; but the alcohol in the compound so awakened the slumbering demon of appetite as to cause the fall of the other.

The Power of Example. "Neither, if we eat, are we the better; neither if we eat not are we the worse. But take heed lest by any means this liberty of yours become a stumbling block to them that are weak." It is a question of others. A friendly game of cards with some small trophy as a prize and incentive to greater interest may never tempt one of the players to haunt the public gambling house and hazard his money, but to thy brother—to the man whose veins burn with the speculative mania, or to the boy too young to make the nice distinction between public and private games and between a "prize" and a "stake," the little social game may be a stumbling block to which later a confirmed gambler dates his fall. The cigar smoked by that good Christian man may never upset mental or nervous equilibrium, but the weak-willed, immature lad may stumble over it into a cigaret fiend's grave. An occasional glass of wine may seemingly work no harm to the moderate drinker but somewhere a drunkard lies in the gutter from his example.

Thy Weak Brother. Very earnestly Paul asks, "Through thy knowledge shall the weak brother perish, for whom Christ died?" Centuries before Robert Burns' immortal poem saw the light, Paul taught that "a man's a man for a' that." In Paul's eyes each of his fellow mortals wore a patent of nobility written in the indelible blood of a crucified Christ. Shall one man's strength cause another's destruction? We are under obligation as Christians to consider others. If Christ so loved that poor, stumbling drunkard; that weak, emasculated cigaret fiend as to shed His precious blood and give His life for him, shall we not give up our petty inclinations and puerile pleasures to save him from destruction?

Heroism. A building is burning; the stronger ones fight their way through the flames to safety, but there is one imprisoned inmate of the burning building too weak to force his way and make his escape. Do the others leave him to be destroyed because he is weak? Thank God such selfish cowardice is not the rule of conduct. At the risk of their own lives and of forfeiting the safety for which they fought the flames, they return to the burning building and rescue the weak brother.

Ye Did It Unto Me. When your example leads another astray, or when you wound a weak conscience, "ye sin against Christ." It becomes no longer a question of sinning against the weak brother but of sinning against our Elder Brother. "Let whiskey alone and it will let you alone," said a professed Christian who intended to vote to license the saloon, but that night he had a strange dream. He saw poor old "Whiskey Jones" a corpse, and as the body was lowered into a drunkard's grave he saw the shadow of a cross fall athwart the coffin and heard a voice say, "Again ye have crucified me afresh!" and lo, a cross on which was the crucified Christ marked the grave. He awoke from sleep, but the question of "wet or dry" thereafter appeared in a new light to one voter.

Love and Liberty. How Paul towered above the pleasure-seeking Corinthians. "Wherefore, if meat make my brother to offend, I will eat no flesh while the world standeth, lest I make my brother to offend." Elsewhere the apostle tells us the world was crucified unto him and he unto the world through the cross of Christ. He bore in his body the marks of the Lord Jesus, and in his spirit, the stamp of the sacrificial Christ. Have we attained Paul's stature?

Quiz. 1. For what was the city of Corinth noted? 2. What can you say of the environment of the Corinthian Christians? 3. What was the course pursued by Daniel and his three companions under similar conditions? 4. What was Paul's attitude toward the question? 5. Upon what did he base his plea? 6. Whom should we consider in relation to our attitude toward un-Christian practices of today?

Seed Truths. 1. Though conditions have changed considerably, the problems of the first and twentieth centuries are much the same. 2. Every earnest soul is confronted by the question of conformity or consistency. 3. He who carries the banner of Christ high aloft and would not lower his colors finds himself with but a corporal's guard of followers. 4. Many sins are committed in the name of liberty. 5. Example is our most fearful responsibility. 6. Sacrifice and love for others are essential to Christian living. 7. "For thy brother's sake" is the most cogent argument against any evil. 8. The weakness of another should appeal to the strong.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE RACE AND THE PRIZE.

Know ye not that they which run all,

but

So

that ye may obtain. And every man that is in all things. Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT, 1 COR. 9:24-27. READ ALSO PHIL. 3:12-14.

Prayer: Lord, Help us to gain the mastery of self. May we sacrifice every inclination that is contrary to Thy will and ever hold before us the prize of the high calling of God through Christ Jesus, Amen.

Awake my soul, stretch every nerve,
And press with vigor on;
A Heavenly race demands thy zeal,
And an immortal crown.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 59. Place, Ephesus, where the letter was written. Persons, Paul and Corinthian Christians.

Scriptural Setting: The Victorious Christian. Strength, courage and obedience requisites of victory, Josh. 1:7. Puts Christ first, Phil. 3:8. Overcomes sin, 1 John 2:13. Victory won through faith, 1 John 5:4. Sons of God, Rev. 21:7. Victorious over death, 1 Cor. 15:54-57. To reign with Christ, Rev. 3:21.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features

of Paul's illustration are: 1. That not all who enter the Christian life continue therein. 2. Not all who cry, "Lord, Lord," shall gain a reward. 3. The Christian life must conform to Christ's rules. 4. Success depends upon the individual. 5. Temperance is one of the requisites of a Christian life. 6. The superiority of the Christian's hope. 7. Decision of character and earnestness of spirit are necessary. 8. The necessity of self-control. 9. No Christian may consider himself safe from temptation to fall.

HOW THE PRIZE WAS WON.

The Isthmian Games. The games were one of the four great national festivals of the Greeks, held every second or third year. Seven miles from Corinth rose an amphitheater and stadium or race-course, each an enclosed oval and both built of white marble, where the games were held. None but Greek citizens of pure blood and irreproachable record were allowed to contend in them. So popular were they that even the hostilities of war were suspended during the celebrations of the games. Multitudes of spectators came to view these games, which included wrestling, foot races and other athletic sports, with horse and chariot racing. Paul would teach that life is a race, less spectacular and to most of us without the accompaniment and inspiration of cheering multitudes, but as earnest and as strenuous as any ever run in the stadium.

Many Entries. Scarcely a greater honor could be earned by a Greek citizen than that of prize winner at these games. Not an athlete in all Greece, not a charioteer of promise who failed to enter the field. All desired the prize. So today, it almost seems as though the men are many and the deeds are few; every profession crowded, every calling overdone. "All the world has entered for a prize and it is useless to strive," say the timid youth. In every human heart, it matters not how indifferent or debased, there is a chord that is responsive to the good. No one starts out in life intending crime or sin. All are striving, however indifferently, after the right; all desire to win Heaven.

The Race. "Know ye not that they which run the race run all, but one receives the prize?" The race is to begin, the line of contestants is already formed, so many of them that they fairly crowd each other for space in which to swing free arms and legs.

There are many favorites who receive the plaudits of their friends. At last all is ready, the signal is given and they are off. Some fall out early, discouraged. Others, their heads turned to catch the admiring huzzahs of the crowd, stumble and fall out by the way; many drop down exhausted to be carried off by sympathizing friends or attendants.

One Winner. But there is one whose firm flesh, clear complexion and far-seeing eyes marked him from the start as one prepared by a life of self-mastery and training for this supreme effort. He has endurance, his muscles are of iron, every tendon taut; he has a single purpose, with no eyes for the shouting multitude of onlookers, and his gaze fixed on the goal. He is not discouraged, does not stumble or fall, and at last the prize is his. Lucky? The prizes of life are not won by luck or chance.

Picking a Boy. Recently an employer advertised for a boy. Sixty answered the advertisement and each was ushered into the same great room and left to wait an hour. Finally the man of business entered. Each lad was scrutinized quickly and within ten minutes without any questions or parley the employer singled out a boy and engaged him for the place. A friend who had watched the procedure asked the man how he arrived at his choice. "First," said the employer, "I stood outside a few minutes before I entered. The door was ajar. I heard one boy swear in impatience, another whiled away the time by whistling a bar of music from a popular but improper song. I saw another take a lozenge to disguise the odor of liquor. When I entered I looked the boys over very closely and chose one whose fingers showed no cigaret stains, whose eyes were clear and who had been occupying his time with a study book."

Striving for the Mastery. It is useless to enter a race unless you adhere to the rules which govern the contest. "So run that ye may obtain." "Every man that striveth for the mastery is temperate in all things." The athlete must submit to rules and restrictions and months of training. He must forego indulgence in many things, and the world of sport is growing more rigid in its demands of total abstinence from alcohol and tobacco. All the prominent athletic clubs require total abstinence when preparing men for any meet. Those who use alcohol make a dash at first but cannot endure, and fall behind at the finish, in the foot races those who use alcohol are the first to drop out by the way. Total abstinence from all alcoholic drinks is required during the season of all football and baseball teams.

Weston the Walker. At seventy Weston, a total abstainer, was able to repeat the pedestrian feat he had accomplished forty years before by walking across the continent. In the race for business and professional success the rules against the use of alcohol and tobacco are rapidly becoming as stringent. The cigaret smoker is now barred from more than one hundred different lines of business and trades, while a temperance order prohibiting the use of intoxicants habitually or while on duty extends to over 1,000,000 railway employees.

The Two Prizes. Though Christ's promise to those who seek first the kingdom of Heaven includes an earthly reward, Paul is not inciting these Corinthian Christians to righteousness merely as a means to worldly attainment. That was gained by the victor of any Ithmian game, who not only won honor for himself and his family, but even for his town, where he was welcomed home with all the honors of a military hero, the very walls of the city being thrown down that he might enter as a conqueror; his statue was set up by his fellow citizens and a tablet built into the walls of the amphitheater to commemorate his deed. Gold was awarded him also from the city treasury, while the greatest poets celebrated his victory in song. To Paul the value of earthly honors and gain was signified by the pine wreath which was the avowed reward for which the contestants in these games strove. All was as transient as the wreath of pine, which withered within a short year. "Now they do it to obtain a corruptible crown; but we an incorruptible." Eternal life, eternal glory, eternal honor, eternal riches are the prize for which the Christian strives.

A Straight Course. There is no uncertainty in life's course. One always arrives at the point he is headed for. The cigaret fiend is headed for the insane asylum and arrives all too soon. The young man who spends his earning at the pool table and for drink, runs his course as an embezzler and ends in a drunkard's grave or the prison. Garfield could run the race from the tow path to the White House, but Benedict Arnold, with youth, wealth and valor as a starting point, ran the race of profligacy to a traitor's grave. Then Paul urges, Be in earnest; do not fight as one beating the air. In the temperance warfare too much effort has been spent beating the air: high sounding resolutions and sonorous prayers when the occasion calls for Christian action and Christian ballots.

Master or Servant. Ah, Paul has found the real source of failure, the real cause of defeat—Self! "I keep under my body and bring it into subjection." What an exquisite piece of machinery is the body and how wonderful its mechanism, formed by the great Master Mechanic for His service and glory, but degraded and enfeebled by self-indulgence till it dishonors the Creator and destroys the soul that inhabits it. "I keep under" in Paul's time was a technical term of the games and meant to strike full in the face: the most damaging blow one boxer could give another. Against every unholy desire and evil appetite of the body Paul directed his hardest, most firmly planted blows. No one may hope to win whose body is master instead of servant.

A Castaway. Paul has seen many of the derelicts of life. Life's course is strewn with failures; youths who have started out bent upon winning one of life's prizes, but through strong drink have stumbled and lost; those of bright mind and high intellect, who, intoxicated by the plaudits of men and advances of evil, have lifted their eyes from the goal and fallen through impurity. A moment's temptation has ruined many a man who has failed to keep his body under and in subjection to Christ. Others have counted the prize not worth the sacrifice and exertion and have failed through lack of earnestness, while all too great a number, through lack of singleness of purpose, have missed the "prize of the high calling of God in Christ Jesus."

Quiz. 1. What athlete named in the Bible was a total abstainer? 2. To what may we liken the Christian life? 3. What does Paul emphasize as a requisite to success? 4. To what other church did Paul use the same figure of speech in an exhortation to earnestness of purpose?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Paul, the fisher after men, bated them with loving tenderness. 2. In the race for Heaven the prize is set before every one and all may win. 3. Character lasts through eternity; love never fails, and purity endures forever. 4. The man who does not know where he is at nor where he is going fails to achieve success. 5. When the devil fails to derail a Christian he tries to sidetrack him.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

TWO KINDS OF FRUIT.

Now the works of the flesh are manifest, which are these; Adultery, fornication, uncleanness, lasciviousness, variance, emulations, heresies, envyings.

and such like: of the which I tell you before, as I have also told you in time past, that they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS GAL. 5:19-23. READ JAMES 3:14-18.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, Teach us to avoid the sins of the flesh and so chasten and instruct us in Thy word that we may bear the peaceable fruits of righteousness. For Jesus sake, Amen.

"Sorrow must crop each passion shoot,
And pain each lust infernal,
Or human life can bear no fruit
To life eternal."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 55. Place, Antioch, whence Paul sent his letter to the churches of Galatia. Person, Paul.

Scripture Setting: Good and Evil Fruit. Deceitful fruit, Hos. 10:13. Punished according to fruit, Jer. 21:14. Reward according to fruit, Jer. 32:19. A test of character, Matt. 7:16-20. Fruit of eternal life, John 4:36. Good fruit lasting, John 15:16. Fruit of spirit, Eph. 5:9. Peaceable fruit of righteousness, James 3:17-18.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special lessons which Paul sought to impress through this illustration are: 1. That the heart is naturally evil and the flesh at enmity with God. 2. That the works of the natural man are evil. 3. Sins spring from the same cause. 4. Sin cannot enter the kingdom of God. 5. The fruits of the Spirit. 6. The walk and life of the regenerate man bear the fruits of righteousness. 7. The liberty of the righteous.

A FOOLISH AND BEWITCHED PEOPLE.

A Special Message. Paul's letter to the Galatians is fraught with special interest to us, since it was written to a people who were in a sense our forbears. The term Galatian is equivalent to Gaul or Kelt, and the "foolish Galatians," whom he rebuked with equal tenderness and sternness, were a fragment of that great and virile race which spread over western Europe and from which the people of the western part of England Scotland, and of Ireland and France sprang. The Epistle to the Galatians is, therefore, a hand mirror which we may take up at our leisure and in it trace our resemblance to these early Christians of our race, seeing mirrored in the picture whose contrasting shades Paul has painted with the skill of a Rembrandt, our own weakness and strength, our own sins and virtues.

Of the Same Family Tree. These early Galatians belonged to a race which had even defeated the proud Romans with total overthrow and a subjugation so complete that the warlike Romans were forbidden the use of iron except for implements of husbandry. And though the shame of that defeat was wiped out by a final victory for the Romans, the Gallic intruders stubbornly held their ground and for more than a century and a half, maintained their own government in the face of the fact that they were a conquered people in the midst of the victor's territory, and even when brought under the rule of Rome they maintained their distinctive character and speech. The present day branch of their race are also empire builders, but have we the tenacity of character to endure under defeat? They were a generous, warm-hearted, enthusiastic people so hospitable and fond of a popular hero that when Paul came to them sick and won their hearts, they received him "as an angel from Heaven" and "would have given their eyes" for him, but within five years they have deserted the religion they so gladly accepted, and Paul, once their idol, must needs defend himself from their aspersions. Have we the same national traits? Might not our national heroes recite a like tale of ingratitude and are the great religious awakenings which sweep our land more lasting? As we study we shall see a marked family resemblance in the fruits of our civilization and those which Paul attributes to these far off cousins of ours.

A Rotten Crop. "Every tree is known by his own fruit," and the fruits of the first century of the Christian era were poisonous indeed. What a noxious crop Paul arrays before us! Four chief sins of impurity, two of impiety and nine sins of enmity. Society in Paul's day was steeped in immorality. The fearful belief in a double standard of morals for the sexes, was in full force, with its results disastrous alike to home and state. Since brave sons are the issue of strong fathers, small wonder that Greece and Rome alike declined in military prowess and civic courage under the decay of manly virtue. But Paul declares not only against the most heinous and criminal forms of impurity; the terms of uncleanness and lasciviousness include whatever is contaminating in look or word, thought or gesture, in dress or costume, as well as the more open and shameless uncleanness of filthy jest, debauchery and sensuality. There are eyes that have grown so evil through the vile pictures and scenes that have left their evil image upon the retina, that to meet their ogling stare is "to look through the doors of hell." One evil word, one obscene picture, will inoculate a whole school with the awful contagion of impurity. Rotten to the core are the first four varieties of evil fruit Paul enumerates.

Evil Fruits. Next to the fruits of lust, Paul places idolatry. In those days, polytheism reigned. There were gods of the earth, sea and sky, gods and goddesses of war, agriculture, handcraft, art and music; even gods who ministered to lust and sin. No longer in the civilized world do men make, for gods, images of men or four-footed and creeping things, but can we say that man does not still make gods with his own hands? One man's god is his business; to it he gives the time of the holy Sabbath; another's god is his political party, and on its altar he renounces and sacrifices principle, consistency and right. Others become the votaries of pleasure and discard the family altar for the theater or dance; many join in the drunken worship and revels of the worshippers of Bacchus. Then there is the man who denies the existence of the one true God and would have us believe that all the wonders of this beautiful world are due to some sorcery of nature instead of the Divine Creator.

From the Same Branch. "Hatred, variance, emulations, wrath, strife, seditions, heresies, envyings, murders"—all fruits of the natural heart which is at enmity with God. What wretched consequences follow the absence of love. Paul knew the Galatians; like the Celt, the Briton and Teuton—the Gauls of today—they had high capability, reaching out after culture and intellectual attainment, so that Paul could write to them in classic Greek; they were generous, enthusiastic and open friends or open foes; he did not need to warn them of treachery or meanness. But they were high tempered and quarrelsome, a fighting people as are the Gallic nations today. What a bloody record of war is the history of every Gallic country. Those who boast of their high spirit and hold their quick temper as an evidence of strong character would do well to notice that Paul has catalogued the fruit of the natural heart with murder and sedition—crimes punishable with death.

A Lost Man. For more than fifty years a hundred pounds has lain in the Bank of England, ready for the claimant who can prove that he and his family have in nowise suffered from the effect of intemperance, but that man has never been found.

The Husbandman. The history of horticulture has been the history of magic genii, who with fairy wand have made the rod blossom and bear, and the wand has been the pruning hook. Every fruit has been domesticated and made appetizing through cultivation. That luscious apple had for its progenitor the wild crab. What wonders have been wrought through Luther Burbank, the wizard of horticulture, who has made the fruit of the wild cactus edible and palatable. But no triumph of horticulture has equaled that of the Divine Husbandman, who has transformed the bitter fruits of the natural heart into the fruits of the Spirit.

The Grafted Fruit. With a sweep of the hand Paul has brushed away the untempting array of natural fruit which he set before the Galatians and in its place he brings us specimens from the grafted tree of the Holy Spirit. They are arranged in three groups—love, joy and peace. God's choicest fruit. Then the virtues toward others—long suffering, gentleness, goodness, faith; and to one's self—meekness and temperance. Paul, the Christian philosopher, differs from the philosophers of heathendom, who placed wisdom first and righteousness last and who had no place for gentleness and humility. Love and joy go hand in hand. Selfishness and sensuous gratification may bring hilarity, but Joy and her twin sister, Peace, never abide with a troubled or outraged conscience.

The Perfect Fruit of Righteousness. "Meekness and temperance; against such there is no law." Beginning in love, ending in temperance, such is the Christian life. Paul would make it plain that the law does not curtail liberty or impose penalties upon those who do right. "Against such there is no law."

Rejected and Chosen. Paul has used his colors to produce the greatest light and shade. The fruits of evil are swallowed in darkness. "For they which do such things shall not inherit the kingdom of God." They have been condemned and are, therefore, to be destroyed. But those who bear the fruits of the Spirit enter into the larger liberty. Wise husbandman as he is, having held before our progenitors the beautiful fruits of righteousness, he closes with fit words of advice; "If you would bear such fruit, use the pruning knife; cut off every diseased branch, each infected twig. Crucify the flesh with the affections and lusts." Character is only gained by constant watchfulness, repression and sacrifice.

Quiz. 1. To whom was Paul writing? 2. What can you say of these Galatians? 3. Have we any of their national or individual traits? 4. What did Christ say to the barren fig tree? 5. Does the Bible command fruitfulness?

Seed Thoughts. 1. There is no aristocracy of sin and crime. 2. There are no small sins in the eyes of God. 3. The kingdom of God is too fair an inheritance to be given to the children of darkness. 4. Evil fruit is condemned as a matter of public safety. 5. The fruits of the Spirit all bear the blue ribbon. 6. Law does not infringe on the rights of those who do right.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

WISE WALKING.

See then that ye circumspectly, not as fools,

but as

Redeeming the time, because the days are evil. Wherefore be ye not unwise, but understanding what the will of the Lord is. And be not

with wherein is excess; but be filled with the Spirit;

to yourselves in psalms
and hymns
and spiritual songs,

and making melody in your heart to the Lord; Giving

always for all things unto God and the Father in the name of our Lord Jesus Christ.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS EPH. 5:15-20.

Prayer: Lord, Help us to walk in Thy law and in Thy light; may we walk uprightly and worthily. Teach us the good way that we may walk therein. For Christ's sake, Amen.

When we walk with the Lord
In the light of His Word,
What a glory He sheds on our way!

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 64. Place, Rome. Person, Paul.

Scripture Setting: The Christian Walk. A covenant walk, Gen. 17:1, 2. Must be taught to walk, Ex. 18:20. In integrity, Psa. 26:1. Honestly, I Thess. 4:12. Uprightly, Psa. 84:11. Worthily, Eph. 4:1. Humbly, Mic. 6:8. In the fear of the Lord, Acts 9:31. By faith, 2 Cor. 5:7. In tried paths, Jer. 6:16. By rule, Gal. 6:16. Directed by God, Jer. 10:23. In the way, Isa. 30:21. At liberty, Psa. 119:45. In the midst of trouble, Psa. 138:7.

Through the valley of death, Psa. 23:4. The redeemed walk with God, Isa. 35:8-10.

Life and Conduct Setting: Paul seeks to impress Christians with: 1. The importance of a consistent walk before unbelievers. 2. The need to distinguish between wisdom and folly. 3. The strenuousness of the Christian life. 4. A closer knowledge of God's will. 5. The sinfulness of drunkenness and other excesses. 6. He also advises: (1) The higher life of the Spirit. (2) Religious fellowship, song and praise. (3) Thankfulness to the Heavenly Father.

WALKING IN THE LIGHT.

Walking Safely. There is much in a man's walk. The boy who slouches along is not apt to impress others as an energetic youth; a halting step denotes indecision, and it is hard to trust one with a shambling walk while those who walk with firm tread, sure bearing and erect carriage inspire the onlooker with confidence in their ability and energy. Of insignificant stature himself, Paul had the admiration of all small men for perfect physical development. A prisoner in Rome, he must often have watched and admired the poise of the centurion and soldier, who walked not as slaves but as freemen, and with his usual habit of illustrating his teaching, he writes, "See, then, that ye walk circumspectly." After all, walking is a matter of eyesight; you must see where your feet are going or, as the old adage has it, "Look before you leap." If the one telling the first lie could see into what a tangled web of deception it would lead; if the youth who took the first step in impurity could see the black pit into which he must fall; if the boy taking the first glass could see the drunkard's grave at the end, all would see that they walked safely.

Folly Versus Wisdom. "Not as fools, but as wise." There are those who laugh at the Christian life and cherish the idea that worldliness and unbelief are a sign of superiority. The boy who smokes cigarets laughs at his wiser playmate as a "sissy," unaware that the cigaret has been aptly described as "a little roll of tobacco with a little fire at one end and a little fool at the other." The champagne drinking youth who squanders his money and ruins his brains has lots of fun at the expense of his sober fellow clerk, until some morning the two are called into the manager's office, the one to receive a discharge, the other for promotion.

The Strenuous Life. Verily, "There is nothing new under the sun!" More than eighteen centuries before the advent of Theodore Roosevelt, Paul was preaching the strenuous life to the early Christians, urging them to awake from their sleep, to arise from the dead apathy and indifference into which they had fallen, "redeeming the time because the days are evil." Evil days, indeed, when cruel Nero reigned as emperor! A prisoner of the Lord, himself, Paul foresaw the persecution of the church of Christ. Within a year after the epistle was written, Rome was burned, and ere its fires were allayed, the streets of the Imperial city began to flow with Christian blood. In four years St. Paul and St. Peter were martyred in Rome, and Nero, the tyrant, had fallen by an assassin's hand; only six years till the capture of Jerusalem, the destruction of the temple and the crushing out of the Jewish national life. It behooved these early Christians to redeem the time, but is not king alcohol as cruel and bloody a tyrant as the Roman emperor? Already the temperance cause has its martyrs in the persons of the brave Haddock, the daring Roderick Dhu Gambrel and poor Carl Etherington. The skies are portentous, the days are evil, and unless Christian people redeem the time, who can fail to foresee evils that mean the destruction of the church, and the overthrow of the principles on which our nation was founded? Shall we not stand for the Christian Sabbath, the abolition of the drink traffic and civic righteousness?

The Will of the Lord. "It is the will of Allah," says the Mohammedan, as he submits alike to good and evil, but the Apostle Paul is preaching not fatalism, but close communion with God. Enoch walked with God and pleased Him. "It is not in man who walketh to direct his steps," and he who risers and enters upon the day's duties and pleasures without the quiet talk with God that is found in prayer, will stumble and fall. He will not walk wisely.

Moody's Walk. In the early days of D. L. Moody's evangelism he returned from a three weeks' service in a certain town much cast down because not a single conversion had resulted from his efforts. "Get closer to God, Brother Moody," said a wise old minister. "It has not yet been revealed to the world what He can accomplish through one who is wholly given to Him." The words bore fruit in Moody's entire consecration to God's will and soon thereafter followed that wonderful revival across the sea, where scores of thousands were led to take up the Christian walk through Moody's preaching.

The Stumbling, Reeling Walk. The cities of Asia Minor remind us of the woman who belonged to so many clubs that she was "club-footed." Certainly they were equipped with as many social clubs as any twentieth-century city. The club feasts in which wine was served were a favorite social diversion. Those advocates of moderation who advise the use of wine to stem the tide of intemperance might study with profit Paul's letters to the wine growing and wine drinking countries of his time. The eastern coast of the Mediterranean is the ancient home of the vine. The people, a sociable race, drank not for animal indulgence but for good fellowship. But what was the result? Their wit was ribald, music and song were debased and their chief citizens reeled through the streets, all under the influence of wine. Paul had another reason for the command, "Be not drunk with wine." The letter containing this warning was carried by Tychicus, who was accompanied by Onesimus, a fugitive pagan slave who had robbed his master, fled from Colosse and found his way to Rome, where he naturally gravitated to the most loathsome plague spots of that corrupt city. Out of the depths he had been converted to Christ through the preaching of Paul, who became surety for the amount he had stolen, and he was now returning to his master accompanied by Tychicus, who bore a letter from Paul recommending him to the mercy of Philemon, his master. The poor, twice-bound slave saved as a brand from the burning, needed the admonition, and for the sake of this weak brother, the other Christians needed to be reminded of the duty of total abstinence.

The Spirit Filled Life. Let them be filled with the Spirit. No need to resort to a false stimulation in the pursuit of happiness when joy abounds and happiness reigns in the Christian life. No need to go about with a long face, and mournful step. "I wonder why that woman always looks so happy. She has had trouble enough to crush ten ordinary women," so spoke a worldly man of one of God's chastened saints. "True," said her pastor, "but she has the joy of the Spirit."

Walking in Christian Fellowship. Paul does not ask them to sacrifice their social instincts, nor would he deprive Christians of the pleasure of music. As in their heathen days they used to speak to each other on festive and religious occasions, so now let them speak to each other in the new language of Christ Jesus. If a history of the Christian hymns were written we would find they have ministered to the sick and soothed the dying when medical skill was helpless; have given courage to the faint-hearted and enabled the martyrs to endure the flames unflinchingly.

A Life of Song. Paul, a prisoner at Rome, awaiting a martyr's death, would make life a song. We may picture this marvelous apostle, worn and spent in the Master's service, a man who had three times endured shipwreck; whose life had been one of constant peril on land and sea, amid robbers and his own countrymen and among the heathen, in the city and in the wilderness; who must be constantly on the watch for lurking dangers, more acquainted with pain and weariness, hunger and thirst, cold and nakedness, than any of the apostles. Even now, as a prisoner, he was chained by the wrist to a soldier guard and deserted by all save a few faithful converts. And still Paul writes of making melody in your heart to God!

Thanksgiving. He would have them give "thanks always for all things." If Paul facing death and martyrdom could give thanks for all things, should not we who live in this favored age count our blessings? The temperance cause may not yet be victorious, but there is cause for thanksgiving for the nine prohibition states; for a prohibition area that covers 40,000,000 people; for the scientific temperance teaching of the 30,000,000 children of the public schools, and for the growth of the temperance reform in every civilized nation.

Quiz. 1. Was the letter to the Ephesians a general letter or was it written to some special church? 2. To what church is it thought to have been written? 3. What special sin does Paul condemn? 4. How would he have Christians spend their time? 5. What special cause have you for thanksgiving?

Seed Thoughts. 1. While folly dances, wisdom walks and wins the race. 2. A good carriage is often a great aid to success. 3. Folly and sin are duplicates. 4. Wine is as debasing as whisky. 5. Discouragement, discontent and ingratitude are open gateways through which Satan enters the heart.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

But speak thou the things which become sound doctrine: That the

be sober, grave,

sound in

in

in patience. The

likewise, that they be in behaviour as becometh holiness, not false accusers, not given to much wine, of good things.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS TITUS 2:1-12.

Prayer: Lord, Impress us with the importance of the little things of life; help us to perform our daily tasks as unto Thee and may we glorify Thee in our daily life. For Jesus' sake, Amen.

"Teach me, my God and King,
In all things Thee to see,
And what I do in anything,
To do it as for Thee."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 64. Place, Nicopolis, whence letter was written. Persons, Paul, and Titus a Greek Christian.

Scripture Setting: Duties of Everyday Life. Requirements of Christian life, Deut. 10:12-13. Daily religious duties, 2 Chron. 8:14; Ezra 3:4. Duty of ministering to others, Rom. 15:27. Duty toward the needy, 1 John 3:17. Performance of duty a requirement of Christian life, Luke 17:10. The whole duty of man, Eccl. 12:13.

Life and Conduct Setting: Paul desires Titus

to impress: 1. The virtues of sobriety, seriousness and temperance, which are a crown of glory to the aged. 2. Their need of faith, charity and patience. 3. The dignity and poise which ennobles age is commended to older women. 4. The wholesome example of old age. 5. The homely duties of the everyday home life upon young wives. 6. The young man's need of a serious purpose. 7. The apostle also warns Titus that example and precept must be in harmony. 8. Praises a life of self-denial and Christian consistency.

THE EVERY-DAY LIFE.

A Difficult Field. The letter to Titus was written from Nicopolis, the city of victory, founded by the Emperor Augustus in commemoration of a great victory and built on the field where his tents had been pitched during the battle of Actium. It was still a new city and like all new places, the center of a money-mad, pleasure loving people. Even while writing, Paul could see a large and a small open-air theater, a circus and a race course; but given over to pleasure as Nicopolis was, the apostle was sending written instructions to a preacher and teacher in charge of a still harder field of labor. Had not one of their own prophets said, "The Cretians are always liars, evil beasts and idle gluttons!" These islanders were profligate, riotous and bestial, possessing all the vices and very little of the culture of the Greeks and Romans. In such unfavorable soil the seed of the Gospel found lodgment, and churches had sprung into life, no one knows whence or how. When the Apostle Paul found them, the good seed was in danger of being choked by the greed for gain and the lusts and pleasures of life. There was also division and contention as in every church which is at a low spiritual ebb. Paul had set Titus to organize and officer these crude societies and to teach their membership the A. B. C. of Christian living.

A Sound Old Age. Paul would make the keynote of this teaching concerning everyday living to be sobriety or sober mindedness, "That the aged men be sober, grave, temperate, sound in faith, in charity, in patience." We must not imagine that Paul was a mournful, long-faced Christian or that he would have these Cretians become melancholy Christians. If ever there was an apostle of joy, Paul was that one, singing in prison, counting suffering that would have overwhelmed an ordinary man as "light affliction."

He could never have drawn such wholesome lessons from them if he had not been interested in the athletic sports of his times; moreover, he would not have exercised such a fascination over young men like Timothy, Titus, Mark and others had he taught or practised gloomy asceticism. But, like Longfellow, he would make a psalm of life. "Life is real, life is earnest." It should not be dawdled away in levity or wasted in drunkenness, therefore he paints the picture of sound and beautiful old age.

Example and Precept. Like the Master, some of Paul's closest friends were women. The art galleries of the world are filled with portraits of women painted by the world's masters, but when all these shall have faded from canvas and been lost to view, Paul's portraiture of the women he knew will still live. As long as children are born of one's children, so long shall the portrait Paul has etched in one masterly sentence inspire other grandmothers to follow the beautiful, beneficent example of Lois, grandmother of Timothy. But how different the Cretian old women! They remind one of the repulsive picture extant, of two drunken old dames wagging their heads in evil gossip while they sit over their toddy. It is a sad state of society when aged women have to be warned against the bad effects of wine, but is it not too true that drinking among a certain set of worldly, fashionable women is on the increase? Fashionable women and girls drink cocktails and wine in club houses and their example is imitated by the shop girl at the restaurants.

Honored Ones. No woman has such influence, even in the blush of youth, as in the holy calm of old age. Garfield paid his tribute to it when he turned from taking the oath of office as President of the United States to kiss the little old mother. Julia Ward Howe, truly great and blameless as a child at ninety, has set an example of "the beautiful old woman."

Home Keepers. We have no literary gem to excel king Lemuel's description of the ideal woman in Proverbs, and it is her type which Paul commends. It is good also to know that even an old bachelor like Paul distinguishes between the housekeeper and the homekeeper and in favor of the latter. Time and energy are not to be expended so much on the house and its furnishings as in the home and its inmates—the husband and children.

Shortsighted. A woman whose boy was a cigarette smoker was once invited to attend a mothers' meeting, where "How to Save the Boy" was the topic for discussion. The invitation was declined. "I must wash my lace curtains. I never neglect my housework for any outside interest," said this housekeeper. The homekeeper values a clean boy above clean curtains, and Paul would have woman bimekeepers.

In the Days of Thy Youth. "Young men likewise exhort to be sober minded." We are told that the words used in the original Greek signify soundness of mental and moral constitution, which shows itself in discreet and prudent conduct, especially self-control: the mastery of one's lowest appetites and lusts. The temptations to frivolity in youth are many, and evil is on every hand. The desire for mere pleasure; to live just for fun has plunged many into the lowest depths of degradation. At first the aim of the pleasure lover may have been innocent, or at worst only selfish, but too often a career that might have been useful is blighted.

J. F. F.'s. Twenty young couples formed a society and christened it the "Just for Fun Club." They were known as the J. F. F.'s and all went very well until the letters were interpreted "Just Forty Fools." He who makes pleasure the sole object of life is indeed a fool.

The True Teacher. Titus was a Greek convert from heathenism, probably one of the converts of Paul who affectionately styles him, "mine own son after the common faith." Paul had such confidence in him that he had intrusted him with the most difficult missions, making him the bearer of the two letters to the Corinthians. The work before Titus at Crete was not a light one, and since Paul always put the right man in the right place, we may be sure that, though young in years, Titus was both exemplary in conduct and wise in his work; but so great is the necessity that preaching and practice should conform that Paul reminds the young teacher that he must show himself a pattern of good works. "When I am a big man, I am going to sell whiskey just like you, papa," said the saloonkeeper's son. The deadly fear that his boy would pattern after him caused the father to change his vocation.

Talk or Speech. An old Indian once tried to contrast a garrulous government agent with Bishop Hare, both of whom had spoken at an Indian tribal meeting. "Him boy talk, talk," indicating the agent; then he characterized the good and wise Indian's friend, "Him man, him speech." Paul advises "Sound speech that cannot be condemned." Speech untranslated into action is mere talk. To feel warmly, talk about it and do nothing, is a waste of motive power, as if one were to fire an engine, steam up and then open the escape valve without turning a wheel. It is not enough to talk about present-day evils; high sounding resolutions are only talk, unless acted upon and lived out. The temperance cause today needs sound speech interpreted through a church in action against all the powers of evil.

The White Flower of a Blameless Life. To so live that even your worst enemy can only praise you, and that your antagonist can have no evil thing to say of you. This means a constant daily living of the gospel at home and abroad, at school and play, in the shop and in business. A good man was once told that people were slandering him. "Then I must so live that slander will fall harmless," was the rejoinder.

The Servant in the House. There was no condition so deplorable as that of the slave in Paul's day. He was classed with the brutes and his condition was worse than the brute's, yet the Apostle says that even these slaves may "adorn the doctrine of God our Savior in all things." There is no place in life so insignificant or lowly that the Christian cannot bring honor to it. There are no duties so common that their Christly performance will not ennoble them. Well has the poet said,

"Who sweeps a room as for Thy laws, Makes that and the action fine."

Quiz. 1. Who was Titus and what service did he render Paul? 2. What does the apostle desire to emphasize in this lesson? 3. To how many classes does he speak? 4. Who were the Cretians? 5. What do we know concerning Titus's later years.

Seed Thoughts. 1. God loves to put his best servants into a hard field. 2. Old age needs the adornment of all the graces. 3. The best way to attain a beautiful old age is to practice for it in youth. 4. No one is ever old who carries through life the simple heart of a child. 5. Sobriety is the cornerstone of business success. 6. The flowers of self-pleasure ripen into the passion fruit of passion. 7. That is no sermon which is not practiced at home. 8. Think before you speak, work while you speak and act after you speak. 9. There is no work so humble that it cannot be made God's calling.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

ABSTINENCE FROM EVIL.

For the time past of our life may suffice us to have wrought the will of the Gentiles, when we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings, and abominable

Wherein they think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of speaking evil of you: But the end of all things is at hand: be ye therefore sober, and

unto

And above all things have fervent among yourselves: for charity shall cover the multitude of sins. Use one to another without grudging.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS 1 PETER 4:1-8.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, We would abstain from all sinful excess. May we remember that Christ suffered for our salvation. Help us, we pray Thee, to cease from sin. For Christ's sake, Amen.

"Our march is forward ever, with weapons gleaming bright;
Our warfare is with sin and wrong; our watchword
'For the right';
And above us, beckoning ever, the cross of snowy white."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 60. Place, Rome. Person, Peter.

Scripture Setting: The Old and the New Man. Likeness to Adam, Job 31:33. Repentance and forgiveness, Luke 15:21-24. The old man made new, 1 Tim. 1:13. The first and the last Adam, 1 Cor. 15:45. The two images, 1 Cor. 15:49. Death and life, 1 Cor. 15:22. The transformation, Rom. 5:20-21. Redeemed, Rev. 7:13-14.

Life and Conduct Setting: Peter calls to mind the suffering Christ and declares: 1. That Christ's sufferings brought salvation from sin in the flesh. 2. Repentance is unto righteousness. 3. The follower of Christ should not fellowship with sin. 4. Each must render an account for sin. 5. The gospel was preached not only for repentance, but for godliness of life. 6. Watchfulness, sobriety and prayer are a part of Christian life. 7. The all-pervasive power of charity.

THE DIVIDING LINE.

Swimming Against the Stream. The Apostle Peter is writing to those early Christians who occupied a peculiarly exposed position. All around them were idolators; on every side sin and worldliness. Loyalty to principle and refusal to partake of the sinful life about them would actually mean a separation that amounted almost to isolation. It is not strange that the weaker and more timid Christians excused their compromise with sin by urging the suffering and sacrifice a more strict observance of Christ's teachings would cost them. Today we find boys who smoke because "one wants to do like the other fellows," and girls who are not outspoken in their convictions against drinking and the use of tobacco. They do not want to appear different from the other girls of their set that smile upon the gilded youths who violate the rules of good manners and decency by practicing both habits in the presence of women. Those in business adopt the questionable methods of their worldly competitors, because strict honesty might entail a financial loss. Christian men fellowship in politics with the adherents of the saloon and vote with the brewer, because to do otherwise might mean to throw away their vote and lose political influence. After all, it is not so very far from Asia Minor to America and the centuries that roll between are as a page in the calendar.

The Mind of Christ. It does mean a battle, a constant struggle. Peter acknowledges that, and he advises arming one's self for the strife. The fisherman disciple cannot use words with the artistic skill of Paul, so he tersely sums it all up in a sentence. "As Christ has suffered for us in the flesh, arm yourself likewise with the same mind." Arm yourselves; set yourselves in battle array; be ready to go into the fight. The mind of Christ is to be the Christian's panoply. Now, Christ's mind was opposed to all evil. He hated a lie and nailed it every time. He abhorred uncleanness, and lashed the hypocritical money changers. He had what the Christian most needs today—a mind well stored with Scripture so that when the hour of temptation came He could parry every thrust of the tempter with the Sword of His Holy Word; worst the enemy at every point, and say triumphantly, "Get thee behind me, Satan."

The Mission of Suffering. "He that hath suffered in the flesh hath ceased from sin." The crosses we shrink from prove sources of strength when we accept them. There is an old superstition that every time we sigh we lose a drop of blood from the heart and thus impair our strength, but the good old English poet was nearer right who wrote:

"The sigh, then, only is A gale to bring me sooner to my bliss."

In our temptations Peter tells us we are to consider the sufferings of Christ. How small the loss of social prestige or popularity, or the financial cost of standing for principle, when we compare these with Christ's suffering for us.

"If all men's tears were let Into one common sewer, sea and brine,
What were they all, compared to Thine?"

Not as Others Do. St. Peter knew well the pleasures of the world, which he sums up in a catalogue of vices. "When we walked in lasciviousness, lusts, excess of wine, revellings, banquetings and abominable idolatries." What a dark picture and how repulsive! When one takes the name of Christian the time is past for these.

The Bible or Beer? Nearly eighty years ago a young German was gloriously converted to God. Whereas he had formerly read vile books, he purchased a Bible and laid it at his place of work in the brewery owned by an uncle. It did not take long to see that a Bible was quite out of place in a brewery. Indeed, the sight of it angered the uncle, who ordered it to go. The nephew went with the Bible, finding a different employment. However, he still drank beer, until one day as he sat at the noonday lunch with his Bible and a glass of beer beside him, the incongruity of the two struck him. He gave up the beer, but kept the Bible. One by one his former pleasures were put to the Bible test and renounced, until at last he had only the Bible and became a Bible colporteur. But God so blessed the sacrifice that at his death more than a thousand men and women testified that the "Bible man" had been the instrument of their salvation.

The Friendship of the World. Peter had not become a fisher of men without learning their ways. "They think it strange that ye run not with them to the same excess of riot, speaking evil of you." With fair words the saloonkeeper weaves his web for the boys; with flattery and honeyed phrase the temptress throws her net, but when each is foiled, the poison of their venom would destroy those whom they could not deceive. His friends said of a certain statesman who had fought corruption, "We love him for the enemies he has made." The raillery, hatred and scorn of evil persons is less baneful than their praise.

The Final Account and Judgment. What are the revilings and penalties of this world compared to the "Well done, good and faithful servant" of the Master, on that great day when He shall come to judge the quick and the dead, with a reward for those "who live according to God in the Spirit?" How near that time seems to Peter, who heard the announcement of the angels at the ascension! "The end of all things is at hand." Ah! Peter spoke more truly than he knew. Though the world has stood nearly two thousand years since this message was written, its words were true. The end of all things which conflict with righteousness was at hand. A new era had come, and ever since the risen, conquering Christ was upborne to Heaven, the chains forged by error, ignorance, superstition, dead formalism and sin have been broken, and link by link, evil is disappearing. Of the nine evils which Plato declared could never be overcome, only three—intemperance, lust and greed still remain. Against this last unholy trinity, the church of Christ is marching, under the banner of the cross, and to the motto, "By this sign we conquer."

The Need of Sobriety. The Apostle has warned these early Christians against "excess of wine," but the ravage of drink is so strong that again the warning is repeated, "Be ye therefore sober and watch unto prayer," Christ comes to those who watch for his appearing, sometimes in a song, again in the voice of prayer or perhaps it is but a bird's note; but through the song, the prayer, or the simple trill, Christ has come to a sin-sick heart and made it whole. In this drink-cursed world how important it is that the Christian's example should be on the side of total abstinence.

The Mantle of Charity. Peter would have these Christians exercise charity among themselves. "For charity shall cover the multitude of sins." Do we not blame the drunkard, where we should exercise love?

The Power of Little Things. A poor drunkard lay in the gutter one hot summer day, a loathsome sight to all the passers by; his foul spew-stained face so covered with swarming flies as to appear black. In all the city no one was enough interested to seek to reclaim him, until a Christian woman passed by. The man's pitiable condition touched her tender heart. What to others was an object of laughter and scorn was to her a soul purchased with the Pearl of great price. There was so little she could do—only to throw her dainty, lace-trimmed handkerchief over the hot, blistered, foul, fly-covered face, to hide its disgrace and go on her way. An hour later the drunkard awakened and the dainty handkerchief spoke its message of tenderness and spurred the man to repentance and reformation. To that bit of linen, ten inches square, transformed into a mantle of charity, the world owes one of its greatest temperance reformers.

Quiz. 1. Who was Peter? 2. What can you say of his character? 3. Concerning his death? 4. Why were the early Christians looking for the speedy return of the Lord? 5. What chapter of the New Testament attests the superiority of charity over all the other virtues? 6. Why must there be a marked difference between the Christian and the world?

Seed Truths. 1. Inclination, custom, policy, expediency and personal advantage are oftentimes those the Christian must battle. 2. God disciplines and safeguards through suffering. 3. Your enemies are those who praise you to your face and speak evil of you behind your back. 4. By their fruits ye shall know them. 5. Watchfulness and prayer are an unfailing drink cure. 6. The mantle of charity is a garment made for universal wear.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

A NEW HEAVEN AND A NEW EARTH.

And I saw no

therein:
for the Lord God Almighty
and the Lamb are the temple of it.
And the

had no need of the neither

of the

to shine in it: for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the thereof. And the

of them
which are saved shall

of it: and the

of the earth do bring their glory
and into it.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS REV. 21:22-27. READ ALSO ISA. 60:19-22.

Prayer: Lord, We thank thee for Thy great salvation; help us to so live that we may enter Heaven and may we lead others into the Kingdom. For Thy name's sake, Amen.

"The Kingdom that is coming Shall forever more increase
Through the long, Eternal ages,
Under Christ, the Prince of Peace."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 96. Place, Isle of Patmos. Person, John.

Scripture Setting: The Holy City. Christ the ruler, Isa. 9:6-7. God shall dwell therein, Ezek. 43:7. The new Heaven and earth foretold, Isa. 65:17. Jerusalem the Holy City, Joel 3:17.

Life and Conduct Setting: The main facts to be emphasized are: 1. Earthly things are not enduring. 2. The Gospel's dispensation was the beginning of a new Heaven and earth. 3. The highest worship does not require material form. 4. Christ is indeed the Light of the world. 5. Sin and defilement have no place in the Kingdom of Christ.

THE NEW JERUSALEM.

The Seer. John had been driven from Ephesus and banished to the little island of Patmos with its steep bare cliffs and rocky coast line. Here, deprived of the society of friends, he communed with the past. And what a storied past it was, what wonderful memories it held! How reminiscence must have effaced the present, requiring a great voice on that Lord's day to rouse the aged apostle from his meditations. Turning to see that wondrous voice, the vision of the golden candlestick burst upon him, and the startled John saw his Master; no longer the simple Galilean peasant, upon whose bosom the beloved disciple had often rested, but a dazzling presence clothed and panoplied in Divine majesty and glory. What wonder that the gentle John fell as if dead at the feet of his Lord.

The Vision. John's Revelation is a record of the conflict of Christ and his saints over the powers of evil and of the struggle with sin and final victory. It is greater than any national epic or folk-lore legends. It is the story of the Conqueror of conquerors, and His Beloved, the church of the living God in the accomplishment of the most heroic undertaking since the world began, a journey through the wilderness of sin to the land of promise and the attainment of universal perfection and happiness.

The Holy City. What a void John has pictured. The great Creator who fashioned earth and sky out of nothing, has resolved them into nothing. The Seer of Patmos stands alone and looks into space; earth and heaven have passed away. John sees the Holy City, New Jerusalem, coming down out of Heaven from God, "I saw a new heaven and a new earth; for the first heaven and the first earth are passed away." Wonderful vision of the Seer of Patmos that could record the passing away of the earth with all its centuries of amassed wealth, grandeur and magnificence, in half a sentence! Would not its temptations and blandishments of honor, power and fame lose their weight if we could see their triviality demonstrated as did John?

Ezekiel had seen the New Jerusalem in his distant day. Isaiah had pictured its bulwarks and highways. It is the kingdom of this world, conquered in His name, cleansed and purified by His regenerating power and redeemed through His blood. It was ushered in by Christ's coming on earth, for He is its Chief Foundation Stone, and to His servants He has committed the establishment of the City.

The Lights of the City. The Holy City has "No need of the sun, neither of the moon to shine in it; for the glory of God did lighten it, and the Lamb is the light thereof." The unchanging and perpetual glory of the Lord is in its midst, shedding its light throughout every street and habitation. It is the light of perfect trust that enables the saints of God to "walk by faith and not by sight." It is that light which has inspired Fanny Crosby to write thousands of hymns of praise. The soul of the blind hymn writer is so filled with this Divine light that it is said she is so unaware of sightless orbs and perpetual darkness that she always speaks of seeing, and to her the world is illumined with unchanging sunlight. "I know no night," the sweet singer declared to a friend. In such a God-illumined life there are no cloudy days, no dark nights filled with a thousand phantoms of terror. Under the effulgence of the light that proceeds from the Lamb, the night of slavery has passed with all its terrors; the darkness of heathenism is being lifted, and palling blackness of sin flees before it, as the night before the rising sun.

The Inhabitants. "And the nations of them which are saved shall walk in the light of it." John is not speaking of translation to an unknown abode of bliss, but of this earth made blissful. How plainly is set forth the duty of Christian nations and the part which they shall have in the upbuilding of this new heaven and new earth, which Christ gave His life to establish. No nation has been so favored by a Divine Providence as the Republic in which we live. It was founded as a place of religious liberty; through its Sabbath laws and day of national thanksgiving and praise, with the Bible in the schools, our forefathers laid its corner stone as a Christian nation. But are we still walking in the light; is the government of today a fit superstructure for that cornerstone, or are graft and bribery, the legalized saloon, Sunday excursions, theaters and ball games, only the hay and stubble of a building to be destroyed under the flame of His righteousness? Are not these things retarding the coming of that new heaven and earth seen by the Seer of Patmos?

Its Tributaries. "The kings of the earth do bring their glory and honor into it." The Apostle Paul declared that the love of money is the root of all evil, and certainly the question of revenue has damned many a municipality, state and nation. It was impossible to convince the pro-slavery advocate that slavery so far from being a source of wealth was a financial drain upon the commonwealths that upheld it, and the nation, but its overthrow brought a greater era of prosperity than was ever known before. New England capital, New York financiers and Pennsylvania iron and steel brought their tribute to the new South, in the building of its mills and establishment of the cotton industry. It was formerly thought that prohibition destroyed trade, lessened the revenue and impoverished the community, but the history of no license towns and prohibition states has proved that civic righteousness builds up trade, and enriches town and state. Gradually we are learning what John saw in his vision; that the silver and the gold belong to God, and glory and honor and dominion are His, and all find their way to that nation which exalts Him in national and individual life, as surely as the needle finds the pole.

Gates Wide Open. The gates of the city are not to be shut by day, but will remain forever open, for there is no night there. When greed and lust and unholy ambition shall give place to the teaching of the Prince of Peace, the nations shall have no need for military defense. The most modern and costly dreadnought will be as antiquated and useless as the tub in which the child tries to row across the shallow pool. Standing armies will give place to the soldiers of the Cross and then shall be fulfilled the prophecy, "Glory to God in the highest and on earth peace, good will to men," which the angels sang at the birth of Christ, whose advent ushered in the coming of universal peace.

A White City. It is a glorified city, beau-

tified and prepared as a bride adorned for her husband. How careful the bride, be she peasant girl or princess, that her wedding apparel shall be spotless and perfect in all its details. Nothing common, nothing defiled may be in the trousseau of a bride. So all who would enter into this Jerusalem must come by the way of Holiness, over which nothing unclean is allowed to pass. Its people shall be all righteous, its daily routine of business and pleasure, holy. Such is Christ's ideal for His people everywhere. "The dwellers upon earth are not those who simply tread its soil and breathe its atmosphere," but those who are earthly in their lusts, whose lives are soiled by sin, who fear the truth and breathe out lies. Such could not live in the rarified atmosphere of the new earth. Like the rich young man who came to Christ to inquire the way of life, but found its pathway too hard, they go their way sorrowing.

The City Directory. The names of all those who enter the city are found in its directory—"In the Lamb's book of Life." God stands over that blest book of remembrance and attests every name, for we are told it is written before Him for them that fear the Lord, meditate upon His name, and obey His law. Every act—the slightest deed is recorded there, whether it be good or evil.

As God Sees. A visit to the Washington monument gives a commanding view of the capital city. The great shaft is only 546 feet high, but as one stands at the top and looks down, how small appear the city's treasures! The capitol in which laws are made for the government of a nation looks like a toy house. The United States treasury building might be a child's bank; the White House for the bare chance of entrance to which statesmen have sacrificed conviction and bartered principle, seems no longer than the Noah's ark with which one played in childhood days. If earthly glories and riches seem so small from so slight an altitude, how trivial all the worldly things for which men strive will appear to the One who looks down from the Great White Throne, before which we must bring all our desires.

Quiz. 1. Who is the Seer of Patmos supposed to have been? 2. By what name was he distinguished from the other disciples? 3. What is the legend concerning his death? 4. For whom did John record his vision? 5. What prophets of the Old Testament wrote of a Holy City? 6. How can we help to establish the City?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The earth which was created out of nothing will disappear into nothing. 2. The first glimpse of the Heaven-descending City shone in the Star above the Bethlehem manger. 3. To the worshipful soul all space is a temple; the cobblestones of every street an altar. 4. The Holy City is self-illuminating. 5. God is the only true light. 6. The cross is the weapon of peace. 7. The first heaven and earth God created alone; in the creation of the new heaven and earth we are to be co-workers with him.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS MATT. 7:13-29.

Prayer: Save us, O God, from insincerity in our profession of love for Thee and help us to bring forth the fruits of righteousness that by giving all diligence we may add to our faith virtue and to virtue knowledge and to knowledge temperance and to temperance patience and to patience godliness and to godliness brotherly kindness, so that we shall neither be barren or unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ, whose we are and whom we serve. Amen.

Amid the snares misfortune lays Unseen beneath the steps of all,
Blest is the love that seeks to raise
And stay and strengthen those who fall;
Till taught by Him who for our sake
Bore every form of life's distress,
With every passing year we make
The sum of human sorrow less.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, The words were spoken about A. D. 28. The Gospel of Matthew was written about A. D. 75. Place, The Sermon on the Mount, from which the text is taken, was spoken from a hillside near Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, The Disciples. The multitudes of plain people who heard Jesus gladly.

Scripture Setting: A sin against society, Deut. 21:20. The height of folly, Prov. 20:1. A source of poverty, Prov. 21:17. Sure to bring disaster, Isaiah 5:11; 28:1. Abhorred by Jesus, Matt. 24:49-50. 6:10; Gal. 5:21. Bible warning, Noah, Gen. 9:21; Nabal, 1 Sam. 25:36. Belshazzar, Dan. 5:1-6.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. As to the man, the drink curse blunts his moral sense so that he never sees or feels things in their true sublimity. He is always at his worst and never at his best. 2. As to the family, it means poverty, shame, evil tempers, faction, separation and hopeless unhappiness. 3. As to society, it means waste of wealth, corrupt morals, dirty politics, disease, crime and general demoralization. Drink has been a greater scourge than war, famine, and pestilence put together.

RECKONING WITH THE DRINK CURSE.

The Corrupt Tree. The drink business makes a fair profession. It is never tired of showing how much it contributes to the public purse through payment of licenses and taxes, through the vast purchases of grain from which liquor is made and by the great aggregate of wages to the people employed in the industries more or less related to the traffic.

The Debit Side of Drink. But it never reckons on the other side the claims made upon the public purse for the maintenance of police and prisons, of almshouses and asylums, all of which draw their main business from the ranks of the drunkards; it never has anything to say of the damning effect of drink upon the individual and upon society—the loss of manhood and womanhood, the disruption of family and community ties, the dissoluteness, the profligacy, the murders, all of which have their springs in strong drink.

If ever the figure of a corrupt tree could be properly applied, it would be to the drink evil. In spite of its professions of good, it is evil and only evil, and that continually. By its fruits all know what its roots must be. Therefore, every tree that bringeth not forth good fruit, let it be hewn down and cast into the fire.

The Fate of the Corrupt Tree. There has always been a drink question, and from a very early date far-seeing rulers have feared it. It is said that as far back as the eleventh century before Christ a Chinese emperor had all the grapevines uprooted; and every reader of the Old Testament knows how urgently and insistently the prophets cried out against the evil as a threat against the state. In our own land the agitation against the use of strong drink began in 1808, and in Ireland it was started in 1829, whence the movement spread rapidly into Scotland, and then to England. There are now organizations in every civilized land combating the evil, and their work received an unexpected endorsement and impetus from the governments of the nations at war, who, with one voice, though for different reasons, enacted prohibitory legislation. Manifestly, the tree is less luxuriant than it was and is showing most encouraging signs of disappearing altogether.

Making the Doom of the Tree Certain. In the United States we now have constitutional prohibition. It is hardly believable. It seems as if it were only yesterday that the Woman's Christian Temperance Union was being laughed at, that the Prohibitionists were an object of scorn, that the Anti-Saloon League was regarded as an organization of well-intentioned but impracticable cranks, and that, in general, the fight against the drink traffic was a fanatical attempt to divert the stars from their courses and to deny one of the fundamental instincts of human nature. The problem before the American people is a totally different one from that which in the past confronted them. They have now the problem, a serious and important one, of maintaining and promoting a public opinion which will make the law operative and binding and also of making their contribution to the education of other nations, so that prohibitory legislation shall become world-wide. No nation is ever safe where drunkenness is a common and venial vice; no nation where prohibition exists is safe while in common social and commercial intercourse with nations where drinking customs freely obtain.

Loyal Acceptance. There must be a loyal acceptance of legislation. The class of a famous university in this country was preparing for an anniversary two years from now. A circular letter was sent to every member of this class asking if a stock of liquor should be secured against the day of celebration. Almost uniformly the answer was: "No. Let us obey the law." That is the proper temper.

An Informed Public Opinion. There must be a steady maintenance of public opinion on the dangerous character of intoxicants. One of the most useful agents in forming public opinion against the drink evil was the law requiring scientific temperance instruction in the public schools. The first law of this kind was passed in 1883, and now nearly every State in the Union is under such legislation. In the main the law is well enforced, but watchfulness is needed to see that the teachers who have this in hand are properly trained.

A Worthy Experiment. Here is the prediction of a distinguished scientist: "If really, for once, the entire civilized race of mankind should abstain from alcohol for thirty years, so that a completely sound generation should come into existence, there would result a transformation, a raising of the whole cultural structure, or heightening of the happiness and welfare of men, which could easily be placed beside the greatest historical reformations and revolutions of which we know anything."

Keeping the Church at Its Best. The Church must also be kept at its best in the matter of temperance education. There is no way of estimating the influence upon public opinion of the instruction given on this subject in Sunday School, Young People's Meetings, and from the pulpit. The authority of the Church is still strong and effective in matters relating to the moral and spiritual life, and it is not in question that where the Church takes a positive and united stand she is yet the strongest single influence in determining social custom and habit.

Watchful Working. There must be no intermission of the watch upon the insidious campaigning of the enemy. He has unlimited resources at his command. He can buy the influence of legislators, publicists and statesmen; he can command the advocacy of skilled writers and eloquent speakers who can make the worse appear the better reasoning. Greed is not easily subdued; it is resourceful beyond any calculation and it is unscrupulous beyond any dreaming. The influence of the traffic is as near omnipotent as anything human can be. The great political parties have for years stood in awe of it.

Mr. Roosevelt and the Drink Issue. Even Mr. Roosevelt, who hated the traffic, would not commit his Progressive Party to an open rupture with it. During the wine growing crisis in France, the Government actually solicited the medical profession for a written declaration of four or five lines which would "tend to rehabilitate wine in public opinion." It is a matter of record that Germany and England were prepared to take common action against allowing poor Africa to be "the cesspool for European spirits," but they were defeated in this by the attitude of France, which made action impossible. It is not to be concluded because the United States has prohibition in its national Constitution that the liquor interests will cease their efforts at recovering the markets.

The Value of Prayer. And always one must count on the effective instrumentality of prayer. A suggestion of this kind is coming to be regarded as purely formal and not without a flavor of cant. If the Church should ever reach this view, the day of its glory is departed. Every great reform has prospered by prayer. It is by prayer that God gets into it; and until God gets into a thing it can never prosper. One has only to recall the history of temperance reform in this country to get something of the value of prayer. It was prayer more than any other one thing which brought and kept the various agencies together and which put into the movement not only a unifying but an informing and impelling spirit. An alliance with God makes any movement invincible and irresistible.

A Warning. This is from a French patriot, a member of the House of Deputies: "What do I think of alcoholism? I think it will slay us if we do not slay it. I think that drunkards are dangerous sick persons, but I think the most culpable are the manufacturers of the poison, the sellers of the poison, the state which refuses to intervene, the politicians who, knowing the evil, have not the courage to apply the remedy." We are in a position to do something about it. Our State Legislatures and our National Houses of Congress are the creatures of the popular will. If we seriously intend to have a country free from the curse of kind, we can have it.

Quiz and Study. 1. What are some of the Bible warnings against strong drink? 2. What is the earliest Bible example of drunkenness and what is its lesson? 3. Who are some of the men and women who in our own time have helped to make the world sober? 4. What did the governments of the nations at war during 1914-1918 do with respect to strong drink? 5. In what order did the states ratify the constitutional amendment for prohibition?

Practical Thoughts. 1. Give the children a chance by forbidding the use of strong drink and tobacco as long as they are subject to family control. 2. No one is in danger of drunkenness who wholly abstains. 3. He is a good patriot who for the nation's sake refrains willingly from the drink habit. 4. He is a good Christian who for the world's sake preaches total abstinence. 5. Drunkenness means poverty, wretchedness, woe and eternal death.

DR. CHARLES M. STUART.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS I CORINTHIANS 10:23-33.

Prayer: Our Father in Heaven it is in Thee that all our help lies. As Thou hast helped us to the glorious liberty which is in Christ, inspire us to aid others in their struggle for a like freedom. Forbid that we should do anything to cause a brother to stumble and grant that whether we eat or drink or whatever we do, it may all be done to the glory of God. Amen.

Help us, O Lord, Thy yoke to wear Delighting in Thy perfect will Each other's burdens learn to bear
And thus Thy law of love fulfill.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time and Place. The First Epistle to the Corinthians was written by Paul in the early spring of A. D. 56 just before he left Ephesus for Troas in the course of his kind missionary tour (Acts, 19). Corinth was the capital of Roman Greece a wealthy commercial center and the home of a restless superficial intellectualism. Persons, Paul, at this time nearing his sixtieth year. The Corinthians an alert, but unstable people welcoming the gospel, but reluctant to give up heathen practice.

Scripture Setting: Paul Visits Corinth, Acts, 18:1-17. The Vices of Corinth, 1 Cor. 5:1-12. Liberality of the Corinthian Church, 2 Cor. 9:1-15. Christ's Law of Self Denial, Matt. 5:30; 19:21-28. Crucifixion of Self, Acts, 17:20-27. The Reward of Self Denial, Mark, 10:29-30; 1 Pet. 4:12-19; Rev. 7:9-17.

Life and Conduct Setting: The Epistle sets forth, 1. The Christian is never quite free from fight against sin. 2. Sin makes its attack under many guises. 3. Sometimes the flesh asserts itself. 4. Sometimes pride of mind betrays us. 5. Sometimes religious doubt overcomes us. 6. But the remedy for all is fellowship with Jesus and a loving concern for all men's good.

A TEST OF BROTHERLY LOVE.

Raising the Question. Professor Marcus Dods in his admirable commentary on this First Epistle to the Corinthians tells the story thus: Fancy yourself at a Corinthian dinner table; the host is a heathen, three of the guests are Christians. The meal is being served. It is observed that some of the food offered is part of the sheep or ox offered that morning in sacrifice to an idol. Different views are taken at once. The heathen guests raise no question whatever. The Christian guests are divided. One thinks that to eat food which has been offered to idols is wrong; to him it is an endorsement of idolatry. The other two regard the whole issue as indifferent. One, however, wants to help the man whose conscience is sensitive about it and stands by him in declining to eat. The second sees no reason why he should have his liberty restricted by what he considers the silly scruples of a weak brother, so he indulges. Not, "Who is right," but "Who is Christian?" is the question. And it is this question thus raised that Paul tries to answer.

The Test of Character. It is just upon these matters which are really morally indifferent that a man has a chance to display the character of his religion. Strictly speaking dancing, theatre going, card playing are not immoral. But with some, perhaps many people, they are sources of temptation to immorality. The Christians under the law of liberty might indulge, under the higher law of love he will refrain.

Answering the Question. The question was really a serious one in Corinth. The Christian converts, in numerous instances, were taken from the pagan community. According to the universal custom "every meal was in a manner dedicated to the household gods by laying some portion of it on the family altar." More than that, on the occasion of any family celebration offerings were made in the temple and, later, the reserved portions were served at the feast given by the worshiper to friends and invited guests. Still further, on the occasion of public or national celebrations the same custom was observed. The Christian was in this dilemma. By eating he seemed to be sanctioning idol worship; by refusing to eat he was separating himself from his family, his friends, his state. In many instances the question was one of life or death.

Diana or Christ. There is a familiar picture of "Diana or Christ" in which a young Christian convert is being put to the test by officers of the government. Let her but offer a pinch of dust as incense to Diana and she lives; let her refuse and she dies. Pliny in a famous letter to Trojan comments upon the stubbornness of the Christians who would rather die than worship the statue of the Emperor.

The Law of Liberty. The religion of Jesus says Paul is not a question of meat at all. In this was one of the things which distinguished it from the religion of Moses which forbade the eating of meat offered in heathen sacrifice. "Instances are on record of men dying cheerfully rather than suffer such contamination." The case of Daniel and his friends illustrate this prejudice. Paul is not afraid to bring forward the law of liberty. "In regard to the question of eating the meat of animals killed in idolatrous sacrifices" he says, "We enlightened Christians know that such meat cannot defile us. Idols have no real power to defile meat." It is time this question had been before the council at Jerusalem and the council had decided to the contrary. The decision expressly stipulated that converts from among the Gentiles should abstain from things polluted by connection with idolatry. Paul, in the present instance, reviews the whole case and decides in favor of the larger liberty. But only that he may bring greater prominence.

The Law of Love. For, he says, as long as we are bound up in each other we cannot live with respect to ourselves alone. Our duty to others is quite as imperative as our individual rights. It is an impious thing to give thanks to God for a right to indulge when such indulgence works harm to one's neighbor. "When," he says in effect, "when you so use your liberty, in itself allowable, as to make it a means of moral destruction to the weak Christian you do him a great moral injury and violate the law of Christ." Then comes his own noble declaration of loyalty: "If what I eat causes my brother to fall, never again to the end of my days will I touch any kind of animal food for fear I should cause my brother to fall." This is in exact harmony with the saying of Jesus: "Whoever shall occasion the fall of one of these little ones who believes in me, it would be better for him to have a millstone hung around his neck and to be drowned in the depths of the sea."

A Personal Testimony. I, as a Christian man and knowing that the earth and its fullness are the Lord's, may feel at perfect liberty to drink wine. I may feel quite convinced in my own mind that morally I am not one whit the worse for doing so. But I cannot determine whether I am to indulge myself or not without considering the effect my conduct will have on others. There may be among my friends some who know that their temptation lies that way and whose conscience bids them altogether refrain. If by my example such persons are encouraged to silence the voice of their own conscience then I incur the incalculable guilt of helping to destroy a brother for whom Christ died.

PROFESSOR MARCUS DODS.

The Limitations. This law of love was recognized by Epictetus the pagan philosopher who when asked how any one could eat so as to please God, answered, "By eating justly, temperately and thankfully." No one could fulfill this obligation without thinking of the effect of his conduct on others. But must the weak Christian brother always and in everything be the rule of my life? By no means. The true Christian will have no serious difficulty in drawing the line where his duty ends and the other begins. His main difficulty will be in exercising the law of love to the extent he might and, therefore, ought.

Quiz and Study. 1. Find out all you can about the early church in Corinth. Were the "saints" perfect then? 2. What were some of the temptations with which they struggled. 3. What was the difficulty about eating meat offered to idols? 4. Why should we deny ourselves to save another? 5. Are we to forego everything for the sake of another? 6. When does it become the duty of another to deny himself for our sake? 7. What was Christ's view on this subject?

Practical Thoughts. 1. Make the will of God your rule of life. 2. Eating harmful food is not eating to the glory of God. Drinking harmful beverages is not drinking to the glory of God. 4. Playing harmful games is not playing to the glory of God. 5. Practicing dishonesty in business is not doing business to the glory of God. 6. Consideration for others is a religious duty. 7. Abstaining from forms of amusement innocent in themselves and for us, but dangerous for others is both a duty and a privilege. 8. God is not unmindful of our struggles; He that keepeth us never slumbers nor sleeps.

DR. CHARLES M. STUART.

N. B.—44 pages are here added to account for the full page half-tone engravings and descriptions of same; also little biographies of old masters and pages in Old Testament of this volume not counted in the regular folios making a total of 700 pages.

BOOK TWO

THE BIBLE
NEW TESTAMENT

THE

ALPHABET

BOOKS OF THE

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

TABLE OF CONTENTS

NEW TESTAMENT

|                                   | PAGE |
|-----------------------------------|------|
| A Wonderful Book.....             | 3    |
| The Gospels.....                  | 4    |
| The Acts of the Apostles.....     | 5    |
| The Pauline Epistles.....         | 6    |
| The General Epistles.....         | 7    |
| The Life of Our Blessed Lord..... | 7    |
| Special Page—The Gospel.....      | 10   |

FIRST DIVISION—THE GOSPELS 13-348

THIRTY YEARS OF PREPARATION

Time: 5 B. C. to A. D. 26

Places: Bethlehem, Jerusalem, Egypt, Nazareth

|                                                            |       |
|------------------------------------------------------------|-------|
| Description of Doré's "Christ Leaving the Praetorium"..... | 13    |
| The Forerunner of Christ.....Luke 1:5-23 .....             | 13-15 |
| The Birth of Jesus.....Luke 2:1-20.....                    | 16-18 |
| Simeon and Jesus.....Luke 2:22-40.....                     | 19-21 |
| Visit of the Wise Men.....Matt. 2:1-12.....                | 22-24 |
| The Flight Into Egypt.....Matt. 2:13-18.....               | 25-27 |
| Description of Ploekhorst's "Flight Into Egypt" .....      | 26    |
| Return to Nazareth.....Matt. 2:19-23.....                  | 28-30 |
| The Boy Jesus.....Luke 2:40-52.....                        | 31-33 |
| Description of Hofmann's "Christ Among the Doctors".....   | 33    |
| Preaching of John the Baptist,....Luke 3:7-18.....         | 34-36 |

THE YEAR OF OBSCURITY

Time: A. D. 26 to A. D. 27

Places: Wilderness of Judea, Bethany beyond Jordan, Cana, Sychar, Jerusalem, Judea

|                                                                             |       |
|-----------------------------------------------------------------------------|-------|
| Baptism of Jesus.....Matt. 3:13-17.....                                     | 37-39 |
| The Temptation of Jesus.....Matt. 4:1-11.....                               | 40-42 |
| Description of Ploekhorst's "Christ Taking Leave of His Mother".....        | 43    |
| Jesus Begins His Ministry.....Matt. 4:12-25.....                            | 43-44 |
| Jesus and John.....John 1:29-37.....                                        | 45-47 |
| The First Miracle.....John 2:1-10.....                                      | 48-50 |
| Cleansing the Temple.....John 2:13-25.....                                  | 51-53 |
| Description of Kirchbach's "Christ Casting Out the MoneyChangers" ..... | 53    |
| Jesus and Nicodemus.....John 3:1-21.....                                    | 54-56 |
| Jesus at Jacob's Well.....John 4:5-14.....                                  | 57-59 |

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

THE YEAR OF POPULARITY

Time: A. D. 28 to A. D. 29

Places: Capernaum, Galilee, Jerusalem, Nain, Gadara, Nazareth

|                                                              | PAGE    |
|--------------------------------------------------------------|---------|
| Sowing and Reaping.....John 4:35-42.....                     | 60-62   |
| The Nobleman's Son Healed.....John 4:43-54.....              | 63-65   |
| Jesus Rejected at Nazareth.....Luke 4:16-30.....             | 66-68   |
| The Draught of Fishes.....Luke 5:1-11.....                   | 69-71   |
| A Sabbath in the Life of Jesus.....Mark 1:21-34.....         | 72-74   |
| The Leper Healed.....Mark 1:35-45.....                       | 75-77   |
| Jesus' Power to Forgive.....Mark 2:1-12.....                 | 77-80   |
| Jesus at Bethesda.....John 5:1-15.....                       | 81-83   |
| Jesus and the Sabbath.....Matt. 12:1-18.....                 | 84-86   |
| The Beatitudes.....Matt. 5:1-12.....                         | 87-89   |
| Love Your Enemies.....Matt. 5:42-48.....                     | 90-92   |
| How to Pray.....Matt. 6:5-15.....                            | 93-95   |
| Our Father's Care.....Matt. 6:24-34.....                     | 96-98   |
| The Golden Rule.....Matt. 7:7-12.....                        | 99-101  |
| The Two Foundations.....Luke 6:46-49.....                    | 102-104 |
| The Centurion's Faith.....Luke 7:1-10.....                   | 105-107 |
| The Widow of Nain.....Luke 7:11-16.....                      | 108-110 |
| Jesus and John the Baptist.....Luke 7:18-35.....             | 111-113 |
| Warning and Invitation.....Matt. 11:20-30.....               | 114-116 |
| The Sinner's Friend.....Luke 7:36-50.....                    | 117-119 |
| Growing Hatred to Jesus.....Matt. 12:38-45.....              | 120-122 |
| The Parable of the Sower.....Matt. 13:3-8, 18-24.....        | 123-125 |
| Pictures of the Kingdom.....Matt. 13:44-50.....              | 126-128 |
| The Parable of the Tares.....Matt. 13:24-30.....             | 129-131 |
| Christ Stilling the Tempest.....Mark 4:35-41.....            | 132-134 |
| The Fierce Demoniac.....Mark 5:1-20.....                     | 135-137 |
| What the Bible Teaches About Work. Mark 6:13; John 5:17..... | 138-139 |
| The Power of Faith.....Matt. 9:18-25.....                    | 140-142 |
| The Twelve Sent Forth.....Matt. 10.....                      | 143-145 |

THE YEAR OF OPPOSITION

Time: A. D. 29 to A. D. 30

Places: Capernaum, Tyre and Sidon, Decapolis, Caesarea, Philippi, Mt. Hermon, Galilee, Jerusalem, Eastern Bethsaida

|                                                         |         |
|---------------------------------------------------------|---------|
| The Five Thousand Fed.....John 6:3-13.....              | 146-148 |
| Jesus Walking on the Sea.....Matt. 14:22-32.....        | 149-151 |
| Description of Ploekhorst's "Christ and St. Peter"..... | 151     |
| Jesus, the Bread of Life.....John 6:22-51.....          | 152-154 |

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

|                                                                | PAGE                            |
|----------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------------|
| The Gentile Woman's Faith.....                                 | Mark 7:24-30.....155-157        |
| Seeing and Confessing Christ.....                              | Mark 8:22-26.....158-160        |
| Peter's Great Confession.....                                  | Matt. 16:13-20.....161-163      |
| The Cross Foretold.....                                        | Matt. 16:21-28.....164-166      |
| The Transfiguration.....                                       | Matt. 17:1-9.....167-169        |
| Jesus and the Children.....                                    | Matt. 18:1-7, 10-14.....170-172 |
| The Duty of Forgiveness.....                                   | Matt. 18:21-35.....173-175      |
| Jesus at the Feast.....                                        | John 7:37-53, 8:12.....176-178  |
| The Man Born Blind.....                                        | John 9:1-41.....179-181         |
| Jesus the Good Shepherd.....                                   | John 10:1-16.....182-184        |
| The Mission of the Seventy.....                                | Luke 10:1-12, 17-20.....185-187 |
| Description of Ploekhorst's "Good Samaritan" .....             | 188                             |
| The Good Samaritan.....                                        | Luke 10:25-37.....188-191       |
| Jesus Among Friends and Foes.....                              | 192-193                         |
| The Rich Man's Folly.....                                      | Luke 12:13-21.....194-196       |
| Lawful Work on the Sabbath.....                                | Luke 13:10-17.....197-199       |
| Parable of the Great Supper.....                               | Luke 14:15-24.....200-202       |
| Lost and Found.....                                            | Luke 15:3-10.....203-205        |
| The Prodigal Son.....                                          | Luke 15:11-32.....206-208       |
| The Rich Man and Lazarus.....                                  | Luke 16:19-31.....209-211       |
| The Raising of Lazarus.....                                    | John 11:30-44.....212-214       |
| The Ten Lepers.....                                            | Luke 17:11-19.....215-217       |
| The Pharisee and the Publican.....                             | Luke 18:9-14.....218-220        |
| Jesus and the Little Ones.....                                 | Mark 10:13-16.....221-223       |
| Description of Hofmann's "Christ and the Rich Young Ruler".... | 223                             |
| The Rich Young Ruler.....                                      | Mark 10:17-22.....224-226       |
| The Laborers in the Vineyard.....                              | Matt. 20:1-16.....227-229       |
| The Last Journey to Jerusalem.....                             | Matt. 20:17-28.....230-232      |
| Blind Bartimæus.....                                           | Mark 10:46-52.....233-235       |
| Zacchæus the Publican.....                                     | Luke 19:1-10.....236-238        |

PASSION WEEK

Time: Saturday, April 1, to Friday, April 7, A. D. 30

Places: Bethany, Jerusalem, Bethphage, Gethsemane, Calvary

|                                                               |                           |
|---------------------------------------------------------------|---------------------------|
| The Anointing at Bethany.....                                 | Mark 14:3-11.....239-241  |
| The Triumphal Entry.....                                      | Matt. 21:1-16.....242-244 |
| Description of Hofmann's "Christ's Entry into Jerusalem"..... | 243                       |
| The Fig Tree Cursed.....                                      | Mark 11:12-19.....245-247 |
| The Fig Tree Withered.....                                    | Mark 11:20-28.....248-250 |
| The Parable of the Vineyard.....                              | Luke 20:9-19.....251-253  |
| The Parable of the Marriage Feast.....                        | Matt. 22:1-14.....254-256 |
| The Two Great Commandments.....                               | Mark 12:28-34.....257-259 |
| The Widow's Mite.....                                         | Mark 12:41-44.....260-262 |
| The Gentiles Seeking Jesus.....                               | John 12:20-36.....263-265 |

TABLE OF CONTENTS

|                                                         | PAGE    |
|---------------------------------------------------------|---------|
| The Destruction of the Temple Fore-                     |         |
| told..... Mark 13:1-20.....                             | 266-268 |
| The Command to Watch..... Mark 13:33-37.....            | 269-271 |
| The Ten Virgins..... Matt. 25:1-13.....                 | 272-274 |
| The Judgment..... Matt. 25:31-46.....                   | 275-277 |
| The Passover..... Mark 14:12-16.....                    | 278-280 |
| Washing the Disciples' Feet..... John 13:2-16.....      | 281-283 |
| Description of da Vinci's "The Last Supper".....        | 283     |
| The Lord's Supper..... Matt. 26:21-30.....              | 284-286 |
| Many Mansions..... John 14:1-6.....                     | 287-289 |
| The Vine and the Branches..... John 15:1-8.....         | 290-292 |
| The Work of the Spirit..... John 16:5-14.....           | 293-295 |
| Jesus Interceding..... John 17:11-26.....               | 296-298 |
| Jesus in Gethsemane..... Matt. 26:36-45.....            | 299-301 |
| Description of Hofmann's "Christ in Gethsemane".....    | 300     |
| Jesus Betrayed..... Mark 14:43-50.....                  | 302-304 |
| Description of Hofmann's "Christ Taken Captive".....    | 303     |
| Jesus Before the Council..... Mark 14:53, 55-65.....    | 305-307 |
| Peter's Denial..... Mark 14:54, 66-72.....              | 308-310 |
| Description of West's "Christ Rejected".....            | 309     |
| Jesus Before Pilate..... { John 18:28-31.....           | 311-313 |
| ..... { Matt. 27:11-14                                  |         |
| ..... { Luke 23:13-15                                   |         |
| ..... { Matt. 27:19, 20, 24, 26                         |         |
| Description of Munkacsy's "Christ Before Pilate".....   | 312     |
| Description of Ciseri's "Ecce Homo".....                | 314     |
| Jesus Mocked..... Matt. 27:26-31.....                   | 314-316 |
| Description of Thiersch's "Bearing the Cross".....      | 317     |
| Jesus Crucified..... { John 19:17-19, 23, 24.....       | 317-320 |
| ..... { Luke 23:44-49                                   |         |
| ..... { John 19:31-34                                   |         |
| Description of Munkacsy's "The Crucifixion".....        | 319     |
| The Burial of Jesus..... Matt. 27:57-66.....            | 321-323 |
| Description of Ciseri's "Christ Borne to the Tomb"..... | 322     |

THE FORTY DAYS

Time: Sunday, April 9, to May 18, A. D. 30

Places: Jerusalem, Emmaus, Sea of Tiberius, Galilee, Bethany

|                                                        |         |
|--------------------------------------------------------|---------|
| Jesus Risen..... Matt. 28:1-15.....                    | 324-326 |
| Description of Thompson's "The First Easter Dawn"..... | 325     |
| Jesus and Mary..... John 20:11-16.....                 | 327-329 |
| The Walk to Emmaus..... Luke 24:13-35.....             | 330-332 |
| Jesus Appears to the Apostles..... John 20:19-23.....  | 333-335 |
| Jesus and Thomas..... John 20:24-31.....               | 336-338 |

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

|                                | PAGE                       |
|--------------------------------|----------------------------|
| Jesus and Peter.....           | John 21:1-19.....339-341   |
| The Great Commission.....      | Matt. 28:16-20.....342-344 |
| Jesus Ascends into Heaven..... | Luke 24:50-53.....345-347  |

SECOND DIVISION—THE ACTS OF THE APOSTLES 349-462

|                                        |                                    |
|----------------------------------------|------------------------------------|
| The Day of Pentecost.....              | Acts 2:1-36.....351-353            |
| The Early Christian Church.....        | Acts 2:37-47.....354-356           |
| The Lame Man Healed.....               | Acts 3:1-16.....357-359            |
| Peter and John Before the Council..... | Acts 4:1-31.....360-362            |
| Ananias and Sapphira.....              | Acts 5:1-11.....363-365            |
| Peter and John in Prison.....          | Acts 5:12-42.....366-368           |
| The Seven Chosen.....                  | Acts 6:1-7.....369-371             |
| The First Christian Martyr.....        | Acts 7:54-60; 8:1-2.....372-374    |
| The Disciples Scattered.....           | Acts 8:1-25.....375-377            |
| Philip and the Ethiopian.....          | Acts 8:26-40.....378-380           |
| Saul of Tarsus Converted.....          | Acts 9:1-20.....381-383            |
| Saul's Early Ministry.....             | Acts 9:20-32.....384-386           |
| Peter Working Miracles.....            | Acts 9:31-44.....387-389           |
| Peter's Vision.....                    | Acts 10:1-20.....390-392           |
| Peter and Cornelius.....               | Acts 10:21-48.....393-395          |
| The Spread of the Gospel.....          | Acts 11:1-30.....396-398           |
| Peter Delivered from Prison.....       | Acts 12:1-25.....399-401           |
| The First Christian Missionaries.....  | Acts 15:36-41; 16:1-15.....402-404 |
| Paul at Antioch.....                   | Acts 13:13-52.....405-407          |
| Paul at Lystra.....                    | Acts 14:1-28.....408-410           |
| The Conference at Jerusalem.....       | Acts 15:1-35.....411-413           |
| First European Convert.....            | Acts 15:36-41; 16:1-15.....414-416 |
| Paul and Silas in Prison.....          | Acts 16:16-40.....417-419          |
| Thessalonians and Bereans.....         | Acts 17:1-15.....420-422           |
| Paul at Athens.....                    | Acts 17:15-34.....423-425          |
| Paul at Corinth.....                   | Acts 18:1-17.....426-428           |
| Paul at Ephesus.....                   | Acts 18:18-28; 19:1-20.....429-431 |
| The Riot at Ephesus.....               | Acts 19:21-41.....432-434          |
| Paul's Farewell to Ephesus.....        | Acts 20:1-38.....435-437           |
| Paul at Jerusalem.....                 | Acts 21:1-36.....438-440           |
| Paul's Defence.....                    | Acts 21:37-40; 22:1-23.....441-443 |
| Paul Before the Council.....           | Acts 23:1-11.....444-446           |
| The Plot Against Paul.....             | Acts 23:12-35.....447-449          |
| Paul Before Felix.....                 | Acts 24:1-27.....450-452           |
| Paul Before Agrippa.....               | Acts 25 and 26.....453-455         |
| Paul Shipwrecked.....                  | Acts 27, and 28:1-6.....456-459    |
| Paul at Rome.....                      | Acts 28:7-31.....460-462           |

TABLE OF CONTENTS

THIRD DIVISION—THE EPISTLES AND REVELATION 463-575

|                                                               | PAGE                        |
|---------------------------------------------------------------|-----------------------------|
| Description of Long's "Christ or Diana" .....                 | 465                         |
| Peace with God.....Romans 5:1-15 .....                        | 465-467                     |
| Life or Death.....Romans 6:12-23 .....                        | 468-470                     |
| The Life-giving Spirit.....Romans 8:1-18 .....                | 471-473                     |
| The Security of Believers.....Romans 8:28-39 .....            | 474-476                     |
| Faith and Confession.....Romans 10:1-13 .....                 | 477-479                     |
| Christian Living .....                                        | Romans 12:1-21 .....        |
| Making the Nation Christian.....Rom. 13:1-10; Prov. 14:34.... | 483-484                     |
| The Temple of God.....1 Cor. 3:11-17.....                     | 485-487                     |
| The Christian Working With Others.1 Cor. 12:15-27.....        | 488-489                     |
| Christian Love.....1 Cor. 13.....                             | 490-492                     |
| The Resurrection .....                                        | 1 Cor. 15:12-26, 50-58..... |
| Christian Liberty .....                                       | Gal. 4:1-16.....            |
| Reaping the Harvest.....Gal. 6:1-10.....                      | 499-501                     |
| Saved by Grace.....Eph. 2:1-10.....                           | 502-504                     |
| The Christian Armour.....Eph. 6:10-20.....                    | 505-507                     |
| Paul Writes to a Friend.....Phil. 1:8-21.....                 | 508-509                     |
| Christ Our Example.....Phil. 2:1-13 .....                     | 510-512                     |
| Christian Contentment .....                                   | Phil. 4:1-13.....           |
| The Christian Home.....Col. 3:12-25 .....                     | 516-518                     |
| The Coming of the Lord.....1 Thess. 4:13-18.....              | 519-521                     |
| The Faithful Saying .....                                     | 1 Tim. 1:15-20; 2:1-6.....  |
| The Deceitfulness of Riches.....1 Tim. 6:6-12, 17-19.....     | 525-527                     |
| The Inspired Word.....2 Tim. 3:14-17; 4:1-5.....              | 528-530                     |
| Paul's Last Words.....2 Tim. 4:5-18.....                      | 531-533                     |
| Our Great High Priest.....Heb. 4:14-16; 5:1-6.....            | 534-536                     |
| The Sanctuary .....                                           | Heb. 9:1-12 .....           |
| The Sacrifice .....                                           | Heb. 9:11-14, 24-28.....    |
| The Triumphs of Faith.....Heb. 11:1-10 .....                  | 543-545                     |
| Faith and Works.....Jas. 2:14-26.....                         | 546-548                     |
| The Sins of the Tongue.....Jas. 3:1-18.....                   | 549-551                     |
| The Perfect Pattern.....1 Peter 2:19-25.....                  | 552-554                     |
| Christian Progress.....2 Peter 1:1-11.....                    | 555-557                     |
| Walking in the Light.....1 John 1:5-2:6.....                  | 558-560                     |
| Perfect Love .....                                            | 1 John 4:7-16.....          |
| The Glorified Saviour.....Rev. 1:9-20 .....                   | 564-566                     |
| The Message to the Churches.....Rev. 2 and 3.....             | 567-569                     |
| The Saints in Heaven.....Rev. 7:9-17 .....                    | 570-572                     |
| The Great Invitation.....Rev. 22:8-21 .....                   | 573-575                     |

TABLE OF CONTENTS.

LITTLE BIOGRAPHIES OF GREAT ARTISTS

NEW TESTAMENT

|                                             | PAGE |
|---------------------------------------------|------|
| Ciseri, Antonio.....                        | 314  |
| da Vinci, Leonardo.....                     | 284  |
| Hofmann, Heinrich.....                      | 69   |
| Kirchbach, Frank.....                       | 53   |
| Long, Edwin.....                            | 465  |
| Munkacsy, Mihaly de.....                    | 312  |
| Plockhorst, Bernard.....                    | 26   |
| Raphael, Sanzio da Urbino.....              | 399  |
| Rembrandt (list of Biblical paintings)..... | 345  |
| Schonherr, Carl A.....                      | 81   |
| Thiersch, Ludwig.....                       | 317  |
| Thompson, Jerome J.....                     | 326  |
| West, Benjamin.....                         | 310  |
| Zimmerman, Ernst.....                       | 72   |

FULL PAGE ILLUSTRATIONS

|                                            | PAGE                  |
|--------------------------------------------|-----------------------|
| Christ Leaving the Praetorium.....         | Doré 13        |
| The Flight Into Egypt.....                 | Plockhorst 26  |
| Christ Among the Doctors.....              | Hofmann 33     |
| Christ Taking Leave of His Mother.....     | Plockhorst 43  |
| Christ Casting Out the Money Changers..... | Kirchbach 53   |
| Christ and the Fishermen.....              | Zimmerman 72   |
| Christ and St. Peter.....                  | Plockhorst 151 |
| The Good Samaritan.....                    | Plockhorst 188 |
| Christ and the Rich Young Ruler.....       | Hofmann 224    |
| Christ's Entry Into Jerusalem.....         | Hofmann 244    |
| The Last Supper.....                       | da Vinci 284   |
| Christ in Gethsemane.....                  | Hofmann 301    |
| Christ Taken Captive.....                  | Hofmann 304    |
| Christ Rejected .....                      | West 310       |
| Christ Before Pilate.....                  | Munkacsy 312   |
| Ecce Homo.....                             | Ciseri 395     |
| Bearing the Cross.....                     | Thiersch 317   |
| The Crucifixion.....                       | Munkacsy 319   |
| Christ Borne to the Tomb.....              | Ciseri 323     |
| The First Easter Dawn.....                 | Thompson 326   |
| Christ or Diana.....                       | Long 465       |

Book of Books

Inspired of God

Beautiful in Expression

Light of Life

Enduring Eternally

The Bible is composed of 6 books written by about 3 authors in a period of time covering about 1 600 years.

When the temple of Solomon was built, the stone was hewn in the quarries, the timber was cut in the forests of Lebanon, the beams and the pillars, the doors and the hangings, the beautiful carved work overlaid with gold was all prepared before it was brought to the temple site.

When we read that there were 183,000 people employed in the work; that it took seven years to complete it; and that every part fit so perfectly that the whole immense structure was erected without the sound of axe, hammer or any tool of iron, we must conclude that some great master planned every detail of that magnificent building.

We go into a great factory and into one department where we see pieces of wood beautifully carved and paneled; into another where they are painted and polished; into others where pipes great and small are being toned and tuned, where banks of ivory keys are being fitted and finished, where great bellows are being built, where innumerable little pulleys and pins and levers are being turned and trimmed, and we say: What can come out of all this confusion?

But one day, in a great cathedral far across the continent, some workmen begin to put the pieces together till their work is done, when a stranger we had not seen till then sits down before it. He touches a button and sweeps the keys, and forth from the great organ there bursts in thunderous tones such music as we had never heard before, till the tears fall from our eyes and the mighty cathedral trembles with the volume of melodious sound; then we recognize the master in whose mind the great organ was conceived.

We take up a book. It is called the Bible. We look for the author's name, and learn that probably not less than thirty-six authors contributed to it, whose lives covered a period of about 1,600 years. They wrote in three different continents and many countries; in three different languages, and from every possible human standpoint. Among the authors were kings and countrymen, rich and poor, learned and unlearned. What confusion and contradiction must be here!

But let us examine it before we pass judgment. The first chapter takes us back beyond the beginning of time; the last chapter draws aside the firmament of the future and reveals eternity and the destiny of man.

Between these two every known form of literature is found: the oldest history, the sublimest poetry, the sweetest songs, the most unanswerable logic and captivating romance, the most marvelous biography, the foundation principles of all good law and government, the loftiest eloquence, the profoundest philosophy and the most inimitable stories and parables.

From its pages the thunders of Sinai roll, and after fifteen hundred years the echo resounds in the song of the angels as they herald the advent of a promised Child. Love declared to be the fulfilling of the Law.

The Book has one great plan and one supreme purpose—the salvation of man. One all-absorbing theme—the Messiah. One chief center—the cross. One ultimate end—the glory of God.

Our conclusion is: The Bible is one Book; it has one Author. It is the inspired Word of God.

Romans. Sets forth very clearly the sinfulness of the human race, the doctrine of salvation through faith in Christ, and duties and privileges of the Christians. Written from Corinth, A. D. 58.

First and Second Corinthians. Are a plea for right living, and a reproof of the evils in the Church in that day. Various doctrines are defined, chief among them being the Lord's Supper and the Resurrection. Paul also vindicates his former teaching in Corinth.

The first Epistle was written from Ephesus about A. D. 57. The second Epistle was written from Macedonia later the same year.

Galatians. Called the "Magna Charta of Christian Liberty." It is a strong treatise on the doctrine of justification by faith in Jesus Christ, and gives some detail of Paul's life up to this time.

Written while on his third missionary journey, probably at the close of A. D. 57.

Ephesians. Describes the Ideal Church. Written during Paul's first imprisonment at Rome, probably A. D. 62.

Philippians. The Way of the Ideal Christian. It expresses Paul's determination to be such. The only one of his letters to the churches that contains no word of rebuke.

Written from his prison at Rome, A. D. 62 or 63.

Colossians. Exalts the Ideal Saviour, while it warns against false teachings.

Written about the same time as, and is similar to, the Epistle to the Ephesians.

First and Second Thessalonians. The coming of Christ and the glories of the Resurrection are the most important themes treated.

These are the earliest of Paul's writings, and were written probably from Corinth A. D. 52 or 53.

First and Second Timothy and Titus. Are aptly called "The Pastoral Epistles," and principally give directions about the duties and character of a pastor.

The first Epistle to Timothy was probably written from Macedonia, A. D. 65.

The second Epistle to Timothy was written from Rome during Paul's second imprisonment, about A. D. 67 or 68, and shortly before his martyrdom.

The Epistle to Titus was probably written about the same time as the First Epistle to Timothy.

Philemon. The Personal Epistle. Philemon had been converted by Paul. Onesimus, his slave, had probably robbed him and fled to Rome, where he too was converted by Paul. Paul's letter to Philemon entreats him to forgive and receive Onesimus as a brother.

Written at Rome, A. D. 63 or 64.

Hebrews. Shows the superiority of the Christian dispensation over the Jewish as Christ is superior to Moses. Although the thoughts were evidently Paul's, the author, place and date of writing are uncertain.

ST. PAUL had written to seven churches. Here we have seven Epistles without address to any particular church, hence the name "General."

James. An Epistle of Faith addressed to Jewish Christians. "Deeds, not words," is the theme. It is the moral teacher of the New Testament.

Author. Undoubtedly James, the brother of our Lord.

Place. Jerusalem. The date of writing is uncertain, but not later than A. D. 63.

First and Second Peter. Two Epistles of Hope. They describe the benefits of trials, a holy life, various duties, punishment of the wicked, and the second coming of Christ.

Date and place of writing uncertain, though they were probably both written at Rome by Peter.

First, Second and Third John. Three Epistles of Love.

The First: A doctrinal discourse to the Gentiles on the person of Christ, and vital relation to Him as necessary to a holy life.

The Second: To an elect lady and her children. An exhortation to love, faith and godliness.

The Third: To Gaius, commending him for his hospitality and piety.

The author—John, the beloved disciple.

Place—Ephesus.

Date—A. D. 85-95.

Jude. Warns against false teachers and the certainty of judgment, and the punishment of the wicked.

Author, Jude, a brother of James and of our Lord.

Place and date uncertain, though probably Jerusalem, A. D. 65 or 66.

Revelation. The Prophetical Book of the New Testament. This book was written by John in his old age, and gives us the story of the visions that God gave him on the island of Patmos, where he was in exile. It deals largely with that heavenly home to which all of God's children will at last come.

STORY OF THE LIFE OF OUR BLESSED LORD.

THE life of our blessed Lord may be considered in six divisions, for the sake of clearness. Of course in the space allowed us, we can only indicate its barest outlines.

First: The Angelic Prelude. This took place on the plains of Bethlehem. Joseph and Mary had gone to that town from Galilee, and there the Babe Jesus was born. To the shepherds on Bethlehem's plain, the angel of the Lord appeared, and announced the birth of Him who was to be the Saviour of the world. Suddenly there was with this angel a multitude of the Heavenly host, who united in the first angelic song that this world has ever heard, a song of great joy to all people. This was followed by the visit of the shepherds to the stable, and their adoration of Him of whom the angels sang. In turn this was followed by the visit of the wise men from the East, who brought gifts, and did reverence to the Child. Then comes the flight into Egypt and the return to Nazareth. This is all that we are told about the childhood of this wonderful Babe, except that He grew in stature and in favor with God and man, and that at about twelve years of age He visited Jerusalem with Mary and Joseph.

The Thirty Years of Silence. In Nazareth these years were spent. As Jesus' reputed father was a carpenter, it is most likely that the boy was brought up in that trade. Thus our Master was for thirty years a working-man. Of course His was a godly home, and He must have been instructed in the Word of God, which at that time was the Old Testament. In due time He came forth from His retirement, and began the public ministry that has been the benediction of the whole world.

The Year of Obscurity. This is the name given to the first year of our Lord's ministry, because we know so little about it. Had it not been for what the Evangelist John tells us about it, we should not have known that there was such a year. It began with the baptism of Jesus by John the Baptist. At the very beginning of this year came the temptation in the wilderness, in which Jesus came off conqueror. In this year, too, He had that wonderful interview with Nicodemus in Jerusalem, in which He gave utterance to the wonderful words found in John 3. During this year our Lord did not work many miracles, at least so far as the records run. But He taught and won many disciples, among them Peter, Andrew, James, John, Philip and Nathanael. Apparently owing to the opposition of the ecclesiastical party, and the general spiritual torpor of those in Judea, our Lord left Judea at the end of this year and went north to Galilee. Here he hoped to find a more ready acceptance of His message. On the way to Galilee He passed through Samaria, and here, at Jacob's well, had that remarkable conversation with the Samaritan woman, which may be found in John 4.

The Year of Popularity. This year was spent in Galilee. The teaching and the miracles of our Lord here raised the people to the highest pitch of enthusiasm. Wherever He went, vast throngs followed Him, so that at times they had not leisure even to eat in peace. So anxious were the people to get near to Him and to be healed, that on one occasion they actually took the roof off a house, so as to be able to let a paralyzed man down in the room where Jesus was. At other times the multitudes were so vast that they knocked each other down in their mad anxiety to get near Him. Never had the world seen one who was able in this way to heal all manner of disease instantly. There was no case too hard for Him. The blind, the lame, the paralyzed, the leprous, the fever-stricken, all were instantly healed by His word of power. Indeed, it was not needful even for Him to see His patient. For, as in the case of the nobleman's son, He could heal by a word, and that without seeing His patient. He cast out evil spirits with His word, and showed that His power was irresistible. Even death was not beyond His power, for He called back the spirit of the departed, and thus showed that His power extended to the other world.

His teaching, too, was most popular, and they hung on His lips, for they said, "Never man spake like this man." The common people heard him gladly, and to them He proclaimed the Word of Life. At times during this year the Saviour must have wrought hundreds of miracles in a day, as in the case at Capernaum, where all the sick that were in that city came to Peter's house, and were all healed without money or price. During this year He preached what is called the Sermon on the Mount, which you may find in Matt. 5, 6 and 7. At last the people grew so wild in their enthusiasm that they wanted to force Him to proclaim Himself king, and thus bring the rule of Rome in Palestine to an end. Of course our Lord would not do this, for He did not come to establish an earthly kingdom, but an Heavenly. This enthusiasm of the people was aroused by His miracle of the feeding of the five thousand. They thought that one who could thus feed them for nothing was just the kind of king that would suit them. Had our Lord yielded to this popular clamor, His work as Redeemer would have been ruined. The Romans would have at once put down such a movement, and have put Him to death as a rebel.

The Year of Opposition. During this year of intense activity in Galilee, the Scribes and Pharisees were watching to see how they might discredit the Master with the people. They spied on Him at all times, and opposed Him wherever they could. They saw that His aims and theirs were irreconcilable, for theirs were motives purely selfish, while His were unselfish. For a time they apparently hoped that they could make use of Him to further their political aims. But when they found that this was impossible, they took their stand against Him, and never swerved in their aim, until they nailed Him to the cross. They opposed Him for his non-observance of some of their minute observances of the law, such as that of Sabbath keeping, by means of which observance they had really "made void the law of God." Again, they were offended at His humble origin. They scoffed at Him as "the carpenter's son." They were offended because He kept company with those whom they despised, such as publicans and sinners. Of course it displeased them that He had chosen a publican (Matthew) as one of His Apostles.

They did not try to deny that He wrought many miracles. But they went so far as to ascribe His power to the influence of Satan himself. In every way, for such reasons as the above, they opposed Him, and tried to undermine His influence with the common people. About one-half of this year of opposition was spent by our Lord in Galilee, and the other half in nearby places. Towards the close of this year, Jesus started for Jerusalem, where He knew that the end of His life would come.

The End. At last, the end came. The ecclesiastical party could stand Him no longer. So they planned to put Him to death. His triumphal entry into Jerusalem angered them to the last degree, for they saw that He was the most popular man in the land. They felt that to carry out their plans it was necessary that He should be put out of the way. So they agreed to pay Judas to betray Him into their hands. This was done on Thursday night of Holy Week. Then they tried Him before their national religious council, called the Sanhedrin, and though they had no two witnesses whose testimony agreed, they condemned Him to be worthy of death. But as under Roman rule they had not the power to carry out this sentence, they took Him before Pilate. Pilate declared again and again that he found no fault in Him. So did also Herod, to whom Pilate sent Him. Yet in spite of this, to please the people, Pilate condemned Him to be crucified.

So on Friday morning, they took the Master out to Calvary, and there, between two thieves, they crucified Him. Blessed be God, one of these thieves was so touched by what he saw that he prayed the Lord to have mercy on him, and to this prayer the Master replied: "Verily, I say unto thee, this day shalt thou be with Me in Paradise." At three o'clock on that day, Jesus passed away, and they placed Him in a new tomb in Joseph's garden, to await the final preparation of His body for burial, as the next day was the Sabbath day.

Easter Morning. But on Easter morning there happened a wonderful thing. The angel of the Lord descended and rolled away the stone from the door of the sepulchre. Jesus arose from the dead and appeared on that day first to Mary, then to the women, then to Simon Peter, then to the two disciples as they walked to Emmaus, and finally to the ten in the upper chamber in Jerusalem.

These appearances caused the disciples to pass from deepest despair to highest exultation. Now they knew that they had not been deceived in Him, and that He was really the Son of God, as Peter had himself confessed. For forty days He appeared to His disciples from time to time, to assure them that it was really He and none other. Then, on the Mount of Olives, He parted from them, and was taken up into Heaven from whence He had come. So ended His wonderful earthly life, a life full of marvelous works and still more marvelous teaching.

But the end was not yet. Before He ascended, He promised that He would send the Holy Spirit with power on His disciples. This took place on the day of Pentecost, when they were endued with power to carry to the ends of the earth the message of salvation through Jesus Christ. Of this we have already spoken in the article on the Acts of the Apostles. In view of all that we have said, we may well believe that we are trusting not in a dead Jesus, but in One who is living at the right hand of God as our Divine Saviour, and who has all authority and power to intercede with God in our behalf. Ours is a living and loving Saviour, who died for us, and rose again, and who now sitteth on the right hand of God the Father, who shall redeem this world, and shall give unto us eternal life, if only we accept Him and follow Him as our Divine Lord and Master.

DR. A. F. SCHAUFFLER.

NOTE.

Our reckoning of time is supposed to date from the birth of our Lord, but we should add four years to our present calendar in order to be strictly correct. For example: the year of our Lord 1900 was in reality 1904.

The way that this discrepancy came about is as follows: In the year 525 A. D. the Roman Abbott Dionysius began to compute time in his Easter tables from the birth of our Lord. But he did not calculate aright the dates that are given in Luke 3:1, and so dated wrongly the time of Jesus' birth. Of course it is too late to remedy this matter on all our calendars, but we do well to bear this mistake in mind.

THE GOSPEL

The A.B.C. of The Gospel!

Good
reat lad lorious racious

Of neness bedience rder vercoming ppportunity

Sure aving upreme atisfying anctifying

Pardon
of eace ower rayer urity

Enduring an xalted verlasting xcellent stablished

Law
of ove ife ight iberty

All have sinned and come short of the glory of God

Behold the Lamb of God that tak-eth away the sin of the world.

Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest.

John, three, sixteen.

FOR

God so loved the world that he gave His

Only begotten

Son that whosoever believeth in Him should not

Perish but have

Everlasting

Life

I am not ashamed
of the Good
Only Sacred Priceless Eternal Living

of Christ
for it is
the

Purifying Overflowing Working Exalting Refining

of God
unto salvation to everyone
that believeth.

FIRST DIVISION

THE PROPHETS, ETC.

CHRIST LEAVING THE PRÆTORIUM

BY DORÉ

After Pilate had given the Jews permission to crucify Christ, the priests and soldiers led Him away from the judgment hall, known as the Prætorium, to Golgatha, called the place of a skull, that He might be crucified. One Simon, a Cyrenian, passing that way, was compelled to bear the cross.

Doré, the artist, has painted on an enormous canvas his own conception of this scene. All of Doré's art is arranged for artistic effectiveness, and he has made this very impressive and imposing. Christ is represented in a long white garment, still wearing His thorny crown, walking with stately bearing down the steps from the judgment hall. Before him is unfortunate Simon, struggling with the heavy cross, also carrying the bag of tools, hammer and strong nippers, for nailing the victim to the cross. Just behind Christ march the Jewish priests, and on either side is a mass of humanity. On the balcony above are those who gossip together carelessly, showing much curiosity, but in no way serious. On the right below, the soldiers are rudely pushing back the crowd, who stumble and fall over each other. Much time may be spent in the study of individual faces and character manifested by each. It is a finely conceived group. On the left-hand corner is a similar crowd which is less disturbed, but in it are revealed the passions of men and their hatred of the self-sacrificing Christ. This is one of the most effective pictures that Doré has painted. Thousands of people have stood before it spell-bound, some weeping and some praying.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

COPYRIGHT 1912 BY THE JOHN A. HERTEL CO.

CHRIST LEAVING THE PRAETORIUM

After Dore's painting by Max Böhn.

THE FORERUNNER OF CHRIST.

There was in the days of Herod, the

of a certain named Zacharias, of the course of Abia: and his was of the

of Aaron,

and her name was Elisabeth. And it came to pass, that while he executed the priest's office before God in the order of his course, According to the custom of the priest's office, his lot was to when he went

of the Lord.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 1:5-23. READ ALSO JOHN 1:19-34.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, Make us obedient to Thee. Help us to prepare the way for the coming of Christ into many hearts and to become messengers of Thine. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"How dear to my heart is the story of old,
The story that ever is new,
The message that saints of all ages have told,
The message so tender and true."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Before the Account called Anno Domini, the sixth year. Place, The Temple, Jerusalem. Persons, Zacharias, his wife Elizabeth, and the Angel of the Lord.

Scripture Setting: Prophecy fulfilled. The coming of John foretold, Mal. 3:1; 4:5. The voice in the wilderness, Isa. 40:3, John 1:23. Esais' prophecy, Matt. 3:3. Christ's testimony, Matt. 11:14.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of the story are, 1. That God hears and answers prayer. 2. He always gives more than we ask. 3. The influence of a blameless life. 4. The appearance of an angel to announce the birth of the long-promised forerunner of the Messiah. 5. The careful conduct which God demands of those whom He would use in His service. 6. That the trusting Christian should ask no sign.

AN ANGEL PROMISES A LITTLE SON.

A Long Night. How long a whole night vigil seems to the watcher! How he counts the hours and how unending they seem! How often the watcher peers into the darkness for some sign of daybreak. Thus the Jews had watched for the coming of their Messiah through the ages of captivity, persecution and humiliation which seemed to them the longest and darkest of nights. Isaiah, Ezekial, Amos, Hosea, had preached to deaf ears and unrolled visions before those who were as if blind; then for four hundred years no prophet had appeared in Israel; there was no longer open warning or sign from the God they had disregarded, and they had passed through a great many troubles as a nation.

Watching for the Dawn. Trouble leads one to seek help; indifference had given place to eagerness for the coming of the One who was to destroy their enemies, avenge their wrongs and restore and even increase their supremacy. While ground under the heel of Rome, it was a solace to know that the time was not far distant when they should be able to trample their enemies into the dust. They had watched so long they knew every sign, and that the hour was at hand. Led by this belief the Jews were returning to Jerusalem; and that city presented the appearance of a great home coming. There were some righteous ones who believed they would not die until their eyes had seen His coming. Everywhere was an air of expectancy. It was as if any morning they might wake to see His banner planted on the hills around about Jerusalem; at any hour the trumpet might sound to call the faithful to unsheath their swords; any moment might see the city filled with the effulgent brightness of His glory. After the long night what joy and relief when they should see the first streak of light in the horizon.

The Forerunner. In ancient times it was a great thing to be the king's forerunner. The office was held by a young man, perfect in physical development and so fleet of foot that some even believed that his feet were winged, just as in statues and pictures of the Winged Victory. When the king entered his chariot, the forerunner would run in front of the chariot, waving an emblem of authority and calling upon the people to make way for the royal passage. Isaiah had foretold that a prophet should appear, as a spiritual forerunner to proclaim and prepare for the coming of Israel's Messiah. It was now four hundred years since Malachi had declared he should be no less a personage than the translated prophet Elijah. With eagerness the pious Jews awaited the appearance of this forerunner who should proclaim the coming of their King.

A Devout Home. Among the watchers there could have been none more fervent than the godly couple in the quiet hillside home outside Jerusalem. It is said that to have been well born is to have overcome all the greater difficulties of life. Fortunate is the child born into such a home as Luke pictures, where for generations back, the ancestors on both sides were priests of God, and where husband and wife were both righteous and obedient to all the laws of God, blameless and without reproach. But alas, no child had been born to Zacharias and Elizabeth. It was their chief sorrow and one great disappointment. Long they had prayed for children, but now they had transferred their anticipation to longing and waiting for the Messiah.

The Morning Sacrifice. Every morning a priest watched on the highest pinnacle of the temple for the first sign of dawn to give the signal for beginning the day's religious service, when the massive temple gates swung open and a three-fold blast from the silver trumpets of the priests called the people to their devotions. Even earlier, a part of the priesthood were ready for duty. The number of officiating priests has been variously estimated at from 20,000 to 85,000, and each week day fifty priests were on duty in the temple. They met early in one of the temple halls where their ministry for the day was assigned by "lot." Four times was the lot taken; but it was the third lot that all awaited, for this designated who was to offer incense in the holy place.

An Auspicious Moment. Only once in a life-time might any son of Aaron hope to enjoy that privilege. Indeed the honor came not at all to some. The casting of this lot was preceded by prayer on the part of all the assembled priests. Our story begins the first week in October, in the sixth year before our present era. Among the assembled priests was one whose genuine piety was unquestioned by all. He had lived more than sixty years, and yet never during all his life time had he obtained the honor of offering incense in the holy place. Did he know as he stood awaiting the "lot" that strange and wonderful things were to happen to him that autumn morning? The moment to which every priest looked forward was his. For the first and the last time, the lot fell to him.

The Priest and the Angel. Zacharias stood alone within the holy place. The incense had been spread upon the altar, on which the red coals glowed. Outside the worshippers silently watched while the prayers of Israel ascended to Heaven in the cloud of odors that rose from the golden altar. The priest was ready to reverently withdraw when suddenly a wondrous sight met his eyes. Between the altar and the golden candlestick stood the angel Gabriel. Never before had such a vision appeared to an ordinary priest on such an occasion. No wonder that Zacharias was troubled and fear fell upon him.

How sweet the words of the mighty Gabriel, "Fear not, for thy prayer is heard." Have you ever heard words like this whispered to your soul? And when the blessed assurance is given that your prayer is heard, do not the angels seem very near? Zacharias and Elizabeth were to have a son and his name was to be called John. Not only the father and mother were to rejoice at his birth, but his coming should be a source of joy to many.

The Promised Son. There are two ways in which a person may be great. One of these is to be great in the sight of men. Such persons may be very wicked and cruel and even cause much suffering in the world. Napoleon belonged to this class of great men, and he plunged all Europe into bloody warfare. But John was to be great in the sight of the Lord. He was to be humble, obedient, a total abstainer and courageous. This is true greatness. What a difference between those who are truly great and counterfeit heroes! This child was to be filled with the Holy Ghost, and his coming was to bless and not destroy mankind.

The Sign Given. If we continue the story, we shall find that when the priest, who had grown to be an old man before the good fortune to be chosen to enter the holy place had come to him, was told that he and his wife were to be the parents of the much anticipated forerunner who was to come in the spirit of Elijah to prepare Israel for the coming of the Lord, Zacharias was too humble a man to believe it and asked a sign. Now when he had been so signally honored by the visit of the mighty angel Gabriel, such unbelief was very wrong; but sometimes when we ask for things we should not have, God answers our prayers that we may learn that He knows best what to give us. So Zacharias was given a sign, but that sign was to be his own dumbness until all these things the angel had promised had come to pass.

Fulfillment. The people waited for Zacharias, wondering at his long delay, but when he came out to them, though he could not speak to tell them what had happened, it was all explained. Just as our faces are such mirrors of our thoughts as to tell whether our companions are good or evil, so when they looked into Zacharias' face the people knew he had seen an angel. All that the angel told the aged priest came to pass. The forerunner of the Messiah was born, as had been foretold seven hundred years before. At first the Jews did not know that the child who was born to Zacharias and Elizabeth was destined to be so great a person, but we shall learn later how it was made known to them.

Quiz. 1. What prophets had foretold John's coming? 2. What great hope inspired the Jewish people at this time? 3. To what former priest and his wife did an angel appear to foretell the birth of a son? 4. What resemblance between the two? 5. To whom did the angel Gabriel appear besides Zacharias? 6. Do we need an angel to tell us our prayers are answered?

Seed Thoughts. 1. When God needs men and women he knows just where to find the right material. 2. Life is not a lottery in which man draws at random; the disposal of the lot is in God's hands. 3. Devils, not angels, should be held in fear. 4. The faith of some good men is so weak that it takes an angel and a miracle to convince them that their prayer is answered. 5. When God wanted to show the world the greatest man, he set before them a total abstainer. 6. We may all be forerunners of God.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE BIRTH OF JESUS.

For unto you is born this

in the

a Saviour, which is the Lord.

And this shall be a sign unto you; Ye shall find the

And suddenly there was praising God, and saying, Glory to God in the highest, and on earth

good will toward

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 2:1-20.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, We thank Thee for the manifestation of Thyself through the person of Jesus Christ. We pray that like those shepherds of old, we may welcome the Christ and spread the good news of His advent to those about us. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"And still their Heavenly music floats
O'er all the weary world;
Above its sad and lonely plains
They bend on hovering wing,
And ever o'er its Babel sounds
The blessed angels sing."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, probably Dec. 25, the fifth year before the account called Anno Domini. Place, Bethlehem. Persons, the Holy Child, Mary His mother, Joseph, shepherds and angels.

Scripture Setting: The Promised Ruler. Mighty Counselor, Isa. 9:6, 7. Emmanuel, Isa. 7:14. The Righteous Judge, Isa. 11:1-5. The Shepherd, Isa. 40:10, 11. The King, Jer. 23:5, 6. Universal Sovereign, Zech. 14:16, 17. Prophet, Deut. 18:15. From everlasting, Micah 5:2. Victor over Satan, Gen. 3:15. The Annunciation, Luke 1:26-38.

Life and Conduct Setting: The great central fact of the story is the birth of the Holy Child, Christ Jesus, our Lord and Savior. In addition we have given us: 1. The announcement of Christ's birth by the herald angel to the watching shepherds. 2. It is made known to these simple men that Christ was born for all people. 3. The Advent is honored by the Heavenly chorus. 4. The new born King is found lying in a manger, and accepted by the shepherds.

WHEN ANGELS SANG ON EARTH.

Taking the Census. When Augustus Caesar, from his imperial palace in Rome, ordered a census of the Roman Empire which should include the inhabitants of Syria he had no idea that he was actuated by anything save his own royal will. So little do we know of the reason for our own acts, that the proud Emperor would have resented the suggestion that the census instead of being his own imperial decree, was conceived more than seven hundred years before when through His prophet Micah, God had declared that Israel's promised Ruler should come out of Bethlehem. The Emperor of Rome had simply been used by a Ruler mightier than any earthly potentate in the fulfillment of prophecy.

How Prophecy was Fulfilled. Now Mary and Joseph were in the little town of Nazareth in Galilee far away from Bethlehem, when this imperial decree was issued, which made it necessary for every family to go to the city of their fathers to be registered, and as both were of the house of David, it sent them on their way to the city of David. The journey must have occupied at least three days and they found the little town of Bethlehem so crowded with pilgrims on the same errand that there was no place for them at the inn and they were forced to seek shelter in a stable.

Bethlehem. As they toiled up the long gray hills the Virgin Mother saw the town, a thread of low flat-roofed houses, running along the hill ridge. The valleys on either side softened by the silvery green foliage of the olive, the pale pink bloom of the almond and the deeper blush of the budding peach trees, justified the name which signified "House of bread." Perched on the mountains was the castle of Herod, who was to seek to destroy the Holy Child. As she passed a pretty brook she may even have seen the shepherds who were soon to hear the Heavenly chorus, and if she stopped to drink of the spring for whose water her ancestor David so longed, she might even have seen the new star mirrored there.

In the Manger. The stable was only a cavern in the hillside and this mother laid her most precious treasure in the hollowed trough of the manger. It was fitting that He who came to feed the hungry and redeem the poor should so make himself one of them, that he was born and cradled just as the poorest babies in all that land have been from time immemorial. Though there is no stable there now, a church is built on the spot where there is authority for believing that the stable once stood. It is called the Church of the Nativity and was built by the Empress Helena in the early part of the fourth century. It brings that first Christmas very near, to stand beside the silver star that marks the place where Christ lay cradled in the Bethlehem manger and where the shepherds knelt so many ages ago. It is the tangible and established evidence that the birth of our Saviour is the truest and greatest fact in all history and not a legend as some would have us believe.

Watching over the Sheep. Christmas time is often one of the loveliest periods of the year in Judea. Flowers bloom and the shepherds lead out their flocks again to browse for a few weeks on the renewed pasture. It is significant that these flocks were destined for temple sacrifices which the shepherds watched that December night, when called from the fields to see the Lamb of God who was to be a living sacrifice for all sin. Not in the stable, that cavern by the hillside, but out in the quiet solemn night, in the star-lit heavens, is the birth of the long-heralded King announced. Who cannot see the shepherds sitting in their long silent night watches in the open fields, and who does not sympathize with them in their fear when the glory of the Lord shone round about them, in all its dazzling brightness? And yet was it not beautiful that the birth of the One who was to be known as the Good Shepherd was first announced to the shepherds who were themselves sheep of His flock? When will men learn that angels are their friends, the messengers of God sent to minister to His children? This beautiful angel whose dazzling radiance made the shepherds sore afraid bade them, "Fear not." It was the first preacher of the Gospel who hovered near them. No one else had honored the advent of the Messiah. The earth had never even wakened from its slumbers to welcome Him. People slept on as though the mightiest event in all the history of the world had not just transpired. But if no priest announced His coming, no royal herald trumpeted His birth, an unheard of thing happened. Higher honor had the Babe in the manger than any heir to an earthly throne. A herald angel came down from Heaven to announce the birth of the Prince of Peace.

Good Tidings. "I bring you good tidings of great joy which shall be to all people. For unto you is born this day in the city of David, a Saviour, which is Christ the Lord." Have we not reason to rejoice that the good tidings was not for the watching shepherds only; nor as the Jewish people had always imagined: just for the Jews? It was not even to be confined to that age, but for all people. The angel does not announce a King but a Saviour. The Jews wanted and watched for a King, but God, who knew all their backslidings and shortcomings, their ingratitude and unfaithfulness, saw that they needed first a Saviour. He must save us from the dominion of sin before we can be His loyal subjects.

The Angel Chorus. There has been music ever since the world began, but never such as burst upon the entranced ears of the Judean shepherds. It was the only angel chorus ever heard on earth. When the herald angel had spoken, a multitude of the Heavenly host came forth to sing the glad tidings he had just uttered.

"Glory to God in the highest,
On earth peace,
Goodwill toward men."

Their song is the key-note of the Gloria in Excelsis sung from age to age and generation to generation, and to be a never-ending Christmas carol. It ushered into the darkened world, Heaven's own light, and the Divine melody that flooded the Judean hills that night and entranced the ears of those, who, like the shepherd Psalmist of Israel, tended the flocks by night, shall never cease until its prophecy is ended. The angels' song ushered in a new era. Never another night so dark, for was not the Light of the World come to shed its beneficent rays until the time when there shall be no more night? It told that God's own Son had left the splendor of Heaven that He might manifest the glory of the Father, and through the salvation and redemption of the world, add glory and honor to His name. It was the announcement of the birth of the Prince of Peace, whose work shall not end until man shall cease to draw the sword and war is no more. "Good will toward men" proclaimed the coming of the Kingdom of Love, whose center should be the Manger of Bethlehem, and where every man is the brother, and God the Eternal Father of all. The words of Lincoln's second inaugural address, "With malice toward none, with charity for all," spoken in the midst of cruel war, have been called "An earthly echo of the Heavenly anthem."

The Shepherds' Visit. Following the directions of the herald angel the shepherds left their flocks and "came with haste and found Mary and Joseph and the Babe lying in the manger." Blessed faith which gave to these Judean shepherds the high privilege of being the first witnesses of His advent, the first worshippers at the shrine of Christ, and the first evangelists to proclaim His coming to men. It is long since that Christmas day, and so humble was their calling that their names were never recorded and have long since been forgotten, but they live on.

And today the entire Christian world joins them in glorifying and praising God for the Heavenly vision of that first Christmas eve, when God manifested His love for a sin-darkened and fallen world, through that greatest of all gifts, the gift of His Only Son, our Saviour, who is Christ the Lord.

Quiz. 1. What noted Bible characters had lived in Bethlehem? 2. Why did our Lord choose a stable for His birthplace? 3. Did He ever have a place He could call home? 4. When did Isaiah hear the angels sing? 5. Which one of Christ's ancestors was a shepherd? 6. How may Christ be born into our hearts? 7. How may we imitate the shepherds?

Seed Truths. 1. Christ's presence makes the humblest place a throne of power. 2. The evangelism of the world was begun through the shepherds. 3. The stable is no longer a mean place since it was irradiated with the smile of the Babe of Bethlehem. 4. From the manger to the cross, from the cross to the grave, from the grave to the throne is the Christian progress. 5. God loves the lowly and simple of heart. 6. God's love is manifest in the gift of Christ to the world. 7. Every Christmas carol is the echo of the angels' song. 8. Only a child, and He the Divine Child, could have made a Christmas.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

SIMEON AND JESUS.

And when the days of her purification according to the law of Moses were accomplished, they brought him to Jerusalem, to present him to the Lord;

And, behold,
there was a man in whose name was Simeon; and the same

was just and waiting for the consolation of Israel: and the Holy Ghost was upon him. And it was revealed unto him by the Holy Ghost, that he should not see before he had seen the Lord's Christ.

And he came by the Spirit
into the

and when the parents

Jesus, to do for him after the custom
of the

SIMEON AND JESUS.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 2:22-40.

Prayer: Lord, help us to see in the blessed Babe of Bethlehem what Simeon saw. May we see in Him our salvation, may He light our pathway through life and we share His glory in Heaven. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"May we feel Thy presence near;
May Thy glory meet our eyes,
While we in Thy house appear."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, the fourth year before the account Anno Domini. Place, the Temple, Jerusalem. Persons, the Holy Child, Mary, Joseph and Simeon.

Scripture Setting: In the House of the Lord. Prayer heard, 2 Sam. 22:7. The Christian's desire, Psa. 27:4, 5. The Temple, a refuge, Psa. 84:1-4.

Value of worship, Psa. 84:10. The Lord's coming to the Temple foretold, Mal. 3:1.

Life and Conduct Setting: The main features of the story are, 1. The sacrifice and offering of Mary and the Holy Child. 2. The poverty of that sacrifice. 3. The appearance of Simeon. 4. His Expectation. 5. Its Fulfillment. 6. His vision of Christ. 7. Suffering foretold.

WHAT SIMEON SAW.

Looking Backward. Fifteen hundred years before our story begins, when God's people were in bondage, the Egyptians were so cruel that they ordered every boy baby born of the Jews to be destroyed at his birth. Thus it became necessary for God to free His people from Egyptian bondage else they would be wiped out of existence. With wonderful forbearance God first sent Moses to plead with the Egyptian ruler, Pharaoh, to "Let my people go," but each time Moses entreated, the Israelites were treated more cruelly. We remember how God, who is so long-suffering, sent various plagues, hoping each would warn the hard-hearted Egyptians. But the Egyptians hardened their hearts and treated the Israelites still more cruelly. At last because nothing else would soften their hearts, there came that memorable night when the angel of the Lord passed over the land at the solemn hour of midnight and smote all the first born of Egypt, but sparing the first born of the Israelites.

The Dedication of the First Born. In gratitude for this deliverance the Jewish law considered the eldest son of every family God's property until he was redeemed by sacrifice and offering; and the Jewish church provided that forty days after his birth the eldest son must be brought to the temple and a sacrifice and an offering made there. The offering was five shekels of silver or about fifty cents in our money. It was the price of his redemption. Now the little babe whom Joseph and Mary brought to the temple was God's own Son and needed not to make sacrifice; but the Scriptures tell us He came to fulfill the law and we will find Christ was always very scrupulous in His religious observance. There are some people who think they can be good without going to church or observing any religious duties, but Christ was not one of these.

Child of the Poor. Poverty cannot be as great a misfortune and handicap as we think or God, who was so very careful about His Son's surroundings and training, would not have put Him into a home of such poverty as Saint Luke reveals. Now when she brought her first born to the temple, the mother was expected to bring a young lamb for the burnt offering and a pigeon or a turtle dove for a sin offering, but the law provided that if the parents were too poor to furnish a lamb, the mother might offer two pigeons or turtle doves instead of the lamb and one turtle dove or pigeon, and Mary was so poor she brought only two pigeons. Mary loved her child, so it must have been a great sorrow and humiliation to be too poor to honor her first born as other mothers did. Perhaps after all the angel had told her, she wondered why God did not provide a better sacrifice. There are mothers who will not take their children to church and Sunday school unless they can be "dressed as good as other children," but Mary was a woman of faith and good sense and she knew that God is not a respecter of persons.

Simeon. It were worth a lifetime of endeavor to at last merit such a portraiture as St. Luke sketches of Simeon, for the apostle tells us he was first of all a just man; he had never defrauded anyone. Consideration for others had been the rule of his life. Then he was devout; loving, serving and fearing God. He was an expectant Christian and the Holy Ghost was upon him. As we read Luke's sketch of the man, one feels that the world needs more Holy Ghost Christians. Simeon was not a stranger to the temple. If he and Anna had only been occasional worshippers, they might have missed the wonderful blessing of that wonderful morning and both might have died without seeing the Messiah. How great the loss today to those who do not habitually seek the house of God. To the devout worshipper there is nothing more inspiring than old Christ Church of Philadelphia, where one sees the pews of Washington, Franklin and other patriot fathers who were regular attendants of worship at the historic old church during the troublous days of the American Revolution.

How a Song was Born. It is said that every person lives for the attainment of some one desire. With some the desire is for money, in others it is fame and office. Then there are people whose chief desire is for clothes, so that there are unfortunates who have sold their souls for adornment. But Simeon's desire was not so trivial or selfish as any of these. "It had been revealed unto him that he should not see death before he had seen the Lord's Christ." When the One who had lain in his arms became the greatest Preacher the world ever heard and said "Blessed are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled," may He not have thought of Simeon? The Spirit led the expectant old saint of God into the temple just as the Holy Family entered. What a happy moment it was for the old man. How tenderly and with what sacred, wondering love he took the Child in his arms. He held to his heart the very Son of God, the infant Messiah. Do you not see the venerable saint with face uplifted and streaming tears of joy, while the Holy Child in his arms nestles close to his breast, as Simeon exclaims, "Lord, now lettest Thou Thy servant depart in peace, according to Thy word." These words have been sung or chanted in the Christian church for 1,900 years. The early church chanted them in Latin and because the two first words were "Nunc Dimittis" the song is called the Nunc Dimittis. It is not so hard to die when one has seen Christ.

With Simeon's Eyes. There is a legend that Simeon was so old he had lost his sight, but surely he had more than mortal vision as he stood in the temple holding the baby Jesus. Let us look through Simeon's eyes and see what he saw. The little Child in his arms was to be the salvation for the world. Ah, Simeon was not seeing as a Jew that day, for they only looked for their own salvation. Here in the Holy Babe was salvation for all people. Simeon knew the thick, almost impenetrable moral and spiritual darkness that enveloped the world, and he saw in Christ the Light of the World. Long after Simeon had "departed in peace" Christ Himself announced, "I am the Light of the World." The Jews were to despise and reject Christ, but Simeon saw in that tiny Babe "The glory of Thy people Israel." Something of the glory which Christ had before the world was, must have been revealed to Simeon. What do we see in the Babe of Bethlehem today? Is Christ our salvation, light and glory?

An Old Man's Blessing. While Joseph and His mother marveled at the words that had been uttered, Simeon blessed them. They had entered the temple humiliated by their poverty, but now they were abashed by the greatness of the One they called "Son." With what awe and respect they listened to the old man—how they valued his commendation. Do we show the same respect to the aged and manifest the same desire for their approval? But Simeon knows that, like Paul, those who follow this Babe must glory in the Cross. He sees the bleeding wounds, the pierced side and knows that the sword thrust shall pierce the mother's heart. Highly favored and blessed above women was Mary, but as a mother she should suffer above all mothers. Wonderful things had occurred in the temple that morning. A mother's heart had swelled with joy at the prophecy of her Son's future, but did Mary return to Bethlehem happy?

Another Witness. If we read on, we will find that Simeon's was not the only hymn of praise that day, for a woman of eighty-four took up the song of praise and Anna, the prophetess, gave thanks unto the Lord, and pointed all the proud Pharisees who looked for redemption in Jerusalem to the lowly Babe. What a contrast to the infant Saviour were these two saints who had passed the three score and ten years that were the allotted age of man. What a wonderful group, composed chiefly of the poor, the lowly and the aged! Was it not a type of the time foretold by the prophet Isaiah when there should be no more an infant of days, nor an old man of years? Simeon and Anna had renewed their youth in the sight of the Messiah. Their eyes had seen the redemption of Israel; they had looked upon the One who was to be the salvation of a darkened, sin-sick world. Their prophetic vision peered into the centuries to come when the light of the Son of God should illumine the Gentile world; when ignorance should vanish, the darkness of heathenism disappear and all should be under His reign.

Quiz. 1. What did the sacrifice and offering for the first born commemorate? 2. What did the offering for Christ signify? 3. What other aged saint recognized Christ as the Messiah in the temple? 4. What do these things teach us in regard to the performance of church duties?

Seed Thoughts. 1. All children should be given to God and His service early in life. 2. It is not the value of the offering that proves its worth. 3. Poverty must furnish many opportunities for service, or the One who came to serve humanity would never have chosen it. 4. As a rolling stone gathers no moss, so an occasional worshipper gains no great blessing. 5. The eyes that have seen Christ will not grow dim in the shadow of death. 6. Jesus is the light of the world, the source of life, light, hope, joy, peace, immortality. 7. Age has always worshipped at the throne of childhood. 8. Christ made the cradle both a throne and an altar.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

VISIT OF THE WISE MEN.

Now when Jesus was born in

of Judæa
in the days of Herod the

behold,
there came to Jerusalem, Saying, Where is he that is born

King of the Jews?
for we have seen his star in the

and are come to him. Then Herod, when he had privily called the enquired of them diligently what

the

appeared.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 2:1-12.

Prayer: Lord, be to us the day star of life. May Thy light guide us until like the wise men we shall find the Christ. Make us like them, earnest seekers after Thy Kingdom. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"Shine on our gardens and fields,
Shine on our working and weaving;
Shine on the whole race of men,
Believing and unbelieving;
Shine on us now through the night, Shine on us now in Thy might."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, the fourth year before the account called Anno Domini. Place, Bethlehem. Persons, the Wise Men, Herod and the Holy Family.

Scripture Setting: The Gospel for the Gentiles. Origin of the Gentiles, Gen. 10:5. Gentiles shall seek Christ, Isa. 11:10. Righteousness shall extend to the Gentiles, Isa. 42:1. Are made the people of God, Hos. 2:23. Gentiles shall acknowledge God, Jer. 16:19. A world wide acceptance of the Gospel, Mal. 1:11. A light of the Gentiles, Acts 13:47. The Holy Ghost given, Acts 10:45.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of this lesson are, 1. The appearance of His star in the East. 2. The coming of the wise men to Jerusalem. 3. Herod's fear and duplicity. 4. The confirmation of prophecy concerning Christ's birthplace by the chief priests and scribes. 5. The finding of Christ under the guidance of the star. 6. The adoration and offering of the wise men. 7. Their secret departure.

THE WISE MEN AND THE STAR.

The Wise Men. Rays of sunlight fall athwart the most darkened path and in Christ's life we find the light and darkness strangely commingled. He was born in a stable among dumb brutes, but an angelic host sang at His birth. His mother could not furnish a lamb for His sacrifice, but before she bore her Son from the temple, He had been twice proclaimed the Messiah or "Lamb of God." In every day life does not God outweigh every humiliation with some great blessing? When His own chosen people failed to honor His birth, a welcome came from the heathen world. In ancient times it was believed that the character and conduct of men was determined by the stars, and the learned men who spent their time studying the stars were called Magi or "the wise men," and were highly honored.

A Star Appears. During the dispersion of the Jews they had sought refuge among all the principal nations of the earth, and with a greater loyalty than some of us, wherever a Jew goes he clings to his religion and carries the Scriptures with him. Therefore, wherever they went they carried the hope of the Messiah and told it to others; this is why even in the far off East some great deliverer or ruler was expected to appear. In those days, it was a common belief that when a king or great man was born the event was proclaimed by a new star in the sky. Fifteen hundred years before, Balaam, a prophet, had predicted the appearance of a star out of Jacob which should proclaim the coming of a great ruler to the Jews and now such a star had been seen in the East. Ever since its appearance an effort has been made to explain the phenomena, but after all the discussion we only know that a star appeared in the sky, so luminous and so marvelously bright that the Wise Men called it "His star."

In Search of the King. Inspired and guided by the star, those eastern wise men started out on their journey in search of the promised King. We do not know just whence they came, whether Arabia, Persia or Chaldea. Whichever country, it was a long journey. They were earnest seekers who did not send their servants but went in person to pay homage to the new born King. Are we as earnest seekers of Jesus, I wonder? With the very swiftest of Arabian horses,—the swiftest horses in all the world, or perhaps a train of camels,—they cross the desert; we can follow their trail by the odor of costly myrrh and frankincense. Never once do they lose sight of the star which guides them to Jerusalem. On the advent of so great and so long-promised a King they must have expected to find the city in gala array and its inhabitants in joyous celebration of the great Deliverer. Instead no one save an old man and aged woman knew anything about it, and they were so little known outside the temple that the Magi never heard of them. Do you not think less determined seekers after Christ would have been discouraged and have kept their treasures and returned home?

Herod Troubled. The Magi's astonishment at the indifference of the people is shown in the question put to Herod, "Where is He that is born King of the Jews?" Dr. Edersheim tells us that the Jerusalemites were polished, witty and pleasant, living in luxuriously furnished palaces and giving sumptuous entertainments at which the women appeared in costly but immodest dress, and wine was served. The bazaars offered everything from a false tooth; hand mirrors with golden pincers attached to pull out grey hairs, to a Persian shawl, an Indian dress or silk paid for by its weight in gold. John tells us that "the lust of the flesh, the lust of the eye and the pride of life is not of the Father," so how should a society so engrossed in these things know the Son? It was perfectly natural that they should have left the welcome of the Saviour to a few shepherds and an old man and woman.

The thought of His coming inspired these worldly people and cruel, ambitious, wicked Herod with a very different feeling from that in the hearts of the Magi. The bare possibility that One might come who would endanger his own rule struck terror to the heart of Herod, so he called all the high priests together. You may be sure he did not tell them of the wise men who had seen the star in the East. He simply asked them where Christ was to be born and they pointed to Bethlehem.

A Tyrant's Duplicity. The wicked Herod had put his own sons to death lest they should dispossess him; how his heart must have raged at the bare thought of the possibility of even a pretender to his throne. But Herod stifled his feelings, and professing that he too desired to worship the coming Ruler, urged the wise men to "Go and search diligently for the young child," and report to him when they had found Him. But how useless subterfuge is when the Lord knows our every thought. God knew all the wicked plotting and planning in Herod's cruel, hard heart, and did not let him thwart the Divine purpose by finding the child.

These Magi were real wise men possessing a true dignity, very different from the make-believe dignity of Herod's court, and we may well imagine how thankful they were to get out into the open, and to see the star that never seemed to have shone with greater purity than after a day spent in Herod's court. It was a wonderful star, for it went before them, leading them up the hill country into Bethlehem and then as though it were a living thing, "It came and stood over where the young Child was." Our own Emerson, who was a great philosopher, once said that if you want to succeed, you must "hitch your wagon to a star." If they had kept their eyes fixed on the earth, or if they had lingered in Jerusalem, dallying with its pleasures, the Magi would never have been successful seekers of Christ.

The First Gentile Worshipers. The wise men had only a vague idea of the Messiah, but they were sure that the Messiah would come with something more enduring than earthly splendor or when they entered Bethlehem so eagerly they would have been disappointed when the star stood over the humble home of Mary and Joseph, who had moved from the stable to a peasant house. But that simple home which held a carpenter's bench, the sign of ennobling labor, and where dwelt Mary unadorned by the luxurious equipment of a Jerusalem belle, but with a mind embellished by the highest culture and thought; that home which held the Babe, was more beautiful than any of the luxurious palaces of Jerusalem. Theirs was a wonderful privilege, to enter the first Christian home and to kneel at the family altar which held the living Christ and to be the first Gentile worshippers at that altar! Did they know, we wonder, that the Child's reign should continue until every knee should bow before His throne and every tongue confess His name? Did they see Paul the Apostle to the Gentiles? Did they see a barbarian race in the far off isles of Great Britain christianized; a Christian nation builded on a new continent and the gospel preached in China, India, Africa and the isles of the sea?

The First Offering. One cannot be a true worshipper without wanting to give to the adored one. Having found the One whom they sought, they opened their treasures. This is what religion should do for all. The wise men did not hesitate to lay their gifts upon the altar; gold, frankincense and myrrh. The ancient church with its symbolism, saw in the gold the emblem of His royalty. Frankincense and myrrh were two odorous gums obtained from trees that grow in the East, and are even more valuable than gold. In the myrrh was thought to be a significance of His humanity and His burial, while the frankincense was a token of His Divinity. Even though the Magi may not have intended it to be so, certainly the first offering to Christ signified all this. We give because He is our King, because of the example of His life, in memory of His sacred death, and as unto God.

Unto Their Own Country. This is all we know of the wise men. Much has been conjectured and many beautiful legends have grown about the story. Probably the most beautiful is Dr. Henry Van Dyke's story of "The Other Wise Man," who set out to go with the others, but was so delayed and impoverished ministering to the sufferings and wants of the needy that he never found Jesus till the day of the crucifixion, and starting to Golgotha with the pearl of great price as a ransom for the Saviour, he gave the pearl, his last and only treasure, to buy the freedom of a poor girl who had been sold to a wicked master, and with the pearl his only hope of serving Jesus. But Dr. Van Dyke tells us so beautifully that "his journey was ended, his treasures were accepted," for there came the words so sweetly spoken, "Inasmuch as thou hast done it unto one of the least of my brethren, thou hast done it unto Me." We rejoice in the story of the wise men, for their journey, adoration and offering blazed the way for us who are also of a Gentile race, and ever since their time the world's wisest men, astronomers, scientists, statesmen and philosophers have worshipped the One whose star was seen in the East.

Seed Thoughts. 1. There are patches of blue in every sky. 2. "Seek Me and ye shall find Me." 3. The things of this world crowd out Heaven. 4. Herod might hoodwink the wise men, but he could not deceive God. 5. The "star gazers" are the world's greatest achievers. 6. True greatness is oftenest found in humble surroundings.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

FLIGHT INTO EGYPT.

And being warned of God in a dream that they should not return to Herod, they departed into their own country another way. And when they were departed, behold, the

in a dream, saying,

and

and flee
into

and be thou there until I bring thee word: for Herod will seek the young child to destroy him. When he

and into Egypt.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 2:13-18.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, We thank Thee that in times of danger, perplexity and doubt, Thou art near to warn, direct and help. Keep us from all evil. Help us to hear and recognize Thy warning voice and obey Thy commands, assured that our peace and safety is to be found only in Thee. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"Truth forever on the scaffold, wrong forever on the throne,
Yet that scaffold sways the future, and behind the dim unknown
Standeth God within the shadow, keeping watch above His own."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, the fourth year before the account called Anno Domini. Persons, the Christ Child, Mary and Joseph. Places, from Bethlehem into Egypt.

Scripture Setting: God's Protecting Power over His children. Jacob protected, Gen. 28:15, 31:3, 35:1. Care over Joseph, Gen. 45:4-8. Moses saved, Heb. 11:23. The shepherd boy protected, 1 Sam. 17:37. Shadrach, Meshach and Abednego unharmed by the fiery furnace, Dan. 3:17, 25, 27. Paul unharmed by viper, Acts 28:3-6.

Life and Conduct Setting: The main features of the story are, 1. The warning from God in time of danger. 2. The command to go into Egypt. 3. The implicit obedience to the command. 4. The flight. 5. The fulfillment of prophecy. 6. Herod's wicked decree.

THE BABY JESUS IN DANGER.

The Angel's Warning. We have seen how God used Augustus Cæsar, the Imperial Emperor of Rome, to fulfill the words uttered by a prophet four hundred years before, that Christ should be born in Bethlehem. Seven hundred and fifty years before the coming of our Saviour, through Hosea God had said, "Out of Egypt have I called my Son," and Herod, wicked as he was, was made to serve God's plan. It is one of the instances when He uses the wrath of man to praise Him. Herod was determined not to be outwitted by the eastern Magi even if it cost the lives of all the children of Bethlehem. But the angel of the Lord appeared to Joseph in a dream, telling him what Herod had planned and warned him to flee into Egypt and remain in that country until God should tell him to return.

God's Providence and Provision. We have seen the poverty of that home. Surely even a journey to Egypt would have been out of the question had it not been for the providence God so often manifests to those who trust in Him. He tells us "Before you call I will hear and answer," and here is an instance. God had anticipated their need and sent the wise men with their offering; the gifts of the Magi provided the means for the journey into Egypt. We may be sure that what we give to God will be made to serve a purpose which will multiply our offering a hundred fold. Are you not glad that it was Gentile gold which made it possible for the Baby Jesus to escape the wicked Herod? Some men labor all their lives, neglect God and violate their religion in order to provide a fortune for their children and that their sons may have millions to squander, but God provided for His only Son in a very different way. In after years, Jesus could say, "Ask and ye shall receive," because He had tested the Father and knew.

Illustration. Some years ago, one of the missionaries sent out by Bishop Taylor was suddenly attacked by the terrible African sickness and died within a day, after commending his wife and little boy, who would be left all alone among savages, to God's care. The natives attributed the good missionary's sickness to the devil and fled, leaving the poor wife alone to care for and bury her dead. She must even make the coffin. It all seemed so hard, that before she began the sorrowful task she fell on her knees and prayed to God. While she was still praying Bishop Taylor entered. The Bishop had been far away and was not even expected to visit that section of the country for three months; but when at prayer one day he had heard a voice which told him to go at once to this missionary's wife. When they counted the days they found that message came ten days before the missionary was even ill—it took just ten days for the journey. The Bishop did not know why he had been sent to the wife instead of the missionary, until he found the husband dead. God foresees and provides for the needs of all who love Him and trust Him, just as He did for His dear Son.

Thy Will, Not Mine. How perfect was Mary's submission to God's will! "Be it unto me according to Thy word," was the spirit of the Mother of Christ. May not the mother's habit of submission have made it easier for her Son to pray in the agony of the garden, "Not my will but Thine be done"? She who had replied to the angel's announcement, "Behold the handmaid of the Lord," had journeyed the length of Palestine to come to Bethlehem without a murmur. There was no dissatisfaction when her quarters were a stable, nor complaint when forced to make the offering of poverty at the birth of her first born. So now she leaves the little home they had founded in Bethlehem to meet an uncertain future. What wonderful things God can accomplish through the soul that says

THE FLIGHT INTO EGYPT

BY PLOCKHORST

When it was told to Herod, ruler of the Jews, that a child was born, called Jesus, whom the prophets had foretold as "The King of the Jews," the ruler was very jealous and sought to do away with the Infant. Not being able to find Joseph and Mary the mother of this wonderful Child, he ordered that all babes in Bethlehem and round about be slaughtered. But God had warned Joseph, that he should leave that country and flee to Egypt, and remain there the rest of Herod's lifetime. So the Holy Child and His parents departed.

Our picture, by the celebrated German artist, Plockhorst, represents the Madonna and Jesus mounted on a donkey, as the method of travel was in those days, while Joseph follows on foot. The artist who made the picture was celebrated for the beauty of his figures. We see here highly idealized faces, as became such persons. The Lord sent an angel to guide them on the way. Quite properly this messenger is represented as an intelligent child, with angel wings, who looks up at the Virgin Mary seriously, while other angels float in the air about. Joseph is represented in the ordinary costume of the time, carrying a pilgrim staff and with a little traveling sack hung from his neck. Fastened to the saddle is a bag, perhaps filled with provisions. The landscape is exceedingly simple, not very specific, but the palm trees suggest a tropical country.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

THE FLIGHT INTO EGYPT

BERNARD PLOCKHORST. 1825.

Born in Brunswick, Germany, in 1825, Bernard Plockhorst, like many lads with the spark of graphic genius in them, became attracted to the reproductive branch of the graphic arts, and for want of anything better at hand, was by his parents apprenticed to a lithographer. This may have seemed to them to offer a fit field for employment and remuneration. It quickly proved itself, however, all too small for the growing genius.

On such rare holidays as were his, the young man was wont to stroll abroad in the rural ways near Leipsic, book and pencil in hand, intent upon the surrounding beauty of the placid country side, and the character of its men and women who might be met in the way. Upon a day he encountered another, occupied as was himself. The stranger, little older than Bernard, drew with a grace and freedom that to Plockhorst, used to the niggling exactitude of the lithographer, was miraculous. Here was the greatness of sight, the ease and masterliness which in his very soul he had longed for.

As young men do, they became acquainted. The new friend was moved to admiration no less candid than that of Plockhorst for his own, for certain qualities, undeniably great, in Bernard's work, and urged that he should go to school and paint from life—that he should get to work in earnest. Piloty himself (that was the new friend's name) was going to Munich, where were schools and a gallery. There a man might do something. He might even attain a scholarship—perchance, if he were very great, a professorship that should give him opportunity for the expression of the greatness that was in him.

It was enough. When Piloty went to Munich, Bernard packed his modest traps and his sketches and followed him. Together they worked at the great school in Munich, and so counselled was Plockhorst by his mentor—so, constantly did they work together, so utterly did Plockhorst defer to the senior knowledge of Piloty, exerted in all disinterestedness, in faithful loyal friendship, that Piloty has many times since been complimented by being referred to as Plockhorst's instructor. Piloty was something better than that—he was his pace maker.

From Munich Plockhorst went to Paris, where he at once attracted the notice of Couture.

After three years in Paris, Plockhorst went to England, and from there as a point of departure commenced the wanderyear.

Through Belgium, Holland and Italy travelled the painter, with knapsack, brushes and portfolio, looking always, sketching continually, memorizing more, as every painter who is worth his canvas does. At last Plockhorst came to Berlin, and at once attained an established and popular place as a portrait painter. In no long time, however, the innately religious aspiration of the man realized itself in a great canvas, painted in 1866, of "Mary and John Returning from the Tomb of Jesus." This determined him upon his future career as a painter of Biblical themes. "Christ's Farewell to His Mother," and the "Walk to Emmaus," are probably the best known of his works in America. Both these works are owned in St. Louis.

Others of his works of equal note abroad are "The Contest of Archangel Michael with Satan for the Body of Moses" (1861-66) in the Cologne Museum, "Mary and John Returning from Christ's Tomb" in the Lowenstein Gallery at Moscow, "Christ and the Adulteress," "Mater Dolorosa," both in the Leipzig Museum, and "Resurrection" in the Cathedral at Marienwerder. Among his more recent works may be mentioned "Christ's Entry Into Jerusalem," "Suffer Little Children to Come Unto Me," "The Flight Into Egypt," "The Good Samaritan," "Christ and St. Peter," and "Abide With Us." Of several meritorious portraits, those of Emperor William I and Empress Augusta (1876) are in the National Gallery, Berlin.

JAMES BEALINGS.

I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord,
I'll be what you want me to be.

Fleeing by Night. Night has its terrors and phantasms and even to those who are superior to superstition it is depressing to start on a journey by night. Yet how often God's people have been compelled to flee by night. How many times Jacob was alone and a wanderer by night! It was in the night that Pharaoh ordered the Israelites from Egypt. David was let down from a window in the night to escape from Saul; Daniel spent the night in the lion's den and now Mary must take the child Jesus and flee in the night. But in every instance God was with these wanderers of the night and protected them. Perhaps He wants to show His children that night has no terrors and to teach them that to those who trust God there is no night. Mary would have been foolish to have been afraid of the night which is peopled with His guardian angels and illumined by the Father's loving care.

Egypt. The Jews of Christ's time were almost as great globe trotters as the Americans of today. They were found in every country and just as Paris, London, Berlin and other European cities have a United States colony to which Americans abroad congregate, so there were Jewish colonies in Rome, Antioch, Alexandria and many other cities. In Alexandria the Jews had their own synagogues, one of which was a magnificent edifice, almost equalling the temple in Jerusalem. Matthew tells us nothing of the sojourn of the Holy Family in Egypt, but we know that Christ would have received as scant welcome from the Jewish residents in Alexandria as from those in Jerusalem. The world was never so worldly, so engrossed in pleasure, so money mad, so deep in sin as when Christ came. His Star shone from out the darkest sky and upon the blackest night the world has ever known. There was nowhere that God's beloved only Son could find a welcome. So we can only conjecture that the short time spent in Egypt was passed very quietly with the mother as His only worshipper and how little even she realized of the Divinity of her Son!

Herod's Wrath. When the wise men failed to return to his court or to report the discovery of the new-born ruler, Herod felt that he had been mocked and Matthew tells us he was "exceeding wroth," and Herod's wrath was something to be greatly feared. Why, his insane fear of a rival claimant to the throne alone had caused ten thousand to be slain during the thirty-seven years of his reign. And now the reckless tyrant ordered the slaughter of all the children in Bethlehem and its neighborhood of two years of age and under. We must remember that Bethlehem was a small village and therefore instead of the wholesale slaughter we have been led to imagine by ancient pictures which portrayed the massacre, not more than twenty children could have been included under the order; a number so small in the murderous career of a monarch who had caused one thousand persons to be slain by one decree, that the historians of the times seem not to have thought the terrible deed worthy of mention. How much better to live under a Christian government, and yet the mothers of the United States will never have security for their offspring until our nation has dethroned the wicked Herod of the saloon, which is slaying so many mothers' boys and girls.

The First Martyrs. Rachel, Jacob's beloved wife, had died near Bethlehem and 600 years before Jeremiah must have foreseen this cruel slaughter of the innocents as he looked upon the tomb of Rachel, which is at the village gates, and under the image of Rachel weeping for her children, drew the mournful picture of the bitter wailing of the mothers of Bethlehem over their murdered babes. We are apt to think of Stephen as the first martyr of the Christian era, but these slaughtered, innocent babes have been rightly called the first martyrs upon whom Satan wreaked his vengeance, because of the appearance of the star whose brightness and light was to increase until its protecting beams should cover every child throughout the world.

Quiz. 1. What young lad was sold into Egypt? 2. What resemblance did he bear to Christ? 3. For what was Herod noted? 4. What painters have portrayed the slaughter of the innocents? 5. How did God provide means for the journey into Egypt? 6. Has God ever provided for you in time of need? 7. Do you trust Him and are you trying to obey Him as Mary did?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Dreams are sometimes realities. 2. He who is in readiness may entertain angels. 3. God is the greatest of all bankers, ready to supply every need according to His riches. 4. To the trustful Christian, the night is as the day. 5. God's word will always be fulfilled; even the wicked help to bring it to pass. 6. The Herods slay little children; Christ takes them in His arms and blesses them.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

RETURN TO NAZARETH.

But when Herod

behold,

appeareth in a dream to Joseph in Egypt, Saying,

and

and go into the

for they are which sought the young child's life. And he arose, and took the and came into the land of Israel.

And he came and dwelt in a called Nazareth: that it might be fulfilled which was spoken by the prophets, He shall be called a Nazarene.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 2:19-23.

Prayer: Lord, Help us to so study the life of our Saviour that we may be brought nearer to Him than ever before. Give us such a knowledge of our Lord that we may follow in His footsteps. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"O who like Thee, so mild, so bright,
Thou Son of man, thou Light of light?
O who like Thee did ever go
So patient, through a world of woe?"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, the third year before the account called Anno Domini. Places, from Egypt to Galilee. Persons, the angel of the Lord, Joseph, Mary and Jesus.

Scripture Setting: Warned of God. Noah's warning, Heb. 11:7. Angels warn Lot, Gen. 19:15-17. God appears to Moses in Midian, Ex. 4:19-20. The angel of the Lord appears unto Balaam, Num. 22:31.

Life and Conduct Setting: The main features of the lesson are: 1. The death of Herod. 2. The recall to Palestine. 3. The assurance of safety. 4. The return from Egypt. 5. Joseph's doubts greater than his faith. 6. The turning aside into Galilee. 7. The choice of Nazareth as an abode. Prophecy again fulfilled.

CALLED A NAZARENE.

The Recall. Herod was dead and buried amid barbaric splendor in the castle of Herod near Bethlehem, the scene of the massacre that has made his name eternally infamous. The day of his death had been made a feast day on which all mourning was forbidden.

Again the angel of the Lord appears to Joseph in a dream, this time with the welcome summons to return to his own country, and Joseph, obedient always to the Heavenly vision, prepares to move his precious charges back to the land of Israel. In order to further His glorious cause or to fulfill His will, God may separate His servants from friends, kindred, home and native land, but we may be sure His angel guards all such on their journey and that He is so gracious and kind that when His plans have been worked out, He will recall them just as He did Joseph and Mary.

Assurance of Safety. No need for Joseph to fear or to seek the cover of night, "For they are dead which sought the young child's life." The words were more portentous than Joseph realized and should be a source of comfort to every Christian today. For more than one Herod has sought to kill Jesus. Satan knew that the coming of Christ into the world and His reign was the death knell of Satan's power, and

"Wherever is told

The sweet story of the Babe of old"

the devil has his emissaries who seek to take the life of the young Child. Sometimes it is a so-called historian who tries to disprove the Bible story, again it is a great infidel, like Voltaire, Paine or Ingersoll, who boasts the overthrow of the Christ and His religion, but the Herods of each generation who seek to destroy the Precious Life, die and are no more, while the Babe of Bethlehem lives with an ever-increasing number of worshippers and adherents. We need not fear for that sacred Life.

Back to Judea. Now was the prophecy fulfilled "Out of Egypt have I called my Son." The journey of the Holy Family was probably without incident, since Matthew does not dwell upon it, and probably only gives the account to show how Hosea's prophecy was fulfilled.

But we can easily imagine how joyously Mary and Joseph set out on the journey which was to bring them back to their own country. We may even picture the group. There was no ostentation or pomp to be-token royalty; no sign that the simple ass on which the mother and child were mounted, was carrying the long-expected King, the promised Messiah. The travelers formed a humble cortege, but with what tender, reverential solicitude Mary shielded the young child and what rapture stirred the mother's heart as she remembered the angel's announcement and Elizabeth's prophetic greeting. Often her voice burst out in a song of thanksgiving that she should be so highly favored among women. What mattered poverty and exile, and separation from kindred and friends, when God had chosen her and given her charge of His Son. With gladness and patience Joseph walked by the mother's side and guided the faithful ass as they journeyed under the Eastern stars. How very close God must have seemed to them as they talked of the wonderful things which had happened to them. Many questions each asked of the other, for they only vaguely understood the import of the angel's visit and of all that had occurred. The full realization of many things the mother was to learn long afterward as she stood with pierced heart under the shadow of the cross which bore her Son. Not until He had proved Himself Conqueror of death and Victor of the grave would she fully know the Divine power and authority of the Child whom she sheltered and shielded on their homeward journey. Ah, it was beautiful to climb the gray Judean hills, to look down into the great valleys and to linger in the peaceful villages of the land they loved, but neither Joseph nor Mary realized all that journey was to mean to the world.

Herod the Great had as hard a time as most rich men in disposing of his property and made a number of wills, in each naming a different heir, several of whom he afterward killed. Herod left two claimants to the throne. The matter was carried before the emperor in Rome, who decided in favor of Archelaus, greatly to the disappointment of the people, for Archelaus is said to have surpassed his father 'in cruelty, oppression, luxury, the grossest egotism and lowest sensuality,' without possessing either the talent or energy of Herod. In some way news of Archelaus' accession reached Joseph, to whom it was very bad news indeed.

Joseph trembled for the safety of his sacred charge; and instead of settling in Bethlehem, he changed his plans and turned aside by the coast road to Galilee and returned to the city of Nazareth, which had been the former home of himself and Mary.

It is said that the little son of one of our presidents, on his arrival at the White House, once wrote to his chum, "Father and I have a big undertaking on our hands in the government of this country." I think Joseph exaggerated his responsibility for the safety of the child in much the same way. The Father who had sent His Son to this world had given assurance of His safety, and that should have been enough for Joseph. How little need we should have for worry or fear or anxiety or care if we only trusted Him more!

Galilee. At this point of our story it will not be inappropriate to take a survey of Galilee, which is to be the home of Jesus for nearly thirty years. Though the Jerusalemites were wont to speak of Galilee and the Galileans with the greatest contempt, affecting an abhorrence even of their vernacular, and though they regarded these unlettered country people with great disdain, the Galilee of Joseph and Mary's time was a fertile and thickly settled country with many populous villages and towns; the center of many industries and having a goodly share of the world's commerce. It was a beautiful country, including mountain and plain, even including a far-off view of snow-capped Mount Hermon which rises to the height of eight thousand five hundred feet. While not on the sea coast, from its hills may be seen the silver sheen of the Mediterranean with white sails in the far distance and busy ports along the coast line. In the southern part of Galilee the eye may take in terraced gardens, palms, orange groves, wide spreading fig and silvery olive trees, bounded by the hills of the south. Such is the country Joseph chose for his home.

A City Called Nazareth. The Nazareth of today is said to be very like the Nazareth to which Joseph brought Mary and her Child and which they made their home; only there are no longer the great caravans which in those days formed a part of the commerce of the world; nor is Nazareth any longer a priest center as it was in Christ's time, when many priests lived in Nazareth going up to Jerusalem to perform their priestly duties. The little city lies on the hillside, 1,100 feet above the sea. It was a secluded spot for the upbringing of a destined ruler. We shall learn through His parables how instead of complaining of the narrowness of His environment and of the lack of opportunity for culture, the boy Jesus studied every phase of the village and farm life about it and used it afterward in declaring truths immortal.

Prophecy Fulfilled. The Jews had eight names by which the Messiah was to be called, the most prominent of these being the Branch. Isaiah, Jeremiah and Zechariah had all called Him by that name, Zechariah saying, "Behold the man whose name is the Branch," and strangely enough this is the meaning of the words translated "He shall be called a Nazarene." The timidity which made Joseph's fear to return to Bethlehem where Christ would have been a part of Jerusalem life and led him to bring the Child to Nazareth, where he lived as a transplanted Branch, wrought the fulfillment of prophecy.

Quiz. 1. What caused the return of the Holy Family to Palestine? 2. What caused Joseph to change his plans? 3. What prophecies were fulfilled through Christ's flight to Egypt and return? 4. What child in the Bible was hidden by his parents lest he should be destroyed by an Egyptian ruler?

Seed Truths. 1. The enemies of truth die, but truth lives on. 2. The effort to destroy belief in the Son of God is fraught with danger to the one who makes the attempt. 3. Faith is greater than obedience. 4. Few even of God's saints have been willing to abide wholly by His warnings. 5. There is no greater, today, than Jesus of Nazareth; every undeserved reproach may be made a title of honor.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE BOY JESUS.

Now his went to every year at the

And when he was

they

after the custom of the feast.

And when they had fulfilled the days, as they returned, the tarried behind in Jerusalem;

and

and his

knew not of it.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 2:40-52.

Prayer: Our Father, Help us like our great Example ever to be about Thy business. May we love Thy house and Thy word and honor Thee in the common, everyday duties of life. Make us strong in body, mind and spirit for Jesus' sake. Amen.

"I'm glad my blessed Saviour
Was once a child like me,
To show how pure and holy His little ones may be."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 8. Places, Nazareth, and the temple at Jerusalem. Persons, the boy Jesus, Mary, Joseph and the priests.

Scripture Setting: Duties of Youth. Youth should honor age, Lev. 19:32. Submission to elders commended, 1 Peter 5:5. Discipline helpful in youth, Lam. 3:27. Duty to parents, Ex. 20:12. Duty to God, Eccles. 12:1.

Life and Conduct Setting: Through our lesson Luke tells of, 1. The first passover of Jesus. 2. The first appearance of Christ in the temple. 3. His marvelous understanding of the law. 4. Jesus' first announcement of His Father. 5. His obedience and patient waiting for the time of His ministry. 6. The physical and spiritual growth of Jesus.

THE IDEAL YOUTH.

Natural Growth. Doubtless when told to be like Christ, thousands of boys and girls have thought at once of the Christ who made the lame to walk and who even raised the dead to life, and they have wondered how they were ever to be like such a supernatural person, when the truth is that from infancy to manhood Christ was just like other boys only without sin. For thirty years of His life He lived just as any man or woman may live today; for the first twelve years of His life He lived just as any boy or girl may live. Does it not make our bodies seem very sacred when we remember that Christ lived in a body just like ours, grew tall by the same natural laws and increased in weight by the same natural process as you and I?

Not a Weakling. Because He was good we must not think of Jesus as a weakling. His wonderful endurance during the years of His ministry prove that He must have been a muscular lad; a good pedestrian, lithe and agile; a boy who went through the world with eyes wide open. He knew where the foxes had their holes, the birds their nests and where the earliest wild flowers bloomed. He was a keen observer of men. The temptations common to boyhood were not absent from Galilee and if He had not been strong in spirit to resist the temptations of childhood, He would not have been strong to resist the tempter on the Mount.

A Poor Boy. Joseph, His reputed father, was a working man, or as some snobbish people would say, "a common mechanic," providing a poor home, plain clothing and simple fare for the family. Now, this did not have to be so. God, His Father, owned the world and it would have been easy for Christ to be rich. May we not think that He chose to be a poor boy so we may not look down on people who are poor, and if we are poor we need not consider ourselves so very unfortunate? Indeed, He knew that in almost every instance poverty is safer than riches for boy and girl.

While God desired a very plain earthly home for His Son, it must be a pious home. It was a home of prayer; the Holy Scriptures were known from Genesis to Malachi, and the husband and wife were conscientious in the observance of their religious duties even to going every year to Jerusalem to the feast of the passover.

The First Passover. No World's Fair ever held has been frequented by such numbers as came to Jerusalem to the feast of the passover. They came from Syria, Chaldea, Egypt, Rome, Antioch and every place, to the number of 2,700,000 persons. The festival was kept in memory of the deliverance from Egypt and lasted seven days; every male Jew came to this convocation. While women were not required to come, many did and it was natural that one, of Mary's religious nature, should accompany her husband. In those days a boy of fourteen was of age, so that at twelve we find Jesus going to the feast with Mary and Joseph. It was His first passover and how sacred the occasion must have seemed to a boy like Jesus. Some children dislike to attend church with their parents, but Jesus went gladly.

The Lost Boy. Joseph and Mary were a day's journey on their way home when a discovery was made that must have struck terror to the mother's heart. Jesus was not with the company of returning Nazarene pilgrims! We all know how easy it is to be lost in a great crowd and as their party was large, His absence was not noted till the close of the day. Some careless parents never know where their children are, but as soon as Mary missed her child they began a search for Him. Alas, for the boys who

Figure 1. The effect of the concentration of the solution on the rate of the reaction.

The rate of the reaction was measured by the change in the concentration of the reactants.

Table 1

CHRIST AMONG THE DOCTORS

BY HOFMANN

When Jesus was twelve years old, His parents took Him with them to Jerusalem, where it was the habit of many Jews to gather for the celebration of the feast of the passover.

When the days of the feast were fulfilled they returned to their own country. At the end of the first day's journey Jesus had not yet joined His parents, but had tarried at Jerusalem. He was found in the temple, among the learned doctors, listening to them and asking questions. Much the doctors wondered at His knowledge and wisdom. When asked why He had given them so much trouble, He replied to His parents: “* * * wist ye not that I must be about my Father's business?”

The picture of this notable scene by Hofmann, the German artist, is everywhere considered very beautiful. The artist is a realist and all the characters are actual men, Jews, such as may be found in any land; men of evident intelligence and education. The Christ Child is a real boy, somewhat idealized, with a sweet, earnest face, but not a fanciful figure. On the left a well dressed, black-bearded man rests his chin on his hand and thinks very hard. He is evidently impressed with the Child's knowledge. The scroll in his right hand suggests consultations of the old writings. Under his left elbow is a bound book, and a similar book is on the knees of the older man at the right corner. Not imagining that any such book existed in Christ's time, we may simply consider it an effort to make the scene realistic, as if we ourselves were in the party. Such realism appeals to mankind, and it is entirely correct from the artistic point of view.

A bald-headed man is now forcing home a pertinent question, which the Child answers with confidence. A very old, bearded man looks on, rather amused at the Infant's precocity. The young Christ is the embodiment of what the Germans call “A Wonder-child.” There is a feeling of luxuriousness in the clothing and attitudes of the doctors as if they were well cared for men of wealth. -

-JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

CHRIST AMONG THE DOCTORS
J. HUBER. 1850. OIL. 100 x 150 cm.

are lost through disobedience and sin, never to be restored to the mother who goes heart-broken to the grave.

The Search Successful. Luke tells us that "On the third day they found Him in the temple, sitting in the midst of the doctors, both hearing them and asking them questions" so intelligently as to astonish those who heard Him. The title of rabbi was very like the title Doctor of Divinity, so these doctors were learned priests, who delivered free lectures in the various rooms of the temple. They were largely attended by the youth of the day who were anxious for an education. A number of the rabbis sat in their "classroom" on a semi-circular divan or couch, while the students sat cross-legged on the ground before them.

It is not strange that the rabbis should be surprised at the Boy of twelve who could give a new meaning to the Scriptures, and life and beauty to the law, but we wonder that Mary and Joseph were amazed. It shows how hard it is for even the best of God's people to comprehend all the wonders of the Gospel. Mary's complaint of their anxious search sounds almost like a rebuke.

In His Father's House. There is a story of a princess who was stolen and became a goose girl. She grew to womanhood before she ever again entered the royal palace which had been her childhood home, and then what vague stirrings of memory were awakened by the things that had once been so familiar, though she knew them not. We may imagine that it must have seemed the same to Christ. The Son of God was in His Father's house, and though it was not the Father's pleasure to reveal Himself wholly to the Son till He should enter on His ministry, God's great love must have manifested itself to the Son, who for the first time makes public announcement of His Father. Jesus reminds Mary who His Father really is, as with reproachful tenderness He asks His mother, "How is it that ye sought me? Wist ye not that I must be about My Father's business?"

His Father's Business. There was a world of longing in that question. The first sight of the great throngs so thoughtless and worldly, even though attending a religious observance, showed Him how greatly the world needed a Saviour. Doubtless there were money changers in the temple, and though He might not yet drive them out, how it must have troubled Him to see His Father's house made a den of thieves. How the great heart, pulsating and throbbing for the sorrows of humanity, yearned to spend itself and be spent in His Father's business. Every eager youth who has longed for a part in the great battle of life and has been eager to do things can sympathize with Jesus in the stir of feeling. How truly He took upon Himself the nature of man even to its longings and aspirations!

His Father's Will. How many boys and girls longing to do great things are as patient and submissive as Jesus? It is doubtful if the Nazareth of His time had a school even like those primitive schools of Jerusalem and the larger cities of Palestine; but whether He ever went to school or not Jesus had learned the most valuable lesson in all the world, to bide God's time. It is hard for the girl who longs for a college course to content herself with plain, humdrum home duties instead. How dissatisfied is the boy who longs for a public career and must work on the farm or in the shop. But suppose one had lived in a mansion and had been a King with angels to do his bidding, would it not be still harder to relinquish all these for such a life as Jesus led; to "go down" to Nazareth and be subject to the godly but simple carpenter and to Mary who pondered so much and understood so little? Surely if we bring our yearnings and strivings, our longings and ambitions, our hopes and disappointments to Him, Christ will help us to find joy instead of discontent in the Father's will.

A General Favorite. With this little glimpse of Jesus' life in Nazareth we may well believe Luke's statement that "Jesus increased in wisdom and in stature and in favor with God and man." What a sense of values Jesus had. He did not put athletics ahead of knowledge in His preparation for life. He put first things first and sought the approval of God rather than the approval of men.

Quiz. 1. In what way was Christ different from other children? 2. What do you know about the feast of the Passover? 3. What notable announcement did Jesus make in His reply to Mary? 4. What traits of character made Christ a favorite with all?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The boy who is not strong enough to say "No," will never make a strong man. 2. Jesus chose poverty. 3. God and the angels were guests at the home despised by the elite of Jerusalem? 4. Mary could trust her boy. 5. Fortunate is that mother whose son is found in God's house. 6. It is easy to lose Jesus in the bustle of the world and to find him in the temple.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

PREACHING OF JOHN THE BAPTIST

And as the were in expectation, and all men mused in their hearts of whether he were the

Christ, or not; John answered, saying unto them all, I indeed baptize you with but one mightier than I cometh, the

of whose — I am not worthy to he shall baptize you with the Holy Ghost and with

Whose

is in his

and he will thoroughly purge his

and will gather the

into his garner; but the

with fire unquenchable.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 3:7-18, MATT. 3:1-12, MARK 1:2-8, JOHN 1:19-28.

Prayer: Lord, fill us with sorrow for our sins, help us to turn from them and find repentance and remission of sins through our Lord Jesus Christ. For His name's sake. Amen.

Rites cannot change the heart,
Undo the evil done,
Or with the uttered name impart
The nature of Thy Son.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 26. Place, Bethabara beyond Jordan. Persons, John and a multitude of hearers.

Scripture Setting: Repentance. True repentance, Isa. 1:16-17. Repentance leads to God, 2 Chron. 15:4. A condition of salvation, Ezek. 33:15. Sinners called to repentance, Luke 5:32. Repentance and remission of sins, Luke 24:47. Jesus preaches repentance, Matt. 4:17. Repentance proved by works, Acts 26:20.

Life and Conduct Setting: The main points of John's preaching are: 1. Prepare the way of the Lord. 2. Repentance must be proved by reformation. 3. The uselessness of spiritual pride. 4. True repentance is to cease from evil and do good. 5. The announcement of Christ's coming. 6. The two baptisms.

THE VOICE IN THE WILDERNESS.

Out From the Wilderness. Even if you have attended camp meeting or assembly you can hardly imagine the motley multitude that flocked to hear John the Baptist when he emerged from the wilderness, a gaunt figure, clad in strange attire, with features worn by fasting, but bearing the stamp of close communion with God. They came in growing numbers, soldiers in the uniform of Rome, rabbis in priestly garb, Pharisees and Sadducees, lawyers and scribes, the poor and the wealthy. Was it a proof of the perverseness of audiences that this stern, blunt exhorter should have suddenly become a popular preacher, or was it his message, "Repent for the kingdom of Heaven is at hand" and his call, "Prepare ye the way of the Lord," that drew the people from all the land of Judea? The Apostle John gives the secret of the wonderful power of this preacher; he was "a man sent from God." If God sends the messenger, He will provide the hearers for the message.

A Deserved Rebuke. Can you imagine a minister beginning his sermon by addressing his audience as a "generation of vipers" as this preacher did that day by the Jordan? The mode of address does not seem strange when Matthew tells us that many of his audience that morning were the wicked Pharisees and Sadducees who made the greatest pretense to righteousness while harsh, overbearing, unjust and censorious in their lives. They belonged to the same class whom the tenderest and most loving Preacher, afterward called "whited sepulchres." They didn't come to John as the others did, for repentance and confession of their sins, but with the intention of weakening his influence with the people by their criticism. How careful one should be as to the motive of worship, and not to stand in the way of sinners or sit in the seat of the scornful, when God's Spirit is abroad among the people.

John Demands Proof. These Pharisees and Sadducees whose life had been nothing but a form all their lives would have gone through the new form of baptism which John had introduced, but John demands proof of their repentance, and his declaration, "Bring forth therefore fruits worthy of repentance" is like a knife cutting apart pretense from reality. "I am sorry for my disobedience," said a frequent trespasser to his teacher. "Then be sorrier and cease to transgress," said Dr. McCosh.

Now these Pharisees and Sadducees thought repentance was only for the Gentiles. They expected Abraham's righteousness to save them just as some husbands hold their religion in their wives' names, and some men and women trust to a godly father and a praying mother for their salvation; while others trust to confirmation or church membership. John tells them "God is able of these stones to raise up children to Abraham." We wonder if he knew the prophecy contained in his words. Very shortly the Gentiles, whom the Jews regarded as of as little account as the ground they walked on, became the children of God.

A Call to Repentance. John issued a call to repentance under the figure of the axe laid to the unfruitful trees; the trees were the impenitent persons and the axe was the Judgment day. We find the multitude of hearers anxiously asking, "What shall we do then?" There is wonderful power in earnest preaching. It is said that when the great preacher, Jonathan Edwards, warned sinners to flee from the wrath of God, strong men fell to the floor and many held to the pillars of the church for support. An anxious desire to know what to do to be saved is indeed a sign of repentance.

A Common Sense Religion. Though wilderness bred, John was neither a mystic nor a dreamer. He despised cant and upheld common sense. When the soldiers, publicans and selfish asked, "Master, what shall we do?" he spun no sophistries. To the soldiers, who were employed in police as well as military duty, he did not even say "Lay down your arms." Now, the three chief evils of their profession were abuse of power, blackmail and the demand for booty; so to them John's command was "Do violence to no man, neither accuse any falsely and be content with your wages." The publicans were tax gatherers; their covetousness and dishonesty were proverbial. John places an embargo on their special sin by saying to them, "Exact no more than is required of you." To the luxurious and selfish he commanded a division of their abundance with their poorer neighbors. What could be plainer or more to the point than advice which is as appropriate today as when it was given nearly 2,000 years ago.

Art Thou the Christ. Who could this strange preacher of righteousness be? There had been none so brave to rebuke royalty since Elijah had stood before Ahab. The great Elijah had appeared in the mountain wilderness of Gilead as suddenly as John had come out from the wilderness, and he had rebuked Israel and its kings as sternly and roughly. God had said His prophet was to come in the spirit of Elijah which the Jews thought meant that Elijah was to reappear on earth. It was natural that those who held this belief thought John was actually Elijah reincarnated. Others were ready to accept him as the long promised Messiah.

An Answer That Required Courage. Many times men have yielded to the temptation of impersonating another. History records many pretenders to thrones. Was it a temptation to John, I wonder? He did not need to declare himself. The world is so credulous that he had but to maintain a discreet silence, take on an air of mystery and the fervid imagination of his hearers would do the rest; while on the other hand, if they learn that he is just an ordinary man, his only reward for his honesty may be the desertion of his audiences, since people turn as quickly as weathercocks. It is a characteristic of the man that he not only disavows either of the miraculous personalities ascribed to him, but he even minimizes his own importance. He, whose coming was foretold by two ancient prophets, and whose birth was prophesied by an angel, the man sent from God, reveals none of these supernatural incidents, but declares himself to be only a "voice in the wilderness!" Surely one test of John's greatness was his modesty and humility.

The Humble Lover. John the ascetic is a lover. He loves the Messiah whose coming he is to foretell. It had been his joy before birth; he had dreamed of his Lord's coming during the solitary years in the wilderness and he is as eager as Solomon to tell of the excellence of his Beloved. In Oriental countries a slave always unlooses the latches or fastenings of the sandals or shoes of his master upon his arrival and John is so humble he feels himself unworthy to perform even this menial service for the One he proclaims. We all so enjoy praise that it is easier to accept more than one's share, and it requires a truly generous person to confess one's own inefficiency and ascribe greater ability to another as John does, but a knowledge of the Lord makes us humble and like the One we love, who is meek and lowly.

The Two Baptisms. Jealousy had no place in John's soul. He was glad to preach the gospel of repentance, to prepare the way for his Lord and to baptize with water. It was his mission, but he rejoiced that there was a greater than he, who should baptize with the Holy Ghost and with fire. He was willing to decrease, to live a few lonely years in the wilderness, to preach a few months by the Jordan, to feel the weight of the sword upon his neck and to fill a lonely grave, if his Lord might increase. John had been inspired by the Holy Ghost, he had spoken with a tongue of fire against the evils of his day, but his were special gifts. He rejoiced that the time was near at hand when the multitudes whom he had baptized could receive the baptism of the Holy Ghost. John was so great-hearted that he rejoiced in the breadth and greatness of the Gospel which should make the least in its Kingdom greater than himself. There is no more beautiful example of "In honor preferring one another."

Quiz. 1. How many Gospels tell us of John the Baptist's preaching? 2. Which of the prophets was desert bred? 3. What relationship did John bear to Christ on the human side? 4. What king admired and feared him? 5. How, when and where did John die?

Seed Truths. 1. Some men are as subtle as serpents, but they are never admirable. 2. There is a difference between regret and repentance; the one is a sign of weakness, the other is a source of strength. 3. He who speaks the truth unadorned and unvarnished is the greatest preacher. 4. Caesar's greatness was envious Cassius' destruction and Marc Anthony's greatness. 5. As Christ increases in our hearts, self decreases.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

BAPTISM OF JESUS.

Then cometh

from

to unto John, to be baptized of him. But forbade him, saying, I have need to be baptized of thee, and comest thou to me? And Jesus answering said unto him, Suffer it to be so now: for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness. Then he suffered him. And Jesus, when he was baptized, went up straightway and, lo, the unto him, and he saw the Spirit of God

and

And lo a voice from heaven, saying, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 3:13-17, ALSO MARK 1:9-12, LUKE 3:21, 22, AND JOHN 1:29-36.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, We thank Thee for Thy testimony concerning Thy Son Jesus Christ. May He be manifest to us. Help us to realize His presence in our lives and to obey and follow where He leads. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

Spirit of truth and love,
Life-giving, holy Dove,
Speed forth thy flight.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 27. Place, Bethabara, a ford of the Jordan. Persons, Jesus, John and the Holy Spirit.

Scripture Setting: The Witness of the Holy Spirit. Descends upon Christ, Mark 1:10. The Holy Ghost in bodily shape, Luke 3:22. Seen by John the Baptist, John 1:32. Foretold by Isaiah, Isa. 11:2; 42:1.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of the lesson are: 1. John's humility. 2. Christ's fidelity to religious observances. 3. The baptism of Christ. 4. The descent of the Holy Dove. 5. The Father's acknowledgment of Christ.

THE FATHER ACKNOWLEDGES THE SON.

Teaching by Example. Christ never asked another to do what He would not do Himself. The One who said "Honor thy father and thy mother" spent the first thirty years of His life teaching this lesson of obedience to youth. During all those long years He proved Himself an obedient son. Joseph probably died when Jesus was nineteen years old and after that Jesus supported His mother by manual labor. Even in the agony of death His last care was to provide a home for her through the beloved disciple. We have come to a momentous period in His life when He set an example of the utmost importance to all who profess His name.

Preparing for the King. According to Jewish law those who were ceremonially defiled must cleanse themselves before offering sacrifice, while there was also a baptismal rite for converted Gentiles; but never before had it been suggested that the Jew should undergo a baptism of repentance. Here was a preacher who proclaimed a King and Kingdom for whose coming they were to undergo a public baptism or cleansing as an outward sign of sins repented and evils forsworn. Multitudes from far and near were baptized in the course of John's ministry and the rite became so popular that even the Pharisees and Sadducees desired to be baptized without ever repenting of their sins or desiring the coming of the Kingdom or its King.

Illustration: What bustle and preparation there is when a new king ascends the throne. A year or more is allowed to intervene before his coronation, not alone as a period of mourning for the dead king but to allow tradesmen, shopkeepers and courtiers time to prepare for the great event. Millions of pounds are expended in England alone. John only asked that in preparation for the King, they should be clean and righteous.

Open Confession. None could so denounce hypocrites and sinners and John feared neither king Herod or the Pharisees and Sadducees, but he feels himself unworthy to baptize Jesus, and protests that his baptism is a needless rite for One who is sinless. It would be more fitting that Jesus should baptize the preacher. It was true that the sinless Jesus had no need of a baptism for repentance; but on the other hand, as the Messiah bearing the sins of the world, it was meet that He should humble Himself and suffer this rite, just as when a little Babe, He had endured the rite of circumcision, and just as the sacrifice for redemption had been offered for the One who was Himself the Redeemer. It was His Cross to suffer for sin even unto death. More than that it was a baptism of preparation for the new Kingdom He was to usher in; a separation from the old life at Nazareth and consecration to the office of Messiah. Jesus answering said unto him, "Suffer it to be so now, for thus it becometh us to fulfill all righteousness."

An Infallible Test. Just as the chemist submits everything that comes to him to a solvent, Jesus had a test for every act and that test was, "Is it of God?" We will find that later He asked that question of John's baptism. Was it from Heaven or of men? Though before, He came to the Jordan to be baptized. He had settled that question for Himself. Because it was of God, sinless and stainless though He was, He was not too good to conform to any rite God approved. There is infinite love in the heart of Jesus, as He makes the sacrifice, and figuratively exchanges the robe of his spotless, stainless righteousness for the sackcloth and ashes of the sinner; bends before John, and consecrates Himself to the office of Saviour of a world of sinners. We know His habit of prayer in times of need, and Luke tells us He stepped out of the baptismal waters praying.

The Heavens Open. "And, lo, the heavens were opened unto Him." Was there a deeper significance in this than even the Apostles saw; that just at the moment Jesus bowed Himself to take up a world's guilt, the heavens should open, and was it to tell us that the heavens have ever since been open and shall always remain open to all whose sins He has borne on the Cross? And what that glimpse of Heaven meant to Jesus! One must be far, far away from home to know what pleasure even a letter from home brings. But suppose in some unexpected moment and manner the door of the real home should open, revealing all its loved ones in their accustomed places; all the cherished and familiar objects in that home, what a transport of joy it would bring. If Jesus had staid in Nazareth; if He had not taken up His cross and submitted to the ordinance of baptism, would this vision have been His?

The Baptism of the Spirit. But what is that ray of light which descends from the shining open door of Heaven, gently, swiftly and evenly, like the downward flight of a dove? It is the baptism of the Holy Ghost which John foretold, which is necessary in every Christian experience and without which even Jesus would have been powerless to save the world. The solemn act of consecration is over. As He comes out of the water the heavens open and now Matthew tells us Jesus "Saw the Spirit of God descending like a dove and lighting upon Him." Marvelous light from Heaven! Sacred Dove! It is not strange that the early Christians used the dove as the symbol of the Holy Spirit. In the Catacombs of Rome it is rudely graven over the remains of many martyred Christians, who desired no graven epitaph, save this sign and token of the Holy Spirit, which had enabled them to triumph over the flame and rack and beasts, in joyous and victorious death.

His Father's Voice. "Lo, a voice from Heaven, saying, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." After thirty years of silence, Jesus heard His Father's voice and was greeted as "My beloved Son."

How welcome that salutation! It told Him that all that quiet waiting in Nazareth; the meek obedience to earthly parents; the life of poverty and manual labor were pleasing in God's sight. Thus far His course was approved. The baptism was Jesus' consecration, the voice and salutation was God's anointing of His Son.

Three in One. Now, strange as it may seem, every person is three persons in one. We have a physical being which is our body; our intellectual being which is the mind, and a spiritual being which is the soul. The body labors with hands and feet and its work is shown in the pyramids of Egypt, the great wall of China and other physical memorials; the mind works through the brain and all the mighty inventions of the land are the result of its labor; the soul manifests itself through our inner consciousness, and every noble cathedral, every beautiful painting that tells of Christ, all ennobling literature, all great oratorios are manifestations of the soul. Mind, soul and body working together have created all ennobling architecture, art, music and painting which this earth contains. So we find in the Divine Being we worship, three perfect persons: the Father who created us; the Holy Ghost which is His Spirit animating us to good deeds and thoughts, and Christ, our Saviour and Example.

A Mighty Task. The task of saving the world was so great that even Christ alone could not have accomplished our redemption. Therefore at the moment when by His baptism He had consecrated Himself to this stupendous task, the Holy Spirit came down from Heaven and rested on Him. Thereafter He would work in its power. By an unmistakable token—His own voice—God the Father proclaimed His co-operation in the work. That is why Matthew tells of the descent of the Holy Spirit and the acknowledgment of the Father; so that we may know that every attribute of the God-head is enlisted in the redemption of the world. We may well rejoice that we have so sure a salvation.

Quiz. 1. How old was Jesus at the time of His baptism? 2. What did John's baptism signify? 3. Why could the sinless Jesus submit to baptism for repentance? 4. What prophet tells us that He bore our sins? 5. On what other occasion was Christ acknowledged by a voice from Heaven?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Humility and holiness combined make greatness of character. 2. Some esteem themselves too good to submit to the religious forms, but the One who was altogether good saw the need of them. 3. Father, Son and Holy Ghost combined for the redemption of the world. 4. The work of salvation is pleasing to God.

MARGARET WINTINGER.

THE TEMPTATION OF JESUS.

Then was Jesus led up of the spirit into the

to be tempted of

And when he had fasted forty days and forty

he was afterward
an hungred.
And when the

he said, If thou be the Son of God, command that these be made

But he answered and said,
It is written,

shall not live by

alone, but by every word that proceedeth out of the mouth of God.

THE TEMPTATION OF JESUS.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 4:1-11; ALSO MARK 1:12, 13, LUKE 4:1-13.

Prayer: Lord, For times of temptation may we be prepared by the indwelling of Thy Holy Spirit and the knowledge of Thy Word. Thou who wast in all points tempted like as we are, do Thou deliver us from every device of the evil one. May our trials and temptations only fit us for better service. In Jesus' name. Amen.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 27. Place, Mt. Quarantania, near Jericho. Persons, Jesus, Satan and angels.

Scripture Setting: Help in Temptation. Deliverance from temptation, 2 Peter 2:9. Christ as an Intercessor, Luke 22:31, 32. God a help in temptation, 1 Cor. 10:13. Christ's victory over temptation a help to those tempted, Heb. 2:18. Christ, our High Priest, Heb. 4:15, 16.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of the Temptation in the Wilderness are: 1. It follows a time of highest spiritual exaltation. 2. The duration and loneliness of the struggle. 3. During temptation Jesus keeps his body under through fasting. 4. The tempter comes at the weakest moment. 5. He would extinguish faith and awaken doubt as to the truth of God's record. 6. The devil ceases his jibes of unbelief and in the last temptation acknowledges Christ.

A BATTLE OF TWO KINGS.

How the Battle Was Fought. Marvelous as it may seem the greatest battle the world has ever known and the one in which the most momentous issues were at stake was fought by two. It was greater than Thermopole or Waterloo. Poets and painters have portrayed it as a battle of two kings, giving the prince of darkness a real form and robing Christ as the King of glory. But if the glorious and all powerful Lord of Heaven met and conquered a wicard and sinister bodily presence the record would be of little more value to us than the story of St. George and the dragon; while robbed of such spectacular features it becomes your battle and mine, and the victory is for us, since the Scriptures tell us Christ was "in all points tempted in like manner as we are, only without sin." It is more important that we should know about it than any battle in our school histories, since from the struggle we are to learn how to become conquerors. We are to study His sword thrusts knowing that His antagonist is now our antagonist, and that if we follow His mode of warfare the wily Satan will flee from us as he did from Jesus. Since our adversary always appears to us in spirit and suggestion, may we not believe that temptation came to Christ in the same way? The battle will be as real, the story plainer and it will be more helpful to us in the warfare we must wage. And are not the real battles of the world fought in this manner? What is a victory gained through standing armies and great dreadnoughts but a mere conquest by brute force?

The Battle Field. It was a battle of the wilderness, only no sound of martial music and clanging artillery in the wilderness of Quarantania—the most lonely, dreary and desolate place in all the world. Where are

"Take the name of Jesus ever,
As a shield from every snare;
If temptations round you gather,
Breathe that holy name in prayer."

the myriad hosts gathering for conflict? We see only a Man, weary and spent, among the wild beasts that inhabit this region. Satan, the offensive force, is invisible and the sole defense against the mighty foe is this one Man.

The Accoutrement. But let us not turn away since the battle is ours, for Jesus carried into the wilderness our bone and blood, flesh and nerves just like ours. Emptied of all Divine attributes He bore our humanity. But He carries with Him the memory of that moment when the heavens opened to Him the glory that had been His even before the world came into existence. After a silence of thirty years He had heard His Father's voice in commendation and while still in a transport of happiness, He must go to the battlefield! Perhaps you can recall some great blessing which came to you making you stronger to endure the trial that followed. It is God's way of preparing His children for the conflict of life.

The Discipline. The discipline of those forty days in the wilderness was most stern. The battle was waged without interruption. He was continually tempted and St. Luke tells us, "He did eat nothing in those days." St. Paul says those who would be victors should keep their bodies under and Jesus held His body under subjection through fasting. We honor those patriot fathers whose muskets held the wilderness; for the hardships they endured, that future generations might dwell in safety in its fastnesses; but we will never comprehend all that Jesus endured for us during those forty days when He not only fought our battle but blazed a way of safety for all who must follow Him in the wilderness of temptation.

The Enemies' Tactics. Satan hates to see any young person receive the baptismal token of God's acceptance, but how he must have raged when Jesus consecrated His beautiful, pure young manhood to the salvation of a world from Satan's rule, by baptism in the Jordan. He would overcome Christ at the outset of His ministry, and he marshals the first great regiment of doubts to defeat Jesus. Satan always knows the most opportune moment and the most insidious temptation to offer, so he attacks Jesus when worn and wearied from the forty days' fast and fight, and he uses the most powerful battering ram in all the world, manned by that single word of two letters, "If." "If Thou be the Son of God, command that these stones be made bread."

Jesus Uses the Sword. Now temptation may come from a most innocent desire and there is no sin if there is no yielding to temptation. Jesus was hungry. The devil knew that. God had just acknowledged Jesus as His Son; could He be made to doubt God's word all his fortifications would be gone. Jesus never used His sacred power merely for His own benefit. Should He do so now, self would be in the saddle and self is always a traitor to God. Then, too, had He commanded the stones into bread, Jesus would have forever separated Himself from the hungry and suffering. In the hour of His greatest need He chose to be the Brother of every man and woman who has ever suffered the pangs of hunger. It was His meat to do the will of the Father; He would not exchange spiritual meat for material bread, he preferred physical to soul hunger. Therefore He draws his sword, which is the Word of God, and strikes effectively, "It is written that man shall not live by bread alone." Like a true soldier Jesus always had His sword at His side. Do we, I wonder?

Sword Parries Sword. In the Gettysburg battlefield guides will show you where the battle became a hand to hand conflict. It is so in the wilderness now. In a moment the devil has taken Jesus (whether bodily or in a vision we do not know) to Jerusalem; He is on the highest pinnacle of the temple. On the one side, deep below, were the worshippers who thronged the temple courts; on the other the giddy depth of the gorge of the Kedron. Only a miracle could avert death from the perilous fall down either side. The enemy shows Him this and Satan quotes Scripture. He, too, acknowledges the power of such a weapon. But how awkwardly he handles the "Sword of the Word," recalling the promise of the ninety-first Psalm and urging Jesus to summon angelic protection by casting Himself down.

Foiled! Sword clashes sword, and Jesus grasping the hilt, "It is written," gives a telling thrust, "Thou shalt not tempt the Lord Thy God." Jesus knew that His acceptance by the Jews as the Messia was improbable; it was at best a question of ages and centuries. The devil has thwarted many a reformer by offering a short cut; here is a chance to expedite matters. Should Jesus reach them unharmed from the dizzy height of the pinnacle, they could but acknowledge that He must be the One of whom it was promised "He shall give His angels charge concerning Thee." But have we ever a right to premeditatively and presumptuously thrust ourselves upon God's providence? Does He not expect us to give our bodies the care natural law demands? Jesus thought so, and He had all the laws that govern our safekeeping as so sacred that He would not tempt God by disregarding them. Satan is foiled.

The Enemy Offers Terms. Satan is a very wise tactician. He now sees that it is impossible to conquer Jesus, but can he not make Him tributary to himself and use His supernatural power as an ally to his own destructive work? This time Jesus is shown the whole world, and the lying Satan says, "All these things will I give Thee, if Thou wilt fall down and worship me." It is a beautiful world, as we all know, stored with wealth and power; Jesus left His Heavenly throne to save it, and now it is offered to Him. Can He do better than to accept it? Some sophists would even call the offer providential.

Surely a starving opponent will accept the overture from so powerful an adversary; but Jesus will not resort to worldly methods to gain a Divine purpose. It is a world created by His Father. It is God's world. In claiming it, Satan sought to deceive the second Adam with a lie, as he deceived the first Adam. Besides Jesus has seen the world from a Heavenly viewpoint and he knows that though once pure, it is now a lost world. Yes, and the devil can only give for a season and pay in counterfeit coin, for this vain earth is to vanish into nothingness and a new Heaven and a new earth shall replace it. Jesus will not make obeisance to Satan. Weak and spent as He is, He completes the victory by forcing the enemy to retreat. "Get thee hence, Satan."

Conqueror. "And behold, angels came and ministered unto Him." Blessed moment for us when Jesus refused earthly honor for the solitary path of submission, suffering and sacrifice, even though He paid for the refusal with His life. We may well rejoice that in that moment in the wilderness Jesus chose the cross and crucifixion that we might be crowned as conquerors. For through His victory we are able to overcome Satan.

Quiz. 1. What two Bible characters fasted forty days? 2. Name some other Bible characters that were tempted. 3. To what part of Jesus' nature did the first temptation appeal? 4. The second temptation? 5. The third temptation? 6. Which temptation was the strongest?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Each has his wilderness battle. 2. Christ wore no halo or crown into the wilderness. 3. Every battle should be preceded by a vision of God. 4. Only a moment were the heavens opened, but the wilderness held Him forty days and forty nights. 5. "If" is the devil's first lieutenant. 6. The world wants a sovereign but needs a Saviour. 7. Angels watch over every conflict and participate in each victory over Satan.

CHRIST TAKING LEAVE OF HIS MOTHER

BY PLOCKHORST

It is not probable that this scene is described in the Bible, but our imagination may well picture the parting of Christ from His mother, as He starts on His life work. It is a touching moment both for Him and for her, and awakens human sympathy to a high degree.

In the usual dress of the Orient, His pilgrim staff in His hand, Jesus speaks His parting words. The earnest look of the Christ and the perceiving gaze of the holy mother explain themselves perfectly. In the distance Christ's followers stand waiting for His coming. The arch doorway opens upon a landscape of palms.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

CHRIST TAKING LEAVE OF HIS MOTHER.

JESUS BEGINS HIS MINISTRY.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 4:17-25; ALSO MARK 1; LUKE 4. AND JOHN 1-4.

Prayer: Help us to realize, our Father, that we, too, are ministers of thy grace and gospel, and that only as we follow closely the teaching and example of Jesus shall we make our ministry a sure and abiding blessing. By the indwelling of the Spirit equip us for our work and cause it to be fruitful in those graces which are for the healing of the nations. Through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

O give us hearts to love like Thee,
Like Thee, O Lord, to grieve
Far more for others' sins than all
The wrongs that we receive.
One with Thyself, may every eye
In us, thy brethren, see
That gentleness and grace that spring
From union, Lord, with Thee.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATION.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28, spring and summer. Place, Galilee, especially Capernaum, which was practically the headquarters of Jesus during his public ministry. Persons, Jesus, Peter and Andrew, brothers; James and John, also brothers, and their father Zebedee. All were Galileans.

Scripture Setting: Read the incidents of the home life and training of Jesus; His Visit to the Temple, Luke 2:40-52. His Baptism, Matt. 3:13-17. His Temptation, Matt. 4:1-11.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Every man has a mission in the world. 2. Living with God, he is likely to make no mistake about it. 3. He begins early to prepare for it. 4. He does not waste his time or strength in selfish or useless side lines. 5. He finds it to center in two things—a desire to do the will of God, and to help his fellow men. 6. The best preparation is to build up a strong character perfecting holiness in the fear of the Lord. 7. He will select good men to help him in his work—that is why the Church exists. 8. He will not be above ministering to men's bodies while seeking the welfare of their souls. Jesus found bread for the hungry and health for the sick.

HOW TO SAVE THE WORLD.

A New Order. The world into which Jesus came was sorely in need of help. It was a sordid world; men and women were content with material good, with comfort, luxury, freedom from work and pain and sorrow, with scarcely a thought of virtue, goodness, brotherly kindness. It was therefore a sad world and a wicked world, going from bad to worse and no hand outstretched to save. Even the religious teachers of that day thought of God, when they thought of him at all, as of some one greatly interested in ceremonial worship and greatly despising the publican, the sinner, the outcast. Then came Jesus and a new order of things began.

Division of Time. Account for it as we will, the most intelligent and best people look back to that first coming of Jesus as to a new era in the world's development and as to the beginning of the best order the world has ever known. It is not without significance that we mark the grand divisions of history as "Before Christ (B. C.)" and "In the year of the Lord (A. D.)"

The Herald of the New Order. Jesus was at this time just turned thirty. He came to his work in the prime of his young manhood. He did not hurry nor begrudge the time of his preparation. He was content in this, as in all things, to await the Father's good pleasure. He knew and accepted the discipline of the home; He had kept His senses keen and alert to the revelations of God in the world about Him, in the world within Him, and in the history of His people. He knew His Scriptures not only as to the letter but as to the spirit, and through them God spoke to His responsive soul. He had His trade—that of the carpenter—and lived in modest independence. He moved among the people in friendly fashion and learned sympathy for their woes and wants, for their sorrows and their sicknesses. In daily contact with the religious leaders of his day, He saw and felt the hollowness and deadness of the popular religious teachings and practices, and His heart was stirred to a deep compassion for the people who were as sheep having no shepherd. But chiefly he had learned the habit of intimate communion with the Father in perfect love of whom was made that disclosure of the Father's will concerning all his children which has thrilled the heart of the world from that day to this.

Organizing for World Conquest. There is a story to the effect that Jesus, when asked how he expected his work to be carried on, said "By my friends." As soon as he entered upon his public work he began to gather about himself some of these "friends."

Choosing His Friends. The Gospel of John (chapters one to four) tells the story. He started with Andrew, Peter, James and John; later He added Philip and Nathaniel; later, Matthew and the others. As the world looks at such things, the start was not very promising. They were not rich nor learned, and they had no influential connections either with the priesthood or the government. But they were good, wholesome, average men, capable of honest love and indefeasible loyalty, and out of such material the best friends of Christ have been created in all succeeding ages. They had good sense and high character; they knew how to learn and how to teach; they were devoted, industrious, not easily discouraged and friendly, and they loved the Master with unquenchable love. They had spiritual insight and moral fibre; for a religion designed to create spiritual insight and moral fibre better men could not have been found. Each had his own individual characteristics, but all had a common devotion to the Master and His cause. The exception to this was Judas, who doubtless began well but was drawn away by his own selfish greed and became a deserter and traitor.

The Message of Good Will. The mission of Jesus was promoted in two ways: first, by teaching and preaching; second, by works of mercy. Both were designed to emphasize the central thought of His message, viz., that "God so loved the world" He would not leave anything undone to make proof of that love.

Jesus began his ministry with a summons to "Repent." Repent means a change of mind, a turning one's back upon old ways and a resolute seeking of new ways. Jesus wanted, above all things, a new way of thinking about God. They had been thinking of Him as an "absentee" God with no concern for the poor, the sinful, the weak, the distressed, the sorrowful, and with a great concern for temple treading and new moons, with thousands of rams and ten thousands of rivers of oil. "Repent," says Jesus, "change your ways of thinking about God, and see how completely you will then change your way of thinking about other things and your way of life." All religion goes back to that. If a man has right thoughts about God he will have right thoughts about sin, about forgiveness, about holiness, about loving one's neighbor and about serving his day and generation. God is not afar off; He is nigh at hand; He is in the hearts of men; He loves them with an everlasting love; He wants above all things to have them as His dear children in truth and in deed.

The description of Jesus in His concern for the sick is beautiful and touching in the extreme. "They brought all the sick to Him; the people who were suffering from various diseases and pains—demoniacs, epileptics, paralytics; and He cured them." The Church through many centuries, by reason of a false contempt for the body and a grievous misunderstanding of what was involved in spiritual religion, has almost dropped out of sight this idea of God's concern for our bodily ailments. Much truer is the thought of the poet:

The healing of his seamless dress
Is by our beds of pain;
We touch him in life's throng and press,
And we are whole again.

Prayer has still its healing efficacy; and God has still unfailing compassion and help for all who suffer.

The Worth of the Message. Ours is a practical age. We ask of every religion, What of it for the good of man? This is as it ought to be. Religion does not exist for itself; it exists as God's way of helping man to his best self. Has the message of Christ done anything for the welfare of the race?

What Christianity Has Done. Christianity with all its blemishes from the conduct of deficient Christians has surely established a claim upon men's consideration. It has changed the face of the world and all for the better. It has given man his chance at forgiveness and at holiness of character and of life. It has ameliorated the condition of the poor and oppressed; it has freed the slave; it has saved the drunkard and the victim of lust; it has promoted social advance and political liberty; it has permeated the world with its passion for pity and kindness; it has established hospitals for the sick, care for the orphan, homes for the aged, schools for the ignorant, protection for the weak and succor for the needy.

One may examine any institution which has promise of good for man and he will find that the informing spirit which moves and rules it has the Christian stamp upon it. Nor are its sympathies narrow and exclusive. It has the whole world for its parish; and everywhere it brings light to them that sit in darkness and in the shadow of death to bring their feet into the way of peace.

Quiz and Study. 1. What was the home life of Jesus? How does it illustrate the value of family religion? 2. What Bible did Jesus have? 3. Why was Jesus baptized? 4. Could Jesus be tempted of evil? 5. What kind of men did Jesus select as disciples? 6. Has he a place for "plain people" in the work for the Kingdom? 7. Is his religion easy or difficult? 8. What has it done for you? What has it done for the world?

Practical Thoughts. 1. Jesus needs friends to carry on his work. Are you his friend? 2. A man is likely to find Jesus if he is bound to find him. 3. Jesus found a sad world and brought joy into it. 4. The world finds the true secret of joy in the Christian view of life. 5. Discipleship means whole hearted dedication to the service of Christ. The first disciples "left all and followed him." 6. Jesus says the beginning of the Christian life is to get a change of heart and this change of heart is got by bringing Jesus into one's life as the controlling factor of that life. 7. Think of Peter and Andrew as fishermen and then think how they glorified life by becoming disciples.

DR. CHARLES M. STUART.

JESUS AND JOHN.

The next day seeth

and saith,

the

of God,
which taketh away the

of the world.

This is he of whom I said, After me cometh a man which is preferred before me: for he was before me.
And I knew him not: but he that sent me to baptize with water,

the same
said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the

and

the same is he which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost.

And I saw, and bare record that this is the Son of God.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 1:29-37.

Prayer: Lord, help us, like John, to see in Jesus the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world. May we as unselfishly seek the advancement of Thy Kingdom. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

Just as I am—Thy love unknown
Hath broken every barrier down;
Now to be Thine, yea Thine alone,
O Lamb of God, I come! I come!

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, January, A. D. 27. Place, Bethabara, a ford of the Jordan. Persons, Jesus and John.

Scripture Setting: Jesus, the Lamb of God. As a lamb to the slaughter, Isa. 53:7. The Lamb slain, Rev. 5:8-9. Praise of the Lamb, Rev. 5:12-13. Satan overcome by the blood of the Lamb, Rev. 12:9-11. The Lamb and His company on Mt. Zion, Rev. 14:1. The song of the Lamb, Rev. 15:3. The Lamb enthroned, Rev. 22:1-3.

Life and Conduct Setting: The story of Jesus and John sets forth: 1. John's testimony concerning the descent of the Holy Spirit at the baptism of Jesus. 2. The significance of that appearance. 3. John's announcement of Jesus as the Lamb of God, the Saviour of the world. 4. His record of Jesus as the Son of God. 5. John's humility and greatness.

AN IMPORTANT WITNESS.

The Evidence. We cannot study the story of Jesus without being impressed with the weight of evidence which proves that that wondrous life was and is still the greatest reality in all the world. Matthew and John, two of the inspired writers of the four Gospels which tell the sacred story, were of the twelve disciples who lived with Jesus in the closest companionship. Mark tells the story as he heard it from Peter; while Luke tests and sifts documentary evidence and the oral testimony of living witnesses that we may know their certainty; and each tells the story as he sees it, not as a reiteration of the other as in manufactured testimony, but bearing the stamp of individuality, and the vital impress of truth.

The Witness. Much depends upon the character of a witness; his antecedents, his life, the source of his information, all these must be investigated before his testimony will stand in court. Never in all the world had a claimant so unimpeachable a witness as the Apostle John brings before us, whom he introduces as "A man sent from God, whose name was John," "for a witness to bear witness of the Light, that all men through him might believe." So important a case demanded a God-sent witness. We are glad John was not too timid to testify of his Master.

Jesus Comes to John. Up to this time Jesus and John had lived, one in the hill country of Galilee, the other in the hill country of Judea; the one in a comparatively secluded village, the other in the wilderness itself. Was is not a strange preparation for lives destined to the most wonderful greatness? Perhaps young people of today are too much before the public eye. Mary visited the mother of John the Baptist a short time before his birth, but we do not know that the cousins ever met. Ever since August, John has been preaching and his fame has spread throughout Judea. It is now early in January, and he is preaching at Bethabara the coming of the Kingdom. Though we do not know just which ford of the Jordan is thus designated, it is supposed to have been only twenty miles from Nazareth, the home of Jesus. His preaching must have been known in the humble home of the carpenter's Son. Jesus knew for a certainty that it was now "time He was about His Father's business."

The Meeting. It may have been during one of those few intervals of rest so necessary to the strenuous exhorter. His disciples who remain with Him have fallen back that he may have a few moments' solitude. What a regal figure is the wilderness preacher there alone by the Jordan! Stern, gaunt and fearless He stands! We do not wonder that all Judea, Jerusalem and Galilee bow down in that kingly presence, and that even Herod feared Him. But, look! What causes the fearless John to tremble and bow in humble obeisance? Though John fails to recognize Him and at first knows Him not, there is something in the presence of the one sinless Man whom the world has ever known, which fills John with a rapture of humility. After all, the strongest influence is the unconscious influence of holy living.

Comest Thou to Me? John bends low before this obscure, nameless Man of Galilee. We know little of what passed between these two at this meeting. It could not have been a prolonged interview. Jesus did not even declare Himself. He left that to the Father; but He must have claimed the right of baptism, for John looks at the holy and sinless, sinless One, and says, "I have need to be baptized of Thee, and comest Thou to me?"

His Supreme Moment. Jesus replies and "then he suffered Him." Surely no art of shorthand equals Matthew's directness and brevity. In four words he states a fulfillment of prophecy which required eight hundred years of fruition and records that which shall influence all eternity. So quickly and briefly Matthew tells of the supreme moment of John's lifetime; the prayers of a godly father and mother, the annunciation of the angel Gabriel, his birth and training in the temple and isolation in the wilderness were all converged in those four words. The solemnity of that moment! For John the Baptist bore this record for all ages. "He that sent me to baptize with water, the same said unto me, Upon whom thou shalt see the Spirit descending and remaining on Him, the same is He which baptizeth with the Holy Ghost." John's hour has struck twelve. It were worth a morn in the desert and a short prison afternoon, with a long and final night to have the glory and honor of such a high noon.

John's Testimony. On His return from the temptation in the wilderness, Jesus again sought John, who seeth Jesus coming unto him and saith, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world." His hearers understood the figure of speech. The words were exactly what any pious Jew would have said of the pascal lamb or of the lambs offered morning and evening at the temple for the sins of their nation, but it was so different from their preconceived ideas of the Messiah; that He whom they desired as an earthly King and avenger should come with the meekness, lowliness and patience of a lamb, in some mysterious way to suffer as the victims on the altar for the sins of the world! If the witness had said for the sins of His people, it would have been easier of acceptance, but to suffer for the sins of those outside Israel, it was inconceivable! Are there not some who are still as narrow as John's hearers.

The First to Accept the Evidence. Notwithstanding the fifty-third chapter of Isaiah with which Pharisees and Sadducees were familiar, we doubt if any of his hearers accepted that first broad statement of John's. Certainly the Apostle makes no mention of such acceptance, but again that next day John reaffirmed his testimony. He saw Jesus walking and pointing Him out to the two disciples that were with him, he said, "Behold the Lamb of God." The two disciples were John and Andrew, and in the Gospel of the former we find John the Baptist's testimony recorded. Those beautiful words, "A man sent from God, whose name was John," are the Apostle's appreciation of his former master.

The two Galilean youths who wore the humble garb of fishermen from the sea coast of Galilee were struck with the remarkable testimony of John, as well as the kingly presence of Jesus, and reverently approached him. As they drew near, He turned toward them and gently asked, "What seek ye?" So sudden had been the inspiration to follow Him, that they hardly knew the motives that prompted them. But their answer showed their profound reverence. "Rabbi," they said, "where art thou staying?" Kindly Jesus replied, "Come and see." They accompanied Him to His temporary abode, which was probably a booth constructed of palm branches, and stayed with Jesus the rest of the afternoon and probably remained over night. During that interview they listened to the Great Teacher, and, ere they departed, the Spirit made it clear to them that the Kingdom, which John preached, had come, and they were in the presence of the King whose forerunner was John, the Baptist. Their career was determined: though they had been John's disciples, henceforth they would follow Jesus.

"I Must Decrease." Was it not a high privilege for John to be the forerunner of Jesus and to introduce Him to His ministry as the Lamb of God? The disciples understood, and left John to follow Jesus, but what did that matter? It was a noble minded and generous friend's last surrender to the One he loved. We can almost see him as he stands alone by the Jordan watching the receding forms of his former disciples and their new Master. It has been truly said that the character of John is one of the most exalted the kingdom of God can show. He who was the theme of the ancient prophets, whose birth was announced by one no less mighty than the angel Gabriel, the God-sent man, disparages self when he might have enlisted thousands to his cause by a single word; and with burning words seeks to win their loyalty to One they had not even seen. Self is so crucified in him that he joyfully predicts his own decline; points his own disciples to another. The grandeur of such unselfishness makes the declaration "I must decrease," a badge of distinction.

Quiz. 1. When did Jesus come to John? 2. Why did John at first decline to baptize Him? 3. What great prophet likened Christ to a Lamb? 4. By what sign was John to recognize Jesus as the Messiah? 5. Who were the first disciples to follow Jesus?

Seed Thoughts. 1. All true greatness is bred in retirement. 2. The acknowledgment of one's superiors is a test of greatness. 3. Every saved soul is a witness sent from God. 4. It is not only a privilege but a duty to testify of Christ. 5. The first two disciples were the fruits of testimony.

MARGARET WINTINGER.

THE FIRST MIRACLE.

And the third day there was a marriage in

and the

was there: And both Jesus was called, and his

to the

And when they wanted wine, the mother of Jesus saith unto him, They have no wine. Jesus saith unto her, Woman, what have I to do with thee? mine hour is not yet come. His mother saith unto the Whatsoever he saith unto you, do it. And there were set there of stone, after the manner of the purifying of the Jews, containing two or three firkins apiece. Jesus saith unto them, Fill the waterpots with up to the brim.

And

THE FIRST MIRACLE.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 2:1-10.

Prayer: Lord, We thank Thee that Thou dost share our joys as well as our sorrows; that Thou didst come that we might have life and have it more abundantly. Increase our faith that whatsoever Thou dost command us we may do it, assured that Thy blessing will follow. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"How welcome was the call,
And sweet the festal lay,
When Jesus deemed in Cana's hall
To bless the marriage day."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 27. Place, Cana. Persons, Jesus, Mary, marriage guests, and servants.

Scripture Setting: The Bride and Bridegroom. Christ the Bridegroom, Matt. 9:15. John the Baptist introduces the Bridegroom, John 3:29. The church, the bride, Rev. 19:7-8. The bride of the Lamb, Rev. 21:9-10. The marriage of the Lamb, Rev. 19:9.

Life and Conduct Setting: The presence of Christ at the marriage at Cana shows forth: 1. Jesus' sympathy with human joy. 2. His sanction of the marriage relation. 3. Mary's faith and the servant's obedience. 4. His power over the forces of nature. 5. His readiness to add to human enjoyment. 6. Manifests the human and Divine nature of Jesus; He appears as the human friend and as the Creator.

JESUS A WEDDING GUEST.

The Place. It all occurred so long ago that the little town of Cana has passed out of existence and even the most learned travellers are unable to fix the site with certainty, though we know it was a few miles northeast of Nazareth, Jesus' home town. We may picture its houses rising on the terraced slope of a hill and presenting a view of a smiling valley famous for producing the best pomegranates in all Palestine. Cana was the home of Nathaniel, the disciple who was later known as Bartholomew, upon whose invitation Jesus came direct to Cana from Bethabara as his guest. And naturally enough Nathaniel invited his friend Philip, and Peter and Andrew of the same town, and John the disciple. What a blessed company!

The Occasion. There was a marriage in Cana. Now as you know, a wedding is always a very important event in every community and nowhere more so than in Palestine. On the evening of the marriage the bride was led from her home to that of her husband, followed by her friends; the guests of honor were accorded a place near the bride and bore myrtle branches and wreaths of flowers; others carried torches or lamps on poles. All wore festive array and the wedding party was preceded by music and attendants, who distributed presents among grown people and children. Every one who met it was expected to rise and join the marriage procession. It would have been very impolite to do otherwise, and it was almost a religious duty to praise the beauty, modesty and goodness of the bride. At her new home she was led to her husband, a marriage formula was repeated and bride and bridegroom were crowned with flowers. A legal instrument was signed which read not unlike our own marriage service; the husband promised to work for his bride, to honor, keep and care for her. Then after the prescribed washing of the hands and benediction, the wedding festivities began, which sometimes lasted several days.

The Wedding Guest. The wedding was in the house of a friend, probably a relative of Mary's and "the mother of Jesus was there." Jesus and His disciples were invited. Indeed He was the prominent guest. There have been innumerable weddings since then, many thousands noted for their magnificence, lavish expenditure and great display; some have been royal marriages, others of international fame, occupying newspaper space and public attention, but interest in these affairs have long palled, while the simple marriage of a Galilean couple in a humble home in an extinct village has become, among believers and unbelievers, the most noted marriage in all history. Probably it was not given an inch of space in the columns of the society journal which archaeologists tell us they had in Jerusalem, but endless libraries have been written upon it. All because of the Guest who honored the occasion with His presence. How important it is as to who are our associates, friends and intimate companions.

An Embarrassing Moment. The festivities are on. Shall we pass through the court and enter the covered gallery leading to the feast chamber? Festive decorations are abundant. In the gallery are six water-pots in which the guests may wash their hands before and after eating. Though it is a modest home, the lofty ceilings give a spacious air to the feast chamber; for in Palestine the height of the ceiling was always half the sum of the length and breadth of the room. The dining room is brilliantly lighted with lamps and candlesticks; the guests are disposed around tables on couches. A most awkward thing has happened. The wine has failed! Can you not imagine the embarrassment of those in charge?

Mother Would Relieve the Situation. Mary perceives the predicament. It is a testimony to her Son's devoted care that so naturally and freely she should come to Him in her embarrassment. We may be sure that He was a model Son or Mary would not have shown such absolute confidence in Jesus. During the years of their relationship as mother and Son, the mother has never known a care that the Son has not lifted; never has been confronted by a single difficulty, great or trivial, that He has not relieved. Just what He can or will do in this instance she does not know, but she is confident that He will not fail her; in some way He will relieve the situation. We wonder if every mother may turn to her son for support in her difficulties? Mary whispers to her Son, "They have no wine."

Mother and Son. Nowadays when we have "shop-ladies," "wash-ladies" and "society ladies," we are apt to wonder that Jesus should use the term "Woman" in addressing Mary, forgetful that the term is God-given. As He used the same term when commending Mary to John's care at the crucifixion, we may be sure He meant no disrespect. May it not be that He did not say "Mother" because henceforth no one woman was to hold that sacred claim? Hereafter throughout all ages in the humblest of His disciples He beholds His mother and His brethren. The poor old washerwoman who sings of Jesus as her Friend receives from Him the reverence and honor due a mother. As heretofore, Mary shall receive His tenderest care and consideration, but the earthly relationship must not interfere with His Divine mission. And Mary accepts the lesson. She does not always understand Him, she may not always comprehend her place, but she trusts Him and she knows He intends to help her. He would not use his Divine power to stay His own hunger, but was there a sick child, a blind beggar by the roadside, a leper despised and abhorred, was there even the joy of a feast interrupted; He does not hesitate to use His gift. In their straightened circumstances the givers of the marriage feast have counted too closely. The wine has failed. An insignificant thing surely, but no need of life is too small for His largess. Behold, He uses His wondrous power to help out one of the little family difficulties begotten of poverty.

The Fruit of Obedience. Mary tells the servants, "Whatsoever He saith unto you, do it." If every one of us were to follow Mary's advice, what wonderful things might be accomplished. When Jesus said, "Fill the water-pots with water," they filled them, not half full but to the brim. He said, "Draw out now and bear to the governor of the feast." It was a ridiculous thing to do; to fill those great stone pots full to the brim with water, when the man had asked for wine! But they did not hesitate. It was simply their part to obey Jesus.

Illustration: It reminds us of the unflinching obedience of the forever famous Light Brigade. Ordered to make a charge under conditions that meant death, they knew somebody had blundered; but not for a moment did they falter or hesitate. It was theirs to do or die, and though it meant death to the brave soldiers, it won immortality for the Light Brigade.

Water into Wine. What was the result? Jesus did the rest. It was wine they now poured out and carried to the governor of the feast. Some people wonder that Jesus made wine, others claim that by so doing Jesus countenanced the use of intoxicating drinks. But two kinds of wine were used in Bible times, the pure unfermented grape juice, which was spoken of as sweet or good wine and the red or fermented wine. One kind is blessed, the other is cursed. God Himself forbade the use of the latter in religious services. We know that the Jews regarded marriage almost as a sacrament. The pious fasted before it and confessed their sins. Among the simple and pure Galileans everything connected with marriage was planned to bear the impress of sanctity. There was no indecorum, levity or excitement and Jesus would not have created a wine that would have marred the sacred occasion by introducing these elements. We also know that the governor of the feast was surprised to find good (or unfermented) wine at the close of several days of feasting. We may be sure that this wine was the pure, unfermented juice of the grape so often served at marriage feasts in Eastern countries today. Thus "Jesus manifested His glory" as the Creator whose commands even nature must obey, and His first manifestation of this wonderful power was to add to the joy of others. When they saw His power and goodness, it increased their faith and His disciples believed on Him.

Quiz. 1. Name some of the events of the week preceding Jesus' visit to Cana. 2. Was this Jesus' first miracle? 3. Who was Nathaniel? 4. Did Jesus participate in other social events? 5. What criticism was made of Him? 6. Did this miracle increase His disciples' faith in Him?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Christian fellowship is one of the choicest blessings religion brings. 2. Wherever we cannot imagine Jesus as a guest, it is unsafe to go. 3. Obedience works miracles. 4. His servants must risk ridicule. 5. What He would not do for Himself, Jesus did for others. 6. Christian service should be full to the brim.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

CLEANSING THE TEMPLE.

And when he had made a of small

he

and the

and the

and

and

And said unto them
that

Take these things hence; make not my Father's house an house of merchandise.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 2:13-25.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee for Thy house and for the hallowed associations connected with it. We thank Thee that Thou dost meet us there. May we ever come into Thy courts with reverence and with thanksgiving. Help us to cast out of our own hearts everything displeasing to Thee that we may be fit temples for the indwelling of Thy Holy Spirit. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"O Thou whose own vast temple stands
Built over earth and sea,
Accept the walls that human hands
Have raised to worship Thee."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, at the passover, April 9-16, A. D. 27. Place, the Temple, Jerusalem. Persons, Christ, the money changers and traders, rabbis and disciples.

Scripture Setting: The House of God. Its goodness, Psalms 65:4. Reverence for house of God, Ecclesiastes 5:1. Behavior in house of God, 1 Timothy 3:15. Joyful worship, Psalms 122:1. A refuge and dwelling, Psalms 27:4-6. A choice, Psalms 84:10.

Life and Conduct Setting: In cleansing the temple Christ declared: 1. The sacredness of God's house. 2. His authority as God's Son. 3. His zeal and devotion for God's house. 4. God's house a place of communion with God. 5. That worldliness has no place in God's house. 6. His power over death.

HIS FATHER'S HOUSE.

Jesus at the Passover. This feast of the passover was the first since the beginning of His ministry, and it was to be as memorable as that one which thrilled Jesus with a desire to be about His Father's business. Indeed He was about His Father's business. The temple was the real heart of the Jewish nation. If it was defiled, worship became corrupt and faith in the Holy One died. In fact the condition of affairs Jesus found in the temple indicated that the people had long since ceased to think of God as in His holy temple.

The only son of a nobleman left home and failed to return. Upon the father's death, the title and estate were without an heir; the beautiful place was uncared for and fell into decay, while various claimants wrangled for its possession. Suddenly the real heir returned. He had been gone so long that even after his claim was legally established many doubted his identity, but when he began to restore the estate to its former order his knowledge of all his father's plans convinced them that the true son had returned to his own. So Jesus sought to restore His Father's house to the holy purpose to which the first temple was dedicated.

Herod, the Builder. We are very proud of our skyscrapers, and are apt to boast of our modern architecture, but it is doubtful if the world today contains a building equal to the temple in Jerusalem at the time of Jesus. The magnificent temple built by Solomon had been destroyed and replaced by a much inferior structure. To win the favor of the Jews, who feared and loathed him because of his wickedness, Herod rebuilt the temple in splendour as great as that of Solomon's. Many of the stones used were nineteen feet in length and four feet in height; the wheels of the stoutest wagon would have broken under their weight of one hundred tons each, so a thousand sledges drawn by men were used to haul the stone for the building. Ten thousand skilled workmen were hired to build it. The area in which the temple stood was enclosed by massive walls, one of which extended nearly 1,000 feet long and 150 feet high.

A Magnificent Structure. The temple itself was built of a marble-like limestone ornamented with gold, so that Josephus tells us it appeared like a snow covered mountain, and when seen in the morning sun its gold so shone as to dazzle one's eyes. It sounds like a fairy tale to read a description of its subterranean passages, aqueducts, golden gates, beautiful courts and pillared arcades; its broad promenades with vaulted roof and mosaic floors; its marble and gold tables, and wonderful tapestries. The ceiling of the portico that led from the priest's court to the temple itself was 114 feet high, with a gilded vine and shining gold grapes of such immense size that they were visible all over the temple grounds! Yet it lacked the chief thing which God requires of a temple dedicated to Him—which is holiness.

The Market Place. The royal porch was noted especially for its four rows of forty columns each, with lovely Corinthian carving and so massive as to require three men to stretch around them. And in all these beautiful courts and arcades the self-righteous and exclusive Jews had hung tablets ordering strangers to keep out, with the warning that "Whoever is caught will be responsible to himself for his death, which will ensue." These warnings were placed every few yards, and yet this porch and other magnificent piazzas and arcades were turned into market places by the priests, who rented off spaces for the sale of everything needed for sacrifice and offerings.

CHRIST CASTING OUT THE MONEY CHANGERS

BY F. KIRCHBACH

The ceremonies of the Jewish temple called forth the services of many people besides the officiating priests. There was a demand for animals to be burned on the altar of sacrifice, and for money changers to accommodate those who would make contributions. Usually such commonplace matters are attended to in the nearby streets, but at the time of Christ these small merchants had been allowed to settle themselves within the temple itself. They formed an offensive crowd, clamoring for trade, and indifferent to the proper services of this holy place. When Jesus came up to Jerusalem to attend the passover this condition of affairs shocked His sense of propriety. He took to Himself the authority to correct this evil. With a whip, as a badge of authority, He attacked these petty merchants and all were driven out with little consideration; just as they deserved.

The picture is full of incident. Having driven all the people out, Jesus stands on the top step of the temple door, conspicuous in a long white garment. Beside Him we see a multitude, some kneeling and adoring, others railing and abusive. One may study much the movements and the characters of these people. In the foreground, on the right and left, is a crowd of struggling humanity. Their money and goods have been ruthlessly spilled and confused. They are fighting, each for his own stuff, in danger of falling into other hands than the owners. The central group is full of motion: two that struggle together violently; one that tries to get away with more money than he can carry, spilling it as he loses his footing; the dove crates broken and the doves escaping. On the right is an old man and a young woman protecting manuscripts laid on a handsome table. Beyond is a group of butchers with lambs on sale.

All this confusion and trouble is repeated on the left, where some are trying to get away, while some are sitting in despair and disgust. The elaborate carving on the temple wall, and the huge pillars sustaining it, indicate a very rich edifice.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

CHRIST CASTING OUT THE MONEY CHANGERS

FRANK KIRCHBACH. 1859.

Frank Kirchbach belongs to those artists who come from families in which for many generations intellectual and artistic culture have combined to produce really great masters in art. In both his father's and his mother's families were men of distinction in military affairs, learning and art.

His father, Sigismund Kirchbach, a gifted artist, studied painting under Schnorr in the Academy of Dresden, and later beautified the ceiling of the art gallery there with the painting of "Phantassus."

He was made director of the fine arts of Santiago de Chili, and many of his paintings are to be found in Santiago, in America, England and Russia.

The second son of this highly gifted artist, whom his mother called a "possessed genius," is the well-known artist of Munich, Frank Kirchbach. Frank, as well as his brother Wolfgang, the poet, author and philosopher, was born in London, June 2, 1859. In 1860 his parents moved to Dresden, where his father was a very active and noted artist, until he followed the call to Santiago.

Since the father painted scenes from Shakespeare, and the children spent much of their time in his studio, they early became familiar with this poetic world.

These early years were full of artistic inspiration. Frank was permitted to be much in his father's studio, and to make sketches of his father's pictures. He was especially fond of being in the studio of the great sculptor Ritschel, in which the Luther Monument for Worms stood at this time.

During his father's absence in America, and after the loss of his mother, his friends assisted him in his first artistic attempts, and Prof. Leon Pohl gave him special instruction in painting.

A few years later the two brothers, Frank and Wolfgang, lived and worked together in their particular spheres. Wolfgang as author wrote a series of thirty fairy stories, and Frank illustrated them.

There came to him in Dresden the reputation of the grand school of painting in Munich, which induced young Kirchbach to go there in 1878. Here he stepped into an entirely new world. In this thoroughly artistic atmosphere there lived and moved a peculiar kind of romance, which exerted a powerful influence upon the imagination of the young artist.

Frank wrote enthusiastic letters to his brother about the artistic life in Munich, and Wolfgang soon followed him.

Frank studied at the Academy with Prof. Alexander Wagner, who became to him a faithful "fatherly" friend. Under Wagner's directions came forth the illustrative painting, "The Last Days of Pompeii," also "Repenting Magdalene," "Duke Christopher the Fighter," the portrait of his brother Wolfgang, and various other genre pictures.

In a contest for the decoration of the Dragon Hall of Nibelungen, on the Rhine, Kirchbach came off victor. His years of apprenticeship at the Academy were closed with this, and he began the artist's years of travel.

In 1883 he went to Paris. Munkacsy, who had seen Kirchbach's works at Munich, invited him to become his pupil, in Paris. Here he painted the portrait of the Countess Kessler and the "Ganymede," which was in 1884 placed on exhibition in the Salon d'honneur. This success secured for him an order from a wealthy lover of art, Mr. Max Lowenstein, for a painting on a large scale, for which he already had formed his ideal, namely, "Christ Casting Out the Money-Changers." With this order Kirchbach returned to Munich, where he devoted two years to this grand picture. He was married the same year. On completion of this picture he founded the Kirchbach Art School.

Accepting an invitation from London, where this celebrated painting was exhibited, he there produced another religious picture, namely, "Suffer Little Children to Come Unto Me," and some time later "The Burial."

Kirchbach's celebrated painting, "Christ Casting Out the Money-Changers," has made his name famous in Germany, France, England and America more than any other of his works. Frederick Pecht says of the picture: "He has given to his Christ so much nobility and exalted majesty as to exhibit the most striking contrast between the highest ideal of a reverence for that which is holy and the lowest selfishness in human nature."

Kirchbach exhibits also a remarkable skill in decorative ceiling painting. The ceilings of churches and halls are to him an extended space, a painter's world, elevated above all architectural beauty. Like the old masters, he feels the intimate union of the fine arts in their manifold relation to each other. He is his own architect and sculptor.

Translated from the German by

PROF. F. WM. HEIDNER.

A Doubtful Convenience. It all began quite naturally and at first it did not seem wrong. Every male born a Jew had to pay a half shekel annual temple-tribute as an offering for a soul ransom, and it must be paid in money coined for this purpose. There must be offerings of doves and sheep and oxen also. It would be a great accommodation to many if they could exchange their foreign money for the sacred coin as they came to the temple; and since the priests must attest that the animals were without blemish before they could be offered in sacrifice, what better arrangement then to be able to purchase on the spot animals duly certified, with salt, meal, oil and frankincense, especially since the richly ornamented colonades afforded ample shade to the traders?

How Evil Grows. It has passed into a saying that if you give the devil an inch he will take an ell. So that which began as a convenience grew into a great evil and sacrilege, until on approaching the sacred temple the noisy bargaining and dicker of the money changers would have reminded a person of our times of an exciting day on the Board of Trade, and the exhibit of wares would have seemed almost like a department store, while the lowing of sheep and cattle might have transferred the scene to a stock yards. We are told that there were as many as three thousand sheep exposed for sale at a time. Worst of all, the exorbitant prices and advantage taken of the poor made the temple, Christ declared, a den of thieves. The temple was no more the place for such a scene than is the church the place for lotteries and questionable devices for money making.

The Rebuke. How it must have hurt the tender heart of Jesus, who came to save the world, to see the tablets warning those outside the pale of the Jewish religion not to enter God's house! Then to see sheep and cattle exposed for sale where a stranger may not venture to worship under penalty of death; when all the Mosaic laws particularly remembered the stranger. Four hundred years before Malachi had foretold that He would come with purifying power to His temple, "that they may offer unto the Lord an offering in righteousness." Then who would stand when He appeared? Certainly not the thieving money changers and dishonest market venders, when out of the cords lying about He quickly knotted together a formidable scourge and drove thence those who defiled His Father's house by making it a house of merchandise.

Righteous Zeal. Not a hand was lifted, not a word spoken to stop Him. His presence awed them. His words awakened their conscience. It was the only time Jesus ever used violence. But we may be sure that such bold denunciation of sin was keenly discussed that evening in Jerusalem. Some probably thought such a manifestation of wrath unseemly in a preacher; others pointed to greater evils upon which He might have spent His zeal, and there were some who thought that more tender suasion were wiser. We may be sure Jesus was criticised for this manifestation of zeal just as reformers are today.

The Sign. At length the demand is made that He shall explain His conduct. He has called the temple His Father's house. By what sign shall He prove His right to do these things? The sign He gives them is an enigma. "Destroy this temple and in three days I will raise it up." The man must be crazy with presumption. The temple had been forty-six years building already and was still uncompleted. Indeed, it was so gigantic a piece of architecture that the forecourts were only finished thirty years after the crucifixion.

God's Word Ever True. Jesus speaks of a greater temple, the temple of His body. Within a single generation the great temple built by Herod was destroyed and today the great pillared arcades from which Jesus drove the money changers, the market venders and their sheep and oxen, is buried under more than eighty feet of rubbish. The only feature associated with the temple as it was in Christ's day, which remains unchanged in our own, is a great pool on the side of the temple area opposite to where Jesus stood with the uplifted scourge. The beautiful, peerless and immortal temple they would indeed seek to destroy. Annas, whose family was enriched from the temple rentals, had his little moment of vengeance when he turned Jesus over to Caiaphas bound. He lived to see the Reformer on the cross; but the sepulchre could not hold Him. Within three days the living Jesus appeared in bodily presence to His disciples! With such a wonderful object lesson why should we fear to imitate Jesus in rebuking sin?

Quiz. 1. Upon what other occasion did Christ cleanse the temple of money changers? 2. What prophet foretold His coming to the temple? 3. What sign did Jesus give? 4. What happened in the temple at Jesus' death? 5. When was the temple finally destroyed and by whom?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The beginning of Jesus' ministry is always a purification. 2. Sickness, loss and disappointment are sometimes scourges to drive covetousness and greed out of the heart. 3. Jesus was never a silent witness to any wrong. 4. One soul will outlive all the brick and mortar in the world. 5. No washing save in His blood, will whiten our bodies into sanctuaries for the indwelling of God. 6. Jesus gives abundant proof to lead men to believe in Him. 7. Whatever destroys the spiritual power of the church should be driven out.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

For God so

the

that he gave his only begotten

that whosoever

in him should not

but have everlasting

For God sent not his Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through him might be

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 3:1-21.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee that Thou didst so love us as to give Thine only Son for our redemption. Grant us the experience of the new birth through which alone men may have access into Thy Kingdom, here and hereafter. May our eyes be opened to discern the things of the Spirit. For Christ's sake, Amen.

O ye who would enter His glorious rest
And sing with the ransomed the song of the blest;
The life everlasting if ye would obtain,
Ye must be born again.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 27. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus and Nicodemus.

Scripture Setting: The New Birth. Born again, 1 Pet. 1:23. Born of God, 1 John 3:9. Proof of new birth, 1 John 5:1. Born of Christ, James 1:18. Paul's new birth, 1 Cor. 15:8.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this remarkable interview Jesus declares, 1. The necessity of a new birth. 2. The power of the Holy Spirit. 3. The Divine forgiveness and universal love of God. 4. His own pre-existence and Divinity. 5. He foretells the crucifixion and atonement. 6. He teaches that there is a Heaven and life and death. 7. God's love for us. 8. The terrible fruits of sin. 9. The way of escape. 10. The saving power of faith in Jesus.

GOD'S GREAT REDEMPTION PLAN DISCLOSED.

An Important Interview. It was a night of that wonderful passover week; one of those wild, gusty nights when the wind sweeps through the narrow streets with such force that few pedestrians venture out to meet its onslaughts. But there is one, of tall stately figure who wraps his robe more closely about him while he peers on either side the street in quest of the modest house which is his destination. An upward glance reveals a lamp still burning on the roof of one; it is the guest chamber which holds the Divine Guest. With a feeling of relief he spies the outside stair—he need not go through the house to reach the simply furnished upper room. Though the wind rattles, shrieks and whistles, he does not need to knock twice; there is One within who knows.

There are some who have charged Nicodemus with cowardice because he timed his visit in the night; but Jesus is so quick to detect the good, that He saw beneath that timidity, sincerity, actual courage and intense earnestness. It is true he went by night, but he went, and if all timid souls who long to go to Jesus with all their doubts and fears, would only go to Him they would learn as wonderful things as Nicodemus did.

Nicodemus Nonplussed. There were none so proud as the Pharisees, but here is one whose pride melts as he declares, "Rabbi, we know that Thou art a Teacher come from God, for no man can do these miracles that Thou doest except God be with him." It was an astonishing admission from a member of the great Sanhedrin. Instantly Jesus made it plain that His Kingdom is to be established not by midnight plotting and crafty diplomacy, but through a change in the hearts of men; and He reminded Nicodemus that the wilderness preacher testified of One to follow him who would baptize with the Holy Ghost. Those who would obtain citizenship in the Kingdom of God must not only repent of their sins, but must receive the baptism of the Holy Spirit.

"Except a man be born again he cannot see the Kingdom of God." It was all so new to Nicodemus that he thought Jesus meant that the full grown man must become a baby again. Surely the coming of the Kingdom was hopeless if it rested on such an impossibility! But Jesus spoke of the transforming power of the Holy Spirit, cleansing from every evil passion and so changing the heart that a new man is born in us. Ever since the fall of Adam and Eve, men had been trying to improve themselves, and, by fasting, sacrifice and offering, to free themselves from sin, and always they have failed. "Except a man be born of water and of the Spirit, he cannot enter into the Kingdom of God."

The Teacher Taught. It is all so different to the teaching of the Pharisees that Nicodemus sits oblivious of the wind without until the great Teacher says, "The wind bloweth where it listeth and thou hearest the sound thereof but canst not tell whence it cometh nor whither it goeth: so is every one that is born of the Spirit." The rabbis taught that God's favor could be purchased with tithes and outward rites, and that it extended only to the Jews, but here is a Teacher who declares that the operation of the Spirit is free and untrammelled as the wind and as mysterious. No man has seen it, but its influence on the heart is as plainly felt and as easily recognizable as the gusts that rattle the casement. No one can command its coming, but the human heart must hold itself ever receptive to its visitation.

"How can these things be?" questions Nicodemus. It saddens Jesus that a member of the Sanhedrin is so dull to spiritual things. "Art thou a teacher of Israel and knowest not these things?" That night, in the upper room, the great Teacher taught the aged Jewish teacher truths upon which the salvation of the world rests.

A New Light. Though it was dark without, light was given to the world that night whose radiance shall never cease, and that shall illumine the uttermost parts of the earth, and bring redemption to all who sit in the darkness of ignorance and prejudice. Nicodemus had acknowledged that God was with Jesus; but as He sought His hearer's spiritual enlightenment, our Lord revealed Himself as the long-promised Messiah—the Son of man—who had come down from Heaven to suffer for the sins of the world.

Though that night in his spiritual dullness Nicodemus failed to comprehend the full significance of the wondrous statement, it was revealed to him later, under the shadow of the cross. For the uplifted Figure outlined against the sky was the fulfillment of the Master's words, "As Moses lifted up the serpent in the wilderness, even so must the Son of man be lifted up that whosoever believeth in Him shall not perish but have eternal life." And Nicodemus understood the meaning of Jesus' words spoken that night in the upper room. He had borne the cross and endured the shame to save a perishing world. Then all doubt melted away: he believed on the Son. Nothing was too costly to show his love, and with myrrh and aloes an hundred pound weight, with another seeker of the Kingdom, Nicodemus prepared the dear body of his crucified Lord for burial.

A Revelation of Love. Nicodemus' religion pictured an angry, wrathful God, to be placated with sacrifice and offering; a God who at best, only bestowed His favor on a chosen race. But Jesus proclaimed the love of God was so great that it needed not to be propitiated but furnished the Sacrifice in the person of God's only begotten Son. "For God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son that whosoever believeth in Him, should not perish, but have everlasting life." By that blessed declaration Jesus lifted the world out of the fog of error into the true light. God was not the enemy of the race. He loved not a chosen few, but the entire world. Then followed a statement that overthrew the rabbinic teaching which had substituted a wrathful, vengeful diety, for the God of the fathers. "For God sent not His Son into the world to condemn the world; but that the world through Him might be saved." While it was yet in sin; while the human heart was still wicked, God manifested His love for us in sending His Son to die upon the cross!

An old African king had an only son and heir whom he loved devotedly. For his sake he strove to strengthen the kingdom which was soon to pass into his son's hands, and to increase his inheritance of elephant's tusks and leopard skins. One day the old king learned that a missionary had come to teach his people to worship a new God. He was very angry and at once sent for the missionary to appear before him. When the missionary came the heathen ruler demanded proof, under penalty of death, that the new God would care more for his people than the gods they had always served. The missionary began to quote the verse, "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son—" "Stop!" said the old king, "Do you know that?" "Yes," replied the missionary, "the church of my God is built on this truth." "It is enough," said the king. "If you have a God who would give His only Son, my people must worship Him, for His love is greater than mine, or any god's."

Increasing Light. Nicodemus listens eagerly! Do his old ears hear aright? This wonderful salvation is not conditioned on burnt offering and sacrifice; the sole requirement is repentance unto salvation and faith in Jesus as the Son of God. "He that believeth on Him is not condemned: but he that believeth not is condemned already, because he hath not believed in the name of the only begotten Son of God." God does not condemn, but man condemns himself.

In the temple whose gilded dome Nicodemus sees through the latticed window, sacrifice and offering is sold, and rich and poor alike must pay the price. But the true Sacrifice, which is His only begotten Son, is the gift of God; and he only is condemned who spurns the Sacrifice and scorns the Gift.

The night deepened, while Jesus revealed to His amazed listener the cardinal truths upon which His Kingdom was founded. Man has added to and overlaid the Master's words with creeds, but they are only the setting of the priceless truths Jesus gave to the world that night. As He spoke of light and darkness, Nicodemus must have felt His words regarding those who seek darkness as a gentle rebuke for his own cowardice in seeking Jesus under cover of night. Though Nicodemus carried but a tiny ray of truth away with him, we know that it grew until the darkness of doubt and disbelief were dispelled and the great ruler of the synagogue came to know that He who told him great and wonderful things was indeed Jesus Christ, the Son of God.

Quiz. 1. What event preceded Nicodemus' visit? 2. How and where does John mention Nicodemus again? 3. Was it cowardly for Nicodemus to seek Jesus by night? 4. Are you brave to confess Jesus? 5. What does Jesus say of those who fear to confess Him?

Seed Truth. 1. Those who seek the upper room and commune with Jesus receive light. 2. A night with Jesus will change a whole life. 3. The new birth brings new life. 4. It is the love of God for us which first begets love in us. 5. Jesus is the Divine revelation of God's love for a sinful world. 6. The crucified Christ is the measure of God's love for us. 7. John 3:16 is the Gospel in a nutshell.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

JESUS AT JACOB'S WELL.

Then cometh he to a of Samaria, which is called Sychar, near to the parcel of ground that Jacob gave to his son Joseph.

Now Jacob's

was there.

therefore,
being wearied with his journey,

and it was about the sixth hour. There

of Samaria
to Jesus saith unto her,

to drink. (For his disciples were gone away unto the city to buy meat.)

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 4:5-14. ALSO READ VERSES 15 TO 30.

Prayer: Dear Master, We too sometimes find the way weary and the journey long. Our souls thirst for the living water. Reveal Thyself unto us as Thou didst to the woman of Samaria and give us of that living water that shall be in us a well of water springing up into everlasting life. We ask it that we too may tell others of Thy love, and for Thy name's sake. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 27. Place, Sychar, a village of Samaria. Persons, Jesus and a Samaritan woman.

Scripture Setting: The Water of Life. The fountain of living waters, Jer. 2:13, 17:13. The virtue of the living water, Ezek. 47:9. Out of the sanctuary, Ezek. 47:12. Invitation to the thirsty, Isa. 55:1. Led to living fountains, Rev. 21:6. The invitation repeated, Rev. 22:17.

ITS RELATIONS.

Life and Conduct Setting: At Jacob's well. Jesus shows: 1. His humanity as manifested by hunger, thirst and weariness. 2. His freedom from prejudice against a detested race. 3. His power to satisfy the soul's thirst. 4. That everlasting life is obtained through Him. 5. To this sinful woman that He is the promised Messiah.

PASSING THROUGH SAMARIA.

On the Way to Galilee. Young people are apt to fancy that city life offers a larger field of service than farm, village or town, but the lure of the city never appealed to Jesus. He left Jerusalem when He found Himself becoming a popular preacher and went into the rural districts, where he gained His disciples and preached His greatest sermons to audiences of one and two hearers. The most direct route from Jerusalem to Nazareth was the great north road, through Samaria. Some very strict Jews would cross the Jordan twice and make a detour around to avoid contact with the Samaritans. But Jesus had come to save Samaria as well as Judea and He took the north road through that country.

A Historic Landmark. The close of a long and tiresome day's journey brought Him to Jacob's well, where the roads divide and where travellers were wont to rest and quench their thirst. It was the well two hundred feet deep which Jacob had dug nearly two thousand years before. Travellers in Palestine today may still visit this historic landmark, the veritable well on the stone rim of which Jesus sat while His disciples went to Sychar, less than a mile distant, to buy bread.

A Woman Comes to the Well. While He waited a woman came to the well to draw water. There was another well on the east side of the town much nearer than Jacob's well, to which the women of Sychar resorted, but it was less embarrassing for this woman to come to the well frequented by strangers than to meet the withdrawal and cold contempt of her townswomen. Social ostracism is the penalty one must pay for wrong doing and this is not the only instance in which it has driven the social outcast to the Saviour. How blessed that Jesus does not shrink from sinners. He knew all about this woman, but "He saith unto her, Give me to drink." He puts Himself under obligation to her in order to help her.

A Christian worker once kissed a drunken, sinful woman of desperate character. The woman looked up in amazement. "Surely you do not know who I am, nor the life I have lived." "I only know my Jesus gave His life for you, and how could I do less than love the one for whom He died?" was the reply of the worker. Years afterward a Bowery mission worker was asked to tell the story of how she found Jesus. "I found Him through a kiss," she declared. The kiss had transformed the desperate character into a tender, loving missionary.

An Unheard of Request. Centuries of hatred and prejudice had formed a great gulf between Jew and Samaritan. It was more than one of those clannish feuds of which we read. It began more than seven centuries before when the conquered Israelites were carried into Babylonia, and colonists from Babylonia were sent to occupy their cities and land. During the interval between, wild beasts had multiplied and overrun the country, troubling the Babylonian colonists so greatly that they begged for an Israelitish priest who would show them how to appease the God of Israel, and thus get rid of the wild beasts. Their application was granted and the result was a mixed religion. They accepted a part of the Scriptures, kept the passover and other Jewish rites and looked for a Messiah. They even built a temple for the worship of God, but they retained many heathen customs, which to the righteous Jew seemed unclean, and they were treated as heathens. No Jew would ask a favor of a Samaritan. This Samaritan woman expressed surprise that one whom she recognized as a Jew should ask her for a drink.

If She Only Knew. She had come on a humble, ordinary duty so common that it may even have become irksome to her. Ostracized by her neighbors; with affections worn out; character gone and utterly weary and sick of life, she may often have longed to get out of its narrowness; to see some great person; to hear something worth while. Like so many of us, she did not know that the most important issues of life hinge on trivial, commonplace incidents. She had not learned that trifles are often the turning points of a life. The stranger replies, "If thou knewest the gift of God, and who it is that saith to thee, Give me to drink, thou wouldst have asked of Him, and He would have given thee living water." Have wonderful spiritual opportunities ever come to us, and we not known, I wonder?

Springs of water have recently been discovered only a few feet under the surface in one of the deserts of Colorado where scores of persons have died from thirst. The water was there had they only known to dig a few feet deeper in the sand.

Another Doubter. The well was deep and the stranger empty handed. Where, then, would He get this living water? Then, she did not know who spoke to her. Who was this stranger? Proudly the outcast proclaims her relationship to Jacob; was the stranger a greater than he? The ignorant Samaritan woman understood no better than Nicodemus, the learned master in Israel. One does not need great wisdom to be a doubter.

The Living Water. Always a patient teacher, Jesus describes this living water. Pointing to the well, at His side, He says, "Whosoever drinketh of this water will thirst again: but whosoever drinketh of the water I shall give him, shall never thirst; but the water that I shall give him, shall be in him, a well of water, springing up into everlasting life." Is not this a beautiful illustration? Only one who has crossed a desert or endured a drought fully knows what a great blessing is a well of clear, cold water. But only think of having a well of water in our hearts; wherever we go we carry that well with us. We never thirst. Beautiful things may please us, we may enjoy nice clothes, a good home, influential friends and a great name, but the lack of them does not make us unhappy. We have something in our hearts infinitely more satisfying—the gift of eternal life.

Convinced. She cannot mistake the stranger's sincerity; without knowing why, she is convinced of His power. But she does not yet understand the meaning of this wonderful gift. She only seeks relief from her daily drudgery. If she could drink water like that, she would never thirst: there would be no need to make the tiresome trip to the well. It would lessen the daily grind of life. What more natural than that she should exclaim, "Sir, give me this water that I thirst not, neither come hither to draw." The water of which Jesus speaks means something more than relief from drudgery. It makes drudgery Divine to those who drink with real spiritual thirst.

The Confessional. The tender, compassionate Jesus is almost discourteous; He recalls to the woman some shameful facts of her life. We must all be made to feel the sense of guilt before we can feel the blessedness of this gift of eternal life. It is a part of the office of Jesus to send the Holy Spirit with its power to convict of sin. I fancy sin never looked so hideous to this woman as when she stood in the presence of the Holy One. It was not a mere fortune teller whom she saw. There was stern reproof in that Presence—but also forgiveness, infinite tenderness and love.

An Hour with Jesus. Then followed that wonderful hour when a woman sat at Jesus' feet as His disciple. With childlike, simple faith she laid all her problems before Him, problems that show that her mind had often dwelt on religious things. Like many, she was not so bad as others thought her. They were looking south, toward the great towering sacred Mount Gerazim. Hereafter she would want to pray. Should it be toward Gerazim or Jerusalem? Surely the prophet she has found can tell her. He answers her question with words that have transformed the religions of the world. "God is a Spirit and they that worship Him must worship Him in spirit and in truth." She thirsts after righteousness. There are many things she longs to know which can only be told by the Messiah. Surely the prophet will know when He is to come; and Jesus saith unto her, "I that speak unto thee am He." Wonderful hour! The woman who came to the well as a part of the detested grind of a monotonous existence has found a noble thirst, and has discovered the new and eternal life of the spirit; she has found the Messiah. Fired with the missionary spirit she goes back to Sychar, telling its men, "Come see a man which told me all things that ever I did; is not this the Christ?"

Quiz. 1. How did the Jews regard the Samaritans? 2. What prophet and priest refused to let them help rebuild the temple? 3. What does Paul say concerning distinction of people and races? 4. What did Jesus mean by living water? 5. What call is given to those athirst in Revelation?

Seed Truths. —1. Prejudice is a rotten barrier. 2. Jesus was the great nature lover. He made all nature point upward. 3. That Christ was oftentimes hungry, weary and foot-sore makes it worth while to suffer these things for Him. 4. No other ever dared attempt to assuage the thirst of a world. 5. The daily grind oftentimes yields Divine grist. 6. The first work of the spirit is to convict of sin. 7. This world, its work, ambitions, pleasures, can never satisfy the soul.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

SOWING AND REAPING.

Say not ye, There are yet four months, and then cometh

behold,
I say
unto you, Lift up your eyes, and look
on the

for they are white already to harvest.

And

and gathereth

unto life eternal:
that both

and may together.

SOWING AND REAPING.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 4:35-42. READ MATT. 9:36-38, LUKE 10:2.

Prayer: Lord, We thank Thee that we are privileged to be colaborers with Thee in the harvest field of the world. Help us to see the need and to heed the call for reapers.

Give us grace and wisdom to use the opportunities for service that lie at our door.

For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"It may not be our lot to wield
The sickle in the ripened field;
Nor ours to hear, on summer eves,
The reaper's song among the sheaves.

Yet when our duty's task is wrought,
In unison with God's great thought,
The near and future blend in one,
And whatsoever is willed, is done."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time A. D. 27. Place, Jacob's well, near Sychar. Persons, Jesus and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: The Blessedness of Service. The service of manual labor, 1 Chron. 29:5. A reasonable service, Rom. 12:1. A condition of salvation, Phil. 2:12. Righteous service always acceptable, Acts 10:35. We labor with God, 1 Cor. 3:9.

Life and Conduct Setting: From the lesson we learn: 1. The need of spiritual food. 2. The harvest is always waiting. 3. The rewards of Christian service. 4. Its blessedness. 5. The division of Christian labor. 6. God sends the laborers and prepares the field.

READY FOR THE HARVEST.

The Disciples Return. When the disciples went to buy bread in Sychar they left Jesus sitting on the well, weary, faint and footsore. Judge their surprise on their return to find Him full of renewed energy; and in animated conversation with a Samaritan woman, which was more surprising still. The Jewish rabbis never talked to any woman in public, least of all a Samaritan woman, whom the Jews held to be always "unclean." Though they could not help wondering, the dignity of the Teacher and the humble earnestness of the woman forbade an interruption of the interview. Among themselves they might ask questions but not of Him. Meanwhile the woman whose heart was overflowing with this newly found well-spring of life, had risen, and forgetful of the unfilled water pot which she left at the Master's feet, hurried back to town with her wonderful announcement. The first desire of the convert is to bring others to Jesus.

The Repast. Can you not see the rustic group? After washing at the well they open their purchases, spread their simple repast on the grass and invite the Master to join in the meal. He who was so hungry is now oblivious of the food they have prepared for Him. "Master, eat," they plead. But Jesus' soul is full. One dead in sin has found life. Perhaps there was a touch of the pain that comes from the dullness and misunderstanding of those dearest to us; it may have disappointed Him that His disciples saw nothing in the conversation with the Samaritan woman except wonder at the violations of custom, and now they thought of nothing but bodily refreshment. He tells them, "I have meat to eat that ye know not of." The mystery deepens. Who has brought Him aught to eat? Gently and patiently He explains, that His meat is to do God's will and accomplish His work. They do not yet understand and withdraw to the out-strewn meal.

A Survey of the Field. The disciples are soon too busily eating to lift their eyes; their talk falls upon the crop prospects in the rich fields through which they have just walked. Jesus is the only one who sees the moving objects in the distance. He knows it is not a caravan of traders or even a group of travelers like themselves; it is the men of Sychar coming out of town to see the Messiah of whom the woman has told them. One of the disciples has just been saying that in four months it will be harvest time. But Jesus would turn their thoughts to a harvest more worthy of their attention, and pointing down the road to those approaching, He says, You say, "There are four months and then cometh harvest; behold I say unto you lift up your eyes and look on the fields." They had been looking down at the fields, Jesus would have them look up.

A young girl once said to a Christian worker, "I should think you would be discouraged by the outlook. There are so few good people and so many bad; so few care about religion while so many are indifferent." The Christian worker replied quickly, "The outlook may be discouraging but not the uplook. The Christian who does not obey the Master's command, 'Lift up your eyes,' when he surveys his field of labor, is sure to fail."

Harvest at Hand. The men of Sychar can now be plainly seen. The Master points down the road and says, "Look on the fields; for they are white already to the harvest." Ah, fertile and rich as the plain of Samaria; beautiful and bountiful as its promise of increase, here is a greater harvest. In this despised land which some of the disciples entered reluctantly and through which they desired to pass on as quickly as possible to Galilee; in this unpromising field are souls waiting to be garnered for the Master. Why wait four months hence for a harvest which at most will only cheapen the price of bread, when you see the ripened grain in this eager crowd of Samaritans? I wonder if the Master would not have us lift our eyes and look on the field about us?

A young man in college was so busily engaged in fitting himself to preach the gospel in a land that had no Bible, that he never knew that his own room mate was wholly ignorant of God's word, and soul hungry for his chum to speak to him of sacred things, until the grim reaper Death had garnered in a soul that he might have led to salvation.

Wages for Sower and Reaper. Jesus continues the harvest lesson. "He that reapeth received wages." While they went to Sychar after bread, He had harvested a soul. The Samaritan woman was indeed the gathered fruit unto life eternal. She had gone back to the town a sower and so immediate was the harvest that the expectant Samaritans were now waiting like ripened grain to be garnered into the Kingdom. The sower, the Samaritan woman, would rejoice as well as the Great Reaper.

Sent Into the Field. "I sent you to reap that whereon ye bestowed no labor." The disciples were good men and with intellectual breadth for Jews, which made them willing to trade with the Samaritan, but they went on to Sychar on business and never once dreamed of telling those with whom they came in contact through trade, that the Messiah waited outside the town to bless and to save. I wonder if they were not ashamed to find how much better a disciple the woman was than they? It was her blessed privilege to start the first Christian revival.

The Field Prepared. "Other men labored and ye are entered into their labors." The very neighborhood surrounding them was rich in associations. They could see, at one point, in the middle of the plain, the spot where Phineas, the high priest and grandson of Aaron was buried; at another the tomb of Eleazer, Aaron's son and successor. At the foot of Mt. Gerizim stood the oak under which Abraham pitched his tent on first entering the Holy Land. Altars had been built under the great oak to the living God by Abraham, Jacob and Joshua. Had all these godly lives been lived for naught? Surely a field with so many sacred associations was not altogether unclean or hopeless. We do not know the forces hidden all around us; and for want of knowledge we miss life's greatest opportunity of service.

The heart of that hardened criminal was prepared years ago for our reaping by a mother's prayers. The saloon system we fear to attack has had its foundations washed away by the tears of countless drunkards' wives and children. The neighbor or playmate to whom we dread to carry the message, passed a wakeful night because her heart was being ploughed by the Holy Spirit for our sowing. An evangelist once passed through a certain portion of England and was everywhere gladly and attentively received. Upon his return to London he asked the secretary of the society which sent him out, why his ministrations had met with so much better results there than elsewhere. The reply was, "Fifty years ago, a man went through that country whose name was John Wesley."

The Harvest. The Samaritans were now able to judge for themselves. What they saw and heard carried conviction. Their testimony is even stronger than the woman's. "Now we believe, not because of thy saying; for we have heard Him ourselves and know that this is indeed the Saviour of the world." She had asked if it might not be, they know it is the Christ. How much more real anything becomes after we have seen it; how much better we understand a writer if we are privileged to hear him. How different the Christ we hear about, from the Christ whose voice we have heard in our hearts, and whom we have seen! These Samaritans were wise in that they did not take another's word, but tested Christ themselves. He remained two days. They did not demand miracles or signs as at Jerusalem, but accepted His holy word. If we were like the Samaritans,

"If our love were but more simple,
We should take Him at His word;
And our lives would be all sunshine,
In the sweetness of our Lord."

Quiz. 1. How many times does Christ use the harvest field as an illustration? 2. What time of the year is the Jewish harvest? 3. Did the Samaritans hear the preaching of John the Baptist? 4. Why were the Jews prejudiced against Samaria? 5. In what parable did Christ use the Samaritan? 6. Have you asked God to show you the harvest field about you?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Jesus is the one true democrat. With Him there was neither Jew nor Gentile, male or female. 2. To the disciples the harvest meant more bread, to Christ, more souls. 3. The wages are the same though one soweth and another reapeth. 4. It is a mistake to judge men good enough to buy and sell with, but not good enough for the Kingdom. 5. The harvest is always nearer at hand than we think.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE NOBLEMAN'S SON HEALED.

So Jesus came again into Cana of Galilee, where he made the water wine. And there was a certain whose son was at Capernaum.

When he heard that Jesus was come out of Judæa into Galilee, he went unto him and that he would come down, and heal his son: for he was at the point of death.

Then said Jesus unto him, Except ye see ye will not believe.

The nobleman
saith unto him,
Sir, come down
ere my child die.
Jesus saith unto him, Go thy way; thy liveth. And the man believed the word that Jesus had spoken unto him, and he went his way.

And as he was now

his servants met him, and told him, saying,
Thy

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 4:43-54.

Prayer: Lord, We rejoice that Thou art ever ready to help those who seek Thee in distress. May we believe Thy word more fully. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

But warm, sweet, tender, even yet
A present help is He;
And faith hath yet its Olivet,
And love its Galilee. —Whittier.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, Cana of Galilee. Persons, Jesus and nobleman.

Scripture Setting: God's Help in Trouble. He will speedily help. Isa. 65:24. His readiness to answer, Matt. 7:9-11. His continual deliverance from trouble, Job 5:19. God a very present help, Psa. 46:1. A help to faith, Mark 9:24. Help in His name, Psa. 124:8.

Life and Conduct Setting. The incident of the healing of the nobleman's son illustrates: 1. The father's belief in the power of Christ's presence. 2. Jesus' demand for a higher faith. 3. Jesus' disregard for the rank of the petitioner. 4. His readiness to help. 5. His power is not limited to His presence. 6. The wise and tender method of Jesus, which leads the slender faith to higher ground.

THE GREAT PHYSICIAN.

In His Own Country. How capricious a thing is fame! Jesus left Galilee an obscure and comparatively unknown peasant, to return a popular hero. Although He had lived among them for thirty years, His own countrymen had to go up to Jerusalem to discover the greatness of One who dwelt in one of their villages, and bring back an account of the miracles and the things He has done in the distant city. No sooner do they hear of the sensation He has created in Jerusalem than they feel proud of Him. But the enthusiastic reception they accorded Him on His return did not spring from a genuine regard for His mission; it was only an echo of the recognition and applause He had won in the South. Subsequent events show that they were no more ready to accept His teaching. Small wonder that Jesus sadly exclaimed, "A prophet hath no honor in his own country." It is a sorrowful statement that they to whom the Gospel is most accessible are often the least ready to receive it. How slow were Lincoln's fellow townsmen to recognize in the raw-boned, awkward and simple Lincoln the greatest statesman of his age.

A Nobleman's Visit. Accounts of Jesus' miracles had reached even the household of Herod Antipas. No sooner had He again arrived at Cana as Nathaniel's guest than a nobleman and officer of the royal household sought Him. It is supposed that this nobleman was Chuza, whose wife's devotion to Jesus was afterward so manifest. When the news of His arrival reached the nobleman, he came to Jesus. His errand was so urgent that he did not send a messenger, but travelled twenty miles himself to appeal to Jesus in person.

At the Point of Death. No place is free from sickness or disease. The nobleman's son was very ill with one of those intermittent fevers so very common in a hot country, and lying at the point of death. Capernaum, like all the other towns of the day, must have had many versed in the healing art as it was understood at that time; for the physicians of that day resorted largely to charms, magic spells and sorcery. Roots, medicinal stones and the secret names of angels were relied on for cures. What a contrast between these "hakims" and Jesus, before whose word or touch disease fled! To this nobleman Jesus was merely a healer, greater possibly than any of His time, and more successful in His use of the sorcerer's art, but still a healer. He was not actuated by any belief in Jesus as the Son of God. One method of the Oriental healer was to lay the hand on the troubled part. Perhaps he can persuade Jesus to lay hands on his son; he "besought Him that He would come down and heal his son; for he was at the point of death."

We all remember the instance of the multimillionaire who sent all the way from Chicago to Vienna, Austria, to secure the services of a noted surgeon in behalf of his little daughter who was lame. And we know how the eminent surgeon made the long journey across the sea and continent to perform an operation which won the wonder and admiration of the world.

The Great Physician. Had Jesus been just an ordinary man, or even a very extraordinary healer of all ailments and disease, He would have been moved by the father's plea to go to Capernaum. It afforded a splendid chance to make a favorable impression on Herod's court and of getting on a footing with the fashionable and great. Why, if He was to found a Kingdom it was absolutely necessary to secure great names and powerful influence for the undertaking! But the Great Physician's mind is not bent on the boy's physical malady, nor on furthering His own interest or any enterprise, however worthy. His research goes farther and He sees that the father is in greater danger than the boy. With a single thought He can restore that young life and bring the glow of health to feverish cheek and wasted form; but what of the father who so little understands the Divine gift and power he would call to his son's aid?

THE NOBLEMAN'S SON HEALED.

The Diagnosis. The Great Physician has been sent to prescribe for the sin-sick soul as well as to heal human ailments. This man was asking for some wonder of the miracle-monger when he needed a glimpse of the Son of God. He must learn that the Divine Life-Giver could restore life at a distance as easily as by His presence. Jesus therefore speaks to the nobleman without any regard for his rank or influence. "Except ye see signs and wonders, ye will not believe."

The Father's Plea. Something new is springing in the father's breast. The proud nobleman is almost as humble and importunate as the Syrophoenician woman, whose faith Jesus tested by failing to immediately grant her prayer for her child. The agonized father cries out, "Sir, come down ere my child die." Jesus never trifles with us. He may not answer our prayer in just the way we ask, but He never fails any who call upon Him, so now He relieves the father's anxiety and lifts the burden from his agonized soul. "Go thy way; thy son liveth."

Confidence in the Great Physician. Ah, when those words were spoken there was a look of kingly authority which the father caught. He could no longer doubt. Before the Master's feet a wicket gate opened, at which he cast all the burden of anxiety concerning his son. The man believed the word Jesus had spoken. He did not even haste back to Capernaum as he had hastened to Cana, for we do not find him returning till the next day. He may have given his jaded horses time for rest, or he may have transacted some court business pertaining to his office, we know not; but the leisurely return is abundant proof of the father's faith. Would it not make life easier if we could all have a like faith and cease to carry our worries and anxiety after they have been brought to Jesus?

One of the greatest records for rapid travel was made by a wealthy Westerner who was recalled from a business trip East by the illness of his son. Great expenditure of money placed at his disposal one of the fastest engines at the railroad yards. His private car was attached; the train was given right of way. Everything was in readiness at every division point and the trip to Colorado lowered the world's record for fast railway travel. The nobleman did not need to make such haste. His child was in the hands of the Great Physician.

Thy Son Liveth. His servants knew how anxious the father would be to hear, so they met him. We may be sure he was not surprised at the tidings. "Thy son liveth." The father had known it would be so, for he asks them the hour when the boy began to amend. "And they said unto him, 'Yesterday at the seventh hour the fever left him.' " So the father knew that it was at the same hour in which Jesus said unto him, "Thy son liveth." The cure outran the father. It was a simple but very satisfactory way of verifying the miracle.

The Miracle. And this is the meaning of a miracle; we may call it a marvel that is foretold. It was not impossible that the boy who lay at the point of death should have recovered; it would have been a marvel; though it would not have proved there was anything supernatural in the case. But when this marvel followed the word of Jesus who commanded the child's recovery, and without any other intervention, it became a miracle. If we study the miracles Jesus did, we will find that His word never failed to heal the sick, to make the lame walk, to give sight to the blind, health to the leper, sanity to the demoniac or to restore the dead to life; for He is the Great Physician.

A Happy Family. No wonder the nobleman believed and all his house. How he must have hurried homeward to receive ocular proof of this wonderful miracle. And when home at last he embraced his son with a feeling of peculiar love and tenderness. Had the boy not been restored to him almost from the grave? Then as the happy family gathered about him, the father must have told them about his interview with Jesus, of His tenderness, authority and Divine power. Doubtless they all longed to thank Him for this manifestation of His goodness. And if, as Bible students think, the nobleman was Chuza, king Herod's steward, we do not wonder that his wife followed Jesus during His tour of Galilee, and in the hour of His trial went up to Jerusalem to minister to Him of her wealth. For at His mere word, had not the flush of fever vanished from her boy's face? At His command death had loosed its hold upon the emaciated body; health had come with flush of joy, and her son had been saved to her. Moreover, in the very household of Herod, Jesus had manifested His power and had proved His word greater than that of the Roman king. No wonder that ever after the tyrant king watched the career of the Carpenter of Nazareth.

Quiz. 1. From what country did Jesus return to Cana? 2. What disciple lived at Cana? 3. What was the distance between Cana and Capernaum? 4. Why did Jesus refuse to go to Capernaum? 5. What resulted from His refusal?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Christ has the power to annihilate distance. 2. He only refuses a request to grant something better. 3. The man who believes does not need to make haste. 4. The word of God outruns the swiftest steed. 5. The cure of sin is always followed by faith in the Healer.

MARGARET WINTINGER.

JESUS REJECTED AT NAZARETH.

And he came to where he had been brought up:

and, as his custom was,
he went on the day,

and for to read. And there was delivered unto him the

of the

Esaias.
And when he had

he found the place where it was written, The Spirit of the Lord is upon me, because he hath anointed me to the gospel

to the

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 4:16-30. READ MATT. 13:54-58, MARK 6:1-5.

Prayer: Our Father: We thank Thee that we have grown up surrounded with Gospel privileges and blessings; that from earliest youth we have known and heard of Him who came to set at liberty those in bondage to sin.

O help us that the abundance of these blessings may not make them commonplace in our eyes. May Thy goodness lead us to repentance and not to hardness of heart. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"He comes to break oppression,
To set the captive free;
To take away transgression,
And rule in equity."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, April A. D. 28. Place, the synagogue at Nazareth. Persons, Jesus and townsmen.

Scripture Setting: Rejection of Christ. Despised and rejected of men, Isa. 53:3. The rejected corner stone, Psa. 118:22, Matt. 21:42. Rejected of His generation, Luke 17:25. Rejected by His own people, John 1:11. Christ foretells His own rejection, Mark 8:31. We are judged for rejection of Christ, John 12:48.

Life and Conduct Setting: Jesus' visit to the synagogue at Nazareth discloses: 1. Jesus as an habitual worshipper in God's House. 2. As a reverent reader of God's word. 3. As the consolation of the poor. 4. As the liberator of the sin-bound. 5. As the light of the blind. 6. The prejudice of His townspeople. 7. The immovable composure of the Lord over against the blind rage of His enemies.

JESUS IN HIS HOME TOWN.

The Return to Nazareth. The stay in Cana was probably of short duration. With interest we follow Him to the city in which He has spent His childhood and early manhood. It is only a few months since He left Nazareth, and yet how much has passed of importance not only to Himself, but to His people and to the world. Never before or since has history been made so rapidly. He left the little town known only as the carpenter's Son, and returns with a following who recognize Him as the Messiah—Israel's King. Day after day He had labored at the carpenter's bench, unnoticed and unknown, but now His mighty works are heralded throughout the length and breadth of the land. How will His former townspeople receive Him?

Home Again. What must have been His thoughts as He again entered the well-known valley and once more beheld scenes familiar since a boy? As He watched the golden rays of Friday's setting sun cast their lengthening shadows across the still valley, He could hear the three familiar blasts of the trumpet which proclaimed the advent of the Sabbath. Early Sabbath morning and following the custom of His boyhood, Jesus goes to the synagogue where He has so often worshipped.

The synagogue or Jewish meeting house has been called the cradle of the church; it is certain that the church is the outgrowth of the synagogue. It is of interest therefore to know that the synagogue originated during the Babylonish captivity when the long years in exile in Babylon made a place of worship on Sabbath and feast days a necessity. After the restoration many of the returned Jews were ignorant of their native language, and these meeting houses were needed in which to read and interpret the Scriptures to the restored exiles.

Naturally prayers and then addresses were added, until at last services were held in the regular synagogues, and on all occasions, corresponding with the worship of the temple. A community numbering ten heads of families was permitted to build a synagogue. In addition to the temple, Jerusalem had four hundred and sixty synagogues.

The Service. Shall we follow Jesus, His mother, and His brethren into the synagogue on this memorable Sabbath in Nazareth? The building is of stone hewn from the surrounding hills. There are curious carvings on the lintels over the door we enter, and the worshippers face west so they may pray toward Jerusalem. The room is well lighted by windows, the floor is of slabs of white limestone; the roof is flat and supported by heavy columns, making a colonnade which forms the body of the synagogue. At the south end is a movable "Ark," where the sacred rolls of the law and the prophets are kept. Those conspicuous seats in front of the ark and facing the people are reserved for the elders and honorable. There is a gallery for women at the north end, which Mary enters, while Jesus and His brethren occupy the rear seats allotted humble worshippers.

The Preacher. All is quiet, for no one may joke, laugh, talk or behave lightly in the synagogue. The officials are all in their places; the chief ruler of the synagogue, who always has charge, even to naming those who shall read the law, conduct the prayers and deliver the address, calls the One in the rear seat to lead the services. Rumors of His wonderful deeds in Cana and Jerusalem have found their way here, and as He steps forward to ascend the "Bimi" or platform in the center of the synagogue, He is the target for all eyes. Though all the faces about are well known, He seems a stranger among His own people, to be looked at, listened to, criticized and accepted or rejected by those who have known Him as a boy.

The Hearers. We may be sure there was not an empty seat in the synagogue that eventful Sabbath morning. All were present to hear the carpenter Joseph's Son, who had always been a favorite despite poverty and lowly station. We know that Jesus' heart always went out in compassion for His hearers, but never had He another audience whom He so loved and for whom He so yearned. What joy if He might lead these old friends into the Kingdom! His own family had not yet accepted Him. He who has felt the same spiritual yearning for loved ones will surely answer our prayers for the conversion of relatives and friends.

The Test. The ancient prayer service could never have seemed so sacred, and the congregation, strangely moved, respond with a solemn Amen. The Chazzan approaches the ark, takes from it the roll of the law, from which at least seven readings must be given; the concluding portion is handed to Jesus. It is the book of the prophet Esaias. Wonderful privilege accorded the Nazarite congregation, that of hearing God's own Word read by God Himself. What a new meaning must have been given the text.

"The Spirit of the Lord is upon me,
Because He anointed me to preach good tidings to the poor,
He hath sent me to proclaim release to the captives,
And recovering of sight to the blind,
To set at liberty them that are bruised,
To proclaim the acceptable year of the Lord."

The Sermon. Closing or rolling up the book and handing it back to the attendant, Jesus follows the custom of the rabbis and sits down to deliver His discourse. The beginning of the sermon is not reported, but we learn that His auditors were astonished at His gracious words. They are spellbound. He has shown them a different world—or is it only what this world would be if He who is love were crowned its King?

The discourse is ended. The members of the synagogue discuss the merits of the sermon. All agree as to its marvelous power. While Jesus waits with unutterable longing for one awakened soul, they turn from the discourse to the preacher. "Who would have thought to hear the Son of Joseph, the village carpenter, speak like that?" A wag-gish tongue suggests that if He has come to the poor, let Him remedy the poverty of His own family. He has been doing great things in Jerusalem and Capernaum, let Him manifest His power in His own city!

The Text Applied. Jesus did not need to hear their criticism. He knows men's thoughts, and He shows them how even in the days of the prophets Jewish unbelief and hardness of heart compelled Elijah and Elisha to perform their greatest miracles for the Gentiles. He reveals Himself as the fulfillment of Esaias' prophecy! The comparison in favor of the Gentiles stings His hearers to the quick. They refuse to accept Joseph's son. They will not bear His presence any longer. Forgetful of the holy Sabbath day, the wrathful congregation threw Him out of the synagogue; they thrust Him out of the city, and with stones and curses they drive Him to the brow of the great hill, to crowd Him over the abrupt cliff to sure and certain death. "Away with Him," they cry, "Down with Joseph's Son." "Death to the Carpenter."

Vanished but Not Vanquished. In a spirit of sadness Jesus has permitted Himself to be driven by the angry mob dumb as a sheep to the slaughter! He may have been tempted to let them do their worst. What, after all, did life hold for Him but a few years more of suffering? Why try to live? But He knows His hour had not yet come, and suddenly the surging crowd is awed by His commanding majesty. That burly fellow in front finds his arm stayed; the foremost persecutor falls back; those cursing tongues are stilled. A strange spell has fallen on the mob; with holy calm and pitying silence Jesus of Nazareth passes by and pursues His way, while His townsmen shamefacedly return to their city, on the Sabbath day broken and desecrated by their wrath.

Quiz. 1. Did Jesus ever return to Nazareth? 2. On what other occasions did He escape the mob unharmed? 3. What accusations did the Nazarenes make against Him? 4. Why were His townspeople angered? 5. What did His own family say of Him?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Not all who have the greatest privileges profit by them. 2. We must have greatness in ourselves to acknowledge the greatness of our familiars. 3. Many admire the preacher's eloquence, but dislike the logic that drives the truth home. 4. They who are the most ready to throw flowers are the quickest to throw stones. 5. Calmness of soul is always a vantage point. 6. Washington, Benjamin Franklin, Gladstone, Bismarck, General Gordon, Garfield, McKinley and hundreds of others as prominent, have been churchgoers from their youth.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE DRAUGHT OF FISHES.

Now when he had left speaking, he said unto Simon

into the deep,
and for a draught. And Simon answering said unto him, Master, we have all the night, and have taken nothing:

nevertheless at thy word I will let down the net. And when they had this done, they inclosed a great multitude of

and their

And they unto their partners, which were in the other

that they should come and help them.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 5:1-11, ALSO MATT. 4:18-22, MARK 1:16-20.

Prayer: Lord, we too would follow Thee. May we listen to Thy word and obey Thy call. Instruct us that we may become fishers of men, leading others to Thee. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"As the first disciples followed,
As they went where'er He sent;
So today we too may follow,
On His leading still intent."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, Galilee, by the lake of Gennesaret. Persons, Jesus, Simon and Andrew, James and John.

Scripture Setting: His Followers! Caleb followed God, Num. 14:24. David a follower, Psa. 63:8. Follow on to know the Lord, Hos. 6:3. Commanded to follow Him, Matt. 9:22. Reward to followers, Luke 18:28-30. Follow His voice, John 10:27. Follow in His footsteps, 1 Peter 2:21.

Life and Conduct Setting: The call of the four disciples reveals: 1. Jesus, the Teacher. 2. The Friend and Helper. 3. The reward of faith in His word and obedience to His command. 4. The call to service. 5. Mission of His followers. 6. The conditions of absolute discipleship.

JESUS AMONG THE FISHERMEN.

A Noted Fishing Place. Beautiful Lake Gennesaret is before us; its blue waters still dark and unquiet from the storm of the previous night. One of Joshua's ordinances made the privilege of fishing in the lake free to all, and ever since Joshua's time fishing has been one of the main occupations of those who live along the shores of Lake Gennesaret. Fish was a favorite food with the Jews; it was eaten in health and sickness; on week days, and was always a part of the Sabbath meal. We read of three hundred different kinds of fish forming a part of the menu at a dinner given by a noted rabbi; they were eaten fresh, dried or pickled, made into sauce and prepared in every conceivable way.

On the Beach. It is a busy scene. The fisher boats which usually flock its waters are drawn up on the lake shore. The fishermen, after a long and hard night's unavailing toil, are busily engaged washing their nets of the sand and in other ways repairing the damage done by the violent storm. We notice an especially busy group; the brothers, Simon and Andrew, who heard and responded to the call of discipleship during John the Baptist's preaching at the Jordan, and who were with Jesus at Cana, are busy at work, trying to mend the havoc of the past night. Farther down the shore, their partners, John and James, with their father, are quite as busy working and directing their hired help. John and James have also heard the call and answered it. Indeed, their mother and Mary were sisters, so on the human side they are cousins of Jesus.

It is early in the bright autumn morning — His days always began at dawn — and Jesus has come down to the lake. Early as is the hour, a great crowd awaits Him. Some have come from Cana and Capernaum, not only eager to see new miracles, but to hear of the Kingdom of which He preaches even more confidently than did John the Baptist. The crowd pushes so close that He is forced to seek a better vantage ground from which He may address them.

About Their Own Business. Jesus sees His disciples. Their return to their home was an act of duty; the occasion had not yet demanded their entire service. But their gainful occupation has so crowded upon them that they have somewhat forgotten their higher calling. Indeed, they were so engaged in their fishing that they had failed to welcome Him on His arrival at Capernaum; amidst the mending of nets and their discouragement over the ill success of the night's toil, they have scarcely noticed the gathering crowd. They may have failed to remember Him for the moment, but Jesus has not forgotten them! He has come so early in the morning just to seek them.

How gently He recalls their allegiance; He sees Simon, who has not yet left his boat. Simon's boat shall be His pulpit. There is no word of complaint or rebuke as He asks for its use, not even a command, for He "prays" Simon to thrust out a little from the land. The request is granted, and Jesus assumes the attitude of teacher, by seating Himself in the boat, while His melodious voice reaches the people over the ripple of the waves. We have no report of that sermon, but we know that always "He spake as never man spake."

Launching Into the Deep. Simon Peter heard it all as he sat in the boat. Jesus finishes teaching the multitude and turns to tutor Simon and Andrew. "Launch out into the deep, and let down your nets for a draught." Very different is His tone from when He prayed for the use of the boat; gracious still but commanding. Simon realizes a higher will than his.

The fisherman and his boat are under the Master's control. Simon Peter, the man of action, the ever-ready, answers almost before the command is finished, "I will let down the nets." Though he reminds Jesus of the night's fruitless toil, he does not hesitate one moment. There was no lack of decision about Peter. He has enlisted as a soldier in the new Kingdom, and it is absolutely essential that he shall obey his Commander. When the soldier hears the command, he becomes deaf to every other sound. Above the whirl of bullets, above the rattle of cannon and shell, above the noise of battle, he holds his General's command, "Charge!" I wonder if we are such soldiers, or would we have been afraid to launch out as Peter did?

The Catch. With the help of his brother, the more quiet Andrew, Simon pulls into the deep water and they let down the nets. "And when they had this done they enclosed a great multitude of fishes," of such weight that their nets begin to give way under the strain, and as it is beyond their power to life the catch, Simon beckons to his partners, James and John, whose boat was still drawn up on the shore. You may be sure that if you lend to the Lord you will be repaid. Peter lends his boat to the Master and his generosity is rewarded with a draught of fishes that fills his own boat and his partners' until there is danger of their sinking from the overweight.

Illustration: Off the shores of Cataline Island and Monterey Bay are beautiful marine gardens which grow far down under the ocean. There are great swaying trees, beautiful mosses, flowers more vivid in coloring than any on land, and fish as beautiful as the flowers. But to be visible to the human eye, one must enter a boat from which the light is excluded by a canvas cover and then one must look through the telescopic glass at the bottom of the boat. Without any such aids Jesus could look right down through the water to the bottom of the sea and He may at that moment have seen where were one of those large shoals of fish that inhabit Lake Gennesaret; or through the simple operation of His will, Jesus may have driven the finny tribes together to one point.

The Simple Fisherman Awed. What were Simon Peter's thoughts; what did it all mean to him? They had been among those "That go down to the sea in ships, that do business in great waters; and they had seen the works of the Lord and His wonders in the deep." Jesus had shown His dominion over the fishes of the sea. He had made "the oars above and the fins below strike the waters in unison." Such knowledge was too great for Simon. He felt the purity and power of Christ, his own nothingness, his sinfulness and littleness. Indeed, the fear fell upon all of them. Such a sense of unworthiness is a real sign of fitness for service.

A young woman was urged to enter a certain field of missionary endeavor. "I feel so unworthy and incapable; if I felt I could do it, I would not hesitate." "I would not want you if you felt otherwise," was the reply.

Fishers of Men. Jesus stills the agitation of Simon Peter's heart and lifts its fear. "Fear not," He says, "from henceforth thou shalt catch men." Ah, the miracle of the fishes is not to recoup them for a night's futile toil; it is an object lesson, even though they may not understand the full meaning of that phrase, "fishers of men." "And when they had brought their boats to land, they forsook all and followed Him." Let others care for the fish, it was theirs to follow Him. After filling their boat, James and John probably returned to their former tasks, for Jesus comes to them a little later. With no word of explanation, or promise, He says, "Follow me." And they obey the command, leaving their father, the hired servants and the half mended nets.

Chrysostom says: "Admire the dispensation of the Lord, how He draws each by the art most familiar to him. The magi by the star, the fishermen by fish"; likewise the hungry by food, the woman of Samaria by water, the shepherd by his sheep.

A Look Backward. On the pebbly beach of Gennesaret the deserted boats and partly mended nets, and old Zebedee not at all understanding it, as he sees the four men following Jesus when they do not know where He will take them nor what He will have them do. He thinks Himself a King—the King, and He has persuaded these four simple fisher folk to help Him set up His Kingdom. How did it look to Zebedee, the old father? Did he think it all foolishness? Ah, Zebedee, it is foolishness, but the foolishness of God which is to confound the wise, overcome the mighty and redeem and reclaim the world.

Quiz. 1. What had Jesus been preaching? 2. How did the people receive His preaching? 3. When were these four disciples first called? 4. When did Jesus attach Peter to Simon's name? 5. To what did Jesus call the four?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The dawn of that morning when Jesus called the four disciples was the sunrise of a new world. 2. Most Christians would accomplish more if they launched deeper in. 3. One night's fruitless toil does not foretell failure. 4. Jesus did not seek big fish but a great draught of fishes. 5. One is never ready for service till he feels his own unworthiness. 6. His disciples are not called to be leaders but followers.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

A SABBATH IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

And forthwith, when they were come

they entered

of Simon and Andrew, with James and John. But Simon's wife's mother of a fever, and anon

they tell him of her.
And he came and

and lifted her up; and immediately the fever left her, and she ministered unto them. And at even,

they

all that were diseased, and them that were possessed with devils.
And all the city was gathered together at

And he healed many that were sick of divers diseases, and cast out many devils; and suffered not the devils to speak, because they knew him.

CHRIST AND THE FISHERMEN

BY E. K. G. ZIMMERMAN

As Jesus was entering on His mission, He chose His disciples from among the poor people of the country. Walking along the shores of the sea of Galilee, He discovered Simon Peter and his brother Andrew casting their net, for they were fishermen. He called them away, saying that He would make them fishers of men. They at once followed Him. Presently two other fishermen, brothers, were found sitting in their boat mending nets; their names were James and John. They were working with their father, Zebedee. When He called them they left the ship and their father and followed His footsteps.

Zimmerman, the artist, is another painter of the German school; his work realistic and carefully finished. Nothing could be more natural than the old man's wrinkled face, his weather-beaten chest, his firm mouth and attentive expression. Jesus is talking seriously of His mission, his finely modeled hands on the father's wrinkled arm, while the two sons listen with all the avidity of their nature. The face of Jesus suggests the ideal preacher of the finer sort. The two sons have fine faces, particularly the one nearer to Christ, which is without doubt meant to represent John. In the background one of the other fishermen is coming ashore with an oar on his shoulder. Everything is very real; even the net seems actual.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

CHRIST AND THE FISHERMEN
CHRIST TOUCHES THE FISHMAN'S HAND

REINHARD SEBASTIAN ZIMMERMAN. 1815-1893.

ERNST ZIMMERMAN. 1852-1901.

"They are clever, yes, and wonderfully like. But the boy has his bread and butter to earn." So, in sober good faith for the youth's well-being, spoke the assembled uncles and aunts and family friends of the father and mother of Reinhard Zimmerman, called in counsel as to what should be done with the youth that with daily lengthening steps was striding toward manhood.

So, obediently enough—for obedience is the prime virtue of childhood in Germany—Reinhard packed away his pencils and extemporized brushes and went into the warehouse of an uncle in Hagenau, his birthplace. Here he handled sacks of corn and flour, tallied wine and oil casks, receipted for delivered eggs and chickens, learned the mysteries of single and double entry, and on a high stool kept faithful account of his master's business—for the artist slights nothing.

But the call of the spirit was too strong. The brushes and pencils came forth from their hiding place again. With the lake of Constance beneath his feet, its encircling mountains over his head, small wonder that the youth could not contain in quietness the response to beauty that stirred within him.

Not only the surrounding splendor of air, earth and water—the primal elements—found their way to his tablets, but quaint sketches of those about him. The village characters and dignitaries, the passing travelers, his fellow laborers in the arid desert of business, all were pictured with utter truth, yet with a queer humor—something quite apart from and infinitely more dignified than caricature—that made the uncle smile in spite of himself when one day he curiously viewed what his 'prentice clerk was doing.

A wealthy and traveled customer stood by. "That fellow will make a better painter than a merchant," he observed. And so, at the instance of the interested customer, Zimmerman went to Munich and began to study painting in earnest. In 1844 he went to Paris, and after a short time in the studios, proceeded to England. In London he painted portraits with some considerable success and popularity. Returning to Munich in 1847 he exhibited the "Three Magi," and on this found his reputation firmly established.

Of numerous subsequent compositions, distinguished by a lively humor, excellent characterization and brilliant technique, may be mentioned: "Peasants at the Castle" (1853), "Beggar Musicians" (1854), "Corn-Market Day in Munich" (1861, Cologne Museum), "The Love Letter" (Karlsruhe Gallery), "Two Different Opinions" (1868, Bremen Gallery), "In the Antechamber Before an Audience" (Saint Gall Museum), "Visit to His Reverence" (1884, Hanover Museum), "Kindergarten" (1885, Brunswick Museum).

His son Ernst (1852-1901) born in Munich, was first instructed by him and afterwards a pupil of Wilhelm Diez at the Academy of Munich. After producing some clever genre scenes he turned to historical subjects, and in 1879 won a signal success with "Christ in the Temple." His principal subsequent works include: "Adoration of the Shepherds" (1883, New Pinakothek, Munich), "Satyr Giving Musical Instruction" (1884, Dresden Gallery), "Christus Consolator" (1888, Leipzig Museum), "Christ and the Fisherman" (Jubilee Exhibition, Berlin, 1886), "Christ Appearing to Thomas" (1892) and "Elector Max Emanuel Inspecting the Work at the Turkengraben" (1887, City Hall, Munich). He was appointed professor at the Munich Academy in 1886.

JAMES BEALINGS.

A SABBATH IN THE LIFE OF JESUS.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 1:21-34. ALSO MATT. 8:14-17, LUKE 4:31-40.

Prayer: Lord, We thank Thee for Thy Sabbath. We thank Thee for its rest, for Thy preached word and the healing which it brings. Help us to keep it holy, and to delight in it that we may honor Thee and receive Thy blessing. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"Sundays the pillars are
On which Heaven's palace arched lies;
The other days fill up the spare
And hollow room with vanities;
They are the fruitful beds and borders
Of God's rich garden; that is bare Which parts their ranks and orders."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, the synagogue in Capernaum and Peter's home in Bethsaida. Persons, Jesus, Andrew, James and John.

Scripture Setting: The Authority of Jesus. Sermon on the Mount given with authority, Matt. 7:28-29. Enemies testify to power of His preaching, John 7:46. Power to forgive sins, Mark 2:7-10. Healing power, Luke 5:17. Power to give eternal life, John 17:2. All powerful, Matt. 28:18. Eternal power, Rom. 1:20. Power of His name, Phil 2:9-10.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this Sabbath in Capernaum, Jesus has given us an object lesson of a Sabbath honored as God would have it, through: 1. Attendance at God's house. 2. Participation in Divine worship. 3. The cleansing of one with an unclean spirit. 4. The Christian home. 5. Healing and comforting the sick and afflicted.

A WELL-SPENT SABBATH.

An Object Lesson. In this day of Sunday ball games, Sunday excursions, Sunday papers, Sunday theaters and widespread Sabbath desecration, the Sabbath which Jesus spent in Capernaum is truly a much-needed object lesson. More than once do His disciples mention Jesus' habit of worship and Sabbath observance. Jewish tradition had changed the Sabbath from the happy, holy rest day God had ordained into a day of weariness and tedium, through meaningless restrictions even more arbitrary than the old Connecticut blue laws. The temple service and that of the synagogue was uninspiring and void of spirituality, but Jesus did not make this an excuse for disobedience to the fourth commandment or absence from God's house. When the Sabbath day found Him in Capernaum, there was no deviation from His established custom. The ruins of the synagogue which He "straightway" entered may still be visited by travelers in the Holy Land.

A Teacher of the Word. Whenever a noted preacher, rabbi or stranger came to town, he was always accorded the privilege of addressing the congregation. Jesus was known in Capernaum; had He not healed the nobleman's son? We may be sure the area was crowded with men and the gallery filled with women, when He availed Himself of the privilege of speaking to the assembled worshippers. All the rabbis and teachers quoted the prophets for authority, but from Jesus they do not even hear a "thus saith the Lord." They straighten themselves to make sure they are not dreaming when He launches out with a "Verily I say unto you," and when He blesses the hearers and doers of "these words of mine," the drowsy air of the synagogue is as if surcharged with electricity; the congregation is astir, heads are lifted and necks are craned to more plainly see the Teacher who speaks with an authority Moses never dreamed of. They are astonished. He teaches them "As One that had authority, and not as the scribes."

An Unwonted Church-Goer. While Jesus is still speaking, He is interrupted by a wild shout. "Let us alone; what have we to do with Thee, Thou Jesus of Nazareth? Art Thou come to destroy us? I know Thee who Thou art, the Holy One of God." It was the cry of one of those poor unfortunates, so numerous in that Eastern country, who were said to be possessed by an "evil or unclean spirit" or "devil." They were probably so called because the possession or obsession drove its victims to frequent unclean places, and often to make their dwelling in the tombs. A ceremonial ban was placed upon them, and they were never allowed to enter temple or synagogue; but this man breaks in upon Jesus' teaching and startles the congregation with his wild and defiant avowal of Jesus as the Holy One of God.

Rebuke and Command. Startled and fearful, yet curious, His hearers await the denouement. What will Jesus do? Will He withdraw Himself from the poor wretch, who is ceremonially unclean, and demand his expulsion from the synagogue? Like all evils, entrenched in society and in government, this evil spirit has asked to be let alone, even though it knows that the mission of Jesus and His disciples is to "destroy" the devil and all his works. Jesus does not even change His position, for now the authority of the Teacher is to be demonstrated.

In tones of supreme command, He says, "hold thy peace and come out of him."

An Amazed Congregation. Instantly the command is obeyed. The poor unfortunate falls on the floor of the synagogue, but there is "no hurt." The wild demented creature of a moment before regains his manhood, and surely there is no more grateful and adoring worshipper in all the synagogue on this memorable Sabbath than the former demoniac. No wonder all are amazed and that they turn to each other and question among themselves, "What new doctrine is this?" With what authority commandeth He even the unclean spirits and they obey Him?

Illustration: The insane were sadly neglected, cruelly treated and their places of confinement were little better than a habitation of the tombs, when less than a century ago two of His disciples, Elizabeth Fry in England and Dorothea Dix in our own country, continuing the mission of their Master, aroused the attention of the world to the inhuman treatment of these unfortunates, and the light, airy, wholesome and cheery asylums for the insane are a continuation of the good work Jesus began that Sabbath day. Yes, and in the Gospel missions of the great cities are found evidences of miracles as great; drunkards, once possessed by the demon alcohol, now reclaimed; men and women formerly in the bondage of an unclean spirit, now at peace and enjoying the liberty of the Gospel.

A Guest in a Christian Home. From the synagogue they leave Capernaum, and Jesus walks with His four lately chosen disciples a few miles along the shore to Bethsaida, where all enter Peter's home. It is the first Christian home of which we have any glimpse, and it bears all the ear-marks. It is not a pretentious structure, but an unassuming, comfortable, two-story house, standing a little way back on the beach, in a large yard. Selfishness does not reign, for its comforts and delights are shared with the husband's unmarried brother, Andrew, and the wife's mother. Husband and wife are one in the service of the Master, later in life the wife leaving its shelter to share the privations and perils of her husband's itinerary in the establishment of the Christian church. Moreover, Jesus is a welcome guest in the home.

A Fever Patient. Did Jesus hope to find rest in this hospitable home? No sooner has He entered the house than He is told how Peter's mother-in-law has been suddenly smitten down with a violent burning fever, such as is even now prevalent in that district. So little did even His most favored disciples know of His readiness to allay all human suffering and relieve all distress that "they besought Him for her." Seeking the sick chamber, He bends over the sufferer, takes her by the hand and lifts her up, and immediately the fever leaves her, so that she ministers unto them. I fancy no deaconess ever since has rendered service with so grateful a heart. Saint Luke the physician tells us He "rebuked" the fever, just as He had rebuked the demon in the synagogue. It has taken the world nearly twenty centuries to learn that disease is the outcome of sin, ignorance or carelessness. Christianity continues to rebuke the fever by clearing the swamps, destroying the pestilential mosquito and demanding the thorough sanitation of every dwelling house.

What a sacred meal it must have been, having as a guest at the hospitable board the Teacher who had not only attested His authority by the miracle in the synagogue, but with Divine healing in the home; the meal prepared by the one who had been so marvelously healed. Surely it was different from the all too fashionable Sunday dinners of the present Lord's day, at which He whose name honors the day has no place or part.

An Afternoon Clinic. In every home the happenings of the synagogue were discussed. The miracles of healing that had taken place in the home of their neighbor Simon was also talked about. By the time the stars were out, new light had risen over every domestic hearth. There were homes of sorrow, care and sickness in Bethsaida and Capernaum, as everywhere, but the star of hope shone above them all. Surely He who had power to banish the evil spirit by a simple rebuke and instantly to restore to life one at death's door, will not find their case too desperate! So from all the populous neighborhood, they bring their sick children, wives, husbands, fathers, mothers, sisters and brothers. The whole city is hushed as its multitudes throng expectant at Simon's door. They lay their loved ones on beds and pallets and on the sands of the beach, beseeching the Great Physician to heal them. Was there ever before such a picture of the world's misery and need? Was He equal to it, did He fulfill their expectation that evening when a whole suffering city stood as a suppliant at His door? Ah, again Luke, himself a physician, tells us He laid His hands on every one of them and healed them!

Quiz. 1. How did Jesus' teaching differ from that of the rabbis? 2. Did the evil spirit desire to come out from his victim? 3. Is evil ever ready to restore its victims? 4. On what occasion does Paul mention Peter's wife? 5. What did Jesus afterward say concerning the responsibility of Capernaum because of the miracles performed in that city?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The authority of Christ and His religion has never been successfully disputed. 2. The devil always asks to be let alone. 3. Heaven, earth and hell sometimes meet in the same place. 4. In order to serve Jesus, we must first know His healing power. 5. Jesus is the only physician who heals every patient in a whole clinic.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE LEPER HEALED.

And there came to him, beseeching

him, and

and saying unto him,
If thou wilt,
thou canst make me clean.
And Jesus, moved with compassion,

and saith unto him,
I will; be thou clean.
And as soon as he had spoken, immediately the leprosy departed from him, and he was cleansed.

And he straitly

and forthwith sent

And saith unto him, See thou say nothing to any man: but go thy way, shew and offer for thy

those things which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 1:35-45. MATT. 8:2-4, LUKE 5:12-14.

Prayer: Thou, who art the Great Physician, we thank Thee that Thy touch hath still its ancient power: that Thou art, too, full of compassion and tender mercy. Have compassion on us and cleanse us from the leprosy of sin. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"Touch me, and make the leper clean;
Purge my iniquity:
Unless Thou wash my soul from sin,
I have no part in Thee."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, an unknown city in Galilee. Persons, Jesus and a leper.

Scripture Setting: The Touch of Jesus. A woman touches the hem of His garment, Mark 5:27-29. Multitudes touch him, Mark 6:56. Children feel His touch, Mark 10:13-16. Jesus touches the bier, Luke 7:14. Thomas convinced, John 20:27-28. The Word of Life, 1 John 1:1.

Life and Conduct Setting: The lesson shows us: 1. The impetuosity, faith and fear of the leper. 2. Jesus' compassion for the most wretched and repulsive. 3. His readiness to heal and the power of His touch. 4. Jesus' regard for the Mosaic law. 5. That the leper's failure to obey hindered Jesus in His ministry.

THE MAN WHO DISOBEYED ORDERS.

A Pitiful Figure. Nothing could be more dramatic than the scene before us. Naaman, the leper, who came to Elisha in a gilded chariot, drawn by prancing steeds, and accompanied by a retinue of servants, with credentials from an Assyrian monarch, was a masterful, imperious and lordly patient, despite his disease, altogether different from this pitiful creature. In all the clinic by the seashore there was no case so wretched, no one so hopeless as this grewsome, repellent figure. His rent clothes, disheveled hair, bandaged face of unnatural hue, and the mournful, raucous cry of "Unclean! Unclean!" proclaim the leper.

A Living Death. There is no existence so wretched as the life of isolation to which a leper is doomed. Death is far preferable. When Miriam, the sister of Moses, was punished with leprosy, Aaron interceded for her, "Let her not be as one dead, of whom the flesh is half consumed," and Moses cried in anguish, "Heal her now, O God, I beseech Thee." So great has been the fear and aversion always to this dread, unconquerable and mysterious skin disease, that we find the leper proclaimed an outcast in ancient Egyptian papyrus writings fifteen hundred and fifty years before Christ. Fourteen hundred years before our Christian era the sacred writings of India declared his defilement, and in our own land a few years ago the mere suspicion of leprosy caused the one who was suspected, to be separated from wife and child, isolated from his fellow men, under Government detention and restraint, for a term of years, until it was proven beyond a doubt that he had no taint of the dread disease. In Jerusalem lepers were forbidden to worship in the temple and could not enter any walled city under penalty of forty stripes save one; they might remain outside the gate and beg from travelers should any be so generous as to throw them a coin, but they could not live among their countrymen.

"If Thou Wilt." Repulsive and until now despairing, this leper pushes his way through the retreating crowd and kneels at Jesus' feet. Though they give many remedies for every known disease, the writings of the ancient rabbis do not contain the remotest suggestion of a cure for leprosy. In fact, the disease was regarded as little better than a living death; the leper was enjoined from all contact with the living and to bear the appearance of mourners. The possibility of any cure through human agency was never dreamed of by the Jews. But this poor leper must have heard Jesus preach, or possibly he had known of miraculous cures before Simon Peter's home. He has faith in Jesus' absolute power to heal, but the cruelty of man during those years as an outcast has made him doubt His desire to alleviate suffering such as his. In an agony of supplication he cries, "If Thou wilt, Thou canst make me clean." How glad we should be today that we know Jesus is love.

Illustration. In India, mere children are married. Should the husband die at any time, the blame is always laid to the poor little child wife. In former times as a widow, she was burned on her husband's funeral pyre. English law no longer permits this to be done, but even now her fate is almost as pitiable as that of a leper. She is scorned and derided by her husband's relatives and her own and leads an existence so wretched that when Punditai Ramabai, a child widow, first heard of Jesus' love for her, it seemed impossible for her to believe that He was willing to love and care for her. But once convinced of His love she started a home and school for other child widows in gratitude for what Jesus did for her.

"I Will." The leper would have fled from a rabbi, for they only added to the burden of his existence by their inhumane treatment. We learn that one rabbi boasted that he always threw stones at the lepers to keep them far off! Not a rabbi would salute a leper or would come within a distance of six feet of one, and if the wind came from that direction, the rabbi would not come within one hundred feet of the unfortunate. Not so Jesus! So infinite is His compassion, that though the ceremonial law made it defilement to touch a leper, Jesus stretches forth His hand and touches the poor wretched outcast kneeling at His feet. And He says, "I will; be thou clean."

We all know the story of Father Damien, who devoted his life to a colony of lepers, eating with them and living with them that he might tell them of the blessed Jesus, who was and ever is the leper's friend.

Clean and Whole. Gentle and tender as was Jesus' touch, it was all-powerful. As His hand rested on the poor leper, the diseased frame pulsed and thrilled with renewed health. The heart that had so long despaired of any help in this world leaped for joy. "Immediately the leprosy departed from him and he was cleansed." We who know so little of the dread disease can hardly realize what that healing meant to those around Him; the joy of the man who, after long years of uncleanness and banishment, was now as other men. Never again would children run from him, no more would his fellow men pass by on the other side, nor would he longer have to wander in mourner's garb, bewailing his deadly condition; from his lips will never again come the warning cry, "Unclean! Unclean!" And then the wonder of all the onlookers. Not since Elisha's time had such a thing happened. Surely He is the One of whom Isaiah prophesied. How it must have increased the faith of His recently chosen disciples. Have you ever thought of the wonderful touch of Jesus? He lays His hand on the leper, and lo! healthful life is imparted; on Simon's mother-in-law, and the fever is laid; upon the bier at Nain and upon the dead daughter of Jairus, and death departs and life returns. Thus His touch can cleanse our sins, touch our dead hearts and give them new life.

Silence Imposed. Had Jesus been a seeker after fame or temporal power, this cure and the enthusiasm it created might have led to His acknowledgment as King by the populace. But Jesus was so wholly averse to anything sensational, and so avoided fame as a miracle worker, that He sent the man away, charging him to say nothing about what had happened to him. He did not wish to increase an excitement that would only hinder His work. There was an invaluable service the healed man might render his benefactor—the formal registration of his cure. Therefore Jesus tells him, "See thou say nothing to any man; but go thy way, show thyself to the priest, and offer for thy cleansing those things which Moses commanded, for a testimony unto them." The priests in Jerusalem needed the leper's testimony, not the multitudes in Galilee, who were following Jesus so gladly.

Too Good to Keep. It was a wonderful opportunity of testifying for Jesus, but the former leper thought he understood better than the Master, and he went out and began to publish it much, and to blaze abroad the matter. The man may have meant well, but how much better if he had said,

"I'll go where you want me to go, dear Lord, I'll say what you want me to say."

Because of the publicity which came through his disobedience, Jesus could not enter the cities as before, and even in desert places He was beset by crowds of curiosity-seekers, more interested in the miracles He performed than in His teaching. "To obey is better than sacrifice."

A missionary returned to her home on a furlough. One day, while in her mother's house, she noted the peculiar appearance of her fingers. Without a hint of her fear to anyone, she hurried to New York and consulted a great skin specialist, only to have her fears confirmed. The tell-tale signs denoted leprosy. The missionary received the knowledge not as an affliction but as a call to the afflicted. She believed that she had become like them that she might go and testify of Jesus to the lepers, and returning to the missionary field, began her work among these outcasts. How different from the healed leper, who was willing to testify of Jesus' cure but was unwilling to obey Him or go where He sent him.

Quiz. 1. What was the Mosaic law concerning the purification of a leper? 2. What noted Bible character was a leper? 3. How was he healed? 4. What did leprosy typify? 5. What king disobeyed God and by whom was he told that obedience was better than sacrifice? 6. What king was smitten with leprosy for disregard of God's ordinances? 7. What servant for lying?

Seed Thoughts. 1. No one ever besought Jesus in vain. 2. Jesus' cleansing touch frees from the leprosy of sin. 3. Jesus knew no "If." 4. He would not have us always on our knees, but sends us away to do His bidding. 5. There are always more persons willing to testify than to obey. 6. The leper is not the only one who accepts help and rejects advice.

MARGARET WINTINGER.

When

saw their faith, he said unto the sick of the palsy, Son, thy sins be forgiven. But there were certain of the

there, and reasoning in their hearts, Why doth this man thus speak blasphemies? who can forgive sins but God only?

And immediately when Jesus perceived in his spirit that they so reasoned within themselves, he said unto them, Why reason ye these things
in your hearts?
Whether is it easier to say to

Thy sins be forgiven thee;
or to say, Arise,
and take up thy bed, and walk?

But that ye may know that the Son of man hath power on to forgive sins, (he saith to the sick of the palsy,) I say unto thee, Arise, and take up thy bed, and go thy way into thine house.

And immediately

and

and

before them all; insomuch that they were all amazed, and glorified God, saying, We never saw it on this fashion.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 2:1-12, MATT. 9:1-7, LUKE 5:18-26.

Prayer: Lord, we rejoice in Thy power to forgive. Cleanse us from all our sins and make us completely whole. For Thy name's sake, Amen.

"Come ye sinners, poor and needy,
Weak and wounded, sick and sore;
Jesus ready stands to save you,
Full of pity, love and power."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, the paralytic and his four friends.

Scripture Setting: Forgiveness and Healing. Health conditioned on obedience, Ex. 15:26. The forgiveness of the Lord, Psa. 103:3. Help in sickness and deliverance from sin, Psa. 41:3-4. Through His word, Psa. 107:20. Forgiveness and healing through His suffering, Isa. 53:5. Completeness of His healing and forgiveness, Jer. 17:14. Promise of healing, love and forgiveness, Hos. 14:4.

Life and Conduct Setting: The healing of the one sick with the palsy manifests, 1. The perseverance and faith of the afflicted man and his friends. 2. Jesus as the searcher of the heart. 3. The thoroughness of His method. 4. The importance of removing the cause if results are to be obtained. 5. The free exercise of His love. 6. Jesus' power to forgive sins.

A REMARKABLE ENTRANCE.

A Crowded House. When Jesus returned to Capernaum, His temporary home, the house was not large enough to hold those eager to hear Him. So great was the multitude that it crowded the house, blocked the entrance and overflowed into the narrow street, practically closing all possibility of further entrance. Jesus stood within the entrance of the guest chamber which opened upon the covered gallery that ran around the familiar Eastern court yard. Already the espionage of His enemies had begun, and those Pharisees, and doctors of the law from every village of Galilee and Judea, and from Jerusalem itself were spies sent out by the Sanhedrin to secure evidence which could be used for Jesus' overthrow. As usual they had obtained the foremost places and were "sitting by" Him, while the court was thronged out into the street.

A Patient Arrives. All were intent on the Master's teaching; the simple Galileans drinking in the new truths while the "scribes" quibbled over every word. Suddenly the appearance of four men carrying a bed created a stir on the outskirts of the crowd. It may have been one of those light portable beds for the mid-day sleep or for the service of the sick; or it may have been a simple mattress, possibly only a large sheep skin; any or all of these were in common use. Interest centers not in the bed but in its occupant, a confirmed paralytic. And yet it had become so common to see the sick carried to Jesus in this manner that it would have attracted no attention but for the persistence of the bearers of the couch.

Down Through the Roof. With a courtyard crowded out into the street and every passage-way barred by the people, they might have been pardoned for refusing to make further effort; but there was too much at stake to be dismayed. They believed that Jesus could and would heal their sick friend. Deep down in his heart the paralytic cherished a hope so great that he dared not confide it even to his friends. What was to be done? Only those who have been ill beyond hope, only those who have seen a friend's vigor decay, and strength wane under an incurable disease, and then have dared hope; only these can realize the crucial anxiety of that moment. Something must be done, faith and courage made the impossible possible. Failing to find other entrance, they carried their burden down the street to the outer stairs that led to the roof of a house beyond the crowd and ascended. They carried the bed and its occupant from one roofed gallery to the adjoining one until they came to the one under which Jesus stood. Then they unroofed the covering of tiles, and having broken an opening through the framework supporting the tiles, it was only the work of a minute for the four strong men to let bed and occupant down. As the pallet swung slowly down before them, friendly hands from the audience must have steadied and guided its course to the ground.

What the Great Physician Saw. It was a spectacular scene. We can imagine the surprise of the congregation as they saw the sudden descent of the cot. Many looked on in wonder; the scribes in their chief seats doubtless shot angry glances at the intruder, but did Jesus show annoyance at this unceremonious interruption of His discourse? Ah, the men had judged Him aright when they decided that neither interruption nor startling surprise will count as much with Jesus as the appeal of the sick man. They knew He would heal their palsied friend, just as today we may bring our friends to Him knowing that He will answer our petition for them.

Faith Rewarded. As usual, Jesus rewarded the faith of the waiting group by bestowing more than they dared to ask. The face before Him was haunted with dread, fear and hope. Oh, he had merited all the suffering incurred through the misuse of a body whose nerves and brain had at last rebelled because of sins committed against it. Never had the paralytic more truly realized the justice of nature's punishment than as he lay in the presence of the one sinless Man. Never had those mis-spent years of his youth seemed so black. Would Jesus turn away from him and leave him to bear the result of his sin and folly? Suddenly the poor palsied brain realized that there was something more desirable than strength, a greater blessing than health. He realized that he was soul sick! He could not speak, but the tense upturned face, the yearning eyes, spoke his plea. Knowing all the man's past, fully conscious that the wrecked frame was only outraged nature's penalty, Jesus speaks, and words and tone never before sounded so sweet to human ears, "Son, thy sins be forgiven thee."

Silent Criticism and Open Rebuke. Now all the Pharisees and doctors of law "sitting by" knew that God alone can forgive sins. He never delegated that power to man; who then was this blasphemer who claimed to forgive the paralytic's sin? Surely through His own words they would be able to convict Him. They would have something worth telling to the Sanhedrin whose spies they were. Jesus was as quick to read their hearts as He had been to read that of the sick man, and He asked them "Whether it is easier to say, Thy sins be forgiven thee, or to say, Arise and walk?" How He must have astonished them, not only by that searching question but by His knowledge of their very thoughts. Saying "Thy sins be forgiven thee" could not be put to the proof, but saying "Arise and walk" could be tested on the spot.

The great search light at the World's Fair grounds in Chicago threw a lighted path across the lake extending thirty miles. Every drifting spar, every foam-flecked wave athwart that path could be plainly discerned. But there is no miracle of science so great as Jesus' omniscience.

The Son of Man Manifested His Power. In his vision Daniel had seen come from "the clouds of Heaven one like the Son of Man," and before these spies and critics Jesus declares Himself to be that Son of Man. Perhaps it also reminded them of David's psalm of praise of the One "who forgiveth all thine iniquities, who healeth all thy diseases." If they thought healing was a severer test, Jesus was willing to make it, to establish His claim as the Son of Man. Very quietly He turned to the sick man, "I say unto thee, Arise and take up thy bed and go thy way into thine house." And the healed man slowly and silently rose, folded up his pallet and we may be sure that this time a way was made for him through the crowd. They could hardly believe their eyes as there passed silently through their ranks the man who but a moment before was lowered down through the roof a bed-ridden paralytic. Truly such a thing had never been seen before. The Son of Man had proved His power to forgive sin and to heal disease. The multitude was filled with fear and awe; never before had they witnessed such a manifestation of God's power, and in their blindness they glorified Him but rejected His Son.

The record is silent concerning the healed man after he had carried forth his bed, but with what rejoicing he must have joined his four friends. They had seen the amused smile of the crowd; perhaps had heard gibes and sneers as they struggled to the roof with their burden. But they are pointed out now as the faithful friends of the healed man, and in the days that followed they doubtless told many others the story of Jesus' power over disease and sin.

Illustration. It is hard to cure the fatty heart of the drunkard, to mend the degenerate tissues and the poisoned liver, but it is still harder to cure the thirst that urges the man on to destruction. In all our large cities are specialists who cure nerves worn by evil living, but who, except God, can restore purity of heart, cleanness of soul and drive out the evil spirit?

Quiz. 1. Where is Capernaum? 2. Why did Jesus make it His home? 3. Why did the scribes follow Him? 4. What did Jesus consider the paralytic's greatest need? 5. How did He know the criticisms of the scribes? 6. Which is the greater, to heal disease or forgive sin? 7. How did Jesus prove His power to do both?

Seed Truths. 1. The greatest saints are not always found in the front pews. 2. The church which has Christ in it, will always be crowded to the doors. 3. Where there is faith, there is both the will and the way. 4. It is not possible to bar the earnest seeker from Christ. 5. Sickness and sin begin with the same initials. 6. Forgiveness is more essential than healing. 7. It is the easiest thing in the world to criticize another for what we cannot understand. 8. Most people view with suspicion those who accomplish what they cannot. 9. There have been untold physicians who have cured the effects of sin, but only One who can cure sin itself. 10. Jesus never made a statement He could not prove.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

JESUS AT BETHESDA.

And a certain man was there, which had an infirmity
thirty and eight years.
When Jesus saw

and knew that he had been now a long time in that case, he saith unto him, Wilt thou be made whole? The impotent man answered him,
Sir, I have no man, when to put me into but while another

Jesus saith unto him, Rise, take up thy bed, and walk. And immediately the man was made whole, and

and

and on the same day was the sabbath.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 5:1-15.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee for the tenderness and compassion of Jesus; that He was and is ever the Friend of the friendless. Give us more of His Spirit that we may always be willing to help the suffering and lonely. For Jesus' sake, Amen.

"As He spoke to the suff'rer
Who lay at the pool,
He is saying this moment,
'Wilt thou be made whole?'"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, the pool Bethesda, in Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus and the impotent man.

Scripture Setting: The compassion of Jesus. Never failing compassion, Lam. 3:22. Full of compassion, Psa. 86:15. Compassion for the individual, Psa. 34:6. Compassion for multitude, Matt. 20:34. Compassion for demoniac, Mark 5:19. Compassion for the hungry, Matt. 15:32. Compassion for the sick, Matt. 14:14. Forgiveness of sin a manifestation of His compassion, Ps. 78:38. His compassion for us, Micah 7:19.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The healing at Bethesda manifests the great multitude in need of Jesus' touch. 2. Jesus' readiness to discover those in greatest loneliness and affliction. 3. The necessity of a desire for healing. 4. Jesus' power to heal without resort to outside aid. 5. The marvelous speediness of His healing. 6. The criticism of the Jews. 7. Jesus' forgiveness of and warning to the one made whole.

BEFRIENDING THE FRIENDLESS.

An Unknown Feast. It was now early autumn. Very beautiful was the land of Galilee through which Jesus passed on His way to Jerusalem to attend what we call the "Unknown Feast," since we have no definite knowledge which feast this was. Every road was thronged with myriads of people coming, not only from the Holy Land, but from countries distant and foreign, to attend the feast. The countless multitude flowed like an unbroken stream toward the temple to witness its imposing rites and engage in its worship. They traveled in happy, laughing bands; there were family groups, and companies of neighbors and friends whose converse relieved the tedium of the journey. But Jesus traveled alone. Did He think of that other journey to Jerusalem, when His boyish heart was fired with the desire to be about His Father's business? For this journey was undertaken in the fulfillment of that desire. The challenge of the Jewish authorities is to be met with an open claim of His Messiahship. He goes forth to encounter that active persecution unto death which shall end in the cross. It was not a time for converse even with His chosen followers. We do not wonder that He should have gone up to the feast alone and unattended.

The Magic Spring. Jesus is again in Jerusalem and John brings to us one of the most beautiful and touching incidents in His ministry; the cure at Bethesda. All attempts to identify the spot have failed. We only know that Bethesda was a pool on the northeast side of the temple and enclosed by five of its porches. Its waters were clear and tranquil except when flushed by the inflow from the Pool of Siloam with which it was connected by a subterranean channel. This sudden "in-take" caused a movement of the waters such as may be observed in any canal lock. The waters may have possessed some medicinal qualities for it was believed that the first person who stepped into the pool after "the troubling of the waters" would be cured.

Awaiting Their Chance. Though only he who was first to descend into the waters could obtain any benefit, each day a great multitude of afflicted and unfortunate ones thronged the place, each hoping that he might be the fortunate recipient of the "angel's favors" for that day. There were some who had been carried to the pool every day for years untold, only to be carried back home, disappointed yet hopeful of what the morrow might bring. Some lay on soft rugs, a painful exhibition of bodily sufferings, other poor crippled unfortunates solicited alms of the passersby.

The hour is at hand when as the superstitious waiting multitude believe an angel will step into the pool and stir the placid waters. Already the invalids are jealously watching one another. Each is calculating the effort that must be put forth for the plunge that shall bring the coveted healing. In some instances friends and servants stand ready to aid the sufferer to grasp the opportunity. Not one is aware that a greater than the angel has come upon the scene. How slow we all are to turn to the all-powerful One who is ever ready to respond to the call of suffering! Very silently and unpretentiously Jesus comes from the temple to the pool. No trumpeting herald precedes Him to proclaim His miraculous power. How His tender compassionate heart yearns as He comes into view of all this suffering. He alone can sympathize with them, for though they know it not, He is carrying their sorrows and bearing their griefs.

Friendless and Helpless. Jesus singles out the most wretched of all the wretched group. For thirty-eight years the man has been a hopeless sufferer. The gay, roystering companions of youth have long since deserted him. In all the miserable, suffering multitude there is none so poor and wretched as to be his friend. For one knows not how long he has crawled his weary way to the magic spring; he has lain there, gazing drearily into the waters and watching the strife to be first down the steps to the bubbling water, until mind as well as body is now halting and benumbed. True he has made attempts to secure the coveted priority, but always ineffectually, for without the strong support of another, his inert, palsied dragging feet leave him far behind in the race. Jesus spies him out. He knows that the man's suffering and sickness have been caused by sin in early life; for one may not live a sinful, impure life without incurring the physical penalty. Yet Jesus goes to this man and asks him, "Wilt thou be made whole?"

A Despondent Answer. The man replies, "Sir, I have no man when the water is troubled, to put me into the pool; but when I am coming, another steppeth down before me." He is willing to be healed but what is the use? It has become a regular thing for another to step down before him. As well despair of healing and settle down to a life without hope. Surely the poor brain has become hopelessly dulled. It almost seems as though he must be blind as well, or hope would have come in response to the tender compassion of that face so gentle, so strong, so full of conscious power. He is startled from his apathy by the stranger's tone of command, "Rise, take up thy bed and walk." There was power in that voice as well. What the magic spring has failed to do through all the long waiting years Jesus accomplishes in an instant. The man takes up his bed and walks away. Why remain at the pool when he is now every whit whole? Jesus would have him leave Bethesda, and away with the pallet which he no longer needs. The Great Physician always prescribed action for those healed.

The Letter Killeth. What does it mean? No angel has appeared to trouble the waters, and yet this man, for thirty-eight years known among them as a poor impotent, semi-paralytic, is now full of life and vigor, and is carrying his mattress on his back as with long firm steps he makes his way through the crowd. Never had he known such a holy Sabbath day. Ah, the hypocrisy of it! The rabbis do not desire the Messiah; they seek to destroy Him and His works. Even now they are conniving to lessen the impression which such a miracle must produce upon the people. Their glance falls upon the man. So strong is he that the bed which he carries at Jesus' command is no burden; he does not even feel its weight, but the rabbis make it the pretext for criticism of the cure. They waylay him and pry him with questions. Does he not know it is not lawful to carry a burden on the Sabbath? When he tells of the command that accompanied Jesus' cure, they purposely omit all reference to the miracle and ask, "What man is it that said unto thee, Take up thy bed and walk?" And strange to say the healed man had not been possessed of sufficient curiosity to discover the name of his Healer! How many receive His daily benefits and know not the Giver!

Meets His New Found Friend. Though the one healed has so little interest in Jesus, Jesus keeps him in view. Finding him in the temple, he congratulates the man on his restoration. Jesus knew human nature. Even the resultant life-long punishment does not break the power of sin over the body. Though the man knew what had caused all those years of suffering, the end of those thirty-eight years found poor human nature so prone to sin that Jesus sees that restored health will bring only fresh liability to fall. Just as He warns us to watch and pray, He warns the healed man, "Sin no more lest a worse thing come upon thee."

Confession. At the pool the poor unfortunate had been healed by Jesus; in the temple he was converted by Jesus' words. He who had been so indifferent to his benefactor as not to ask His name, now knows without asking that Jesus has made him whole, and he returns to the rabbis to testify of Him, and these self-righteous rabbis accuse Jesus of Sabbath breaking! For the first time Jesus publicly answers His accusers and declared Himself as the Son of God, who worked with the Father and to whom all judgment is committed. With majestic mien He turns to His accusers and declares that the Scriptures they claim to reverence, and Moses, whom they honor, "testify of Me." If they do not believe in Jesus they do not believe in the Scriptures or in Moses. Every word fell as a lash upon these proud, scornful rabbis, and more than ever did they seek to destroy Jesus.

Quiz. 1. Did the impotent man ask Jesus to cure him? 2. Did he manifest faith in Jesus' power to cure? 3. Was he grateful for the cure? 4. What did this manifest to Jesus? 5. What effect did the warning have?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The most credulous are often destitute of real faith. 2. True love always bestows its favors upon the most needy. 3. Many pray and go to God's house as the impotent man went to Bethesda, not expecting help. 4. Criticism of others is never a sign of righteousness of the individual. 5. If the benefits we receive from God do not result in conversion, they only enhance our danger.

JESUS AND THE SABBATH.

At that time Jesus went on the sabbath day

and his disciples were an hungred,
and began to

of corn, and to eat. But when the Pharisees saw it, they said unto him, Behold, thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do upon the day. But he said unto them,

Have ye not read what David did, when he was an hungred, and they that were with him; How he

of God,
and did which was not lawful for him to eat, neither for them which were with him, but only for the

But if ye had known what this meaneth, I will have mercy, and not sacrifice, ye would not have condemned the guiltless.

For the Son of man is Lord even of the sabbath day.

JESUS AND THE SABBATH.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 12:1-8. ALSO MARK 2:23-28, LUKE 6:1-11.

Prayer: Our Father, we thank Thee for the day of rest with it's hallowed memories and associations. Help us to find our delight in following the example of Him who went about doing good. Save us as a nation from the sin and dire results of Sabbath breaking. For Jesus sake, Amen.

"Millions within Thy courts have met,
Millions this day before Thee bowed;
Their faces Zionward were set,
Vows with their lips to Thee they vowed.
But Thou, soul-searching God! hast known
The hearts of all that bent the knee;
And hast accepted those above
Who in the spirit worshipped Thee."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, Galilee. Persons, Jesus, His disciples and some Pharisees; the man with a withered hand.

Scripture Setting: The Sabbath. Origin of Sabbath, Gen. 2:2. Provision for the Sabbath, Ex. 16:23. The Fourth Commandment, Ex. 20:8-11. A day of rest, Ex. 23:12. A perpetual covenant, Ex. 31:16. A day of sanctity, Deut. 5:12. A blessing upon those who keep the Sabbath, Isa. 56:2-7; 58:13, 14.

Life and Conduct Setting: The lesson sets forth, 1. Jesus' patience under criticism. 2. His dignity before His enemies. 3. The fanaticism and sophistry of the Pharisees. 4. Christian freedom as defined by Jesus. 5. His care for the physical needs of His disciples, and justification of them. 6. The Lord as Master of the Sabbath.

THE LORD OF THE SABBATH.

The Sabbath Day. Mankind has ever stood in such universal need of a day devoted to rest and worship that students of history find that all nations and peoples have their Sabbaths. In ancient Rome there were certain prescribed holy days when the business, pleasures and routine work of daily life were interdicted. The early missionaries found the people of the Hawaiian Islands held certain days so sacred that they would not light a fire or bathe on such occasions. In Borneo, the native savages were forbidden by their heathen religion to work or feast on certain days. The Jewish people were commanded to observe every seventh day as the Sabbath. When DeToqueville visited Mr. John C. Spencer, Canandaigua, N. Y., early in the nineteenth century, and saw the streets filled with well dressed, church going people, Sunday morning, the illustrious Frenchman was strangely moved and turning to his host, he said, "France must have your American Sabbath or she is ruined."

In the Cornfield. We have seen Jesus in city and village; in the wilderness and on the sea shore; in the temple and in the synagogue; in manger and palace, and we now see Him very near to nature. On this Sabbath morning their way leads Jesus and His disciples through a corn field. But the disciples were hungry; their life was poor and hard; they had to resort to any means of subsistence. So, as they pass through the corn field, they "make their way" by carefully pushing aside the long stems that bar their path, and to allay their hunger, they "pluck the ears" and then rub them in their hands to remove the chaff that they may eat the grain; a privilege accorded the hungry by the Mosaic law. "When thou comest into the standing corn of thy neighbor then thou mayest pluck the ears with thy hand." And it was no breach of the Sabbath, for such an act could not be called "daily labor."

The Sabbath of Man. But the day of rest and worship had been so overlaid with tradition that observance of the Sabbath according to the code subjected the people to petty and intolerable annoyance. To the wholesome and scientifically economical restriction of labor through the Fourth Commandment, the rabbis had added thirty-nine meaningless prohibitions. For instance, it was forbidden to tie a knot on the Sabbath; if a rope was broken by which a pail was lowered into a well, the pail might be fastened by a band, but the rope could not be replaced because that would necessitate tying a knot! The famous Sabbath day's journey "must not exceed two thousand ells or steps from one's abode, but through the subterfuge of looking at a tree near where he wished to go and declaring it his legal abode, a man might travel the entire distance to his destination without violating the Sabbath!

Such evasion reminds one of the little girl who was sent to the store to purchase a loaf of bread on Sunday. "Carry it under your cape," her mother urged, "so people will not see it." "But mamma," asked the puzzled child, "isn't it Sunday under my cape?"

Evil Minded Critics. Even in Galilee Jesus was closely watched by emissaries of the Jewish rulers bent upon gathering evidence that could be used against Him. These Pharisees followed Him into the country and now they attack Him through His disciples, construing the act of hungry men into Sabbath breaking. Making a path through the grain is forbidden labor; plucking a few handfuls of the grain is reaping, and separating the chaff is winnowing. In affected horror they cry out, "Behold Thy disciples do that which is not lawful to do on the Sabbath day."

A Noble Figure. It would have shown great forbearance if Jesus had answered such unjust accusation with dignified silence. But how patiently He reasons with those who would leave no stone unturned to compass His destruction. He endeavors to set them right by citing Scripture. He appeals to the law relating to the priests who were permitted to bake the shew bread and perform the ordinance of circumcision in the temple itself. He draws Himself up in the presence of His enemies and says, "In this place is One greater than the temple." Truly Jesus in the corn field is a noble figure! One can almost see the ripened ears of grain bowing low before the One who speaks with such Divine majesty that His startling declaration passes unchallenged by His enemies.

Mercy Not Sacrifice. Jesus would give them every opportunity of seeing their folly, wicked hypocrisy and inconsistency. Surely they have forgotten that God's only requirement is to do justly and love mercy, or they would not have condemned the guiltless. He says no word about abolition of the Sabbath, but would change a mechanical observance of the day into reasonable service. The Pharisees are not the only people who have made the sacred day a burden. The famous Blue laws of Connecticut would not permit a child to run in the garden on Sunday and no one might walk out on that day except to church.

The Lord of the Sabbath. Heretofore the Sabbath has been a strictly Jewish holy day; now Jesus broadens its scope and makes it a day of rest and worship for all the world. It becomes the people's Sabbath. Mark tells us Jesus' words were, "The Sabbath was made for man and not man for the Sabbath; therefore the Son of Man is Lord also of the Sabbath." Thus the Sabbath of the Jews became our Lord's day, changed the seventh to the first day of the week by His followers in commemoration of His resurrection day, and thus we honor the One whose love, by making the Sabbath no longer a burden, preserved for each worker in this busy world a measure of rest and time for worship.

In New Hampshire were two neighborhoods. The one of six families wholly disregarded the Sabbath;

in the neighborhood of five families the day was kept inviolate. Investigation forty years later showed that in the non-Sabbath observing community five homes had been broken up by the separation of husband and wife, and the sixth through the father's incarceration in prison as a thief. Eight or nine parents died drunkards, one committed suicide; all came to penury. Of the forty or fifty descendants, twenty were drunkards, gamblers or dissolute; four in states prison, one killed in a melee and one in the almshouse. Only one was a Christian. In the other neighborhood eight or ten children were Christians, one a minister and another a missionary to China. There were no criminals, and no poverty, while the homesteads remained in the family of the third generation.

A Man Better Than a Sheep. A week later Jesus manifests His authority over the Sabbath by healing a man with a withered hand in the synagogue in Capernaum. The man-made Sabbath laws would not permit a sufferer from a toothache to rinse his mouth for its relief on the Sabbath; or one suffering with pain to use a liniment or ointment, nor could a sprain be washed on the Sabbath day, for all these were labor. Knowing all this, the ever present Pharisees point to the man's crippled hand, and ask, "Is it lawful to heal on the Sabbath?" Jesus aims a direct question in reply. "If you had just one sheep and it fell into a pit on the Sabbath day, is there a man here who would not lift it out? For according to the same Sabbath code, if an animal fell into a pit it was unlawful to lift it out on the Sabbath day. When Jesus asks: is not a man better than a sheep? He drives the nail home. The Pharisees are unable to answer; the hand is restored and they hold a council how to destroy Him.

Quiz. 1. What law justified the disciples in plucking and eating the grain? 2. What is shew bread? 3. Under what circumstances did David eat the shew bread? 4. From what prophets did Jesus quote? 5. What authority did Jesus claim over the Sabbath? 6. What miracle of healing did He perform the following Sabbath?

Seed Thoughts. 1. "In the Sabbath, God has given us 52 springs in every year." 2. One of the secrets of long life is always to hold the Sabbath for rest of body and soul. 3. The Constitution which protects the President in his weekly day of rest, should afford a like protection to the humblest citizen. 4. Beer is the great Sabbath breaker. 5. Man is the highest unit of value. 6. Jesus, the source of all law, is greater than any law.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

And seeing the

he went up into a

and when he was set, his came unto him:

And he opened
his mouth
and

saying:

BLESSED are the poor in spirit: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.
BLESSED are they that mourn: for they shall be comforted.
BLESSED are the meek: for they shall inherit the earth.
BLESSED are they which do hunger and thirst after righteousness: for they shall be filled.
BLESSED are the merciful: for they shall obtain mercy.

BLESSED are the pure in heart:
for they shall see God.
BLESSED are the peacemakers: for they shall be called the children of God.
BLESSED are they which are persecuted for righteousness' sake: for their's is the kingdom of heaven.
BLESSED are ye, when men shall revile you, and persecute you, and shall say all manner of evil against you falsely, for my sake.

and be exceeding glad:
for great is your reward in heaven: for so they the prophets which were before you.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 5:1-12. ALSO LUKE 6:20-22.

Prayer: Lord, we thank Thee for the blessedness of Thy teaching; for the principles of Thy Kingdom as taught by Thee. Help us to be and to do that we may inherit Thy blessing, that we may gain an entrance into Thy Kingdom and help to bring peace on the earth and good will among men. For Thy name's sake, Amen.

"If only we strive to be pure and true,
To each of us all there will come an hour
When the tree of life will burst into flower
And rain at our feet a glorious dower
Of something grander than ever we knew."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, probably Mount Karn Hattin, near Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, His disciples and the multitude.

Scripture Setting: The Blessed. Blessed are the undefiled, Ps. 119:1. The godly blessed, Ps. 1. Trust in God is blessed, Jer. 17:7. Blessed who die in the Lord, Rev. 14:13.

Life and Conduct Setting: Through the Beatitudes Jesus taught, 1. The virtue of humility, godly sorrow and meekness. 2. Of desire for righteousness. 3. The beauty of mercy, purity and peace. 4. The great reward of those who endure persecution and evil for Jesus' sake.

CITIZENS OF THE KINGDOM.

The Greatest Sermon. A visit to a pastor's study will show rows of bookshelves filled with sermons, deep and profound, eloquent and witty, logical and persuasive, while we have but a meager summary of the greatest sermon ever delivered. Matthew's report is contained in less than twenty-five hundred words. Yet after nineteen hundred years those twenty-five hundred words are still as fresh, burning and inspiring as when they came from the lips of Jesus.

The Place. This marvelous sermon was preached in Galilee, probably on one of those mountain ranges near Capernaum. How frequently Jesus resorted to the mountains, to the sea and the plain. In the plains He found solitude; by the sea, peace; and in the mountains He found God. His great soul felt their uplift. On this occasion we are told "He went out into a mountain to pray, and continued all night in prayer to God." In the rosy dawn of early morning He called His disciples to Him and chose the twelve. A night of prayer is often a good preparation for the day's work. We are told that after a whole night spent in prayer, Jonathan Edwards preached with such power that five hundred persons cried out at once for salvation.

The Occasion. The people were beginning to find in Jesus a Friend, Physician and Saviour, so touched by their infirmities and so compassionate that they besought Him at all hours, and when He came down to a lower level of the mountain He found a great multitude of people from Judea, and Jerusalem, and even from Tyre and Sidon, who came to hear Him and to be healed of all their diseases. How close they drew about Him, for so great was His power that if they could just touch Him, they were made whole. Some people regard the personal appeals that come to them as a hindrance to their public work.

Jesus never considered an appeal for help an interruption to His work; the little things as well as the great were included in His mission. Though about to preach a sermon whose message should gladden untold ages and whose words would weigh through all eternity, Jesus did not turn a single unfortunate away that He might hurry to His pulpit. He took time to heal them all before He began to preach to them.

From Sinai to Karn Hattin. Once a great prophet had ascended a mountain to deliver the law to Israel, and on that occasion the mountain seemed riven and torn by flashes of lightning that played around the top and descended to its base. The roar of thunder deafened the people, and smoke and fire and the quaking of the great mountain filled them with fear and terror. But fifteen hundred years lie between; lightning and thunder, fire and earthquake, have no part at Karn Hattin. There is neither fear nor suffering in all the listening multitude. His virtue has healed them all, and now, having retired again to the mountain height for better vantage ground, Jesus sits and through the clear air of a bright morning come the Beatitudes, the Gospel counterpart of the Ten Commandments.

A New Revelation. What an audience that must have been; they could not doubt His power for they had seen it manifested. Now He is to tell them of the Kingdom which He has been proclaiming for more than a year, and which John the Baptist preached before Him. What is the Kingdom? Who will belong to it? What has it to offer? What are its requirements? These are the questions Jesus must answer and when He opens His mouth the first word He utters is "Blessed." Now they listen intently. Whom will He bless? The world blesses the strong and dominant, the sleek, self-satisfied rich and powerful. But Jesus says, "Blessed are the poor in spirit; for theirs is the Kingdom of Heaven." Later Jesus added force to this Beatitude through the picture of the two men praying. The one seeks a prominent place in the synagogue and with hands pompously outspread, in sonorous tones thanks God he is not as other men. The other—poor in spirit—stands afar off and humbly cries, "God be merciful to me a sinner."

The Mourners. "Blessed are they that mourn; for they shall be comforted." There were mourners in the world then as now, and in the great audience were men mourning their sins; mothers mourning the waywardness of a son; there were still some faithful ones in Israel mourning the evils into which their people had fallen, and behold, their Comforter is no less a One than the Son of God. Through all the ages since, Jesus has been saying to those who mourn, "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God, believe also in me."

Gentleness Crowned. "Blessed are the meek; for they shall inherit the earth." For the first time is gentleness crowned. How foolish to be proud of a high spirit and temper when the invitation is "Come and learn of Me, for I am meek and lowly." Intolerance and self-assertion have no part in the Kingdom of God.

The Blessedness of Desire. "Blessed are they that hunger and thirst after righteousness; for they shall be filled." The world is filled with men athirst for power, women hungering for pleasure. It is a world of rapacity, never satisfied, never contented; and how few cherish the one and only desire that may be appeased. No other desire does Jesus promise to satisfy. The prodigal had been hungry for freedom from his father's restraint, thirsting for adventure, but finding them all husks, hungering and thirsting for his father's forgiveness, he retraced his way homeward. And how his father feasted him. No one ever comes to God who is not filled.

The Merciful Man. "Blessed are the merciful; for they shall obtain mercy." A man crossing the plains one day met a dog with a wounded foot. Careful examination discovered a thorn, which was removed. The foot was washed with an antiseptic and with his own handkerchief the man bandaged it and sent the dog on its way. Afterwards the traveller was an Indian prisoner under death sentence, when the Chief's favorite dog ran to the stranger, fondling his hands with every demonstration of gratitude, and he who had shown himself merciful obtained mercy, and was freed from captivity and death.

The Pure in Heart. "Blessed are the pure in heart; for they shall see God." The heart has been called the lens of the soul, through which we may see the whole realm of spiritual beauty. If the lens is not clean, then we look out upon a sin-darkened world.

On the occasion of an eclipse a body of scientists had gathered in a noted observatory to view the phenomenon through the great telescope, but to their disappointment nothing could be seen; it was like looking into darkness. The eclipse, which was of short duration, had passed before they discovered that a fly had found its way across the lens and darkened their vision.

Peace Makers. "Blessed are the peace makers; for they shall be called the sons of God." In the day when Jesus' words are rightly understood, nation shall cease to go to war with nation; men will no more go to law with each other; labor will no longer exhaust itself in strikes; and capital will never again intrench itself behind wrong; for all shall be the sons of God.

A Song of Joy. The multitude may not have ascended the mountain with Jesus, but they have been led up its heights, and now He carries them to the mountain top of vision, for the last two Beatitudes are a song of joy. The cross looms high before Jesus; He sees the day when the disciples shall be persecuted for righteousness' sake; when they shall suffer for His name's sake. Some among them are ambitious. Let them "rejoice and be exceeding glad; for great is your reward." We sometimes think of persecution as a thing of the past, forgetful of those glorious martyrs and valiant heroes, the forty thousand Christian Chinese who met death during the Boxer uprising in China rather than to disavow their Christian faith by trampling under foot a piece of paper bearing the name of Jesus in Chinese characters. They have gone to their exceeding great reward.

The Last Beatitude. Though there were ten Commandments, Jesus gave only nine Beatitudes. The tenth was enunciated after His work was finished and He had ascended to Heaven to sit at God's right hand and share His dominion and power: "Blessed are they that do His commandments, that they may have right to the tree of life, and may enter in through the gates of the city."

Quiz. 1. Upon what mount did Moses receive the Commandments? 2. What relation do the Beatitudes bear to the Ten Commandments? 3. What is the difference between the two? 4. What do the Commandments inculcate? 5. What do the Beatitudes exalt? 6. Which is the higher?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Virtue is more exalted than the law. 2. The world blesses what God condemns and despises what God blesses. 3. The earth will never be won by force, but will surrender to gentleness. 4. Suffering endures for a season, while joy is eternal. 5. Character is the cornerstone of Christian citizenship.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

Ye have heard that it hath been said, Thou shalt thy

and thine

But I say
unto you,

your

bless them that curse you,

to them that hate you, and for them which despitefully use you, and persecute you.

LOVE YOUR ENEMIES.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 5:42-48. READ ALSO LUKE 6:27-37.

Prayer: Dear Lord, fill our hearts with Thy love, so that we may love those who hate us and have that Spirit of the Master that will enable us to requite good for evil. For Jesus' sake, Amen.

"How they mock Him in death,
To the last laboring breath;
But tho' lonely and faint,
Still no word of complaint Fell from Him."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, Karna Hattin, near Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, His disciples, and the multitude.

Scripture Setting: Treatment of Enemies. Consideration for enemy, Job 31:28, 29. Must not rejoice over enemy, Prov. 24:17. Kindness to enemy, Prov. 25:21-22, Rom. 12:20. Care for enemies' property, Ex. 23:4, 5. Examples of forgiveness of enemy, David and Saul, 1 Sam. 24:17. Joseph and his brethren, Gen. 50:17-21.

Life and Conduct Setting: Jesus reverses the rabbinic code and commands, 1. Love to enemies. 2. The requital of curses with blessing. 3. Recompense of good for evil. 4. Prayer for injury. 5. He cites the example of God. 6. Demands a higher code for His followers than that of the publicans. 7. Urges attainment of perfection.

A NEW CODE.

The Reign of Hatred. Jewish life in Jesus' day did not reach up to the blue dome of the heavens. The Jew knew nothing of its immensity, its tenderness and depth; rather he seemed to live under a metallic sky, unyielding and unbending; soft, vernal zephyrs never opened up the springs of his heart, but scorching gusts of hate caused it to shrivel as wheat under the hot winds of the simoon. It was a life of fiercest hate, deadliest revenge and darkest curses. An eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth was the law. Shylock was not more vindictive than the Jew of that day. Israel had borne much and suffered humiliation and indignity, and its people bided their time till their promised King should appear and avenge every wrong.

Thine Enemy. The Pharisees had so perverted the ancient law of Moses as to teach that it sanctioned revenge and commanded hatred of one's enemies. And under the term "enemies" were included not only one's personal rivals and adversaries, but all Gentiles; for the Jew regarded every one outside of his own faith as an enemy. True, the Scripture commanded that if one should meet any stray animal belonging to his enemy, he should go out of his way to return it to the owner, and that relief should be given an enemy's beast, if one should find it in peril or suffering; but the rabbis decided that the command was only binding when its owner was a Jew. As late as the Middle Ages, rabbinical law forbade a Jew to rescue a Gentile from drowning, even though he might sink before the Jew's eyes.

Love Versus Hate. How startling, therefore, the new code enunciated by Jesus. "It hath been said, Thou shalt love thy neighbor and hate thine enemy. But I say unto you, Love your enemies, bless them that curse you, do good to them that hate you and pray for them that despitefully use you and persecute you." It must have seemed to His hearers as though the earth were slipping from under them. Were the old guides to be laid aside? Were they not to seek vengeance for the indignities they had suffered from those "dogs" of heathens? Were they not to be revenged for all those centuries of captivity and humiliation? Why, they had longed for the Messiah, more for the vengeance which His coming should heap upon their enemies, than because He should usher in a reign of righteousness. Truly He spake as never man spake before. "Before I was Christian," said an old Indian, "I scalp my enemy. Now I feed him."

The Kingdom of Love. The new Kingdom is to be a Kingdom of love. It shall be centered in love and every road and avenue its citizens may travel shall lead to love, whence all its laws shall issue. Love shall be written in its constitution so large that one must love even one's enemies. Love is to meet and conquer hate; blessing is to follow cursing, good to requite evil, and prayer to reward mal-treatment. It is so far beyond any previous teaching that we do not wonder that they cry, "Lord, teach us to pray," for only through prayer can such a miracle be wrought. Jesus found the human heart frozen and cold, but the law of love He proclaimed from the Mount has been as the melting, penetrating rays of the sun upon the frozen iceberg, and when all hearts shall have come under its genial influence, indifference and hatred, strife and spite, malice and revenge will be swept into the great gulf stream of divine love, to disappear forever. Impelled by Jesus' words, Mrs. Ann H. Judson, wife of the noted missionary, Adoniram Judson, nursed through the smallpox the four children of the heathen jailor of the prison in which her husband was cruelly detained and wretchedly maltreated, contracting the dread disease herself and suffering months of serious illness.

God So Loved Us. "Like father, like son," is a pertinent saying, and Jesus reminds these Israelites who are so proud of being children of the true God, that relationship must be proven by resemblance. There is not a corner of the earth so remote that the rays of the sun may not penetrate it; there are none so evil as to be barred from God's sunshine. What would become of us if the rain fell only on the just, or if God reserved the pure, fresh air for those who deserved its life-giving power? So great is God's love that He has provided sunlight, water and air for all, and does not withhold His provision from those who revile Him.

"For the love of God is broader Than the measure of man's mind;
And the heart of the Eternal
Is most wonderfully kind."

Not a Dream. Doubtless disciples and hearers thought the words a beautiful rhapsody. "An iridescent dream" is what the world called the Sermon on the Mount for more than eighteen centuries. But Jesus' precept was soon to be proven by His example. The day was not far distant when some of His hearers should hear Him pray for His Roman executioners, "Father, forgive them; they know not what they do." They may even see Him restore the ear which Peter's sword-thrust has severed from one of the soldiers; and Peter, who is beside Him, eagerly listening to His words, is to experience the tenderness of His forgiveness after the denial. John, the disciple, who because of his rash temper and hot-headedness has been nicknamed the son of thunder, will remember Jesus' words to the day of his death, and when a feeble, helpless old man, carried to speak to the newly formed church, he will repeat its message in the quavering tones of old age, "He that loveth not, knoweth not God, for God is love." And nearly nineteen centuries later, the world will be recalled to it by Tolstoi, the inspired Russian, until it shall come to mean universal peace and the brotherhood of man.

The Comparison. The questioning of Jesus was like a great searchlight, laying bare every sophistry and revealing the mind and soul. He turns to the anxious throng, many of whom are saying within themselves, "He asks too much. Is it not enough to love one's neighbor?" Slowly the words fall, "If you love them which love you, what reward have you?" Why, even the despised publicans do the same. And if you salute your brethren only, what do ye more than others? You despise and look down upon the publicans, you claim superiority over them, and yet you are contented to be no better than they. Thus Jesus makes it plain that He holds all His followers to a higher code than that of the world. It is not enough to be as good as anybody. The Christian must be better than every one else, and he must manifest his superiority by a greater love, a larger forbearance, a finer patience, and a Diviner forgiveness.

As the Father. Joseph forgave those who cast him into a pit and sold him as a slave to passing Egyptian traders. But these enemies were his brothers. Saul's unwarranted jealousy and murderous enmity drove David out as a wanderer, and it is an instance of the nobility of his nature that twice when he came upon Saul asleep, he refused to take the life of his sleeping enemy, even when urged by his followers that "God hath delivered thine enemy into thine hand," and when Saul's death would have insured the kingdom to him. But it was the "Lord's anointed" that David spared, not his enemy. Jesus would inspire a greater love even than that of Joseph or David; He pleads for a love for our fellow men as perfect as that of our Father in Heaven.

Quiz. 1. Who is Jesus addressing? 2. What was the old law concerning one's enemies? 3. What did Jesus teach? 4. Name instances in which Jesus proved this teaching by His example. 5. Whose example does He cite? 6. Whom are we to follow?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The Christ life has no room for hatred. 2. Hate is a poison plant, revenge its poison fruit. 3. Love overcomes all things. 4. God's mercy is inexhaustible. 5. Christian character is the perfection of love. 6. Many an enemy is transformed into a friend through the alchemy of love.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

HOW TO PRAY.

And when thou prayest, thou shalt not be as the hypocrites are: for they love to pray

in the synagogues and in the corners
of the

that they may be seen of

Verily I say
unto you,
They have their reward.
But thou, when thou prayest,

thy closet, and when thou hast to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly.

But when ye pray,
use not vain repetitions, as the

do: for they think that they shall be heard for their much speaking Be not ye therefore like unto them: for your Father knoweth
what things ye have need of, before ye ask him.

HOW TO PRAY.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 6:5-15. ALSO LUKE 11:1-13.

Prayer: Lord, we thank Thee that we can come to Thee as children to a Father, with all our cares and desires. Give us faith that will enable us to believe that whatsoever we ask in Jesus' name Thou wilt grant it: that He who spared not His own Son will with Him also freely give us all things. For His sake who taught us to pray. Amen.

"Cuthbert, let us perish—hope is o'er.
The furious tempest shuts the water path.
He lifted up his reverent eyes and spake—
'I thank Thee, Lord, the way is open there.
No storm above our heads shall break
And shut the Heavenward path of love and prayer.'"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, mountain near Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, His disciples and the multitude.

Scripture Setting: Prayers answered. Abraham's prayer for Lot, Gen. 18:23-32. Isaac given a wife in answer to prayer, Gen. 24:42-48. Jacob blessed through prayer, Gen. 32:26-28. Gideon's prayer answered by miracle, Judges 6:36-40. Heze-kiah's life prolonged, 2 Kings 20:1-6. Paul's prayer answered, Acts 9:12. Dorcas restored to life, Acts 9:40.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Jesus warns against ostentatious prayer. 2. Enjoins secret prayer. 3. Reproves mere formal prayer. 4. Gives His disciples a model or type of prayer, by which all may be guided.

A MODEL PRAYER.

Prayerless Prayer. Prayer without the spirit of prayer existed long before the advent of wireless telegraphy and the horseless carriage, and unlike these other innovations, the prayerless prayer was not an improvement on the old order. Such prayers were characteristic of the age of religious form in which Jesus lived, when too many sought notice by ostentatiously praying in the synagogues and even in the public streets. Whenever the Jew might chance to be when the hour of prayer arrived, he was expected to stand still and pray, with covered head, face toward the temple and eyes fixed on the ground. And there were many who would scheme to be caught on public streets at the hour of prayer, so they would have an excuse for praying in public. Some even went so far as to make a special show of devotion by saying so many prayers at one spot, walking a few steps and then saying several more. Jesus was ever the foe to all sham; He would not condemn prayer, but He did condemn such make-believe devotion as that indulged in by those who loved to "pray standing in the synagogues and in the street corners, that they might be seen of men."

The Reward of Secret Prayer. In contrast with such ostentation, Jesus would have His disciples practice secret prayer. What a beautiful picture is suggested by the advice, "Enter into thy closet, and when thou hast shut the door, pray to thy Father which is in secret; and thy Father which seeth in secret shall reward thee openly." Every Christian needs some closet of retirement, whence the door of mind and heart may be closed on every intruding and distracting thought, while he indulges in secret confidential talk with the Father.

Washington found a tree at Valley Forge where in the gloomiest days of the Revolution he "shut the door against all else and prayed for the success of the Colonists." All night through Lincoln knelt in the President's office of the White House, the door shut against all business, until God gave him the prescience of an answer to his prayer for the salvation of our republic, and the United States of today is the open reward for their secret prayer.

Nothing but Words. The Jew had eighteen prayers to recite daily, on fast days twenty-four, and to these were added many prayers for special occasions, as when a negro, dwarf, or cripple came into view, or a fine tree or beautiful face was seen. Most of these prayers were long and tedious, and there were so many that it was not always possible to repeat them all, so that the rabbis framed a summary which might be used, and thus prayer became a mere formula. They thought they would be heard for their much speaking. Jesus cautions his followers not to use vain repetition. When the heart is most moved, words are very feeble weapons.

The night before Luther was to appear before the Diet of Worms he was known to be in prayer. Two of his students who occupied the adjoining room, feeling they would be greatly edified, listened, but to their surprise they heard no eloquent plea; only sobs, groans and the exclamations, "God help," "Jesus strengthen me."

Our Father. Jesus struck a new note in religion, a chord that must have awakened a strange vibration in the hearts of His hearers. Of the many prayers recorded in the Old Testament, not one was made to the Father. Prayer was made to the Almighty, and Everlasting God, but never to the Father.

The laying of the Atlantic cable, which joins the old world and the new together, was accomplished only after a stupendous outlay of time and money; it required every known mechanical device and the aid of electricity, but so great is the power of Jesus that with those two words, Our Father, He bridged earth and Heaven and bound together all the peoples of the globe. What a blessed assurance is contained in the declaration, "Our Father which art in Heaven." The Father is not a creature of brain or an imaginary person. He exists in Heaven and He is our Father.

Hallowed Be Thy Name. His name is not to be used lightly, and we are to pray that its holiness shall be preserved. All good people are shocked at the profanity which greets them as they walk along the streets or ride in public conveyances; and yet every one of the forty-six states has a law against profanity in public places. Every city in the United States has special regulations against offensive language on the streets, and every policeman and officer of the peace has special instructions to arrest the guilty parties who violate the laws of state and city. Would it not help to answer our prayers if each one who prays daily, "Hallowed be thy name," should exhibit a spirit of good citizenship in aiding to enforce these laws against profanity?"

A Heaven on Earth. "Thy Kingdom come. Thy will be done on earth as it is in Heaven." The poet Milton truly declares that this earth may be a Heaven or hell, as we make it. God never delegated His authority and rulership over this world to another. Its sunlight, air, and water are His. Every tree and flower, its hills and valleys, its silver and gold, its flocks and herds, belong to Him, for He made them. Its people are His subjects; but the earth is in a state of rebellion. Every follower of His is one of God's soldiers, to pray and work for the restoration of His Kingdom, and to hasten the time when His will shall be done on earth, for then it will be Heaven on earth.

Our Daily Bread. Jesus came on earth that the poor might have the gospel preached to them. He was speaking to a people so poor that the problem of daily living intruded on their thoughts while they listened to His marvelous words. It was well to hear Jesus, but when the sermon was over and they wended their way down from the mountain, would it help them to get food for the family? A religion such as taught by the rabbis might be well enough for the rich, but it only laid added burdens on the already overladen poor. After all, the main question is how to live; how to get bread for the little ones. Jesus knows what things they have need of and how truly He manifests the Fatherhood of God in the petition "Give us this day our daily bread." As their children come to them, so they were to make their wants known to the Father, even to asking for daily bread. Let them do their part and the great Caretaker will solve the problem of living.

Forgive as We Forgive. The ploughshare must be driven deep down into the rocky soil of the human heart, if tradition, prejudice and natural inclination are to be overturned. Out into the brightness of the morning come the words, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." The model prayer reaches out to all the world, but it is also so exclusive that bitterness, anger, hatred, malice and revenge must be excluded from the heart of everyone whose lips frame the petition, for we are commanded to ask to be forgiven as we forgive others.

A missionary once attempted to teach a converted Indian the Lord's prayer. All went well until they came to this petition, which the Indian stolidly refused to repeat. "Me back two moons, me kill Lone Wolf and Blue Dog; then me have no enemies and me pray him." Despite the missionary's expostulations the Indian started away. It was only one moon when he came back, returning with a glowing face and two braves. "Jesus in heart, no kill. No more enemy. Now we all pray him."

A God of Deliverance. Jesus knew the power of temptation, and with a recollection of those awful forty days and nights of temptation in the wilderness, He teaches His disciples to pray "Bring us not into temptation, but deliver us from evil." We may ask so much of our Father, because He is able to perform all that we ask, since His is the Kingdom, the power, and the glory.

Quiz. 1. Against what does Jesus warn His followers? 2. Name three Bible characters who were known for their habit of prayer. 3. Name three men of history who attested their reliance on God through prayer. 4. What would Jesus teach His followers?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Many prayers are weighed down with ostentation. 2. The closet of prayer is the vestibule of Heaven. 3. The truest prayer is often wordless. 4. With the plural pronoun, Jesus eliminated all selfishness from true worship. 5. The model prayer begins with an avowal of assurance and ends with a declaration of allegiance. 6. God is ready to supply us with bread, but many of His followers are like children crying for cake.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

OUR FATHER'S CARE.

Consider the

of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they

And yet I say unto you, That even was not arrayed like one of these.

Wherefore, if God
so clothe the

of the

which to day is, and to morrow is cast

shall he not much more clothe you,
O ye of little faith?

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 6:24-34; ALSO LUKE 12:22-32.

Prayer: Lord, we thank Thee for Thy unfailing care; for the wise provision Thou dost make for all our needs, and for the knowledge that Thou carest for us with a Father's care. Help us to trust in Thee with all our heart and to commit our way to Thy keeping. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"The grasses are clothed
And the ravens are fed
From His store;
But you, who are loved,
And guarded, and led,
How much more
Will He clothe, feed you,
And give you His care."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, mountain near Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, His disciples and the multitude.

Scripture Setting: God's Providence for His Children. His provision for man, Gen. 1:29-30. Permanence of His care, Gen. 8:22. Gives the rain, Lev. 26:4. Wealth a gift of God, Deut. 8:17-18. Prosperity from God, Deut. 28:11. His care for those who fear Him, Ps. 34:8-10. His abundance, Philip. 4:19. His universal providence, Ps. 104; 136; 145; 147.

Life and Conduct Setting: Jesus teaches, 1. The sin of worry. 2. That small importance should be attached to the things of this life. 3. God's provision for all His creatures as shown in nature. 4. The Kingdom of Heaven transcends all earthly comforts and values.

THE LESSON OF THE LILIES.

The True Rest Cure. At the time of the translation of the King James version of the Bible, to "take thought" meant to be anxious or worried. Some one has said that if every unnecessary anxiety were subtracted from the sum total of care, all other worries would be left without a leg to stand upon. Who that has ever occupied platform or pulpit has not been impressed by the haggard, anxious, careworn lines so deeply stamped upon the faces of the audience? Jesus must have been confronted by many such visages, and His tender love would wipe from all faces every such evidence of care. Therefore He says, Be not anxious for your life; cease the strife and worry over what you shall eat and wear. The loving Father meant life to be something better than a perpetual strife for the mere necessities of living. The Jews were forbidden care by the rabbinic saying, "Every one who has a loaf in his basket, and says, What shall I eat tomorrow? is one of little faith." Such a rule would banish care only while there is bread in the basket. Jesus has known poverty, and He would banish anxious worry when there is no bread in the basket.

The Birds of the Air. Jesus knew the feathered creatures of the sky; He was poorer than they, for though "The birds of the air have nests, the Son of Man hath not where to lay His head." Often He must have watched their happy, care-free life; content with the day's food, and trusting the Heavenly Father for the morrow, they slept calmly on the bough at night and welcomed every dawning day with songs of praise. Perhaps some tiny feathered creature winging its way across the sky while He spoke, suggested the illustration. He points upward to the tiny speck against the blue and says, "Behold the fowls of the air; for they sow not, neither do they reap, nor gather into barns; yet your Heavenly Father feedeth them." If He makes such generous provision for them, why need you worry? Will He not provide for those whom He created in His own image?

The Height of Folly. Will all your worry add one cubit to your stature or multiply your means of enjoyment? The multimillionaire can only pile up his wealth. Though he may be able to corner the world's wheat market, he can eat no more bread than the poor man with his one loaf. His wardrobe may contain a hundred suits, but he has but one body, so must wear them one at a time. Indeed, it is said that the two unhappiest men of our times are the Czar of Russia, who is the most powerful, and Rockefeller, the wealthiest man in the world. The one has become the slave to fear; the other is doomed by ill health to fare upon which the poorest could hardly subsist.

The Sermon of the Lilies. Palestine was a land of flowers in Jesus' day. The beautiful scarlet and red flowers of the pomegranate glorified the orchard. The oleander with its pink and red blossoms fringed every wady from one end of the land to the other; but Jesus honors the beautiful lilies of the field with special mention. Why be troubled by the problem of what to wear? "Consider the lilies of the field, how they grow; they toil not, neither do they spin: And yet I say unto you, That even Solomon in all his glory was not arrayed like one of these." If in the great work of creation, the Creator tarried to fashion their cup-like form and lovingly paint the beautiful petals that are perhaps only to be trodden under foot, He may be trusted to provide raiment for those He has endowed with eternal life. Shall we not then

"Leave it to Him: the lilies all do,
And they grow.

They ask not your planting, they need not your care,

As they grow.
Dropped down in the valley, the field, anywhere,
There they grow;

They grow in their beauty, arrayed in pure white,
They grow clothed in glory by Heaven's own light."

The Great God. The Jews thought of God as their national deity, but not as the God of the world. They looked on Him as a jealous God whom it was hard to please and easy to displease; a God who demanded much of His people and gave little in return; a high and holy Judge, ever ready to punish but slow to reward. They should have drawn a different conception of the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, but they did not. To David, He was Shepherd and King, a Rock of salvation, shelter and help, but in all the Psalms of David we do not find the word Father applied to God. The idea had not dawned upon the prophets of the Old Testament. Yet this stern Jehovah was holier, purer and more tender than any of the gods conceived by the surrounding heathen.

The Heavenly Father. The darkened world needed a Father. Against the stern God who ruled over a few hundred square miles of territory, Jesus set the Father of all mankind. For three years Jesus labored to impress the fatherhood of God on the minds of His disciples. He drilled them as a music teacher drills his pupils running the whole gamut of the scales. Not only were they to pray to the Father; be perfect as the Father, but they are to rely upon the Father for all their needs, as little children look to their earthly father to supply their wants. To doubt His care and provision is to dishonor our Father in Heaven.

The story is told of a child of rich parents who became obsessed with the idea that it would not have enough to eat and wear unless it went out on the streets to gather what food it might find in the gutter. It would even drink from the horse trough and go from house to house begging rags for clothing. Those who saw the child's eager and perverse acquisitiveness charged the father with inhumanity, for they thought he had failed to provide for his child's needs. It discredited the parent in the eyes of the whole community until a commission of lunacy declared the child insane. Jesus would drive the feverish insanity for material wealth from the minds of His children and teach them that "We cannot drift beyond the Father's care."

The Chief Thing. The man who achieves success is he who has some chief object in view, to which everything else must bend. If he would become a merchant, he does not spend his time reading law, but the market reports, and his experience as a merchant will give him sufficient legal knowledge concerning contracts, invoice, bookkeeping and payments to carry out a successful business career. So Jesus declares that His followers must make religion the chief business of life. "Seek ye first the Kingdom of God and His righteousness; and all these things shall be added unto you."

The evangelist Dwight L. Moody so depended on his Heavenly Father's care that when his wife came to him in the early days of his work with the disquieting information that there was nothing in the house for the noonday meal, Mr. Moody simply said, "We must ask the Father." The morning wore on, the children would soon come home from school; a second time Mrs. Moody reminded her husband of the situation. "Why, mamma, has it not come yet? Well, we must tell God it is a hurry order." And while they knelt in prayer a wagon drove up well loaded with flour, sugar, potatoes, ham and needful provisions, and at the same instant a neighbor entered the rear door with a carefully packed basket containing a hot dinner for the family.

"I know not where His islands lift
Their fronded palms in air.
I only know I cannot drift Beyond His love and care."

—Whittier.

Quiz. 1. On what other occasions did Jesus use the birds for an illustration? 2. What did Jesus call God? 3. Give two Old Testament instances in which God provided for the material wants of those in need. 4. What should be the Christian's greatest aim? 5. Why is it wrong for a Christian to manifest more than the necessary care for a livelihood?

Seed Thoughts. 1. He who created our wants is able to supply them. 2. There is never a "corner" in God's supply. 3. Let us learn of the birds. 4. Each lily is a voiceless trumpet proclaiming our Father's care. 5. Life reaches beyond the meat shop and market place. 6. "God's care extends to the least of His creatures." 7. "No good thing will He withhold from them that walk uprightly."

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE GOLDEN RULE.

Or what man is there of you, whom if his will he a stone? Or if he will he

If ye then, being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your how much more shall your Father which is in give good things to them that ask him? Therefore all things whatsoever ye would that should do to you,

do ye even so to them: for this is the law and the prophets.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 7:7-12.

Prayer: Lord, we thank Thee that Thou art our Father. Thou hast given Thy Son for our redemption and Thy Holy Spirit for our comfort and guidance. Help us in love and gratitude to obey Thee, and to apply the Golden Rule in all our dealings with our fellow men. For Jesus' sake, Amen.

"If he hath hidden the outcast, or let in A ray of sunshine to the cell of sin,
If he hath lent
Strength to the weak and in the hour of need,
Over the suffering, mindless of his creed or home, hath bent,
He hath not lived in vain."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, mountain near Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, His disciples and the multitude.

Scripture Setting: Our Relation to Others. A great commandment, Mark 12:31-33. One body in Christ, Rom. 12:5. Love a fulfillment of the law, Rom. 13:8-10. Charity, a token of perfection, Col. 3:14. The end of the commandment, 1 Tim. 1:5.

Life and Conduct Setting: Very logically and plainly Jesus shows that 1. God answers prayer. 2. The superiority of our Heavenly Father's love over that of our earthly parents is adduced as a proof that God will answer the petitions of His children. 3. The earnest seeker after God will be rewarded. 4. To do unto others as we would have others do unto us, is the sum of all the teachings of the Scriptures.

THE GREAT COMPASS.

Old Truths Told Anew. In the Sermon on the Mount, Jesus set the choicest truths of the old dispensation to the spirit of the new. On the lovely hilltop He found a natural sanctuary, and here the former Carpenter of Nazareth, preaching to a group of fishermen, mechanics and peasants, gathers up the sum of all the truths of the Jewish dispensation, and gives them new life, vitality and spirituality. Many of them had passed into disuse, others were forgotten, and many had been distorted from their original meaning by rabbinic tradition. The truths spoken on the Mount were not wholly new; their clear notes had rung out before; prophets and psalmists had set them vibrating centuries ago; but not until, like bells, the Master Musician set them in chimes, to ring in the coming of the Kingdom of God, did men realize their sweetness and power. Jesus gave to the multitude the truths of their fathers, freed from tradition and formalism.

A Great Promise. To the world of doubt and disbelief, Jesus promised, "Ask and it shall be given you; seek and ye shall find; knock and it shall be opened unto you." It came as forcefully as though projected from a gatling gun, demolishing the disbelief of centuries. Enoch, Noah, Abraham, Isaac, Jacob, Moses, Samuel, Elijah, Isaiah and the long line of prophets had found Jehovah a prayer-hearing and prayer-answering God, but faith had so departed from Israel that men were taught to pray to a God as unhearing as the heathen gods of wood and stone. As if God could not hear, they would frequently for half an hour together vociferate a single sentence or just one word. Jesus taught that to ask was to receive. The earnest seeker would find God, and he who knocked would find the door of Heaven open to him. In Pilgrim's Progress, Bunyan has drawn a beautiful picture of Christian who knocks at the Wicket Gate of prayer, and finds it opened.

Bread or a Stone? Jesus sees incredulity written on the faces of His hearers as He speaks with such certainty of God's goodness, and He again turns upon them the searchlight of His marvelous logic. Is there a man among them would give his child a stone when he called for bread? Or if the boy asks a fish, will the father give him one of those poisonous, venomous serpents that lurk in the grass and herbage of a tropical country? Jesus always reached His hearers by a direct appeal to the heart. Every man there knew he would not do a thing so cruel.

A native of the West Indies was once travelling on a sturdy mule through one of his native jungles. His young son rode just in front of him astride another beast. With horror the father saw a deadly python lowering itself from the branch of one of the great trees and ready to spring upon the boy. Quicker than it takes to tell it, the father gave his son's animal a cruel cut, forcing the mule and its rider on, though it hurried his own forward just in time for the python's folds to entwine the father, who had saved his child at the cost of his own life. Such is a father's love.

Better Than an Earthly Parent. After such an appeal to the father heart, they can no longer doubt when Jesus puts the direct question, "If ye then being evil, know how to give good gifts unto your children, how much more shall your Father which is in Heaven give good things to them that ask Him?" With Jesus, God and the Father were the same. From the manger to the cross, the love of the Father was Jesus' refuge and trust, and He would have us look to God as the great, tender-hearted universal Father. He teaches us to trust and not fear. We need only to reason: What my father on earth would not do, lest it should imperil me, my Father in Heaven will not do: What good my father on earth would do, that and more will my Heavenly Father do for me.

A Negative Command. A heathen once came to a great Jewish rabbi and said, "Make me a proselyte, that I may learn the whole law standing on one foot." Shammai, the rabbi, struck the man with his staff for his impertinence and irreverence. But the questioner went on to the more considerate and merciful and greatest of all rabbis, Hillel, who answered his demand by saying, "Do nothing to thy neighbor you would not like done to thyself, for this is the whole law." And the answer and the spirit in which it was given converted the heathen into a follower of Hillel. Hillel, who was so superior to all the other rabbis of Jewish history, could only preach a negative virtue, to be applied in a very narrow circle. For we know that "neighbor" referred only to those of the Jewish faith, and Hillel's saying only meant that the Jew was to do nothing to another Jew that he would not have done to himself. Even heathen leaders, Socrates, Menander and Confucius taught their disciples that they were to do no wrong to their fellows.

A Greater Law. The Son of God has a broader mind, a wider vision than any earthly teacher! Jesus proclaims all men brethren, children of one Father in Heaven, and He would broaden the former conception of the law and the prophets through the command, "All things whatsoever ye would that men should do to you, do ye even so to them; for this is the law and the prophets." We have seen how narrow and small was the religious life when these words were first uttered. The immensity of love had never been penetrated. The very word was seldom heard. Liberty was unknown, men dwelt in slavery to tradition and form, and in actual slavery to masters who claimed ownership of the bodies of their fellow men. War was the rule and peace the exception in the chronological tables of that era. Life was of no worth; in all the world there was not a hospital for the sick or insane, not a home for the friendless or fallen. Little children, deserted by their parents, were cast into the river or left to die by the roadside. There was no condition so pitiful as that of the poor, and woe betide the unfortunate who fell among his enemies! The hand of every strong nation was against the weaker nation; the great world of humanitarianism and love, of brotherly kindness and Christian fellowship, was an uncharted and undiscovered country.

The Christian's Compass. Jesus came to open up a new world, greater far than that new world discovered by Columbus. Out from the darkness, desolation and wickedness of a world grown old in sin, Jesus sent His followers as voyagers in quest of the Kingdom of God; and the Golden Rule of conduct enunciated from the mountain that day in Galilee, and embracing in its circle the whole duty of man, was given as a compass to lead every explorer to the center and capital of the Kingdom, which is love. Its needle is the awakened Christian conscience, and the line of "ought" can be read at one glance by the veriest beginner. Are we in doubt what to do; how to treat a stranger, friend or enemy? We need only to make a short mental computation, "If I were in his place, what would I want him to do to me?" And we have found our bearings and are journeying in the direction of the Kingdom of God.

An Ever-Growing Kingdom. The One who said, "Lo, I am with you alway," has journeyed with His followers from that distant mount in Palestine, throughout all the intervening centuries and over all the world, carrying the beginning of the Kingdom into many lands. Slowly the Kingdom grows. The needle of the compass points the miser to deeds of charity; the man of hateful and vengeful spirit to the love that suffereth long and is kind; the selfish, it tells to sell all and give to the poor; the master of the sweatshop, to lighten the burden of those under him. The active, compelling "Do unto others" of the Golden Rule has built hospitals for the sick, homes for the homeless, refuges for the fallen. It has bettered the lot of the poor, improved the prisons for the erring, freed the slave, and strengthened the weak. Under its dominating power, the great Peace Tribunal of the Hague was conceived, arbitration has been ushered in and equality declared.

Quiz. 1. What is the Golden Rule? 2. Was it ever taught before? 3. What was the nearest approach to it? 4. What great difference between Jesus' teaching and the teaching of others on this subject? 5. What has the Golden Rule accomplished? 6. Are you making it the rule of your life?

Seed Thoughts. 1. "Only the Golden Rule of Christ can usher in the Golden Age of man." 2. The practice of the Golden Rule is the most practical statesmanship. 3. Before you misjudge or mistreat another put yourself in his place. 4. The moralist's greatest edict is "Don't." Jesus' command is "Do." 5. It is well to refrain from evil; to do good is better.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE TWO FOUNDATIONS.

And why call me, Lord, Lord, and do not the things which I say? Whosoever cometh to me, and heareth my sayings, and doeth them,

I will shew you
to whom he is like:
He is like a man which

and deep, and laid the on a

and when the arose, the vehemently upon that

and could not shake it: for it was founded upon a rock.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 6:46-49. ALSO MATT. 7:24-29.

Prayer: Lord, May we be not only hearers, but doers of Thy Word, and may we build our lives and characters upon nothing less than the rock of Thy Truth. Grant us that wisdom that maketh rich and addeth no sorrow, that we may be wise to know Thy plan for us and follow it in our building. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

“Behold the sure Foundation-stone
Which God in Zion lays,
To build our Heavenly hopes upon,
And His eternal praise.
The foolish builders, scribe and priest,
Reject it with disdain;
Yet on this Rock the Church shall rest,
And envy rage in vain.”

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, Mountain near Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, His disciples and the multitude.

Scripture Setting: About Foundations. An unsafe foundation, Job 4:19-21. Foundations of earth, Psa. 82:5. Foundations that perish, Psa. 102:25-28. An everlasting foundation, Prov. 10:25. A tried foundation, Isa. 28:16. Jesus the foundation, 1 Cor. 3:11. Laying a good foundation, 1 Tim. 6:19. A sure foundation, 2 Tim. 2:19.

Life and Conduct Setting: Through the illustration of the two foundations we are shown: 1. The distinction between hearers and doers of the word. 2. The wisdom of obedience to the truth. 3. The security of one who orders his life according to God's word. 4. The folly of enthusiasm without works. 5. The fatal result of disobedience. 6. The good foundation alone assures permanence of character.

THE TWO BUILDERS.

The Architect. Every building must have an architect who makes the plans and specifications, estimates the cost, chooses the material to be used and supervises the erection. Jesus is the great Architect of the Kingdom of God, and the plans were laid as long ago as the Garden of Eden, when man was driven from Paradise for his disobedience. Long had the Jews looked for the King who was to usher in this Kingdom and on this immortal morn in Galilee, the great Architect King not only pictured the beauty of the Kingdom but gave its plans in detail to the people who are to be its builders. The contrast between the blighted peaks of Sinai, its surrounding gaunt and barren wilderness and the fruitful sloping ledges of Karn Hattin is great, but far greater is the contrast between the plans and laws there enunciated, and the plans of the Kingdom as unfolded by Jesus.

The Plans of the Kingdom. It is to be blessed, its purifying power and beauty are to be felt in every phase of life. Benevolence and justice will take the place of almsgiving. Love will be greater than force, rising above injustice and overflowing even to enemies. In fact, love and goodness will be the current coin of the Kingdom in which evil and ill-will shall be repaid. Over all its territory shall be the brooding care of a Father nobler and kinder far than any earthly father—Our Father in Heaven. All its citizens are His children, and the relationship is attested by their attainment of His perfection of love. The countersign by which all its citizens are known is the Golden Rule. Its boundaries include every nation and every land and extend to Heaven itself, of whose territory and dominion it is a part.

Specifications of the Kingdom. Jesus has given the underlying laws and rules of the Kingdom. There are the following specifications. Family ties must be held inviolate and family life sacred. The truth must be spoken in the love of truth and not through fear of an oath. Not alone the sinful act but its evil source is condemned, therefore a hateful, murderous temper will no more be permitted than the murder which is only the outward token of such a temper. Avarice and sordid anxiety must be banished, and the only riches which have a legal tender value are riches of character. Man is forbidden to judge man and every one is to guard his own fault and not the failings of others. Sweetness of spirit, heart sincerity, earnestness of soul and abiding peace and joy are to take the place of long face and solemn fasting. Humanity plays such an important part in devotion that one must adjust all unkind feelings and differences with one's fellows before prayer is allowable.

The Builders. The Kingdom is to be built by the followers of Jesus; not only those who heard Him outline its plans on the Mount, but every man, woman and child in all the world, through all the endless ages, is to have a part in building the Kingdom of God. In the building of brick and stone edifices, carpenters and masons, tinnners, roofers, plumbers and men of a score of trades have a part, but the builders of the Kingdom are the peacemakers, the humble, the pure in heart, those who endure for righteousness' sake, the merciful, those with loving hearts, and open, generous hands. Each has his part in the great work.

The Foundation. One who views a great building sees only that which is above ground, and this is really the least important part of the structure. For more wonderful than the highest walls of the highest skyscraper or tower or steeple, is the foundation, for upon its strength and firmness the permanence of the building depends, and the foundation work must be done before a single stone is laid above ground. Who has not watched a group of workmen digging deep below the sub-soil to make an excavation for the building; perhaps one has been so fortunate as to see them sink great caissons, for no matter how great the depth or expense, no wise builder will rest his efforts until assured of a solid foundation. The land on which the Marshall Field building in Chicago is erected is so yielding and it required such work to get to a firm foundation, that the building is said to extend as far underground as its many stories above the earth.

The Wise Builder. Jesus knew the hearts and minds of those who heard Him just as He knows our hearts and minds today. He saw that man who came with murder in his heart and knows that his enemy is safe for hereafter he will do as Jesus says and forgive those who wrong him. He has watched the lines of care fall from the face of the mother who toiled up the mountain to hear Jesus, not knowing how to feed and clothe her little ones; hereafter she will gather them around her and ask the Heavenly Father for their daily bread. He sees them and says, Whosoever cometh to me and heareth my sayings and doeth them, is like a man that built a house and digged deep and laid the foundation on a rock, and when the floods arose, the stream beat vehemently upon that house and could not shake it; for it was founded on a rock. They recognized the picture, for Palestine is seamed with what seem to be dry river beds; they are the beds of the winter torrents and during that season they become the channels of roaring floods, soon forming a flowing river whose rushing waters sweep everything before them. Of course no sane person would think of building in such a place. It is not always safe even to build on top of the wady and never safe to build too near the edge, for at times the flood not only fills the channel but rises above it, sweeping away every object it encounters. Rather than to risk building even on the slope of the hill, the houses in Nazareth, Jesus' own town, are set in recesses cut in the yellow limestone.

The Foolish Builder. There are others who have listened attentively, held spell-bound by His eloquence. "A fine sermon," some say, "well worth hearing," and that is all it will ever mean to them. They have been thrilled by His description of the Kingdom, but it has awakened no longing to enter into that state of blessedness. His denunciation of hypocrisy, selfishness, greed and cant they have fitted to their neighbors, and Jesus' appeal for heart purity, singleness and sincerity of purpose has fallen upon deaf ears, while the Father whose loving care He has pictured, is but an idle fancy to them. They will hurry from the Mount to hear another popular rabbi, under whose eloquent spell the teaching of Jesus will be forgotten. Jesus made it plain that all hearers of His word who reject His teaching invite disaster. "He that heareth, and doeth not, is like a man that without a foundation built a house upon the earth; against which the stream did beat vehemently and immediately it fell; and the ruin of that house was great."

Speaking with Authority. Brief as the admonition, it is impossible to conceive of any warning that could so have aroused the fervid oriental imagination of His hearers as this eloquent picture of a tropical tempest; following the simple and straightforward preaching of the Kingdom, it startled His hearers like a thunder-burst from a clear sky. Majesty and power succeed gentleness as He declares obedience to Himself and to His words a requisite of salvation. Standing there on the mountain-side, He is every inch Prophet, Priest and King. The astonished auditors feel they are in the very presence of God. They no longer doubt His right to speak of the Father. Never rabbi spake with such authority. There dawns upon His listeners the awful conviction that even under the loving rule of the new dispensation, to the disobedient, unbelieving and rebellious, there is still a Sinai, whose thunders and lightnings are no less to be dreaded than those of old. Many a one who had builded his hope of salvation on the tradition of the rabbis; many a one whose conduct failed to square with his profession, tested the foundations of a lifetime and found them sand. Some even left the old foundations and builded anew upon the rock of His teaching.

Quiz. 1. To whom does the illustration which closes the Sermon on the Mount refer? 2. How does Matthew say that Jesus spoke on this occasion? 3. Who does Paul tell us is the only foundation? 4. What is meant by the floods? 5. Did Jesus merely refer to a literal flood of waters? 6. Are you a doer of the Word?

Seed Truths. 1. The world is divided into hearers and doers. 2. Action is the proof of allegiance. 3. Enough time is devoted to building air castles to usher in the Kingdom of God. 4. Character is the best talker. 5. Christ is the only true foundation for character building. 6. The crucial test of our life's building is in the tempest of affliction. 7. Every one is a builder. 8. The deeper our religion, the firmer the character built thereon.

THE CENTURION'S FAITH.

Lord, trouble not thyself: for I am not worthy that thou shouldest
enter under my

Wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee: but say in a word, and my shall be healed. For I also am a man set under authority, having under me

and I say unto one, Go, and

and to another,
Come, and

and to my servant,
Do this,
and he doeth it.

When Jesus heard these things, he marvelled at him,
and turned him about, and said unto the

that followed him,
I say unto you,
I have not found so great faith, no, not in Israel.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 7:1-10. ALSO MATT. 8:5-13.

Prayer: O Lord, Thou who art the Great Physician, increase our faith; give us a clearer conception of Thy authority and power so that we may approach Thee in true humility and faith. Heal us and make us strong in body, mind, and spirit. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

Faith lends to realizing light;
The clouds disperse, the shadows fly;
The invisible appears in sight,
And God is seen by mortal eye.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, the elders and centurion.

Scripture Setting: Blessing Received Through Faith. Salvation, John 3:16. Made children of light, John 12:36. Life through belief in Jesus as the Son of God, John 20:31. Belief in His name, Acts 10:43. Salvation through faith, Acts 16:31. Live by faith, Rom. 1:17. Shall raise the sick, James 5:15.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this lesson we have an example of: 1. The humility which characterizes real faith, and reliance upon God. 2. Of a merciful and considerate employer. 3. The unworthiness felt by those who have the truest conception of the power of our Saviour. 4. The value of humble application. 5. Faith which accepts the word of the Master without parley. 6. The exalted station of the faithful.

A GREAT-HEARTED SOLDIER.

Capernaum. There is no more beautiful story than the one before us. The Sermon on the Mount was ended—its glorious message and gracious words had started on a mission which was to cover the globe and span eternity; and Jesus returned to Capernaum, which became His home after the expulsion from Nazareth. It was a busy, important place, situated on the highway of trade and only a short distance from Tiberias, the wonderful, new city built by Herod Antipas, ten years before. It was the seat of customs as well as a fish mart of no mean importance.

The Captain of One Hundred. A garrison of Herod's soldiers, probably recruited from Samaria and Galilee, was quartered at Capernaum. The Roman army was divided into companies of one hundred men each, and the captain of such a company was called a centurion. The chief character in our story is one of these centurions. Though his name has not been preserved, we know that this Gentile captain was more than the usual brave, blunt, bluff soldier. Where most of Herod's soldiers had made themselves detested, he was so beloved that even the strict Jewish rabbis were his friends. Indeed he had built the synagogue whose ruins still remain; and the rich and elaborate carving of cornices, capitals, pillars and tablets which have recently been excavated and now after nineteen centuries have passed proclaim the liberality of the donor, show that it was no mean structure. He was a born commander and when necessity arose exercised his military authority in a truly imperial manner, but he was no despot, and like the great Duke of Wellington, like Washington, Garfield and other great-hearted military commanders, the welfare of his subordinates was his supreme care. Even the slave found him a kind master.

An Obscure Life. "And a certain centurion's servant was sick and ready to die." This brief sentence is all the knowledge we have of the nameless one who in his humble darkened chamber was battling with death. He was probably a confidential servant, living in the same house and on the most intimate terms with his master, whose regard he could not have won, had he not identified himself with all the master's interests and been faithful alike in the great and the little things. Though inferior in station, he commanded the superior regard and love of the one so above him in rank. He was one of the many in lowly position who by their real manhood and nobility of soul have proven that all service is honorable. And how his faithfulness is rewarded! Poor and obscure, without rank or fortune, his torture and suffering are shared by the one he has served so well, and soldiers of the army, dignified Jewish rabbis, powerful and wealthy friends of his master, and even the Great Physician are in league for his succor.

Appeal to Jesus. Though he had never met Jesus, it is quite probable the centurion was acquainted with the nobleman of Capernaum, whose son Jesus cured without even paying a visit to the sick bed, and it is possible that the healing of the demoniac and the man with the withered hand occurred in the very synagogue his munificence had built; doubtless he had heard of that famous clinic in front of Peter's house when the sick of Capernaum and Bethsaida were brought to Jesus and healed. There must have been some brave enough and loyal enough to testify of Jesus in palace and military garrison, for we are told the centurion "heard" of Jesus. The term "palsy" was applied to many forms of disease in those days, and the dying man was probably suffering from inflammatory rheumatism. A sudden relapse with increased paroxysms of pain decided the anxious centurion to send to Jesus.

The Embassy. It is the habit in the East and a sign of great respect to prefer a request through an embassy instead of in person. But the unusual thing on this occasion was that a deputation of "the elders of the Jews," the very foremost men of Capernaum, who were the governing body of the synagogue and the Jewish magistrates of the town, came as envoys of a heathen rulership, the military commander himself probably a Samaritan. They made the centurion's cause their own and when Jesus held back a little to test their sincerity, they besought Him earnestly, concluding their plea with an assurance of the centurion's worthiness, ending with the assertion "he loveth our nation and he hath built us a synagogue." Perhaps they thought Jesus would refuse a request in behalf of a foreigner or they feared the One who was known by His followers as a King would consider it beneath His dignity to exert His miraculous power for a servant. But the One who willingly took upon Himself the form of a servant, and worked as a carpenter at the bench, knew no caste distinctions nor accident of birth or rank. With Him

"A man's a man for a' that."

A Second Request. In their eagerness to serve their benefactor, the messengers omitted their commission. They forgot that proof had been shown in their own town of the power of Jesus to heal from a distance, and with less faith than that of the one for whom they interceded, started to fetch Jesus to the sick chamber. But when they came within range of the house and were seen by the centurion, he sent a second delegation, this time of personal friends, to meet Jesus and urge Him not to take any further trouble. Wonderful in its humility, faith and loyalty was the message which they delivered in the centurion's exact words: "Lord, trouble not thyself; for I am not worthy that thou shouldst come under my roof; wherefore neither thought I myself worthy to come unto thee; but say the word and my servant shall be healed. For I also am a man set under authority, having under me soldiers; and I say to this one, Go, and he goeth; and to another, Come, and he cometh; and to my servant, Do this, and he doeth it."

The Message Reveals the Man. Already we have seen him as a man of large sympathies and generous deeds, ruling a conquered and despised people with such consideration as to earn their love, and building them a temple at his own expense. Stern commander that he was, the bluff old soldier's tenderness of heart was manifested in his love and solicitude for his servant. But who would have dreamed of such humility, such absence of pride and assumption! Accustomed to imperious command, he addressed Jesus with the same or greater reverence than he would have used to august Caesar. An officer of a world-wide empire, he did not deem himself worthy to approach the humble Jesus. Others praised him, but the centurion saw only his own littleness and unworthiness. He was not worthy to even speak with Jesus, much less to have such a guest under his roof. Yet he was not a fawning courtier, but every inch a soldier, even borrowing his illustration from his military life. Crisp and sharp was his speech. His word was all powerful in the ranks under his command. He had but to say "Come" or "Go," and the soldier who heard the order dared not hesitate, even though the command led to his death. If he had such power, surely Jesus, who possessed superhuman power, needed but to speak the word, and the command would penetrate through space, even through the very walls and doors of the sick chamber, and death would be obedient to His order.

The Greatness of Humility. Upon the mountain top Jesus had declared "the poor in spirit" and "the merciful" were citizens of the Kingdom. This centurion might officially represent a foreign power, but he was no foreigner. He belonged to the Kingdom itself. And the marvel was that this living embodiment of the Beatitudes had not been found among the Pharisees with their long faces and sounding prayers, but outside of Israel. Matthew tells us that Jesus honored such humility and declared its greatness, by ranking the centurion "With Abraham, Isaac and Jacob in the Kingdom of Heaven." And when the friends returned to the house, they "found the servant whole that had been sick."

Quiz. 1. What previous miracles had Jesus worked in Capernaum? 2. Which of His disciples lived near Capernaum? 3. What two virtues mentioned in the Beatitudes were manifested in the centurion? 4. What three centurions are mentioned in the Gospels in connection with Jesus? 5. With what great Hebrew characters did Jesus class the centurion? 6. How did the centurion manifest his faith? His humility?

Seed Thoughts. 1. True greatness is shown in the treatment of an inferior. 2. With Jesus, there are neither race nor caste distinctions. 3. Every soldier of the Cross should be as obedient to his Captain as were the Roman soldiers to their centurion. 4. The true man lets another praise him rather than himself. 5. Faith is not confined to any quarter. 6. The qualities of greatness may be found in the small as well as the great.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE WIDOW OF NAIN.

And it came to pass the day after, that he went into a city called Nain; and many of his went with him, and much people. Now when he came nigh to the behold,

there
was a dead man

the only son of his mother, and she was a widow:
and much of the city was with her. And when the Lord saw her, he had compassion on her, and said unto her, Weep not. And he came and

and they that bare him stood still. And he said,
Young man, I say unto thee Arise. And he that was dead

and began to speak. And he delivered him to his mother.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 7:11-16.

Prayer: Lord, We thank Thee for Thy Son, for His sympathy, tenderness and love, and for His power over life and death. May we commit our lives into His hands, and may death lose its terror for us through Him. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"Henceforth in Christ are no more dead,
The grave hath no more prey.
In Christ we live, in Christ we sleep,
In Christ we wake and rise,
And the sad tears death makes us weep,
He wipes from all our eyes."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, Nain, in Galilee. Persons, Jesus, the widowed mother, her dead son and Jesus' disciples and the multitude.

Scripture Setting: The Dead Raised to Life. Elijah raises the widow's son, 1 Kings 17:20-24. Elisha restores child to life, 2 Kings 4:32-37. Christ raises Jairus' daughter, Mark 5:41-42. Lazarus restored to life, John 11:41-44. Tabitha restored to life by Peter, Acts 9:36-41.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this miracle we see: 1. A Divine Providence in the meeting of the two processions. 2. Jesus ever present in the time of greatest need. 3. His tenderness and sympathy for the afflicted and His readiness to help. 4. Jesus demonstrates His power over death.

AN ONLY SON RESTORED TO LIFE.

A Common Heritage. Jesus was passing through a beautiful country. At that season of the year cloudless skies were overhead. Each day brought new gladness and growing beauty, but over fair Galilee, as everywhere, fell the blight of sorrow, and Jesus, the Man of Sorrows, was peculiarly sensitive to the suffering everywhere present. Yesterday it was the sorrow of the centurion. Today the sorrow of a Jewish mother touches the heart so full of compassion and moves the Great Commander to exercise authority over death itself. For while the centurion's servant lay sick unto death in the grim garison, a similar scene was being enacted in a humble home in the pretty little village of Nain, where a widow watched by the bedside of her only child. We may be sure the mother's anxiety as she battled with death for the salvation of all that made life dear, far exceeded even the centurion's solicitude. And she must fight death's encroachment alone, for she had not heard of Jesus. No testimony had reached her of His authority over disease.

The Battle Lost. Around the humble home, neighbors clustered and watched while the village hakim exhausted his store of remedies, magical and real. Vainly the mother used all the known means of recovery; the battle was against her, and there came the day when her boy no longer knew her voice nor heeded her caresses; when the neighbors walked noiselessly and aimlessly about while the rabbis counselled submission. And then that dark, dark moment when the wings of the death angel fanned the boy's pallid face and froze it into immobility. And with the well-known blast of the horn by which death was always announced, was heard the anguished cry of a mother despoiled of her only treasure and the sole joy of her widowed and desolate life. She had prayed to God as only a mother can pray when the life of her only son is at stake, and the great Jehovah had not deigned to grant her supplication. But were her prayers in vain? Did not Jesus know of that empty home and heart as with His disciples He turned from His course into Nain? Though she knows it not, and in her bitterness of soul regards herself as forgotten, her cry to Jehovah has reached the ears of the Father in Heaven and He has sent His Only Son with the answer.

The Last Sad Offices. The humble home became the abode of mourning. According to Jewish custom, the mother has rent her upper garment and sits on the floor, moaning and lamenting her son. She must eat no meat, and the little she may partake must be eaten in the house of a neighbor or in another room from her dead. It reveals their mistaken idea of God, that according to the rabbis prayer was not allowed at meals eaten in such sorrow. Neighbors and friends busy themselves with preparations for the funeral. The hair and nails of the dead boy were cut, and, after bathing and anointing it, the body, which has been lifted from the bed to the ground, is wrapped in the best the poor mother can afford. On such an occasion the poorest of the Jews deemed it a duty to provide at least two flutes and one mourning woman, and we may be sure none of these tokens of affection were omitted by the mother. At last the mournful procession starts from the desolate home. As now, a few neighbors remain behind to put the house in order; but they were charged with a duty unknown at the present time. As the funeral cortege issues from the house, every chair and couch is reversed and laid low.

The Final Journey. The body is carried on a bier made of wicker-work and garlanded with myrtle. The upturned face is uncovered and the hands are folded on the breast; the key so conspicuously placed on the bier proclaims the dead as unmarried. Following a strictly Galilean custom founded on the belief that woman introduced death into the world, the bereft mother, unaccompanied by a single friend, totters feebly in front of the bier. But the mother and son were favorites in a village whose people have turned out almost en masse, as a tribute of respect for the one who was dead and the one bereft. In fact, there are so many friends and neighbors anxious for the honor, that frequent shifts of the pallbearers are made and every now and then the funeral procession halts while new bearers, all unshod, exchange places with the old. During these pauses there is loud lamentation; weird chants of mourning women, accompanied by flutes, the melancholy tinkle of cymbals and blare of trumpets. Behind the bier walk the relatives, friends and neighbors.

The Prince of Life Appears. Just as the funeral train approaches the rocky sides of the hill where are the hewn burial chambers of the village, Jesus draws near. It is a meeting of Life and Death. The man who can witness a mother's grief unmoved is unworthy of a mother. We have seen that Jesus was a model Son. Perhaps He is reminded of the hour, not far distant, when His mother's heart will be rent; moreover, has He not claimed all women who call upon Him as mother? We know His loving eye and Divine sympathy were quick to recognize her, even though she did not recognize Him. "Beholding her, He had compassion on her." His first word was one of courage to the weeping mourner—"Weep not." As amid blinding tears she looked into that face so full of compassion, she knew that another shared her sorrow.

Young Man Arise. Jesus then laid His hand upon the bier. The dignity of authority rested upon Him and they who bore the bier stood still. Elijah and Elisha through much intercessory prayer and great physical effort had each raised the dead and restored to a mother her son. They performed the wonderful miracle of the restoration of life through God's power. But here is no ceremony, not even a call upon the Father, simply the sovereign command. "Young man, I say unto you, arise." And O, the wonderful power of Jesus, "He that was dead sat up and began to speak."

The Mother Receives Her Answer. Even in our much vaunted twentieth century civilization, in only three states does the law follow the example of Jesus, who publicly recognized the mother's right to her child for "He delivered him to his mother." Happy mother, who knew her prayer for her boy was answered. Very wisely Luke refrained from attempting to paint that scene, where by the open grave, empty bier and discarded funeral bands, a mother received from the Giver of all life, her son. How tender must have been the tie ever after between that mother and son, and yet we wonder if it were closer than the bond which God has ordained between every son and his mother.

Not An Accident. The meeting of the two processions outside the gate of Nain was not an accident, but one of those special providences which we say "happen," but which are really a miraculous answer to prayer. It was not chance that sent our Lord out from Capernaum that morning, nor was it a coincidence that the funeral procession should be on its way at the same hour. Jesus knew of the mother's sorrow, and He came that way, that He might wipe away her tears. Though the meeting may have seemed accidental, it was a part of the great plan, or Providence of the One who has said, "Before you call upon me, I will answer." It was like Jesus to be close at hand in the hour of need, and to so plan His journey that He might turn sorrow and mourning into joy and gladness. How many sons dead in trespass and sin, have been given eternal life through the prayers of a sorrowing mother. The restoration of a dead man in the presence of such a multitude of witnesses produced a deep impression. It electrified the people, "And they glorified God saying, that a great prophet is risen up among us; and that God hath visited His people."

Jesus had shown His absolute control over the powers of life and death. Truly He might say, "I am He that liveth, and was dead, and behold, I am alive for evermore, Amen; and have the keys of hell and of death."

Quiz. 1. How many instances of the raising of the dead to life are recorded in the Bible? 2. In whose name was the miracle performed? 3. Why did Jesus come to Nain? 4. Is this the first time Jesus restored the dead to life? 5. What qualities of our Lord does this miracle illustrate?

Seed Truths. 1. The world avoids the sorrowful, but Jesus seeks them out. 2. Misery may be changed to joy in a moment through Jesus. 3. Every redeemed man is a son restored to his mother. 4. No boy can outlive a mother's prayers. 5. Life is victorious over death. 6. He who lives must die; he who dies passes into life. 7. No village is too small or mean for our greatest effort.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

JESUS AND JOHN THE BAPTIST.

When the men were come unto him, they said,

hath sent us
unto thee, saying, Art thou he that should come? or

we for another?
And in that same hour he cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits; and unto many that were

he gave sight.
Then Jesus
answering said unto them, Go your way, and tell John what things ye have seen and heard; how that the blind see, the walk,

the

are cleansed, the hear, the

to the

the gospel is preached.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 7:18-35. ALSO MATT. 11:2-19.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee for that knowledge of Thy love and power that dispels all doubt and fear. Help us to be faithful under every trying circumstance of life and to tell Thee all our care, knowing that Thou carest for us. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"Still though dead they speak,
And trumpet-tongued proclaim
To many a wakening land,
The one availing Name."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, Capernaum. Persons, Jesus and the disciples of John the Baptist.

Scripture Setting: Prisoners of the Lord. Joseph in prison, Gen. 39:20-23. Jeremiah in the dungeon, Jer. 38:6. Peter's deliverance from prison, Acts 12:6-11. Paul and Silas rejoice in prison, Acts 16:23-25.

Life and Conduct Setting: The visit of John's messengers sets forth: 1. The poisonous and numbing effect of doubt upon the most fearless of God's saints. 2. Jesus' consideration for honest doubt. 3. The miracles of Jesus are a proof of His Messiahship. 4. The exalted position of John the Baptist. 5. The greatness of even the least of the citizens of the Kingdom of Heaven.

A GREAT PRISONER IN A GREAT PRISON.

An Ancient Fortress. All that is left of the old paved road to Machaerus today is a rugged line of upturned square stones. The site of the ancient town of Machaerus which once sat proudly on the shoulder of the hill surrounded by a fortified wall, is now marked by a square mile of ruins. The road is so obstructed that one must climb to the ancient fortress built by Herod the Great, whose immense stone walls more than a mile in length were flanked by towers two hundred and fifty feet high. Though the great king built cisterns, storehouses and arsenals, equipping the latter with every known weapon of defense and attack, in order to withstand prolonged siege; he was unable to make provision against the siege of time and the carefully piled up stones of which the citadel was built is all that remains of one of the most magnificent palaces and greatest military fortresses of history.

The Dungeon. Clambering over the stones, one comes to the eastern keep or citadel, whose foundation walls are still standing a yard or two above the ground. The keep is small, being just one hundred yards in diameter. Very little remains; a well of great depth and a deep cemented cistern with vaulted roof is still intact; but what is of most interest—two dungeons, one very deep down and in such a state of preservation that the small holes are still visible in the masonry into which staples of wood and iron had once been fastened. And this was once the prison of John the Baptist! For ten months, he was immured in this keep.

Like An Eagle Caged. Imagine a child of the desert who had roamed the wilderness at will; a man still young, whose eloquence had attracted kings and the great ones of earth to his preaching, now deserted by all save a few followers and caged in this dismal fortress with no outlook except the black lava crags and deep yawning gorges that seemed to open upon a bottomless pit; and worse still on the other side is the luxurious palace of Herod and his wicked wife, the sinful woman whose murderous hatred he had incurred. Can we wonder that his confinement in this prison began to tell on his spirits? Was it for this that he prayed, had suffered and even denied himself all save the necessities of the wilderness? He had felt himself to be the Voice of God in denouncing Herod's wicked marriage; but if it were so, why had not God intervened in his behalf? Was that affront to the king who would otherwise have been his friend a mistake? Some one has said that every doubt is a poisonous adder. If so there were serpents in John's dungeon, for the sting of doubt was poisoning his faith not only in himself, but in the coming of the Kingdom, and the Messiah. Strong men have lost their minds in a dungeon before and since, and it only speaks of John's humanity, not to his discredit, that faith if not reason was unhinged.

Strange Tidings. He was not so closely guarded that his disciples could not have access to him. Though the multitude who had hung upon his words had forgotten him during the brief term of his imprisonment, there were still a few faithful followers whose visits relieved the awful gloom and monotony of his prison life. They alternated between Machaerus and Capernaum, bringing strange tidings of Jesus. John had kept every fast, Jesus never fasted; John had hurled threat and invective at his audience, Jesus told them they were the children of a Heavenly Father. Could it be that the Holy Dove and the Father's acknowledgment of the Son, referred to another? And yet—what of the miracles that attested a power greater than John's own, for he had never attempted a miracle? Do you wonder that John was perplexed?

Messengers Are Sent to Jesus. His disciples have just brought Him tidings of Jesus' restoration of the widow's son to life. Ah, it is hard to be confined in the Black Castle behind prison walls and to sit in stocks, when things of such momentous import are happening! A long time has elapsed since Jesus' baptism. He has not publicly declared His Messiahship. He has not organized church or army. Instead of marching with victorious banner toward universal authority, Jesus is spending precious time in Galilee and even in despised Samaria, teaching in the villages like a wandering schoolteacher. It did not accord with the Jewish ideas of the Messiah held by John the Baptist. But not one before had ever raised the dead, save Elijah and Elisha. Now John had never claimed to be the Elias who was to come before the Christ. Perhaps Jesus was that prophet and the Kingdom and its King were yet to come. He could not go to Jesus, but two of his disciples gladly agreed to carry John's message, "Art thou he that should come? or look we for another?"

The Answer. After all it was a blessed doubt that sent John to Jesus. How much better to put the question to a direct test, than to do as those who seek no light and sit in the darkness of doubt, until the eyes of faith are forever holden. John sent his doubts straight to Jesus to be settled. The messengers arrived in the "Same hour that He cured many of their infirmities and plagues, and of evil spirits; and unto many that were blind He gave sight." Seeing is believing. Ocular demonstration is the strongest of all proof. Jesus knew the nobility of John's nature, and that he only needed to be brought in touch with such deeds to recognize their Divine origin, so He sent the messengers back with the command, Go, tell John what you have seen and heard: "How that the blind see, the lame walk, the lepers are cleansed, the deaf hear, the dead are raised." Yes not only these miracles of healing, but "To the poor the gospel is preached." John will recognize the significance of this last assertion. It meant a return to the unworldly and Divine humanitarianism of the Mosaic law, "There shall be no poor among you." Indeed during those years when Israel obeyed God there were no beggars and to this day there is no Hebrew word for begging.

A Timely Caution. John had not been forgotten. Jesus knew all his longings, all his sufferings, his doubts and even the criticisms which the darkness of the dungeon had wrung from that loyal soul, and He honors him with a special warning beatitude. "Blessed is he, whosoever shall not be offended in me." We may be sure never again did John doubt that Jesus was the Christ, and though his method was so different from that of the Baptist, never again did John question feasting or preaching or the spontaneous joy of the life of the sinless One.

A Sincere Tribute. Though Jesus sent back no message of personal encouragement to John, He only waited the departure of the messengers whose open question had published John's doubts and fears, when He delivered the highest eulogy of John which has ever been uttered. John's doubting agony of soul was not the fickleness of one as wavering as the tall Jordan reeds; nor was the gloom of the prison the physical fear of a pampered court sycophant. He demanded of them who they went out to see, during those days they flocked to the Jordan to hear John's preaching, and when they answered, "A prophet," Jesus declared John to be more than a prophet. He was the herald to prepare the way for Me, the Messiah. "Among those that are born of women there is not a greater than John the Baptist." And yet so great is the Kingdom to come, that the least of its citizens will be greater than he.

Like Children at Play. How those who had accepted John's baptism and preaching rejoiced in this eulogy, but there were others who cavilled at Jesus' words. Jesus turned to a group of children who had gathered on the public square for play and were disputing as to whether they should play at "weddings" or "funerals"; which, by the way, are still the only two games which the children of the land play today. To the cry, "Let's play funerals," some responded, "No, we will not play that; it is too solemn." "Well, then, let us play wedding." But nothing suited the sulky ones and the game had broken up in a wrangle. Pointing to the group, Jesus likened His audience's difference of opinion to these children. They would not have the recluse John the Baptist and they refused to accept Jesus, the Friend of sinners.

Quiz. 1. Where was John the Baptist imprisoned? 2. Why did Jesus show consideration for his doubts? 3. How did He show His tenderness in reproof? 4. What evidence of His Messiahship did He give? 5. What great tribute did He pay to John?

Seed Thoughts. 1. It is easier to preach to a crowded house than to live out one's faith in a dungeon. 2. Things seen in the open appear darker behind prison walls. 3. The caged eagle cannot soar high. 4. God always answers the honest doubter. 5. We are never forsaken, though we may sometimes seem to be left alone. 6. The proof of Christianity is its beneficent effects on the world.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

and I will give you

Take

and for I am meek and lowly in heart: and ye shall find unto your souls.

For my yoke is easy, and my

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 11:20-30.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, Help us to use the privileges and opportunities Thou hast given us, for Thy glory and for the good of others. May we come to Thee with our burdens and our cares, knowing that in Thee we shall find rest. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"O to the weary, faint, oppressed,
How sweet the bidding, 'Come to me!'
When against sin I strive in vain,
And cannot from its yoke get free,
Sinking beneath the heavy chain,
The words arrest me, 'Come to me.'"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, Capernaum. Persons, Jesus and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: Warnings. Sodom and Gomorrah denounced, Gen. 18:20-21. Destruction of Tyre foretold, Ezek. 26:4-6. Destruction of Jerusalem, Luke 13:34. Invitations. Come, let us reason together, Isa. 1:18. To the thirsty, Isa. 55:1-3. To backsliders, Jer. 3:22. To hear His word, Ezek. 3:11. To the wedding, Matt. 22:4. To everyone, Rev. 22:17.

Life and Conduct Setting: The lesson shows:
1. That those peculiarly favored by God are held accountable for their opportunities. 2. Exalted privilege incurs great accountability. 3. Jesus offers rest and tranquility to all workers and burden bearers. 4. The example of our Lord is a lesson of meekness and lowliness of heart. 5. His service is easy and the burden imposed upon His followers is never irksome.

THE GREAT INVITATION.

A Small Field. Tender though He was, Jesus could also be stern! Chorazin, Bethsaida and Capernaum, three cities on the shore of Lake Gennesaret were twice denounced for their unbelief. These towns were only five miles apart, and though He spoke in Galilee and even Judea, His most earnest efforts were expended on these communities and the surrounding neighborhood. In so small a circle was Jesus content to spend His life and exert His marvelous powers! Yet there are many who chafe under narrow environment and make a circumscribed life an excuse for failure, imagining that big and great things can only be done out in the big world.

Matthew lived in Capernaum. Here also lived the nobleman whose son was healed by a word from Jesus spoken at Cana; here the centurion's dying servant had been restored to health by the Great Healer, without so much as seeing him. Here the demoniac had been healed, and at Bethsaida, Peter's wife's mother lived to tell of the Great Physician, at whose touch the fever had vanished. Before Peter's door the multitudes had been healed, while in neighboring Nain, one had been raised from the dead. He had taught in their streets, from mountain top and plain, along the seashore and in fishing boats a few yards from the shore: there was hardly a person in the three towns who had not either profited by or been a witness to His miracles. Why, if the mighty works that had been done in Capernaum alone, had been done in wicked Sodom, Abraham's plea would have been unnecessary, for its regeneration would have ensured its safety.

The Woe of Three Cities. "Woe unto thee, Chorazin! woe unto thee, Bethsaida! for if the mighty works which have been done in you, had been done in Tyre and Sidon, they would have repented long ago in sackcloth and ashes." Not to the multitude did Jesus make this denunciation, nor even to the disciples who were alone with Him. It was a soliloquy greater than Hamlet's and spoken in a voice of more unspeakable sadness than that of the Danish prince. In the solemnity of the moment, Capernaum, His home, rose before Him. "And thou, Capernaum, which art exalted into Heaven, shall be brought down to hell." He had lived among its townsmen and performed His greatest works hoping, longing and waiting for their acceptance. "I say unto you, that it shall be more tolerable for the land of Sodom in the day of judgment than for thee." The words are indeed awful, but He had tried to win them by love, He had offered them mercy; and what it must have cost Him to foretell the impending doom of His home city! There was not wrath but tears in His voice, as he anticipated the woe which their continuance in sin entailed upon the three cities.

The Woe Realized. The prophecy was fulfilled. The woes were realized; not speedily as in the case of Sodom but as truly. In Jesus' day the beautiful lake was dotted with whole fleets of boats, there were coasters, ferry boats and fishing boats, the population was very dense and every spot was under cultivation. "Walnut trees grew on the hills and palms waved on the shores. Figs and grapes were said to ripen for ten months in the year, and the olives were famous." Solitude now reigns on hills and shore, and Capernaum has so wholly disappeared that the world is in doubt as to which of two wretched masses of ruins and debris represent the once flourishing city. The site of Bethsaida is also in doubt and Chorazin has been lost altogether.

The Optimism of Jesus. The day has been marked by the doubts of John, the thoughtlessness and dissension of the multitudes and the stolid unbelief of His townsmen and neighbors. New discouragements come; Jesus lets go of all these troubles and talks to the Father. And how the gloom is lifted. "At that time Jesus answered and said, I thank Thee, O Father." Jesus was the greatest optimist the world has ever known. After such a chapter of discouragements and disappointments He could lift His voice in thanksgiving. What does He find to be thankful for? First for His Father, who is Lord of Heaven and earth; then for the Father's wisdom; that religion had not been given over to a few rabbis and teachers, but was for the masses of the people, the great, foolish, hungry multitude. No longer is His face clouded, no longer the sadness and sternness mingle in His tones. He sees the soul-hungry countenances of the poor, notes the broken-hearted ones, and those faint and weary, and with infinite pity and tenderness, in a voice which all the successive ages have not robbed of its music, He stretches out His arms, as though He would have gathered that great, unwashed, worn and weary multitude to Himself; He speaks the invitation which reaches out through the centuries and extends to every troubled and unhappy heart, "Come unto me all ye that labor and are heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Bearing the Yoke. Since steam and electricity have become common carriers one must go far to see oxen used as beasts of burden; but there are still some frontier points where oxen are used to draw heavy logs and loads of stone. In India their use is common still, and in Christ's day they were not only used to plough the fields, but oxen could be seen in every village. The yoke is the crudest of man's inventions, and strange to say it has never been improved upon, so that the yoke to which the ox bends his neck today is practically the same as that in use at the time of Christ. Looking beyond the burdened multitude Jesus sees a yoke of oxen patiently and lightly bearing their burdens by means of the yoke, and with His aptness for illustration, He invites His hearers to "Take my yoke upon you, and learn of me: For I am meek and lowly in heart: And ye shall find rest unto your souls. For my yoke is easy and my burden is light."

Yoked Together. To train a young ox to labor, he is yoked with an older beast that has long borne the yoke. Jesus asks to be yoked with every burden bearer that He may teach us to carry our burdens easily; for whatever the sorrow, trouble or responsibility, Jesus has carried it, and knowing its weight He can adjust it to human hearts. Not in boast did He proclaim, "For I am meek and lowly in heart." A frontiersman will tell you that it takes a peculiar type of man to deal with oxen, and not for anything will he trust his team with any young Jehu. Few men have the necessary patience. Indeed the more gentle the driver, the more readily and easily the oxen yield to his yoke. Jesus only declares His possession of the qualities which any owner would demand of the one who is to yoke his oxen. He alone knows to fashion the yoke to the strength of each burden bearer.

Illustration. There is a story of a community that rose in rebellion against the Lord because of the burdens imposed upon them. One day the Lord appeared to them and consented that each should tie his burden in a sack and bring it to a certain place. When all were piled up, then each one could go and take from the pile the one he could easiest carry. The people eagerly consented. All day they came; some brought disgrace, others poverty, affliction, illness, until sacks containing every known sorrow were in the dump. Then each went and, weighing the various burdens, chose the one that seemed lightest. And lo, when they returned and opened their sacks, each had carried home his former burden, and thus they learned that the yoke of the great Burden-bearer was easy and His burden light.

Quiz. 1. To what cities did Jesus compare Chozazin and Bethsaida? 2. To what does He compare Capernaum? 3. Is the comparison to the advantage of the Galilean cities? 4. What fate overtook Sodom? 5. Who prophesied against Sidon? 6. What was the fate of that city?

Seed Thoughts. 1. No city is great enough to withstand God's woe. 2. Cities and people pronounce their own woe. 3. The more exalted the opportunity, the greater the fall. 4. Earnest prayer always reveals some cause for thankfulness. 5. Jesus bows Himself under the yoke before He adjusts it to us. 6. Sorrow only yokes us with the Man of Sorrows.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

Thou gavest me no

but this

since the time I came in hath not ceased to My

with oil thou didst not but this woman hath with ointment.

Wherefore I say unto thee, Her sins, which are many, are forgiven; for she loved much: but to whom little is forgiven, the same loveth little. And he said unto her, Thy sins are forgiven. And they that began to say within themselves, Who is this that forgiveth sins also? And he said to the woman, Thy faith hath saved thee; go in peace.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 7:36-50.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, We thank Thee that Thou hast made it possible that though our sins be as scarlet they may be as white as snow. Help us to realize the exceeding sinfulness of sin, and the debt of love we owe to Him who shed His blood for our cleansing. For His Name's sake. Amen.

"O Jesus, at Thy feet we wait,
Till Thou shalt bid us rise,
Restored to our unsinning state,
To love's sweet paradise."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 28. Place, An unknown town in Galilee. Persons, Jesus, Simon a Pharisee and a woman of former evil reputation.

Scripture Setting: Forgiveness. A song of gratitude, Psa. 13:5-6. Praise and gratitude, Psa. 22:24-25. Forgiven iniquity, Psa. 32:5. The contrite heart, Isa. 57:15. Joy over penitent, Luke 15:7.

Life and Conduct Setting: The dinner at the home of Simon, the Pharisee. 1. Affords a comparison of the reception accorded Jesus by the proud and indifferent, with that of the sinner seeking forgiveness. 2. Shows that Jesus is willing to suffer a sinner's approach and accept the unaffected homage of the unworthy. 3. Asserts Jesus' right to forgive sins. 4. Peace follows forgiveness. 5. The parable of the Two Debtors shows that all are debtors to Jesus; the greater our sense of indebtedness, the greater our repentance for sin and love for the Saviour.

HOW SIMON LEARNED HIS LESSON.

An Invitation to Dinner. The invitation came from an unexpected quarter while Jesus was in a Galilean town; for the Pharisees were so rigidly exclusive that rarely were such courtesies extended to anyone outside their own narrow circle. It was a mark of great consideration, and when it seemed as though Jesus might not accept, the invitation was repeated; so deeply had Simon the Pharisee been impressed by Jesus' teaching and miracles. Indeed, Simon was among the constantly growing number upon whom the thought of Jesus' Messiahship was asserting itself; he invited Jesus to his house, hoping that the closer and freer intercourse might enable him to form a decision. But no sooner had Simon yielded to this impulse of hospitality than he began to repent of his action. What would his fellow Pharisees say and how should he account for such amazing conduct on his own part? The honor he had felt upon Jesus' acceptance gave place to fear of others' criticism, and he received his guest indifferently and somewhat patronizingly.

The Uninvited Guest. It is hard for us to understand the simplicity and freedom of the social life of the East. If we were sitting at the dinner table with a party of invited guests, we would be shocked to have any outsider enter the room; but in the East the door of the feast room is left open so that the uninvited, even comparative strangers, may pass in and out at their pleasure during the entertainment; seats by the wall are even provided for spectators and listeners, while raised divans or cushioned couches are arranged on three sides of a square around the table for the guests. Simon's guests were disposed comfortably on these—where they lay on their left arm, with their feet behind them outside. No sooner had the feast begun than the usual company of uninvited began to take their places along the wall. From the open courtyard, up the veranda steps, and through the open door, a woman glides silently into the banquet hall. No wonder there is a ripple of excitement. She is the only one of her sex, for no women were allowed at such entertainments. Moreover, she was known to everyone in the little community for her sinful career.

A Woman's Tears. St. John tells of a sinful woman who was brought to Jesus and whose accusers shrank out of sight, because under His just code, they were unfit to cast the first stone. Left alone with the sinless One, she was dismissed with "Go and sin no more." Was this the woman? We only know that somewhere, somehow, the woman which was a sinner had met Jesus and had been an object of His Divine compassion. Somewhere Jesus found her out on the forbidden paths of sin that lead to death, and His had been the detaining hand to arrest her course. Jesus had found her dead in sin, and now she has come to Him for a clean bill of health. Under the glare of the lamps and the scornful eyes, she seeks Him and kneels at His feet. Her pent-up feelings of mingled gratitude, penitence, love and longing for entire forgiveness give way and she bursts into a storm of weeping, and her tears rain hot and fast upon the feet of Jesus. Immediately she stoops down and with the loosened tresses of her hair she wipes his feet, kissing them continually.

The King Is Anointed. It is customary to anoint a king as a sign of his Divine ordination to the office of rulership. Though many already accepted Jesus as the Messiah—Israel's King, He had not yet been actually anointed, as had been every king from the line of David, before Him. This act of consecration was now to be performed—not in the temple by the high priest, while all the people cried “God save the king,” as Solomon had been crowned; but in the house of a Pharisee by a woman who was a sinner; for His mission was to extend from the highest ecclesiastic to the lowliest penitent. Taking the alabaster flask of ointment or perfume, which, according to the fashion of her day, she wore suspended from the neck by a chain, she quickly opens it and anoints Jesus’ feet with its costly contents, for the poor penitent felt herself unworthy to put her crown of fragrance upon the head of her King. And Jesus allows her to touch and even kiss His feet, though He knows her past, and though the others look upon her with scorn and loathing.

An Unspoken Question. The Pharisee was horrified and when he saw no sign of disapproval on Jesus’ face and heard no word of reproof from Him, Simon’s mind was clear, and this was his unspoken thought, “This man, if He were a prophet, would have known who and what manner of woman this is that toucheth Him; for she is a sinner.” He thought of God only as an enlarged Pharisee, scorning the guilty and defiled, and consorting with a chosen few in a Heaven far removed from the earth.

Question Answers Question. Jesus reads His host’s thoughts, and turning to him, gently says, “Simon, I have somewhat to say unto thee.” His host tells Him to proceed, and Jesus propounds a question: If a creditor generously forgives two debts, one of fifty pence, and the other of five hundred, which debtor loves his benefactor most? In so striking and so powerful a manner does He depict the relations of Pharisee and sinner to Himself that when Simon replies indifferently, “I suppose that he to whom he forgave most,” the self-righteous Pharisee becomes a witness against himself. Very gravely Jesus says, “Thou hast rightly judged,” and again He plies him with a question, “Seest thou this woman?”

Common Politeness. Eastern hospitality was and is now marked by various courtesies, and attentions to the guest. To enter a house except with bare feet, was as much a sign of disrespect as it would be for a male guest to fail to remove his hat on entering your home. All shoes and sandals were taken off and left at the threshold. In the home of one so well to do as Simon, a guest had his sandals removed by a slave who poured water over his feet, both for the refreshment and to remove the dust from them, for no one wore stockings; the slave even wiping them with a towel which he carried girt about him for the purpose. Failure to salute a guest with a kiss was a sign of the utmost indifference if not an insult. Indeed one may see Bedouin camel drivers kiss each other on the cheek five times in salutation. So general was the custom of anointing the head and beard of a guest with oil that David pictures God as “anointing his head with oil” when He had prepared a table before him. But Simon had omitted to show Jesus any of these common courtesies.

A Striking Comparison. Jesus contrasts Simon’s treatment with the woman’s to the Pharisee’s disadvantage. “I entered into thine house, thou gavest Me no water for My feet; but she hath washed my feet with tears and wiped them with the hairs of her head. Thou gavest Me no kiss; but she, since the time I came in hath not ceased to kiss My feet. My head with oil thou didst not anoint; but she hath anointed My feet with ointment. Wherefore I say unto thee, her sins, which are many, are forgiven, for she hath loved much; but to whom little is forgiven the same loveth little.” How tender is Jesus even in rebuke. He credits Simon with a little love, and gently leaves the inference that he has little love because little is forgiven. Thus Simon learned his lesson. He who considered a sinner’s touch defilement saw the Holy One’s forbearance and love for the sinner, and learned of forgiveness of sin. He saw himself from the Divine view-point and learned that the greatest thing is love. May we not feel sure that he, too, learned a larger measure of affection?

Forgiveness. Turning to the tearful woman, Jesus said unto her, “Thy sins are forgiven. Thy faith hath saved thee, go in peace.” She went in peace. What mattered it to her that Simon’s guests criticized the boldness of the One “that even forgiveth sins,” so she went out into the eternal peace of the Kingdom of Heaven? Others had come for healing for themselves; others with requests for friends, but a woman was the first to come to Jesus asking only forgiveness, and her penitential tears, the richness of her love, and the sweetness of her deed waft their precious perfume through all the ages.

Quiz. 1. Did Jesus ever refuse an invitation? 2. Name three other occasions when Jesus was a guest at dinner. 3. On what other like occasion was He anointed by a woman? 4. How does this case differ from the other?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The costliest gift is not too costly for the Lord. 2. The loftiest eminence is at Jesus’ feet. 3. We may go to any social gathering where we may take Jesus with us and do His work. 4. Every sinner is a bankrupt and all sinners are equally unable to pay their debts. 5. Who treats sin lightly can have no deep love for the Saviour. 6. Faith in Jesus that leads us to forsake sin is the way of salvation and peace.

Then certain of the scribes and of the Pharisees answered, saying, Master, we would see a sign from thee. But he answered and said unto them, An evil and adulterous generation seeketh after a sign; and there shall no sign be given to it, but the sign of the prophet Jonas: For as was three days and three nights in the

's belly; so shall the Son of man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth. The of Nineveh shall rise in judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: because they

at the

of Jonas; and, behold, a greater than Jonas is here. The

of the south shall rise up in the judgment with this generation, and shall condemn it: for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and, behold, a greater than Solomon is here.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 12:38-45. ALSO READ LUKE 11:29-32.

Prayer: Lord, we pray for the world, that it may not reject Thee, but that Thou mayest be more and more exalted until Thy rule shall be acknowledged by all. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"O who like Thee so humbly bore
The scorn, the scoffs of men before?
So meek, so lowly, yet so high,
So glorious in humility?"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 29. Place, Galilee. Persons, Jesus and certain rabbis and Pharisees.

Scripture Setting: Rejected of Men. God rejected for a king, 1 Sam. 10:17-19. The sin of rebellion, 1 Sam. 15:22-23. Despised and rejected, Isa. 53:3. Rejected by the wise, Jer. 8:8-9. Knowledge rejected, Hos. 4:6. Reject God's commandments, Mark 7:9. The stone which the builders rejected, Luke 20:17-18. Judgment of those who rejected, John 12:48.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this lesson, 1.

Jesus rebukes those sign seekers who demand evidence only as a cloak to hide stubborn unbelief. 2. He makes Jonah's experience the type of His own death and resurrection. 3. Again Jesus emphasizes the sin of unbelief as exceeding any other. 4. His enemies are to be punished not because they disbelieve His words, but because they reject His works. 5. He illustrates the fact that the repentant Gentile world shall stand in judgment against the self-righteous who reject Him.

SEEKING A SIGN.

The Tour of Galilee. Jesus was returning to Capernaum from one of those missionary journeys to the villages and towns of Galilee so frequently made during this period of His ministry. He was attended by the twelve and by a group of loyal, loving women who joyfully provided for the wants of Jesus and His disciples; some because of their relationship to Mary, His mother, and others in gratitude for His healing. It was not an unusual thing for a popular rabbi or great teacher to tour the country with a train of followers, but this party was marked by its earnestness, enthusiasm and consecration. There was not the ostentatious dress of the rabbis; for we cannot imagine that the One who praised John the Baptist for his simple attire would Himself wear the huge tassels which ornamented the garb of the rabbis, and certainly He who taught such simple approach of the Father did not use the leathern phylacteries which the others bound on their left arm and forehead at prayer. In the eighteenth century, John Wesley and his followers followed their Lord's example in a tour of England, stirring the hearts of multitudes.

An Example of Humility. Though Jesus was the King of all the world, and might freely draw from the inexhaustible riches of His Heavenly Father, no one ever lived so humbly. He always traveled on foot, thankful for a cup of water as He pursued His toilsome way up and down the hot white hills of Palestine and asking little more than a piece of bread of the villages He honored with His presence. He did not seek notoriety. If He did some mighty work of healing, He charged the one healed to tell no man; if He found Himself with a popular following, He fled to the wilderness: He would spend all night with an awakening soul like Nicodemus; He gave an afternoon to the Samaritan woman; He would take young men home with Him that He might answer their questions. He lavished His miraculous gifts upon rich and poor, and healed those in high position and in servitude. He never repulsed the rich, but He sought the poor. In a word, He went about doing good.

The Beginning of Conflict. Looking back upon such a life, it seems strange it should have aroused personal enmity and the bitterest hatred. Yet outrages were heaped upon Him and He was rejected by a wicked generation, until at times His trials seemed too great for Jesus' own soul. True, the common people heard Him gladly; on one occasion the enthusiasm of the multitude rose to an uncontrollable height. There were times when Jesus and His disciples "could not so much as eat bread," for the press of the multitude. But the Pharisees beheld His growing power with envy and malignancy. They felt they were in danger of losing their authority and that the simple, pure religion He taught menaced the man-made religion of rites and forms which they had established in place of the solemn covenant Israel had received from God at Sinai. As long as He had little or no following, they were satisfied to treat Him with contempt; but when the people began to speak of Jesus as the Messiah and the promised One, they attacked Him with the bitterest hostility. Charges were laid against Him at Jerusalem, whence spies were sent out by the Jewish authorities to dog His footsteps and distort His sayings. It is the common heritage of the just. Possibly no one was more criticized than Abraham Lincoln during the period of the civil war. It is related that during a lull in the continual storm of criticism and protest, Mr. Lincoln was congratulated by a member of his cabinet, and replied, "For the past few weeks I have felt my policy to be vacillating; now I know it to be so."

Unfounded Charges. Jesus was a model Jew. He revived the national spirit and renewed the patriotism of the multitude, who regarded Him as one of the prophets, if not the Messiah. To overcome this impression, the Pharisees and their emissaries called Him a drunkard, a glutton, a Sabbath-breaker, a blasphemer, a necromancer who cast out Beelzebub with Beelzebub. They declared He was in league with the devil. Jesus Himself answered these charges and proved their absurdity so conclusively that His enemies were glad to slink away. Then they skilfully changed their policy. It would not do to break with Jesus so long as the people were with Him. They would mingle with the crowd as friends; listen, and in a gentle way seek to entangle Him. No cat ever watched a mouse more closely than these Pharisees watched Jesus, only awaiting the opportunity to spring upon Him.

Jesus Unafraid. And how striking was the attitude of Jesus in the face of their dangerous hatred. His teaching became more powerful, His words stronger than ever before. He never struck wrong, never missed a stroke. He was growing stronger with the people, whose confidence they were daily losing. Those scribes who had followed Him so relentlessly were retired by their superiors at Jerusalem, and others appeared in their place. As if they could deceive Him, they tried to hide their feelings behind a mask of kindness and innocent wonder. They came to Him with an air of the greatest honesty. They wanted to be convinced, and if Jesus would show them a sign, they would believe. But He was not to be deceived by their humility. Calmly and sternly He unmasked them before the people, as a part of an evil and adulterous generation.

The Sign. No sign would be wrought for their purpose. But they should have a sign. And then Jesus foretells His death and resurrection in that remarkable parallel, "For as Jonas was three days and three nights in the whale's belly, so shall the Son of Man be three days and three nights in the heart of the earth." Did His disciples remember it, we wonder, when He disappeared from their sight and their eyes were wet with tears, and their hearts heavy because of His death and burial? It is not certain whether Jonah ever told the Ninevites of the miracle of his preservation from the sea or not. It is probable that the men of Nineveh accepted Jonah's message without any knowledge of the miracle of his preservation from the sea. The Jews refused the message of Jesus notwithstanding the miracles which were so palpable as to admit of no denial.

Greater Than All. "And behold, a greater than Jonah is here." If this seemed a blasphemous claim to the Pharisees, He would still more boldly proclaim Himself and denounce their unbelief. The heathen queen of Sheba shall rank above them in the Judgment Day, "for she came from the uttermost parts of the earth to hear the wisdom of Solomon; and behold, a greater than Solomon is here." Now, the Jews believed not only what is written in the Old Testament in regard to Solomon, but all that tradition had added to this, in reference to his magic words, his magic ring, and his knowledge of the secrets of the supernatural world. The orthodox Jews of Jesus' day regarded Solomon as above all who had ever lived, in his glory, power and wisdom; and Jesus declared that He is greater than Solomon! In rage and anger they leave Him with the multitude while they plot His overthrow. Every day fuel was added to the flame of their hatred, for Jesus manifested His power more and more, and declared Himself still more openly and boldly. Meek and lowly as was the Divine King, these gentler qualities were mingled with a courage which dared to meet the issue squarely, without evasion or retraction, and without fear, for Jesus knew that each succeeding century would bring but additional proof that His boldest claims were all too modest statements of His eternal power and glory.

Quiz. 1. Who was Jonah? 2. Why did he refuse to go on the mission to Nineveh? 3. How did he try to escape and what befell him? 4. Who was the "Queen of the South"? 5. What was Solomon's chief greatness? 6. What sign did Jesus say the scribes should see? 7. When was the sign given?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Hypocrisy always wears a mask. 2. The unbelieving desire a sign rather than salvation. 3. The insincere fear sincerity. 4. Hatred exhausts the poisonous soil upon which it grows and dies for lack of nourishment. 5. No one ever stones a weather cock. 6. Jesus' strongest statement of His power tells but a tithe of His greatness. 7. The common people are ever to be trusted in their choice of a favorite. 8. The evil may plot, but their plans can extend no farther than this world.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

Hear ye therefore the parable of

When any one heareth
the word of the kingdom, and understandeth it not, then cometh the

and catcheth away that which was sown in his

This is he which

But
he
that places, the same is he that heareth the word, and anon with receiveth it;

Yet hath he not in himself, but dureth

for a while:

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 13:3-8, 18-24. LUKE 8:4-15, MARK 4:3-20.

Prayer. Lord, we thank Thee for the good seed of Thy word, and for Thy Divine truth sowing. Prepare our hearts that they may become good soil for the sowing of Thy word and that Thy truth may spring up and bear much fruit in our lives. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"May we receive the word we hear,
Each in an honest heart;

* * * *

To seek Thee, all our hearts dispose;
To each Thy blessings suit;
And let the seed Thy servant sows,
Produce abundant fruit."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 29. Place, Lake Gennesaret near Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, His disciples and multitude.

Scripture Setting: Seed Sowing: Certainty of harvest, Isa. 55:10-11. God giveth the seed, 2 Cor. 9:10. Sowing in tears, Ps. 126:5-6. Sowing in righteousness, Hos. 10:12. The spare and the bountiful sower, 2 Cor. 9:6. Reaping what is sown, Gal. 6:7.

Life and Conduct Setting: Through the parable of the sower Jesus shows His disciples, 1. The indifference to God's word. 2. The seed is the word of the Kingdom. 3. The field is the world. 4. The hearts of the hearers are the soil, which may be hard, shallow, overcrowded, or good. 5. The good heart is the only fruitful heart.

A NATURE PARABLE.

Going Forth to Sow. Were there ever such multitudes as thronged about Jesus? Small wonder that His disciples imagined their Master would soon proclaim His Kingdom and divide His Kingdom with them. Jesus wanted to warn His disciples against undue elation at the multitude, for no one knew so well as He the fickleness of an audience and the brevity of popularity. Then He also wished to caution His audience against slighting His word and to win the more thoughtful of His hearers for the Kingdom. Sitting in the boat, Jesus began the picture with the words, "Behold, a sower went forth to sow." They did not have to look far to see that. Every one of His hearers had seen the sower sally forth on his beast, which he always rode bareback; or perchance walking to the distant field with his little plow on his shoulder. For, like the French peasantry of to-day, instead of living alone on the farm, the Galilean husbandmen dwelt in little clustering villages, going out each morning to work in the field.

The Field. His little patch of ground was quite unlike our broad, fertile fields. There were no roads, only a narrow path through tangles of thistle and thorn. There were stretches of bare rock and other places where the ledges of underlying limestone broke through the thin crust of earth above, with only here and there a bit of really good ground. It was before the day of discs, and cultivators, and seed drills. Seed was either sown by hand, or sometimes by means of cattle, when a sack with holes was filled with corn and laid on the animal's back, so that the seed was scattered at random as the cattle moved through the fields. In such unpromising field did Jesus send the sower out to sow.

The Yield. The seed was good; the sower faithfully did his work, and rain and sun did their part. The bridle path was always ploughed with the rest of the field, to be trodden hard later by passing travellers and their beasts. So careful was the sower to cover all his ground that he had gone close up to the boundary, and some of the seed had fallen on the edge of the bare and trampled path, and was left to lie uncovered and exposed. Now, the soil was just as rich in the path as elsewhere in the field, but it was so callous it refused to receive the seed, which lay unwelcomed and alone. There was nothing else for it but to be crushed by the passing feet, or to furnish a meal to the countless foraging finches which are the pest of the Palestine farmer. Some of the seed fell in the layer of earth above the limestone. The soil received it gladly, the rains watered it, and in an incredibly short time tiny blades appeared above ground, prophesying a good crop; but the soil was so thin it could not furnish sufficient sustenance for the plant, and when the tendrils sought to reach down that they might take firm root, they could not pierce the rock underneath, and the fiery shafts of the sun soon scorched the shallow root stems into withered stocks; the sower might as well not have sown his seed. Some seeds fell in a loam, rich and deep, but the soil was full of thistle seeds, and thorn, of which there are more than twenty varieties in Palestine. In the strife for the mastery, the young grain spikes were eventually choked by the thistles and thorn. Discouraging, was it not? Yet the sower had not labored in vain, for there was an amazing yield in a bit of good ground.

Seeing and Hearing. It was the first time Jesus had spoken to them in parable, and not only the multitude, but even His own disciples, failed to understand the meaning of the parables. This one is really the most striking of the seven parables in which Jesus described the Kingdom of God. The multitude, who had not come out to be taught or for any really serious purpose, carried no lesson home with them, and dispersed without a thought of the wonderful message. But there were a few thoughtful ones who followed Jesus and His disciples to Peter's house at the close of the day to learn more concerning the mysteries of the Kingdom. This was just what Jesus wanted them to do and He received them with open delight, assuring them that He had spoken in parables in order to interest the really earnest ones. There were many who did not care to hear, and refused to see the truth. In fact, they purposely shut ears and eyes, for fear their hearts might be touched and they should be converted.

The Teacher Explains. He praised these truth-seekers because they were open to conviction, saying, "Blessed are your eyes, for they see; and your ears, for they hear." Then in the blessed, friendly intercourse of the home, the great Teacher explained the lesson to the few earnest students who desired knowledge. The field is the world. Hearts are the soil; Jesus is the Divine Sower, and His Word is the seed of the Kingdom. Those scribes and Pharisees mingled with the multitude only to criticize Jesus and impugn His word; yet in the wideness of His mercy and the broadness of His love the seed had been given them, though it might as well have been cast upon the wayside. So hard were their hearts that unbelief had stopped their ears.

A Shallow Soil. A large number who heard Jesus welcomed His message. Thousands upon thousands of those who hung upon His words believed in Him and were ready to shout Hosanna to the "Son of David." But when the time of trial came, "Many of His disciples went back and walked no more with Him." They endured for a while, but when tribulation and persecution arose, they forsook the One they had promised to serve.

Illustration. When forsaken by his former generals upon whom he had lavished favors and by his brothers and sisters whom he had made kings and queens, and even by his wife and son, Napoleon on the Island of St. Helena sat on the sea shore and watching the shifting sands said, "Humanity is more inconstant than they."

Among Thorns. "And the others fell among thorns; and the thorns grew with it and choked it." Many hearers of the Word have hearts like this soil. There are many who are capable of doing great things for God, but they are not whole-hearted; their attention and their energies are divided. Cares, riches and worldly pleasures choke the Word. The great Cardinal Wolsey, who had bartered principle and outraged conscience that he might retain the favor of England's king, was led to cry, before his head fell under the executioner's axe, "Had I but served my God half as hard as I have served my king, He would not have given me over in my grey hairs."

A Hundred Fold. The other fell into good ground, and grew, and brought forth fruit an hundred fold. The seed was the same, the Sower was the same—the difference was in the soil, just as to-day the same Word of God speaks to all, the same loving Jesus extends the invitation; but some hearts are hard, others shallow and inconstant, others preoccupied with the world, and a few hearts are like good soil, bearing much fruit.

Illustration. Recently a South Carolina boy fifteen years of age raised 228 bushels and three pecks of corn on one acre of soil. It was not an extra soil. It was no better than hundreds of thousands of acres to be found all over the world. At the start it was poor sandy soil, but Jerry Moore kept it free from weeds and brambles. Then it was fertilized and cultivated, the boy himself doing all the ploughing, and hoeing, seeding and harvesting. But the reward was the world's championship for corn growing. Shall we not cultivate our hearts when the reward is an everlasting prize and eternal life?

Quiz. 1. Why did Jesus speak in parables? 2. Did it hinder any seeker from learning the truth? 3. Whom did He bless? 4. What three truths are taught in this parable? 5. Who is responsible for the condition of the soil?

Seed Truths. 1. There are none so blind as those who will not see, none so deaf as those who refuse to hear. 2. No sower ever had a harder field than Jesus. 3. Let three-quarters of the seed be lost, if only the last quarter thrives. 4. Thorns grow more quickly than wheat. 5. The thriving of the seed depends on the field. 6. A hard heart is more impervious than a rock. 7. We work with the Sower.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

Again, the kingdom of heaven is like unto a

that
was

and gathered of every kind: Which, when it was

they

and sat down, and gathered the good into

but

So shall it be at the end of the world: the angels shall come forth, and sever the wicked from among the just, And shall cast them into the furnace of fire: there shall be wailing and gnashing of teeth.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 13:44-50.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, May we seek the pearl of great price; may we search for the hidden treasure, and may we consider no earthly treasure or pleasure too great a price to pay for the joy of entrance into Thy Kingdom. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"Jesus shall reign where'er the sun
Does His successive journeys run,
His Kingdom spread from shore to shore
Till moons shall wax and wane no more."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 29. Place, The seashore near Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, His disciples and the multitude.

Scripture Setting: An everlasting Kingdom, Psalms 45:6. A glorious Kingdom, Psalms 145:11-13. An indestructible Kingdom, Daniel 2:44. A peaceable Kingdom, Isaiah 2:4. A growing Kingdom, Isaiah 9:7. A righteous Kingdom, Isaiah 32:16. A joyful Kingdom, Isaiah 35:10. A universal Kingdom, Isaiah 61:11. An immediate Kingdom, Matthew 16:28. Not of this world, John 18:36. Entrance to the Kingdom, 1 Peter 10:11.

Life and Conduct Setting: In a series of wonderful word pictures, Jesus shows that 1. The Kingdom of Heaven is an invisible Kingdom hidden from the world. 2. It is found by all seekers of the Kingdom. 3. He emphasizes its insuperable value. 4. Sacrifice must be made to obtain the Kingdom. 5. Proclaims the final sifting of the church, and segregation of the wicked.

GREAT TREASURE.

A Famous Lake. Many lakes surpass Gennesaret in beauty, and though naval battles between Roman and Jewish galleys have been fought on its waters, it has never occupied a place of maritime importance, but it is doubtful if there is another in all the world of such interest to mankind as the little lake upon whose bosom the Son of God preached the marvelous Gospel of the Kingdom. The little strip of water, which is only twelve miles long and not seven miles wide at its widest point, commanded the admiration of the ancient historian, Josephus. Though nearly seven hundred feet below the Mediterranean Sea, its shores are not precipitous, and the west shore is edged with small plains, and there are stretches of beach composed of fine white sand, pebbles and shells. Reeds and rushes and the famous papyrus grew in favored spots along the shore; in some places maiden's-hair, luxuriant grasses, mosses, ferns and briars grew on the great projecting rocks in such profusion that the breeze would blow the long streamers of green out trailing on the water. Oaks, walnuts and other trees furnished grateful shade on many a place along the shore, while thickets of thorn trees and clumps of oleanders in rosy pink bloom added to the beauty of the scene. Within easy reach of Peter's house in Capernaum were such inviting places of rest.

By the Sea. It was at the close of an exhausting day's labor. The shadows were beginning to fall athwart the lake, and Jesus went from the house to such a retreat, and sat by the sea for prayer and meditation—to commune with nature and nature's God for Jesus was more than a nature lover. He discerned the times in the face of the sky; saw God's providence in the covering of the hills; understood the mystery of the sea; read a lesson from the husbandry of the fields, and made a text of the casting of nets. But He did not remain long in lonely meditation. The great, eager multitude soon sought and found Him. They came from the fleets of busy fish boats that dotted the lake each morning and evening, as well as from the passenger boats that plied across the lake, and from the busy cities and towns along its shores. So great was the throng that He took refuge in a boat drawn up in an inlet. Pushing out a little, He again made the prow of a boat His pulpit, while the people lined either side of the inlet, and the rise of the ground in successive levels formed a natural amphitheatre for the accommodation of the multitude.

Speaking in Parables. "And He spoke many things unto them in parables." It was a common mode of teaching among the Jews, and one quite different from the fables of the Orientals, in which things are described that could not possibly happen. All parables bear reference to familiar scenes of daily life, or to events, either real or possible. In His parables, Jesus always drew a word picture or narrative which could be used in illustration of some Heavenly teaching or spiritual truth. Thus from His floating pulpit, Jesus began to instruct the people, who never wearied of His teaching, though they profited so little by it. How beautiful while He spoke was the Kingdom of Heaven! Now Jesus makes use of a current expression to signify the smallest possible amount, "small as a mustard seed," and likening the Kingdom of Heaven to a grain of mustard seed which a man sowed in the field, He pictures the growth of the least of all seeds into a plant so much greater than the garden herbs that it is a tree in comparison with them. He makes use of their custom of using the mustard seed for food for pigeons and other birds, and so the birds of the air come to lodge in the branches of the mustard tree. As they crowded the shores to hear Him, did they know that of all that multitude, His memory only would remain? His words only survive the centuries? And that the Kingdom of Heaven, which He had planted so unpretentiously, and which seemed to them as the smallest seed, would outlast all of the kingdoms of the earth then extant, and grow till it had outstripped the anise and cumin of Judaism and given shelter to all the nations of the earth?

An Inner Kingdom. "The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto leaven which a woman took and hid in three measures of meal, till the whole was leavened." It was one of the common processes of everyday life which every Galilean wife and mother could understand. But did they realize that the Word to which they listened was the leaven, which, if they would but receive it in their hearts, would gradually pervade and transform the whole life, working on through the community until every soul fed upon the bread of life?

In the middle west is a little village known throughout the state for the piety of its inhabitants and the potent influence for good which it exerts upon the surrounding communities. Every adult is a member of the little church; every child is in Sunday School. It is not only a "dry" town but its influence is relied upon to keep the county "dry." Yet this town was once a byword and known as Dog-town because it was said "There wasn't a man in it, as good as a yaller dog." One day a feeble old superannuated minister came to the little town and amid such unpromising conditions preached of the Kingdom of God. It was only one sermon preached in a cabin to an audience of a few women and children, but from that smallest of seeds, a great revival sprang, leavening and regenerating the town.

Hidden Treasure. "Who hath ears to hear, let him hear. The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a treasure hid in the field." A man comes along to dig in the field and finds it. According to the laws of the present day, the discoverer would have to share his find with the land owner, and in some states, the entire treasure would pass to the man who held the title to the land, but according to Jewish law the treasure belonged to the finder. So this man sells all he has to buy the field that he may dig for the hidden treasure. What are houses and land and money worth in comparison to a heart which contains a living well of everlasting joy? What treasure to compare to peace with God? Every now and then expeditions are fitted out to go in search of the famous treasure of the voyager Cook.

A Pearl of Great Price. Often the fishermen of Galilee had searched for pearls, and Jesus recalls the familiar scene of the wandering jewel merchant "seeking goodly pearls; who when he had found one pearl of great price, went and sold all he had and bought it." One is not "carried to the skies on flowery beds of ease," but Heaven is only won by persistent seeking.

Every year pearl seekers swarm the great Mississippi River and hunt its river bed for pearls. Excitement runs high when one of the pearl hunters finds a pearl of marketable value, but the entire findings of the season amount to less than the days' wages of the men engaged in the business. In the great sea of God's love, there are not a few prizes to be distributed among the few, but a pearl of great price for every seeker.

The Net Is Drawn. Again the Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a net, that was cast into the sea and gathered of every kind. Ah, had not Jesus cast down the net, and as He looked over His audience, did He not see every kind? He had made it very plain that the Kingdom of Heaven meant sacrifice, and there were some in that company who would willingly part with all to secure the treasured Kingdom. There were earnest faces before Him, searchers for the pearl of great price, bound to have it at any cost, but there were many who would relapse into indifference. Some would bear His name and refuse the cross. But the time of separation would come when the net would be drawn and angel judges would sever the wicked from among the just.

Quiz. 1. What is the difference between a parable and a fable? 2. Which mode of illustration did Jesus use? 3. What characteristic of the Kingdom is set forth in the parable of the mustard seed? 4. What is the lesson of the leaven? 5. What great principle is emphasized in the parables of the hidden treasure and the pearl of great price? 6. What warning is conveyed in the likeness to the casting of the net?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The ship's mast was once embedded in a seed which a bird might carry. 2. The process of germination may seem long, but the evolution of the tree from the seed is sure. 3. As leaven must enter the meal, so truth must enter the heart, if it is to enliven the life. 4. It is not the knowledge that is proclaimed from the housetop, but that which is hidden in God's word, which is to be treasured. 5. The pearl of great price awaits the ownership of him who will sacrifice all for it.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE PARABLE OF THE TARES.

Then Jesus sent the

away,
and went

and his saying, Declare unto us the parable of the tares

of the

He answered and said unto them, He that the good seed is the Son of man; The field is the world;

the good seed
are the

of the kingdom;
but
the

are
the

of
the wicked
one;

THE PARABLE OF THE TARES.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 13:24-30.

Prayer: Dear Lord, We pray that we may not lead lives so useless and worthless, that we shall be as tares. Deliver us from the sin of hypocrisy. Make our lives abundantly fruitful of those rich graces that proclaim the true follower of the Master. Help us to watch and pray that no seed of the enemy's sowing may find lodgement in our hearts. And in the day of the great harvest ingathering, may we be as grain, golden and good, fit for the Master's garner. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

Cold, heat, moist and dry,
Shall foster and mature the grain
For garnerers in the sky.
Then when the glorious end,
The day of God shall come,
The angel reapers shall descend,
And Heaven shout, "Harvest Home!"

THE SUBJECT AND ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Autumn of A. D. 28. Place, By the Sea of Galilee, near Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, His disciples, and the multitude.

Scripture Setting: The Judgment. God shall judge justly, Psa. 98:9. The righteous and wicked to be made manifest, Eccl. 3:17. Inclusiveness of judgment, Eccl. 12:14. A day of judgment appointed, Acts 17:31. Judged by the teaching of Jesus, Rom. 2:16. All are to be judged, 2 Cor. 5:10.

Life and Conduct Setting: The parable of the tares teaches us, 1. The activity of the enemy. 2. The close outward likeness that sometimes exists between the people of the world and of the Kingdom. 3. By their fruits ye shall know them. The ultimate barrenness of the false and the fruitfulness of the real Christian life. 4. The necessity of Christly forbearance and patient waiting for the final judgment. 5. The certainty of the final separation of the good and evil.

TARES IN THE WHEAT.

An Instructive Lesson. Have you ever seen one of the experiment cars sent out by a state college of agriculture? Outside they look about like any of the numerous "special" coaches one sees attached to a railroad train; the inside is fitted up just like a schoolroom, only instead of boys and girls, great brawny farmers cluster around the teacher and the exhibit of seeds and other material he has brought with him from the agricultural college experiment station. For the government not only spends millions of dollars annually selecting and maturing seed from which to propagate a better grade of grain, but it also sends lecturers out in these special cars to impress upon farmers the importance of good seed and to warn them against the least admixture of bad seed. Nearly twenty centuries ago the Great Husbandman talked of the sower and the seed to an audience of humble folk in words fraught with the greatest spiritual significance, and though the lesson was not delivered from a specially-fitted twentieth century car, it is of as vital importance to-day as when spoken from a primitive fish boat.

An Indefatigable Enemy. The farmer Jesus pictures was as careful in his selection of the seed as any scientific up-to-date farmer of our day. He "sowed good seed in his field." Again the field is the world only in this parable the seed is no longer the Word, but the children of the Kingdom. The Sower has planted His seed which is to bear fruit for Him in this world; some in great cities and some in remote and lonely places. But the sunshine of His love, the blessed showers of His grace are over all, and may we not be sure that the Great Husbandman knew just the soil and environment in which each child of His could be most fruitful? "But while the man slept, his enemy came and sowed tares among the wheat and went his way." It was not an uncommon thing in the East for an unscrupulous enemy to do such a deed. Doubtless many of Jesus' hearers had seen that part of the story enacted. Later Jesus told His disciples that Satan is such an enemy, seeking to ruin the harvest and possess the field by sowing the seed of evil even among God's children.

The Tares. In the Eastern countries a poisonous rye grass, which looks exactly like wheat until the ear appears, is very common. There is also a couch-grass known as "creeping wheat," because the roots creep underground and become intertwined with those of the wheat, so that one cannot pull it up without unrooting the wheat also. And it is probably to these grasses that Jesus refers when He speaks of the tares that appeared with the wheat. According to ancient Jewish tradition these tares were originally wheat. Where the seed of these poisonous grasses was sown, even if the crop should not be utterly ruined, it would cause much anxiety and entail vast labor in the harvest, leaving the soil unfit for wheat growing for years to come. Under the likeness of the tares Jesus pictures those who were once Christians and still remain with God's people, though they no longer love and obey God. Though Jesus, the Divine Sower, had only begun sowing the seed and choosing His followers, Satan, the enemy, had sown tares right in the midst of the finest of the wheat, and among the twelve disciples was one who should all too soon betray his Master! Ever since Satan has sown the evil seeds of sin wherever they can find lodgment in the minds of God's children, until even the church of God has some evil and sinful members.

The Discovery. Tender blades shoot up through the earth and at first one sees no sign of the enemy's mischievous work in the soft, beautiful green of the growing wheat fields; just as it is hard always to tell the bad people from those who are good. Indeed, the man of upright moral life is outwardly so like the real Christian that he sometimes thinks himself as good or better than the children of the Kingdom. But soon the difference is manifest—tiny ears appear on the grain stocks, while the tares show no sign of fruitage. How like the difference between the true and false Christian Jesus has made the picture! While the hypocrite may for a time appear no different from his fellows, he lacks the real fruits of the spirit enumerated by Paul.

Greatly agitated, the servants came to their master with the question, "Sir, didst thou not sow good seed in thy field? From whence then hath it tares?" There can be only one explanation, which the master gives. "An enemy hath done this."

It is said that when the Christian religion was growing with such power that it seemed as though the whole world would be brought to Christ within a single generation, Satan held a council with his aids. One suggested persecution. "Ah," said Satan, "why are you so foolish? The church grows and prospers most under persecution." Another advised a deadly plague, which should sweep the godly into the grave. "Every Christian death-bed will make a thousand converts," declared Satan. Then one said, "Dress some of your majesty's followers in the garb of Christians and send us forth to join the church. Once inside, we will stop its growth and paralyze its usefulness." "Well said," declared his Satanic majesty, and the thing was done.

Known by Their Fruits. So anxious were the servants to keep the wheat pure and unmixed for the harvest that they offer to go and weed out the tares; just as with inconsiderate zeal some people talk of "weeding out the church" of all unworthy members, and wonder that Jesus should have permitted Judas to remain with the Twelve when He knew that Judas was a thief and a traitor. But far wiser than his servants was the master. "Nay; lest while ye gather up the tares, ye root up also the wheat with them." If the tares had been one side of the wheat it might have been done, but they were sown right in the midst of the wheat and roots and blades had grown so intertwined that it would have been impossible to separate the two without uprooting and destroying some of the wheat and perhaps doing greater ruin than already had been wrought. While the "zawan" or tares might never grow into wheat, false Christians who are the tares in the church may become true followers of Jesus if we exercise His forbearance toward them.

A bad boy was the cause of great trouble in Sunday school. He broke the rules, defied its discipline until his case came before the superintendent, who declared the lad should be expelled. When the teacher whom he had so mistreated urged that he might remain, the boy was retained, but he continued to be as unruly as ever until one day he learned of his teacher's unselfish forbearance, and he who had been the worst boy in the school became its best pupil.

The Ingathering. The master was a wise husbandman. The tares and the wheat must grow together till the harvest when he would command the reapers, "Gather ye together first the tares and bind them in bundles to burn them; but gather the wheat into my barn." The harvest time would surely come when the separation of the tares and wheat could be accomplished with safety. Yes, such a separation would even be necessary, for only the good wheat, pure and unmixed, might be stored in the granary. So Jesus tells His disciples that the children of the Kingdom are wheat to be garnered in the Heavenly storehouse. At that great day the Son of man shall send forth angel reapers, and "they shall gather out of His Kingdom all things that offend and them which do iniquity." Then shall the tares be utterly destroyed and we turn from the picture to those who have humbly served in the Kingdom, who have labored in sacrifice and weariness for its upbuilding and have been its citizens, for "then shall the righteous shine forth as the sun in the Kingdom of their Father."

Quiz. 1. What special truth is taught in this parable? 2. Into what two divisions does Jesus divide the church? 3. What did John the Baptist prophesy of Christ that coincides with this lesson? 4. In what way does Paul use wheat as an illustration? 5. Which would you prefer to be, tares or wheat?

Seed Truths. 1. Even wheat may degenerate into tares. 2. Satan is always seeking to change a Christian into a hypocrite. 3. Men are known by their fruits. 4. An outward likeness is not always a sign of relationship. 5. Inconsiderate zeal often frustrates its own purpose. 6. Separation will surely come in the final great harvest.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

CHRIST STILLING THE TEMPEST.

And the same day, when the

was come,
he saith unto them,
Let us pass over unto the other side. And when they had sent away the

they took him even as he was in the

And
there were also
with him

And there arose a great

of wind,
and
the

so that it was now full.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 4:35-41. ALSO MATT. 8:23-27, AND LUKE 8:22-25.

Prayer: Lord, We thank Thee that Thou art with us as with Thy disciples of old; that Thou dost go with us on every journey and art ready to help us in every storm of life. We pray that Thou wilt speak peace to our souls; that Thou wilt still the waves of doubt and unrest, and rebuke the winds of temptation, lest we perish. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"O Jesus, once tossed on the breast of the billow, Aroused by the shriek of despair from Thy pillow,
Now seated in glory, the mariner cherish,
Who cries, in his anguish, Save, Lord, or we perish.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Autumn of A. D. 28. Place, Sea of Galilee. Persons, Jesus and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: The sea obedient to the Creator. The sea divided, Ex. 14:21. Jordan divided, Josh. 3:14-16. The waves are stayed, Job 38:11. Ruled by the Lord, Psa. 89:9. The Lord is mightier than the sea, Psa. 93:4. The waters obey Him, Psa. 104:6-7. Calms the storm, Psa. 107:28-30. Waters obey His commandment, Prov. 8:29. The storm calmed, Jonah 1:14, 15.

Life and Conduct Setting: In the stilling of the tempest, 1. The dual nature of Jesus is disclosed. 2. His weariness and sleep show Him as a partaker of our physical nature and weakness; while nature's obedience to His command reveals Him as the Divine Creator. 3. The futility of fear is shown. 4. Jesus declares fear is allied with a lack of faith. 5. We see His power to still the storm without and the storm within.

A STORM ON GALILEE.

Eventide. What a wonderful day it had been! What a wealth of illustration Jesus had given; the day was ended, our Master was spent and weary, but the crowds refused to disperse. Peter's house which He so often sought offered Him no retreat from the importunity of the unfortunate and the curiosity of the idle. So Jesus ordered His disciples to carry Him to the opposite shore that He might find peace and rest for a time on the upland plains of the Jordan. Great truths had been unfolded to them, and it was better for the enthusiastic, thronging multitude and for His disciples that He should withdraw. So "they took Him even as He was," without the usual preparation for the journey; without even stopping for the evening meal, so eagerly did the disciples obey His behest. He was in the ship—probably the well-known boat of the fisherman-disciples which was always at His disposal. The light that lit the distant hills with resplendent glory and spread a silver sheen over the sea had faded into evening twilight. All that could be heard was the rustling of the reeds, the gurgling of the waters, the boom of the solitary bittern, the call of the fishermen at their night toil and plashing of the oars of the other boats bringing those who could not be constrained to remain behind. They were familiar sounds to Jesus' ears and lulled Him to sleep as He lay in the stern of the boat on the low bench where the steersman sometimes rests, with His head pillowed on the coarse leather boss of the steersman's seat.

A Sudden Storm. Girdled and sheltered by hills a thousand feet high, the Sea of Galilee usually lies in its bed as calm and placid as a mirror, but it is also noted for its sudden storms, and woe betide the unprotected boat out in one of these gales. Such a storm now imperiled the boat in which Jesus lay asleep. The angry wind lashed the waters into a white foam, the waves rose higher and higher, beating against the boat, until the white spray washed His feet. Even the bronzed fisherman-disciples were filled with dismay. The boat was fast filling with water. Surely they would go down into the deep if help was not forthcoming! Yet never was the humanity of Jesus more manifest than in that dread moment which called for an exercise of power even greater than that of the Great Physician. Still, through all the tumult and danger Jesus lay in the stern of the boat in the heavy sleep of utter physical weariness, hunger and exhaustion; amid all the fury of the storm He slept as peacefully as when He lay cradled in the manger. It was like the God-Man: so often before the exercise of His Divine power He displayed the physical weaknesses which are the common lot of man; that in Him the man and God were equally displayed. He who was hungry vanquished Satan, and the weary and thirsty Traveler, in words that are immortal, declared Himself the Water of Life. So now the spent and weary Teacher is soon to prove Himself Lord of nature and Master of all its forces.

Panic Stricken. As long as they dared His disciples let Him sleep. But soon a storm of unreasoning fear swept over the sturdy fishermen. Peter is beside himself.

John and Andrew are filled with anxiety. The waves and the wind without are not in greater commotion than the little crew of His disciples, their boat cruelly "tormented" and buffeted by the waves with no sign of rescue, for is not Jesus asleep? Evidently He cares not that they perish. And with clamorous haste they waken their Lord. Yet the disciples were safe had they only known it. Even though the physical part of Him slept, His loving oversight and care slumbered not. If they had only known it was enough that Jesus was with them, for there can no real harm come to those who are in the company of their Lord. Luke tells us "They came to Him and awoke Him, saying, 'Master, Master, we perish!'" And it must have been blunt-spoken, impetuous Peter who cried out, "Carest thou not that we perish?" How different is the faith of the true believer.

Some years ago a vessel went down in mid-ocean. Among the passengers were a mother and her two little daughters. "Mamma, the sea is His, for He made it, and so we are not afraid to go down, for we shall not be beyond His care," said the eldest of the children as, with shining faces, they met death in the deep sea.

Reassured. It was a marvelous scene. Even before He arose Jesus reassured their hearts and gently rebuked the fear that had unnerved them. Then, as though it were a couchant, springing lion, ready to swallow the boat and its human freight in its awful maw, Jesus rebuked the angry roaring sea, saying, "Peace, be still." And as the wild beast of the jungle obeys its tamer and crouches at his feet, so the foam-flecked waves slunk back abashed by their Master's command, the wind ceased and there was a great calm. The muzzled sea heard the voice of the One who had gathered its waters together and obeyed its Creator. The waters commonly in a state of seething and commotion for hours afterwards grew calm as soon as the storm ceased. Tenderly and accusingly Jesus breaks the stillness with the question, "Why are ye so fearful? How is it that ye have no faith?" They had even seen Him heal the sick, cast out devils and restore the dead, and yet they did not know that no harm could befall them while in His presence; that His power extended even over the wind and the waves and He could rebuke the sea just as He had rebuked the fever and the demons.

The Sea Obeys Him. Indeed it was one of those miracles of power so much greater than even the miracles of healing which they had so often witnessed, that we do not wonder the disciples were awed. It manifested the sovereignty of their Master over the universe. There was only One of whom the Scriptures declared "the sea obeys Him," and that One was the great God who created land and sea. But before the majestic figure of Jesus, the agitated waters had slunk abashed. At His mandate there was a great calm, and at His word, the little lake became like a sea of glass. The pitiless elements and all material forces were obedient to His command. They did not know, these poor frightened disciples, that Jesus' power extended beyond the little lake on which their little boat was borne. That it was He who ordered the stars in their courses, the daily round of the earth, the flight of the seasons and the march of the centuries. But today every follower of Jesus sees His rule in the intelligent working of all nature's forces, and knows that the stilling of the tempest is no greater miracle than the creation of the tiniest flower that is trodden under foot.

A Great Marvel. They had seen the calm of the sleeping Jesus, they had witnessed the majesty of His awakening; so magnificent was His presence, so supernatural the calm which He had placed upon the raging sea, and so marvelous was nature's obedience to His command, that a new dread fell upon them. "And they feared exceedingly, and said one to another, What manner of man is this, that even the wind and the sea obey Him?" Slowly it was dawning upon them that the One to whom they had sworn allegiance was not a mere earthly king; that He whom they followed was greater than Moses the prophet, than David, and greater than any of His predecessors. They were only beginning to understand the meaning of the term, the "Son of God." But not yet did they realize His mastery over the universe, and His all-sovereign power. On our voyage of life, what do we think of Jesus, I wonder? If we make Him our Companion on the voyage of life, naught can harm us, for He is Master of the universe. He still rebukes the wind and stills the waves. In every upspringing flower, every growing tree, every sunset, in every tempest and lull of the storm, His power is manifest. His watchful care never ceases, though, like the disciples with weak and pitiful faith, we may think that He cares not. There can be no real difficulty, no storm too great for Him to assuage, if the Lord of sea and land sails in the ship with us over the sea of life.

Quiz. 1. How many instances in the Bible where God commanded the sea and it obeyed Him? 2. Which do you think requires the greater power, to raise the dead or command the sea? 3. What king of ancient Britain attempted to command the sea? 4. Was he successful? 5. What two characteristics did the disciples show?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The strongest saint is not above physical weariness. 2. He giveth His beloved sleep. 3. The calms of life often foretell a storm. 4. Though Jesus may sometimes seem to sleep, He is always awake to an appeal for help. 5. Jesus relieves all fears promptly. 6. Our Lord is never unconcerned. 7. The fearful disciple rebukes His Master. 8. Jesus silences the storm within and then rebukes the storm without. 9. No storm can swallow the ship where lies the Master of ocean and earth and skies.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

And they came over unto the other side of the

into the country
of the Gadarenes.
And when he was come immediately there met him out of the a man with an unclean spirit,

Who had his dwelling among the tombs;
and no man could no, not

with

Because that he had been often bound with

and
the

by him, and the neither could any man tame him.

And always,
night and day,
he was in the

and in the tombs crying, and cutting himself with stones

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 5:1-20; ALSO MATT. 8:28-34, AND LUKE 8:26-40.

Prayer: Dear Lord, Cast out every unclean spirit, word or thought that be in us. Let no evil possess or rule over us, but may we find in Thee freedom from all evil. Help us to choose Thee above worldly gain, and may our desire be that Thou wilt not depart from us. Help us to publish the glad tidings of Thy salvation among our neighbors and companions. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

Jesus! the name high over all,
In hell, or earth or sky;
Angels and men before it fall,
And devils fear and fly.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Autumn of A. D. 28. Place, Gadara. Persons, Jesus, demoniac and Gadarenes.

Scripture Setting: True Values. A choice of life or death, Deut. 30:19. Wisdom preferable to gold, Prov. 16:16. The favor of God above gold, Prov. 22:1. Choice between God and Baal, 1 Kings 18:21. God's Word superior to gold, Psa. 19:7-12. The wisdom of God, Job 28:12-19. Man is precious, Isa. 13:12. The delight of God's house, Psa. 84:10.

Life and Conduct Setting: The deliverance of the demoniac shows, 1. The power of an unclean spirit over man. 2. Jesus as the Deliverer from demoniac possession. 3. That even the devils acknowledge and beseech Jesus. 4. Greed for gain which outweighs the redemption of a soul. 5. A people who would retain their swine at the cost of Jesus' departure. 6. The mistake of one who would have followed Jesus abroad when his work was to publish the glad tidings in his home town.

THE DEMONIAK OF GADARA.

The Close of an Eventful Day. It had been a day of marvels; the revelation of the Kingdom of Heaven; the wind and the waves obedient to Jesus, whose power was to assume a still more marvelous form. The distance from Capernaum to Gadara was less than five miles, and even though delayed by the storm, the boat landed on the other side late that same evening. How grand the scene, as the moon cast its weird beauty over the shadowy cliff, silvered the becalmed sea and even crowned with a halo of glory the majestic figure of its Lord.

Tomb Dwellers. The traveller in the Holy Land is able to locate the exact landing place of Jesus and His disciples, and the bluff which descends with such abruptness to the shore. The city of Gadara was built on the top of a hill twelve hundred feet above the shore and some distance from it. One may see the ruins of the long avenues of marble pillars which once lined its streets, the squared stones of once fine buildings, and masses of black basalt mark the sites of the three great amphitheatres and splendid public baths of which the city was once so proud. The hill is of soft limestone, burrowed with caverns large and small. These caves were often converted into tombs with massive stone doors. Indeed the most interesting remains of Gadara are these tombs which dot the cliffs for a considerable distance from the city, all of whose present inhabitants are troglodytes or "tomb dwellers" like the demoniacs of old.

Possessed by an Evil Spirit. Jesus had hardly set foot on shore when two madmen who made their abode in the tombs came to Him. They were not merely madmen, they were possessed by evil spirits who spoke through them, and controlled them. Of the two unfortunates, the one mentioned by Mark was most violent, and had been a terror to the whole country. He had once been under restraint "now no man could any more bind him" even with iron upon feet and wrists. Night and day he roamed the hills naked and dwelt only in the tombs. Howling, shrieking and frenzied, the poor unfortunate mercilessly cut and lacerated his own flesh with stones. It must have been a desire for help that drove him to the feet of Jesus. The demons in possession of the poor wretch knew that Jesus was indeed the Son of God; that He was mightier than they and that the time was coming when they would be in subjugation to Him. So abjectly was the man under their control that even while he falls at Jesus' feet and worships and confesses Him as the Son of the Most High God, the poor wretch begs Jesus to leave him alone in his miserable state and not "torment" him.

A Legion of Devils. Soft and tender as the moonlight that silvered the hills is Jesus' face as He asks, "What is thy name?" It is always sobering to think quietly of oneself and Jesus would restore the man to a sense of his own individuality. Conscious of the cruel mastery he was under, the man cried in agony, "My name is Legion; for we are many." No regiment of six thousand Roman soldiers could have been more pitiless and conquering, more ready to trample and destroy than this legion of devils, dominating body and soul, trampling down every holy impulse, conquering every high desire, and destroying even the soul itself. But they were confronted by One who had fought with the very prince of devils forty days and forty nights and had been victorious. No wonder that the legion of devils acknowledged His power and authority.

The Devils Beseech Jesus. Satan is always a coward and we find the self-same evil spirits that had rent their victim and defied Jesus now cringing before him, filled with dread of the future, supplicating for a refuge and seeking a last asylum among the brutes. A great herd of swine was feeding on the hillside. They were doubtless owned by some of the heathen citizens of Gadara (though the keeping of swine was an open breach of the law). "Send us into the swine," cried the devils. With a laconic "Go," Jesus gave them leave. And so great was the power of His word that the unclean spirits went out and entered into the swine. But not even among the swine could they find shelter from the One who was to conquer all the powers of evil. The whole frenzied herd ran violently down a steep place into the sea and was destroyed. So today He frees those under the control of Satan.

Illustration. A young man of refinement was possessed by the demon of drink. It drove him from home. No tomb of Gadara could have been more repulsive than the vile dens in which he spent his evenings. He became only a poor tramp, breathing curses and oaths, when one day, hardly knowing why, he followed a band of Salvation Army soldiers to their headquarters. As they sang of Jesus he wanted help and deliverance, but the demons in possession of his soul drove him from his seat again to seek his evil haunts, when a Salvation lassie said in broadest Scotch: "He will na torture ye, mon. Dinna ye ken. He'll drive the devils out?" He returned to the hall, the demons of drink and wanderlust, of blasphemy and hatred were driven out, and he became a saved man.

The Men of Gadara. It was a terrible scene enacted under the ghostly moon: the agony and cries of the demonized; the mad rush of the herd down the cliff into the splashing waters of the sea. Again Jesus had manifested His marvelous power and as the sea obeyed Him, so the prince of darkness fled at His command and a human soul was saved from destruction. From above, the keepers of the herd waited long enough to see it all and then they fled to tell what had happened, and in the morning the men of Gadara came with the infuriated owners of the swine. Surely the sight which met them should have won their gratitude. In the healing of the maniac, a standing peril so great as to make a part of the country impassable had been removed. An unknown thing had happened: a once demonized soul had been delivered from its bondage and the former madman now sat at Jesus' feet, clothed and in his right mind. But on the other side was a loss of revenue—of two thousand swine! And the men of Gadara "began to beseech Jesus to depart from their border." They exalted money above the man. Alas that the same choice has been made many times since in many countries and by many men. Did they know, these men of Gadara, how much they blindly threw away when they preferred their swine to the Saviour?

Jesus Departs. With a sad heart Jesus returned to the ship. He had hardly landed when He was forced to leave without the rest and refreshment so sorely needed. As Jesus entered the ship, the man who owed all to Him came and earnestly pleaded that he might go with his Saviour. He could not bear to leave his newly found Friend and Deliverer. It seemed to him that if he were left behind, among the wild mountains, the evil spirits would return to him. He could not trust himself far from Jesus, and felt that happiness was only to be found in His presence. But Jesus suffered him not. Though the people would not allow Him to remain, the great heart of Jesus was so tender and free from resentment toward them that He would leave behind Him a witness of His power and compassion. So He bade the man go back to his own house and his own friends who would surely listen and to publish in his own city and through the ten cities round about, the great things Jesus had done for him. This was to be his life-work. So the man became an evangelist through all the region of Decapolis and prepared the way and opened the hearts of the people for the return of Jesus.

Quiz. 1. How many demoniacs does Matthew tell us came to Jesus? 2. Why do Mark and Luke only mention the one? 3. How many soldiers are comprised in a Roman legion? 4. Was the keeping of swine a legal occupation in Palestine? 5. Why? 6. Which was of the greater value, one man redeemed or the two thousand swine?

Seed Thoughts. 1. An unclean spirit always gains the mastery of him who harbors it. 2. To possess oneself is better than to have great possessions. 3. The devil is willing to send a legion to capture one soul. 4. Jesus has always been victorious over evil. 5. No man has ever been so under possession of Satan that Jesus cannot free him. 6. It matters not how great or how numerous evil may be, it must yield to our Lord. 7. Every questionable financial deal resolves itself into a choice between swine or a Saviour. 9. Jesus can best place His workers.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

SCRIPTURE SELECTIONS. MARK 6:1-3; JOHN 5:17; 2 THESS. 3:6-13.

Prayer: Put far away from us, O Lord, the spirit of sloth and idleness and give us to see how by useful and fruitful work alone can we bring in the Kingdom of God. And may our work be for something more than the bread which perisheth, even the will of the Father which nourisheth both body and soul into everlasting life; through Jesus Christ our Lord. Amen.

Forth in Thy name, O Lord, I go,
My Daily labor to pursue;
Thee, only Thee, resolved to know
In all I think or speak or do.
The task Thy wisdom hath assigned,
O let me cheerfully fulfill;
In all my works Thy presence find,
And prove Thy good and perfect will.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: As the lesson is topical rather than expository of Scripture, The Time is any time. The Place any place. The Man any man.

Scripture Setting: The great figures of Scripture history are all workers. Abraham (Gen. 13:1-12), Isaac (Gen. 26:14-15), and Jacob (Gen. 30:31-36), were shepherds. Moses was warrior (Exod. 14), and statesman (Exod. 20 and following chapters); as was also David (1 Sam. 18:5; 2 Sam. 5:1-4). Jesus was a carpenter (Mark 6:3). And Paul was a maker of tents (2 Thess. 3:8-10). Peter, Andrew and John were fishermen (Mark 1:16-19). Under the law even a Jewish boy was taught a trade.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Work is a law of life. Upon honest work all progress depends. 2. The man who refuses to work is a parasite upon society and a menace to the social order. 3. Work brings people together in a common enterprise, and where everybody works there is small occasion for friction. 4. It is the idler and the shiftless who make trouble. God can bestow no blessing upon idle hands; His reward is with the faithful and industrious. 5. There is a "labor question," and the only adequate solution is that of religion, which proposes as the fundamental virtues that men shall do justly, love mercy, and walk humbly with God.

WORK THE RULE OF LIFE.

The Scripture Paraphrase. The three passages of Scripture given for study furnish the example of Jesus, who was a carpenter (Mark 6:3), who accepted work as a necessary condition of life and usefulness (John 5:7), and who, through Paul, declares the idle Christian to be a contradiction in terms and a menace to society (2 Thess. 3:6-13). The fact that Jesus was a working man is too often overlooked. His role as the world's Teacher has quite obscured His fellowship with those who work with their hands. And yet the fact has not been without its influence in the history of labor, and His example in a very real way has been a source of comfort to strugglers and toilers in all the Christian centuries.

The Dignity of Labor. The Hebrews, almost alone among the civilized peoples of antiquity, regarded labor as a law of life and therefore to be regarded as a duty and with honor. To the Greeks and Romans all mechanical trade was mean, vulgar, contemptible, and was therefore left to slaves. The Jews, with a true and noble wisdom, enacted that every boy should learn a trade and repeated as a golden maxim the words of one of their wise men, "Labor honors the laborer." Accordingly Plato in his "ideal republic" regards the worker as unfit to have a voice in its management, while the Bible everywhere exalts the fact that its chosen leaders are men with an independent occupation.

Some Hebrew Workers. Abraham moves from spot to spot to feed his cattle, Jacob serves Laban for wages, Moses herds sheep for his father-in-law, and Amos herds cattle and cultivates the fig farm. Peter makes his living as fisherman and Paul maintains himself in the ministry by his income from tent-making.

The Ideal Woman. Perhaps the most striking and beautiful commentary on the Biblical view of work is found in the description of the "virtuous woman" in the book of Proverbs (21:10-31). "She seeketh wool and flax and worketh willingly with her hands; she riseth also while it is yet night to provide for her household; she does the buying and the selling, the planting and the reaping, the weaving and the spinning; she exerciseth herself in the care of the poor and looketh well to the ways of her household; she even finds time to advise with less fortunate neighbors and toward them she openeth her mouth with wisdom, while in her tongue is the law of kindness." Others may acquire wealth or pride themselves upon their beauty, but such a woman as this is to be praised and prized, for her price is beyond rubies.

The Duty and Virtue of Labor. The Bible opens with the picture of our first parents at work in a garden to dress it and keep it; it closes with the picture of a city, the symbol of co-operative life and labor. From the first to last the book recognizes work as the normal rule of life—it has promise of good for industry and limitless woe for idleness. "The hand of the diligent maketh rich, it shall bear rule, it shall be made fat, it tends to plenteousness, it prepares a man to stand before kings." These symbols are material and much of the blessing in the Old Testament is identified with material good. The doom of the idler is poverty and shame. The wise man pictures it in graphic fashion: "I went by the field of the slothful and lo! it was all grown over with thorns, and nettles had covered the face thereof and the stone wall thereof was broken down."

The parables of Jesus are drawn from the busy life of his time and land, and the prevailing teaching, as in the parable of the talents is that industry insures the blessing of God and idleness tends only to eternal loss. Paul, himself a worker, rebukes the Thessalonians for giving up work in anticipation of the impending day of the Lord. He tells them plainly that such conduct is disreputable and displeasing to God, who wants his children, first of all, "to walk honestly toward them that are without," and moreover to have a margin of wealth that they may be able to help those who are in need (1 Thess. 4:11; 2 Thess. 3:12, and Ephes. 4:28).

Duty of Parents. If work is the rule of the normal life, parents do well to see that their children are taught some trade, not only to which they may turn if need arises, but to encourage an intelligent sympathy with labor conditions.

Think Well of Work. The temper which looks down upon work as degrading is neither sensible nor Christian. All honest work is noble and ennobling; the true nobleman is the man who by honorable work honorably done makes a contribution to the welfare of the community of which he is a part.

Employer and Employee. Employer and employee are in reciprocal and not rival relationships. The employer's responsibility does not end when he has paid the wage scale. It is his duty and interest to make the best and most out of the manhood engaged in the work; and a prime condition of any good work is the good will which goes into it. The employer must see that a fair share of the profit is represented in the wages he pays, and the employee should be equally scrupulous about the whole-hearted quality of his work.

Justice Fundamental. Fundamental in this mutual relationship is justice. It is good to be kind; it is better to be just. The bishops of the Methodist Episcopal Church in a recent pastoral to the Church at large made this noble declaration: "While we rejoice in the adoption of all such ameliorative measures as better housing and various forms of social insurance, we call for the more thoroughgoing emphasis of human freedom which will make democratic progress mean the enlargement and enrichment of the life of the masses of mankind through the self-directive activity of men themselves. We favor an equitable wage for laborers which shall have the right of way over rent, interest and profits. We favor collective bargaining as an instrument for the attainment of industrial justice and for training in democratic procedure. And we also favor advance of the workers themselves through profit-sharing, and through positions on boards of directorship. In the discussion of all such matters we urge all individuals and groups to hold fast the tolerance which comes out of mutual respect and to keep always in mind that the richest source of sound idealism is the Gospel of Jesus Christ."

The Moral Value of Work. To save a man from bad habits and to keep him from demoralizing temptations by all means set him to work. "Satan finds some mischief still, for idle hands to do." Idle thinking gravitates to immoral living. The hand of the diligent maketh rich not less in spiritual than in material wealth; the hand of the diligent beareth rule not only in the community but also in the realm of character and conduct.

Quiz and Study. 1. Bring together some of the Bible maxims about Industry and Idleness. 2. What was the Jewish idea of work as contrasted with the Greek and Roman ideas? 3. Which idea is the better for the individual and the state? 4. Should the state require of every citizen work in a gainful occupation? 5. Should the public schools furnish instruction in the mechanic and domestic arts? 6. Has Jesus any message to the industrialism of our day? If so, what is it?

Practical Thoughts. 1. All useful work is noble and ennobling. 2. One ought never to speak of any necessary work as "drudgery" or as "dirty work." 3. One ought never to become so absorbed in making money that he loses interest in the spiritual values of life. 4. Mary Slessor found time to study while working at the loom and to plan her campaign in Africa where she labored successfully for many years. 5. It is the duty of the Christian to see that labor gets its fair share of the fruits of labor. 6. He is the master after Christ's own heart who treats his employees as fellow workers in a worthy cause.

DR. CHARLES M. STUART.

THE POWER OF FAITH.

And, behold,

which was diseased with an issue of blood twelve years,

and

For she said within herself,
If I may but

I shall be whole. But Jesus and when he saw her, he said, Daughter, be of good comfort;

thy faith hath made thee whole.
And
the

was made whole from that hour.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 9:18-25; ALSO MARK 5:21-43, LUKE 8:40-56.

Prayer: Lord, May we come to Thee with confidence. May we come so close to Thee that we too may touch the hem of Thy garment and feel Thy healing power. Increase our faith that in the throng of daily life we may find our way to Thee and seek Thy cleansing touch. In sickness and in death, be Thou our consolation and help. For Thy name's sake, Amen.

The healing of the seamless dress
Is by our beds of pain;
We touch Him in life's throng and press,
And we are whole again.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Autumn of A. D. 28. Place, Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, Jairus, the unknown woman, Peter, James and John and daughter of Jairus.

Scripture Setting: The Power of Faith. Faith as a grain of mustard seed, Luke 17:6. Faith that doubts not, Matt. 21:21-22. Healing power of faith, Acts 14:8-11. Justification by faith, Gal. 3:24. Counted for righteousness, Rom. 4:5. Abraham's faith rewarded, Rom. 4:20-22. Rewards of faith,

Heb. 11:4, 5, 7, 17, 18, 29, 30, 31. Accomplishment of faith, Heb. 11:32-34.

Life and Conduct Setting. In this lesson we have, 1. Two examples of faith. 2. Jairus' belief in the power of Jesus' touch. 3. The greater faith of the woman who believes in power emanating from Jesus' person. 4. Jesus' demand for an open confession of the woman's act of faith. 5. His recognition and reward of her faith. 6. His assurance to Jairus that faith is the only requisite for his daughter's restoration to life.

TWO APPEALS.

Home Again. The other boats that were with Jesus the night before had returned to Capernaum to spread the wonderful tidings of His power over the storm and the morning found many on the shore eagerly looking across the sea for the well-known boat that bore Jesus and His disciples. As it came in sight on its forced return the multitude surrounded Him with curiosity and expectation of some new evidence of His power. The news of His return rapidly spread through the city and in at least two homes where all other help had proved unavailing, the tidings inspired hope and caused Jairus, the ruler of that synagogue in Capernaum, with which we have become so familiar, and a woman who had suffered from a most vexatious disease for twelve years, to go and seek help from the Great Physician. Indeed, Jesus had hardly landed when Jairus came to Him in behalf of his only daughter, who lay at the point of death. One has only to recall how Jesus had been treated by the rabbis in His home city to realize what an effort it must have been for Jairus to humble his pride and overcome his prejudice by asking aid from the One whom even he himself once may have treated with contumely. But Jairus' only little daughter, a girl of twelve, lay in the stupor of death; every other known remedy had failed, and in a time of such extremity what is pride of position or ceremonial?

At Jesus' Feet. Regardless of the curious throng, Jairus pressed his way to Jesus. He was so desperately in earnest that he came out not only as a suppliant, but just as slaves and inferiors prostrate themselves before those of superior rank in all Eastern countries. The proud ruler fell at Jesus' feet and prayed for his little daughter; with a faith born of desperation and a father's anguish, the great strong man begged between sobs, "Come, lay Thy hand upon her and she shall live." Jesus was in the midst of important teaching with a large audience eager to hear, but His readiness to help at any moment is shown when in response to the father's petition, "Jesus arose and followed him and so did His disciples."

A Second Patient. As Jesus went with Jairus, followed by His audience, another applicant for help appeared. She probably had started on the quest for mercy at the same time Jairus did, but though the man had outdistanced the woman, her faith reached beyond his. She had suffered twelve years with an incurable ailment and Mark quaintly tells us she "had suffered many things of many physicians and had spent all she had, and was nothing bettered, but rather grew worse." Any one can easily believe the statement who is at all acquainted with the ignorant and superstitious methods of the "hakims" of that day when the remedies used were often ashes of burnt wolves' skulls, frogs' livers and the eyes of crabs. After enduring all the tortures of such medical treatment for twelve years, might she not have waited a few hours longer till Jesus should be at leisure, instead of interrupting His progress in so imperative an emergency? But as she looks upon Him, the Master's face is incapable of such a thought. She sees the countenance of Jesus, so beautiful in its infinite patience, compassion and tenderness, she notes the love that beams from those penetrating eyes. Her years as a "shut-in" have made her as pale and delicate and shrinking as a lily; she would avoid attracting the attention of the crowd and despite His meek and lowly bearing, she is unable to summon courage to openly throw herself before Him as did the man; so the woman stills her beating heart and says within herself, "If I may but touch His garment I shall be whole."

The Robe of Christ. Jesus wore the least ostentatious form of a rabbi's dress, which consisted of five pieces, a headdress or kind of turban, the kittuna or inner garment, worn by all teachers and without which no one could read or teach the Scriptures in the synagogue; it was a close fitting seamless garment descending to the feet. A girdle at the waist, sandals, and worn over all, a square outer garment with a tassel at each of the four corners, completed the dress. The woman made no effort to arrest Jesus' attention; she was ceremonially unclean and under the Jewish law her touch meant defilement; therefore, stealthily but reverently from behind Him she reached forth a timid hand and just touched the tasseled fringe of His outer garment. Slight as was this appeal of distress, Jesus at once observes it, but important as is His errand to Jairus' house, He does not show the least sign of impatience, haste or desire to be rid of her. True, He "turned about Him in the press and said, Who touched my clothes?" but it was only to give the timid suppliant a chance to receive an open blessing. His disciples had seen nothing of this hasty pantomime, and they naturally pointed to the multitude with the assurance that in the press of the crowd some one must have jostled Him. But the woman knew that her presumption was discovered and shrank farther back in the crowd. Jesus turned about "and when the woman saw that she was not hid, she came trembling, and falling down before Him, she declared unto Him before all the people for what cause she had touched Him." At last had come the courage for the open confession which Jesus desired, and His gentle heart stills her agitation. She is the only woman upon whom Jesus is recorded to have bestowed any epithet but the formal one of "Woman." But He honors her faith and calls this poor, timid, heart-broken woman, so pale and wasted with disease, "Daughter." With delicacy and tenderness He corrects the two mistakes of her faith. "Be of good comfort; thy faith hath made thee whole." Then the woman who had touched His garment knew that it was not from the Christly robe, but from the Saviour that healing had come, and she learned that it was not the touch of the garment, but faith in the Divine Wearer that made whole.

Jesus Again Victor Over Death. The anxious father must have worried over the delay. Even as Jesus pronounced words of comfort to the woman a messenger from Jairus' home brought tidings of the hopelessness of their journey and in a lowered voice exclaimed, "Thy daughter is dead; trouble not the Master." Too late! Oh, in a case of such extreme need why did the Great Physician tarry for the woman? But Jesus' power is great enough for the healing of all who come to Him. He catches the servant's whisper and how is it that he reassures the agitated father? "Fear not; believe only and she shall be made whole." Death is only an incident to the Great Physician. They find the house a house of mourning, filled with relatives, hired mourners, wailing women and musicians, who laugh Him to scorn when He says, "Weep not; she is not dead, but sleepeth." Their worldly wisdom was so great that they knew she was dead.

It is not strange that He asked these unbelievers to retire and entered the death chamber with Peter, James and John and the father and mother, where, with the simple words, "Talitha cumi," Jesus took the little girl by the hand, and in obedience to the command, "Damsel, arise," straightway she arose and walked and partook of the refreshment which Jesus ordered given to her. And relatives and friends, hired mourners and musicians, together with the delighted father and mother, were astonished with a great astonishment. Through all the ages since, the record of the faith of this man and woman has inspired despairing hearts and longing souls to carry their burden to the Great Physician.

Quiz. 1. What was the difference in the approach of Jairus and the woman? 2. Which showed the greater courage? 3. Which manifested the greater faith? 4. Did the delay in reaching Jairus' house cause any injury? 5. In what other instance did Jesus delay going to the dead? 6. What lesson do these two instances teach us?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Jesus is ever ready to leave a multitude to reach one person. 2. One need not wait for a convenient time to seek Jesus. 3. The Ruler of the universe is never too busy to grant an audience to one. 4. Pride and prejudice sink in the storm of grief and loss. 5. The unspoken prayer of the unknown woman is granted as readily as the entreaties of the great ruler. 6. Through her suffering the woman became the daughter of Christ. 7. We have only to touch Jesus to feel His wholeness. 8. Open confession must follow unspoken petition.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

Are not sold for a

and shall not without your Father. But the very of your head are all numbered Fear ye not therefore,

ye are of more value than

Whosoever therefore shall him will I confess also before my Father which is in heaven. But whosoever shall him will I also deny before my Father which is in heaven.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT 10. READ MARK 6:7-13; LUKE 9:1-6.

Prayer: Dear Lord, May all Thy followers help to usher in the Kingdom of God. Increase our faith and courage that we may be more willing to sacrifice our own comfort for the promotion of Thy cause; and may we follow Thy instruction and fulfil Thy mission for us, confessing Thee in all things. For Thy glory, Amen.

A glorious band, the chosen few,
On whom the Spirit came,
Twelve valiant saints, their hope they knew,
And mocked the cross and flame.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting. Time, early in A. D. 29. Place, near Nazareth. Persons, Jesus and the twelve disciples.

Scripture Setting: The Twelve and Their Mission. Jesus appears to them after His resurrection, John 20:19-30. Called by the risen Christ, Mark 16:15. Instructed by Him, Luke 24:45. Given the Holy Spirit, John 20:22. Receive His parting blessing, Luke 24:50. Endued with power, Acts 2:1-4. They are witnesses of Christ, Acts 10:39-42. Their sufferings, 1 Cor. 4:9-13. Receive Heaven's honor, Rev. 21:14.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this address, Jesus defines the duties and privileges of discipleship. 1. To seek the extension of His Kingdom. 2. The sacrifice of personal comfort, pleasure and even financial reward for its advancement. 3. The endurance of persecution and hatred for its sake. 4. His followers must share His cross. 5. The Father's watchful care over His own. 6. The duty and reward of public confession of our Lord.

A GREAT AMBASSADORSHIP.

We have only to study the lives of the twelve Apostles to find what crude material Jesus can use. They were mostly uncultured, illiterate men, often faint-hearted, irresolute and cowardly, but higher honors than any of earth were given them when Jesus sent them forth as His ambassadors. When an ambassador is appointed to any land, he is given special instructions before he departs on his mission. Sometimes these instructions are secret, but Jesus' instruction to the Twelve extends beyond their special mission and even that of the early church, for it sets forth the mission of Christ's church in the world and of His followers throughout all the ages.

The Mission Field. Jesus did not send these beginners far nor was the first journey to be among a hostile people. They were to avoid even the roads that led to the heathen and were forbidden to enter the cities of Samaria. Since Jerusalem and Judea were not to be thought of, they were restricted to Galilee—a territory not so large as a single county in many parts of the United States. Let it not for a moment be supposed that Jesus was less desirous for the salvation of the Gentiles or Samaritans, but they were not ready even for the simple truth which the Twelve might preach, while the Galileans were anxiously seeking help and enlightenment. Jesus sent these beginners to the easiest field of labor and that most apt to be overlooked—the home field. The day would come when they would be free to go to Samaria, but thus early in their ministry they had so little of the spirit of their Master that one would have called down fire from Heaven upon unbelievers, and it required a Heavenly vision to lift prejudice and teach another the universal brotherhood of man.

A young girl once longed to be a foreign missionary. One day while getting a drink of cold water for her grandmother, she broke the handle of the pitcher at the pump and betrayed such irritation as to speak unkindly to the aged saint, when a voice seemed to say to her, "My child, if you have not learned to give a cup of cold water to one of my little ones, how could you give the bread of life to my enemies?"

The Equipment. The disciples were to go out two by two. Thus they could strengthen each other's faith and help each other's failings. How it steadied the fiery, impetuous Peter to be with the thoughtful Andrew. The emotional eloquence of John gained power from the commanding presence of his dignified brother, James. Philip and Bartholomew were kindred spirits; Thomas, slow in faith and slow in speech, was quickened by the devoted Matthew. The impassioned Jude continually gave new courage to his brother, the timid and retiring James; while only the zeal of Simon, the Canaanite, could have fired the halting Judas even to the half-hearted service which finally ended in betrayal. They were to go in trusting faith, with gentle and unswerving courtesy and self-denial. Salutation in that country was accompanied with much useless ceremony. Imagine a busy man taking time to exchange greeting by raising the hand from the heart to the forehead and then placing it in the right hand of the other, and repeating the performance a dozen times or more with each person accosted. If time devoted to business is too valuable to be thus wasted, was not time consecrated to the Master's business far too precious to be squandered in such useless and empty formality? So Jesus forbade such salutation. Wherever they went they were to seek out a home noted for its piety and unless rejected abide till their mission called them elsewhere.

The Mission of His Disciples. An ambassador has authority far above that of any of his fellow countrymen abroad. He is given what are called plenipotentiary powers and is armed with credentials attesting his mission and authority. Jesus gave these ambassadors of His power to heal the sick, cleanse the lepers and cast out devils. Having invested them with such extraordinary powers, Jesus defined their mission. The times were exciting. Galilee had just yielded its martyrs to Roman cruelty. Never had risen such a nation-wide cry for vengeance. Jesus' teaching and miracles were on every tongue, and in all the cities and villages of Galilee the Gospel of the Kingdom was the well-nigh universal topic of conversation. The Twelve were to preach the coming of the Kingdom. The credential of their office was to be their simplicity. They were not even to encumber themselves with a change of raiment or a money girdle. The wearing of heavy shoes was not permitted within the precincts of the temple; every inch of ground covered in behalf of the King's business is as sacred as that of the temple and as a sign of the sacredness of their mission, the Twelve wore not the ordinary heavy traveling shoes, but the palm bark sandals used in temple service. Not even a staff was to hinder their hands from being outstretched to suffering humanity. Never before were ambassadors of a king sent out in like manner as the Twelve, without scrip or purse, staff or shoes, their sandaled feet exposed to the dust; their bodies to sultry heat and tropic storm; their natural wants to the precarious charity of the indifferent. Who would rule with Him must bear His cross.

Dangers Attend the Mission. Their office was without salary or earthly emolument. Even a money girdle was an unnecessary encumbrance and the services of one who did not carry even the ordinary scrip or receptacle in which to store gifts of food sufficient for daily sustenance could not be bought. They could only hope to share the poverty, contumely and sufferings of their King. The world would treat them no better than it did Him. He was sending them out as sheep in the midst of wolves. Then it was, tradition tells us, that eager, impetuous Peter interrupted the discourse with the question, "But how then if the wolves should tear the lambs?" Smiling gently at Peter's fear, Jesus asked him, "Why fear those who could destroy only the body?" Rather were they to fear sin which destroys both body and soul.

The Father's Care. Jesus had stripped them of every earthly hope; cut them off from the reward and honors of men; denied them a scrip and purse, thus showing that His ambassadors are not to seek accumulation of property. He forbade them change of raiment for the gratification of personal comfort; they were not even to lean upon a staff, and by forbidding salutation a ban was placed on the frittering formalities of life. But for every earthly inducement taken away, He gave them a Heavenly reward. He sent them out as defenseless as the birds that fly athwart the heavens. Yet they need not fear. Could there be a life more insignificant in value than that of a sparrow? Why two of these birds sold in the stalls of the market-place for an assarion, or about a third of a penny. Yet not one of these tiny birds fell to the ground without the knowledge of the Father. If God's providence extended over even the smallest of His creatures, would He not care for His own? Are not the children of the Father the very hairs of whose heads are numbered of more value than a world of sparrows? What a lesson of God's care!

There is a Jewish legend of a pious rabbi who had been thirteen years in a cave hiding from his persecutors, when one day he observed that when the bird catcher laid a snare, the birds could only be caught when a voice from Heaven said "Destruction"; and when the Heavenly command was "Mercy" they escaped the snare. So the rabbi came out from his hiding place and served his God openly.

The Highest Honor. Ambassadors ask no higher honor than public recognition. Jesus offered His followers recognition before the Father in Heaven. Loyalty is the supreme test of service—confession of Him by act and word and deed before men. How different from the rabbis who tried to prove from the Scriptures that we might sin, if sin were necessary to save one's life. They had so far forgotten Daniel's brave example that even idolatry was allowed when public acknowledgment of God would endanger one's safety. But Jesus bade his disciples that the only thing to fear was disloyalty and denial of their Lord.

Quiz. 1. On what occasion in the Old Testament were twelve sent out? 2. Had the Twelve received any previous call? 3. When did they receive their final commission? 4. What was their special duty? 5. What great debt do we owe them?

Seed Thoughts. 1. One need not go far to find his mission. 2. The field is His and He will care for its laborers. 3. Every follower of Christ is His ambassador. 4. Most of us have a larger field of endeavor than that assigned the Twelve. 5. The commission of the Apostles is our ordination to service. 6. The disciple who would share his Lord's power must endure His privation. 7. In Heaven's census, the very hairs of our heads are numbered. 8. God knows His own and cares for them. 9. If God be for us, who can be against us?

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

And Jesus went

and there
he

And the passover, a

of the Jews,
was nigh.
When Jesus
then lifted up his eyes, and saw
a great

he saith unto Philip, Whence shall we buy that these may eat? And this he said to prove him: for he himself knew what he would do. Philip answered him, Two hundred pennyworth of bread is not sufficient for them, that every one of them may take a little.

Andrew,
Simon
Peter's brother,
saith unto him, There is here,

which hath

but what are they among so many?

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 6:3-13; ALSO MATT. 14:13-22; MARK 6:32-44;
LUKE 9:6-17.

Prayer: Dear Lord, We rejoice that Thy largess is sufficient for all and to spare. May we be partakers of Thy bounty, and as Thou didst use and multiply the lad's small store, so, we pray Thee, do Thou use and increase our usefulness. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"Since from His bounty I receive Such proofs of love Divine,
Had I a thousand hearts to give,
Lord! they should all be Thine."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 29. Place, Bethsaida Julias, near Capernaum. Persons, Jesus, the disciples and the multitudes.

Scripture Setting: Divine Provision. Israel fed, Ex. 16:13-15, Deut. 8:3. Elijah fed by ravens, I Kings 17:4-6. Elisha feeds one hundred, II Kings 4:42-44. God's provision for the poor, Psa. 132:15. His universal providence, Psa. 136:25.

Life and Conduct Setting: The miracle of the loaves and fishes shows: 1. Jesus' compassion for the multitude. 2. His ability to meet every possible human need. 3. That nothing is too scant and naught too poor to serve His purpose. 4. His Divine example of returning thanks to God for daily food. 5. The sufficiency and bounty of His provision. 6. The duty of economy. 7. His miraculous power to meet the demands of human nature.

A WONDERFUL FEAST.

Sad Tidings. About the time the Twelve returned from their mission, the disciples of John the Baptist came to Jesus with the sad tidings of his martyrdom. The inhabitants of every village, far and near, turned out to hear Jesus and to witness His wonderful works. Many companies or caravans, en route to Jerusalem to the feast of the pass-over, improved the opportunity to stop and see and hear the great Prophet whose fame had spread throughout the land. In fact "many were coming and going and they had no leisure so much as to eat."

The disciples were weary and perplexed. The news of John's death had not only filled the little company with sorrow for the fate of the preacher of righteousness, but with apprehension for the safety of Jesus. Already Herod saw in this new prophet, John the Baptist come to life. There was danger that the people, exasperated by John's martyrdom, should attempt to crown Jesus as King, while the Jewish authorities were plotting His death. Feeling the need of His own withdrawal and desiring rest and solitude for His disciples, Jesus said, "Come ye yourselves apart into a desert place and rest awhile."

Plans Frustrated. Accordingly they took ship and crossed the lake to a desert place near the city of Bethsaida Julias, where quiet glens and green sloping hills offered a refuge from the throngs. But their hope was vain. Both their departure and destination were soon known. It was only six miles and the crowd immediately set out to go around the lake by land. Others joined them from the near-by villages; some even ran all the way afoot, reaching their destination before the One they sought. As the boat touched the shore, what a sight met Jesus' gaze; thousands of great strong men, besides women and children all awaiting His coming. They had even brought the sick. The desert sweep, the wandering people without provisions, reminded Jesus of sheep without a shepherd, and as the Good Shepherd He willingly abandoned His purpose of rest and retirement, and healed the sick by word or touch as He moved amid the throng. Then ascending the hillside with the Twelve, Jesus gathered the vast throng to Him and spoke to them on the all absorbing theme of the Kingdom of God.

An All Day Sermon. All day long they listened to the marvelous story that has never grown old, forgetting even hunger and thirst under the spell of His teaching. What were bread or meat compared to the truths unfolded to them? They were on the borderland of that Heavenly Kingdom where physical wants sink into nothingness. The afternoon shadows lengthened and it became a matter of anxiety with the disciples how the people, who in their haste had come without provisions, were to be fed, for nothing was to be had in this desert place. They had tarried so long hearing the word, that it was now too late for them to reach their homes. In their anxiety the disciples' ears were deaf to the truths that came like pearls from the lips of their Master, else they would have known that His Divine power would be sufficient for the emergency. To test their faith, Jesus asked, "Philip, whence shall we buy bread that these may eat?"

A Perplexing Problem. The question was to test their reliance upon Him and also an intimation that His Divine power would be sufficient for the occasion. But Philip, who understood neither that power or the purpose of the query, replied, "Two hundred denarii" (about thirty dollars' worth) "of bread is not sufficient for them that every one may take a little." Philip repeated Jesus' question to Andrew, while their Master declared the Heavenly Father's loving care and providence to the multitude. How were they to satisfy the appetites of five thousand hearty men beside all the women and children? It would require all of Philip's estimate—two hundred denarii—if Jesus wanted them to feed all those people. Judas, who carried the money bag, counted their small capital and according to his computation it did not reach that amount.

An Utter Impossibility. They spent much thought and several anxious hours planning a way out of the difficulty when all the while Jesus stood ready to meet the emergency. They even brought their poor selfish plan to Jesus, and said, "This is a desert place and the time is now past;" as though Jesus did not know the desert, and as if he did not hold all time in His hands. Then followed the suggestion, "Send the multitude away, that they may go into the villages and buy themselves victuals." Quietly the Master says, "They need not depart; give ye them to eat." The disciples were perplexed and almost irritated by His words, and only Judas, as he showed Jesus the almost empty money bag, could have made that impertinent reply, "Shall we go and buy two hundred denarii of bread, and give them to eat?" Surely the Master must see the absurdity of His demand. It was then He asked a still greater impossibility. They were not to buy, but to share their own store with all those thousands! How many loaves had they? Andrew replied, "There is a lad here which hath five barley loaves and two small fishes, but what are they among so many?"

The Master's Way. A conviction of His power to perform the impossible and supply every human need must have dawned upon the Twelve, as with quiet authority He commanded the loaves and fishes to be brought to Him, for there was neither query nor protest when Jesus told them to seat the people. Ah, they never forgot that scene, the expanse of luxuriant green grass, and the people seated in orderly groups of fifty or a hundred; and in the gay red, blue and yellow colors which Orientals wear, looking to imaginative Peter for all the world like a multitude of flower beds on the green turf. Every eye was bent on the one central figure. Around Him stood His disciples. Before Him the little lad with the basket containing the scanty store of five barley loaves and two small fishes.

The People Fed. "Jesus took the loaves and when He had given thanks, He distributed to the disciples, and the disciples to them that were set down; and likewise of the fishes as much as they would."

It was all done systematically. The barley loaves were the usual thin cakes, such as are still eaten in the East, one of which is hardly sufficient for one person. They were a coarse food, eaten only by the poorest people. The fish were a peculiar kind of small fish, very like our sardines. Small as was the amount and inferior as was its quality, under the Divine touch of Jesus it was multiplied until the five thousand men, the women and children were fed, and so delicious did it prove that the appetites of all were satisfied.

His Provision Greater Than the Need. After all were fed, Jesus bade His disciples gather up the fragments that nothing be lost, and there were twelve baskets full left over from the feast. It was not only a lesson in Divine economy, but Jesus' method of reproving the Twelve for their doubt of His power to care for all who come to Him.

As the Twelve presented themselves, each carrying a basket of fragments, they needed no word of reproof from Jesus. The rebuke was hidden in the miracle each bore in his own wicker basket. As the fed multitude watched the disciples go from company to company gathering up the fragments, the contrast between the five barley loaves and two small fishes was so great we do not wonder that word ran through the ranks: "This is truly the Prophet, the One who should come into the world."

Quiz: 1. Where and how many did Elisha miraculously feed? 2. In this narrative, what impresses you most concerning the disciples? 3. Upon what later occasion did Jesus manifest His miraculous power in feeding His disciples with bread and fishes? 4. Upon what other occasion did He feed the multitude? 5. What lesson may we learn from this miracle?

Seed Truths. 1. Jesus is as compassionate today as when He taught the multitude. 2. Jesus was never too weary to instruct those who came to Him. 3. As in nature, so in His miracles, Jesus worked systematically. 4. Our Lord is sufficient to supply every need. 5. His disciples had only to furnish the few loaves and fishes, Jesus did the rest. 6. His providence is so great that it always exceeds the need. 7. Every harvest is nature's miracle of the loaves and fishes, whereby God provides for His creatures; we see it in the seed that is multiplied a thousand fold; in the tiny grains of seed wheat which provides bread for the millions.

MARGARET WINTINGER.

JESUS WALKING ON THE SEA.

And straightway Jesus constrained his disciples to get and to go before him unto the other side, while he sent the

And when he had sent the multitudes
away,
he went apart

to

and when the evening was come,
he was there alone.
But the

was now in the midst of the sea,

for the wind
was contrary.
And in the fourth watch of the night Jesus went unto them,

And when the disciples saw him walking on the sea, they were troubled, saying,
It is a spirit;
and they cried
out for fear.

JESUS WALKING ON THE SEA.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 14:22-32; ALSO MARK 6:45-52, AND JOHN 6:15-25.

Prayer: Lord, We thank Thee that in darkness and tempest we may hear Thy voice saying "It is I, be not afraid." We know that in storm and trouble Thou dost walk the sea as of old, and in the dark hours of life we would recognize and welcome Thee. May we keep eyes and heart fixed upon Thee, lest we perish. For Thy name's sake, Amen.

God moves in a mysterious way
His wonders to perform;
He plants his footsteps in the sea
And rides upon the storm.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Early in April, A. D. 29. Place, The Sea of Galilee. Persons, Jesus and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: God in the Storm. Commands the storm, Psa. 107:25-30. Winds obedient to Him, Psa. 148:8. A Refuge from the storm, Isa. 25:4. God's power in the storm, Jonah 1:4-9. The Lord governs the storm, Nahum 1:3-4. God saves from the storm, Acts 27:20-24.

Life and Conduct Setting: The lesson reveals, 1. Our Lord's absence of earthly ambition. 2. His habit of prayer. 3. His power not only to command the sea, but to make it a royal highway. 4. The amazement of His disciples. 5. He would cast out fear wherever He is. 6. The overconfidence of Peter, which is soon followed by doubt and distress.

JESUS WALKS UPON THE WAVES.

Refuses a Crown. The miracle of the loaves and fishes produced a profound impression on the multitude. Here was a prophet like Moses, who also fed the people in the wilderness. So great was their enthusiasm that they even contemplated making Him a king by force. Far as it was from His teaching the plan even appealed to the Twelve, but their Master constrained them to enter into the ship, directing them to cross the lake toward Bethsaida. "Then Jesus, perceiving that they were about to come and to take Him by force that they might make Him a king, withdrew again into the mountain Himself alone." Thus did Jesus refuse a crown and teach His disciples the emptiness of earthly honors.

A Mountain Altar. Do we ask why Jesus sent the multitude away and climbed the steep of the mountain after a laborious day of teaching and miracle working? Matthew tells us He withdrew to pray. The great mountain top was the altar of Jesus' temple of the night, where with the stars as the only onlookers, He poured out His soul to the Father. In the seclusion of the mountain and amid its grandeur, He continued in prayer from evening till almost dawn.

During one of the crucial battles of the Civil War, President Lincoln spent the night in prayer. He could not withdraw to a mountain, but alone in his office in the White House he prayed till early morn for the preservation of the Union. Gen. Sickles, who saw Mr. Lincoln that morning, tells us that a holy light on his face lit the usually sad countenance with a strange joy and confidence.

In Deadly Peril. Meanwhile a sudden storm had arisen on the lake. Fierce sweeping winds from the surrounding hills rushed howling down the ravines and struck the lake, soon converting it into a boisterous sea. The wind seemed to come from every quarter; the waves were fierce and high. His disciples were alone on the lake and all their skill as Galilean fishermen and sailors availed little. Fearing for the safety of the careening craft, they had taken in their sail and resorted to the oars. Oh that the Master were with them to quiet the storm! In the darkness that enshrouded them they did not know that high on the mountain, Himself facing the howling tempest, Jesus saw the belabored little craft in the seething, foaming lake; that even while He was bowed in prayer and as the fierce winds blew, Jesus was conscious of the careening boat. They were hidden in the darkness and because they could not see Him, they did not realize that they were as safe as if Jesus were in the boat. The Master on the mountain top was not so far from His followers in the tempestuous sea below as to be ignorant of their danger. Even amid storm and darkness they could not drift beyond His love and care. Hours passed and still the storm continued in unmitigated fury. It was now the fourth watch and the morning would soon dawn; though they had rowed for eight long hours, so slow had been their progress that only three miles had been made. It was just half the distance across the lake.

An Unseen Friend. They did not know that Jesus saw and pitied them nor did they know that help was so near. Strengthened by communion with the Father, Jesus rose and gazed across the inky sea. Darkness and light were the same to the All-seeing One, and plainly He saw the imperiled disciples. In that dark hour they were dearer to Him than they knew. Small as was the

CHRIST AND ST. PETER

BY PLOCKHORST

After Christ had fed the multitude on the five loaves and two fishes, He sent His disciples away in a boat on the sea, while He dismissed the people. Later in the night, when the boat was tossed about, in the midst of the sea, by a great storm, which arose suddenly, the disciples were in distress. Jesus came to them walking on the water, which alarmed them still more, as they thought Him a spirit. But He cried out: "It is I, be not afraid." Recognizing Him, Peter, the impulsive one, exclaimed, "If it be Thou, bid me come to Thee on the water." Receiving permission to do so, Peter walked on the water toward Christ. But the wild sea frightened him, so he commenced to sink and had to call for help. Christ drew him out, saying: "O thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?"

As Plockhorst follows the manner of the finished school of Germany, Christ's figure is naturally monumental and Peter is in the usual draped coat. Though not exactly realistic, it is very effective. The disciples left in the half-wrecked boat are crying out and gesticulating with excitement. Christ's reproachful face and uplifted hand, and Peter's pleading attitude, tell well the story, and the wild sea and wrecked sails speak eloquently of the situation.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

CHRIST AND ST. PETER

little craft, it contained the nucleus of that church which was to extend to the uttermost parts of the earth and take the world for Christ's own Kingdom. Truly they did not know the measure of His love; they did not realize their value in the eyes of God whose Kingdom they were to establish or they would have been assured of their own safety.

A great ship bound for the Orient was grappling with a terrible storm. The passengers were on deck preparing to leave the ship. All were frightened save one. He walked with certainty and his very presence inspired confidence. "Why are you not sharing the general panic?" asked the captain. "When I was a child, God called me to preach the Gospel to His children in darkness. I am now bound for my field of labor. He who called me to be His missionary has stilled the sea before this and He will do it again. I know He will not suffer me to be lost," was the reply, when so suddenly as to seem a miracle, the wind changed and the gallant ship rode the storm and arrived safely in port.

Jesus Appears. Anxiously the disciples peer through the thick sky and scan the waters. Suddenly these strong men are frozen with terror. Through the darkness they see something more awe-inspiring than the tempest. Can it be? Yes, it is a human form approaching them. Calmly it treads the raging sea and at each footfall the furious waves subside into calm so that the strange apparition leaves behind it a smooth and shining path. All witness the spectacle. Never had mortal eyes looked on the sight before. They have not yet outgrown the superstition of the Galilean peasantry and they do not doubt that it is a spirit. It seems about to pass by the ship, when they cry out in terror at the sight. And through the darkness and storm comes the well remembered and beloved voice speaking the words that since that eventful night have stilled many a storm and steadied many a life bark. "It is I; be not afraid." It is Jesus and their terror is changed to wonder and joy.

Peter's Impetuosity. Then He comes toward the ship, but Peter, whose nature is as tempestuous and unstable as the sea, cannot await His coming. "Lord," he exclaimed, "if it be Thou, bid me come to Thee on the water." "Come," said Jesus. With characteristic boldness and impetuosity Peter immediately stepped over the side of the boat and into the troubled sea. When the Master said "Come," He gave Peter His own supernatural power. As long as His eyes were fixed on Jesus the boisterous waves could not harm him; he found himself upborne and able to do even as his Master had. But suddenly he looked down at the tempestuous water, saw the dashing billows and inky blackness beneath his feet; then fear, that arch enemy of faith, entered and took possession of his soul. In less than an instant he was sinking. Though a strong swimmer, he could not even swim. He could only cry, "Lord, save me." But even though the peril comes from our own presumption and lack of faith, no one ever calls on the Lord in vain. Immediately Jesus stretched forth His hand and caught him and said unto him, "Oh, thou of little faith, wherefore didst thou doubt?" And with his hand in the Master's, Peter walked the waves humbly as a child who had been rebuked; and the Lord and His boastful, abashed disciple entered the ship together. Immediately the wind ceased and without an effort of the oars they were at their destination. If we had been there I am sure we should have done as did all in the vessel, for they fell at His feet and worshiped Him, saying, "Of a truth Thou art the Son of God." He had proven that He holds the laws of nature in the hollow of His hand and that even the sea was subservient to Him.

Quiz 1. How does this miracle differ from Jesus' former miracle of the sea? 2. Which was the greater? 3. Why did Jesus refuse to be a king? 4. Do you think Jesus needed to pray? 5. Why did Peter sink beneath the waves? 6. What lesson do we learn from His failure?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Amid all our perils, Jesus watches over us from the Mount of God. 2. Though we see Him not, He never loses sight of us. 3. He who asks least and communes most, prays most like Jesus. 4. If we would but open our eyes in the hour of distress and danger, we would see Jesus walking the waves of every trouble. 5. Ofttimes His approach seems a new and greater peril, because we fail to recognize Him. 6. We may hear His voice through the gloom saying "It is I; be not afraid." 7. If we fix our eyes on Jesus, we too may walk the stormiest seas of life.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

JESUS, THE BREAD OF LIFE.

Then Jesus said unto them, Verily, verily, I say unto you, gave you

not
that but my Father giveth you the true bread from heaven. For the bread of God is he which

and giveth life
unto
the

Then said they unto him, Lord, evermore give us this bread. And Jesus said unto them,
I am the bread of life: he that shall never and he that believeth on me shall never

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 6:22-51.

Prayer: Dear Lord, we come to Thee, for Thou art the Bread of Life and the source of all good. We thank Thee for the abundance of Thy blessings, but our hearts are hungry for Thee. We want to know Thee better and grow more and more in Thy likeness. Help us in all things to put the spiritual above the temporal; the eternal above the passing things of time and sense, and by faith in Thee inherit eternal life. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

We taste Thee, O Thou Living Bread,
And long to feast upon Thee still;
We drink of Thee, the Fountain Head,
And thirst our souls from Thee to fill.

Our restless spirits yearn for Thee,
Where'er our changeful lot is cast;
Glad when Thy gracious smile we see,
Blest when our faith can hold Thee fast.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Early in April, A. D. 29. Place, the synagogue, Capernaum. Persons, Jesus and His hearers.

Scripture Setting: The Bread of Life. The true bread, Deut. 8:3. The bread that satisfieth not, Isa. 55:1, 2. Hunger of soul satisfied, Psa. 107: 8, 9. The blessedness of spiritual hunger, Matt. 5:6. His children neither hunger nor thirst, Isa. 49:10. The body and blood of Christ, Luke 22:19, 20. A type of Christ, I Cor., 10:16. Fed by the Lamb of God, Rev. 7:16, 17.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this discourse Jesus demands, 1. Disinterested service on the part of His followers. 2. That man's chief aim shall not be for material benefits. 3. Declares Himself the Bread of Life. 4. That He alone can satisfy all spiritual need. 5. His power to bestow eternal life. 6. Foretells His sacrifice and death.

BREAD THAT SATISFIES.

An Important Discourse. In the synagogue built by the centurion whose servant He had healed; its chief ruler, Jairus, whose daughter had even been raised from the dead, and in the city which had been the scene of so many of His miracles, Jesus gave one of the most important and marvelous discourses ever delivered. The multitude whom Jesus had sent away after the miracle of the loaves and fishes, hoped for still further manifestation of His power, in which they might profit and remained in the neighborhood of Bethsaida Julias expecting to find Him somewhere in the vicinity the next morning. Disappointed in this, they took boats and crossed the lake to Capernaum, where they found Him calmly teaching in the synagogue. Perhaps rumors of the miracle of walking on the water had reached them and prompted the question, "Rabbi, when comest Thou hither?"

An Open Rebuke. Instead of replying to their question, Jesus rebuked them for their mercenary motives in seeking Him. They sought Him not because of the Divine power which His miracles attested, but for the gratification of physical and material desire. They thought only of the loaves with which they had been filled. If He were the promised Messiah, He would enable them to triumph over the hated Romans and restore the garden of Eden where the fruit trees and harvest fields would every day or at least every week or so yield their abundance; the grain to stand like palm trees and to yield its harvest without labor. They would eat and drink, live magnificently all their days in houses built of the most precious jewels, loll in beds of silk and lave in rivers flowing with wine and oil. His miracles only indicated to them His power to create such a magic paradise and that is why they wished to make Him King. If He could not fulfill their corrupt desire they would have nothing of Him.

A Higher Aim. But Jesus sought to make it plain that He came for a higher purpose. He had given them bread to nourish their bodies, thus ministering to their temporal life. But now He urges them not to hold paramount perishable food of the body, but to seek earnestly for "that meat which endureth unto everlasting life" and He intimates that He can give them that spiritual food which will impart everlasting life. His hearers at once saw that He alluded to some religious duty, although they failed to understand what it was. They were already overburdened with forms and tithes which the rabbis had laid upon them; however, if Jesus had some additional precepts they were willing to add them to the long catalogue of religious formalism if thereby they might become entitled to citizenship in the new Kingdom. But instead of loading them with additional duties, Jesus startled them by His reply to their query, "What shall we do that we might work the works of God?" For He tells them all they need to do is to believe on Himself as sent from God. Not content with His previous manifestations of power, they demanded a still greater sign. The lintel of the door of that ancient synagogue of Capernaum has been discovered among the ruins recently unearthed and it bears the device of a pot of manna with a flowing pattern of leaves and cluster of grapes. Someone, perhaps an opposing rabbi who has just passed under that lintel, is reminded of the miracle of which it is a symbol, and he breaks in upon the discourse. By what sign can you attest your claim? Moses gave our fathers bread from Heaven to eat all the time they were in the wilderness, which was surely a greater miracle than feeding the multitude last night.

A Momentous Declaration. Quickly Jesus dispels their error. The bread from Heaven was not the gift of Moses, but of God and He further states, "The bread of God is He which cometh down from Heaven and giveth life unto the world." Ah, who does not want to live? Who does not seek life? No wonder that many voices now cry, "Lord, evermore give us this bread." What were a few barley loaves in comparison to a bread that would make them immortal? Silence falls upon the multitude, the very air of the synagogue is pregnant with import as Jesus quietly faces them and from His lips comes the startling declaration, "I am the Bread of Life: he that cometh to Me shall never hunger and he that believeth in Me shall never thirst." All whom the Father gives will come to Him, and no hungering, thirsting soul will be cast out of His Kingdom. Just as He saved the little band of disciples from the storm and peril so He will succor and sustain all His followers throughout the ages to come and none shall be lost. The Father "had sent Him down from Heaven to do His will, and it is the will of the Father that every one which seeth the Son and believeth on Him may have everlasting life, and I will raise him up at the last day."

The Challenge. So bold a claim had never been heard in the synagogue. It created a stir that penetrated the woman's gallery and extended to the rear seats, where Jesus' words aroused eager hope and desire. But from the rabbis and those who sat in the high seats of the synagogue came a contemptuous denial, "He styles Himself the Heaven-sent Messiah, when He is only a carpenter's son and He came from Nazareth. Surely He should go farther from home to declare His Heavenly origin. Is not this Jesus the son of Joseph, whose father and mother we know?" But he met these skeptics as He always did, with a bolder challenge and a stronger and more fearless assertion of the truth they had rejected. "Murmur not among yourselves. Verily, verily, I say unto you, he that believeth on Me hath everlasting life. I am that Bread of Life." Then he reminded them that the manna had no life-giving power, since their fathers did eat manna in the wilderness and are dead. They who eat the Bread from Heaven shall not die. Then came the startling declaration that that bread was His flesh which He would give for the life of the world. Thus he pointed to His death when He should give His life and body for the spiritual life of men, as bread is given for the bodily life. The use of the term "eating" as a symbol of complete receptiveness and acceptance of spiritual truth was a familiar form of Jewish teaching, and those who heard Him as readily understood as when we speak of "devouring" a book or "drinking" in a sermon. But they were determined neither to see nor accept the truth, and therefore only wrangled over the idle question, "How can this man give us His flesh to eat?"

Partakers of Christ. Solemnly and with the vision of His own death on the cross before Him, Jesus gives a stronger meaning to the truth He is trying to impress upon them, "Except ye eat the flesh of the Son of Man and drink His blood ye have no life in you." We must take on ourselves His flesh; we, too, must share His weariness and hunger; we must wear the crown of thorns; bear the nail prints and even suffer crucifixion in the work He has for us, and we will only have the power to do this when we have partaken of His Divine nature. There must be a transfusion of His blood of sacrifice ere we may suffer and serve as He served.

Thus in one sentence Jesus dashed away all their hopes of earthly comfort and enjoyment of physical pleasure and earthly advancement. He assures them that hard as is the sacrifice which is asked of those who would be citizens of the new Kingdom His flesh and His blood are sufficient. He always comes to us with an open hand to receive our sacrifice; the reward is ever in His outstretched right hand. Then He offers the reward. It is not earthly honor or position; nor material wealth or physical gratification. With wondrous softness and sweetness the words penetrate every corner of the old synagogue, "He that eateth My flesh and drinketh My blood dwelleth in Me and I in him."

Quiz. 1. Where did the people find Jesus? 2. What did they expect of Him? 3. What book in the Old Testament contains frequent references to the Divine law as food and drink? 4. What was the effect of Jesus' discourse?

Seed Truths. 1. Unbelief even crops into the synagogue. 2. Those who seek Jesus for the loaves and fishes always go away disappointed. 3. Jesus is not only the life-giving Bread but the living Bread. 4. As natural bread when eaten and assimilated is the means of perpetuating bodily life, so Christ received by faith is the living Bread that perpetuates the soul life. 5. In the wilderness of this world Jesus stands ready to feed us with the Bread of life as He fed the multitude in the desert with the loaves and fishes.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE GENTILE WOMAN'S FAITH.

And from thence he arose, and went into the borders of

and entered and would have no man know it:

but he could not be hid.
For a certain whose young daughter had an unclean spirit, heard of him, and came and

The woman was a Greek,
a Syrophenician by nation;
and she besought him that he would cast forth the devil out of her daughter. But Jesus said unto her, Let the children first be filled: for it is not meet to take the children's bread, and to

And she answered and said unto him, Yes, Lord:
yet the eat of the children's crumbs. And he said unto her, For this saying go thy way; the devil is gone out of thy daughter. And when she was come to her house, she found the devil gone out, and her

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 7:24-30; ALSO MATT. 15:21-28.

Prayer: Dear Lord, Teach us to pray; give us faith to approach Thee with confidence. May we be importunate and persevering in prayer. Behind Thy silence may we see Thy love and compassion and when Thou seemest not to answer, may we learn the lesson Thou wouldst teach us. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"Did ever mourner plead with Thee
And Thou refuse that mourner's plea?
Does not the word still fixed remain,
That none shall seek Thy face in vain?"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 29. Place, Galilee, bordering Tyre and Sidon. Persons, Jesus, His disciples and a Gentile woman.

Scripture Setting: Requisites of Prayer. True prayer will be heard, Psa. 145:18-19. Importunity in prayer, Luke 11:5-11. Persistent prayer, Luke 18:1-7. Perseverance and watchfulness necessary,

Col. 4:2. Those who pray must not doubt, James 1:6-7. The prayer of faith, Heb. 11:6.

Life and Conduct Setting: This narrative teaches us: 1. That God is not a respecter of persons. 2. That the prayer of the humble and needy will be heard. 3. The kind of a prayer that is sure to prevail with God. 4. An example of faith. 5. That faith makes prayer mighty and victorious.

THE WOMAN WHO PREVAILED.

The Heroine. We know so little about her and yet we know her so well. It begins so exactly like a story "A certain woman." In the nearly two thousand years that have passed since, we have never discovered her name, and though Matthew and Mark tell all we know about her in a few verses, we feel better acquainted with her than almost any other woman associated with Jesus' life. We have a trace of the same blood as hers, in our own veins. She was not only a Gentile but she belonged to an accursed race; she was a woman of Canaan, and being a Syrophenician and a Greek, she belonged to an ancient race which overran the shores of Tyre and Sidon and planted colonies in Spain and Britain, thus establishing a distant kinship with our Anglo-Saxon race. She dwelt within sight of Lebanon's eternal snows and ancient cedars, and in the neighborhood of those who worshiped the true God. It is evident she had ceased to be an idolator. So much we know of the woman to whom, from that day to this, everyone must go to school, who will learn how to pray.

Among the Heathen. Jesus again sought rest and seclusion for Himself and the Twelve by retiring to the northern extremity of Palestine. Across the uplands with their near view of the snow-capped Lebanon; through the many wooded valleys of these highland regions, a two day's journey brought them to the hills at whose feet lay the plains of Tyre. Here Jesus may have looked down on the smoking chimneys of the glass works of Sidon and of the dye works of Tyre. He may even have seen the long rows of warehouses filled with the merchandise of the world, the mansions and palaces, the public buildings, temples, palm groves and gardens of this land of surpassing beauty and depravity. And its merchants and chief citizens never dreamed as they watched the white wings of the many ships of commerce, that centuries hence, when all the splendor, magnificence and glory of their cities had departed and they were forgotten, the story of an unknown woman of their race would be read in distant lands, far beyond the great seas, carrying its blessed message to countless millions.

In Deep Affliction. An unknown home gladly welcomed Jesus and offered privacy and retirement, "But he could not be hid." Even under the shadow of Mount Lebanon, they come to beseech Him for help. This time it was a woman in deep affliction. Her daughter was a victim of a demoniac possession, a peculiar disease not uncommon in that country. She had doubtless heard something of Jesus, the Prophet, and learning that He was in the neighborhood, maternal solicitude drove her to Him to implore help for her child. She met Jesus on the highway. She did not venture near Him. Perhaps she remembered that she was a Gentile, and He a Jew. In the eyes of a Jew, a Canaanite was as a dog. Something in her heart told her that despite her race He would not refuse the prayer of a broken-hearted mother. It is the only instance in all Jesus' ministry of His apparent disregard of a petitioner. We may be sure there was a tremendous reason for His peculiar reception of this woman's request. Our Lord does not try needlessly, nor disguise His loving intent unless for some great purpose. May not Jesus have perceived her faith even as he recognized the guilelessness of the approaching Nathaniel? The world knew not how to pray. It needed to learn the lesson. Here was one who understood the art, and throughout all the ages to come, her anguished heart and voice should teach His followers the secret of true prayer.

A Model Prayer. She prayed, though she was not encouraged by gracious word or look. Behold her humility and earnestness. A sense of her inferiority withheld her from coming near the Holy One, yet her intensity and earnestness overcame womanly timidity and she cried out to Jesus on the public highway. Her soul's desire and a burden of sorrow were revealed in her first words. She besought Him reverently, as the Son of David, the Christ of God. She did not doubt His Divinity or His power to save, while unselfishness was so blended in her prayer that she made another's misfortune her own. She prayed, "Have mercy on me, O Lord, thou Son of David. My daughter is grievously vexed with a devil." She was not disheartened though she received no answer or encouragement; she only prayed with greater insistency, following after Jesus and framing her desire in the fewest words possible continued to cry, "Have mercy on me." The disciples failed to recognize the lesson which their Master would teach them through this woman and only found annoyance in the scene. Impatient of her persistency, they besought Jesus to send her away and stop her crying after them. Let Him give her an answer; either grant or deny her request so they might be at peace.

Still She Prays. Of all Jesus miracles, this for the Gentile woman was Martin Luther's favorite, and when he too would prevail with God, Luther would read this story. Surely it required faith to meet such an apparently cold refusal. "I am not sent but to the lost sheep of the house of Israel." The disciples understood that the woman's request was denied; they did not perceive the rebuke to themselves that lay in the words, which were only an expression of their own narrow thought. But this woman of prayer who had never met Him before, understood Jesus better than His own chosen disciples. Her faith grew stronger under trial that would have utterly extinguished that of an ordinary believer. She even found encouragement in a reply that silenced His closest disciples and forgetting her unworthiness, drew near to Him and fell at His feet worshipping Him. Ah, she was willing to prostrate and abase herself, for she knew that the One to whom she made her prayer was infinitely more than a mere man. He had become her Lord and her God. Jesus neither reproves her, nor does He accept her worship. He is silent. Then a mother's anguished soul voices itself in the pitiful cry, "Lord, help me."

A Faith that Stands the Test. Surely the One who stilled the sea at a like cry from the lips of His disciples will respond to that appeal. It expresses all the desire, helplessness, and misery in her mother heart. But Jesus sees beneath the rolling billows that disturb her soul, a priceless gem which once displayed, will illumine the discouraged hearts of the centuries—an unconquerable faith in the power of Christ—and He would give this to the world. So He answers, "Let the children first be filled; for it is not meet to take the children's bread and cast it to the dogs." It was a homely reference to the troops of vagrant dogs everywhere encountered, and who came in at the open door at meal time to pick up the fragments which were always to be found where only the fingers were used at table.

As the disciples read His message it meant that Jesus' mission must be confined to the Jews who were peculiarly God's children, while the Gentiles, who were held as dogs in Jewish estimation, must wait for His mercy. How it must have hurt the tender-hearted Jesus to use such words to the agonized suppliant at His feet. But He will not suffer any to be tempted above what they are able to bear and He knows this woman's faith will stand the test. Many, even if they had persevered thus far, would now have gone away in anger and despair at words that were calculated to extinguish all hope, but her faith grows stronger by the discouragement she encounters. She does not cease to pray. He had called her a dog; very well, in that name she will make a fresh appeal. If only she may enter the household of faith, she will willingly occupy its lowest place. "Yes, Lord, yet the dogs under the table eat of the children's crumbs."

Faith Triumphant. Could we but have been with Jesus that day, we would have witnessed a marvelous change; we would have seen His face before so impassive, now grow alight with approval. She who stood every test of her Lord, who has proved herself the model suppliant, may now retire with a title above all scholastic degrees, bestowed upon her by Christ himself. O woman of great faith! Yes, and she shall be recompensed for all that cruel testing time. Her heart's desire is granted. "Be it unto thee even as thou wilt. Go thy way; the devil is gone out of thy daughter."

Quiz. 1. What was the Gentile woman's greatest characteristic? 2. What other instances of woman's faith do we find in the Gospels? 3. Did Jesus really mean to refuse this mother's petition? 4. Why do you think He waited so long ere He granted her request?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Few of His disciples have Jesus' compassion. 2. Jesus, the burden bearer of humanity, cannot resist an appeal that comes from a mother's burdened heart. 3. She who asked for a crumb received a whole loaf. 4. No one ever appeals to His love and compassion in vain. 5. Faith, humility and earnestness are the requisites of prayer.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

SEEING AND CONFESSING CHRIST.

And he cometh to Bethsaida; and they

and besought him to touch
him.
And
he took

and led him

and when he had spit on his eyes,
and he asked him if he saw ought. And he looked up, and said, I see

After
that he put his hands again

and made him look up:
and he was restored,
and saw every man clearly. And he sent him away to his saying, Neither go into the town, nor tell it to any in the town.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 8:22-26.

Prayer: Lord, We thank Thee that those who come to Thee are made to see; that they are brought from darkness into Thy marvelous light. Dispel the darkness and open our blind eyes that we may see Thee as Thou art: the fairest among ten thousand and altogether lovely, so shall our faith and love grow strong. For Thy name's sake we ask it, Amen.

Jesus, didst Thou condescend
When veiled in human clay,
To heal the sick, the lame, the blind,
And drive disease away?

And didst Thou pity mortal woe,
And sight and health restore?
Then pity, Lord, and save my soul
Which needs Thy mercy more.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Summer of A. D. 29. Place, Bethsaida Julias. Persons, Jesus and the blind man.

Scripture Setting: From Darkness to Light. Those in darkness see light, Isa. 9:2. Jesus the Light, Isa. 42:6-7 and John 8:12. An armor of light, Rom. 13:12. Darkness and light contrasted, 2 Cor., 4:4-6. Delivered from darkness, Col. 1:13. Called from darkness to light, 1 Pet. 2:9.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this lesson, 1.

Prophecy is fulfilled and the blind are made to see. 2. Jesus manifests His power to restore sight. 3. The blind man is first made to follow Jesus' leading. 4. Weak faith retards the power of Jesus. 5. Our Lord uses His miraculous power a second time to complete the cure of a vacillating, doubting suppliant. 6. Separation from His former evil companions and associations is demanded of the recipient of Jesus' favor.

DELIVERED FROM DARKNESS.

A Wandering Life. It was late autumn. Departing from the coast of Tyre, Jesus came through Zidon to the familiar shores of Galilee. His route led him along the southern slope of Lebanon and under the shadow of the snowy Hermon. It is not recorded how long Jesus lingered amid these mountain solitudes, but we know that Jesus loved the mountains and delighted in the grandeur of scenery which displayed the power and majesty of God. The mountain air invigorated His weary body, while the sight of heights clothed with primeval forests and capped with perpetual snow refreshed His soul and afforded communion with the Father. He returned to Decapolis, where the healed demoniac must have done well his missionary work, for here the people received Him with gladness, so that He performed many works of healing; preached to the multitudes on the highland overlooking the lake, and miraculously fed 4,000. Dismissing the rejoicing and grateful throng, Jesus and the disciples crossed to the little town of Magdala on the further shore where His old deadly enemies met Him, from the ranks of the scribes and Pharisees and Sadducees, all anxious to entangle Him in a discussion which should weaken the people's confidence in Him. After sunset His disciples directed the course of their familiar ship toward Bethsaida Julias. Here they disembarked in the late autumn evening.

Sitting in Darkness. Bethsaida stood on a high green hill above the plain which was the scene of the miraculous feeding of the 5,000; it overlooked the entrance of the Jordan into the lake and commanded a view of the Jordan marshes in which the buffaloes wallowed. Jesus had often taught in its streets and synagogues, had lived among them and done many mighty works in their midst, yet so great was their hardness of heart and unbelief that Bethsaida was included in the woes Jesus pronounced upon Chorazin and Capernaum. But even in this unbelieving city there must have been some who believed on Him, for the next morning after His arrival they brought a blind man to Jesus for healing. It was a pitiful sight to see this strong man led into Jesus' presence by his friends. We are not told how many years he had sat in darkness. The very hopelessness of his affliction contributed to its pathos. Why, in all Jewish history the blind had never been known to receive sight. Even that dread disease, leprosy, had been healed by Israel's prophet. Marvelous as it may seem, the dead had been raised, but never had eyes been given to the blind. No one knew his despairing condition better than the blind man himself. It is true he had come to Jesus, but he came without faith. It was only to satisfy the urgency of friends who had seen the Master multiply the loaves and fishes until they fed the 5,000. He was so destitute of hope that he did not even join them as his friends besought Jesus to help him.

Led Out. The first thing Jesus did was to change his environment. He took the blind man by the hand and led him out of town, away from the scoffers and unbelieving; away from those rabbis who sneered at Jesus; away from the city and its wickedness, out into the fields. And the blind man must have had some little faith, for he was willing to be led, first by his friends to Jesus and then by the Divine hand of Jesus, out from his old associations and haunts to the open. What a sweet and beautiful picture of Christ's power to lead from darkness to light was presented as the compassionate Jesus tenderly took the hand of the one who groped in darkness and gently led him away from the curious throng. For the miracle of His healing was not to be for the gratification of morbid curiosity on the part of outsiders; it would be a transaction between Jesus and the blind man.

Darkness Wanes. The miracle of healing this blind man is peculiar, for it is the only instance in which the result was not instantaneous. Jesus had so often shown His ability to heal every ill that we may be sure His arm was not shortened nor His power abated. The healing must have been instantaneous. Was it not due to the impassive attitude of the man himself, whose faith was so weak that he had not uttered an appeal on his own behalf, that he did not at once grasp the fact of his own complete restoration? Or perhaps as He deals with all according to individual need, Jesus saw that this apathetic soul needed additional care. He was so slow to receive, it would require a second lesson to forever dispel the darkness from his beclouded soul. The use of saliva was a well known Jewish remedy for affection of the eyes and for some reason best known to Himself, Jesus made use of it in this instance and, laying His hands upon the man, spat upon the blind eyes that would have opened at his bare command. Evidently the man had more confidence in this human agency than in the Divine power of his benefactor, and his reliance on the outward application so outweighed his faith in Jesus' supernatural power that he was unaware of the completeness of the cure. He saw men as trees walking. The darkness was disappearing.

Out Into the Light. Nowhere have we a more beautiful instance of the patient forbearance of the Great Physician. He does not rebuke the man for dullness of vision which fails to discern the completeness of the miracle; does not complain of the lack of faith that confused the sight of eyes that were completely restored. Others had apprehended their cure 'instantaneously' and glorified God; some, like the nobleman of Herod's household and the Gentile woman, accepted His word and have gone on their way rejoicing without any ocular demonstrations of the granting of their petition; but there is neither rebuke nor punishment of the one who receives His benefits so haltingly as to demand a second application of His power. "He put His hands again upon his eyes and made him look up." The seeing and laying on of hands was for a cure of the spiritual darkness that held an enthralled soul from full entrance into light. He must look above human agency to Divine cause. That upward look into the face of Divine compassion and tenderness opened the eyes of the prisoner of darkness to the fullness of Jesus' mercy. The sunlight of infinite love flooded the man's soul and overflowed his little world. The mist had vanished, confusion no longer marred his vision. He saw every man clearly.

His Confession. Doubtless like other recipients of Jesus' healing power, the restored man longed to go and publish his cure abroad. He may even have asked the privilege but the Master sent him away to his own house with a command not to enter Bethsaida or even tell of his cure to any in the town. Alas for a city from which God must needs hide such evidences of His mercy. Jesus knew that the hearts of its citizens were so hardened against Him that the publication of such a wonderful miracle as the restoration of sight to the blind would enrage them and even endanger His own safety. For the miracle was proof of His Messiahship; only of the Coming One was it prophesied that He should restore sight to the blind. Should it become known that Jesus had fulfilled this prophecy, the hatred of those who were determined not to accept Jesus as their promised King would be so inflamed that they would stop at no means that would cause His death. It might be as well for this new convert, whose faith had been so halting, not to resume the old relation with unbelievers. Fortunately his home was outside wicked Bethsaida; let him return to his own house. He, who had been so easily led, who had manifested so little decision of character, might be led to cast off his new found faith if he returned to Bethsaida Julias. Every ray of golden sunlight that penetrated the once darkened orbs; every image reflected on the retina of the eyes that had been blind; each firm footstep measured by his restored vision, would be his confession of the power of Jesus, the Light of the world.

Quiz. 1. Had sight ever been restored to the blind before? 2. What had been one of the prophecies concerning Christ? 3. Have we other instances of Jesus healing the blind? 4. What is most noticeable about this miracle? 5. What great spiritual change may we liken to the receiving of sight by the blind? 6. Is this change always instantaneous?

Seed Thoughts. 1. When He would confer a blessing Jesus often leads us from familiar haunts to be alone with Him. 2. The only limit to Divine power is that placed upon it by man's unbelief. 3. Jesus never manifests His power haltingly; it is our faith which halts. 4. Our Lord will not stay His power until His work of grace is completed. 5. Jesus never leaves a soul that seeks Him, in semi-darkness. 6. Bethsaida is not the only city whose wickedness and unbelief hinder the publication of the Gospel.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

PETER'S GREAT CONFESSION.

When Jesus came into the

of

he asked his saying Whom do men say that I the Son of man am? And they said,

Some say that thou art

some, Elias; and others, Jeremias, or

He saith unto them, But whom say ye that I am? And Simon Peter answered
and said,
Thou art the

the Son of the living God. And Jesus answered and said unto him, Blessed art thou, Simon Bar-jona:
for flesh and blood hath not revealed it unto thee, but my Father which is in heaven.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 16: 13-20; ALSO MARK 8:27-30, LUKE 9:18-21.

Prayer: Dear Jesus, We bless Thee for the knowledge that Thou art the Christ of God, to whom we may come for the words of eternal Life. We rejoice that Thy church is founded on this truth, and we pray that we may be as living stones in the great church of which Thou art the Architect and whose Foundation Thou art. Amen.

"Not like kingdoms of the world,
Thy holy church, O God.
Though earthquake shocks are threatening here,
And tempests are abroad:

Unshaken as eternal hills,
Immovable she stands,
A mountain that shall fill the earth,
A house not made with hands."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Summer of A. D. 29, about nine months before the crucifixion. Place, Cesarea Philippi. Persons, Jesus and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: Belief in Christ. Frees from condemnation, John 3:16-18. Evidences of new birth, 1 John 5:1. Overcomes the world, 1 John 5:5. Honors God, John 5:23. Guarantees answer to prayer, John 14:13. Insures peace, Rom. 5:1. Gives eternal life, 1 John 5:11-13. The sin of denial of Christ, 1 John 2:22, 23. Disbelief brings condemnation and darkness, John 3:18, 19. Spiritual death, John 3:36.

Life and Conduct Setting: This lesson discloses, 1. The world's view of Christ. 2. Peter's confession of Jesus as The Christ, the Son of the Living God. 3. Jesus' commendation of Peter for this acknowledgment of His Divinity. 4. That this great truth is revealed to every man through the action of God's Spirit. 5. His church is to be built upon a belief in His Divinity. 6. Peter is made as a rock of the living church.

THE ROCK ON WHICH HIS CHURCH STANDS.

A Beautiful Retreat. It was one of the loveliest spots in the Holy Land. The great Hermon towered to a majestic elevation of 7,000 or 8,000 feet above the city of Cesarea Philippi, which nestles in a recess at its southern base. Countless murmuring streams found their way down the mountain slopes amid bright colored flowers, luxuriant shrubs and shady trees; while the springs of the river Jordan burst in a clear silver stream from a cave at the foot of Hermon. It was a land of wheat and barley, maize and rice, of vines and fig trees and pomegranates, olive trees and oak groves, adorned with marble tablets and statues, silvery fountains, ancient temples and rock-ribbed castles. Jesus sought safety in this heathen region outside Jewish territory as a fugitive and outlaw, rejected by the nation He came to save. Even in Galilee, where the greatest multitudes had followed Him from the moment Jesus had made it so plain that those who followed Him need not expect to reap material benefits, the people began to hold aloof from Him. A few followed Him at a distance and they were permitted to hear the teaching He sought to impress upon His disciples, but often He was alone.

What Men Say of Christ. Even the disciples had withdrawn a short distance while Jesus indulged in one of those frequent periods of solitary prayer. On His return He propounded two momentous questions. First He asked them, "Whom do men say that I the Son of Man am?" No one could gainsay His miracles; no one could dispute His teachings; nor could they impugn His sincerity. They dared not deny His power and it was useless to decry His spotless life. Just as today unbelievers admit that Jesus was the greatest teacher ever known, and are willing to acknowledge He was the most perfect man who ever walked the earth, and even honor Him as a great moralist and preacher of righteousness; so the world of His own day found it impossible to treat Him as an ordinary man and briefly the Apostles recounted the idle guesses of the populace. "Some say that Thou art John the Baptist; some Elias, and others, Jeremiah or one of the prophets." That was all the world knew of Jesus. None dreamed that He was the Messiah; not one accepted Him as their King and Saviour. Such ignorance of the real nature and mission of Jesus, despite His works and words, show how impossible it is for the carnal mind to discern God.

Whom Say Ye That I Am? It was a question of fearful moment. For in the wonderful plan of salvation God has made co-workers of men. Had the disciples failed to recognize Jesus as the Son of God then all His labor in training them had been in vain. There would be no one to declare His death and resurrection; no one to preach the atonement through the sacrificial death on the cross of the only begotten and beloved Son of God. After all, sad as was their denseness and ignorance, it mattered less what the multitude thought than as to how this little intimate circle of twelve received Him. The time had come for Jesus to elicit from His own immediate followers an expression of their faith. Therefore He put the searching question, "But whom say ye that I am?" Would these who had been so especially chosen and who had received such especial marks of His favor recognize Him? The Twelve who had been witnesses of His daily life and works, who had seen Him walk the waves and who owed their very lives to His supernatural power and care; would they see in their Lord only a great prophet, a new lawgiver and marvelous teacher? It was of mighty moment to all the world to come as to what testimony His own followers should bear of Jesus.

The Great Confession. It is not certain that all the Twelve would have answered so readily, certainly not Judas, and perhaps the slow and doubting Thomas might have halted for an answer, but in a moment it leaped from the lips of Peter, "Thou art the Christ, the Son of the living God." It was not the ecstatic answer of an enthusiast, but a confession of Jesus as the Christ of God, the Messiah-King, the Mighty God, the Lamb of Sacrifice, inspired by God Himself. Through the prompting and power of the Holy Ghost, Peter had given utterance to the great truth on which the church of God is built. True, the wave of inspiration which had swept Peter from the materialistic conception of Jesus' mission held even by the disciples would recede, but the truth he had spoken would never be recalled. Thus the first foundations of the church of Christ were laid far away from the temple and synagogue, from the priests and Pharisees and scribes, and amid the Gentiles, for did He not come as a light to the Gentiles?

The Great Avowal. Once before, when the great secession of His disciples took place at Capernaum, Peter had replied to the Master's question whether the Twelve would also go, "Lord, to whom shall we go? Thou hast the words of eternal life, and we believe and are sure that Thou art that Christ, the Son of the living God." But Jesus had ignored the confession. Would He do so again. Nay, He openly accepts that which before He had passed unnoticed. For the hour had come. Flesh and blood had not revealed it to them. Daily they had seen the simplicity and poverty of His life, His homelessness and wanderings afoot, His humiliation and rejection by His own people. Ah, the knowledge had come to them through the Father. Breathlessly the Twelve awaited their Master's reception of Peter's declaration. It was a wonderful moment in the life of the fisherman Apostle when his Master's voice fell upon his ears, "I say unto Thee, thou art Peter" (or Petros, which meant a rock) "and on this rock I will build My church and the gates of hell shall not prevail against it. And I will give unto thee the keys of the Kingdom of Heaven: and whatsoever thou shalt bind on earth shall be bound in Heaven and whatsoever thou shalt loose on earth shall be loosed in Heaven."

The Church of Christ. Never did Jesus utter words of greater moment. They hold His testimony of Himself, a blessing upon all who acknowledge His Sonship; the declaration that not by earthly criticism or learning, but only by Heavenly grace are we led to the acknowledgment of Jesus as the Son of God; the first mention of the church He would found, its corner stone to be Peter's inspired confession; the promise of the supremacy of His church over the powers of evil and of its eternal survival of the ravages of the ages; and the power which through continuance in this great truth, it shall exercise on earth and in Heaven. Because of the boldness and greatness of his confession, Jesus blessed Peter. The name, Peter, Man of Rock, had been prophetically given him at Bethabara; now Jesus applies it to him because of his confession of Jesus' Sonship—the rock upon which He would build His church. High honor had the Galilean fisherman; even the keys of Heaven were given to him, for in the marvelous sermon on the day of Pentecost, Peter was the first to open the Kingdom both to the Jews and the Gentiles, through the declaration that "the promise is unto you and to your children and to all that are afar off," and, in obedience to the Heavenly vision, he baptized the first Gentile convert.

Stones in Zion's Walls. The actual building of the church of Christ did not begin till the day of Pentecost, when three thousand living souls were welded into its walls. Ever since that day stones have been added; in the darkness of persecution, when His servants stood firm as a rock for the great truth embedded in Peter's confession, each blessed martyr became a Peter, a living, precious stone in the edifice which shall some day cover all the earth and stand throughout all time; every one who has a like living experience of faith in Christ is a Peter to his generation, blessed of God and a living stone in the walls of Zion.

Quiz. 1. Had any of the disciples previously acknowledged Jesus as the Messiah? 2. How does Peter's confession differ from these? 3. Why did it mean more? 4. Had Jesus spoken of His church before? 5. Why does He now emphasize His Sonship?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The faith of Peter was not of human culture but of Divine illumination. 2. It is in the Son of Man that we recognize the Son of God. 3. He who recognizes the Christ is near the Mount of Transfiguration. 4. When alienated from the Holy Spirit, he who had been first to confess Christ was first to deny his Lord. 5. The all-conquering church must be built upon the all-conquering Christ. The Divinity of Christ is the only redemption for the humanity of His followers.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

Then said Jesus unto his

If any man will let him deny himself, and

For whosoever will save his life shall lose it: and whosoever will for my sake shall find it. For what is if he shall gain the whole

and lose his own soul? or what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 16:21-28; ALSO MARK 8:31-37, AND LUKE 9:21-27.

Prayer: Dear Lord, We rejoice that Thy love for us is so great that Thou wert willing to suffer and die for us. May we be ever willing to take up our cross and follow after Thee. May we count all gain small, all loss as nothing, compared to the loss of eternal life which we have through Thee. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

In the cross of Christ I glory,
Towering o'er the wrecks of time;
All the light of sacred story,
Gathers round its head sublime.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Summer of A. D. 29. Place, Vicinity of Cesarea Philippi. Persons, Jesus and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: The Cross of Christ. Jesus bears the cross, John 19:17-19. An example of humility, Phil. 2:7, 8. His joy in the cross, Heb. 12:2. Glory of the cross, Gal. 6:14. Power of the cross, John 12:32, 33. Peace through the cross, Col. 1:20. The example of the cross, Matt. 10:38.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this lesson, 1. Jesus reveals His rejection, death and resurrection. 2. Rebukes Peter for his worldliness and presumption. 3. Declares that His disciples must follow His example of self-sacrifice. 4. All the world offers profits nothing if the gain incurs the loss of life hereafter. 5. Foretells the establishment of His Kingdom.

THE CROSS AND CROWN.

Under the Shadow of the Cross. There is a wonderful painting of Christ before His entrance upon His ministry. In the dim interior of the workshop one sees the carpenter's bench at which He earned a livelihood for Himself and the family bereft of Joseph's support. Jesus wears the coarse garb of the peasant carpenter of Nazareth. He stands at the door of the little carpenter shop with head thrown back and arms outstretched for a moment's relaxation of the tired muscles. The dying sun has made the path that leads from His feet out into the world blood-red and athwart it, the outstretched and upraised figure of Christ has thrown the dark shadow of a cross. The artist has only presaged that which was ever uppermost in Jesus' thought. Probably never did the cross loom more portentously than at the moment of His affirmation of His Messiahship.

Dreams Dispelled. Notwithstanding all His teaching, still the Twelve clung to the Jewish idea of the Messiah. We may imagine what hopes were awakened when at last the announcement was made for which they had so long waited, and though secrecy was enjoined, it must mean that Jesus would soon assert His sovereignty and declare His authority. Their days of privation were well-nigh over and His chosen would soon emerge from poverty and humiliation to wealth and honor. Even the faint-hearted and mercenary Judas was encouraged to continue a little longer with the Master. It was time that all these idle hopes of earthly splendor and advancement should be dispelled. They must learn the way of the cross to the crown. Therefore, Jesus began to reveal to them His intended journey to Jerusalem and to prepare them for the rejection and insult He should meet there. He even foretold His violent death and resurrection. Indirectly He had spoken of all these things before, but now for the first time He dwelt on them distinctly. "He must go unto Jerusalem and suffer many things of the elders and chief priests and scribes and be killed and be raised again the third day."

An Unexpected Tempter. The bare idea was so repulsive to them and so contrary to all their hopes and desires that the announcement seemed incredible to the disciples. He had so often spoken in a figurative sense that surely this must be one of the times when He had chosen to use symbols. His death must be merely a figure of speech and should not be interpreted literally. Peter could not understand or believe it. He could not conceive how the Christ, the Son of the living God, should suffer and die. The One whom he verily believed to be the Messiah and whom he loved so intensely should never pass through such an ordeal. Never while he lived. Really Jesus should not think or speak of such a thing. Now, our Lord's commendation of Peter seems to have been hurtful to his humility. He actually took it upon himself to advise, instruct and rebuke His Master. Taking Jesus by the hand he led Him aside and immediately began to try to dissuade Him from taking a journey which would prove so unfortunate. "'Be it far from Thee, Lord; this shall not be unto Thee.' It would utterly ruin the prospects of the Kingdom you intend to establish. You are the Son of the living God. You can use the power we have so often seen displayed for others, to preserve yourself from such danger."

Peter Rebuked. It was the very same temptation Satan had used in the wilderness, when he asked Jesus to employ His Divine power to His own advantage, and naturally Jesus was reminded of those terrible days of conflict. The answer of His Lord must have made Peter's ears tingle to his dying day. Those who had but a few days before heard the splendid eulogium and promise given Peter, now see him cowed and abashed by His Master's rebuke. "Get thee behind me, Satan." He who under the power of the Holy Spirit was a foundation rock when controlled by earthly wisdom and prudence becomes a stone of stumbling and rock of offense. Alas, Peter! yesterday a rock, to-day disintegrating stone, and tomorrow shifting as the sand. Yet, when grounded in Christ, filled with the Holy Ghost and kept by God, he who had tempted and finally denied his Lord became the chief witness, servant and Apostle of Jesus Christ.

A Sad Audience. Turning from the abashed Apostle, Jesus made the incident the occasion of a searching discourse to His disciples and to the eager though now scant band of followers who followed Him at a distance, whom He called to Him. It was a solemn moment, for from the brief rebuke He had given Peter the Twelve had learned all too surely that their Master was to suffer rejection and death. They knew the death on the cross which the Romans were wont to inflict, but alas, they did not yet know and were utterly unable to realize the glorious resurrection foretold in those few words—"raised again the third day." We may be sure that tear-dimmed eyes were in evidence, while stifled sobs and broken exclamations of grief were heard in Jesus' audience. Closer to His side came John, while Andrew, James, Philip, Bartholomew and all the Twelve save Judas drew nearer to their Lord; even Peter's loving heart refused to allow humiliation and rebuke to keep him without the chosen circle. Judas alone stands far from the Master; he has no mind to affiliate longer than is necessary with the little band shadowed by the cross.

A Cross for Everyone. It was startling enough when the One who had declared Himself to be the giver of eternal life prophesied His own suffering and death, but what are the words that now proceed from the Master's lips? "If any man will come after Me, let him deny himself and take up the cross and follow Me." Did His disciples remember that declaration when a few months later a weary Figure wearing a crown of thorns bowed under the weight of the cross as It climbed the steps of Calvary? He would set them the example which everyone who purposes to be His disciple must follow, bearing suffering and self-denial, as a man condemned to death bears the cross on which he is to die. Judas is drawn farther from the circle, yet still he lingers, for there is a fascination in the Master's words, "Whosoever will save his life shall lose it and whosoever will lose his life for My sake shall find it." As yet the hearers live so wholly in the present life that they hardly comprehend that the words are a promise that those who lay down pleasure and ease, or life itself in behalf of duty, shall gain everlasting life in the Kingdom.

Profit and Loss. Suddenly Judas starts as if pierced by an arrow from the bow of an unerring marksman. For the question aimed at every mercenary soul since that day seemed to the guilty, bargaining disciple as though it were directed straight at him: "What shall it profit a man if he shall gain the whole world and lose his own soul? Or, what shall a man give in exchange for his soul?" What gain here can repay for the loss of life hereafter? Did it seem a great sacrifice to bear the cross? Ah! those who share His cross shall share His triumph. Some who are standing about Him will live to see the old dispensation abolished, a new dispensation ushered in and the foundations of the Kingdom established forever. There were those in the little circle who should be vouchsafed a glimpse of Jesus in the glory in which He would come when He returned to enter His Kingdom. How surely the prophecy was fulfilled. Within one week after it was uttered it was granted to Peter, James and John to see Jesus transfigured. One—the beloved disciple—survived the capture of Jerusalem and destruction of the temple, judgments and fulfilment of prophecy which declared that the Son of Man had come in His Kingdom.

Quiz 1. Why did Jesus enjoin silence concerning His Messiahship? 2. Why did he foretell His suffering and death to His disciples? 3. Why was Peter rebuked? 4. When did the full meaning of the prophecy of His death and resurrection come to the disciples? 5. What great principle did Jesus lay down as a condition of discipleship? 6. How can a man gain life by losing his life?

Seed Truths. 1. Temptations that are not put behind us become a stumbling block before us. 2. We are all capable of falling from heights of Divine insight to depths of egotism. 3. There is a cross for every one who would win a crown. 4. Heaven is only gained by the royal road of the cross. 5. All the rewards and emoluments of the world are not equal to the value of a human soul. 6. Never go into any transaction where the recording angel may not enter your profits on Heaven's balance sheet. 7. He who verily sees Christ shall never see death.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE TRANSFIGURATION.

And after six days Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John his brother, and bringeth them up into an apart,

And was transfigured before them:
and his

as the sun, and his raiment was white as the

And,
behold,
there appeared unto them
Moses and Elias

Then answered Peter, and said unto Jesus, Lord, it is good for us to be here: if thou wilt, let us make here

one for thee, and one for Moses, and one for Elias. While he yet
spake, behold,
a bright and behold a voice out of the cloud, which said, This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased; hear ye him. And when the disciples heard it, they

and were sore afraid.
And Jesus
came and

them, and said, Arise, and be not afraid.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 17:1-9. READ MARK 9:2-9, LUKE 9:28-36.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, I ask to stand upon that mountain of prayer and vision; in that inner circle of discipleship, where I may see that Thou art the fulfillment of all law and the Divine personality in whom centers all prophecy. There would I remain until all else fades but Thee. Then would I go in Thy company to minister to the needy, waiting world in the valley, to be with Thee in the garden, and be found close by Thee at the cross. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"O Master, it is good to be
Entranced, enwrapped, alone with Thee,
Till we, too, change from grace to grace,
Gazing on that transfigured face."

—A. P. Stanley.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Autumn, A. D. 29. Place, a spur of Mount Hermon. Persons, Christ, Peter, James, John, Moses and Elijah.

Scripture Setting: God-Touched Humanity. The shining face of Moses, Ex. 24:13-18. Elijah at Horeb, I Kings 19:8-18. Peter at Hermon, II Pet. 1:16-19. John's testimony, John 1:14, I John 1:1-3. Vision at Emmaus, Luke 24:13-27. Light of martyrdom, Acts 6:15, 7:54-60. Christ transfigured, Rev. 1:5-16.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage describes the resplendent hour of the Saviour's glory. 1. Not all in the school of prayer qualify for the university of Mount Vision. 2. Heavenly ministers strengthen and gird us for life's work, and commune with us as we travel down to death. 3. Our richest and most Heavenly experiences come through prayer. 4. The path to approved character lies in the light of obedience to Heavenly visions. 5. The stream of Christ-like service takes its rise in the uplands, but quickly descends to gladden the valley below. 6. When Jesus is glorified in a human life the prohibitions of the law are unnecessary, and the highest predictions of the Kingdom are fulfilled.

THE WHITEST AND SUBLIMEST PEAK IN HUMAN HISTORY.

The Beacon-Light Upon the Mountain. "Jesus taketh Peter, James, and John, and bringeth them up into an high mountain apart." There are certain climaxes in great careers that require some striking celebration. If some renowned athlete by his prowess brings honor to his university his victory is celebrated by great bonfires that blaze across the campus and light up the spires of the tallest buildings.

In the very midst of Christ's career He tells His disciples that as the Messiah He must suffer and die. At this revelation they become discouraged, and hesitate. Hence their need of special help and a new outlook upon the Messiah's glory. Christ calls the three best fitted to pray with Him upon the mount and to behold His ever-abiding Kingship. As the beacon-fires, lighted from hill to hill, announced to those far from Jerusalem the advent of a solemn feast, so the light of the transfiguration mount was to shine down through the doubts of the disciples, the darkness of the world, and the terrors of death, announcing the Divine Sonship of Christ and the final resurrection.

Hermon towered 9,000 feet. It offered solitude and coolness after the burning heat of that eastern day. The heights covered with snow glistened in the moonlight like marble. The stars shone overhead. In the midst of such a night scene it was the fitting time and place for a prayer-meeting on the mountain-top. He prayed that He might be prepared and fortified for death, and that His chosen three, the "sons of thunder" and the "man of rock," might stand unshaken when they gazed upon the shameful insults and humiliation of the cross. No doubt the disciples also prayed, but as the night wore on they wrapped themselves in their outer garments and slept on Hermon as they were afterwards to sleep in Gethsemane. It was Jesus only who kept the signal light of prayer burning brightly through the midnight darkness of the mountain.

The Illumined Face. "He was transfigured before them: and His face did shine as the sun, and His raiment was white as the light." It is useless to attempt an explanation of the epiphany. Christ Himself called the transfiguration "a vision." While it is not easy to comprehend the manner of it, it must be taken, not as an optical illusion, but real. It could not have been a subjective experience for it affected all three disciples with equal certitude. Luke says that it was while He prayed and in answer to His prayer that His face was transfigured. We have seen marked examples of the Spirit's power in transforming the flesh; the love-light in a mother's face as she bends over her child; the fiery thought and passion that glows upon the orator's face; the spiritual light that breaks across the face of the worshipper; the serene peace upon the brow of the dying saint. History tells us that the outward symbol of the Divine presence is the illumined face. After forty days of communion with God Moses brought down from the mount a face that dazzled Israel. As Stephen lifted his eyes toward Heaven in the council chamber of the sanhedrin all that sat there "saw his face as it had been the face of an angel."

Already the face of Jesus had been marred by sorrow. Storms had beaten on it, the Syrian sun had tanned it, the dust had covered it. It was to be marred more than the sons of men. It would be defiled with spittle, torn with thorns, distorted with thirst and pain: But for one radiant hour it was to shine as the sun. With Peter, James, and John as an audience; with Moses and Elijah as corroborating witnesses at either hand; with the cloud of light and the commendatory voice of God, for once the flesh of man became the perfect medium for expressing the spiritual grace of God. For once in the long story of humanity the curtains of the fleshly tabernacle were pushed back that the incarnation might become the revelation of Divinity.

A Picture of Contrasts. "While Peter yet spake, behold a voice out of the cloud." The great painters and writers who have pictured the transfiguration represent it as a scene of boldest contrasts.

Mr. Ruskin says, "We cannot explain the union of the Divine and human in Jesus, yet the thing to do is to insist on the entireness of both." The whole background of the picture suggests the natural;—the noble mountain; the broad patches of snow overhead; the pale light of the moon; and the bright stars like points of light. In the foreground of the picture is the supernatural Heavenly visitors; a cloud of light; garments that gleam and glow like lightning; the dazzling face of the Master upturned to catch the Divine voice from out the enveloping cloud. In this picture are employed all the darker shades of human need and helplessness, —Christ and His disciples praying; the overpowering drowsiness followed by overpowering fear on the part of the three; Peter's vague and idle talk.

Blended with this are the brighter colors of Divine help and spiritual phenomena. As there are three witnesses from earth, two are called from Heaven,—the prophet of Sinai, who died by the kiss of God, and whose body was never found, and the avenger of Carmel who went up in a chariot of fire. If there was need of prayer, there was answer by a Divine revelation. If Peter's voice betrays ignorance and half-conscious confusion, there was an authoritative voice from out the cloud confirming the character of Jesus, and witnessing to the importance of His message. If adown the valley of humiliation and death there was waiting a central cross, there was above a loving Father who was well pleased.

The Dissolving View. "And when they had lifted up their eyes, they saw no man, save Jesus only." The purpose of the transfiguration was to show the three chosen disciples that when Christ the Perfect was come then that which was in part should be done away.

Moses the representative of the law, and Elijah the representative of the prophecies are summoned, and in the presence and hearing of the three they hold converse on the crucifixion and the resurrection. Jesus is thus supported on the right and on the left; the supreme and abiding character of His reign is affirmed, and the disciples are given the evidence they need. Later in much the same way did Jesus confirm the wavering faith of His disciples by the authority of the Old Testament as He walked with them after His resurrection towards Emmaus.

But when Moses and Elijah have testified they must pass. When the nail prints and the spear would have been felt Thomas must rest in faith and not in touch. "Be not faithless, but believing." When Jesus is known in the breaking of bread His bodily presence is no longer needed to confirm faith and it passes. The electric illumination of the city makes a wondrous scene through all the dark hours of night, yet how it pales and seems to die out as the light of the great sun breaks over the hills. Moses and Elijah came not to speak of their achievements; they were but attendant satellites upon the great Sun of righteousness. They shone with borrowed light, and must decrease that He might increase. The meaning of the new view—Jesus standing alone—was unmistakable. The law of Moses and the utterances of the prophets would hereafter cease to be the chief impulse of religion. They faded by reason of the glory that excelleth.

The Vision Treasured. "Tell the vision to no man until the Son of man be risen." This vision of the mount of glory was to be hidden in their hearts; an inner light to light them down through the valley of their Master's coming humiliation and death. Hidden there it would awaken no jealousy in the other disciples, nor self-satisfaction in themselves.

They might not remain upon the mountain, for a needy people waited for their coming in the valley, but they might keep the vision in their hearts. If so the vision would keep them. It was for what they had experienced on the mount of vision that the "sons of thunder" were willing to be baptized with His baptism, and the "man of rock" offered to die for Him. A tradition, well authenticated, says they all three gave their lives as martyrs to the faith, Peter preferring to die with His head downward. Each could say with Paul, "I have not been disobedient unto the Heavenly vision."

Quiz and Study. 1. On what previous occasion did Christ choose these three? What later one? 2. On what previous occasion did Christ hear the commanding voice of His Father? 3. On what mount did the face of Moses shine? 4. What persecutor remembered the shining face of the martyr Stephen? 5. What vision came to Peter on the housetop, to Paul at Damascus, to John on Patmos?

Practical Thoughts. 1. The mountain of solitude for vision; the town in the valley for service. 2. The power of prayer transfigures the plainest face. 3. Sinai was a dark cloud, but Hermon a cloud of light. 4. Revelation has its base in the law, its shaft is prophecy, but its crowning peak is Christ. 5. God's voice commends as He begins His ministry, and commends as He approaches His passion.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

JESUS AND THE CHILDREN.

How think ye? if a man have an hundred

and doth

he
not

the ninety and nine,
and goeth

and that which is gone astray?

And if so be that verily I say unto you, he more of that sheep, than of the ninety and nine which went not astray.

Even so it is not the will of your Father which is in heaven, that one of these should perish.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 18:1-7, 10-14;

ALSO MARK 9:33-42, LUKE 9:46-48.

Prayer: "Help me, Lord Jesus, to see in my young life some of the Divine possibilities Thou didst see in the life of every child. Give me the faith and humility of a little child. Keep me from all those sad lessons of sin which I must afterwards unlearn if I would be a child of Thy Kingdom. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"An angel paused in his onward flight,
With a seed of love and truth and right.
'To whom can this precious seed be given,
That it will bear most fruit for Heaven?'
The Saviour heard and said, as He smiled,
'Place it at once in the heart of a child.'"

—L. M.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Autumn, A. D. 29. Place, at Capernaum on the return from the Mount of Transfiguration. Persons, Jesus, the Twelve, and a child, possibly Peter's son.

Scripture Setting: Christ and Childhood. Cure for strife, Phil. 2:3-11. Perils to childhood removed, Isa. 11:5-10. God's children, Eph. 2:2-3, 11-19. Outgrowing childhood, Eph. 4:13-16. False teachers of childhood, Matt. 23:4-15.

Life and Conduct Setting: This passage treats of character formation and reformation. 1. The seed of a Calaveras redwood is hardly discernable, but they live for six thousand years. 2. There is much in childhood to retain, there is much to outgrow. 3. By controlling a child's surroundings we help to shape his destiny. 4. The seducer of childhood is worthy of a millstone about his neck, because by thought or practice he has forged a chain of habit about a child's life. 5. The wise teacher puts the child's portion where he can reach it.

THE BATTLEGROUND OF THE KINGDOM.

The Quarrel of the Generals. "At the same time came the disciples unto Jesus, saying, Who is the greatest in the Kingdom of Heaven?" From the Mount of Transfiguration the descent to Capernaum was indeed a descent into the valley of humiliation. What painful surprise and sad disappointment met the Master as even His best and most privileged disciples engaged in a serious and violent dispute. The vision on the Mount instead of confirming their love and humility only stirred up their jealousy and pride. The three that had witnessed the vision were ambitious, and the nine who had not were jealous. They all still clung to the common view that there would be distinctions of rank in the Kingdom of Heaven. Only three could be trusted to see their Master transfigured, but every one of the Twelve, it would seem, could be trusted to fight for the highest place. The patient Christ, in the training of the Twelve, would teach them the true nature of the coming Kingdom. Not even as privates, much less as great leaders, would they ever enter in, except they "be converted, and become as little children."

The Strategic Position. "And Jesus called a little child unto Him, and set him in the midst of them." At the time Jesus took no notice of their dispute. But now they are in the house of Peter that faces Galilee. When they are seated, He asks them, what they had been disputing about on the way? Peter especially needs the lesson of humility, and it is quite possible that Jesus taught it to Peter and the rest by calling Peter's little son and setting him in the midst. Christ still has the way of setting a little child down in the midst of a home to rebuke the grasping selfishness of parents. It was a daring thing for Jesus to choose a child's heart for the battleground of the Kingdom. But it is certainly true that when the church completely cares for the children, she will command the situation that is the key to the future. Jesus was a great strategist in risking the battle of the ages upon the humility and unselfish service of a child's heart.

Japan triumphed over Russia by taking Port Arthur, and she took Port Arthur by taking 203 Meter Hill. When she had repeatedly failed she wired the Mikado that it was impossible. Then came the answer, "The Mikado will expect his army to accomplish the impossible." So Japan massed all her guns from her ships and literally blew the top off the hill. By the loss of 20,000 men she drove the Russian army down. Then she put one man on the hill. But he was at the end of a telephone wire and could see, so he directed the fire of the Japanese guns so that the shots fell over the hills onto the Russian ships.

Far-sighted statesmanship sees that unless the heights of American childhood are captured for Christ our nation will go the way of the nations of the past. It is not a good sign that we spend over three millions a day for police protection, and a little more than one million a day for schools. We have not caught Christ's viewpoint of the battle when we spend more on dreadnaughts and coast defenses than we do on our children in the Sunday school.

Recruiting the Ranks. "Whoso receiveth one such little child in My name receiveth Me." Napoleon marshalled the troops that were to overrun Europe at the tap of the drum, but we are to marshal the troops for the moral conquest of the world at the tap of the Sunday school bell. The Sunday school is the West Point training school for Christian soldierhood. A man saved at sixty startles the neighborhood as a great religious victory; a child received at ten is hardly commented on. The man converted at sixty is a soul saved if old habits are not resumed, plus ten years of service. The child of ten is a soul saved free from evil habits, plus sixty years of service.

When Robert Moffat was received in the name of Christ the people of the church said disparagingly, "Only a boy." That boy opened up new provinces to the Gospel, gave a translated Bible to savage tribes, and brought African chiefs to the feet of Christ. The children of the church today are the saints, prophets, and apostles of the future Kingdom. When Conrad and Ursula Cotta in their beautiful home looked out and saw the bright face and heard the sweet voice of the poor miner's son singing a Christmas carol, they little knew that in befriending him they were training the greatest of Protestant reformers. And later when John Trebonius, the instructor of Luther, was wont to uncover his head in the presence of his boys, saying, "Who can tell but that there may be among these, learned doctors, sage legislators, nay, princes of the empire?" he never dreamed that before him sat "the solitary monk that would shake the world."

Betraying the Fortress. "Whoso shall offend one of these little ones, it were better for him that a millstone were hanged about his neck, and that he were drowned in the depth of the sea." There are some acts so full of perfidy that by the laws of international warfare only the most inhuman and ignoble forms of death are used to punish them. He who poisons the springs where the soldiers drink, or who betrays a fort to the enemy is hung on a gibbet or blindfolded and then shot.

Jerome tells us that some of the leaders under Judas of Galilee had plotted insurrection so many times that when the Romans caught them they tied to their necks the huge mill stones turned by mules, and cast the insurrectionists beneath the blue waves of Galilee. Sitting in the house of Peter at Capernaum it may be that Jesus and His disciples could see the very spot where this punishment was meted out. Jesus had never before used words of such bitter, crushing import. But for these vile seducers of innocent childhood, these heartless fiends who were doing the devil's work, a worse fate awaited them than the Galilean insurrectionists. The depth of the sea is none too severe a punishment for the depth of guilt of him who tempts or misleads a child, who teaches a wicked thing or suggests a wicked thought to one of Christ's little ones.

After Benedict Arnold tried to betray West Point into the hands of the British he fled for protection to the British lines. Feeling deeply the guilt of his treachery he asked an American prisoner what would be done with him if he were caught. The reply was, "They would first cut off your leg which was wounded at Saratoga and bury it with the honors of war, but the rest of you they would hang."

The Hospital for the Wounded. "It is not the will of your Father which is in Heaven, that one of these little ones should perish." Gypsy Smith has truly said, "a fence at the top of a precipice is better than a hospital at the bottom." And that is the whole burden of Christ's formative and preventative teaching concerning childhood. Yet Jesus found full-grown men with distorted bodies having lost their health, men with deranged minds having lost their reason, and men with depraved hearts hating God and men. When he asked the father of the lunatic how long the son had been afflicted, the pathetic answer was "From a child." Something went wrong, some accident, some failure of duty, so Jesus was needed to effect a cure. The church is Christ's hospital where bruised and torn and mangled hearts are restored. It is the lost sheep, the one caught in the thicket with broken leg, harried by the wild beast, that is in greatest need of the Shepherd's care. But the church must do even more than the work of rescue and healing. Jesus came to destroy the works of the devil.

The true hospital wages an offensive warfare against disease. In the military hospital at Tokyo, Japan, Baron Takaki, one of the doctors, discovered a dietetic treatment that prevented beri-beri, that dread Oriental disease that once threatened the army and navy of Japan. Likewise Walter Reed in the yellow fever hospital at Havana discovered and demonstrated that mosquito infection was the cause of yellow fever. He gave his life, but his discovery is a monument greater than the Panama canal. The church of Christ must wage relentless warfare against every form of evil that catches the young so that it shall be safe for the boys and girls to play in the streets of the city. We pray and labor for that day when the will of God shall be the law of our land and not one of these little ones shall perish.

Quiz and Study. 1. To what games of childhood did Christ refer? 2. On what occasion did the disciples complain because mothers brought children to Christ? 3. What was Christ's answer? 4. What worker did Paul commend as having learned the Scriptures in childhood? 5. Whom did Christ tell to feed His lambs?

Challenge Text. "I will — on —, according to the — of the —. Gen. 33:(?). R. V.

Practical Thoughts. 1. They are wise men indeed who bow before the Divinity of childhood. 2. The doctors of the law cried, Crucify,—the children sang, Hosanna. 3. He who sins against a child sins against God. 4. To train a child is to carve a monument which time can never efface. 5. The crowning virtues of a teacher are love, patience, and vision.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE DUTY OF FORGIVENESS.

Therefore is the kingdom of heaven likened unto a certain which would take account

of his

And when he had begun to reckon,

which owed him ten thousand talents But forasmuch as he had not to pay, his lord commanded him to be

and his

and all that he had, and payment to be made. The servant therefore and worshipped

him, saying,
Lord, have patience with me, and I will pay thee all. Then the lord of that servant was moved with compassion,
and

and forgave him the debt.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 18:21-35; ALSO MARK 11:25,26 ; LUKE 17:3, 4.

Prayer: Our Father in Heaven, Forgive us our trespasses as we forgive those that trespass against us. May we pray for those who spitefully use us, even as Jesus prayed for His enemies on the cross. May we never brood over wrongs, but bury them in the depths of our love. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

I'll go to Jesus, though my sin
Like mountains round me close;
I know His courts, I'll enter in,
Whatever may oppose.

Prostrate I'll lie before His throne,
And there my guilt confess;
I'll tell Him I'm a wretch undone
Without His sovereign grace.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Autumn, A. D. 29, continuous with last lesson. Place, Capernaum on Sea of Galilee, perhaps at Peter's house. Persons, Christ, Peter and the other disciples, and three parabolic figures: an Oriental king, a provincial governor, a petty debtor.

Scripture Setting: Love for Enmity. Treatment for enemies, Matt. 5:38-48. Loving much, forgiven much, Luke 7:40-49. The Divine forgiveness, Luke 15:11-24. Cancelling the bond, Col. 2:13-15.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage teaches the simple law of love. 1. Seeking forgiveness without a new nature, we soon lose forgiveness in new guilt. 2. We cannot be a tyrant before our brethren, and a successful suppliant before God. 3. Forgiveness is the soul's highest achievement. 4. Wrongs should be written in the dust, and injuries locked in the tower of oblivion. 5. A tiny egg of unforgiveness will hatch a whole brood of hateful creatures.

THE KING'S KINDNESS TO THE BANKRUPT BEGGAR.

The Law of the Rabbi Versus the Grace of Christ. "Jesus saith unto him, I say not unto thee, Until seven times; but until seventy times seven." Probably Peter and Judas had quarreled over who should pay the temple tax for their Master. The former had done what might be supposed to have been the duty of the latter, the treasurer. Perhaps these contentions had grown frequent, and Peter's patience was becoming exhausted. The rabbis had taught that the offense of a brother need not be forgiven after the third time. But Peter would be generous, and by a great stretch of virtue more than doubled it. He asks the Master, "Is seven times sufficient?" But Christ recognizes at once the spirit of Judaistic formalism, so He answers with perceptible irony. A number had been asked so He would give a number, even though grace can never be expressed in terms of mathematics. "Until seventy times seven." This is a symbolic expression for never-ending forgiveness. Peter had advanced beyond his former teachers, the rabbis, but he still followed Christ "afar off." The rabbis required an offender to go to the injured party, but Jesus taught His disciples that the injured one was to go to the wrong doer, strengthening his own humility, and winning his guilty brother to contrition. With Jesus all things legalistic became evangelistic. He found the Roman law impressing a Jew into service as guide and escort whenever a Roman courier passed through that territory. He taught His disciples to not only go the mile required by law, but to go voluntarily a second mile out of good will. This gospel of love has well been termed "the gospel of the second mile." In Peter's case He enlightens them all by a parable that sets in contrast Judaistic legalism and Roman law, and the laws of the Kingdom of Heaven.

The Wealth of the Royal Forgiveness. "He was moved with compassion, and loosed him, and forgave him the debt." An oriental monarch, following the colossal lease-systems of the day, farmed out his taxes to a provincial governor called a "servant" of the crown. The king for a number of years had been lax in his settlements, until there had accumulated immense sums, which were owing to the king as royal debts. Possibly confronted by the prospect of a foreign war, he makes a sudden demand for payment upon the provincial governor. He has nothing to pay, and bankruptcy stares him in the face. The creditor in Syria waits till the debt exceeds the entire property of the debtor. Then at the threshing season he secures a band of bashi-bazouks, who enter the defaulting province, stable their horses in his house, lie in his beds, eat his fatted sheep, sell his men, wives, and children into slavery, and drive the debtor, handcuffed, to prison.

The debt, if reckoned in silver would be ten million dollars, or one hundred sixty million dollars, if the talents were gold. The poor suppliant begs for time, promising to pay it all, whereas he knows it can never be paid. He asks for patience, because he dare not ask for forgiveness. The royal treasury must have been an almost inexhaustless supply to forgive so many millions of indebtedness. And the wealth of his kingdom symbolizes the wealth of the king's compassion and forgiving spirit. He speaks one word, the chains fall from his wrists and limbs, the sword of authority, hanging over his head, is grasped to slash in pieces the bond that was written against him. His family and his possessions are restored, and with incredible leniency the monarch restores to him his important office.

The Compassion of Christ Who Cancels Our Sins. "I forgave thee all that debt because thou desiredst me." The king of the parable is the Lord of the spiritual Kingdom. Peter, as an apostle, in the coming church was an underlord trusted with much, and capable of making all the greater failure. In the day of reckoning he would need to throw himself in the arms of Divine compassion. Therefore in his dealings with his fellows he would need to exercise patient love.

But every man according to his high calling is accountable to the King for the great interests of his life and influence. Every guilty bankrupt will be punished or forgiven. It is folly to speak of future payments, as foolish as for the prodigal, who in his disgrace and poverty, thinks of working off, as a hired hand, the debt he owes his father. A heart first smitten by the law begins to hunt around for a way to pay God. But the thoroughly humbled soul sees that the debt is too great to be cancelled except by grace. Redemption means buying back, not paying back. God must forgive the debt by giving His Son, and Jesus must buy it back by giving His life.

The Beggar Turns Tyrant. "He took him by the throat, saying, Pay me what thou owest." Strange that he who a little before had been a prostrate beggar before royalty now becomes a tyrant before one of his own humble debtors. Instead of applying the milder law of Israel, he would take advantage of Rome's present occupancy and apply the severest measures of Roman law, which legalized such brutal violence as seizing a debtor by the throat and dragging him into custody. Having just been forgiven a debt of millions, he would exercise every legal right against a fellow-subject who owes him seventeen dollars. Now that he himself is free through a marvellous act of mercy, his whole nature changes;—his hard, heartless zeal for the law makes him angry when this humble debtor makes the same plea for patience in the same language he had used himself a little time before.

"The devil was sick; the devil a monk would be. The devil got well; the devil a monk was he."

It was within his legal rights to demand, Shylock-like, the pound of flesh next to his enemy's heart. In the sphere of the law he was justified in casting the debtor into prison. But the king, as his judge, Portia-like, reminds him at the end of the sad story that there is a higher law, the law of love in the Kingdom of Heaven. That law absolutely forbids one who has begged for mercy and received it, from taking all the authority he can seize and punishing a fellow-debtor who pleads for kindness. The king, once compassionate, is now thoroughly angry, because his grace has been turned into presumption. Since he would judge others by the strictness of the law, by that law will he himself be judged. Back to the jail must he go till he has paid the uttermost farthing. And since he could not secure so vast a sum when out of jail, where is there any hope he can secure it in his imprisonment?

Sins Remitted Shall Return. "So shall also my Heavenly Father do unto you, if ye forgive not every one his brother from your hearts." It is a fundamental law of the Kingdom that the pardoned sinner must forgive the ill will and ill conduct of his brother man. In the daily prayer that Jesus taught us in this great self-adjusting law, "Forgive us our debts as we forgive our debtors." In a way God allows us to be the executors of our own moral estates. Since God has forgiven so much in us we can afford to forgive a little in our neighbors.

The human heart may be either a royal treasury of inexhaustible love, forgiveness, and kindness, or a polluted reservoir ever sending forth hate, revenge, and retaliation. God offers to settle by giving each a full, unconditioned pardon based on grace and grace alone. But if afterwards in our dealings with our fellow men we deny the very existence of grace, presuming upon the goodness of God to tyrannize over our brother, then the debt of our sins, though once remitted, returns. To the everlasting prison-house of spiritual bankruptcy the strictness of the law consigns us, and how shall we escape by the door of mercy when we deny that very door? Peter never forgot the import of this rich parable, for in his last epistle (2 Pet. 1:7, 9) he urges that to godliness be added brotherly kindness, and shows he has not "forgotten that he was purged from his old sins."

Quiz and Study. 1. How often should forgiveness be offered, according to the rabbis, according to Peter, according to Christ's words, according to His real meaning? 2. On what grounds did Christ forgive those who crucified Him? 3. Which disciple would call down fire from Heaven on his enemies? 4. Which disciple wielded his sword against the enemies of Christ? 5. What martyr, dying, prayed for his executioners?

Practical Thoughts. 1. To leave the poisonous sting of revenge in others means spiritual death to ourselves. 2. To show general amnesty to criminals and debtors would work injury to them and the state. 3. Returning evil for good is devilish, returning good for good is human, returning good for evil is Divine. 4. Most of life's estrangements grow out of misunderstandings. 5. Love is not limited by the multiplication table.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

In the last day, that great day
of the

Jesus stood and cried, saying,
If any man thirst,
let him come unto me, and

He that believeth
on me, as the scripture
hath said,
out of his belly shall flow of living water. (But this spake he of the Spirit, which they that believe on him should receive: for the Holy Ghost was not yet given; because that Jesus was not yet glorified.) Then spake Jesus again unto them, saying, I am the of the world:

he that

shall not walk in darkness, but shall have the light of life.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS JOHN 7:37-53; 8:12.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, I would begin each new day with Thee, and at its close commit myself, my deeds, and all my words into Thy keeping.

If Thou wilt cleanse the fountain of my heart, and be in me a well of water springing up into everlasting life, then will all my thoughts be pure and all my deeds be right. Amen.

"Plenteous grace with Thee is found Grace to cover all my sin;
Let the healing streams abound;
Make and keep me pure within.
Thou of life the fountain art,
Freely let me take of Thee;
Spring Thou up within my heart,
Rise to all eternity."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, last day of feast of tabernacles, early October, A. D. 29. Place, the temple and its environs, the fountain—gate and the pool of Siloam. Persons, Jesus, the priestly families, the Levites, the Pharisees, the Sadducees, the Jewish multitude, and foreign visitors.

Scripture Setting: The Life-Giving Fountain. Around the well at Haran. Gen. 29: 1-12. A drink from Bethlehem's well. 2 Sam. 23:11-17. A drink at Jacob's well. John 4:5-15. The wells of salvation. Isa. 55:1-11. A final invitation. Rev. 22: 12-17.

Life and Conduct Setting: This passage presents the world proclamation of Jesus as the well-spring of spiritual satisfaction. 1. Three springs that never run dry: (a) the tears of Christ shed in compassion and sympathy, (b) the love of God flowing down in the sacrificial blood of His Son for redemption, (c) the gift of the Holy Spirit out-poured for power and service. 2. Christ is the true Rock smitten on Calvary, pouring forth (a) living water, (b) a copious stream, (c) flowing in its diffusiveness from heart to heart, (d) accessible to all. 3. The temporary booths were taken down, the golden pitcher stolen, the temple itself destroyed, but Jesus abides the fountain of life and power.

THE FLOWING FOUNTAIN THAT NEVER FAILS.

The Central Ceremony. "On the last day, the great day of the feast." The feast of tabernacles was called the greatest feast of the year, and the last day was called the greatest day, and celebrated with great pomp. Its central ceremony was the out-pouring of water, commemorative of the rock smitten by Moses. So important did the Jews consider this act that the whole week was called the week of water pouring.

The temple procession marched to the pool of Siloam, where the priest filled the golden pitcher with water and then bore it at the head of the column to the temple, where before all the people it was poured out at the base of the altar, as Isaiah's words were sung, "With joy shall ye draw water from the wells of salvation." Immediately after the great Hallel was sung, consisting of six Psalms, beginning with the 113th. A brief moment of silence fell upon all, and then, loud enough to be heard throughout the temple, sounded words so strange and yet so suitable, "If any man thirst, let him come unto Me and drink." These words interrupted not the service, but they interpreted its meaning.

The Central Figure. "Jesus stood, and cried." It is easy to name the central figure of the feast, who at this time had become the central figure of His nation. In the capital city, the metropolis of the country, there had been a nervous tension, a growing apprehension that Jesus would use this great occasion to manifest Himself. Yet the enmity of the rulers was well known. His disciples also were losing faith in Him. At a previous feast the Pharisees, offended at the form the service had taken, caused 6,000 to be killed on the temple floor. The Pharisees were harboring a deadly hostility, and had commanded the officers to arrest Him. In this crisis the populace was asking, "Dare He come up to the feast?" Christ answers them when in the calmness of His courage He stands before them that last great day unattended and unafraid. "Some of them would have taken Him, but no man laid hands on Him."

Hard as it is to explain, it is harder to explain why, after nearly 2,000 years, Jesus is still the central figure. Only forty years after this a fire-brand was thrown by one of the soldiers of Titus and the temple went up in smoke. Jackals bark and owls hoot where the great Hallel once was sung. Only the mountains round about Jerusalem remain unchanged. But in ten thousand temples in this Christian era Jesus stands and offers water from the wells of salvation.

A Universal Thirst. "If any man thirst." Jesus assumed that the claim of religion is universal, that all men thirst for God. Every man who heard His voice break the stillness must have been struck by His astounding words. His listeners were both patriotic and religious. But they had grown weary of forms and symbols. They were weary of following a pitcher, even a golden pitcher, that did not quench spiritual thirst. They had burned bullocks on the altar day after day, but these forms did not satisfy. They were thirsty for God. In place of the golden pitcher He offers His own living, loving personality to supply the spiritual wants of humanity. Man can best find God through the God-man. The world still thirsts to drink long and deep of a living, Divine Personality. Not to join a church, not to subscribe to a creed, not to follow a priest, but to assume personal relations with the highest and holiest. Fashion has her followers, pleasure her votaries, wealth her pursuers, and fame her worshippers, but on the worn and sad faces of countless thousands today it is written, "These do not satisfy."

A Universal Supply. "Let him come unto Me." The weary, the heavy laden, the thirsty; all, regardless of age, condition, sex, color, or nationality, are included in this gracious invitation. Jerusalem was for the Jews alone, though they allowed visiting strangers. The pool of Siloam was really a conduit which brought the water from the virgin's fountain down to the city to increase its supply in time of siege. This canal, with the inscription of the workmen upon it, has been unearthed, and is proved to be the work of Hezekiah. The water supply of Jerusalem was always limited, and the Jewish religion was like it, a narrow stream that flowed into Jerusalem for home consumption.

Occasionally a great prophet like Isaiah caught sight of the Divine well-spring which God should yet open for Israel and the world, "Ho, every one that thirsteth, come ye to the waters, and he that hath no money come." Now in the midst of this great religious metropolis God publishes through His Son that He provides copious springs to satisfy the deepest cravings of the human spirit. Jesus breaks the pitcher at the ancient well of religion, destroying the distinction between Jew and Samaritan, and lo, His life and love become the great sacrament flowing for all. The Son of man's religion is for all the sons of men. Baal for the Phoenician, Apollo for the Greek, Mars for the Roman, Confucius for the Chinese, Mohammed for the Arabian, but Christ for the world. Black or white, brown or yellow, landsman or seaman, giant or pigmy, savage or civilized, barbarian or Scythian, bond or free, "If any one thirst, . . . drink."

Rivers of Salvation from the Rock of Ages. "Out of his belly shall flow rivers of living water." How easy it is to accept religiosity for religion. Even now there are many trying to satisfy themselves with the old life of religious formalism. Perhaps you have been content to be a pitcher, and in your devotion to churchly duties you have thought yourself a golden pitcher. Such a life will end in spiritual drought and famine. But Jesus, like the prophet, comes to touch that failing cruse of oil and make it a supply inexhaustible, "enough for each, enough for all, enough forevermore." I like that plural word "rivers," as though the Congo, the Mississippi, the Amazon, the Ganges, and a dozen other huge rivers would alone satisfy the thought of Christ for every one of His beloved. Paul was thirsty, dissatisfied with Judaism; he drank of the chalice of Christian experience, and lo, his life became a mighty river, flowing across the continents and the centuries, blessing and gladdening the race.

The Great Divide. "So there was a division of the people because of Him." The chief physical feature of our North American continent is the great central ridge of the Rocky Mountains known as the Great Divide. These towering masses decide the direction of the watershed on either side. So as Jesus stood in the temple on Mount Moriah on that last day of the feast inviting the whole world to satisfy their spiritual thirst in Him, He became the Great Divider of human destinies. Again and again does John record how the lofty truth and sublime character of Jesus divided the multitude. We can never be the same after hearing the words of Christ, for as Paul says, "The Gospel is a savor of life unto life, or of death unto death." We can never look upon the character of Jesus without feeling the heavy weight of our own responsibility. We accept or reject, for there is no other alternative. In His presence every heart ponders the question Pilate could not answer, "What, then, shall I do with Jesus?"

A great constitutional lawyer followed his wife's pastor, who also possessed a legal training, through a series of remarkable sermons on the resurrection of Jesus. At the conclusion of the series he took the minister's hand at the altar and said with much feeling, "This is a case that demands a verdict, and the irresistible logic of it compels me to surrender my life to the Master." Yes, the Gospel is a case that demands a verdict. The Son of God strikes a line of cleavage through all time and by it judges all mankind. He is still the Divider of destinies. May we be of that company led beside the still waters with souls restored.

Quiz and Study. 1. On what occasion did Moses smite the rock for water? 2. What mother and child were miraculously preserved in the desert when the water was spent in the bottle? 3. Where did Elisha cleanse the water supply of a city? 4. What New Testament writer describes hypocrites as "wells without water?" 5. What is the last invitation in the Bible?

Practical Thoughts. 1. The sailor surrounded by water may die of thirst since the sea is not the water of life. 2. David's spiritual life flourished in all seasons, for said he, "All my springs are in Thee." 3. The godly life is fruitful, "like a tree planted by the rivers of waters." 4. Soul satisfaction is found in Christ; who drinks of Him "shall never thirst." 5. The Dead Sea holds its tide; the Jordan passes it on.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE MAN BORN BLIND.

And said unto him, Go, wash in the of Siloam.

(which is by interpretation, Sent.) He

his way therefore, and

and seeing. The

therefore,
and they which before had seen him that he was blind.
said, Is not this he that

Some said, This is he:
others said, He is like him: but he said, I am
he. Therefore said they unto him, How were thine eyes opened?
He answered and said,
A man that is called made clay, and anointed mine eyes, and said unto me, Go to the pool of Siloam, and wash:

and I went and washed,
and I received sight.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 9:1-41.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Be Thou my Light. Let Thy Word shine on my path to show me the way I ought to go. Let Thy life be my light of inspiration, awaking in me the noble and the good. Let Thy Spirit be a burning light, purifying me from all sin. And when my eyes close in death may they open in the morning of the resurrection to see the King in His beauty. Amen.

"O God, who made me, help me see Just why I came to earth
And help me the real thing to be
For which Thou gavest me birth.
The darkness of my soul make light,
That I may look within,
And banish all the imps of night,
And life of life begin."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, the Sabbath, the day after the octave of the feast of tabernacles, A. D. 29. Place, the temple porch, Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus, the blind man, his parents, his neighbors, the Pharisees, and other Jews.

Scripture Setting: The Light of Faith. Two blind men see, Matt. 9:27-31. The beggar at the beautiful gate, Acts 3:1-10. Blindness of heart, Eph. 4:17-24. Children of light, Eph. 5:7-14.

Life and Conduct Setting: This miracle sets forth the illuminating power of the Gospel. 1. The conclusive evidence of Christianity is a life restored and redeemed. 2. The best preaching is the personal and public testimony to God's power over sin. 3. The best Sabbath is the one in which we uplift men and glorify God. 4. The light of the body is the eye, and Christian faith illuminates and guides the soul. 5. Every man shall finally speak for himself, his belief or his denial testifying to his sight or his blindness.

FOUR QUESTIONS ANSWERED.

A Question of Theology. "Rabbi, who did sin, this man, or his parents, that he should be born blind." One Sabbath day as Jesus was making His way to the temple, accompanied by His disciples, He saw, perhaps begging at the temple gate, a man blind from his birth. Touched by his misfortune, doubtless Jesus inquired how long he had been blind. The disciples also had an interest in the case, but the incident shows how Teacher and disciples look upon the selfsame scene and receive impressions as different as vision and blindness.

This incident offers to the disciples a neat little problem in theology. If there were a hereditary cause for the malady, and it were visited upon him for the sins of his parents, why should their innocent child suffer? But if it were a punishment for his own sin, how could it be known before he was born that he was to be a sinner above his fellows? The Lord Himself had little interest for such unprofitable speculations. He warns them that the night soon comes when all will be enveloped in the darkness wherein no man can work. He does not see fit to discuss the deep and dark question of the origin and entrance of evil into the world. Instead He pushes back His robe and begins to mix the clay with which to anoint the sightless sockets.

It is the part of practical wisdom, when the house already is in flames, to defer the debate on how the fire started, and save at once the family and the home. The disciples saw a penalty and a punishment, the Teacher saw an opportunity to help man and glorify God at once. In a brief space this man's darkness would blaze with miraculous illumination, revealing Christ, the light of the world.

A Question of Method. "They said therefore unto him, how then were thine eyes opened?" This second irrelevant question was asked a number of times, first by the neighbors in idle curiosity, then by the Pharisees, anxious to prove a Sabbath law had been violated, then to the parents, who refuse to answer it, then a second time to the son. He is weary with it. His answer is curt. "I told you even now, and ye did not hear: wherefore would ye hear it again?" The question of method is important, but to the Pharisee it was all important.

No two of Christ's miracles were performed alike, as no two blades of grass He has made are alike. Sometimes, as in stilling Galilee, He spoke but a word. At other times He adopted slow and elaborate methods, assisted by, or conforming to the laws of nature, as in this case. The clay, the spittle, and the bath in the pool of Siloam in no wise detract from the splendor of the miracle, but they must have greatly stimulated faith and obedience in the heart of the blind man. The saliva of a man who had fasted, the ancients believed, had great healing virtue, and they bound clay upon the eyelids to heal tumors.

But the principles that controlled Christ in His choice of means are hidden from our sight. The bath in the pool of Siloam called forth active obedience on the part of the blind man. He did not question the method, but obeyed. Here is forthshadowed the far greater miracle of Divine cleansing from sin. We are by nature born blind, prone to do evil as the sparks fly upward. Nothing but the cleansing fountain of redemption can wash away sin. No two receive spiritual sight by exactly the same method, but two principles are always discoverable, the Divine love and power that performs the miracle coöperating with the faith and obedience of the man who is saved. The naturalness and simplicity of the method was no stumbling block to this poor seeker after light. He had something to do, and he hurried to do it. Willingness is the key to salvation. Many a man has been saved in the very first step of obedience he took.

A Question of Identity. "The neighbors therefore said, Is not this he that sat and begged? Others said, It is he: others said, No, but he is like him." He said, "I am he." A public beggar in a city becomes widely known, in form and feature, often better known than the mayor. He chooses some public corner where the throngs pass, and early and late holds forth his palm. Many there were who had watched this pathetic figure grow from youth to manhood. They knew his parents and easily found them. His blindness, his age,—having recently arrived at his majority,—his tattered clothes, the accents of his voice, so often heard in pleading for alms, all these made his identity easy, not only to his neighbors, but to many passers-by. Here was the same man, at the very spot where he had so long begged, his parents and his neighbors around him, yet the crowd is divided on the question of his identification. Half are saying, It is he, the other half, No, but he is like him.

The confusion was owing to the great change that had passed over the man. If no Christ had passed that way there would have been no confusion, no division among the people. The chief priests were half right when on another occasion they bring the charge against Christ, "He stirreth up the people." Without Christ there would have been the quiet that is the sign of stagnation and death, broken only by the plaintive begging of a blind man.

It is hard to identify any man who in his sin meets Jesus and is transformed by His power. He may afterwards bear the same name, live in the same house, retain the same temperament and the intonations of voice, but he is so changed that the world is confused and the opposers of religion are defiant.

The man himself settled the question of his identity by insisting, "I am he." This poor man dared the Pharisees, was excommunicated from the synagogue,—which meant he was treated by all his fellow-townsmen as a moral leper,—because he would not deny either his own identity or that of his Healer. In a deeper sense he was not the same man at all. Once he was a beggar; now his begging days are over. Once he sat all day, a man with body, mind, and soul unproductive, existing but not living. In the census of Jerusalem he counted as a man, but in reality a helpless, worthless pauper. Now he is a man, standing alert and keen, in possession of all his faculties, a productive member of human society, a believer, a witness, a worshipper. When the synagogue casts out such, what a sad reflection it is upon the synagogue.

A Question of Character. "What sayest thou of Him, in that He opened thine eyes? And he said, He is a prophet." In this miracle the whole rabbinic system was on trial at its chief center. The miracle was so apparent that none could really deny it.

But the Pharisees, knowing how the common people stood in fear of them, hoped to brow-beat the parents into either denying the miracle or denying that the son was blind at birth. Failing here, they return to the young man himself. Since the wondrous fact could neither be denied nor explained, they must, if possible break down the natural inference that He who did this work was Divine.

The young man had not yet been taught the higher truth, so when asked what he has to say of Christ, he gives the inadequate answer, "A prophet." But his indirect testimony to the character of Christ is powerful. He would not pose as an authority on the question whether Christ were a sinner or not, but he was perfectly competent to testify that His healing work was perfect, "whereas I was blind, now I see." "Since the world began it was never heard before that a man born blind was given sight." He holds them to the great central fact of the case, then puts them in a pit from which they cannot extricate themselves. Does God ever give to a "sinner" this supreme power?

This grateful follower of Christ has little to say about His character, but what he does say speaks volumes on the character of Jesus. He suffered ostracism from Jewish society for His sake; he so stood for Him before the Pharisees that they exclaimed, "Thou art His disciple." He believed on Him and worshipped Him. It was the unstudied, resistless expression of adoration for the character of Jesus.

This Friend heard the youth had been cast out and found him, not by accident but by seeking, knowing that one with such a martyr spirit was not far from the Kingdom. O that sympathizing breast of Christ, so soon to know when we are forsaken, so eager to find us, so able to help us, so willing to lead us into the light of perfect love and discipleship.

Quiz and Study. 1. In which Gospel is the account of the healing of two blind men? 2. What two natural remedies does Christ apply? What third one is applied by the blind man? 3. On what two points did the parents affirm knowledge; on what two did they deny knowledge? 4. Of what was the whole miracle a symbol; how?

Practical Thoughts. 1. The blindness of the beggar was real and known; the blindness of the Pharisees was as real but unknown to them. 2. Christ stated He was the light of the world, symbolized it by healing the blind, proved it by spiritual awakenings. 3. Every Christ-like worker meets objections, misrepresentations, and opposition. 4. The path of obedience leads to the mount of vision. 5. There is only one question of supreme importance, the Gospel.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

Then said Jesus unto them again, Verily, verily, I say unto you, I am the

All that ever came before me are but the sheep did not hear them. I am the door; by me if any

he shall be

and shall go in and out, and find

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS JOHN 10:1-16.

Prayer: Thou mighty Christ, Keeper of the fold, and Seeker of the straying, let me hear Thy voice and follow where Thou leadest. As I begin each new morning do Thou lead me out; and as night-time comes lead me to the shelter of Thy presence. Reminded of how black was the night and how deep the love when Thou didst find me and bring me back, may I love the Shepherd's voice and love the peaceful fold. Amen.

"While dies the day in purple and in splendor,
The swift, sweet day that meant so much to me,
While darkness comes and birds their vespers render,
I would draw near, O Master, unto Thee."
—Fred L. Pattee.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Autumn, A. D. 29, soon after healing of the blind man. Place, the temple, Jerusalem; the last of the temple discourses. Persons, Christ and the Pharisees.

Scripture Setting: The Pastoral Office. Shepherds false and true, Ezek. 34:7-16. Shepherd of Israel, Jer. 23:1-8. The searching Shepherd, Luke 15:4-7. Feeding the flock, 1 Pet. 5:1-4.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage sharply contrasts the false shepherds and the true. 1. The great purpose of the shepherd's care is to save the sheep. 2. The best portraits of Jesus are those self drawn. 3. The early bishops of Rome protected the flock to the giving of their lives. 4. There is an instinct in Divinely taught hearts, causing them to flee from the voice of the stranger void of shepherd love. 5. How sad to see leaders spiritually blind attempting to lead men with the wandering sheep nature.

THE SHEEP, THE SHEPHERD, AND THE SHEEPFOLD.

The Door. "I am the door of the sheep." The occasion of this parable was not a flock of sheep in the distance, or the fact that many of His hearers were employed in sheep raising, but that the listening Pharisees were false shepherds. They had proved in the preceding lesson, by casting out of the synagogue a poor, blind young man, that they were not true shepherds of God's flock. Christ's wonderful story opens with a general picture of the beautiful relation existing between the shepherd and his sheep. It was designed to show that the Pharisees were shepherds only in name.

The very fact that the multitude had broken away from their religious leaders, refusing to follow them, and were flocking to Him, hanging upon His gracious words, was evidence as convincing as it was unwelcome. To show the Pharisees even more conclusively how dangerous and wicked was their attitude of hostility to Him, He likens Himself to the only door of the sheepfold. It is necessary for the shepherds as well as the sheep to find an entrance through the door of the fold. The sheep, the common people, were simple-minded enough to use that one lowly Door provided. For the prophecies of their Scriptures had so designated Him; the Door of hope God had provided for Israel's flock.

But when the supposed shepherds refuse to enter by that Door with the sheep, and seek some novel and irregular way of climbing up, their conduct shows they are not shepherds at all, but thieves and robbers. The porter able to judge them and challenge their entrance was the body of the Jewish Scriptures. Standing before such passages as Ezek. 34, Jer. 23 and Zech. 11, their mercenary spirit was revealed.

The Hireling. "The hireling fleeth, because he is an hireling." These Pharisees, or hireling shepherds, had in part deceived the sheep, but they could not deceive Christ. Lacking as they did the shepherd-love, they were totally unfit for the emergency about to come. Since they were in the service for pay, and were unwilling to stake their very lives for the salvation and deliverance of the sheep, they would fail when the poor, frightened, stampeded sheep fled to them for protection from the wolves.

The wolf is the great enemy that stands in antithesis to the great Shepherd. When it is allowed to get into the sheepfold of the church, what havoc and ruin is wrought. It tears and eats what it can, and it will bite all the sheep to death before it eats a single one. If it cannot kill, then it will at least scatter them, so that as a flock they exist no more. A craven hireling, loving his wages, but loving not the sheep, will stand revealed in his true nature in such troublous times. Not to resist the great enemy is to become the enemy's agent and confederate.

The Robber. "He that climbeth up some other way, the same is a thief and a robber." All men must be judged by motives. The design of the Pharisee was a selfish one, his object being wool, milk, and mutton. The shepherd's joy is to feed the sheep, the robber's joy is to feed his stomach, even by destroying and scattering the sheep.

Pharisees, Sadducees and Nationalists had all been climbing up some other way with treacherous purpose, while all along the institutions, prophecies and promises of the Old Testament had clearly pointed to Christ as the Door through which all must pass to God's fold. They were cunningly but wrongfully taking what was not theirs. Like a robber and a plunderer of the fold that had seized the power to excommunicate one who dared out of gratitude for his sight to follow the good Shepherd.

What more accurate description of Pharisees and Sadducees who had appropriated the rule of God's flock than call them thieves and robbers who had climbed up some other way?

The Sheep. "I know my sheep, and am known of mine." There is no similitude in nature which so aptly exhibits the dependence and helplessness of humanity as a flock of sheep. "This simple creature," says Luther, "has special note among all creatures, that it quickly hears the voice of the shepherd, follows no one else, depends entirely on him, cannot help itself, but is shut up to another's aid." The poor sheep is unprotected, exposed to the danger of wandering, weak and infirm in going, and so constituted as to require of necessity a strong protector.

In our human pride we may be inclined to laugh at the symbolism, but the strongest men have at times shown in their conduct the sheep's nature. The domestic sheep is fortunately docile, tractable and patient. It is intelligent enough to know the voice of the shepherd and to follow him. In the Eastern world a mutual confidence and familiarity exists between shepherd and sheep delightful to see. So the relation of Christ to us; the consciousness of being loved, awakens our love in return.

The Shepherd. "I am the Good Shepherd: the Good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." The true Shepherd is He who came to lead us through God's door of covenant—mercy and Gospel—promise. The hireling came to take money, the robber to take life, but the Good Shepherd to give life and preserve it. He would distinguish Himself from the hireling shepherds by "laying down His life for the sheep." He had "power to lay it down, and power to take it up." The Messiah-Shepherd was to die and rise again, but His death and resurrection were to be voluntary, sovereign, Divine.

Not all His sheep were of the Jewish fold, but the scattered sheep of the Gentile world should also hear His voice, "and there shall be one fold, one Shepherd." All demarcations are finally to fall away, when all are led to living fountains of water in the new world; and one common eternal praise will redound to the one Shepherd, whose name alone worthily closes all.

The Heavenly Fold. "And there shall be one fold." Christ gave His own life that He might give to His sheep eternal life. If we hear His voice and follow Him, we will go with Him through the garden, to the grave and dwell with Him forever. When the long night of death comes on the Shepherd shows His loving care by leading His own into the fold prepared. "If it were not so I would have told you."

The only child of wealthy and worldly German parents died in early life. They became inconsolable in their grief, complained against the dispensation of God, and demanded of their pastor an explanation of so unkind a providence. He promised to give them an answer in the funeral discourse. Like Christ, he framed his thought in a parable: There was once a shepherd who prepared choice food in a fold for his sheep. He opened the door wide, but the sheep would not enter therein. At length he took a little lamb from the flock and carried it in, and lo, the parents followed after. That good shepherd is Christ; the open fold, Heaven; your child, the lamb; the stubborn sheep, ye parents that have stayed so long without. If you have the hearts of parents, follow the bleating of your little lamb, for the Good Shepherd has carried him into the Heavenly fold that you parents may follow after.

"Hear the Shepherd's voice so sweetly saying,
Loving words of comfort by the way,
Little flock, O why are ye so fearful?
Follow Me, I'll lead you day by day.
Hear the Shepherd's voice, 'Lo, I am with you!'
Pointing upward to the gates of gold,
'Tis the pleasure of the Heavenly Father,
In His Kingdom fair His sheep to fold."

Quiz and Study. 1. Name two great Jewish leaders, one patriarch, and one prophet who were shepherds. 2. What prophet condemned a king's action by the parable of a stolen lamb? 3. What other parable on the shepherd and the sheep did Christ relate as an answer to the Pharisees? 4. Which Psalm of David's reflects his shepherd life? 5. Where in this parable are we taught the Good Shepherd's authority, generosity, faithfulness, knowledge, catholicity?

Challenge Text. "I am the —, the — giveth his — for the —. John 10: (?).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Pitiable is that church which has a hireling for a shepherd; more pitiable where there are wolves instead of hirelings; most miserable where there are devils in place of wolves. 2. There are four kinds of ministers, good shepherds, hirelings, thieves and wolves. 3. The good shepherd has for his crook the cross, he pipes to his flock the melody of praise and prayer, he carries salt in his bag, the savor of a good example, and a sling at his side, the Word of Truth to put to fight the devil. 4. The sacrifice that struggled at the altar was reckoned unlucky by the heathen; our Sacrifice dedicated Himself, a freewill offering.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE MISSION OF THE SEVENTY.

After these things the Lord appointed other seventy also, and sent them

before his face into every and place, whither he himself would come. Therefore said he unto them, The truly is great,

but the

are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that he would send forth labourers into his harvest. Go your ways: behold, I send you forth as

among

Carry neither

nor

nor

and

no man by the way.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGES ARE LUKE 10:1-12, 17-20.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Help me to find my mission. Give me the ready and willing spirit which says, "Here am I, send me." I pray Thee that I may not neglect my own mission of little deeds at home while idly waiting for a call to some great work far away across the seas. Show me the home that needs my cheer today. May I breathe into some heart the message of courage. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

If you cannot cross the ocean,
And the heathen lands explore,
You can find the heathen nearer,
You can find them at your door:
If you cannot give your thousands,
You can give the widow's mite;
And the least you give for Jesus
Will be precious in His sight.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, uncertain, but probably between the feast of tabernacles and that of dedication of the temple, A. D. 29 Place, from the borders of Judea to those cities of Peraea and Judea, on the road to Jerusalem. Persons, Christ and thirty-five pairs of disciples, including Luke.

Scripture Setting: Laborers Sent Forth. Greatness of the harvest. Matt. 9: 35-38. The ripened field. John 4:31-38. Mission of the Twelve. Matt. 10: 5-14. Preparation for service. Eph. 6:10-20. Call to action. 1 Thess. 5:5-11.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage describes the equipment of the gospel missionary. 1. Belief in Jesus inspires the faith that His program will prevail, and all the world be His. 2. With the response of an obedient spirit comes the clear attestation that our way will be made plain, and the barriers in due time removed. 3. Those whom God commissions He empowers with ability, discernment and resistless passion. 4. The purest, most unalloyed joy that human life can yield is to return from an errand of the Holy Spirit conscious that our human personality has been the agency of reclaiming a life.

THE COMMISSION AND THE CONQUESTS OF THE GOSPEL COMRADES.

The Sending of the Seventy. "The Lord appointed seventy others and sent them two and two." The mission of the Seventy falls into a late period, when Jesus resolved to go to Jerusalem for the last time. As John the Baptist had, at the first, heralded His coming, so now two heralds were to visit every place in His route to Jerusalem and urge, as representatives of the New Testament church, that Jerusalem accept this rule, and open the gates to her rightful King.

The number seventy corresponds to the seventy elders (Ex. 24:1), and the seventy members of the Sanhedrin. John's mission had been a national failure, and this is a gracious effort made for the last time in opposition to the hostility of His enemies. He saw multitudes throughout Israel, distressed and prostrate, like sheep without a true shepherd's care, and His Divine compassion would make a last loving appeal.

Prayer to Heaven for Harvest Hands. "The harvest truly is great, but the laborers are few: pray ye therefore the Lord of the harvest, that He would send forth laborers into His harvest." In this expression Christ had in His thought a much wider field than the route to Jerusalem now to be covered, and many more labors than the seventy now commissioned. He was asking them to pray, as He still asks us, for the vast world-field whose soul-harvest must be gathered in, and for Gospel harvesters to be raised up, called and trained for missionary work.

This is not a case in which the demand controls the supply; the supply of men and women who felt a definite call to Christian work has never once equalled the demands of the field. Christ placed His hand upon the great source of all our supplies when He urged, "Pray ye." Moody was wont to say, "It is better to set ten men to work than to do ten men's work." But while Moody in life did do ten men's work, he never ceased to pray that God would raise up men to man the work. And how his own faith and consecrated example helped to answer his prayers. Whether you look at his Bible Institute in Chicago or his schools in Northfield and Mount Hermon you behold each June at graduation the "other seventy also" starting out to use their Christian training in "every city and place whither he himself would come." The father's warm heart and active brain lives again in his distinguished and consecrated son, Will Moody. Christian parents are Gospel comrades "sent two and two," not only to labor themselves, but to remember the great field daily in prayer, and to lead if possible their own children to follow in their steps.

Their Commission and Code of Conduct. "Heal the sick, and say unto them, The Kingdom of Heaven is come nigh unto you." These were to be itinerant preachers to arouse and organize the Christian life of communities, but not to remain and govern them. They were the Lord's flying squadron to hurriedly visit many ports; His mounted cavalry to preach as they went, traveling the circuit of many cities. They were to carry no impedimenta, but to depend for their rations and equipment largely upon the kindness which their message of peace would awaken. Even purse, script, and shoes must be left as unnecessary, since they would disturb the simplicity of their faith in their great Sender.

Their commission differed greatly from John the Baptist's, who did not travel up and down, performed no miracles, and preached not the opened Kingdom of peace. The ground-tone of their preaching was not to be John's severe summons to repentance, but the evangelical and gracious "Peace be to this house: the Kingdom of God is come nigh unto you." And since they were publicans and unlettered fishermen in large part, it was needful for them to work miracles to prove the genuineness of their call and their message.

In the simplicity of their faith and fidelity to duty, exposed as they were to danger and opposition, they were to take nothing. They had nothing to carry except the glad news that God welcomed the sinner, and the power to graciously heal any of the household who were sick. There is one burden the Christian worker is free from, that is the burden of guilt which rests thereafter alone upon the unbelieving.

The City Condemned for Rejecting Its Chance. "Even the very dust of your city, which cleaveth on us, we do wipe off against you." There is a great Christian principle running through all Scripture, and all life, which declares that exalted privilege neglected brings added condemnation. As far back as in the song of Deborah and Barak this principle is recorded in history. In the battle between Israel and the Canaanites on the banks of the Kishon, Sisera had a distinct advantage in commanding nine hundred chariots of iron. But it could have been overbalanced by the position of the men of Meroz, who lived on a height commanding an important pass through which the enemy must come. Meroz miserably failed in the hour of her opportunity, and though the people of God triumphed finally, Meroz gets only a curse in that national song of victory:

"Curse ye Meroz, said the angel of the Lord,
Curse ye bitterly the inhabitants thereof;
Because they came not to the help of the Lord,
To the help of the Lord against the mighty."

It is exactly this which Jesus sets forth in this lesson: "To whomsoever much is given, of him shall much be required." Had Tyre and Sydon received admonitions similar to those given Chorazin and Bethsaida they would have repented. But these latter cities were so guilty in proportion to their privileges that the Divine woe fell upon them, and today we cannot even identify their sites. Oh, the cities that have been preached to, and wept over, which remained hard and impenitent! Their broken stones lie scattered in the valley, or covered by the shifting sands of the desert. How sad that the city in which Jesus preached the most, the city over which he wept, and said, "They shall not leave in thee one stone upon another; because thou knowest not the time of thy visitation,"—that Jerusalem, most exalted of all, should sink lowest of all through superior privileges neglected. The message of God to the modern city and the modern man is one of wooing love and reconciliation. But the city and the man who heed not the messengers of Christ thereby seal their own doom.

Christian Cheer. "And the Seventy returned again with joy, saying, Lord, even the devils are subject unto us." The mission of the Seventy was that of pioneers, and temporary, probably including only a single missionary tour. The mission of the Twelve contemplated world-wide and permanent results. Evidently the Seventy were not long away, and we never again read of them. But the tired workmen come filing in, as they went forth, two by two, and, like harvest hands on summer eves, they return singing, bringing their sheaves.

Christ Himself is cheered by the welcome thought that His soldiers have grasped the secret of victory. He had watched them in their triumphs, and, as if compressing all the great Christian conquests of the future in a moment of time, and quickening it into the rapidity of lightning, He declares, "I beheld Satan as lightning fall from Heaven." There is no joy for the believing Christian like that which comes after winning a convert to Christ and seeing Satan fall from his throne.

A young man in Indianapolis expressed his difficulties in believing in Christianity, and a prominent layman asked for his address, found his boarding house and sat down in the hall bedroom to urge upon him the Gospel. One difficulty after another was met, and then they engaged in earnest prayer. Surprised and delighted was the worker when the young man surrendered unconditionally to Christ. As he told his pastor the story he said: "I have had many thrilling experiences, but this one is the happiest of all." The worker who stayed till one in the morning with the strange young man was Benjamin Harrison, ex-President of the United States.

Quiz and Study. 1. Name the twelve original disciples. 2. What is meant by the statement, "The laborer is worthy of his hire?" 3. What is meant by "power to tread on serpents and scorpions?" 4. On what occasion did Jesus tell His followers to take a purse, scrip and sword? 5. Quote some text proving that the Heavenly rank of the Christian is fixed by his personal work.

Challenge Text: And they that be — shall shine as the — of the —; and they that — many to righteousness as the — forever and ever. Dan. 12: (?).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Two ways of caring for the harvest—adding to the number of reapers, increasing the power and value of each. 2. An ordinary man weighs 150 pounds; a man dead in earnest weighs a ton. 3. It is not ours to decide whether the heathen who have never heard the Gospel will be lost, but ours to send them the Gospel. 4. The best preparation for soul-winning is a loving heart.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE GOOD SAMARITAN.

And Jesus answering said, A certain man went down from

to Jericho,
and fell among

which

and wounded
him,
and half dead. And by chance there came down a certain that way:

and when he saw him, he

on the other side. And likewise
a Levite,
when he was at the place,

and passed by on the other side.

THE GOOD SAMARITAN

BY PLOCKHORST.

In answer to the questionings of a certain ruler, Christ replied that he must love his neighbor as himself. Then asked the ruler: "Who is my neighbor?" Christ told him a story, which contained the answer, about a merciful Samaritan who helped a wounded Jew. Now no Jew would acknowledge that a Samaritan could be his neighbor.

As the story runs, a Jew was attacked by thieves who robbed him of his all, even of his clothing, and wounded him seriously. A passing priest looked at him and went his way. Also a Levite passed, indifferent to the man's plight. But a Samaritan who might have been a heathen, took pity on him, bathed his wounds and, laying him on his own beast, took him to an inn, cared for him and paid his board in advance. Thus the despised Samaritan was in reality the neighbor of the poor man, and those of his own race were not. The artist, Plockhorst, found here a picturesque motive. The naked, wounded man is a well drawn figure. The tender expression of the Samaritan's face give opportunity for character study, and the wild valley suggests a highwayman's opportunity.

The group is so composed as to make a saddled donkey important. In the distance, the priest and Levite are separately following their own route. The broken pilgrim staff and the torn wallet of the unfortunate traveler speak of the visit of the robbers. The rugged country has given the artist a fine opportunity for a good landscape painting.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

THE GOOD SAMARITAN.

"Copyright, Photographische Gesellschaft," and "By Permission of the Berlin Photographie Co., New York."

THE GOOD SAMARITAN.

But a certain Samaritan, as he came where he was: and when he saw him,

he had compassion on him. And

and pouring in oil and wine, and

and brought him to

And
on the morrow
when he took out

and gave them to the host, and said unto him, Take care of him; and whatsoever thou spendest more, when I come again, I will repay thee. Which now of these thinkest thou,

was neighbour unto him that fell among the

And he said, He that shewed mercy on him. Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS LUKE 10:25-37.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Help me to do good to all men, but especially to those who need it most. Give me the heart of a true neighbor, who cannot pass by on the other side when some fellow-being is in trouble and distress.

In trouble help me to show compassion, in sorrow show sympathy, and in need show myself a friend of men. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"I see from my house by the side of the road,
By the side of the highway of life,
The men that press on with the ardor of hope,
And the men that are faint with the strife.
And I turn not away from their smiles and their tears,
Both parts of an infinite plan.
Let me live in a house by the side of the road
And be a friend to man."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 29, immediately following last lesson, when thirteen parables, evangelical in character, are spoken. Place, somewhere in Peraea, as Christ makes His final appearance in Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus, the disciples, a Jewish lawyer, and a miscellaneous group.

Scripture Setting. Love's Healing Ointment. The Levitical law of the neighbor, Lev. 19:9-18. The wounds of sin, Isa. 1:4-6. The compassion of God, Ezek. 16:5, 6, 9-14. Dealing with a fallen brother, Gal. 6:1-10. Formality and spirituality, Isa. 58:4-12.

Life and Conduct Setting: This passage portrays the incarnated spirit of true religion contrasted with pretension. 1. The priest looked on, the Levite drew near, the Samaritan stooped down to lift up. 2. You cannot judge another's religion by his outward signs. A long robe may cover a shrivelled heart. 3. The Samaritan gave medicine, mercy, and money, and last of all gave himself. 4. Hollow is that worship on the Sabbath that blinds our eyes to human misery on the morrow. 5. A religion that costs nothing is worth it.

WHO IS MAN'S NEIGHBOR?

The Legal Questioner. "A certain lawyer stood up, and tempted him." Regular argumentative contests between rabbis were quite common in the time of Christ. On His final journey to Jerusalem He encountered an expert in Jewish canon law, a lawyer who was anxious to cross swords in debate with the great Rabbi of Nazareth. It must not be supposed that this lawyer was seeking light on a moral question so much as the personal satisfaction and reputation which might be gained if only he could ensnare Christ in the net of his argument.

There seems to be none of that rancour and malice which characterized the Jerusalem scribes and teachers who were always setting some one forward to ask of Christ questions the discussion of which was sure to provoke ill-feeling.

As this discussion progresses we discover in the lawyer one who attached great value to good works, but who was quite willing to justify himself. It must not be forgotten that the parable which follows, like the Sermon on the Mount, does not include the whole Gospel, but contains the truth this lawyer could best appropriate.

The Legal Question. "He, willing to justify himself, said unto Jesus, And who is my neighbor?" It is easier, as someone has said, to ask questions, than to answer them. The lawyer seemed good at cross-questioning, and Jesus proved his match in the more difficult work of answering him. The first question referred to the means of securing eternal life. Christ lets the lawyer answer his own question by asking him to cite the answer given by the law. The lawyer glibly quotes from Deuteronomy and Leviticus, and Jesus commends his answer.

And now the lawyer would have a scripture term defined, neighbor; "Who is my neighbor?" This was a great question to put, for it brings out in striking contrast the difference of meaning attaching to the same term when interpreted by the Jewish rabbis or interpreted by Christ. The "neighbor" in Lev. 19:18 was the man across the street, if he were of the same blood and religion. The neighbor of Christ is any man who may be in trouble, though unworthy and disagreeable, and though he lives on the other side of the globe. The curse of the whole Pharaic system lay in the self-righteous pride with which it separated itself from the world about it, making its own religion a literal hatred of the rest of mankind.

The Parabolic Answer. Jesus made answer, and said, "A certain man was going down from Jerusalem to Jericho." An answer to the lawyer's question on the meaning of neighbor was as unnecessary as a definition of the word "love," or the term "whole heart." The question of Christ, "How readest thou?" had already revealed that this lawyer was reading the Divine law as a special pleader, looking for evasions and back doors. An evil heart can find in the very central words of religion suggestions for casuistry and insincerity. Like the priest traveling down to Jericho, returning to the city of priests after officiating at the temple; knowing minutely every word of the sacred volume he is reading, but though he sees his duty, is able to excuse himself from doing it, so the lawyer had learned the book by heart, but the inward truth had not lodged in his heart.

The man who needs our friendship, sympathy, and compassion is not necessarily a Jew, he is only "a certain man." There is no mention of nation, tribe, rank, or character. We are related, and we owe practical help to the poor and friendless man lying in our path half dead. To commit murder we have only to pass on and let him die. When we see a fellow-being on the brink of eternity there is no religious piety nor even human pity in hurrying home to pray for his poor soul or to hope some one else will run across him.

Possibly the shameful example of the heartless priest influenced the Levite who was traveling just behind him. Since the priest, so much his superior, would not stain his beautiful robes with that smeared, naked body lying in its own blood, much less could it be expected that he, a Levite, would succor him. With possibly a little more compassion than his predecessor, he draws near, looks on him with unimpassioned gaze, without winking an eye, or bending a finger. This Levite knew every jot and tittle of the Levitical law; he could not forget it. But he forgot to practice it.

How, think you, the poor traveler would have fared if the third one had not chanced to pass that way? It was the despised, half-heathen Samaritan that had the compassion to investigate, the neighbor-heart to sympathize, and the strong arms to reach under and lift up.

The Parable Applied. "Which of these three, thinkest thou, proved neighbor unto him that fell among robbers?" It was not in Christ's purpose to hide some subtle meaning in each detail of this parable. Fine distinctions have been pressed by a forced interpretation that degenerates into mere trifling. But it is easy to see in the whole parable a picture of man lying in sin and misery, whom neither the law nor the Levitical institutions could help, and to whom comes the mercy of Christ, the despised and rejected Samaritan.

Whoever finds in this merely a suggestion that it is the part of a humane spirit to alleviate the ills of the body, has not sounded its real depths. Those who are wounded in their souls, who are dying spiritually, need a Friend. And Christ became humanity's Helper by vitalizing the old truth of the law, not only supplying balm for our wounds, lifting us up from the mire of sin, nursing us with His own hands, paying the price of our health and recovery, building the church as a great hospital for spiritual healing, but by giving Himself on the cross He revealed love in such a manner as to shame, overpower, and awaken a return of love in hearts that were without love. Christ says to every redeemed and recovered patient, "Go and do to others as I have done to thee." And the world becomes an increasingly safe and sweeter place to live as the Samaritan spirit spreads.

How modern is Christ, anticipating in this parable the latest appliances for healing the sick! The Samaritan's beast anticipated the hospital ambulance; the Samaritan's care, in its faithfulness until the sun arose "on the morrow," anticipated the night nurse; the Samaritan's two pence and promise to stand good for more, anticipated the endowed beds in our hospital wards.

The Difference Between Defining and Doing. "Then said Jesus unto him, Go, and do thou likewise." There is no record whatever that the lawyer went. He was practicing law, but he had no intention of practicing the golden rule. There are two ways of finding out "who is my neighbor?" The first might be called the theoretical. With a sharp pencil on our ear and a pad of paper we might consult the city directory, find his name and address, and possibly his occupation. By consulting the polling list we might find his politics. The assessor or Bradstreet's might give us his financial standing. By telephoning his friends we might get a good personal description. The pad might be written full of notations that made up the theorists' knowledge of his neighbor.

But the practical man would hunt up his neighbor some evening, calling at his home. He would express pleasure at finding him in his neighborhood. He would observe his home life and acquaint himself with his family. If he were without employment he would suggest a firm that needed a man. If he had no regular place of worship he would invite him to his own church. If there were sickness in his family, he might offer to bring him a household remedy. The practical man would go home with little expert knowledge of his neighbor, perhaps, but he would have shown himself neighborly. The very heart of the good Samaritan kindness is the spirit of sympathy. To dream about the unfortunate, to dedicate poetry to them, and to write books on the submerged slums will never lift them like one hearty, practical handshake, and one generous act of helpfulness.

Quiz and Study: What six characters are introduced in the parable. 2. Name six things the Samaritan did for the man who was robbed. 3. What two things did the robbers do to their victim? 4. In what parable did Christ represent Himself as beaten and slain.

Practical Thoughts. 1. The lawyer wanted a talk, not a task. Many worshippers go to hear a sermon, not to receive the Divine directions. 2. The first hospital was built by the Hospitallers, an order of Monks, at Jerusalem in 1042. 3. The reason we know so little of the world's misery is because of our refusal to take a look. 4. Twelve thousand priests lived in Jericho in Christ's time, yet robbers infested the road, and a Jew might die unvisited, almost in sight of the city.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS LUKE 10:38-42; 11: 37-44, 53, 54.

Prayer. Help us, our Father, to interpret religion in terms of friendship with Thee and with Thy Son, the Lord Jesus Christ. May it be ours to welcome Him not only to our homes but to our hearts, and while compassing Him with loving observances may we also sit at His feet listening to his words of grace. Put far away from us all hypocrisy and guile and give to us that single-hearted love and service which alone is acceptable in Thy sight. Quicken our devotion, strengthen our faith, increase our love and make fruitful all our activities, for Thy name's sake. Amen.

I could not do without Thee;
No other friend can read
The spirit's strange, deep longings, Interpreting its need:
No human eye could enter
Each dim recess of mine
And soothe and hush and calm it,
Oh blessed Lord, like Thine.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 30. Place, Bethany near Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus, Martha and Mary; later, a Pharisee and a circle of Pharisees.

Scripture Setting: Jesus among the people. Jesus at a Wedding, John 2:1-11; Jesus by the Well Side, John 4:4-26; Jesus as Host, John 6:5-12; Jesus with His Own, Luke 22:14-20; False Friendship with Jesus, John 13:18-30; True Friendship for Jesus, Luke 7:36-47; The Breadth of Jesus' Sympathy, Luke 19:1-10; A Friendly Soul Among Foes, John 5:16; 6:41; 7:30; 8:59; and often elsewhere.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. A good man is not likely to be without friends. His goodness is the one thing in man that people tie to. Other qualities are necessary for social popularity but goodness begets trust and trust is the first requirement in friendship. 2. But a good man is not likely to be without enemies. This, too, must be reckoned with. Positive goodness is sure to antagonize evil. Jesus was at once the best loved and best hated man of his day. 3. Let it not be forgotten, however, that there is always something radically wrong with a nature which hates goodness. 4. It is the foundation of a true religion to live with Jesus on terms of friendship. 5. When he is welcome in the heart and in the home there peace and harmony abide. 6. One may invite the presence of Jesus at every meal by simply asking a blessing upon it in reverent temper. 7. In that way we may always eat and drink to the glory of God.

JESUS A WELCOME GUEST.

Jesus loved folks and was always at home in a social gathering. This was one of the reasons why the religious leaders of Jewry hated him. He was popular in the right way. He began his public ministry by helping at a wedding feast in Cana of Galilee (John 2); and he was a frequent guest at family and social festivals where indeed some of his most beautiful and searching disclosures were spoken. It was at a simple luncheon by the well side that he told the Samaritan woman the secret of true worship (John 4); it was as the guest of Zaccheus (Luke 19) that he declared his own mission to be that of seeking and saving the lost; it was as the guest of Simon the Leper (Matthew 26) that he taught his disciples the secret of loving service. Yes, Jesus came eating and drinking. Therefore, say the Pharisees, he is a wine bibber and glutton; therefore, say the sincere and honest of all the ages, he is the friend of man.

The Bethany Home. The references to Bethany, a suburb of Jerusalem, are numerous in the life of Jesus. The little village shares with Nazareth and Capernaum the glory of being one of his "homes." One home in particular seems to have been his favorite abiding place, the home of Lazarus (whom Jesus brought again from the dead) and of the sisters, Martha and Mary. Here occurred the incident selected for study. The sisters were equally devoted to Jesus, each in her own way. Martha in her way busied herself in providing for the material comfort of her Guest. Mary in her way compassed him with the service of waiting upon his fellowship and talk. For the perfect entertainment of a guest both are necessary. Just at the moment, when Jesus was feeling the urgency of his work, he was more responsive to the fellowship of sympathy than to the friendly anxiety about his bodily well being. His immediate hunger was of the heart rather than of the body. When, therefore, Martha "burst upon him"—so the word means—with her petulant complaint, "Lord, can not you say something to Mary, who has left me alone in the middle of my work and who is doing nothing but listening to you, that she come and help?" Jesus answered soothingly, "Martha, Martha, why fret yourself about such elaborate preparations for an old friend, an extra plate is all that is necessary and just now what I need more than anything else is the nourishment of friendly sympathy and companionship. Mary is giving me that; you come and join her; friendly intercourse, rather than the meal, is the thing that abides." Such, in rather clumsy paraphrase, is the significance of the dialogue. The truth Jesus emphasizes is simple enough—in friendship it is love rather than lavishness that matters. In our fellowship with God, for instance, God is more than any or all of his gifts.

Illustration. A Y. M. C. A. worker at the front greatly endeared himself to the "boys" by his untiring efforts for their comfort and diversion. He was hindered much by want of suitable quarters and, hoping to expedite matters, he made a journey to headquarters with urgency in his walk and in his speech. He was delayed a day or two and upon returning was surprised and pleased to see his boys at the station with "Welcome" writ large on every feature. He explained his absence and delay, and his disappointment at not being able to bring along with him the materials for his hut. To which the boys warmly replied, "We don't care a whoop for the hut, we want you."

An Ungracious Host. In sharp contrast to the cordial hospitality of the home in Bethany is the cold formality of the Pharisee who "besought Jesus to dine with him." The discourse throughout indicates two things, first that the Pharisee meant to make trouble for Jesus; and, second, that Jesus accepted fearlessly the challenge of the Pharisee in the interest of religious sincerity and honesty. The host somewhat ungraciously called his guest's attention to the fact that he (the guest) had not first washed before dinner." From the nature of our Lord's reply and of the Evangelist's comment in verses 53 and 54 the attack was gratuitous and deliberate. It was part of the plan of "seeking to catch something out of his mouth that they might accuse him." Could treachery and wickedness go farther?

Pharisaism Exposed. The burning words of Jesus wound but they carry healing also. The worst of Pharisaism is that it disguises badness under a vocabulary of goodness. The Pharisee, under the law, could deny support to his starving father and mother, by simply claiming that all his money was "Corban," that is, dedicated to Temple uses (Mark 7:8-13). When people are disposed to think of Jesus as weak and effeminate let them read his words to this Pharisee and his companions and remember that these same Pharisees, so far as Jesus was concerned, practically held the power of life and death. They are dreadful things he says: "Your inner life is filled with rapacity and malice;" "you disregard utterly the justice and love of God"—which you profess to exemplify; "you are like unsuspected tombs which men walk over unaware;" "you load men with irksome burdens and you will not put a finger to their burdens." "In other words," says Jesus, "the religion you profess is a religion from the teeth outwards; it is a religion of word, not of deed nor of the heart. It is the sort of religion God has always abhorred and will ever abhor, and it lies forever under his bitterest condemnation." To say these things was a brave attempt on the part of Jesus to warn the Pharisees of their danger; however brave, it was fruitless. From this time on the Pharisees followed him with a murderous cruelty as undeserved as it was relentless.

A Warning. It was not irreligious but religious men who sought and compassed the death of Jesus. Always suspect the virtue and sincerity of a religion which proposes inhuman methods to further the divine purposes. Calvin was not at his best but at his worst when he sanctioned the martyrdom of Servetus. He did not promote, he only defamed, the glory of God by reason of it. Burning witches, as did our Puritan forebears, had no evangelistic power or success. It did not exalt the Bible which was supposed to command it; it made the Bible more difficult to accept and obey for the majority of good people. The religion which promotes and cultivates hardness of heart and indifference to human suffering is never of God and always of the Devil.

Quiz and Study. 1. Study the Gospels with reference to Jesus as a Guest in the homes of the people and note the discourses recorded as he sits at meat with them. 2. How would you describe the difference between Martha and Mary in their relation to Jesus? 3. Do you know Mr. Kipling's poem, "The Sons of Martha"? And do you think it a fair characterization of the Sisters? 4. Find out from your Bible Dictionary what the Pharisees thought about "washings" and "ablutions." 5. Do you think Jesus was justified in using such sharp language to the host? 6. And if so, on what grounds do you justify it? 7. Is there ever such a thing as "righteous indignation"?

Seed Thought. 1. It helps friendship with Jesus to remember that he loved "folks" just as folks. 2. It is good to exalt the divine Christ; it is good also to remember the human Christ; He touches us at the point of our human lives just to show us how divine He is. 3. Martha was right in making provision for the comfort of her guest; but she was overdoing it and neglecting the kind of sympathetic attention which, at the moment, Jesus needed most. 4. We can be busy about many things, good enough in themselves, and yet miss doing the particular kind of service which brings most comfort to the heart of God. 5. Beware of professing the religion you do not live—that is Pharisaism.

DR. CHARLES M. STUART.

THE RICH MAN'S FOLLY.

And he spake a parable unto them, saying, The

of a certain rich

brought forth plentifully:

And he thought within himself, saying,
What shall I do, because I have no room where to bestow my

And he said,
This will
I do: I will

my barns, and greater; and there will I all my

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS LUKE 12:13-21.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, let not the desire to possess mere things rob me of the sense of my soul's worth. Let me not be a fool to follow such an unprofitable venture as to lose my soul in a vain effort to gain the world. I would seek first and always the Kingdom of God and Divine righteousness, knowing that the other things for which the Gentiles seek will be added in their needful measure. Amen.

"O dream beyond the saddest guess
As the long years of God unroll,
To make thy dreary selfishness
The prison of a soul."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, uncertain, but spoken near close of Peraean ministry. Place, in Peraea, on His last journey to Jerusalem. Persons, Christ, a young man, perhaps his older brother, the disciples and an innumerable multitude.

Scripture Setting: Earthly and Heavenly Riches. Wisdom compared with gold. Prov. 8:1-11. Placing God first. Luke 14:27-33. The recompense of reward. Heb. 10:28-35. Fraudulent and corrupted riches. James 5:1-6. True and false riches. Rev. 3:17-19.

Life and Conduct Setting: This lesson paints the folly and the doom of the near-sighted worldling.

1. The rich man's four-fold folly: (a) forgetting the Giver; (b) keeping all for self; (c) counting "things" as soul food; (d) neglecting to consider the daily possibility of death. 2. The rich man's four-fold doom: (a) life's plans frustrated; (b) facing God with empty hands; (c) the white light of the judgment throne inspecting a shriveled soul; (d) punishment for a wasted life.

THE RICH MAN WITH BIG BARNs AND SHRIVELED SOUL.

A Religious Teacher, Not a Civil Judge. "Man, who made Me a judge or a divider over you?" This parable, like many others of Christ's, is a fanciful picture set in an historic frame. In the multitude of listeners there was one young man who conceived of using the genius of the great Rabbi of Nazareth for selfish purposes. Since He could confute and confound the lawyers pitted against Him, perhaps He might be enlisted as his own champion in a law case involving a good inheritance. How absurd and irrelevant this inopportune intrusion of a quarrel between him and his older brother upon the solemnities of this occasion, when great multitudes were eager to hear the Lord's teaching!

Whenever a religious teacher leaves his exalted sphere to seek a political office or ceases to deliver his message because the opposition offers a fat retainer's fee, the spell of his influence is broken. But so long as he holds steadily to his appointed task of teaching and preaching religious truth the indirect influence of his life and labors has a tremendous influence even in the external relations of life. For the law in all its ramifications rests upon justice; justice rests upon righteous living; and righteous life rests upon the deep foundations of religious truth. The faithful preaching of righteousness will uplift the body politic.

The Fool That Locked His Soul in His Barn. "I will pull down my barns, and build greater; and there will I bestow all my fruits." A man who rashly forces his private business matters before a vast religious assembly has no sense of the true proportions of life, but is a self-confessed devotee to worldly goods to the exclusion of all else.

Jesus takes this man as a type of the Jewish nation, building its life on the narrow, insecure foundation of present, material success. Having warned them against the national sin of covetousness, He employs a popular parable of a wealthy old farmer who sees his fields fast ripening with an unusual harvest beyond the capacity of his barns. He resolves with one great final effort to build barns sufficiently strong and ample to store enough to last him the rest of his days without striking another stroke. Here he would bestow all his fruits. The Lord would not condemn a barn, for it has its legitimate place, but it can never be builded great enough to include all the fruits of life. Yet some men lock their souls in the wheat granary and their fruits of righteousness moulder in the dark.

The Sinner That Locked God Out of His Life. "Soul, thou hast much goods laid up for many years; take thine ease, eat, drink and be merry." Christ certainly drew in fair colors this favored lord of the land. He stands before a background of sunshine without a shadow. The mind of man is susceptible to scenes of material prosperity. This man ignores God and apparently his brother men also. He sits wreathed with smiles, his cheeks ruddy with health, with opulent fields and corpulent body, at peace with the world. Practically all he needs to eat is raised on his own estate. Nature deals bountifully, giving him much for little labor. This independent farmer has arrived at the rocking-chair stage of life. In self-satisfaction he addresses his soul in the very language of the Epicurean's creed, "Eat, drink, and be merry."

One wonders why Jesus painted this gay old fellow on such a bright canvass only to slash it down its whole length before the eyes of His audience. Was it not to show that sin with all its fair colors is ugly and contemptible? This easy-going fellow had no soul to address; he was talking all the while to his stomach. In his coarse, sensuous life he had starved his soul, and glutted his stomach. These good-natured, well-fed worldlings, says Paul, "are the enemies of the cross of Christ: who mind earthly things, whose glory is their shame, whose god is their belly, whose end is destruction."

When suddenly his soul shall be required of him, perhaps by a sudden stroke of apoplexy, it will be found that all these years his soul was locked outside his life, a beggar starving at his gate. "Soul, take thine ease." How could a soul be at ease in a life where even God was ruled out?

Powerfully has William Allen White in his book, "A Certain Rich Man," told America that it is our national sin to build up great commercial and financial interests, and live at ease with ourselves, while we rule God and the interests of the soul out of our banquet halls and our thinking. This kind of living is the life of a fool with mind darkened and heart depraved.

The Stern and Sudden Summons. "Thou fool, this night thy soul shall be required of thee: then whose shall these things be?" When death rang down the curtain God found a beggar and a bankrupt behind the scenes, though in life his neighbors envied the rich man. Few dare to reprove the wicked man of wealth because of his power. For that reason he seldom hears the truth about himself, and is accustomed to hear men flatter his sins as virtues. And since he stakes all on the present life, sudden death leaves him without forgiveness, without holiness, and without hope. Death weighs the creed of the Epicurean and finds it wanting.

The tomb of a wealthy Roman of antiquity was recently opened and the bones crumbled in contact with the air. But on the marble slab was chiselled, "Ede, bibe, lude; post mortem nolla voluptas." "Eat, drink, laugh; after death there is no pleasure." How that tombstone now in the Vatican mocks the vain life of that nameless heathen! The Master's story of the rich man whom death found unready serves to bring death into our immediate present. He who can complacently smile as he looks upon his "much goods for many years" smiles not before the summons, "This night thy soul!" If life insurance is good, how much better is the soul assurance: the Christian life crowned with faith and immortality.

"He who can guard 'gainst the low baits of sense, Will find Temptation's arrows hurtless strike Against the brazen shield of Temperance. For 'tis the inferior appetites enthrall The man, and quench the immortal light within him; The senses take the soul an easy prey, And sink the imprisoned spirit into brute."

—Hannah More.

A Spiritual Bankrupt at the Final Accounting. "So is he that layeth up treasure for himself, and is not rich towards God." This concluding remark of Christ points out the folly, the danger, and the sinfulness of the self-indulgent, God-forgetting man. He was wise in a certain practical foresight, he had planted seed for the harvest, and anticipating an unprecedented harvest, he was full of plans and purposings for greater buildings to store it. His folly was not that he planned for the future, but that he left God out of all his accounts. He kept accurately, no doubt, his cash account, but forgot utterly every item in his accountability to God. He planned as though his soul could live by bread; he fondly recounts "my goods" and "my barns" and "my fruits," as if all he had was absolutely his own to fatten upon for many years to come. But in the midnight hour the Divine Examiner awoke him, balanced his books of life, and found him a spiritual bankrupt. There is no such thing as "tainted money," since material things do not have moral attributes or qualities. But that soul is tainted which sets its whole energy to the acquisition of earthly riches and in its pride and selfishness forgets Him who giveth the increase and crowneth the year with His goodness.

Faith in God should flow through all parts of a man's life as the sap flows through all parts of a tree, through roots and trunk and topmost branches. It should establish a life in habits of saving, thrift and frugality. It should lead to the wise and economical use of both time and money, and develop one's capacity for earning. There is a more direct relation between religion and savings bank deposits than many have imagined. He that provides not for his own household is represented as denying the faith and by his example is worse than an infidel. "Not slothful in business, fervent in spirit, serving the Lord," this is the symmetrical tree of righteousness planted by the Lord.

Quiz and Study. 1. What law of Moses concerning gleanings and the Sabbath-year reminded the rich of their obligations to the poor. 2. Name two wealthy men with whom Christ dined, showing He was friendly to rich and poor alike. 3. What two rich and influential men assisted in Christ's burial? 4. What disciple perished through taking a bribe; what two through keeping back part of the price? 5. In what other parable does Christ introduce an unrepentant rich man?

Challenge Text. "A man's — consisteth — in the abundance of the — which he —." Luke 12:21.

Practical Thoughts: 1. Ease and repose of the body does not always make for ease and repose of the soul. 2. In possessing wealth or being possessed by it consists the right or wrong use of money. 3. It is easier to resolve to build a greater barn than to succeed in building a greater character. 4. The father heaps riches; the son sweeps them away. Neither keeps them long. 5. Man cannot gather and keep immense riches without sin.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

LAWFUL WORK ON THE SABBATH.

The Lord then answered him, and said, Thou hypocrite, doth not each one of you on the sabbath or from

the

and away

to

And ought not this woman, being a daughter of whom Satan hath bound, lo, these eighteen years, be loosed from this bond on the day? And when he had said these things, all his adversaries were ashamed:

and all the

for all the glorious things that were done by him.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS LUKE 13:10-17.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, We thank Thee for the Lord's day wherein we celebrate Thy power to rise from the dead. May it be to us a day of rest and gladness, a day of worship and of service. We would find the path that leads to Sabbath school and church as well as the path that leads to some sick friend or needy neighbor. Amen.

"O day of rest! How beautiful, how fair,
How welcome to the weary and the old!
Day of the Lord! and truce to earthly cares!
Day of the Lord, as all our days should be!
Ah, why will man by his austerities
Shut out the blessed sunshine and the light,
And make of thee a dungeon of despair!"
—Longfellow.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, somewhere between October and December, 29 A. D., on a Sabbath day. Place, a synagogue in Peraea. Persons, Christ, His disciples, the synagogue ruler, the infirm woman, and the synagogue worshippers.

Scripture Setting: Lord of the Sabbath. The first Sabbath. Gen. 2:1-3. The Sabbath a delight. Isa. 58:13, 14. Jesus in the wheat field. Matt. 12:10-14. Jesus on the Sabbath. Luke 4:14-22.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage suggests the privileges of the Lord's day. 1. Sunday is a day which helps the soul in "laying aside every weight" to feel the buoyancy of its spiritual nature. 2. Religion is perverted when ceremonial prohibitions stand in the way of health and even life itself. 3. All sacrifices, symbols and types of the temple were fulfilled in Christ; and His absolute authority in His Father's house resided in the fact that He was the Truth and not the type. 4. Sunday with its glad sensation of freedom publishes the fact that we are not slaves to toil, that the body is not a tool but a temple, and that the life is more than food and raiment.

THE TRUE SABBATH SPIRIT.

Christ's Compassionate Response to a Mute Appeal. Woman, thou art loosed from thine infirmity." Entering into a synagogue one Sabbath day, Jesus sees among the worshippers a woman strangely afflicted. For eighteen years she had been a helpless cripple, bent double, having doubtless lost all hope of recovery. She makes no appeal to Christ for help save the mute appeal of her own unfortunate condition. To Christ in all her misfortune she is "A daughter of Abraham," and assuring her of her recovery, He lays His hands upon that bent, misshapen body. Her cure is instantaneous, and doubtless the synagogue service is interrupted by her prayer of gratitude to God for this unexpected release. The ruler of the synagogue is indignant over the cure, and with all the official fussiness of which he is capable he quotes texts to prove if possible that the Sabbath law was broken.

But instead of breaking the Sabbath law, Jesus was breaking up a foolish network of petty observances and freeing man, that he might enjoy the rest day which Divine love and wisdom had long before instituted. He also broke the fetters of disease and infirmity which bound this poor woman so many years. In doing so He attributed her misfortune to Satan. Her condition shows us how terrible is Satan's power to warp the body, and we know he has even greater power to warp the mind and soul. There is only One who can break his chains. That One never looks upon the victim whom Satan has bound without being filled with tender compassion. Wherever in the world today men, women, or little children are the victims of Satan's power, bound by the chains of habit, ignorance, superstition, or fear, Christ alone is able to set them free. And best of all, He is more than willing, since He came "to destroy the works of the devil," and "to set at liberty them that are bound."

The Healing and Rejoicing on the Sabbath. "He laid His hand upon her: and immediately she was made straight and glorified God." Christ came into conflict with the Jewish authorities on the Sabbath question in three controversies: in Jerusalem, in Galilee, and in Peraea. At the latter place He is confronted by the chief ruler of the synagogue, very angry, but not very wise. Before the astounded eye-witnesses a glorious thing had been done. The good works of Christ met with heartier approval than the narrow rule of the synagogue official. As this poor woman leaves eighteen years of suffering behind her, she breaks into grateful singing, and the rest of the worshippers, seeing what has been done, openly rejoice in this glorious recovery.

The Chinese Wall About the Pharasaic Sabbath. "The ruler of the synagogue, being moved with indignation because Jesus had healed on the Sabbath, answered, There are six days in which men ought to work."

The artificial and childish restrictions which the Pharisees had added to the simple Sabbath laws of Moses would be amusing, if in their stern insistence they did not at times come so near being tragic. From countless thousands we choose two. To catch a flea upon one's person was a violation of the Sabbath law, since it was construed to be a kind of hunting. Three beautiful young girls burned to death in Jerusalem, reports a traveler, because a slight blaze broke out in the Jewish quarter, and since it was forbidden to kindle a fire on the Sabbath, it was presumably wrong to extinguish an accidental blaze. Reproached for the hideous tragedy, a Jewish woman declared that God would reward them for making so costly a sacrifice rather than break a commandment. No wonder Christ's fiery indignation! He called their leaders hypocrites, declaring they bound burdens grievous to be borne on the backs of the common people but would not lift their little fingers to relieve them. If it were a glorious work to loose the woman of her malady, how much more glorious to loose their minds from such silly traditions.

Reasoning from the Lesser to the Greater. "Doth not each of you loose his ox or his ass? Ought not this woman, a daughter of Abraham, to have been loosed?" Christ most easily and effectively silences the official of the synagogue and any others who may have been inclined to oppose Him, by citing their own admissions, their own practice, and their own law. He demands the freedom for a daughter of Abraham which they were willing to accord their beasts of burden. His retort was unanswerable and irresistible. His adversaries were men of little minds, in their eagerness for ceremonial law seeing the flea and the gnat, but in their moral near-sightedness swallowing a camel. In their self-interest they had provided for a Sabbath drink for their oxen; therefore Christ forces the wedge a little farther, compelling them to admit the rightfulness of His healing.

The Modern Interpretation of Christ's Spirit. "Ought not this woman to have been loosed from this bond on the Sabbath?" Christ is proved Lord of the Sabbath, not only because so largely the world honors Him in making Sunday, the anniversary of His new birth from the grave, a holy day, but because He has liberated many minds from the slavish letter of the law. The proper observance of Sunday involves many questions, May I take a walk? write a letter? ride a bicycle? read a novel? entertain a guest? A careful and prayerful consideration of the meaning of this memorial day and our relation to this Divine Master will go a long way toward answering them all.

Sunday trafficking, Sunday newspapers, Sunday mails, Sunday baseball and Sunday theaters will make a day so like Monday and Tuesday that there will soon be little occasion to print it with red ink on our calendars unless it be to single it out as a red-letter day of pleasure. A great psychologist, G. Stanley Hall, says, "The command to keep the Sabbath as a day of rest is written in our physiological constitutions. In no land should the Sabbath be so hallowed as in this land of hustle, tension and Americanitis."

Christ's Permanent Contribution to the World's Gladness. "All the people rejoiced for all the glorious things that were done by Him." Christ's gracious act of healing doubtless added to the confusion of the synagogue official, but the glad and almost universal appreciation of the congregation was typical of the great wave of quiet Sabbath rejoicing which now every Sunday morning sweeps like a smile over the face of the world.

How impressive is the sight to stand in the street of a great Sunday-loving city like Brooklyn at the Sunday school hour and watch the children by companies and battalions flocking to their various churches. You may be sure they wear their best clothes, they are on their best behavior, and they will be under the best of influences. Picture to your mind also the red-cheeked lads and lasses of the country, coming over the hills afoot, climbing the rail fences, or tucked into a neighborhood load behind the strapping work team. These are the pictures of gladness that give an enduring glory to our national life. And perhaps Canada, our splendid neighbor to the north, venerates the Sabbath more than we do. The writer spent a Sunday recently in the honorable and ancient city of Guelph, Canada. There was nothing else to do but go to church. All the street cars were stopped. All the stores were closed. And that there might be no misunderstanding about it, the shades were drawn down tightly in front of every business place. While the church bells of the city rang their glad invitation in unison the people flocked to their places of worship, filling the sidewalk to the curb. Within one ivy-clad church the pews were filled by families—father, mother and the children. And as the young English clergyman spoke in his sermon so feelingly about the mutual interests of the Kingdom of God in Canada and the United States our minds traveled back swiftly through the centuries to the young Man of Galilee, who went into the synagogue on the Sabbath day as His custom was.

It is the hand of the Lord Jesus that rings all our church bells round the wide world. It is His resurrection birthday that the nations observe every Sunday. It is to His name and for His worship that the chapel, the church and the cathedral are built. The deep, settled joy of religious trust, the inspiration to loving service, and the glorious hope of immortality, these are Christ's permanent contributions to the nations of the world.

Quiz and Study. 1. On what occasion were Christ and His disciples accused of laboring in the field on the Sabbath day? 2. What reference did He make in reply, to David and the priests? 3. What man did Jesus heal in the synagogue on the Sabbath? 4. To defend His action what parable did Christ utter? 5. To whom did Christ attribute the disease of this woman?

Challenge Text. "It is — to do — on the — day. Matt. 12:12."

Practical Thoughts. It is possible to convert a rest day into a very wearisome one through petty, annoying and restricting exactions. 2. It is possible this woman would not have been healed but for her devotion to the synagogue. 3. Seven of Christ's miracles were wrought on the Sabbath. 4. Over three million American workmen labor on Sunday, two-thirds of whom labor unnecessarily.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

PARABLE OF THE GREAT SUPPER.

Then said he unto him, A certain

made a great

and bade many: And sent his at supper time to say to them that were bidden, Come;

for all things are now ready. And they all with one consent began to make excuse.
The first said unto him, I have bought a piece of

and I must needs go and see it: I pray thee have me excused. And another said, I have bought and I go to prove them: I pray thee have me excused.

And another said, I have married a and therefore I cannot come. So that came, and shewed his lord these things.

Then the master
of the

being angry said to his servant,

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS LUKE 14:15-24.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, In Thy great heart of love I find a place. By the great ones of this world I may be passed by and neglected, but the Gospel feast was spread for such as I. I make no excuses for staying out of Thy banquet house of love. I can offer no plea in coming but that Thou didst invite me. O Lamb of God I come. Amen.

Come, sinners, to the Gospel feast;
Let every soul be Jesus' guest;
Ye need not one be left behind,
For God hath bidden all mankind.
Come, all ye souls by sin oppressed,
Ye restless wanderers after rest;
Ye poor, and maimed, and halt, and blind
In Christ a hearty welcome find.

—Charles Wesley.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, a Sabbath day, shortly after the return of Christ from the feast of the dedication, which closed Wednesday, December 8, A. D. 29. Place, the home of a chief Pharisee. Persons, Christ, His disciples, the host, and other Pharisees.

Scripture Setting: The Gospel Invitation. The table spread. Isa. 25:6-9. The call to the feast. Isa. 55:1-7. The great refusal. Prov. 1:24-31. The Holy Ghost given to the Gentiles. Acts 10:34-45. The woman of Canaan at the Lord's table. Matt. 15:22-28. The marriage supper. Matt. 22:1-10.

Life and Conduct Setting: This parable describes man's treatment of God's gracious provisions. 1. The excuse of the rich man is the care of his possessions, forgetting thereby the care of his soul. 2. The excuse of the busy man is the pressure of secular duties, forgetting thereby that the chief purpose of time is to afford preparation for eternal matters. 3. The excuse of the society man is the pleasure of more congenial company, forgetting that at God's right hand there are pleasures forevermore. 4. Poverty and misfortune have led many into acceptance of Christ. 5. Men farthest down in the social scale often show the keenest relish for spiritual food.

FINDING FIT FEASTERS FOR THE FEAST.

Jesus at Table with His Enemies. "Them that sat at meat with Him." On this very Sabbath morning Christ has healed a man of dropsy and again antagonized the Sabbath-law of the Pharisees. He follows the miracle by a two-fold rebuke of their perversion of the law of Moses. And though He sits down with the Pharisees to a morning meal as their Guest, He does not hesitate to chide them for the lack of spirituality in refusing to invite the poor and afflicted to their feasts. Since they were laying wait for Him, He would in their presence disclose their hardness of heart and unspiritual motive. In common with all the Jews, they were waiting in expectancy for the beginning of the Messianic Kingdom to be ushered in by a great feast. To this one of the company makes reference. This furnishes the Lord with the appropriate occasion for picturing the Messianic feast in a parable, and showing how they, by their false spirit, are absenting themselves from it.

The Nabobs of the Avenues and Boulevards. "A certain man made a great supper; and bade many." The scene of this parable is laid in a great city, supposedly Jerusalem. A great supper has been announced with elaborate preparations by Jehovah, who, according to Isaiah, provides "a feast of fat things." To it were specially invited the great ones of the city, the men who knew, and read, and expounded the prophecies—priests, Pharisees, and scribes.

The Host sent out His servant, John the Baptist, to announce that everything was now ready. But these very ones who understood best the prophecies and institutions of the Old Testament conspired together to refuse the invitation. Perhaps the three forms of excuse may refer to the three classes who refused. Leastwise there was nothing inviting to them in such a feast; they had no real reverence for the Host; and to become guests at such a feast required they should surrender certain possessions, pleasures and pursuits, which they were unwilling to surrender. The apostasy of the Jewish leaders came only after they voluntarily refused the apostleship. Christ had first come to them, but they would not come to Christ.

Excuses That Are Not Reasons. "They all with one consent began to make excuse." The leaders of Israel had shown themselves clever at excuse making, though they were clever at nothing else. In couching their regrets in such polite and courtly language they did not deceive Christ as to the real nature of their hearts. They might invite Him to dine, but they would rejoice when He was slain. The first excuse is pride; the second, business; the third, pleasure. It must be remembered they had all previously promised to attend. Each excuse differed from the other; each had its own plausibility; but all came to the same result. In all there is implied that they would come but for more pressing things, and when these are out of the way they will come. Says the Spanish proverb, "The road of by-and-by leads to the town of Never." How plausible can sin make our wrongdoing to appear!

Alcaeus, the poet, like many modern drinkers, found a new argument for drinking in every new season. The spring called for renewed drinking as a sign of joy for the renovation of nature; summer invited to drink to cool the blood; it was due autumn to drink, as a tribute to the season of the vintage; and winter required it to expel the cold. So men in the four ages of life find excuses to delay repentance. In childhood it is a vanity; in youth it is pleasure; in middle life it is the pressure of business; in old age it is infirmity. Plausible pretences cannot blind the eyes of God.

The Plebeians of the Streets and Lanes.

"Go out quickly into the streets and lanes of the city, and bring in hither the poor." When those great citizens, Israel's ecclesiastical leaders, turned away with empty excuses, from the goodness and liberality of God, the loving Host sent His servant into the common streets and the narrow lanes. Such a feast was more than the ignorant, the maimed, and the blind might expect to ever enjoy, hence the direction to not only invite, but to bring them in—to overcome their natural shrinking. Should they declare "we have no clothes for so grand a social affair," these sincere fears were to be met by the assurance that they might come as they are; that the Host would supply suitable festive garments.

So stupendous was the scale of the supper that the whole city within the Theocracy, the whole commonwealth of Israel, was to be sifted and searched for guests. God is angry at the rejectors who hold themselves aloof from the Gospel appeal, but He sends His ministers down to the homes of the common people, making an appeal, warm, direct and easy of acceptance. In the propagation of the Gospel we see that historically it is the lower stratas of society that have first been permeated. "Not many wise, not many mighty, not many noble; but the foolish things, the weak things, the base things, the things despised, the things that are not." The church does not especially seek the cultured and the wealthy, but the Gospel in a generation transforms the poor and ignorant into the affluent and intelligent.

The Hoboes of the Roadside and Fenc-corner. "Go out into the highways and hedges, and compel them to come in." The love and liberality of God was not confined to the Hebrew nation. The provisions of the Gospel were adequate for the Gentile world. Ever from the table of God's compassion goes out the glad tidings, "There is yet room."

The servant must go once more, this time far beyond the confines of the city of the Hebrew Theocracy, to the weary, wayfaring heathen world. There were no hedges around the fields of the Jews, hence this call was to the strangers beyond, on the dusty highways of life, or those who had fallen down weary, resting by the hedges. Thus it was that God's banquet house was filled, and the rejectors rejected, not getting a taste, when they might have enjoyed a feast.

When Christ said to the Jews, "Come, for all things are now ready," there was one government, one language, world-peace, a great system of roads, and synagogues everywhere. Then came the great refusal, and silently but surely the invitation was transferred to the Gentile world. In forty years Jerusalem was destroyed, and there has been no Jewish nation since.

God's invitation is as wide as humanity, as lofty as the love of God, as ample as the wants of man. All things are ready, the atonement made, the doors open, the Spirit present, duties waiting, mansions prepared, God willing, and angels waiting. Come!

The First Bidden Are the Finally Forbidden. "For I say unto you, that none of those men which were bidden shall taste of my supper." At first sight it seems that if those already bidden had proved themselves unworthy there was little likelihood that those chosen from the cross-roads would prove more worthy. Yet this last point is, perhaps, the chief point of the parable. The first invitation had been sent to selected guests—to the Jews—who because of their special training and peculiar privileges might be supposed to carry themselves most worthily. By a Divine pledge made to Abraham and renewed to Jacob Israel stood in a favorable relation towards Jehovah not enjoyed by any other people.

Could Christ have made the national meaning of His parable plainer than He did as He pictured these favored sons of Abraham turned away from the feast because they rejected the Divine mission and supernatural claims of Jesus? He was picturing the wholesale rejection of His own time when "He came unto His own and His own received Him not," and He was forecasting the national rejection when the early church a little later was forced to turn away from the Jews and seek her converts in the lands of the barbarians. Not the chosen city or nation, but to all who traveled on the world's highway in whatever direction was the proclamation presented, "Come, for all things are now ready!"

Quiz and Study. 1. What king made a great feast to his lords? 2. What man made a great feast in honor of Christ? 3. In what other parable did Christ liken the Kingdom of Heaven to a feast? 4. At what church council was it decided that the Gentiles should have equal opportunities with the Jews? 5. Who was the Apostle to the Gentiles?

Challenge Text. And in this mountain shall the — of — make unto all — a feast of — things, a — of — on the lees. Isa. 25: (7).

Practical Thoughts. 1. God is never so happy as when the house of His mercy is full. 2. It is the part of the Gospel ministers to report to the Lord in their prayers the compliance or refusal of their hearers. 3. If the proud and disobedient are lost, remember there was an invitation and a place prepared at the table. 4. There is never room for saying (a) "No man careth for my soul." (b) "I was never invited to start for Heaven." (c) "No one will show me the way." 5. There is always room: (a) in the affections of Christ; (b) in the fellowship and work of the church; (c) in the many mansions of Heaven.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

Either what if she lose doth not

and

and diligently till she find it? And when she hath

she her friends and her neighbours together, saying,

Likewise, I say unto you, there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS LUKE 15:3-10.

Prayer, Lord Jesus, I look upon myself as a miracle of Thy grace. It was Thy love that taught me the value of my soul. It was Thy Word that showed me that I was lost, and lighted my way back to Thee. Grateful for my own recovery, make me more sympathetic for those who stray, and show me how I may be used to lead them back. As the angels in Heaven rejoice over a repentant sinner make my heart glad when souls return to Thee. Amen.

"Dear Savior, I am weary,
And my life is incomplete,
But I bring the tangled meshes
And lay them at Thy feet;
Thou'lt unravel all the tangle,
And straighten out each thread,
And what I've failed in weaving, Thou wilt make a perfect web,"
—Mrs. Thomasina Carter.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, during His teaching tour through the cities and villages of Peraea as He journeys toward Jerusalem, shortly before raising Lazarus from the dead. Place, uncertain, but probably within or near the house where He ate the morning meal with the Pharisees. Persons, Christ, His disciples, a great multitude including a new element, the publicans and sinners.

Scripture Setting: The Lost Restored. One sheep rescued. Matt. 12:10-14. The Shepherd true. 1 Pet. 2:21-25. The Shepherd's wounds. Isa. 53: 5-7. Bringing back the lost. Ezek. 34:13-16. Saving the lost. Matt. 18:11-14.

Life and Conduct Setting: These two parables represent God's search for the sinful. 1. The mercy of God is equal to the misery of man. 2. The coin was in the house but a lost coin; the Pharisees were of the house of Israel, but lost to pardon and repentance. 3. The penitent sinner is a coin stamped with the Divine image, though marred and dim, and precious for its own worth. 4. Both the woman and the shepherd searched until they found. No less thorough a search will satisfy the loving heart of God.

THE SHEEP RESTORED; THE SILVER RECOVERED.

The Relation of the Parables. The three parables grouped in the fifteenth chapter of Luke, spoken in the presence of publicans and sinners, have a common theme: the restoration of the lost. The sheep was restored by the unwearied search of the shepherd; the coin was restored through the anxious care of the owner; the son was restored through the unceasing love of the father.

The objects lost in the three parables increase in their intrinsic value as we proceed from the sheep to the coin, and from the coin to the son. They increase also in their relative value; the sheep was only one of a hundred; the coin was one of ten, while the son was one of two. How gracious it is to be a sheep of God's flock; how fortunate to be a treasure of His possession, but how supremely blest to be a son of His home! It seems best to treat the Lost Sheep and the Lost Coin together in one lesson, and reserve our treatment of the Lost Son for a separate lesson.

The Single Sheep That Strayed. "What man of you, having an hundred sheep, if he lose one of them, doth not leave the ninety and nine, and go after that which is lost?" The larger part of the men whom Christ addressed were interested in sheep grazing. They prided themselves on their devotion to their flocks. The practical question which Christ put to them admitted of only one answer. As it was the sheep nature to wander, it was the shepherd nature to restore the wanderer. This was taking the Pharisees on their own ground, for even from the common practices of ownership they would go after the strayed one, leaving the flock secure. Should not He, the Good Shepherd, then, search after the lost sheep of the house of Israel? Yet they had condemned Him because He had gone frequently after the lost sheep. They pretended to be surprised and humiliated because He dined with publicans and sinners. But since the weary and heavy-laden listened to His wondrous words of hope and encouragement, what mattered it to Him that the official leaders of His people rejected Him? The poor to whom He was sent to preach, the maimed to whom He was sent with healing, the lost to whom He had a mission of seeking and recovery, these all thronged about Him with heartfelt gratitude and hailed Him as their Shepherd kind and true. All the contrast between Christianity and Pharisaism may be seen in two statements. Christ said: "There is joy in Heaven over one sinner that repenteth." Pharisaism in its sacred books says, "There is joy before God when those who provoke Him perish from the world."

The Shepherd That Searched Out His Sheep. "I have found my sheep which was lost." This pastoral scene of the Good Shepherd bringing home on His shoulders the lost sheep was cut upon many gems and seals which still remain as relics of the Christian church. It was painted upon the communion cup. It was found chiseled upon the ceiling of the catacombs. Sometimes He holds the seven-reeded pipe to show the attractions of Divine love. Sometimes He is sitting down, weary with the length of the way He had traversed to find His sheep.

It is not difficult for us to see in the wandering sheep our own human tendency. In folly and ignorance it strayed farther and farther, and at last was lost in the solitary and stony place. Long did the shepherd search for that one. He found it, weary and footsore. He had no chiding nor punishment; only compassion. He lifted it on his shoulder and carried it home, glad only that he had found the lost. But before he could sleep that night he calls together his friends, and bids them rejoice with him. This parabolic picture needs no interpretation more than the saying of Peter, "Ye were as sheep going astray; but are now returned unto the Shepherd and Bishop of your souls."

Sweeping and Searching for Lost Silver.

"Rejoice with me, for I have found the piece which I had lost." This second parable represents the great church of God as a house, and the Holy Spirit as the mother of the home who counts carefully her possessions, unwilling to give up a single soul as lost. The substitution of the piece of silver as designating the sinner gives progression to the value of the soul. Out of the woman's scanty store of ten pieces, she cannot remain indifferent to the loss of one.

It is held by some that the lost coin was one of ten given by her husband as a marriage token and worn as a frontlet. The loss of one marred its beauty and she could not wear it thus. Without it she was an object of reproach to her friends and neighbors. She could not seek in the dark, hence in order to see she must have a light. So the Holy Spirit has kindled the lamp of preaching, by which in the dust and darkness of earth lost souls are found. Lighting, sweeping, seeking—this is to be the Spirit's work. When the Spirit sweeps a church what hindrances and offences are removed. Every church needs such a sweeping by the energy of the Spirit. The end and aim of all this lighting and sweeping, the regular preaching and the work of revival, is the real and thorough seeking for souls. However much may be the essential value of the coin, lying under the dust in the corner, lost and useless capital, it has no practical value until it is sought and found. How quickly the friends and neighbors hear of the loss, and how quickly and gladly they hear that the lost is found! The window is raised, the glad news of recovery is shouted, and in a little space it has traveled far down the street. The friends and neighbors of the parable are the angelic hosts who rejoice with the saints of the church in the glad songs of recovery and restoration.

The Story's Happy Ending. "Likewise there is joy in the presence of the angels of God over one sinner that repenteth." The two parables of this lesson close in the same joyful strain and almost in the same words. The man who finds his sheep and the woman who finds her coin express their thankfulness alike in calling in the neighbors to help them celebrate. In the next lesson we shall see that the parable of the prodigal son ends similarly.

The application which Christ draws in these parables is that Heaven rejoices in the triumphs and victories of earth. A thrill of joy runs through all Heaven whenever the glad announcement is made that another life has been restored to safety and service. Salvation was so glad a message that it overflowed Heaven and came rippling down the milky way in the melodious songs of angels, "Peace on earth."

Not only all good men, but God and the angels rejoice whenever a young life is turned from the waste and neglect of sin to become a constantly growing investment in the Kingdom of righteousness. A single life placed back in harmonious relation with God is a greater event than the creation of a new world. And while the neighbors may be glad and assist in the rejoicing, and the family may have a satisfaction beyond the power of words to express, it is the Heavenly Father's heart that rejoices most of all, for He made man to be the expression of His purpose and the sharer of His joy. If God, then is so deeply interested in our welfare, and rejoices in our restoration, we should be greatly interested in ourselves.

"I've got a word like a sword in my heart, that has pierced it through and through.

When a message comes to a man from Heaven he needn't ask if it's true;

There's none on earth could frame such a tale, for as strange as the tale may be,

Jesus, my Savior, that Thou shouldst die for love of a man like me!

It was for me that Jesus died! for me, and a world of men

Just as sinful and just as slow to give back His love again;

He didn't wait till I came to Him, but He loved me at my worst;

He needn't ever have died for me if I could have loved Him first."

—Dora Greenwell.

Quiz and Study: 1. What sheep propensity is found in man? 2. If a coin can be lost in the house, can a soul be lost in the church? 3. Up to what hour did Jesus keep the original Twelve from scattering? 4. What did He do to restore Peter to the fold? 5. What precious stone in Revelation is promised the Christian believer?

Practical Thoughts. 1. There are no just persons needing no repentance, but there are many self-righteous who will not repent. 2. The faithlessness of the Pharisees and the faithfulness of Christ in pastoral duties are seen in their isolation from and condemnation of sinners, while He associated with them and gave them hope. 3. There is a close sympathy between the servants of God and the angels of God in both the sorrows and joys of life. 4. The joy of Christ's finding compensated for all His toil in seeking.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

And the son said unto him, Father,
I have sinned against and in thy sight,

and am no more worthy to be called thy son. But the father said to his

Bring forth the best robe,
and

and

and

And bring hither the fatted

and kill it;
and let us

For this my son was dead, and is alive again; he was lost, and is found. And they began to be merry.

THE PRODIGAL SON.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS LUKE 15:11-32.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, It is by Thy life and death that I come to know the great love of God my Father. I have been away in that far off country where men forget the home of the soul. Homesick and heartsick, tired of the husks, I follow back the long road to where waits my Father and Friend. Let me go out no more forever. Amen.

"One there is above all others
Well deserves the name of friend;
His is love beyond a brother's, Costly, free and knows no end."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Place and Persons same as previous lesson, which see.

Scripture Setting: The Return to God. Humbled by affliction. Ezek. 33:12-16. The voice of repentance. Jer. 31:16-20. New garments and ornaments. Zech. 3:1-5. The merciful Father. Psalms 103:8-16.

Life and Conduct Setting: This parable is the world's best portrait of God as the loving Father. 1. The prodigal was lost to himself, to his father, to his career, and to Heaven. 2. The son who proclaims his own merits has not the merit of humility. 3. The older son finally lost his father's love, his brother's affection, a place in his father's house, the fame of his own virtues. 4. To the true son God says, "All things are yours."

THE SINFUL SONS AND THE FORGIVING FATHER.

Hatred on the Old Homestead. "A certain man had two sons." This is universally considered the most beautiful of all Christ's parables, the favorite pearl of grace. While in general it was spoken for all time and shows how the heathen and the Jews are both God's sons, yet at this particular time He divided the mass of men into two classes, both standing before Him, the publican, the son afar off, and the Pharisee, the son in the house, who is just as surely lost, if not through the unrighteousness that degrades him, through the self-righteousness that blinds him.

It is easy to imagine that the two sons, despite the father's indulgence, were not in accord, so that the younger, the most light-minded, craving for freedom, prevails upon the father to advance him what he had a right to only at his father's death—his portion of the estate. It cannot be doubted that the elder son saw his brother turn away from the homestead with glad satisfaction, for anger springs up in his heart as soon as he is apprised that the brother has returned. The sin was not all in the far country; it was in the hearts of two young men who had a loving father, a pleasant home, and a good outlook for the future. But the most favored surroundings cannot produce content or happiness when sin and selfishness are in the heart.

Folly, Famine and Failure. "The younger son took his journey into a far country, and there wasted his substance with riotous living." The far distant land to which the younger boy turns his feet is an image of the sinner's deep apostasy from God. His outward separation from his father is no greater than the inward separation, for he launches at once upon a life of vice and bold abandon. The famine which appears is not so much a Divine visitation as a natural attendant upon such a course of living. He chose a community where the easy-going, pleasure-loving inhabitants would soon feel the pinch of a famine, having made no provision against it. They have little pity for the Jewish stranger. The extremity into which he is plunged is best seen by his acceptance of the position of swineherd, perhaps offered at first in derision, because of the well-known Jewish hatred for swine. Even access to the swine trough was refused him in that land of strangers. He is beside himself with loneliness and hunger. And the shadows of the depths lead him to the heights. The son, beside himself, now comes to himself; awakes from his nightmare.

A Jewish proverb declares, "When Israel is reduced to the carob-tree, they become repentant." The inward change comes first, as home, dear home, with all its peace, plenty and freedom, starting into view, breaks his heart. Quickly follows the outward change; he rises without delay to carry out the resolution taken. Here is the heart of the parable, and about it we will not dogmatize. We cannot explain the "how" of conversion. When with overwhelming magnitude and power the light breaks upon the soul the realization that the door of hope is ajar and the Father's face is wreathed in smiles. The change of conversion is here couched in terms of exquisite simplicity and beauty, as if framed for all heart-broken penitents, "I will arise and go to my Father."

Love on the Old Homestead. "His father saw him, and had compassion, and ran, and fell on his neck, and kissed him." The lost coin must be hunted for, the lost sheep must be gone after, but the lost son is a rational man, a free agent who must come to himself before he can come to God. But the home and the heart of the Father are wide open. The father in the parable is anxious and expectant, seeing the boy in the torn garments of the swineherd, but knowing his familiar form from afar. The boy never one moment doubted that the father who had been so kind even to the servants, so indulgent to the headstrong wanderer, would welcome him with open arms.

"Perfect love casteth out fear," and the whole previous course of the father showed his love could be trusted. To the servants the old man shouts the command, "Bring out the calf, the fatted one." The shrewd and provident father had said little through these sad months of waiting, but he was very sure that one of these days he would need the young folks in to celebrate the home-coming of his youngest. What a fine touch of affection, that on that very day the wanderer broke through his pride and sin, there was waiting in the stall, against the day of rejoicing, the fatted calf.

Another beautiful touch of compassion may be pointed out in the father's treatment of his son's shameful ingratitude. The wandering boy's first words of greeting are the confession of his sin, "Father, I have sinned!" But nothing that escaped the father's lips, heard by the family, the servants, or the neighbors, would suggest the son's wrong-doing. Rather he would extol and dignify the lad who returns in his wretched garments, by commanding the servants to attire him in the best robe, new sandals and a ring of gold.

So far as the father was concerned, his son's relation with harlots would have remained a secret guarded and kept in the bottom of the parent's loving heart, had it not been for the bitter enmity and the condemning tongue of the older brother. We will search the whole world's literature without finding a figure so dignified, a mind so impartial, and a love so changeless as this picture of God drawn by His only Son.

The Kind of Religion That Attracts. "Let us eat and be merry: for this my son was dead. . . . And they began to be merry." Under the marvelous descriptive powers of Christ religion became attractive. This home whose "spare" room had been closed so long because of a dark tragedy was now bright with lights and gay with laughter. The parental eyes were beaming with kindness, young faces from neighboring homes shone with health and winsomeness, the old folks looked attractive with magnetized sympathy and sweetness. The Christian religion, especially home religion, as portrayed by Christ, is not only good and true, but attractive by its beauty and joyfulness. In all of Christ's parables God, instead of being a monster or a tyrant, is the attractive, impelling, and loving Father.

Some would rather hold before their own eyes the animal that was brought from the stall for sacrifice as typical of repentance and forgiveness, and forget utterly the songs, the viols, the dancers and the endearing words which sprang from the father heart. But religion must be felt as a blessing; it must attract before it can save.

The Self-Righteous Son Standing in the Shadows. "And he was angry, and would not go in." Only hearts of stone and consciences seared with sinful pride could have prevented the Pharisees from seeing in the elder son skulking in the shadows of the house a life-like image of themselves. The music and the dancing symbolized the joy of the Divine household over the repentance and forgiveness of the lost. But the Pharisaic spirit was only angered by this leniency toward the sinner. The only religion it knew was that which worked out its own salvation, spending the day in the field, working overtime at hard, slavish, exacting toil, and going supperless that it might boast of its own goodness. In such a heart there was no room for mercy or for grace.

The Pharisee by hereditary privilege was in the home, the older son of Israel's inheritance. But because of his unloving selfishness he was not of the home. In the spirit of his opposition he was farther from home than the publican in all his heart-wanderings. Think not that the bringing of this contemptible, defiant older son back into the story is a literary blunder, an anticlimax to an otherwise perfect bit of delineation. For against the dark background of malice shines again the father's love. He leaves the banquet table and the merry-making; stepping outside the lighted circle to entreat the rebellious and refractory son. With a long-suffering and not-to-be-wearied kindness he listens to the poured-out wrath of the son who never ran away, never wasted property, never disobeyed but who never was paid for his services, not even given a kid. It is the last stand of paternal love: gray locks uncovered, pleading in the darkness. The Pharisee has heard the loving entreaty of God.

Quiz and Study. 1. In what consisted the sin of the younger son? The older son? 2. Why were swine so obnoxious to the Jews? 3. Why were the publicans like the younger son? Why were the Pharisees like the older? 4. When did Jesus charge the Jews for the last time with unwillingness to come to God?

Challenge Text. "For God so — the world that He — His — Son, that — believeth on Him might not — but have — life. John 3:(1).

Practical Thoughts. 1. The prodigal, craving freedom, falls into wandering, through wandering into slavery, through slavery into want and misery, through misery into repentance, through repentance into forgiveness and recovery. 2. The Spirit of the Saviour is revealed in the kiss the father gives the son. 3. It is meet that the church should rejoice and the angels sing when prodigals come home. 4. The thought is ever father to the act, restlessness before wandering, and homesickness before return.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE RICH MAN AND LAZARUS.

There was a certain which was clothed in purple and fine linen, and fared sumptuously every day: And there was a certain named Lazarus, which was laid full of sores.

And desiring with the crumbs which fell from moreover

the

And it came to pass, that the

and was

into Abraham's bosom:

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS LUKE 16:19-31.

Prayer, Lord Jesus, I would not snatch away the veil that hides the future, nor try to see beyond what Thou hast revealed. In the revelation of Thy Word is my duty now, as well as the assurance of my exceeding great reward.

I ask for daily grace to pursue my way, assured that Thou wilt give me dying grace. So may I live that death will not be filled with sad and vain regrets. I am Thine now and forever. Amen.

"And I have seen thoughts in the Valley—
Ah me! how my spirit was stirred!

And they wear holy veils on their faces,
Their footsteps can scarcely be heard;
They pass through the Valley like virgins,
Too pure for the touch of a word.

Do you ask me the place of the Valley,
Ye hearts that are harrowed with care?
It lieth afar between mountains,
And God and His angels are there;
And one is the dark Mount of Sorrow,
And one the bright Mountain of Prayer."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, near the close of the Peraean ministry, perhaps December, A. D. 29. Place, one of the villages of Peraea. Persons, Christ, the disciples, Pharisees, publicans and others.

Scripture Setting: The Relations of Life Here and Hereafter. The rich and poor on earth. Deut. 15:7-11. Life's reaping. Prov. 22:1-12. A picture of the future. Matt. 8:11, 12. Saved and unsaved. Luke 13:24-30. The grave's release. Job 3:17-22.

Life and Conduct Setting: This parable graphically pictures the masks of earth and the realities of the unseen world. 1. We shall give account for heartless indifference to suffering. 2. The beggar at the gate was the rich man's opportunity, test and undoing. 3. When time ends there is an end to the so-called good things of life. 4. The empty cry of the lost is, I was not sufficiently warned.

THE GULF IMPASSABLE BEYOND THE GRAVE.

The Earthly Gate That Barred the Beggar. "And there was a certain beggar named Lazarus, which was laid at his gate." The parable of Lazarus and the Rich Man is a figurative discourse in which Christ makes the most astonishing disclosures, lifting the veil from the secrets of the future. With a few rapid penstrokes He shows us two characters in life, whose lots are strangely reversed after death. A beggar lies at a rich man's gate, full of sores and contending with the numberless curs of the street for the scraps which the lord of wealth threw from his daily feasts.

We surmise that the beggar had many lovable traits and that the penury of his lot did not rob him of faith or serenity, but as the man of the world rolled by they tagged him as a beggar, leaving him to lie with the dogs, or die with hunger. They saw the rich man, too, clad in the purple of royalty and in linen worth twice its weight in gold. A costly gate, barred and guarded, separated the son of fortune from the child of misfortune. It was a purely artificial distinction that separated them, an accident of wealth and a crippling of health. But the gate remained, and their relative places in society seemed fixed.

We may be safe in assuming that he who locked his gate against the beggar locked his heart also. The nameless dogs were also locked outside, but they showed more pity than the rich man, for they licked the beggar's sores. It is not strange that the beggar died first, since he longed to die, and was better prepared than the other.

The Anguish of a Tormenting Memory. "But Abraham said, Son, remember." We do violence to this marvellous and unique description of the after life when we try to force dogma and theology out of every detail. We must remember that Jesus was an Oriental speaking to Orientals who were used to thinking in the richest colorings of the imagination. We have no authority for assuming that the rich man frizzled in a literal fire any more than that the beggar was feasting at a literal banquet. But, on the other hand, if we assume that Jesus used here figurative language we have a right to ask, Figurative of what? For a figurative interpretation in no wise will change the hopeless despair of the one or the eternal felicity of the other.

The deepest thinking even of those who do not read the Bible reaches the conclusion that the mind is eternal. It carries within it an automatic, indestructible register of its own activity. All the exposures made upon the sensitive film of the mind will one day be unrolled, developed, and printed. Be sure we will face our record! Character, that which alone endures, is but the sum total of our emotions, impulses, impressions, experiences, ideals, aspirations, and self-masterings. Dives in his lifetime had been free to make his choices, ease, comfort, pleasure, sumptuous fare, expensive garments, an un pitying, unloving, selfish life. The remembrance of them was grievous unto him. His destiny was of his own making. Memory wove for him the bars of a death-chamber, for he had murdered his own soul.

The Eternal Gulf That Barred the Gormandizer. "And beside all this, between us and you there is a great gulf fixed." The rich man in time also died; but he would have rather lived, for he lifted up his eyes, being in torments. Imagine his surprise to see, across an intervening chasm, a great table spread such as he had never seen in all the banquets of earth, with Abraham the patriarch at its head, and at his side, in the place of honor, was Lazarus, the one-time beggar. The man who once had wealth, and because of it great authority, forgets that both are gone, and calls out to Abraham for Lazarus to come and serve him, for his tongue is burning with a raging fever. Cool and unimpassioned, for the fate of the lost cannot disturb the rest of the blessed, Father Abraham addresses him, but can give him no hope. As there had been a gate separating in life, now there is a gulf separating in the world of spirit.

There is a sharp inward difference existing between those who in life existed merely for what they could get of pleasure out of earth's estates, its dinners, its gay garments and whatever contributed to the comfort of the body, and those who by faith and prayer and submission patiently bore the ills of this life looking for a city which hath foundation whose builder and maker is God. The parable teaches that all life is continuous; that the color and character of the life to be is conditioned on our conduct in the life that now is.

"The tissue of the life to be
We weave with colors all our own;
And in the field of destiny
We reap what we have sown."

Superstition, Spiritualism, and Spooks.

"I pray thee, therefore, father, that thou wouldst send him to my father's house: for I have five brethren." The dialogue between Abraham and the rich man does not describe absolutely what actually takes place in the world of spirits, but gives such pictures as are fairly intelligible to inhabitants of this world. A red light or a white light flung out in the night does not inform the passing engineer of the exact nature of the track ahead, but it does warn him sufficiently that ahead in the distance is that which is to be dreaded or desired, as the case may be. Whether this account is actual history, or a parable, or a warning dream which the rich man has, it throws suggestive gleams into the future which otherwise would have been darkness and uncertainty to the living.

Here is a clear and powerful condemnation on the part of Christ of all those extravagant and extraordinary attempts to wrest from the future world its secrets by means of clairvoyance, knocking-spirits, table-tippings and trumpet-meetings, at one dollar per interview. In our day it has become very profitable for professional tricksters to exploit the young, the gullible, and the credulous through spiritualistic seances. Their tricks have been repeatedly exposed, but they are fertile in providing new ones.

These men unite with their shadowy arts a secret unbelief in God's Word, and have no faith themselves in the revelations they pretend to receive. On the authority of Christ we have it that no departed spirits are commissioned to return to living men with messages from the dead. Instead of spiritualists, let us seek the spiritual Isaiah who says, "When they shall say unto you, Seek unto them that have familiar spirits and unto the wizards (mediums) that chirp and that mutter: Should not a people seek unto their God? on behalf of the living should they seek unto the dead? To the law and to the testimony!" (Isa. 8:19, 20.)

Sufficiency of the Scriptures. "If they hear not Moses and the prophets, neither will they be persuaded, though one rose from the dead." Moses and the prophets here appear as the summary of a complete Divine revelation of all that which was needful for Israel in order to find the way to life. Those who wait for more powerful voices of instruction will wait in vain, for already at this time Jesus had preached to them the very heart of the New Testament revelation, His own resurrection from the dead.

The uselessness of such a sign to their stubborn hearts can be seen by their unwillingness to believe and enter into the Christian life even after Lazarus, the brother of Mary and Martha, had risen from the dead. Out of idle curiosity they crowded the house at Bethany and looked upon the man snatched by miraculous power from the depths of the grave, but they continued living the old self-life; there was no resurrection of a new life within them. If a wicked and perverse generation will not read the red signal of danger flashing from a hundred pages of God's Holy Word, nor heed the loving calls reiterated by the Spirit and the Bride, neither would it repent and believe if it saw through the floor of Heaven as through transparent glass and looked down upon an uncovered hell.

Quiz and Study. 1. In what sermon did Christ bless the repentant poor, and curse the unrepentant rich? 2. In what Psalm is Christ represented as in danger from the nameless dogs of Jerusalem? 3. What disciple had the place of honor at the last supper? 4. Why was Abraham addressed as father? What, then, was the nationality of the petitioner? 5. What possible reason might there be for giving the name Lazarus to the good man in the parable?

Challenge Text: And these shall go — into — punishment: but the — into life —." Matt. 25:(?)

Practical Thoughts: 1. The beggar licked by dogs was a saint carried by angels. 2. The rich man had a splendid burial, but the world forgot his name. 3. The power of memory may make the grave a bed of fire. 4. The presence of others in torment which the wicked man has ruined will be an additional source of torment. 5. The words of a risen man cannot accomplish more than the Word of a living God.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE RAISING OF LAZARUS.

Then they

from the place where the dead was laid. And lifted up his eyes, and said, Father, I thank thee that thou hast heard me.

And I knew that thou hearest me always: but because of the

I said it, that they may believe that thou hast sent me. And when he had thus spoken, he cried
with a loud voice,
Lazarus, come forth.
And he that was dead came forth, bound

and his

about with

Jesus saith
unto them,

and let him go.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS JOHN 11:30-44.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Lord of the resurrection and the life, we draw near to Thee in all our sorrows, for Thou art the Man of sorrows, acquainted with grief. In life's heaviest losses we still turn to Thee, because Thy heart is moved at human sufferings. In our bereavements we are not left alone. What good news Thou hast brought to all the mourning brothers and sisters of earth! In Thee is our hope, for Thou hast said, "Because I live, ye shall live also." In every cloud of affliction reveal to us the silver lining of Divine mercy. Amen.

"From every house the neighbors met,
The streets were filled with joyful sound,
A solemn gladness even crowned
The purple brows of Olivet.

Behold a man raised up by Christ!
The rest remaineth unrevealed;
He told it not; or something sealed
The lips of that Evangelist."

—Tennyson.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, about the middle of January, A. D. 30. Place, Bethany, the home of Mary, Martha and Lazarus. Persons, Jesus, His disciples, the two sisters, and a company of mourning Jews.

Scripture Setting: The Voice of the Victor. The call to the dead daughter of Jairus, Matt. 9:18, 19, 23-26. The voice in the streets of Nain, Luke 7:12-17. The voice in the darkness, Matt. 27:45-50. The voice that wakes the dead, 1 Thess. 4:13-17. Christ and the general resurrection, Rev. 20:11-15.

Life and Conduct Setting: The miracle of raising Lazarus manifested Christ's resurrection power. 1. It is easier to raise a dead body than to persuade infidelity to yield to Christ. 2. Lazarus had nothing to tell of another life. In the economy of God the life beyond remains veiled in mystery and silence. 3. Christ was childlike in innocence, a man in human sympathy, but Divine in His power over the grave. 4. Not to seraph, angel, or priest is intrusted the key of death, but to Christ alone.

THE LORD OF LOVE AND LIFE.

Point of Contact. A remarkable passage of Scripture declares that the reason why God has so highly exalted Christ is because in His earth life "He emptied Himself." A necessary part of this self-emptying was the early breaking of home ties. Surely the carpenter's Son was entitled to have a house He could call His own, yet after being driven from Nazareth by violence, and from Capernaum by unfaith we hear Him sadly saying, as if to Himself, "Foxes have holes, and the birds of the air have nests, but the Son of man hath not where to lay His head." There was, however, one home always open to Him. It was in the quiet little village of Bethany, lying amid the peaceful uplands outside Jerusalem. John tells us that Jesus loved this family, and certainly, as we shall see, they had reason for loving Him. There is every reason for believing that the most restful and quiet hours of His life were spent in this retreat. This home, where dwelt Mary, Martha, and Lazarus, offers the fitting scene for one of the tenderest and most loving acts left us in the record of the Master's life.

The Scene of the Sisters' Sadness. "Jesus saw her weeping, and the Jews also weeping which came with her." The beautiful home at Bethany had become a house of mourning. In the sickness of their brother Lazarus, the two sisters had sent for their best Friend. The message was received in Peraea, twenty-five miles away, but Jesus does not immediately come. In the meantime the brother dies. It was a home of wealth and considerable influence, the family being a distinguished one, and many from Jerusalem, only two miles distant, had come to comfort them.

The Jewish funerals with their extreme forms and hired mourners sometimes assumed violent excesses of grief, as when the women tore out their hair, but we may be quite sure that in this household the funeral and the first three days of special sorrow passed quietly, and that an earnest effort was made to comfort these sisters who were sorely stricken. The older sister meets Jesus first outside Bethany. She returns and summons Mary to meet the Master. At the sight of His familiar face and the remembrance of how dear He was to her dead brother, her grief breaks out afresh, and those with her are moved to genuine and uncontrollable expressions of sorrow.

A Saviour's Sympathy and Sorrow. "Jesus wept. The Jews therefore said, Behold how He loved him." In the shortest and one of the most eloquent verses in all the Bible we look upon the Lord in tears. On one other occasion is it recorded that He wept, though it may have occurred at various times. That was when He looked for the last time on Jerusalem unrepentant. Some have suggested that the Master's tears were not that His friend, Lazarus, was dead, but that he had to live again; come back from the haven of rest to the waves and storms of life. Rather would we see in those silent tears the seal of His perfect oneness with us in all the experiences of our stricken humanity. Sixty years after the event John writes it down that the world might remember how the Son of God was touched with a feeling of our infirmity. And the visitors from Jerusalem unwittingly and spontaneously gave testimony that He who was the strongest of the gentle was also the gentlest of the strong. "Behold how He loved him!"

The Help of Human Hands. "Jesus saith, Take ye away the stone." Even the moderately well-to-do had their own tombs, sometimes natural caves, sometimes rock-hewn, but usually situated in a garden. The vaults were sealed by rolling a great stone across the entrance to it. Concealed by such a stone, the body of Lazarus had lain in the farther end of the tomb for four days. The ceremonial law of defilement by touching a dead body was very strict, but Christ came to roll away that barrier also. Step by step He was leading up to the great act which should form His last and greatest miracle. He might have commanded the stone to roll itself away, as He commanded the wind or the sea. In fact, He might have commanded Lazarus to come forth through the rocky impediment. But what could be done by human hands He orders to be done, reserving only to Himself the mightier work which transcended all human power.

As Elijah himself placed the stones of the altar, arranged the wood and cut up the victims, but made the bystanders bring the water and fill the surrounding trench, that there might be no possible deception, so here does Christ prepare to recall his friend back to life without laying His own hand on the great stone that hid him from sight. In nearly all the miracles of Christ there was a command to some standing by for assistance and coöperation. Not that the Lord needed such assistance, but that the eyewitnesses needed some active participation to encourage faith and sympathy. As we pray for the Divine power to achieve victories for us, we should be keen to see the stones which it is in the power of human hands to first roll away.

The Voice That Awoke the Dead. "He cried with a loud voice, Lazarus, come forth. He that was dead came forth." What majestic composure and self-possession Christ exhibits when all was fear and awe about Him. A gentle word of chiding and reminder He offers to Martha, whose faith trembles as the body is about to be uncovered. Then He offers a simple prayer, which is not so much a petition for the power He wanted, as praise for the power He knew He already possessed. Not for Himself did He pray, for the Father always heard Him, but for those who stood by, that they might believe that the Father sent Him.

One loud command was spoken in the silence of the sepulchre; one loud call to the sleeping brother; one flash of omnipotent power sped through the darkness, and instantaneously Lazarus stood forth, bound still with grave cloths, but pulsing with re-created life. The loudness of that cry broke the accustomed calmness of His life. The prophet had foretold, "He shall not cry," and in all His ministry, in the thronged streets and in the country side, He had moved with quiet dignity. On only one other occasion was His voice raised to a shout of victory—on the cross.

And Jesus had foretold that in death as well as in resurrection He was to be victor. "I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it up." So that both in His call to Lazarus and in His cry upon the cross we hear the grandeur of that voice which shall summon all the dead to life. It has been well said that Jesus needed to call Lazarus by name, else when he shouted in omnipotent might, "Come forth!" all the dead would have left their graves. This was a wonderful moment in the life of Christ and the history of the human race, since in its typical significance it was a prelude of the final voice at the last day.

Life Restored and Released. "Jesus sayeth unto them, Loose him, and let him go." From that dark and silent cave the brief words of Christ called forth a figure, not decomposed, not horrible in death, as they had supposed, but a figure with the bloom of youth, with the healthy blood of a restored life flowing through his veins.

Four days before that jaw had fallen, cold in death, never again to speak, the sisters thought. But the white cerements with which it was held are at the order of Christ to be cut that he may go forth to gladly tell of the crowning miracle, thus far, perhaps, in Christ's life of miracles. The hands which bound his feet together so securely were also ordered to be unfastened and tradition says that for thirty more long years he walked in the light and love of the old path at Bethany. The tightly wrapped hands were also released that the full service of Lazarus might be restored to the world. It was Christ's mission to loose the bonds of men, to loose the bands that blinded their eyes from seeing the truth, to loose their tongues, and to set them every whit free.

Quiz and Study. 1. What previous incident in the home at Bethany reveals Christ's intimacy with the members of the household? 2. Name two other instances in which Christ raised the dead. Name one such instance in Paul's career. 3. How far apart was the raising of Lazarus and the resurrection of Christ in distance? In time? 4. Why did the disciples consider Christ's withdrawal from Perea at the time dangerous?

Challenge Text: "For as in Adam all —, even so in — shall all be made —." I Cor. 15: (9).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Death is inevitable, love is unquenchable, the atonement is universal, hope is eternal. 2. In the hour of their privilege the two sisters clashed, but in the hour of sorrow and death they were united. 3. The voice of God rings loud in the sorrows of the household. 4. Because He loved him Christ could summon Lazarus from the grave, but because He loved us He could not come down from the cross.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

And it came to pass, as he

that he passed through the midst of

And as he entered into a certain

there met him

which stood afar off.
And they lifted up
their voices, and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us. And when he saw them,
he said unto them, Go shew yourselves unto the

And it came to pass, that, as they were cleansed.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 17:11-19.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Give me the grace and gladness of a grateful heart. May Thy love burn upon the altar of my soul, and Thy praise break from my lips.

In my necessity I called upon Thee, and Thou didst hear. May none be too humble to receive my help; may I never be too proud to go in the dark places to cheer the children of want and woe. Amen.

"That Christlike thing that reaches down
To the depths of human woe,
And sheds o'er darkest paths and sad
A benediction glow.
But thank God most for His great love
That living source Divine
Which stoopeth down to earth, and cares
For your love and for mine."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, early spring, A. D. 30, as Christ and a festive band start out from Galilee to attend the paschal feast at Jerusalem. Place, near a city called Ephraim, not now identified, in Peraea, not far from Galilee. Persons, Christ, some of His disciples, and great multitudes following, including ten lepers.

Scripture Setting: Leprosy Healed. Priestly rites for leprosy, Lev. 14:1-9. Miriam healed of leprosy, Num. 12:9-16. Naaman cleansed of leprosy, 2 Kings 5:5-14. A Galilean leper cleansed, Mark 1:40-45. The leprosy of sin cleansed, Psa. 51:1-7.

Life and Conduct Setting: This passage emphasizes the sin of ingratitude. 1. The Israelitish nation had sinned against light and bartered away their birthright. 2. The faith of Samaria often surprised Christ. 3. Public recognition of Christ is a debt of gratitude we owe Him. 4. The highest ingratitude of which the mind of man is capable is to refuse God's pardon and reject His mercy.

ONE-TENTH THANKFUL, NINE-TENTHS THANKLESS.

Point of Contact. Between the borders of the two provinces, Galilee and Samaria, there lay an unfrequented stretch of country, the valley of Bethshean. If we inquire how Jesus came to choose this solitary, untraveled way, the answer is clear. His determined purpose was to go to Jerusalem and face His enemies at the very center of the Jewish hatred. Already both Galilee and Samaria were closed to Him, so necessity compels Him to choose His way along this frontier territory.

Necessity also had compelled ten leprous men, nine of them Jews and one lone Samaritan, to cling to this secluded valley on the border. There was always something in this loathsome and horrible disease that awakened in the heart of Christ a keen and instantaneous compassion. But now especially as He felt His countrymen and the Samaritans alike had rejected Him, did He feel a kinship towards these who were by their deadly malady obliged to forego nearly every privilege of human life. If misery needed company and compassion, Jesus was never in a more tender frame to give it than at this moment.

The Valley of Tears. "As He entered into a certain village, there met Him ten men that were lepers." The Psalmist declares that when God's glad children pass down through the valley of weeping they make it a place of springs. (Psa. 84:6.) How well Luke describes this scene that occurred outside a nameless village when Christ and a festive band is setting forth for the paschal feast at Jerusalem. As they wend their way through the valley there comes from the hillside the old sad but familiar cry, "Unclean, unclean!" Nine Jews had united with a single Samaritan, driven by their common need to forget the customary distinction. Obligated to remain at least four ells distant from the untainted, they were waiting in their isolation to see Jesus, for the greatness of His fame had reached them.

How this scene calls to mind one of the great art treasures of Europe, that magnificent painting of Dore's in London, entitled "The Vale of Tears!" He finished it just before he died, and it is considered his best work. At the head of a deep valley stands Christ, and all the light that shines upon its sides emanates from Him. All kinds of human suffering wait in the valley for His healing, and all are being healed. The lame are walking, the lepers are rejoicing in their cleansing, dying mothers are holding out their little children to Him for His blessing, conquerors are handing Him their swords, and kings are taking off their crowns before Him. A great tide of redemptive love is flowing down the valley where Jesus walks, and the valley of weeping becomes a place of springs.

The Voices of Misery. "And they lifted up their voices and said, Jesus, Master, have mercy on us." Though these marked lepers stood afar off, and the disease had doubtless reduced their strength, yet Jesus heard the cry and heeded it. Because of the impurity and repulsiveness of the disease these loathsome outcasts might well have doubted whether Jesus would turn to them. They were shut out of the temple, the synagogues, and the social life of their fellow beings.

But to Christ's compassionate heart the very depth of their degradation intensified the force of their appeal. To John the Baptist, held a prisoner, He sent word as one of the credentials of His Divine mission that the lepers were cleansed. And from that time to the present hour Christian sympathy and help has gone out to the leper.

Father Damien, of the Roman Catholic church, heard the voice of the leper calling him, and gave his life in response. A leper called to St. Francis of Assisi from the roadside as he rode by one day. This knight of Christ rode away in horror, but soon returned to give the sufferer what money he had and kiss his hand. A brotherhood was later organized which did much for the lepers of Europe.

From the window where this is written may be seen the house where live the parents of Mary Reed. For almost twenty years this consecrated woman has presided over an institution in the Himalaya Mountains, 6,400 feet above sea level, which houses nearly a hundred victims of this scourge. After the first six months of suffering there, the disease in her own case was stayed, if not cured. Almost single-handed she has proved that Christian love is ready to go "far as the curse is found."

Faith for Healing. "And it came to pass, that as they went, they were cleansed." These ten men held a sincere but imperfect faith. In addressing Jesus as Master they recognize Him as a prophet mighty in deed and word. Impelled by stern necessity, they take refuge in Him. Not having all faith, they had enough to know His power was sufficient to heal them. He does not repel them, even with their imperfect conceptions, but is pleased with their cry for mercy and the promptness of their obedience. Great misery met great grace by the roadside, and took the first active steps of obedience it knew. And in the very act of obedience their misery and malady were at an end. This is the only way to spiritual salvation: to act upon whatever faith one possesses, not doubting. Not faith in the abstract, but faith appropriated and applied, produces religious character.

The supernatural part of conversion is all of grace, but the human part is the response of the will to the Spirit. A colored preacher thus presents the doctrine: "Brethren, it is this way: The Lord is always voting for a man; and the devil is always voting against him. Then the man himself votes, and breaks the tie!" The prodigal son voted when he arose. The lepers voted when they went to show themselves to the priest. Faith grew with every step of the journey. Faith and works are inseparable in a healthy life.

The Samaritan Stranger Becomes a Citizen

of the Kingdom. "Arise, go thy way: thy faith hath made thee whole." There is a peculiar aptness in the use commonly made of leprosy as a type of sin. Every leper was a moral sermon, a living admonition to keep unspotted from the world. The Jews always viewed it as a typical representation of the pollution of sin. The rabbis taught that leprosy comes upon a man for any one of eleven sins: idolatry, profanity, unchastity, theft, slander, perjury, false witness, false judgment, causing discord, malicious planning, or trespassing on another's rights. Only cedar wood and hyssop could ceremonially cleanse. Cedar wood grew the highest, and hyssop grew the lowest. The remedies thus recognized that pride was the cause of the distemper, and humility would cause exemption from it.

So Christ seized upon gratitude as the sure symptom that the Samaritan was cured in heart. Through chance fellowship with Israelites he had received gracious benefits, and he accepted them as the marks of Christ's compassionate love in all humility. The faith of the nine Jews looked to the power of the Theocracy in which they were sons, and accepted their cure proudly as in justice due them. So, it was the Samaritan, the alien, who through faith and gratitude, became a living son of God, while the nine Israelites, the chosen ones, turn away healed of leprosy but unthankful and unrepentant. The lesson forms a striking example of the high esteem in which the heathen world held Jesus, while Israel would not receive Him as her Saviour.

Quiz and Study. 1. Who was it pointed Naaman the leper to the prophet of Israel? 2. What words did Jesus speak to the maid whom He recovered from leprosy? 3. What king was struck with leprosy for usurping the function of the priests? For what was Uzza smitten with leprosy? 4. Why would Luke have special interest in the incident of this lesson?

Challenge Text: Purge me with —, and I shall be —: Wash me and I — be — than —." Psa. 51:(?)

Practical Thoughts: 1. The Levitical priests could declare a man cured, but Christ could cure him. 2. To break the power of sin Christ died as a leper without the camp. 3. Some go to tell their friends, others hasten to the temple, others to their homes or merchandise, but few return to Christ in grateful acknowledgment. 4. We write our injuries in marble, and trace our benefits in the dust. 5. We are healed by the word of mercy, not by the observance of law.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

And he spake this parable unto certain which trusted in themselves that they were righteous, and to pray; the one a Pharisee, and the other a publican. The Pharisee thus with himself, God,

I thank thee,
that I am not as other are, extortioners, unjust, adulterers, or even as this publican. I fast twice in the week, I give tithes of all that I possess. And the publican, would not lift up so much as his eyes unto heaven, but smote saying, God be merciful to me a sinner. I tell you, this man

justified rather than the other: for every one that exalteth himself shall be abased; and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 18:9-14.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Teach me how to pray that I may know how to live. Give me a heart that is humble and sincere, to control my outward acts. Anoint me with grace in my heart, and come to possess the inwardness of my being. Not my merit, but Thy mercy I plead. Accept me as I am, but make me what Thou wilt. And as I leave Thy gracious presence to go out into Thy fair world, may my duty and my pleasure become one. Amen.

"Prayer is the burden of a sigh,
The falling of a tear,
The inward glancing of an eye,
When none but God is near.
Prayer is the contrite sinner's voice,
Returning from his ways;
While angels in their songs rejoice
And cry, 'Behold, he prays!'" —James Montgomery.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, early in the year of A. D. 30, shortly after the raising of Lazarus. Place, one of the villages in his final journey from Galilee through Samaria to Jerusalem. Persons, Christ, the disciples, a group of Pharisees, and many others.

Scripture Setting: The Nature of True Prayer. Seen of men, Matt. 23:1-12. The humble exalted, Luke 14:7-11. The prayer of gratitude, Luke 1:46-53. The penitent's prayer, Psa. 51:1-7. Answered prayer, Psa. 138:1-8.

Life and Conduct Setting: The parable teaches the exalting power of an humble spirit. 1. The Pharisees who listened to this parable were as proud and self-righteous as the one pictured in the parable. 2. The Pharisee rejoiced he was not as the publican; the publican grieved that he was not like Christ. 3. The Pharisee returned having prayed to himself, looked at himself, and praised himself; the publican returned having prayed to God, looked into his own heart, and praised his Deliverer. 4. He who comes to pray satisfied goes home empty, he who comes empty goes home satisfied. 5. The world's estimate is a see-saw where the light weights go up and the heavy weights go down; God's estimate reverses, sending Mordecai to be honored and Haman to be hung.

PRIDE AND PENITENCE AT PRAYER.

Preaching to the Pharisees. "He spake this parable unto certain which trusted in themselves and despised others." The directness and opportuneness of Christ's teaching made His hearers say, "Never man spake as this man." In the parables He uttered it will be seen that His eyes were as active as His mind. The parable of the Pharisee and publican was spoken to certain men and for their special benefit because they were there that day to hear it. Beginning with His sermon on the Mount, Christ never ceased to expose the hollowness and hypocrisy of the Pharisees. Josephus says they existed 144 years before the Christian era. Called Pharisees because they had separated from the national corruption with a pure motive to establish more spiritual worship of Jehovah, they had sadly degenerated still keeping the outward regulations, but having entirely lost the original spirit.

Since prayer is altogether a spiritual exercise, the Pharisee showed off his weakness and contemptible hypocrisy when he went to the temple at the hour of prayer as he would not in any other relation of life. His characteristic self-righteous spirit may be shown best by quoting from the egotistic writings of rabbi Simeon, son of Jochai: "If there were only thirty righteous persons in the world, I and my son should make two of them; but if there were but twenty, I and my son would be of the number; and if there were but five, I and my son would be of the five; and if there were but two, I and my son would be those two; and if there were but one, myself should be that one." This was the righteous religionist that Christ saw before Him, who must be shaken out of his self-content, so He paints an almost impossible picture of two men walking into the temple side by side, who were actually no more seen in each other's company, than in India a Brahmin is seen walking with a Pariah.

In the temple worship the proud-spirited Pharisee had completely triumphed; his party was stronger than all the others, and the penitent, broken-spirited publican could scarcely dare to find a place within the sacred enclosure. If he lifted up his voice in the temple at Jerusalem, he would have to be very earnest, indeed, to enter at all, and would feel like standing afar off.

Pride Pleased at Its Own Proportions. "The Pharisee stood and prayed with himself. God, I thank Thee that I am not as other men are." Undoubtedly this man was at the place of prayer, at the hour of prayer, and in great need of prayer. But he did not pray. He was only looking in a mirror at his comely moral proportions. They looked good to him in contrast to those of the poor figure crouching there in the corner. The mirror he looked into was one of the highly magnifying kind, and he loomed large in his own self-esteem. His hands were clean of graft and greed, his honor was unimpeached, and his heart was free from uncleanness.

Moreover, he observed the ordinances of religion. He remembered that every Monday and Thursday he kept the fast in memory of the ascent and descent of Moses when the law was given at Sinai. But God remembered also that these were the regular market days, when special services were held in the synagogues, and all the country people came to town. And He who reads the secret intents of the heart, saw that the Pharisee got what he desired, a large share of attention on the street, and considerable notoriety in the temple.

He called his words a prayer; they were merely a catalogue of moralities, a list of what he did do, and what he refused to do. His words lacked the first two elements of prayer, adoration and supplication. There was no note of real thankfulness, only boastfulness. Yet the downright zeal and earnestness of the Pharisee can never be questioned. His personal life, so far as its outward expression was concerned, was beyond reproach. His prayer never was answered, never could be answered, because it was not prayer. Whatever righteousness he claimed, that he retained, whatever its value. Mr. Pharisee's prayer was only a loud profession of goodness and boasting of strength.

He joined the church that he might say, "See how much better am I than those miserable fellows without." But joining the church of Christ should be rather an humble acknowledgment of weakness. The Christian disciple should say, "I come to Christ and to Christ's people that He and they may help me to a better and a holier life."

Penitence Praying for Pardon. "The publican smote upon his breast, saying, 'God be merciful to me a sinner.'" The Pharisee looked in his mirror and smiled; the publican looked into his heart and smote his breast. The kingdom of God is entered through the gateway of penitential prayer. Above its portals, in letters of gold, it is written, "Blessed are the poor in spirit." That gate is narrow and low. All must stoop who enter, though within there is the fullest exercise of freedom and dignity. The Pharisee could not pass that gate, because of his high looks and unbending pride.

The publican, with eyes upon the ground, and body bent as a suppliant, passed easily beneath the low archway into the royal palace of Divine acceptance. The proud worshipper had formally prayed with uplifted eyes and hands and, more conscious of those behind him watching than of the all-seeing One above him, he felt satisfied that in form and figure he furnished a model statue of devotion worthy of being preserved in marble.

The poor sinner, in contrast to all this ceremonial outwardness, represents in a most realistic way the eager inwardness of true prayer. He was not a temple frequenter. Nothing but his sense of desperate need would ever force him past the searching glances of the Pharisee to some retired spot in the temple enclosure, where God would hear the cry of his burdened heart. Like the deer, when wounded by the arrow of the archer, is driven to the thick woods to bleed alone, so this man, feeling for the first time the mighty impulse of repentance, hurries to the place of prayer, but stands afar off, apart from the other worshippers.

An old proverb declares that where the pain lies, there the hand presses. He smites his breast because his wound is in his heart. His prayer, all unstudied, is in its affecting unity and directness, perhaps, the most simple and profound of all the prayers ever offered by a world of penitents. It is a call of emergency to God for mercy in behalf of a sinner. In its heart-felt brevity is the quintessence of supplication, the desperate disease of sin, the identity of the suffering patient, the sufficiency of the Physician, and the efficacy of the remedy. Like the penitential prayer of David; like the spirit that possessed "the chief of Apostles," who never ceased to call himself the chief of sinners; like every struggling soul that has forced its way through the externals of religion to where God hears and answers, the heart struggle of the publican brought down the reconciling grace that sent him back into the world, justified and satisfied.

The Prayer Principle Put as a Paradox. "Every man that exalteth himself shall be abased, and he that humbleth himself shall be exalted." The purpose of Christ, as we have seen, was not to paint two persons, but to present two principles. John truly says that Jesus knew what was in man. It would be a mistake to suppose that Christ in this parable dogmatically distributes all men into two classes represented by these two examples. But He looks down into human hearts, reads the controlling motives there, lays them bare, condemning the one, approving the other.

Quiz and Study. 1. Which of the disciples was a publican? Which of the Apostles a Pharisee? 2. As a pretense for what did Jesus say the Pharisees made long prayers? 3. How many more times did the Pharisee use the first personal pronoun than the name of the Deity? 4. How many times longer was his prayer than that of the publican? 5. What was the Pharisee grateful for, and what was he proud of? The publican?

Challenge Text. "A — and a — heart, O —, Thou wilt not —." Psa. 51:(9).

Practical Thoughts. 1. As well measure the spirituality of a church by the height of the steeple as to measure spiritual attainments by one's conspicuousness in religious meetings. 2. God discriminates between the player of his part and the prayer of the heart. 3. The roots that strike deepest send their branches the highest, and the humbler the prayer the higher it reaches. 4. Sincere petitions, not meritorious acts, are cashed by the bank of Heaven. 5. After the play behind the scenes each player is unmasked.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

JESUS AND THE LITTLE ONES.

And they brought young

to him,
that he should

and his

rebuked those that brought them. But when Jesus saw it, he was much displeased,
and said unto them, Suffer the

and not: for of such is the kingdom of God. Verily

I say unto you,
Whosoever shall not receive the kingdom of God as a

he shall not enter therein. And he took them up in his arms, and blessed them.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 10:13-16; ALSO MATT. 19:13-15; LUKE 18:15-17.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, I thank Thee for receiving even the small and the weak. Let me not leave Thy presence until Thou hast blest me. And as I have been dedicated to Thee in holy baptism, let me even live as Thy child. If wicked thoughts arise, be Thou the thought of my mind to keep its chambers pure. And as I grow older make me to grow as it was written of Thee, increasing in wisdom and stature and in favor with God and man. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"And one was helpless, a little child, In a world that frowned when it should have smiled.

Till the Good Samaritan came one night

With a gift of shelter and food and light,

In the name of Him, who in Galilee

Said, Suffer the children to come to me."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Spring of A. D. 30. Place, In Peraea, probably one of the border villages Christ visited before starting for Jerusalem. Persons, Christ, the disciples, a group of Peraean mothers with their children, and doubtless many interested onlookers.

Scripture Setting: The Place and Preparation of the Child. Israel blesses the two lads, Ephraim and Manasseh, Gen. 48:14-20. The preservation of the child, Isa. 11:6-9. The child in the midst, Matt. 18:1-10. The childhood spirit commended, 1 Cor. 14:20. Training the child, 2 Tim. 3:14-17.

Life and Conduct Setting: This incident suggests the duty of getting the children to Christ. 1. The mother preëminently holds the key that opens the entrance to a child's heart. 2. Those who are commissioned to extend the Kingdom are blind indeed who would compel children to postpone entrance thereto. 3. Infant baptism portrays the parent's responsibility, the child's receptivity, and the Savior's welcome to childhood. 4. The same heart that is big enough to receive children is vigorous enough to chastise all who stand between the child and the Kingdom. 5. The child's innocency and hopefulness act as a new creative force in the church and the home.

CHRIST-ENCIRCLED CHILDHOOD.

A Mother's Imaginings. "And they brought young children to Him, that He should touch them." No picture of childhood is complete without the mother standing in the shadows. It may be the picture of the baby Moses being drawn from the basket that floated on the Nile, and only Miriam, the faithful sister, and the beautiful princess stand forth clearly, but be sure there hides behind the flags, growing on the bank, a mother heart wildly beating with eagerness and anxiety.

In this scene of Jesus blessing the children, so dear to the heart of the church, Christ and the child occupy the center of the picture, but it would be a sad oversight to miss the mother, retiring from the gaze of all, after she has led her little one to Christ. It never detracts from the beauty of the Bethlehem Babe to see Mary standing by the manger. It never robs the cross of Calvary of its pathos to see standing at its foot the lonely widow who suffers most of all.

The artists of all the centuries have labored to leave as their noblest work, the picture of a childish Face guarded by the Madonna face. The mothers of Palestine were true mothers. They knew the value of childhood better than the disciples; and better than the disciples, they knew the tender, loving heart of Christ. For while these ambitious disciples were eager about the appointments of the Kingdom to come, these mothers were anxious for the generation to come, represented by their own little ones.

By the strange presentiment or intuition

common to woman, these mothers of Peraea seemed to feel that Christ was about to leave them forever, and as they bid Him solemn farewell, they would win as a precious legacy His blessing upon the heads of their children.

The Disciples Murmuring. "His disciples rebuked those that brought them." Between the approaching children and Christ stepped some of the disciples with the intention of guarding their Great Teacher from any trivial interruptions. In words of stern rebuke, not only would they repulse the children, but chastise their mothers also. They were guilty of obtruding on the Master when grave matters occupied His mind.

Judged by the standards of their day, we can hardly condemn the conduct of the Twelve. For women were not honored in antiquity as now, and the tender solicitude now felt for childhood was largely unknown. It did not comport with the supposed dignity of a rabbi to be accosted by these mothers in public, nor to have his ministrations descend to a group of children. But His disciples surely did not read His great loving heart nor fathom his deep ageless purpose if they supposed He would turn away from these youthful candidates for immortality.

It is wholesome to see in our time leaders in the Jewish church paying tribute to Christ as the Friend of children. Rabbi Kaufmann Kohler, of Cincinnati, says, "The matchless ideal of Christ redeemed the despised and outcast. It checked infanticide, and founded asylums for the young; it invested the home with purity, and proclaimed the value of each human soul as a treasure in the eyes of God."

But the disciples could not see the possibilities of childhood which Christ saw, though they were looking with frowns upon the same children which He blessed with smiles. They saw only frailty and futility, while He saw futurity. They held that these children must develop into men like themselves to be worthy the Master's attention; He declared that the disciples themselves would never win their Master's approval except they returned to the humility, confidence, and simplicity of childhood.

Christ Displeased. "But when Jesus saw it He was much displeased." This is the only place in all the Bible in which this strong word is used of our Lord. By rejecting the children, the disciples were laying themselves liable to that woe Jesus had pronounced against all who offended against the receptiveness and meekness of childhood. To stand between Christ's love and the heart longing of a little child is a dangerous place for any man. It were better for such an one to cast himself with a great millstone about his neck beneath the deep and silent waters.

He who feels the hot fires of his indignation burning within him when one of God's little ones is being trodden under the foot of the oppressor, has a heart akin to that of his Great Master.

One of the best college text-books on the industrial life of England contains Mrs. Browning's "Cry of the Children." It is a tribute to her fearless heart when she rebuked Christian England for robbing the pale-faced children of the mines and factories of a chance to play, and sing, and grow. And England heeded the call of that Christian lady. In the heart of Senator Beveridge was a holy indignation at the sight of children toiling in the cotton fields of the South, the anthracite mines of Pennsylvania, and the factories of New England. He has called a halt on all this greed and oppression. And by the extent to which he has exalted childhood in America has he exalted himself.

Christ's Welcome for the Little Ones. "Suffer the little children to come unto Me, and forbid them not, for of such is the Kingdom of God." Jesus far exceeded the request of the mothers who hoped He would touch their children, for He took them in His arms, and laid His hand upon their heads. No one can have the passion for the coming of the Kingdom without seeing in a child a bundle of wonderful possibilities. In the absence of that passion the importance of the child is lost sight of. When the church becomes worldly and formal the child is forgotten.

Campbell Morgan says, "Better never touch children unless you are ensphered in the truth." The old heresy that the child belongs to the devil is dying out. And we are bringing our children to Christ not as aliens but as His own. The church that is wholly devoted to Christ must be wholly devoted to the child. And if I were asked by some discouraged John the Baptist, languishing in the prison of pessimism, for a sign that Christ was now in the world I would tell him of the new Gospel for childhood which is being preached. And it will be preached more and more with thrilling power through coming years that the children belong to Christ, and that a child's heart is the symbol of the Kingdom.

A Garland on the Brow of Childhood. "Whosoever shall not receive the Kingdom of God as a little child, he shall not enter therein." The child suggests truthfulness, cheerfulness, and loveliness. A little child leads us into the very presence of God by its purity. An old school teacher reviewed in memory the bright young lives he had helped to train, and then expressed the deep obligation to them for all they had taught him, saying "There is nothing on earth half so holy as the innocent heart of a child."

Only when the child arrives does the family really begin. Henry Drummond has well said that till the little child appeared man's affection was non-existent, and woman's love was frozen. The child drew forth the first bud of love from the breast of the mother. When a child is born a new force enters the world. There is a new attitude toward life, the attitude of hope and expectancy. The mother looks upon her fond treasure, expecting so much, and praying she may never be disappointed. That immortal thing, born for growth and endless maturing, brings the glory of God into the valleys of earth.

"As a little child." How we are reminded of our own childhood! How like David we long for a drink from that old well at Bethlehem! The lost innocence of childhood and the glad days when the blue of heaven bent so low to touch our earth,—they will never return. But God's own Son offers us the next best gift,—a heart made clean, a child-like faith in the goodness of our Father, and adoption into the family and fellowship of Heaven.

Quiz and Study. 1. In what light does the Old Testament regard a large family of children? 2. Who caused a great slaughter of children when Christ was born? Why? 3. What child was consecrated by his mother at birth to God's service? 4. When did childhood pay its great tribute to Christ? Who complained? 5. What prophetic utterance have we concerning children in Heaven?

Practical Thoughts. 1. The childhood life is plastic in the hands of Christ. 2. A seed thought of truth planted in a child's heart yields a golden harvest of conduct and character. 3. A child that merely grows up uncared for becomes a noxious weed in the garden of society. 4. The Great Teacher in mighty emphasis placed His hand and influence upon the beginning of a life. 5. Human and Divine influences, like the sail and the sunshine, unite to develop a character.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE RICH YOUNG RULER.

And when he was gone forth into the way, there came

and

and asked him, Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life? And Jesus said unto him, Why callest thou me good? there is none good but one, that is, God. Thou knowest the commandments, Do not commit adultery, Do not kill, Do not steal, Do not bear false witness, Defraud not, Honour thy

And he answered and said unto him, Master, all these have I observed from my youth. Then Jesus beholding him loved him, and said unto him, One thing thou lackest: go thy way, what-soever thou hast, and

and thou shalt have treasure in heaven: and come, and follow me And he was sad at that saying, and grieved: for he had great possessions.

CHRIST AND THE RICH YOUNG RULER

BY HOFMANN

As Christ went about among the people, saying many precious words, a certain rich young ruler came to him asking, seriously, the way of eternal life. Christ told him that he, knowing the commandments, must keep them. When the rich young man replied that he had faithfully kept all the law, Christ became interested and said that one thing still was lacking; that he should sell all his belongings and give to the poor, and become His follower. As the young man was very rich, these conditions did not please him.

Hofmann's picture is beautifully painted and finished, and the faces studied intelligently. Christ's penetrating eyes reveal his earnestness, and his mouth is firmly set. It is an appealing face. As he points to the sick man with the crutch, and the inquiring look of his woman attendant, there is real regret expressed in the handsome face of the rich young man. He bears himself with conscious dignity, his richly embroidered coat hangs well and supplements the beauty of his face. He wears an elegant turban and wide bands of embroideries mark the edge of his garment. He has a silken sash, and those belongings which come of wealth. Christ is in His simple dark robes, giving Him dignity and character. His hands emphasize eloquently His message to the rich young ruler.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

CHRIST AND THE RICH YOUNG RULER

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 10:17-22. READ ALSO MATT. 19:16-22; AND LUKE 18:18-23.

Prayer: Dear Father, Amid all the temptations of youth, show me the straight path leading to a successful life and to life eternal. Teach me Thy Word and by the Holy Spirit apply its precepts to my conduct and my thinking. Help me to love high thinking more than rich living; the ornaments of a meek and lowly mind more than costly apparel. Give me courage to take up my cross and follow Thee. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"The wealthiest man among us is the best;
No grandeur now in nature or in book
Delights us. Rapine, avarice, expense,
This is idolatry, and these we adore.
Plain living and high thinking are no more:
The homely beauty of the good old cause
Is gone; our peace, our fearful innocence
And pure religion breathing household laws."
—Wordsworth.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, the final hour of His departure from Peraea, or beyond the Jordan, the last of a series of events recorded chronologically, as He begins His last journey to Jerusalem in the spring, A. D. 30. Place, the highway on which the worshippers journeyed from Peraea to Jerusalem to the passover. Persons, Christ, His disciples, a rich young ruler, and company of pilgrims.

Scripture Setting: Worldly Weights That Disqualify for the Heavenly Race. The early church in training, Acts 2:41-47. The burden of riches, Mark 10:23-31. Stripped of superfluities, 1 Cor. 9:19-27. Laying aside the weights, Hebr. 12:1-4. The contest and the crown, 2 Tim. 4:5. Coaching the lovers of wealth, Rev. 3:17-18.

Life and Conduct Setting: This incident sets forth the heroic challenge and sacrificing conditions of the Christian race. 1. Any struggle for mastery draws interested witnesses, but the decision to enter the race, each makes for himself. 2. To be ready to run is to leave the superfluous, to be trained to fitness, to know the rules, and to be sure of the course. 3. To observe all the rules of moral training will help, but the winning of the race calls for a passionate and supreme ambition. 4. To be called by Christ is an honor so great and a career so exalted that one can afford to leave all behind. 5. How sad to miss companionship with the goodly company of apostles, martyrs, and saints, because one is possessed by his worldly goods.

THE RICH RULER RULED OUT OF THE RACE.

Entering with Eagerness. "And when He was gone forth into the way, there came one running." In the running, eager, breathless figure that hurried up the road to catch Christ before He should leave Peraea, we look upon an athletic young man who possessed much to make him attractive. He possessed great wealth. He had lived a strictly moral life. He had been deeply impressed by the ministry of Jesus, and was doubtless sincere in the humility he showed as he prostrated himself before the One whom he addressed as "Good Master." He would understand from this great Rabbi at the last possible moment of His sojourn there the true meaning of life. It was an opportunity too great to be lost, and this distinguished man throwing his reserve and dignity to the winds made all possible speed. The weakness of his nature was his impetuosity. He was not like that one who first sat down and counted the cost. He was the kind of an athlete to win in a hundred-yard dash, but to fail completely in a cross-country run, or an endurance race. He did not lack enthusiasm, but he did lack rugged endurance. He thought he was ready to enter the lists and compete in the Christian race, but he needed someone to explain the nature of true discipleship.

Standing at the Starting Post. He asked Him, "Good Master, what shall I do that I may inherit eternal life?" By this time the highway was full of pilgrims to the passover. In the open road, in the hearing of the crowd, this ruler pays honor to the One who had been bitterly opposed by the ruling class. With youth, influence, wealth, and morality all in his possession this ruler craves in his restless heart for eternal life. A mere keeping of the commandments did not satisfy him, hence he asks, "What lack I yet?" And Christ was quick to see that for one thing he lacked a true conception of the Messiah. To call Him "Good Master" merely in the sense of a human teacher was to lose all sight of His Divinity. He would not be called "Good" by those who had not the faith to call Him God. Nevertheless Jesus does not ignore either the question or the questioner, but answers on the lower plane of the inquiry. Since this man supposed he could "inherit" eternal life as he had inherited his fortune, Jesus points him to the second table of the Decalogue, prescribing the duty of man to man. Adultery, murder, theft, false witness, fraud, these five things he is to avoid while the sixth, reverence to parents, he is to observe. The first table of the law, the duties of man to God, is purposely omitted, that the inquirer, noticing the omission, might be led to a self-examining test. Obedience to the requirements of the law was too easy to get one to Heaven, and he knew it. He had already learned enough of Christ to know He was calling for absolute subjection of the heart to God. But if he could only comply with Heaven's requirements by doing something, even something very hard, he was ready to do it. This very day and hour before all the world he thought he wished to do something heroic. Let Christ but shout the word and he would be off. And when he is referred to the ten commandments, the reply is so obvious and so simple he is disappointed.

The Conscientious Contestant. "And he answered, all these have I observed from my youth." The young man felt hurt, thinking he was misunderstood. He was not content with the commonplace. He was not satisfied with careless morality. He had kept the strict letter of the law from youth up. More than this, he was willing to do anything. He had knelt at the feet of Him who was all perfect, and from whom came all perfection. Standing there so genuine, so generous and enthusiastic, Christ loved him. But the young man had never fathomed the depths of the commandments, or interpreted them as meaning all they signified to Christ. One short crucial test was necessary to reveal to the young ruler his own condition. Would he enter the contest under conditions that would demand all there was in him? We shall see.

The Rules and Regulations of the Race. "Sell whatsoever thou hast; and come, take up the cross, and follow me." The conditions to Christian discipleship are not external but internal. The one invariable rule is in seeking the Kingdom to seek it first. All must, in spirit, at least, be surrendered to the preeminent purpose in life. In every life, as in this young man's, there is a fundamental fault, so deep we may not have known it, but we must know it and correct it, if we would be crowned victors in the race. Something must be left behind, and more than that, we must forget the thing that is left behind as we press forward for the prize. To him this thing to be cast off was wealth, to us it may be something quite different. The law of discipleship is this: without forsaking there can be no following. Who is the Christian hero? Herbert Welsh has said: "It is that young man for whom it would be so easy to drift in the current of doubtful pleasures, to bend to custom, to be turned by ridicule, but who in the strength of an upright manhood puts beneath his feet impurity, dishonesty, gambling, and drunkenness, and will not be shackled by sin. It is the man, the woman everywhere who has found a purifying purpose and passion, whose life is given to the Kingdom, who stands for the things which are honorable and lovely and of good report. These are the heroes who make the world worthy of the respect of angels and of God."

A Test Too Trying. "And he was sad at that saying, and went away grieved, for he had great possessions." The measure of a real athlete is his power to withstand fatigue. But some lives are tested by the call to face the crowd and take a stand as a contestant, for they have not even the courage to make a start. The rich young ruler was called upon to make a sacrifice too great. By so terrible a test as the surrender of all his wealth did Christ take the measure of his earnestness.

The spiritual decision must be made before the spiritual life can be lived. Some first act of self-denial; the first open profession of Christ; the first public prayer; the standing forth alone to be counted for Christ, reveals to many for the first time that the Christian life is a struggle. It certainly would be more pleasant to believe that this rich young ruler was given another trial and made the right start. But he vanishes from the Gospel history, hugging his wealth, pricked to the heart, with a cloud upon his brow. The evangelists know nothing further. But the poet Dante in imagination follows him further, far into the shadowy realms where souls are blown about like autumn leaves on the confines of the outer world. There he recognizes him, rejected by Heaven, despised by hell, the rich young ruler who could not make the race,— "Who made through cowardice the great refusal."

Quiz and Study. 1. In what parables did Jesus warn against the selfishness of riches? 2. What Christian convert vowed to restore four-fold to all whom he had defrauded? 3. What became of the silver paid Judas for his treachery? 4. By what conflicting motives was the heart of this ruler torn? 5. What did Paul decide was more profitable than bestowing all his goods to feed the poor?

Challenge Text. But they that will be — fall into — and a —. 1 Tim. 6:(?).

Practical Thoughts. 1. It is supreme folly to become absorbed in perishable treasure until the eleventh hour, and then rush madly after the treasure of eternal life. 2. Lacking one thing, perfect obedience, the whole temple of possible character overburdens that one rotten pillar, and all is lost. 3. Think of the need and place for this rich young ruler in the company of the Apostles; and think of the honor of the offer he refused! 4. None can ever be quite happy afterward in possessions for which they did once sacrifice eternal life. 5. Great failures become great warnings. Dante calls this scene "The Great Refusal," and pictures the young ruler wandering through the Inferno, seeking his lost opportunity.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE LABORERS IN THE VINEYARD

So when even was come, the lord of the said

unto
his

Call the

and give them their hire, beginning from the last unto the first.

And when they came that were hired about the eleventh

they received

every man a

But when the first came, they supposed that they should have received more; and they likewise received every

a penny.
And
when they had received it, they murmured against
the goodman
of the

Saying, These last have wrought but one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us, which have borne the burden and heat of the day. But he answered one of them, and said, Friend, I do thee no wrong: didst not thou agree with me for a penny? So the last shall be first, and the first last: for many be called, but few chosen.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS MATT. 20:1-16.

Prayer: For the daily tasks that are set me, Heavenly Father, I am grateful. May my every hour, whether spent in work, in study, in play, or in sleep, leave me better than before. May I not neglect these golden harvest days of youth. Teach me how to do with my fingers, how to learn with my mind, and how to love with my heart. I praise Thy name for calling me in the glad morning hour of life. Keep me busy till evening comes, then take me to Thy home. Amen.

"Be mine some simple service here below—
To weep with those who weep, their joy to share,
Their pains to solace or their burdens bear;
Some widow in her agony to meet,
Some exile in his new-found home to greet;
To serve some child of thine, and so serve Thee.
Lo, here am I: to such a work send me."

—Edward Everett Hale.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: This parable was spoken by Christ primarily to His disciples, especially to Peter, following the sorrowful departure of the rich young ruler and immediately before setting out for Bethany preceding the passover, A. D. 29.

Scripture Setting: God's Repeated Calls. Repeated calls to the child Samuel, 1 Sam. 3:1-10. The repeated call to old age rejected, Jer. 6:4-11. The called and chosen friends of Christ, John 15:7-16. The fate of rejecting the repeated call, Jer. 7:3-15. The call in the wilderness, Isa. 40:3-11. The call in the city's streets, Prov. 1:20-29.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage teaches

how God calls, tests, and rewards His workmen. 1. Christ's disciples are called into the vineyard of the church to help culture and train lives for fruit bearing. 2. Christ's approaching death suggested the pressing nature of the Gospel work and the scarcity of workers. 3. Man's appeal to Divine justice brings only justice; his appeal to Divine mercy brings life eternal. 4. He who invites has ability to pay, fairness to discriminate, the right to reject, but the desire that all might be saved. 5. A final reckoning time will come for all classes: those who work gladly; those who work complainingly; and the loiterers as well.

THE LORD CALLING THE LOITERERS TO LABOR.

The Heavenly Householder's Early Morning Call. "The Kingdom of Heaven is like unto a man that is an householder, which went out early in the morning to hire laborers into his vineyard." A question from Simon Peter was the occasion for the Lord's parable on the vineyard laborers. In Peter's remark that the disciples had forsaken all to follow Christ and in his blunt question, "What shall we have therefore?" there is a false emphasis on the Lord's preference for them. This base element of selfishness in Peter's nature often marred the music of his life.

All the disciples, including the spiritually-minded John, were placing too much importance on the time element in their call, thinking that because they received the earliest call that therefore they were to have pre-eminent positions. Christ reminds them that God had been calling men into His vineyard from the very dawn of creation. Again and again His prophet Jeremiah represents God as saying, "I have sent unto you, rising up early and sending." He began by calling such as Enoch and Abraham, and His voice has been heard in entreaty ever since.

His successive acts in creation made the vineyard ready, and His earliest thoughts made man a laborer together with Him. All of the years of God have been full of hours of grace. True in epochs of history, as in individual lives, there have been certain times when the call of grace sounded louder and more insistent, marking the first, the third, the sixth, the ninth, and the eleventh hours, nevertheless God's earnest entreaty has continued to sound through all the intervening time.

God's Workmen Promised Ample Wages. "When he had agreed with the laborers for a penny a day, he sent them into his vineyard." This sermon-story teaches that it is in the Divine plan to engage every man from the first hour to the last. When at the eleventh hour some were found standing on the streets as loiterers they were condemned and urged to go to work. If any individual stood at a disadvantage in going to the field late he had only himself to blame. He knew of the field, he knew of the grape season, he knew of the need of laborers.

The "penny" was the Roman denarius. Tacitus says it was the usual ample day's wages for the soldiers in campaigns who, besides enduring severe and difficult labor, also faced grave danger.

When Peter reminded Christ of all they had forsaken Christ reminds Peter of all they shall receive in return,—houses, lands, and homefolks an hundred fold. Even in this life God pays His workmen generous wages. And after death Christ declared we should inherit eternal life. An inheritance is a gift, not the cash end of a business agreement. Paul makes this distinction, "The wages of sin is death, but the gift of God is eternal life." How thankful we are that a gracious God has given us employment; how careful we should be that our motive is disinterested love, not self-seeking.

The Promise of the Eleventh Hour—the Precious Hour of Grace. About the eleventh hour he went out and saith, "Why stand ye here all the day idle? Go ye also into the vineyard; and whatsoever is right, that shall ye receive." Call after call had sounded forth from the vineyard, but the careless idlers still stand gaping in the market place. So far as the results which might profit the husbandman were concerned there was no necessity for the last call. So far as the real work of the kingdom is concerned it would matter little whether some who have wasted their lives in sin ever heard the last call of grace. But it does matter to them whether the night of death finds them still idlers refusing the Lord's call, or belated laborers, trusting the Lord to do with them what He will. These late ones know that it is through grace they are permitted to enter the vineyard at all. Despising all former calls, wasting all the work hours of the day but one, shame at last seizes upon them, and feeling how richly they deserve the Lord's rebuke, they hasten to the field without asking about the hire, but trusting the good Lord's grace.

Perhaps here is the explanation why Gentiles more readily accepted the Christian invitation than the Jews. The Jews had the prior invitation as God's chosen people, "To the Jew first but also to the Gentile." Though they entered first they served as under a contract, rather than trusting in the compassion of God. Hence they received their full pay as servants but missed the inheritance of sons.

The Morning Men Murmur at Their Money. And when they had received the penny, they murmured against the good man of the house, saying, "These last have wrought but one hour, and thou hast made them equal unto us which have borne the burden and heat of the day." But he answered, "Take that thine is, and go thy way."

The evil disposition cannot be hidden. Those who early in the morning had agreed on a penny for twelve hours of labor come now at the day's close grumbling over their burdens, the heat of the sun, and their pay. The good man has no use for such either in his house or in his vineyard. The envious hireling serves sourly and discontentedly for his penny only, and having received his perishable reward he is himself rejected. Only the hireling of a day will forbid the husbandman from being kind and gracious to others. They can only be his friends who understand his mind, recognize his sovereign rights, and are happy in his goodness.

Another and a better day awaits all who have served with a glad and willing mind. Such not only do their Master's work, but learn their Master's mind. Christ says to them when the day is over, "I call you no longer servants but friends." And the Father says of such, "They shall go out no more forever."

Calling the Many, Choosing the Few. "So the last shall be first, and the first last: for many be called, but few chosen." God's call is for an honest and full day's work for every man. Some begin in the early morning and are commended for so doing; some begin in middle life and are accepted on equal terms; some idle away their days but come at last repentant, and God's wondrous compassion is extended to them. Life's little day ends. The curtains of death are drawn. And afterwards come great surprises. Some who perhaps were thought of least and last shall sit on thrones of spiritual power and splendor. Some who amid the rude jostlings of the world found no place at the tables of the rich and powerful, shall find themselves seated with the glorious company of the apostles, the goodly fellowship of the prophets, the noble army of martyrs.

Not the boasting Jews but the trusting Gentiles; not the proud Pharisees but the penitent publican; not the apostolic treasurers, but the crucified thieves; not the church members of half a century but the converts of a few days. And some who like Judas served only with a cool and cunning calculation as a mere mercenary matter shall go out clutching their bag of gold,—go out into that night of dark dismissal.

The last word of the lesson is its priceless gem: that little word chosen. To be selected for the Heavenly Husbandman's House we must possess the lowliest humility. Where He is there can be no murmuring, no jealous comparisons between disciples, no unholy struggles for preference, no bitter disputing over rival claims. Our Husbandman will do us no wrong; whatsoever is right that shall each receive and far more.

Quiz and Study. 1. In what parable of Christ's recorded by Matthew is the vineyard call refused but afterwards accepted? In what one is the husbandman's son slain? 2. What vineyard owner did Jezebel cause to be slain? How was she punished? 3. Where is found Isaiah's song of the vineyard? What did it bring forth? What would Jehovah do to it? 4. What did Christ say of God and Himself as workers? Of His own finished work? What did Paul say of the laborer's right to wages? Of the idler forfeiting his right to eat?

Challenge Text. "Son, go — today in my —," Matt. 21: (9)

Practical Thoughts. 1. Christ used the slender wire of simple parable to bring to us from Heaven truth powerful as lightning. 2. The rust of idleness eats faster than the rub and wear of labor and dulls instead of brightens. 3. No pains, no gains; no sweat, no sweet; no mill, no meal; no vine, no wine. 4. The marketplace is a profitable place to go if we carry the fruit of our labor, but an unprofitable place to stand in idleness spending valuable time.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE LAST JOURNEY TO JERUSALEM.

And Jesus going up to took the apart in the way, and said unto them, Behold, we go up to Jerusalem; and the Son of man shall be unto the chief

and unto the

and they shall condemn him to death, And shall deliver him to the Gentiles to

and to

and to him: and the third day he shall rise again.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 20:17-28—READ MARK 10:32-45, LUKE 9:51-53.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Give me grace to follow in Thy steps. Baptize me with a courageous spirit to go where I ought to even if I must go alone. Strengthen my will to do the hard things when Thy will calls me that way. Let neither ease nor pleasure mean more to me than duty. May the pathway of Thy suffering ever awaken my love and loyalty to Thee. Amen.

By the light of burning martyr-fires Christ's bleeding feet I track.

Toiling up new Calvaries ever

With the cross that turns not back.

—J. R. Lowell.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, the last month of Christ's ministry, March, A. D. 30, after the raising of Lazarus. Place, Peraea, beyond Jordan, and the journey to Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus, the Twelve and Salome.

Scripture Setting: The Path to the Cross. Submitting to suffering. Isa. 50:4-9. Patient endurance, Heb. 12:1-4. Sustaining joy in sacrifice. Phil. 2:12-18. Obedience through suffering. Heb. 5:1-10.

Life and Conduct Setting: This passage presents the spiritual and physical leadership of Jesus. 1.

Like a seasoned general, Christ accelerated His movements as He pushed to the final victory of the campaign. 2. His followers were willing to share the honors, but had not been tested out under the fire of service. 3. Fear, hunger, weariness, faithlessness, treachery flew like arrows, but they did not hinder Christ's advance. 4. The way to Calvary was a daily battle to find or make a way for a lost world back to God. 5. Christ trod the wine-press alone that His triumph might be complete and His salvation His own free gift.

CHRIST CONFRONTING CALVARY'S CROSS.

Striding Before, and Seeing Beforehand. "And they were in the way going up to Jerusalem, and Jesus went before them: and they were amazed; and as they followed, they were afraid." The call of the Northern leaders near the close of the civil war was "On to Richmond!" The call to Christ near the end of His earthly career was "On to Calvary!" His disciples were amazed and afraid. And well they might be; amazed at the audacity of this Lonely Man; afraid that they might perish in the catastrophe that awaited their Leader. They counselled Him to keep away from Jerusalem during the passover feast, for the Pharisaic party had threatened His life. But the fires of a Divine courage burned within Him, and He went.

What a picture this is of a fine impatience to plunge into the baptism of fire! It pictures Christ striding along the steep mountain path far in advance of His timid, shrinking disciples who could only wonder at the resolve unconquerable that blazed from their Master's eyes.

Christ could march in advance of them because He could see in advance of them. He had a knowledge they did not possess of the meaning and mystery of His death. They feared He would be killed; He knew it was necessary He should die. For years He walked steadily forward in the clear realization of an agonizing death awaiting Him. His whole life was a journey to Calvary.

A prophetic painting by Bouguereau represents Joseph and Mary in their flight into Egypt with the child Jesus. In the early morning the infant Christ is taking His first steps. With His little arms thrown wide He balances His body which upon the sand makes the drawn-out shadow of a cross. In the presence of that prophetic shadow of suffering He walked most of the days of His life. It was this that made Him say, "I have a baptism to be baptized with; and how am I straitened till it be accomplished."

The Iron Will and Steadfast Face. "And it came to pass when the days were well-nigh come that He should be received up, He steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem." Christ was always the Master and Controller of events. He was not carried to Jerusalem by the force of circumstances, for there were plenty of hiding places around Nazareth. But He actively precipitated a collision between Himself and the Jewish authorities. He drew the eyes of His enemies upon Himself after He knew that sentence of death had been pronounced upon Him. No force of foreordination, or decree, or necessity overpowered His will, for, speaking of His own life, He said, "I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it up." In His death as truly as in His resurrection Christ was active. In the Garden He unsheathed the sword of His omnipotent will, and as the zigzag lightning played through the darkness the Roman soldiers fell as dead men. On the hill of crucifixion He refused the stupefying drug, dying not of exhaustion, but yielding up His Spirit with a mighty shout.

Isaiah in prophecy saw the soldiers smiting His back, spitting in His face, heaping shame upon shame, but heard Him declare, "The Lord God will help Me; therefore have I set my face as a flint." In the expressions

"set My face as a flint," and "steadfastly set His face," we can see the muscles of determination tighten across His jaw like a man desperately in earnest. He went conscious that death was waiting; He died because He willed to die.

His Human Hesitancy. "Are ye able to drink of the cup that I shall drink of, and to be baptized with the baptism that I am baptized with?" The necessity of Christ steadfastly setting His face for that last journey grew out of a natural reluctance, a human shrinking from the cross. He was willing to go all the way, but He did not gladly go. The agony of Gethsemane was not a shadow; it was an awful reality as He prayed, "O My Father, if it be possible, let this cup pass." When He saw its great place in His Father's purpose, nature recoiled, but His great soul cried, "Nevertheless, as Thou wilt." His flesh and blood quivered beforehand with the suffering He felt in anticipation. It was necessary, therefore, that He should instinctively grip Himself lest He should swerve or recoil.

"He endured the cross, despising the shame." Without the human shrinking there could not have been the endurance; except for the sense of shame and ignominy He could not have despised it. His disciples felt they could drink this cup with Him, but he knew they would fail. There was provided an easier path for them. When the Lord sweat blood and agonized in prayer they slept. When He hung upon the Cross they fled. As Christ set His face to go to Jerusalem each step along that consecrated road was a separate victory of the resolute soul over the reluctant body. And since the steadfast love and unmeasurable suffering of Christ were unique, it follows that the throne of His Heavenly glory should be unique. To use His own words, "Ought not Christ to have suffered these things, and to enter into His glory?"

The Law of True Greatness. "Whosoever will be great among you, let him be your minister." The last journey of Jesus was marred by the self-seeking of two of His disciples, James and John. Evidently they had been ashamed to approach the Master, and so had encouraged their mother, Salome, to ask Him for conspicuous posts in the new Kingdom about to be set up. He had declared previously that the Twelve should sit on twelve thrones, judging the twelve tribes. Their ambition led them to ask for the right hand and the left hand place, the chief places of honor. They were good men, but their motives were mixed. They must be prepared by hard training and the Spirit's filling to occupy the great posts they did afterwards fill.

Christ's answer would suggest that spiritual pre-eminence is not so much a gift to be bestowed as an honor to be deserved. Their exaltation was to come not from an outward promotion, but an inner consecration. Some one has said, "You cannot travel within, and stand still without." The great characters of earth, like Christ, have built their lives on some great sacrificial law; have not aimed at greatness at all, but have appeared at last to tower head and shoulders above their fellowmen, because their spirit of sacrifice and willingness to serve has led them to the very summits of being. It is only a new affection that will give the impelling power to a life, treading down difficulties, mounting obstacles, persevering through apparent defeats, and winning at last the heights of moral grandeur.

The End of the March in View. "The Son of Man came not to be ministered unto, but to minister, and to give His life a ransom for many." In Christ's life there was no backtracking, no retreating. He moved right on to the end. For He possessed the advantage of knowing beforehand that He was to triumph by the sacrifice of Himself. All the holy resolve, the bloody sweat and dying agony of Jesus would not avail to wash away our guilt were it not that His sacrifice was conceived in love. It was love canceling law.

But by His agony we gain some measurement of the greatness of His love. In the sacrifice of Jesus God's love was written in letters that could be read from the stars. He who could rightfully say, "All power is given unto Me," emptied Himself of His strength and authority for the time, and under the weight of His own cross staggered toward Calvary. "Having loved, He loved unto the end." And the world needs today more of this love that lasts, the love that toils the long, thorny pathway to the end even though it toil alone. In our law courts, in our rescue missions, in our missionary work we need more of the love that "never faileth." Because Christ lived and loved we have today judges of juvenile courts who use their influence, not to punish, but redeem; big brothers in college towns, and great teachers like Arnold of Rugby, who lead their scholars to Christ.

Quiz and Study. 1. What special privileges, with Peter, were given James and John? 2. What six things did Christ foretell the Twelve would happen to Him at Jerusalem? 3. What did Christ mean by asking if the two brothers could drink of the cup He should drink of? 4. In what pronounced way was attention called to His entrance into Jerusalem?

Challenge Text. But I have a — to be — with; and how am I — till it be —. Luke 12: (?).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Christ's offering of Himself was purely voluntary; He could not save Himself because He would redeem the world. 2. The greatness of Christ's heroism is in that He deliberately counted the cost; He suffered with no words of applause, but of infamy and scorn; He gave himself to His enemies, prayed for them, died for them. 3. Christ moved on to what seemed defeat and disaster, but which faith made a fadeless diadem. 4. The disciples by traveling far behind Christ were engulfed in denial and cowardice.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

And they came to Jericho:
and as he went out of Jericho with his disciples and a great number blind Bartimæus, the son of Timæus, sat by the

And
when he heard
that it was Jesus of

he began to cry out, and say, Jesus, thou son of David, have mercy on me. And many charged him that he should hold his peace: but he cried the more a great deal, Thou son of David, have mercy on me. And Jesus stood still, and commanded him to be called. And they saying unto him, Be of good comfort, rise; he calleth thee. And he,

rose, and

And Jesus answered and said unto him, What wilt thou that I should do unto thee? The blind man said unto him, Lord, that I might receive my sight. And Jesus said unto him, Go thy way; thy faith hath made thee whole. And immediately he received his sight, and followed Jesus in the way.

MARK 10: 46-52.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS MARK 10:46-52. READ ALSO MATT. 20:29-34; LUKE 18:35-43.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, how glad am I that Thou didst come our way and offer to us Thy gifts of light and salvation. How dark would be our way without the light of Thy Word, and how sad would be our lot without Thy sympathy. Help us by all means that we may use to carry Thy light to the lands that are in darkness. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

While life prolongs its precious light,
Mercy is found and peace is given;
But soon, ah! soon, approaching night
Shall blot out every hope of Heaven.
—Timothy Dwight.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Friday, March 31, A. D. 30, during Christ's last journey to Jerusalem. Place, the road leaving Jericho, six hours' journey from Jerusalem. Persons, Christ and His disciples, a blind beggar, named Bartimæus, accompanied by a nameless one similarly afflicted and a great crowd of attendants.

Scripture Setting: Calling Upon Christ for Light. A prayer of confidence in darkness, Job 23:1-12. Waiting only upon God, Psa. 62:5-12. Answer to whole-hearted prayer, Jer. 29:10-14. Healed by the prayer of faith, Mark 5:25-34. Christ's answering call, John 11:3, 20-28.

Life and Conduct Setting: This passage presents Jesus as Healer and Saviour, inspiring both love and joy. 1. The anxious inquirer who hears Jesus and refuses to be silenced will be heard and helped. 2. The cold-hearted disciple would silence the call for help and rebuke the seeking soul. 3. The compassionate Christ listens to need and relieves it, changes darkness to light, and transforms hinderers into helpers. 4. The disciple, warmed by Christ's sympathy, invites, comforts and instructs the needy. 5. Multitudes, changed by the love of Christ, joyfully journey on with Christ in their midst towards the Heavenly Jerusalem.

THE BEGGAR'S PLEA THAT HALTS THE KING'S PROCESSION.

A Blind Beggar Embowered in Beauty. "As He went out of Jericho with His disciples and a great number of people, blind Bartimæus sat by the highway side, begging." Jericho in the time of Christ was a famous and beautiful city standing on a green oasis watered by many springs. Its large and prosperous population called it the "paradise of God." The bees worked amid its numerous flowers, producing honey that was famous, and the air was heavy with the odor of roses and palm trees.

Amid all this beauty and plenty Jesus was passing, together with a great company of pilgrims. Already the spirit of the triumphal entry, soon to occur at Jerusalem, was in the hearts of His followers. The procession moved on from Jericho with Christ and His disciples at its head, looking very much like a king surrounded by his court, going to his coronation. Two there were by the highway who heard the marching feet and the mingled voices, but saw nothing of the splendid pageant sweeping by them. Bartimæus and his nameless companion may have had a shaded place under a roadside tree for many years, and travelers accustomed to pass that way were doubtless familiar with their repeated calls for alms, "The blind, the blind, remember the blind!"

Blind in a paradise of beauty—are they not the type of many who grope in spiritual darkness, sitting daily where they might see the King in His beauty, but having their eyes blinded by the god of this world? For it is only the pure in heart who see the spiritual beauty of Jesus.

The Despairing Cry of Desperate Need. "When he heard that it was Jesus, he began to cry out." It is a well-known fact that the blind beggars of Palestine have most acute hearing. A recent traveler there declares that they almost know every man's voice who passes, unless he is a stranger. Bartimæus, intently listening, had caught the name of Jesus, and he is seized with a sudden fear that unless he is heard now he will be forever robbed of the opportunity that is slipping past. Some there were in the procession who tried to quiet the blind man, but his voice was strong, and he felt that his need was imperative. Instead of holding his peace, "he cried the more a great deal."

In his downright earnestness he is the type of the anxious inquirer after religion. In his sense of need, his feeling that this is his last chance, the increasing intensity of his cries, and his remarkable faith, we have the very elements that draw forth the Saviour's sympathy and help. It was then or never, for Jesus was leaving Jericho for the last time. What a pity that the cold disciples and the heartless multitude administering an undeserved rebuke did not rather become eyes to the blind and lead them to Jesus!

We sometimes wonder whether Christianity is an ecclesiastical procession sweeping by, or a relief column marching to save the besieged. If Jesus is allowed to be at the head of the procession the line will halt whenever the cry of the needy is raised. Wherever the procession sweeps by, indifferent to the heart hunger of the poor, though it call itself a Christian church and carry religious banners, be sure it is only an ecclesiastical parade with the Son of David left out. It may not be in the official program to halt that beggars may be healed, but it was in the official program of Jesus always, for He declared on setting out from Nazareth, "He hath anointed Me to preach deliverance to the captives, the recovery of sight to the blind."

Hinderers Changed to Helpers. "Jesus commanded him to be called. And they called the blind man, saying unto him, Be of good comfort, rise; He calleth thee." Here as at many other times stands forth the marked leadership of Jesus over the disciples and the multitude. Not infrequently the disciples had attempted to protect their Master from the obtrusiveness of others, feeling also that no one should interfere with the teaching and companionship which Christ specially offered them. How adroitly does Christ transform these unintentional hinderers into enthusiastic helpers! By a word from Christ these who a moment before chided the blind, now comfort. "Be of good comfort." Instead of silencing the cries, they entreat to come to Christ. "Rise; He calleth thee." It is beautiful to see how the spirit of the whole multitude is altered by the tact, courage, and compassion of Christ. The compassion of Jesus is contagious.

The multitude is not wholly evil, nor even intentionally selfish, but they need the masterful leadership and unflinching sympathy of Jesus. The church today, like the disciples of old, turn a deaf ear to human need unless the living Christ is in the midst directing and inspiring. Whenever the church in discouragement feels like saying, "Send the multitude away," Jesus calls back with unfaltering faith, "Give ye them to eat." He divides the company; He commands the disciples; He multiplies the bread. But through His leadership and inspiration the clumsy, fearful, hindering disciples become most efficient workers.

Christ Gives Right Royally. "The blind man said, Lord that I might receive my sight. Jesus said, Thy faith hath made thee whole." It was a custom in ancient times for kings when visiting each other to exchange royal gifts. Each king was allowed to express his preference in the choice of his gift. Christ treats the blind man's beggary as if it were royalty by asking, "What wilt thou that I should do unto thee?" The beggar had addressed Christ with a royal title, "Jesus, Thou Son of David," and now Christ clothes the beggar with the privilege of a king—that of selecting his own gift. With Christ even beggars may be choosers.

It was a perilous moment for ragged, coatless Bartimæus, this moment of choice; for before him was a whole kingdom from which to choose, since the King had given him unrestricted right of choice.

It will be remembered that God gave such a choice to Solomon when first he came to the throne. It will be remembered also that beautiful Queen Esther was given a royal choice. Both of these young rulers chose wisely and unselfishly. But when drunken Herod gave vain Salome her choice she listened to evil counsel and chose murder and the blood of God's great prophet. Before every young life does there not stretch a whole kingdom from which to make our choice? What then to me is the summum bonum, or the greatest good? Bartimæus might have chosen alms, for certainly he needed money. He might have chosen clothes, for he had thrown away his ragged coat in his eagerness to find Christ. But his decision falls without delay, "Lord, that I might receive my sight." There is an old adage which runs,

"If wishes were horses,
Then beggars might ride."

With Bartimæus, to wish was to receive. No longer a blind beggar pinned to that bit of ground in the shade of the tree, but instantly flooded with light, free to move and to take his own place among the world's workers. Under the circumstances his was not an unwise choice, for by it he leaped into his lost manhood. But with the gift of sight came also the glad experience of faith. Christ's giving was larger than the beggar's asking. He asked for sight, he received salvation as the free gift of God. Said Jesus, "Go thy way," but the grateful soul decided that Christ's way would be his way, and with gladness of heart he began following Him surrounded by an exulting multitude.

Quiz and Study. 1. What title did the multitude give Jesus; what title did Bartimæus give, and what difference of faith was thus expressed? 2. For what did Bartimæus first ask? What afterwards? What two things did he receive? 3. Name three Bible characters who were given royal choices, and state what they chose? 4. What evidence did Bartimæus give that he was healed? That he was saved? 5. What did Christ declare was the quality in the blind man that produced his transformation?

Challenge Text: "Open Thou mine ———, that I may behold ——— things out of Thy ———." Psa. 119: (?).

Practical Thoughts. 1. The natural light is pleasant, but "Covet earnestly the best gifts." 2. The knowledge, courage and zeal which Christ inspires puts men on their feet and sets them moving toward the Holy City. 3. The soul that seeks and finds rises from a general prayer for mercy to a specific, personal call for help. 4. Faith is progressive; first, sitting where Jesus passes; second, hearing coming footsteps; third, learning this is "Jesus of Nazareth"; fourth, hailing Him "Son of David"; fifth, beseeching Him as "Rabboni," or Lord; sixth, following Him as Master through life.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

ZACCHAEUS. THE PUBLICAN.

And Jesus entered and passed through Jericho. And, behold, there was a named Zacchæus, which was the chief among the publicans,

and he was

And he sought to see who he was; and could not for the because he was

of stature. And he

and

into a sycamore tree to see him: for he was to pass that way.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS LUKE 19:1-10.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, I have nowhere in the home of my heart a room that is worthy for Thee. But if Thou wilt honor me with Thy presence I will try to live more worthy of Thee.

May Thy presence hallow my life as the glory of Thy infancy did hallow the Bethlehem manger.

Abide in my home today and bring salvation to it as Thou didst save the home of Zacchaeus the publican. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

Judge of man's destiny, God's Christ!
Hope, Love, and Mercy on My footsteps wait.

O'er earth's vast fields I walk; wild tribes forsake Idols and heathen shrines to keep My tryst.
Sound I today thy heart-door;—soon or late
My lantern dartles once at every gate.
If sleeping wake—if feasting, rise before
I turn away. Now is the hour of fate.
For they who follow Me reach that blest state Called life immortal, and conquer sin's domains, E'en Death. But those who, doubting, hesitate Consign themselves to hell's perpetual pains,
Seek peace too late, and perishing, implore.
Seek Me this day lest I return no more.—T. B. R.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: .Time, Friday, March 31, A. D. 30. Place, a street in Jericho and the house of Zacchaeus probably not far distant. Persons, Jesus and the Twelve, a caravan of His disciples, Zacchaeus and other residents of the city.

Scripture Setting: The Search for Jesus and its Rewards. Andrew and John seeking Christ, John 1:35-42. The Greeks inquiring for Jesus, John 12:17-23. The rewards Christ offers the rich, Rev. 3:17-21. Christ dwelling with men, Rev. 21:1-5. Righteousness through restitution, Ezek. 33:14-20.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage symbolizes the mutual joy when the seeking Christ and searching humanity find each other. 1. Things to be overcome in seeking Christ: (a) the crowd that would press us back; (b) our own natural limitations; (c) our sense of unworthiness. 2. What Christ will lead man to do: (a) to eagerly wait His coming; (b) to descend from false positions of pride and self-esteem; (c) to seek a new heart; (d) to establish a new home life; (e) to adopt new business methods. 3. Some evidences of conversion: (a) public confession of faith; (b) restitution for wrong; (c) practice of benevolence. 4. The order of Christ's progress: (a) to the individual; (b) to the home circle; (c) to the city; (d) to the nation; (e) to the race.

SEEING JESUS UNDER DIFFICULTIES.

A Sinner's Haste to See the Saviour. "He sought to see Jesus, who He was. And he ran before and climbed up into a sycamore tree." One afternoon in early spring a short-bodied customs officer might have been seen running down the already crowded street of Jericho. The crowd repulsed him as an unwelcome intruder, for this Jew, Zacchaeus, was the head of the tax and customs department, the paid representative of Rome's cruelty and power. His discomfort was increased by the fact that he could see nothing over the shoulders of that dense double tier of humanity, so this prominent citizen in his eagerness condescends to shin up an overhanging sycamore, or Egyptian fig tree. Its leaves would partly hide him, and its branches would offer a vantage point for observing the approach of a notable Visitor.

What strange impulse could it be to urge this rich man to take such an exceptional position? Was it mere curiosity to look upon One of whom the whole nation was talking? Was it the power of conscience that long had struggled within to bring forth a confession of dishonest transactions? Was it some powerful attraction towards the Teacher who, unlike the harsh leaders of Israel, had often spoken words of hope for publicans and sinners? We would rather think it was the Divine Spirit that leads, all unconsciously, every soul to its golden hour of spiritual opportunity.

Placing Ourselves in the Place of His Promises. "For He was to pass that way." Christ's passage through the "City of Palms" was signalized by two remarkable incidents. As He entered in He finds the two blind men waiting His coming, and calling for mercy. As He leaves He finds Zacchaeus has taken a position on the route He was to take. These positions in both instances were well chosen, probably on the main thoroughfare along which the caravans always travelled. Zacchaeus had some good ground for the selection of his position. He had somehow predetermined the movement of Jesus. He hastened to this spot, in advance of the thronging, curious multitude, declaring thereby his serious and deliberate purpose to put himself under the influence of Christ. Such a determination is sure to lead to His acquaintance if persisted in. Walking in the counsel of the ungodly, standing in the way of sinners, or sitting in the seat of the scornful will not tend to cultivate His friendship.

David found that the sanctuary was the waiting-place where the Lord was sure to pass. "Righteousness shall go before Him, and shall set us in the way of His steps." The man who habitually absents himself from church, who shuns the gatherings of religious people as he would a contagious disease, who never prays and never reads the Bible but is firm in his declaration that there is no God, belongs in the same class with the man who declares there is no sunrise because he lacks the enterprise to get up early and see it.

The Saviour's Haste to Be the Sinner's Guest. "Jesus came to the place, looked up, saw him, and said, Zacchaeus, make haste, come down, for to-day I must abide at thy house." Christ had power to discern the Spirit's working in the human heart. "He knew what was in man." He who read the spirit and character of Nathaniel while he was still under the fig tree instantly read the inner thoughts of this small body, partly concealed by the fig tree's foliage. He who calleth the stars by number and calleth His sheep by name beamed upon Zacchaeus with a glad look of recognition, and called aloud his name, knowing by Divine intuition that His Father's appointment required He should become the publican's Guest.

Zacchaeus was in no greater haste to climb into its branches than was Jesus to have him climb down. Old experiences, however heavenly, must be left behind when Jesus commands us to enter into better experiences ahead and duties that require haste. A few steps and Christ was at the home of the chief publican. We need not be surprised that in His life of strange contrasts He should pass the priests by and lodge with the publican. Wherever a son of Abraham is lost, there is He needed, and whenever such an one is restored, the purpose of His coming is attained.

Murmuring at the Messiah's Mission. "When they saw it, they all murmured, saying, He is a gone to be guest with a man that is a sinner." The priests could see no good in the publican. To their prejudiced eyes he was only "a man that is a sinner." But to the more sympathetic eyes of Christ he was "a son of Abraham." Between the Pharisee and publican who went up to the temple to pray, Christ could easily detect the difference between pride and penitence. The home of Zacchaeus' heart was not fit to entertain a Heavenly Guest, but he gave over its key to Jesus to come in and cleanse it thoroughly. The priests would neither invite Christ nor allow Him to be invited.

The words so often spoken in utter contempt, "He receiveth sinners and eateth with them," is now inscribed upon a world-wide banner flung to the four winds of heaven, becoming the distinguishing mark of His religion. Jesus is the Friend of sinners.

Zacchaeus Publishes His Program. "Zacchaeus stood and said, Behold, Lord, the half of my goods I give to feed the poor; and if I have taken anything from any man by false accusation, I restore him fourfold." The best proof of the publican's conversion is his renunciation of the fruits of his sin. Restored himself, he would, so far as was in his power, restore to others what by right was theirs. He would practice towards all a fourfold restitution required by Moses only in exceptional cases.

No restitution of stolen goods, however generous, can compensate before God for guilt, but before men it is a seal of sincerity. As his sin had been open and flagrant, so now is his intention to lead a new life declared openly.

From that moment his life becomes a stream of gracious influence. He is the friend of the poor; he is an example to the selfish rich; he is the means of bringing salvation to his own household; and to all he is a shining ornament of grace, bringing unknown luster to the calling of the publican. Though the Clementines record that he finally became bishop of Cæsarea, all other sources point to the fact that instead of being called apart, as was Matthew the publican, he remained in his office of tax gatherer, serving in faithfulness to the end of his life.

Jesus Publishes His Age-Long Purpose. "The Son of man is come to seek and save that which was lost." Jericho the perfumed is described as the Eden of Palestine, but in this lesson we see it was the home of a fallen Adam.

Jesus, in His sad journey to the cross, passes through its streets, not to enjoy its indescribable scenery, but because by tarrying a little while with Zacchaeus He might restore to the fold one sheep that had strayed. This journey, therefore, through the City of Palms is a beautiful symbol of the Saviour's continuous journey through the world's history, becoming the Guest of all those who have the soul-eagerness to look upon Him and the soul-faith to accept His saving power. As Jesus leaves this city forever to plunge into the fiery baptism of His passion week, He remembers with joy that He leaves behind Him at least one house flooded with the salvation He was so soon to procure for a whole lost world.

Quiz and Study. 1. Which of the Twelve was a publican? 2. What Bible character was converted on highway, in jail, in a chariot, in his own house, on a cross? 3. What look of Christ made a disciple weep, revealed the heart of a guileless Israelite? 4. What experience led Jacob to pledge one-tenth of his increase to God? 5. Name three proofs of the interest of Zacchaeus in Christ; three proofs of his conversion.

Practical Thoughts. 1. The rich need the Gospel and are not incapable of receiving it. 2. It is better to give now than to defer our charities till death is about to wrest our money from us. 3. When Christ becomes the guest of our heart we will take Him into our home and into our counting room. 4. Reason is of low stature and cannot see the promise; one must climb by faith to see Jesus.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE ANOINTING AT BETHANY.

And being in Bethany in the

of Simon the

as he

there came a

having an alabaster

of ointment of very precious; and she brake the box, and

And there were some that had indignation within themselves, and said, Why was this waste of the ointment made? For it might have been sold for more than three hundred pence, and have been given to the poor. And they murmured against her. And Jesus said, Let her alone; why trouble ye her? she hath wrought a good work on me. For ye have the poor with you always, and whensoever ye will ye may do them good: but me ye have not always. She hath done what she could: she is come aforehand to anoint my body to the burying. Verily I say unto you, Wheresoever this gospel shall be preached throughout the whole world, this also that she hath done shall be spoken of for a memorial of her.

THE ANOINTING AT BETHANY.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 14:3-11. READ MATT. 26:6-16, ALSO JOHN 12:1-8.

Prayer: Our Father, Help us to bring gifts, however rich or poor they may be, and bestow them upon Him who said, "Inasmuch as ye did it unto one of the least of these, my brethren, ye did it unto Me." Thou who hast flooded our hearts with a love Divine, shall we not give Thee a perfect trust that like the fragment of ointment shall rise to Thee? May the spirit of discord never enter our hearts. Keep them in harmony with thine own. In Jesus' dear name. Amen.

"It is not the deed we do,
Though the deed be ever so fair,
But the love that the dear Lord looketh for,
Hidden with holy care
In the heart of the deed so fair."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, the first day of April, A. D. 30, five days before the passover and six days before the crucifixion. Place, the house of Simon the leper in Bethany, where Jesus was an invited guest at a supper. Mark departs somewhat from the chronological order and inserts this narrative here because of its association with the betrayal of Jesus.

Scripture Setting: Love Expressed in Deeds. A mother's love, 2 Sam. 21:8-10. Devotion to a king, 2 Sam. 23:13-18. Love for a stranger, Luke 10:30-35. For Jesus at His death, Matt. 27:57-60. The temple offering, Luke 21:1-4. God's love for us, John 3:16. As unto Christ, Matt. 25:35-40.

Life and Conduct Setting: This incident furnishes us one of the most beautiful scenes in Jesus' life, for it was seldom indeed that He who so continuously bestowed His gifts upon others was ever Himself so honored. 1. The outpouring of a reverent and grateful heart, vs. 3. 2. A discordant note is sounded in this symphony of love, vs. 4, 5. 3. Jesus would restore the harmony by suggesting that the rare occasion justifies the rare gift and an impending crisis lends it holy significance, vs. 6, 7, 8. 4. The immortality of good deeds, vs. 9, 5. This beautiful act of devotion is heightened by the dark background of a traitor's deed, as he goes to negotiate the price of blood, vs. 10, 11.

THE FRAGRANCE OF A BEAUTIFUL DEED.

Two Possibilities. In every experience of life there are two possibilities, benefit or harm. It depends upon us which of the two we shall receive. Jesus and His disciples have reached the village of Bethany after the long, tiresome journey over the steep, rough road from Jericho; and in this quiet village, on the eastern slope of the brow of the Mount of Olives, they tarry for the Sabbath. Here there are hearts that have learned to love the Master as few of His friends had ever learned. The evening of the Sabbath, Simon, the leper, prepared a feast and Jesus was his guest. Some have thought that Simon was related to the family at Bethany so well known to us. There seems to be but little foundation for this theory, but from the title that he bears we may conjecture that he is one whom Jesus has rescued from his sad life among the tombs, and with His healing touch restored him to his home and friends. Little wonder that Jesus should be a welcome guest in such a home.

Mary, who had received a brother back to life, shows her thankfulness by bringing a very costly gift, an alabaster box of purest ointment; breaking it, and anointing the Saviour's head. Stronger than the perfume of the ointment was the fragrance of the heart's devotion and wherever the gospel has been preached this has been spoken of as a memorial to her love. In strange contrast is the effect of this deed upon the disciples, or to be more explicit, as John relates the story, upon Judas Iscariot, to whom the offering seemed but a waste of wealth. From that hour the traitor resolved to betray his Lord.

Why This Waste? The guests in Simon's house were not sitting at the table as is our custom in this day, but were reclining upon couches placed about a low table. Jesus and His disciples, Simon, Lazarus and probably other of the chief citizens of Bethany were about the table. Many of the town's people, who were not invited guests were permitted, according to oriental courtesy, to stand at a respectful distance and watch the progress of the feast. Martha, dear, faithful, motherly soul that she was, was serving; and Mary, gentle and loving, comes with her precious gift, breaks the box of alabaster and anoints the Savior's head. Then it is that the disciples, and especially Judas, murmur against the seeming waste.

It is easy for us to condemn Judas as he asks: "To what purpose hath this waste of ointment been made;" but oh, heart of mine, hast thou not formed this question and woven it within thy thoughts as some devoted soul poured out a life where no one else would go? Among the lepers of India where men and women who might have won laurels for themselves at home, have gone to break their alabaster boxes upon those whose wretchedness they have relieved, as they taught them of Him who said to the lepers of old: "Be thou clean." Have you and I not wondered, why this waste?

Mary's offering was a very costly one. Its value in our money was about fifty dollars and considering the purchasing power of money as contrasted between that day and this, it would be valued today between three and four hundred dollars. It was the costliness of the offering that caused the question to be raised. There are today disciples of the utilitarian school who would have us believe that this is a legitimate question in the realm of the costly and the beautiful, but when that which is costly and beautiful ministers to the soul culture of man there can be no waste. Our American cities are appropriating great tracts of valuable land that the poor may enjoy the beauties of nature and the children of the slums may find culture of body and soul. This is not waste. The poor man coming home on Saturday night with the provisions for the Sunday meal and flowers for the one who has labored at home, has not wasted his money.

What She Could. It was not long before this incident that a great sorrow overshadowed the home in Bethany. (John 11:1-45.) Lazarus, the beloved brother, sickened and died and the hearts of the sisters were crushed with grief. A messenger brought the sad news of illness to Jesus and before Jesus reached Bethany the body of Lazarus had been laid in the tomb and the heart-broken sisters greeted Him with the words "Lord, if Thou hadst been here, my brother had not died." He who is the Resurrection and the Life called to His friend and Lazarus returned to his loved ones. How grateful were the sisters at Bethany! How can they find expression for their gratitude? The supper at Simon's home affords an opportunity and Mary brings the precious gift.

Had you spoken to Mary that day and commended her for this act of love she would have assured you that it was nothing to which any notice should be given: just a little gift she felt prompted to bring to one she loved. Great souls never know how rich are their deeds. There were many things Mary could not do. She could not influence the scribes and the Pharisees of Jerusalem to put aside their prejudices and accept the Messiah; she could not stem the swiftly moving tide of opposition that must have filled the hearts of the Master's friends with apprehension, but she could let Him know that her own heart was overflowing with love and gratitude. She could bring this box of nard and anoint the Saviour's head. Oh, life, so bound by the sphere of daily duties that make the opportunities for service in His name seem so small, remember, not the greatness of the gift but the grace of the giver and the fact that it was just what could be done, these won the Master's favor.

For the Burying. Was there a fear in Mary's heart that the hatred of the Jewish authorities might lead them to put to death

the Son of God as He went from Bethany to keep the passover at Jerusalem? There is nothing in the text to warrant this conclusion, but who can say that the deep intuition of a woman's heart quickened by a love that is of so close a kin to the Divine could not have conceived of the fate that awaited her Lord. As the fragrance of the ointment fills the room the shadow of the impending event steals over the Spirit of the Master and leads Him to think of the fitness of the deed. Only a few days and faithful women did bear spices to the tomb that they might anoint His body but "she hath anointed My body beforehand for the burying."

How much better to bestow our gifts upon the living than upon the dead. "If my friends have alabaster boxes full of the fragrant perfume of sympathy and affection laid away which they intend to break over my body, I would rather they would bring them out in my weary and troubled hours, and open them, that I may be refreshed and cheered by them while I need them. . . . I would rather have a plain coffin without a flower, a funeral without a eulogy, than life without the sweetness of love and sympathy. Flowers on the coffin cast no fragrance backward on the weary road."

And Judas Iscariot Went Away. Poor Judas! Blind and deaf and dumb to the beauty and sacredness of Mary's gift and yet in the very presence of Him who would have healed him, had he only yielded to Jesus' healing touch. Judas was not always so. The sin of covetousness had crept into his heart and he had fostered it until it had become his master and found expression in his base act of betrayal. Mary had let love have its perfect way in her heart and it led her to bring her gift to her Lord, and the fragrance of her act will outlast the centuries.

Quiz and Study. 1. How long before the crucifixion did the events of this lesson occur? 2. How far is Bethany from Jerusalem? 3. Of what particular event was Mary's offering an expression of gratitude? 4. Name several forms of waste in life. 5. Mention the waste in connection with our industrial, social and financial systems. 6. What memorial has Jesus left us of His love? 7. How can we best bestow our gifts upon Him today?

Practical Thoughts. 1. Jesus has taught the human heart in every age to find objects for all its love and channels for all its efforts. 2. There is nothing that so vexes a narrow, stingy soul as to see generosity in others. 3. "To what purpose is this waste?" the worldly-minded ask when the church makes her offering for missions. 4. Jesus not only reminded us that we have the poor with us always, but He added, "When ye will ye can do them good." 5. Consciously or unconsciously we are erecting memorials that stand as witnesses to our character.

REV. JUSTIN N. GREEN.

THE TRIUMPHAL ENTRY.

And the disciples went, and did as Jesus commanded them, And

and

and they

And a very great multitude others

and

And the multitudes that went before, and that followed, cried, saying, Hosanna to the son of David: Blessed is he that cometh in the name of the Lord: Hosanna in the highest.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATTHEW 21:1-16.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee for the loyal hearts who knew Jesus as King. For the innocent children who proclaimed their hosannas. For that triumphal procession which has been passing through the centuries under the leadership of the Christ. We thank Thee that we can be a part of this great company. Help us, not only in praise, but in practice, to be loyal to the King. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"Oh that with yonder sacred throng
We at His feet may fall!
We'll join the everlasting song,
And crown Him Lord of all."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Sunday and Monday, April 2 and 3, the year 30 A. D., the last week of Jesus' life. Place, the Mount of Olives between Bethany and Jerusalem. The temple within the city. Persons, Jesus, disciples, multitudes, children.

Scripture Setting: Calls for Decision. A call to Israel. Josh. 24:15. Jehovah or Baal? 1 Kings 18:21. A voice in the wilderness. Matt. 3:1-12. Calls to discipleship. Mark 1:16-18. Luke 9:59. The Gospel call. Acts 2:37-42. The Spirit and the Bride say come. Rev. 2:17.

Life and Conduct Setting: Once a company of angels heralded the coming of the King as He lay a Babe in the manger cradle. In the Scripture that we are studying, men, women and children of the earth take up the theme of the angels and sing "Hosanna to the Son of David." 1. Blessed are the unnamed subjects of the uncrowned King, vs. 1-3. 2. The prophetic vision of the coming King fulfilled, vs. 4, 5. 3. How faithfully His subjects obey the King, v. 6. 4. The King comes in triumph with the glad acclaim of the multitudes, vs. 7-10. 5. The King comes to His palace and drives out the usurper, vs. 12, 13. 6. The King's spirit is manifested in helpful ministries, v. 14. 8. How blind the eyes, how deaf the ears of those whose hatred crucified their King, vs. 15, 16.

JESUS PROCLAIMED KING.

The Messianic Christ. The prophets and seers of the Old Testament had been constantly telling of the coming of the King who should be established upon the throne of David. Now for three years the King had been living among His people as a teacher and a prophet, but the rulers and men of authority had despised Him and rejected Him as their Messiah, and when the multitudes of the common people would have proclaimed Him as their King, He withdrew from their presence. As the passover season was approaching in the third year of His public ministry, Jesus had "steadfastly set His face to go to Jerusalem," and after quietly spending the Sabbath in the peaceful village of Bethany, on Sunday morning, two of His disciples are sent into the neighboring village of Bethphage, where they shall find the colt upon which Jesus is to ride in triumph into Jerusalem and thus fulfil the Scriptures (Isa. 62:11), and by this demonstration proclaim Himself as their Messiah.

Use for the Lowly. When Jesus sent the two disciples into the village to bring the ass and its colt for His triumphal entry, He requested His disciples to say to any who might ask concerning the taking of the animals, "The Lord hath need of them." It was not always that these lowly animals could be of service to the Master, but at this particular time they, and they only, could supply the need. How often we despise the day of lowly service and of humble gifts and wrap our single talent in the napkin of distrust because it seems a gift so small for the Master's service. And yet the greatest progress in the Kingdom is made, not because there are a few men, wonderfully endowed, who are leading in the work, but because there are multitudes of humble disciples who are bringing what they have, the lowly gifts and the humble talents, realizing that "the Lord hath need of them."

The Palms. Going out to meet an approaching guest, and escorting him to one's house with a show of honor, is a common custom throughout the East.

Thus it was that Abraham was welcomed by the kings of Canaan when he returned from his pursuit of Chedorlaomer; that Jephtha was welcomed by his daughter and her companions; that David was welcomed by singing and dancing women, out of all the cities of Israel, as he came back from the slaughter of the Philistines. Herodotus records that when Xerxes was passing over the bridge of the Hellespont, the way before him was strewn with branches of myrtle, while burning perfumes filled the air. Quintus Curtius tells of the scattering of flowers in the way before Alexander the Great when he entered Babylon.

What a contrast between the triumphal procession of the conquering heroes of earth and that procession which entered Jerusalem with the Son of David. They had come from a work of terror and desolation, He from a ministry of healing and restoration; they bringing their captives and the trophies of war, He surrounded by a multitude kindled with the impulses of wonder and of love. Among those who waved the palm branches and spread their garments in His way were some whose eyes had never seen the light of day until Jesus touched them. There were hands waving palms that once were palsied, voices shouting hosannas that once were dumb. Love and gratitude blended in their hearts as they proclaimed their King.

Lawful But Not Expedient. There was need of the money changers in the court of the temple, for the worshippers had come from all parts of the world and the temple tax must be paid in the Jewish coin. It was a great convenience to those who came from a distance to be able to purchase the sacrifice so near the place of its use. How easy it must have been for the temple authorities to have justified this condition! How this privilege was abused!

When Jesus entered He found a perfect rabble in the court of the Gentiles. Oriental bargaining is always accompanied by much demonstration for there is never a fixed price; the priests made gain out of the traffic and there was much opportunity for extortion and all of this in that part of the temple where the Gentiles could come to gain impressions of the worship of Jehovah! The very house of prayer had become a den of thieves. Do we wonder that Jesus indignantly drove from the temple those who were profaning the house of God? How careful we should be that our houses of worship should not become marts of trade where questionable practices are indulged in and the fair name of the church dishonored.

Justice and Mercy. How quiet and peaceful and worshipful must the temple have seemed after Jesus had cleansed it! It was just to the worshippers and just to God that the atmosphere of the temple should be conducive to worship, and now that Jesus has dealt justly, He turns in mercy to heal the lame and give sight to the blind, and the children sing their hosannas. Before there were angry, bitter words and unscrupulous business; now a ministry of healing and the carols of innocent children. What a contrast! And all because Jesus came to the temple. What a change there is when He enters our hearts and, cleansing them, becomes our Saviour!

The Children's Chorus. Parents were in the habit of taking their children to the great feasts at Jerusalem and especially to this, the passover. Of all the years, what a privilege to have been there when Jesus came in triumph into the city! There is something in the child heart that responds very quickly to the truth, and we can easily believe that it was not alone that they might imitate those who spread branches in His way and sang hosannas that the children blended their voices, but because they found in the great heart, in the pure, Heaven-born life of Jesus, that to which their own hearts were turned as flowers to the sun, and after the voices of their elders had ceased, they continued singing in the temple "Hosanna to the Son of David." Bless God, the children's chorus has never ceased and today we suffer the children to come unto Him, for of such is the Kingdom of Heaven.

The March Through the Centuries. The procession that formed on the Mount of Olives and slowly wended its way into the city of Jerusalem and accompanied Christ to the temple, dispersing in Jerusalem, did not end its march that day; it tarried for a while; tarried that the great Divine tragedy might be enacted; watched and waited with broken heart until the glorious Easter brought a living Redeemer, and then tarried until the King ascended His throne and sent the Holy Spirit to fill the hearts of men. On the great day of Pentecost, it took up the line of march through the ages, and thousands crowned Him King of kings and Lord of lords.

That procession marched from Palestine through Asia Minor, then into Europe, and northward with each conquering army until that continent knew the Christ; then it crossed the Atlantic and planted the standard of the cross on the shores of the new world; then onward triumphantly across our beloved America and over the great Pacific to the islands of the sea and the heathen lands beyond until it has encircled the globe. Again hosannas are sung to the Son of David and instead of the garments spread in His way, lives are laid at His feet, for "The earth shall be filled with the knowledge of the glory of the Lord as the waters cover the seas."

Quiz and Study. 1. Why was this an opportune time for this demonstration of Jesus' kingship? 2. Follow the course of the procession from Bethany to Jerusalem and note the accounts of this event as given by each of the Gospel writers. 3. What is suggested to you by the manner in which the disciples procured the ass upon which Jesus rode? 4. Why did Jesus choose this particular beast upon which to ride? 5. Do you believe the multitudes were sincere in their acclamations of praise? 6. By what authority did Jesus cleanse the temple? 7. Do you believe that those who shouted His praise a few days later cried "Crucify Him?" 8. Are you for Christ or against Him?

Practical Truths. 1. All employment for Christ is noble even though it seem a very humble service. 2. When God is careful that the words of prophecy shall be so minutely fulfilled, how precious must be His promises! 3. Christ is not to be honored by sentiment alone but by service. 4. Hosannas in the temple, but lives of perfect faith and trust in the mire and toil of the daily traffic. 5. The people always honor the Christ when they see Him as revealed through the Word of God. Too often our human creeds and the traditions of men have marred His visage. 6. Exalting experiences should leave us higher as they pass. 7. His triumphal entry into Jerusalem was followed by crucifixion, His triumphal entry into the New Jerusalem was followed by coronation. 8. The Lord's choicest earthly blessings misused become stumbling-blocks to the Christian and to others. 9. Can anything be more beautiful than the praise of the child heart?

REV. JUSTIN N. GREEN.

CHRIST'S ENTRY INTO JERUSALEM

BY PLOCKHORST

As Christ was nearing the end of His earthly career, He went with His disciples up to Jerusalem to eat the passover. Passing through a village on the road, He sent two of His disciples away, instructing them to find an ass and her colt, which they were to bring out to Him. When the animals were come, His disciples laid their garments on one of them for a saddle and mounted Jesus thereon. Then commenced that noted triumphal entry into Jerusalem. The enthusiastic multitude gathered and strewed the roadway with garments, scattering flowers and branches, after the manner of the greeting to a great king or victorious general. It was a recognition of Christ's royalty.

Plockhorst the artist is a painter of studied attitudes. As Jesus is not mounted on a war horse but on a humble donkey, He seems the more erect and gentle in His bearing. He comes sitting on the humble animal as His mission is to humble people. His followers march beside Him, all intensely interested and manifesting the highest enthusiasm. The various characters on the right hand explain themselves. The mother and children there touch upon humanity of different ages, and the three little boys joyously march along scattering palm branches and flowers in the road. At the left a woman spreads draperies in the road, and near her is a shepherd, perhaps one who has heard among shepherd lore the story of that wonderful night on the plains of Bethlehem, while opposite, John with his hand upon the rein is astonished beyond measure at the honor accorded his Master. This is one of the best of Plockhorst's great pictures.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

CHRIST'S ENTRY INTO JERUSALEM

And on the morrow, when they were come from

he was hungry:
And seeing a afar off having leaves, he came, if haply he might find any thing thereon: and when he came to it, he found nothing but for the time of

was not yet. And Jesus answered
and said unto it, No

of thee hereafter for ever. And his heard it. And when was come, he

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 11:12-19. READ MATTHEW 21:17-22.

Prayer: Oh, Master, We shrink from the study of this lesson, for we are looking, as it were, into a mirror, and in the fruitless tree we behold ourselves—so bold is our professions; so anxious to appear well before men; but alas, so barren and unfruitful. Lord, do not let us leave the searching lesson until it has so permeated our minds and hearts that we shall go forth and live so truly that we shall bear the fruits of the Spirit. And this we ask in Jesus' name, Amen.

“Increase our faith that unto Thee
More fruit may still abound;
That it may grow exceedingly,
And to Thy praise be found.”

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Monday of the last week of Jesus' ministry before His crucifixion. Place, Somewhere on the brow of the Mount of Olives and in Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus and His disciples, the chief priests and scribes.

Scripture Setting: Fruit Bearing. The righteous man, like a fruit-bearing tree, Psa. 1:3. Known by the fruit, Matt. 7:16-20. Conditions of fruit bearing, John 15:4-7. Chosen for fruit bearing, John 15:16. Fruits of repentance, Matt. 3:8, 9. Fruits of righteousness, Phil. 1:9-11. Fruits of the Spirit, Gal. 5:22.

Life and Conduct Setting: When the boy Jesus, lost in Jerusalem, was found by His parents in the temple, His reply to their anxious inquiry was “know ye not that I must be in My Father's house?” or better, the more familiar rendering, “must be about My Father's business?” How that impelling principle controlled every hour of His life! Even now, when the shadows are lengthening about Him and He has need of the companionship of those who love Him, He can tarry in the home at Bethany only for the night, and when the morning breaks He must needs go among the multitudes who had come to keep the passover and offer them the gift of eternal life. 1. Yesterday Christ wept over the barrenness of His people; to-day by an acted parable, He pronounces judgment upon them, vs. 13, 14. 2. The stream can never be pure unless its fountain source be cleansed, vs. 15, 16. 3. Teaching must follow cleansing, vs. 17. 4. How the shadows are lengthening in these last days. Calvary is not far away, vs. 18.

NOTHING BUT LEAVES.

He Hungered. How we love the little touches that the writers of the Gospel have given us that so truly reveal the humanity of Jesus. “And on the morrow when He came out from Bethany, He hungered.” Could it be that the household in Bethany tarried a little longer in sleep that morning so that Jesus was compelled to leave without breaking the fast of the night? Never! Martha, cumbered though she was about much serving, was too great a soul to have been inhospitable to any guest, and especially to one to whom she owed so much. (John 12:1.)

These were such important days. The multitudes, astonished at His teaching, crowded about Him as they had done in Galilee; the hatred of the scribes and Pharisees was growing more intense; the great crisis of His life was upon Him. How much He needed to commune with the Father, that He might have the needed strength. It may be that when the household at Bethany retired for the night, Jesus retired to the mountain and continued all night in prayer. Or perhaps, arising early, He had sought the solitary place before it was dawn, that He might spend a season in prayer. We may not know why He hungered, but we do know that the physical hunger was typical of the great soul hunger as He longed to find fruit in the pretentiously religious life of His people.

Leaves Without Fruit. The season for figs had not yet come and the neighboring trees were barren. The natural order of these particular trees was that first the figs and then the leaves appear. Jesus and his disciples found this tree abundantly covered with leaves but with no fruit. Symbol of Israel, do we say? While other nations gave no sign of fruitfulness toward God, Israel performed her devotions with much ostentatious pride, but in the heart there was no devotion and the lives of her people were barren of the fruits of righteousness. How easy it would be to pass this lesson by and lay the charge to Israel's sin. Instead it should be a great heart-searching lesson for us all. No fervor of language, no great achievements will compensate, in the sight of the Master, for the absence of the fruits of the Spirit.

John Bunyan in his quaint allegory tells us that Interpreter took Christiana and her family into a garden and “led them to a tree whose inside was all rotten and gone and yet it grew and had leaves. Then said Mercy, “What means this?” “This tree,” said he, “whose outside is fair, and whose inside is all rotten, is that to which many may be compared that are in the garden of God; who with their mouths speak high in behalf of God, but indeed will do nothing for Him; whose leaves are fair, but their heart good for nothing but to be tinder for the devil's tinder-box.”

A Boy's Question. When this lesson was being taught to a class of boys, one of them raised the question concerning this act of Jesus and wondered why He should pronounce so severe a sentence upon an object that was not in itself responsible for its condition, since it had not the power of free will but was simply obeying the law of its kind. Upon the surface and without thought it might seem that this act of Jesus was severe. If it is a matter of destroying property that belonged to another, we need not trouble ourselves. Jesus, whose whole life was given for the blessing of His fellows, would not take that which was another's without a satisfactory adjustment. If it is a question whether it seems just to the tree itself we need not be troubled.

Justice or injustice pre-suppose certain rights to be respected or violated. These rights obtain in the animal kingdom but not in the vegetable. Trees are here for man to dispose of as he thinks best. We never think of raising a question when a tree is felled that we may use it in building our houses or in making our furniture. If the sudden destruction of a tree could do more than to furnish us bodily comfort by providing a moral or spiritual lesson, that tree has been honored above others. Little was the loss that any one sustained by the destruction of that verdant mockery, while instruction a thousand times more valuable than acres of fig trees has been left for us all.

The Sentence of Doom. Peter spoke of the sentence pronounced upon the barren fig tree as a curse. Was it not rather a judgment? Such a judgment as must be pronounced upon every barren and unfruitful life, for "he that hath not, from him shall be taken away even that which he hath." (Mark 4:25.) In the great judgment day it shall be said to those upon the left hand, "Depart from me, ye cursed, into everlasting fire prepared for the devil and his angels; for I was an hungred and ye gave me no meat; I was thirsty and ye gave me no drink; . . . verily, I say unto you, inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these, ye did it not to me." We cannot too seriously consider the effect of our sins of omission.

How Far? Bethany was not far from Jerusalem as the surveyor's chain measures distance—not more than a mile and a quarter, according to our standard of measurement. After a day spent in Jerusalem, cleansing the temple (commented upon in our last lesson) and teaching the multitudes, Jesus, at the eventide, went forth out of the city unto Bethany. In Jerusalem men, fired with all of the unholy passions of the demon-possessed, were plotting and scheming to put Him to death. In Bethany He was welcomed to hearts that understood Him and loved Him, and by friends who would have given their lives for Him. No, Bethany was not far distant from Jerusalem in furlongs, but in spirit and sentiment how far! It is not far from our Christian homes to the corner saloon, but when your boy or mine goes there and wrecks his body and damns his soul, it is far—so far that only the omnipotent arm of God can reach him.

In a boarding house in one of our great cities lay the lifeless form of a young man. Just a year had passed since he left the old farm house and tried to comfort his weeping mother by telling her it was not far to the great city where he was to seek fortune and fame. But as the father and mother, bent with age and broken with grief, came to the city in response to the summons announcing the serious condition of their boy, mortally wounded in a drunken brawl, it seemed a long journey. There on the farm was a Christian home, a praying father and mother, all of the sweet and helpful influences of pure and devoted living; in the great city demons were plotting for the soul of the boy and he had lost in the battle.

Every Soul Needs a Bethany. At Bethany sympathy and love received the weary, storm-tossed soul from Jerusalem. Every soul needs a Bethany, a place where one can find a refuge from the keen, sharp competitions of life, from the fiery temptations that assail the soul, and find love and peace and strength. There must be a closet of prayer somewhere, where the busy rushing world cannot intrude and the weary heart can be lifted to Him for strength and healing. Have you such a Bethany?

Quiz and Study. 1. Why, at this time, did Jesus and His disciples go to Bethany each evening? 2. Why was this particular tree subject to the condemnation of the Master? 3. Name some of the characteristics of those of Jesus' day and of our own, whose lives bear nothing but leaves. 4. What had Jesus to say of the hypocrite? 5. Notice how scrupulously Jesus would have those of His day observe the sanctity of God's house. 6. Should there be the same standard for us today?

Practical Truths. 1. Jesus had often spoken a parable; here is a parable in action. 2. We must remember that Jesus the Saviour is also Jesus the Judge. 3. The individual is not lost in the mass; each must give an account of his own fruit bearing. 4. It is not aggressive sinfulness alone that damns the soul: just do nothing, just be nothing and yours is the condemnation. 5. Many have the form of godliness but deny the power thereof. 6. When Jesus entered the temple, He found the forms of worship but the presence of thieves and robbers destroyed its fruitfulness. Cleansing is necessary for fruit bearing.

REV. JUSTIN N. GREEN.

THE FIG TREE WITHERED.

And in the

as they

they saw the fig tree dried up from the

And Peter calling
to remembrance saith unto him,
Master,

which thou cursedst is withered away. And Jesus answering saith unto them, Have faith in God. For verily I say unto you, That whosoever shall say unto this

Be thou removed, and be thou

and shall not doubt in his heart, but shall believe that those things which he saith shall come to pass; he shall have whatsoever he saith.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS MARK 11:20-28.

Prayer: Our Father, May the Holy Spirit lead us in the study of Thy Word so that it may become Thy very own message to each of us. Oh, how great is our unbelief! How Thou must be grieved at our doubts and fears! Lord, increase our faith! When mountains of difficulties loom in our pathway may we have the faith to remove them. Help us to fulfill all the conditions of prevailing prayer.

Help us truly to forgive others that we ourselves may be forgiven. In Jesus' name. Amen.

"Faith is a grasping of Almighty power;
The hand of man laid on the arm of God,—
The grand and blessed hour
In which the things impossible to me Become the possible, O Lord, through Thee."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Tuesday morning, three days before the crucifixion. Jesus is in conversation with His disciples as they journey to Jerusalem from Bethany over the Mount of Olives.

Scripture Setting: Prevailing Prayer. Israel saved through prayer, Deut. 9:18, 20, 26. A mother's prayer answered, 1 Sam. 1:10, 11, 20. Elisha prays and a boy is restored to life, 2 Kings 4:33. The Gentile woman's prayer, Matt. 15:21-28. Jesus prays at the tomb of Lazarus, John 11:41-42. Gospel triumphs through prayer, Acts 4:24-31. Prayer for the Holy Spirit, Acts 8:14-18. The prayers of Cornelius heard, Acts 10:30, 31. The prayer of faith, James 5:15, 16.

Life and Conduct Setting: When Jesus and His disciples are on their way to Jerusalem, the disciples express their astonishment as they see the

fig tree, upon which Jesus had pronounced a judgment, completely withered. This affords an opportunity for some of the Master's most profound teaching upon the subjects of faith and prayer. 1. When Jesus speaks the word, we must expect its fulfillment, vs. 20, 21. 2. We are so accustomed to the limitations of humanity it is sometimes difficult for us to comprehend an unlimited Deity, vs. 22. 3. What a challenge to our faith! Can we remove mountains? vs. 23. 4. To what dizzy heights must our faith ascend! Believe now, while praying, that we have the things for which we pray, vs. 24. 5. The way we live when we are not praying has much to do with the answer to our prayers. 6. The unforgiving spirit toward our fellow-man is a barrier between us and God, vs. 25.

BELIEVING AND PRAYING.

Have Faith in God. Why should there have been the tone of surprise in Peter's voice when he called attention to the fig tree upon which Jesus had placed the ban of barrenness, so completely withered? Why do you and I so often express surprise when that which the Lord has spoken comes to pass? The answer to these questions is the same. It is a lack of faith on our part in the unchanging Word of the eternal God. The power to believe a promise depends entirely upon one's faith in the promiser. We should have that simple, and yet supreme faith in God to confidently expect Him to do for us all that he has promised.

"A little child, whose father and mother had died, was taken into another family. When night came she knelt and prayed as her mother had taught her; and when that was ended she added a little prayer of her own: 'O God, make these people as kind to me as my papa and mamma have been.' Then she paused and looked up as if expecting an answer, and added, 'Of course You will.' How sweetly simple was that little one's faith in God! We are but children,—God is our Father."

A Mountain-Moving Faith. Jesus knew that the disciples could have no desire that the mountain upon which they stood should be taken up and cast into the sea some thirty-five miles away, but this fact makes his illustration all the more forceful. Physical mountains were not in the way of the men he had chosen for the extension of His Kingdom on earth. There were other mountains that seemingly would be far more difficult to remove than the one upon which they were standing. "The whole world, heathen and Hebrew was against them; the unbroken power of Rome, the unsurpassed wisdom of the Greeks; the ancient philosophies and hereditary customs of the unchanging East; the fierce barbarism of the North; the jealous and tenacious bigotry of the Jews; the lusts of the flesh and of the mind, the pride and splendor of life; all to which men leaned with all the weight of habit, tradition and inclination. And yet, in a few years, all these mighty forces went down before the power of faith." That which was done in the first centuries of the Christian era is being repeated today. The disciples of Christ are crying out before the great mountains of Hinduism, Confucianism, Buddhism, Mohammedanism, "Be thou removed," and these ancient systems of religion are crumbling before the faith in the true and living God. "Every mountain and hill shall be made low; and the uneven shall be made level and the rough places a plain; and the glory of the Lord shall be revealed, and all flesh shall see it together; for the mouth of Jehovah hath spoken it."

All Things Whatsoever. How boundless, how unlimited is this statement of Jesus concerning our requests! But our faith is so feeble it staggers under the weight of "all things, whatsoever" and begins at once to find some limitations to put upon the words of Jesus. We can understand perhaps that under some circumstances, and under some conditions, we might take these words literally. Oh, for a faith great enough to lift us to that plane of thinking and living where we can implicitly trust the Master and take Him at His word! If there are any qualifying statements let Him make them. We, the pupils, are not to decide that the thought in the mind of the great Teacher was less than His words would imply; if any further interpretation of His message is needed He will not fail to give it. Then we are anxious to know if at any time the Master has spoken other words that might help us to a better understanding of this bold assertion. A few days later Jesus was meeting with His disciples for the last heart talk before the great tragedy on Calvary. Their hearts were awed and a sense of great fear was taking possession of them as they realized the impending crisis. Jesus was giving them both strength and comfort as He revealed His relationship to the Father and in that hour he said, "And whatsoever ye shall ask in My name, that will I do, that the Father may be glorified in the Son. If ye shall ask anything in My name, that will I do." John 14:13-14. The promise is just as great as before. It is still "whatsoever," "anything" only there is an added phrase "in My name." Once again, a little later, in this same conversation Jesus says "If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will, and it shall be done unto you." John 15:7. Again it is "whatsoever," no change or limit there, but we have the Master's thought more fully expressed "if ye abide in Me" and ask "in My name." Conditions that we must fulfil. To use terms with which we are familiar, it is not those who have a mere "speaking" or "calling" acquaintance with the Master, but those who live with Him, who abide in Him, to whom this privilege is given.

Believe That Ye Receive Them. Our translators have become a bit cautious here. They have translated the text "Believe that ye receive them" and in the margin they give us the more literal Greek "received." Is not the Master tempting us just a little too far? Can we actually believe that we have received something that as yet is not in our possession? We can have such perfect confidence in the Father and such a full assurance that our prayer will be answered that we can live as if we had received that for which we have asked.

Stand or Kneel? "And when ye stand praying." The posture in prayer was not the important thing. When Jesus was in the garden he knelt in prayer. Luke 22:41. In this verse he speaks of standing in prayer. The physical attitude may help us some in our expression of humility and reverence but let us not be too anxious about a mere form and fail to be anxious about that which is of so much more consequence. When the heart really prays man gives no thought to the posture, that takes care of itself.

Forgive and be Forgiven. The importance that Jesus attached to a forgiving spirit in the hearts of His disciples can be determined when we note how frequently he spoke upon this subject. In the Sermon on the Mount we are told that the worshipper, coming to the altar with his gift and there remembering that in his heart he is not in accord with his brother, must leave his gift and go and be reconciled to his brother. Matt. 5:23, 24.

In the same discourse Jesus has given a model for prayer, with the familiar words, "Forgive us our debts, as we forgive our debtors." Matt. 6:12. At the close of that prayer, He adds, "For if ye forgive men their trespasses, your Heavenly Father will also forgive you. But if ye forgive not men their trespasses, neither will your Father forgive your trespasses." After the parable of the unmerciful servant, Jesus adds this solemn warning, "So shall also my Heavenly Father do unto you, if ye forgive not every one his brother from your hearts." Matt. 18:35. Here, by the side of the withered fig tree, speaking of the efficacy of prayer, He again reminds His disciples of this positive condition on the part of the petitioner, in the words "And when ye stand praying, forgive, if ye have aught against any; that your Father also which is in Heaven may forgive you your trespasses." Dependent as we are upon the forgiveness of the loving heart of God we can only become like Him as we too forgive.

Quiz and Study. 1. What lessons were impressed upon the minds of the disciples as they saw the withered fig tree? 2. Name some of the men mentioned in the Bible, who were illustrious for their great faith in God. 3. Who can you name from among the Christians of a later day who were noted for their great faith? 4. Is it possible to have a "mountain moving" faith today? 5. What are the conditions of prevailing prayer and by whom must they be fulfilled? 6. Why cannot God forgive us if we do not forgive others?

Practical Thoughts. 1. The great need in the world today is that men should really know God and in every phase of life have an implicit faith in Him. 2. Spiritual forces are stronger than the forces of evil, no matter how firmly entrenched they may seem to be. 3. Nothing seems more doubtful to us at times than the victory of faith over the world; yet nothing is more certain. 4. The greatest forces in life are the unseen forces. 5. How much the answer to our prayers depends, not upon rhetoric or logic, but upon our goodness. In our unanswered prayers let us find the mirror of our faults. 6. Unless our faith is greater, our lives purer, our prayers more effectual, this study of the Word has been in vain.

REV. JUSTIN N. GREEN.

THE PARABLE OF THE VINEYARD.

And he beheld them, and said, What is this then that is written, The

which the rejected, the same is become the head of the Whosoever

shall shall be broken; but on whomsoever it shall it will grind him to powder.

And the chief

the same hour sought to lay hands on him; and they feared the

for they perceived that he had spoken this parable against them.

THE PARABLE OF THE VINEYARD.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 20:9-19. MATT. 21:33-46, MARK 12:1-12.

Prayer: Oh, gracious Father, patiently bear with us, we pray Thee. Deliver us from the bondage of our lower and selfish desires, and make us free to give to Thee all the love and service that is Thine own. May our hearts be ever anxious because men reject Thy Son today. May we not work against Thee, or apart from Thee; but may we be one with Thee, and share in Thy purpose, Thy work and Thy joy, through all the ages. Amen.

“Marvelous and very precious is the Corner Stone Elect;
Though rejected by the builders, chosen by the Architect;
All supporting, all-uniting, and all-crowning, tried and sure;
True Foundation, yet true Headstone of His temple bright and pure.”

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Tuesday, April 4, A. D. 30. Place, At the temple in Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus and His disciples; chief priests, scribes and elders and the multitudes who had come to keep the passover.

Scripture Setting: Vineyards. Origin and antiquity, Gen. 9:20. Walled or fenced, Num. 22:24, Isa. 5:2, 5, Lev. 25:5, 11. Compensation for injury, Ex. 22:5. The stranger's portion, Deut. 23:24. The portion of the poor, Deut. 24:21. Laws respecting a new vineyard, Lev. 19:23-25. Letting out to husbandmen, Song of Sol. 8:11, Matt. 21:33. A figure of the Jewish nation and the Kingdom of God, Psal. 80:8-16, Isa. 5:1-7, Matt. 21:33-46.

Life and Conduct Setting: Jesus is in the midst of a great moral battle. His triumphal entry and the cleansing of the temple have raised questions concerning His Messiahship and hence His authority. A strong denial of His claims by the rulers calls forth three parables. In the one we are studying Jesus sets forth: 1. The Kingdom as a vineyard. The owner has gone into a far country and entrusted its care to others. 2. An unmistakable picture of the conduct of Israel toward the prophets in the sending of the servants to receive a portion of the fruitage and their base treatment by the husbandmen. 3. His own coming in the sending of the son. 4. His rejection and crucifixion in the killing of the son. 5. That their destruction must follow and the promises be given to others. 6. From a familiar Scripture that the rejected stone is the chief or corner stone. 7. That he who rejects Christ has no hope. 8. The truth that should have reformed these leaders only goaded them to madness.

THE REJECTED SON.

The Servants Abused. Jesus has just had an encounter with the three reigning powers of the Jewish hierarchy, the chief priests, scribes and elders. It is His last day of teaching in the temple and the issue between Him and the Jewish authorities has grown to be very tense. He had silenced them by a question. Luke 20:1-8. He now turns to the people, and in three parables, reveals in what a shameful manner the rulers had abused their trust as leaders of the people. Three times servants were sent to gather the fruit for the owner of a vineyard who had gone into a far country on a journey and placed his vineyard in the care of husbandmen. Not only did they fail to receive the expected fruit but they were shamefully treated and wounded. What a picture of Israel! For a thousand years God had borne with His people. Prophets had been sent unto them seeking the fruits of righteousness, but God received no return from the vineyard He had planted, and the prophets and teachers were stoned, beaten and rejected. 1 Kings 18:13, 22:24-27; 2 Chron. 24:19-22, 36:16; Acts 7:52; Heb. 11:36.

What More Could He Do? The owner of the vineyard is now thoroughly perplexed. He falls into a soliloquy. Thinking of all that had been done and anxious, doubtless, to avoid extreme measures, he asks the question, “What shall I do?” We are reminded of the pathetic words of Isaiah recorded in the fifth chapter and the fourth verse, “What could have been done more to my vineyard, that I have not done in it? Wherefore, when I looked that it should bring forth grapes, brought it forth wild grapes?” It is useless to send another servant to these wicked husbandmen. Yet there is one thing more that can be done. There is the son, the heir to the vineyard. Surely they will have respect for him and give to him that which is his own. What an illustration of the very climax of God's goodness and His love! (John 3:16.) Here is Jesus' answer in parable to the question the council had just asked, “By what authority doest thou these things?” The leaders understood precisely what Jesus meant in this teaching, and in the light of it they proceeded deliberately to kill Him!

If we would get the real force and the beauty of the answer to the question raised by the owner of the vineyard, we must combine the account as given by Matthew, Mark and Luke and it will read, “Then said the lord of the vineyard, What shall I do? Having yet therefore one son, his well beloved, he said, I will send my beloved son. He sent him also last unto them, saying, They will reverence my son.”

The Son Rejected. In the coming of the heir the husbandmen thought they saw an opportunity for their own advancement. They would put to death the heir, then the inheritance would be theirs. “So they cast him forth out of the vineyard and killed him." How the plaintive words of Isaiah come to us, "He was despised and rejected of men." Did these zealous Jews understand that they were killing the Son, the "Supreme One," sent of God? They had every reason to know it. But they were opposed to such changes as they knew He would bring about. They hated God, as Jesus revealed Him, and proposed to keep their selfish hopes, and ambitions, and powers, and prerogatives at whatever cost. If Jesus and His teaching triumphed—

"The holy walls, that did enclose so much Unholiness, would all break down;"

the empty forms on which their hearts were set, would vanish; and the false sanctities "on which they rose to proud pre-eminence," would all be laughed at. The thought was intolerable. If Jesus were destroyed, the Pharisee might live on in his little kingdom; the "inheritance" would be his own.

The Impending Doom. How intensely interested Jesus' hearers had become in the story he was telling! He was addressing the people, but the rulers were absorbed in every word that He said, and when Jesus told how the husbandmen should be destroyed and the vineyard given to others, so intensely real did the story become that the words "God forbid" involuntarily escaped their lips. The thought that their peculiar rights and privileges should be given to others was unendurable. The prophecy of their own destruction might have been received in sullen silence; but the promise of salvation to the Gentiles had touched the most sensitive chord of their natures.

What a remarkable fulfillment of this prophecy in parable was the destruction of Jerusalem! Little did those rulers think that forty years after they had put to death the Son of God, the Roman army, under Titus, should subject their city to the most terrible siege on record, in which thousands died from the horrors of famine, 97,000 were taken prisoners and 1,100,000 perished. We cannot but wonder what might have been the place that the Jewish people would have occupied among the nations of the earth if they had been faithful to their God-given trust! But they were not faithful, they rejected their Messiah, and perished. America is a chosen vineyard; I wonder, will we be true? Will the principles that obtain in our national, our municipal and our individual life be the principles of the Kingdom of God, or will we reject the Son of God and be lost?

The Corner Stone. Jesus drives home the truth of His parable by a very familiar quotation from the Scriptures, Psalm 118:22, recognized by His hearers as a Messianic psalm. The very stone that the builders had rejected and cast aside as useless was the stone intended by the architect as the chief stone of the building.

There is a tradition that when the stones were brought from Solomon's quarry for the building of the temple there was among them one stone, irregular in shape and uncomely in appearance. The builders laughed when they saw it and threw it aside as useless. The years of the building of the temple went on and the neglected stone was almost forgotten. When the great building was nearing completion they realized that there was needed a chief stone with which to crown the work. They searched diligently for such a stone, when some one, finding that which the workmen had cast aside with ridicule, discovered that here indeed was the stone that was designed to be the head stone, fitting exactly into the place prepared for it by the architect. What a picture of Him of whom Peter spoke when he said, "He is the stone which was set at naught of you, the builders, which was made the head of the corner." Acts 4:11.

The Master's Warning. When we fall upon a stone it is not the least affected, but the pain of our bruises testifies to the hurt that we have received. It is to those of us who reject the Christ to whom He becomes a stone of stumbling. Some of those who rejected Him in His humiliation on Calvary became pricked in heart, and accepted Him after His glorification. After the Gospel was fully preached, as it was on the day of Pentecost, and even after, he who rejects the Son of God has no hope of salvation.

Murder in the Heart. The truth that should have sobered and brought the rulers to repentance, only goaded them to madness. Fear of the people, who had no reason to partake of their hatred, restrained them for a season; but in two short days they had their revenge. So they fulfilled their part of the parable; and forty years later there came to them the final fulfillment when the city of Jerusalem perished and the Jewish nation ceased to be.

Quiz and Study. 1. What encounter did Jesus have with the rulers just before this parable was spoken and how did He silence His adversaries? 2. Do you think that Jesus was ever puzzled by questions that were asked Him? Give some reason for your answer. 3. Is the figure of the vineyard a common one in Scripture and what does it express in this parable? 4. When was a vineyard first planted and by whom? 5. Who were the "servants" sent to gather the fruit and can you cite any instances of their mistreatment?

Practical Truths. 1. In your city, town or neighborhood Jesus Christ has planted a vineyard and you are one of the husbandmen. 2. Christ is in a far country so far as His visible presence is concerned, but He expects fruit from His vineyard. 3. "In a church of two hundred members you will do well if you can get forty workers. The others miss or misuse their opportunities, and make poor returns for what their Lord has bestowed." 4. We are responsible to God for what we have as well as for what we are. REV. JUSTIN N. GREEN.

THE PARABLE OF THE MARRIAGE FEAST.

But when the king heard thereof, he was wroth: and he sent forth his

and destroyed those murderers,
and

Then saith he to his

The

is ready, but they which were bidden were not worthy.
Go ye therefore
into the

and as many as ye shall find, bid to the marriage. So those servants went out into the highways, and gathered together all as many as they found, both bad and good: and the wedding was furnished with guests. And when

to see
the

he saw there a man which had not on a wedding garment:

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATTHEW 22:1-14.

Prayer: Our Father, Our hearts overflow with gratitude when we recount Thy mercies; it makes us humble and we feel our unworthiness when we remember all of Thy loving kindnesses toward us. We thank Thee for Thy gracious invitation to Thy table where Thy mercies become new unto us every day; and yet we feel assured that the present bounties are not to be compared with that which Thou hast in store for us. When life's work is done may we be worthy to sit at the marriage supper of the Lamb. For His sake. Amen.

"Now has the dear, loving Savior Spread here a table for thee.
Thus will He feed all the hungry!
Yes, 'tis for you and for me."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, The last day of Jesus' public teaching, Tuesday, April 4, A. D. 30. Place, In the temple. Persons, Jesus, the disciples, and the multitudes.

Scripture Setting: Marriages. Divinely instituted, Gen. 2:18, 24. Should be only in the Lord, 1 Cor. 7:39. Indissoluble during the joint lives of the parties, Matt. 19:6, Rom. 7:2, 3. Divorce, Deut. 24:1; Matt. 19:7, 8. Celebrated for seven days, Judg. 14:12; John 2:1-10; Jer. 33:11; John 3:29. Illustrating God's union with the Jewish nation, Isa. 54:5; Hos. 2:19, 20. Typical of the union between Christ and the church, Eph. 5:23, 24, 32.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this parable Jesus sets forth: 1. The Kingdom under the figure of a wedding feast of a king's son. 2. That to this Kingdom, the Jews, during many centuries, had received the royal invitation. 3. The long suffering patience of the king in the repeated invitations. 4. That during all of the centuries Israel had boasted of this royal invitation but when the final summons came, it was abruptly declined. 5. The destruction of those who rejected the Messiah. 6. That the Gentiles would become guests at the feast. 7. That there can be no feast for the man without the wedding garment.

THE CONSEQUENCES OF MAKING LIGHT OF GOD'S INVITATION.

The Wedding. What a busy day was the last day of Jesus' public ministry! It was His last great opportunity to present the claims of His Messiahship; it was a battle royal with the prejudice and hardness of heart of the Jewish leaders; there were sharp, bitter controversies upon puzzling questions and finally Jesus "let loose the storm of His indignation and delivered against them the philippic which is recorded in the twenty-third chapter of Matthew." Before this outburst of righteous indignation, Jesus gives them a most vivid picture of the rejection of God's invitation and the consequent punishment and in a most graphic way depicts the fate of those who seek to enter into the King's presence in a way of their own choosing. To set forth these important truths Jesus chose a setting that ever appeals to the human heart—a wedding feast. The interest in the story is enhanced when it is remembered that it is the marriage feast of a king's son to which the people are invited. How it charms the heart to think that Jesus should have chosen this figure to represent the Kingdom! The highest ideal of love and friendship is expressed through the marriage ceremony. What an abundance of joy and social delight such an occasion affords! God has reserved His best for those who accept His invitation and come to sit down at the marriage supper of the Lamb.

The Bride and the Groom. Long before the days of Jesus, the prophets had used the relationship of husband and wife to express the devotedness and fidelity with which God gives Himself to men. Isa. 62:5; Hos. 2:19. After Jesus' day the writers of the New Testament referred to the church as the bride of Christ. Eph. 5:28-32. We do not wonder that Jesus should have used this figure to tell of the union between Himself and His church. Love chooses its own; the stronger protects and cherishes the weaker.

The Invitation. How anxious the king was to observe every possible form of courtesy toward his invited guests! We do not fail to observe the forms of etiquette when we invite our friends to social affairs. Sometimes we hear people say, "The invitation was put in such a way that I feel I cannot refuse." Surely everything was done by the king to make his guests know how sincere was his invitation. In a country where invitations must be delivered verbally and where fixed hours are not observed, it seems almost necessary to send a final invitation. However, this necessity does not overshadow the cordiality of the host. God not only sent invitations by the prophets inviting them to partake of His bounty, but now that the feast is ready He sends John the Baptist to remind His guests and to bring them to the feast. How this parable must have come home to these men of Jerusalem!

The Invitation Refused. How perfectly was Jesus describing not only the men of His day but ours, when He told how some, with utter indifference to the invitation, went on with their worldly pursuits, making light of God's offer while others became openly rebellious! Neglect of the Gospel invitation is just as perilous as the open rejection of it. The fact that the king sent armies to those who had murdered the bearers of the invitation only proves how in earnest the king was in sending it. The one purpose of God's heart has been to bring men to Himself that they might be blessed and it is almost beyond conception to think that men can make light of so gracious an invitation.

The Parting of the Highways. The invitation is no longer to be given to an especially chosen few, but the servants are to go to the intersection of the streets and out upon the highways and wherever men are to be found, they are to be invited to the marriage feast. God's plans must not, yea, cannot fail. The good are to be invited for the Gospel has something that will make them better; the bad are to be invited that they may be made good. What a glorious picture! The King's messengers out upon the highways everywhere inviting men to the feast God has provided. In every country in Europe; in the great thriving cities of America, and upon her plains and her hills; in the far away countries where Christ has never been known, the invitation is being given. It is your privilege and mine to say "Come, for all things are ready."

The Wedding Garment. What a brilliant scene this wedding feast must have afforded! The men who were gathered from the highways had been transformed into fitting guests for the king's table by the wedding garment which the king provided. The tables were richly spread with costly plate, the guests were resplendent in the robes the king had provided and smiles wreathed their happy faces. A tremor of excitement stirs the banqueters as the word passes from guest to guest that the king comes. They rise to meet him. How happy he is to greet his guests! His eye passes quickly over the brilliant scene and then becomes riveted upon the one dark spot in this great assembly. One man had refused to wear the wedding garment and is there as the one dark blot upon the beauty of the feast. Was it an accident, could there be any explanation for his presence there without the wedding garment? To the kind question of the king, he could give no answer, so the king commanded his servants to bind him and cast him into outer darkness where there should be weeping and gnashing of teeth.

How tragic is the scene and what a lesson it teaches us! It was quite clear to those who heard Jesus' parable that all were free to enter the Kingdom, the publican, the sinner and the harlot as well as those who considered themselves far superior to these because of their religious status among men. The fact that the invitation was so broad might lead some to overlook the necessity for a change that must come into every heart and life that truly enters the Kingdom.

A Rebellious Heart. We wonder why this man refused the wedding garment. Was it because he thought himself so well clothed that nothing more was necessary? Whatever might have been his motive, it reveals a principle we cannot afford to overlook. The lack of harmony was not expressed in the outward appearance alone. His was a self-satisfied and a rebellious spirit and entirely out of harmony with this joyous occasion and out of harmony with the king whose proffered gift he had despised. There could be no happiness at the feast with such a discordant soul in the midst, so the king commanded that he should be cast into the darkness of the oriental street where even the intense darkness could not hide from his guilty soul the condemning eye of the king.

"How hard it is for any of us to grasp the radical nature of the inward change that is required if we are to be meet for the inheritance of the saints in light. Conformity to God; ability to rejoice with God and in God; humble and devoted reverence; a real willingness to do honor to the King's Son; these constitute our wedding garment, without which we cannot remain in His presence or abide His searching gaze." Many, indeed, are called to the Gospel feast, but alas, how few are chosen to enter in.

Quiz and Study. 1. Who is represented by the king and who by the son? What is represented by the feast and who by the guests? 2. Who are represented by the servants both in the days of the Bible and in our day? 3. For what reasons were more invitations than one given? 4. How do men treat the invitation today? 5. To whom was the Gospel given when rejected by the Jews? 6. Repeat the "great Commission" given by Christ to His disciples just before His ascension. 7. Of what is the wedding garment symbolical? 8. Can you think of any excuse the guest might have given for refusing the wedding garment? Could he think of any? 9. What does the outer darkness represent? 10. What solemn warning did Jesus give at the close of the parable?

Practical Thoughts. 1. God provided abundantly for the physical nature of man; stored the world with stimulants for his mental activities and best of all has provided a great feast for man's soul. 2. God has put so much love into the frequent invitations He gives that He makes it hard for man to refuse. 3. There are two classes of men who will never enter the Kingdom: the neglecters and the rejecters. 4. God's invitation is to be given to men wherever man is found. 5. All are invited to come just as they are but not to remain just as they are. 6. The wedding garment is offered to all so that one is without excuse who refuses it. 7. Though there are many called but few chosen, there is no reason why you may not be among the few.

REV. JUSTIN N. GREEN.

THE TWO GREAT COMMANDMENTS.

And

came, and having heard them and perceiving that he had answered them well, asked him, Which is the

of all? And Jesus answered him, The first of all the

is, Hear, O Israel; The Lord
our God is one Lord: And

Thou shalt love the Lord thy God
With all thy Heart and With all thy Soul and With all thy Mind and With all thy Strength.

this is the first commandment. And the second is like, namely this, Thou shalt

thy

as thyself. There is none other commandment greater than these.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 12:28-34. READ MATTHEW 22:34-40.

Prayer: Our Father, Deliver us from the formal religious life. Help us to realize that forms and ceremonies, however sacred they may be, are as nothing unless they symbolize the inward principle of a love Divine. May our souls be filled with the glory of that self-sacrificing love that hung upon the cross and may we love God with all our heart, and with all our understanding, and with all our soul and with all our strength and our neighbor as ourselves. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"Forget not this command of His,
'Love as thyself thy neighbor,'
And so obey God's law today,
As in His field we labor."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Tuesday, April 4, A. D. 30. Place, Jerusalem in the temple, where Jesus is discoursing with the chief priests, scribes and others.

Scripture Setting: Love to God and Man. God demands a whole-hearted love, Deut. 6:5; 10:2, 13; 11:1. It pays to love God, Rom. 8:28. God's love perfected in us by our love to men, 1 John 4:11, 12. Christ's standard of man's love, John 13:34, 35. A test of our sonship, 1 John 3:14. The fulfilling of the law, Rom. 13:8-10. What love is and does, 1 Cor. 13:1-8.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. New ammunition was needed for the battle waged between Jesus and the Jewish rulers. This was furnished by the question of a certain scribe. 2. The first part of Jesus' reply was the great foundation truth of the whole theocratic system, "the Lord is one." 3. Man's attitude toward Jehovah defined. 4. Man's attitude toward his fellowman defined. 5. He who came to argue and to test, remained to praise. 6. There is some efficacy in forms and ceremonies, but love must be their very life and without love they are but dead and empty. 7. Ofttimes the keenest point of failure comes when we are "not far from the Kingdom."

LOVE THE FULFILLING OF THE LAW.

Tested by a Question. After the three parables spoken by Jesus, two of which were considered in the lessons preceeding this, the Pharisees, enraged at the evident application of the parable, but afraid to carry out their wish of immediately seizing Him, determined to set a trap for Him so that He might commit Himself in such a way as to make His capture safe because of the disfavor of either the Romans or the Jews. They, together with the Herodians, asked Him a question about the tribute money, which He answered in such a way as to fill them with wonder and send them off discomfited. Next the Sadducees tried Him with a puzzling question in regard to the resurrection. They, too, knew not what to say to His answer. During this last interview the word went out that He was about to silence the Sadducees, and the Pharisees came hastening to hear His argument. Finding the Sadducees utterly silenced, one of their number, a scribe or lawyer, asked a new question, Matthew says, "trying him" (Matt. 22:35.) The question was a proper one. "The Jews enumerated six hundred and thirteen ordinances! three hundred and sixty-five prohibitions, according to the days of the year; two hundred and twenty-eight commandments, according to the parts of the body. The Pharisees distinguished between lesser and greater commandments." We do not wonder that the lawyer should ask Jesus which one might be distinguished from all the rest as the first commandment.

Monotheism. In what a striking manner

this lesson exhibits the readiness, the wisdom and the power of Jesus! He consults no authorities, He asks for no time. Promptly He answers whatever question is asked and in such a manner as to completely silence His questioners, leaving them confused and baffled. In this instance the question was one of deep significance to everyone present. Jesus' answer, found in Deut. 6:4, expresses the basis upon which the Jewish religion was established. The oneness, the aloneness of Jehovah as God is the truth that permeates the entire history of the Jewish religion. Its maintenance distinguished Israel from all other nations in the days of its theocratic purity; its disregard brought all of Israel's woes upon her people. Christ well quotes these words as the introduction of His answer.

The Measure of Love. How the mere formal expression of our love to God as manifested in our prayers and in our daily lives rebukes us as we think of the true measure that comprehends an intensity of heart and soul and mind and strength. The consummate result of our nature is not in doing but in being; being like God who "is love." Love is the very life of the best things and without it they are mere bodies, dead and empty. Our love toward God must be of such a degree that no place can be given to any unworthy object. But there is another direction in which the measure of our love needs to be defined and that is toward our fellows. Love them, not as we love God, who is and must be supreme in our affections, but as we love ourselves. A man ought to love himself—not his lower, base sinful self—but that higher self that links him to God and makes him like God. "Man ought to love his neighbor not as he does love himself but as he ought to love himself; after the same manner, freely and readily, sincerely and unfeignedly, tenderly and compassionately, constantly and perseveringly."

The Whole Law. Jesus declares that there is no commandment greater than those He had given, commanding man's love to God and to his neighbor. In the account as recorded by Matthew, Jesus is reported as saying, "On these two commandments hang all the law and the prophets." (Matt. 22: 40.) A part cannot be greater than the whole and every commandment is included in these two. The first covered the first table of the law, for such love of God as is described would forbid polytheism, idolatry, blasphemy, and Sabbath-breaking. The second covered the second table, for such love of our neighbor would prevent filial impiety, murder, adultery, theft, perjury and covetousness. Thus the entire Word of God, the law and the prophets, and we might add the Gospel, spring from and are dependent upon these two principles.

An Honest Heart. How refreshing to find among these hypocritical Pharisees one man who is honest enough to acknowledge his convictions! We cannot doubt that the motive of the scribe was to place a trap for the Master, but so profoundly is he moved by Jesus' reply that he acknowledges the truth of the statements and adds a principle that condemned the very class of men he represented. When we remember the legalism of the whole rabbinical fraternity, the stress they had put upon the minutest acts in and for themselves (Matt. 23:23-27), we cannot but admire the honest sincerity of this man who dares to acknowledge the things that are in his heart.

Love vs. Ceremonies. In the answer of the scribe that to love God with all the heart and one's neighbor as one's self is much more than all whole burnt offerings and sacrifices, there is involved one of the vital principles of the Kingdom of God. Neither would Jesus nor this scribe deny the efficacy of burnt offerings and sacrifices if they are actually the expressions of sincere reverence and faith, but as mere ceremonies there is no genuine religious life in them.

What is more sad than to see the life of a professing Christian, with faculties that ought to live and grow in all the freedom and joyousness of the Christian life, dwarfed and wilted in a mere round of ceremonies? "Religion without love is but a draped and chilling form; prayer without love is but the mockery of lofty compliment, or the awe and agony of servile fear." When love becomes the inspiring motive of our worship it becomes also the inspiration for all the acts of our daily lives. How vividly this is set forth in the thirteenth chapter of Paul's first letter to the Corinthians! How transfigured become even the sternest duties of life when animated by love! What a joy fills the heart when even the greatest sacrifices are borne for love's sake! Jesus, although "a Man of sorrows and acquainted with grief" was "anointed with the oil of gladness above His fellows" and "for the joy that was set before Him, endured the cross and despised the shame." So great was the Savior's love, so deep were the abiding springs of joy in His heart that on the very threshold of His great agony, and under the shadow of His cross, He says to His disciples, "My peace I give unto you." Burnt offerings and sacrifices, yea, baptism and the Lord's Supper, worship in the house of God, all of the forms and ceremonies of the religious life, without the spirit of love, are empty.

Not Far. There is a heartening message and yet a message of warning in the Savior's reply to the scribe, when He said, "Thou art not far from the Kingdom of God." We cannot but wonder if to him they were words of encouragement that led him to fully enter the Kingdom or, like so many in our day, did he come so near the Kingdom and yet not enter in?

It is not enough to give an intellectual assent to the truths and principles of the Kingdom; there must be a surrender of the heart; a thorough committal of the life. Alas, how many there are not far from the Kingdom! Men who have become convinced that there should be an open confession of the Christ and whose hearts have been stirred with the Gospel invitation and yet they hesitate and turn, as so often men do, and are lost! "Not far," how mournful the words when the very truth they tell intensifies the sadness of disappointment, the shame of failure and defeat.

Quiz and Study. 1. What can you say of the sect to which this scribe belonged? 2. What do you think was the scribe's opinion of Christ when he asked the question? 3. Where can Jesus' reply be found and what does it teach? 4. What is the second commandment? 5. Whom do you consider your neighbor? 6. What did the scribe mean by his reply? 7. What peril does it seem to you there could be for one who is not far from the Kingdom of God?

Practical Truths. 1. The Word of God has a good answer for every question if we will only look for it. 2. Though we are under the new dispensation, the truth contained in the commandments of the old remains and God must be supreme in our affections. 3. What a world this would be if we loved our neighbor as ourselves! 4. We cannot substitute baptism or communion or any other specific act or acts for the love of God and our neighbor. 5. The scribe was near the Kingdom, but he needed another step to get into it, the unreserved committal of himself to following Jesus. It is madness for us to stop at the point where he was. Where are you?

REV. JUSTIN N. GREEN.

And Jesus

and beheld

how the

and many that were rich cast
in much.
And there came a certain poor and she threw in two mites,

which make a

And he called unto him his

and saith unto them, Verily I say unto you, That this poor widow hath cast more in, than all they which have cast into the

For all they did cast in of their abundance; but she of her want did cast in all that she had, even all her living.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 12:41-44. READ LUKE 21:1-4.

Prayer: Oh, Thou who sittest over against the treasury of life, into which men are casting their gifts, help us to come in the spirit of the widow of old and give Thee that which shall be indeed a test of our faith and our sacrifice. Help us to cultivate the grace of Christian giving. And best of all, Father, help us to give ourselves, and to Thee we will give all of the glory and the praise forever, Amen.

“He gives nothing but worthless gold
Who gives from a sense of duty;
But he who gives a slender mite,
And gives to that which is out of sight,
The hand cannot clasp the whole of his alms,
The heart outstretches its eager palms,
For God goes with it and makes it store
To the soul that was starving in darkness before.”

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, the twelfth of Nisan or April 4, A. D. 30. Place, the temple at Jerusalem, where Jesus is sitting near the treasury. Persons, Jesus and His disciples, many who were bringing their gifts, and among them a poor widow.

Scripture Setting: Christian Giving. Every Christian should contribute to the Lord's treasury, 1 Cor. 16:2. Giving is an act of worship, Col. 3:17. The Lord regards us when we give, 2 Cor. 9:7. Our possessions belong to the Lord, 1 Cor. 6:20. Treasures in Heaven, Matt. 6:19-21. God honors those who honor Him with their substance, Mal. 3:8-12.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Jesus never has left the place that He occupied that day, sitting over against the treasury, watching the gifts of men. 2. How small must the widow's have seemed compared with the large gifts of the rich. 3. How blessed the thought that only man looks upon the outward appearance; that Jesus can discern the motive and spirit of our gifts. 4. How positively inverted the values of things as God sees them! A mere farthing to man, yet greater than all of the gifts of the rich in the sight of the Saviour. 5. How like her Saviour was this widow who gave her all.

THE SAVIOUR'S SPIRITUAL TEST.

A Pleasing Contrast. The controversies with the Pharisees and the scribes has ended; His last warnings have been uttered; His last appeal has been made; all that can be done to save the nation has been done. It is probably because of the severe strain of the long hours of controversy that Jesus's weary body is sitting, resting in that part of the temple court where the people are bringing their offerings.

In all probability, many of the Pharisees and scribes with whom Jesus had had the bitter controversies referred to in the previous lessons, were among those who were casting their gifts into the treasury. Many were rich and their offerings were large as men measure them, and when the widow came with her two mites her gift must have seemed small indeed; but as Jesus saw the depth of her motive and the wealth of her heart, this widow, whose gift was charged with the sanctities of her soul, must have caused the heart of the Master to rejoice as He contrasted what she brought with the formal gifts of the Pharisees.

Temple Offerings. Under the colonnades which surrounded the court of the women, in the great temple in Jerusalem, provision was made for receiving religious and charitable contributions. All along these colonnades were the thirteen trumpet-shaped boxes where offerings were to be deposited, each box marked with an inscription stating the purpose to which the money would be used. Many people were in Jerusalem at this time, attending the passover, and it must have been interesting to watch them as they deposited their gifts. “Many that were rich cast in much.” We can appreciate this statement when we remember that the gifts to the temple became so enormous that a law was enacted forbidding the giving of more than a certain per cent of one's possessions. Josephus tells us that at the time of Pompey and Crassus, the temple treasury, after having lavishly defrayed every possible expenditure, contained in money nearly half a million and precious vessels to the value of nearly two million sterling.

The Cost of Giving. We need not suppose from this narrative that all of the gifts of the rich counted as nought in the sight of Jesus. Doubtless there were some among them who gave sincerely and cheerfully; however, for the most part, their gifts seem to have been given with ostentation and in formality. Then, too, their gifts were simply given out of their “superfluity” and had cost them no sacrifice. When the widow came with the two mites, the very smallest Jewish coin, an amount so small that we can scarcely estimate it in our money, for it would be but a fraction of a cent, the offering represented much, for it was all she had even all her living. It was because of the sacrifice she made, of the faith and trust evidenced by this act of devotion that Jesus called the attention of His disciples to her act and spoke words that have been an inspiration to His followers through all of the ages. It is the giving that costs us something that Jesus commends. Not that which we can easily spare out of that which we do not need but that which we could and would use for our needs makes the acceptable gift.

Collection or Offering. The story is told of a boy who had a dog and one day he cut out a fine piece of the tenderloin steak upon his plate and put it to one side for his dog. When he told his mother the purpose for which he was saving it, she remonstrated with him and insisted upon his eating it. When the meal was over, there was, as usual, nothing but scraps for the dog. The boy took them to his pet with this explanation: "Fido, I wanted to bring you an offering, but mother interfered and it is only a collection." The rich who cast their gifts into the treasury, although they gave handsome sums, were but giving a collection, for they were but giving out of their "superfluity" just what was left over, while the widow giving her mite was making an offering, for it was all that she had. How much of our giving is simply a "collection!"

The Real Value. Before we leave the thought of the comparative value of the gifts of the rich men and the poor widow, let us see just what it was that made the two mites of such value that Jesus should say she had given more than all the rest. The offerings of gold and silver must have fallen into the treasury with a resonant ring but it was doubtless very difficult to hear the sound made by the widow's mites, but as Jesus heard them they were heavy with her labor, her prayers and her self-denial and so as they fell into the treasury their ring echoed in Heaven and Jesus valued them. In the hands of any one else they would have remained but two mites, but in her hands their value was more than the great sums given by the rich.

Over Against Life's Treasury. With our minds still upon the scene in the temple, let us remember that life becomes a treasury and all that we are putting into it becomes our contribution and over against this treasury the Master of men is sitting and His watchful eye never fails to note the real value of that which we bring. Sometimes men are giving themselves. Their lives may be lived very obscurely; the world may never know of their sacrifices, but oh, of how much value are they to that which makes for the progress of mankind Godward!

The Halo of Faith. Before we leave this beautiful picture it might be well for us to form a more intimate acquaintance with this widow. How dark was that day when in sore bereavement she followed the lifeless form of her loved one to its final resting place! How dark when the grave's door was shut and she turned to face the world—alone! How hard it seemed when she took up the battle of life and fought to ward off destitution! And it may be that almost as hard as all the rest was the resolution to take the two mites and carry them to the temple treasury. Not that she would keep the two mites for her own needs; not for one moment did she begrudge giving them, but she must stand side by side with the rich and the sumptuous and how would her mites look when cast in among their gold and silver! But then came the encouragement of her faith, the sublime conviction of duty, and as she appears among the rich and the great how grand her faded garments look and what a halo of brightness is around her forever. Her faith has become her reward.

Christian Stewardship. There is much in both the Old Testament and the New to guide the Christian in his giving. What we have is not ours, for we are not our own, we have been bought with a price, 1 Cor. 6:19, 20, and ourselves and all that we have belong to God. We are only stewards and must some day give an account of our stewardship. Luke 6:11, 12. The spirit of our giving is determined by 2 Cor. 9:7, for God loveth a cheerful giver. That our giving should be systematic and proportionate cannot be doubted when one remembers how Paul exhorted the members of the Apostolic churches to lay aside a portion of their income as God had prospered them and to do this upon the first day of each week.

But the question that bothers many Christians today is not settled by an express command in the New Testament, and that is, just what proportion of one's income is to be given. Under the Mosaic law the command was explicitly given and the Israelite could know just what tithes and offerings were expected. But as Christians we are not living under law but under grace and God wants the proportion of our giving to be measured by our love and devotion. Surely, as Christians enjoying all the blessings of the Christian dispensation, we cannot do less than the Jew and yet how few Christians even give a tenth of their income to the Lord! Not less, but a great deal more should be the proportion of our giving.

Quiz and Study. 1. What great feast was about to be celebrated in Jerusalem at this time? 2. Would this likely have any effect upon the number of persons who would be bringing their gifts to the temple? 3. Were the gifts of the rich acceptable to God? 4. Is the amount that we give ever a test of our giving? 5. Wherein was the widow's offering so much more to be commended than the offerings of the rich?

Practical Truths. 1. We are only stewards of what God has given us. 2. Sometimes the real test of our giving is not the amount given but the amount withheld. 3. No matter how humble, we can do something. 4. We never really give unto the Lord until we feel it. 5. Small means and humble efforts are exalted by the motive.

REV. JUSTIN N. GREEN.

And

answered them, saying, The

is come, that the Son of man should be

Verily, verily, I say unto you, Except a corn of fall into the ground and die, it abideth alone: but if it die, it bringeth forth much

He that his life shall lose it; and he that his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 12:20-36.

Prayer: Our Father, We, too, would see Jesus. We would see His humanity, that we may know how to live the true and manly life. We would see His Divinity, that we may ever have before us that high ideal toward which it is our privilege to grow in grace. We would see Jesus because He alone can meet the needs of our lives. We would see Jesus because the heart is weary and burdened with sin and we know He is an all-sufficient Savior. Help us to see Jesus. Amen.

“‘We would see Jesus’—the great rock foundation, Whereon our feet were set by sovereign grace; Nor life nor death, with all their agitation, Can thence remove us, if we see His face.”

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting. Time. Tuesday, April 4, A. D. 30. Place. The temple in Jerusalem. Persons. Jesus, the disciples and certain Greeks who came to keep the passover.

Scripture Setting. Christ's Sacrifice. Foreshadowed by the sacrifices of the old covenant. Ex. 20:24. Foretold by prophets. Isa. 53. Fulfilled on Calvary. John 19:30, Heb. 9:14, 26. Supersedes all others. Eph. 2:13-16. Attracts all men. John 12:32.

Life and Conduct Setting. This lesson teaches us that: 1. The coming of the Greeks was prophetic of the reception of Jesus by the Gentile world. 2. The hour of suffering and trial was the hour of glorification and triumph. 3. The law of fruitfulness is death before life. 4. Selfishness indulged causes irreparable loss. 5. The agony of Gethsemane was overshadowing the Master's heart. 6. An unselfish prayer reaches the heart of God. 7. The cross is the great attractive power in the world. 8. Jesus could always harmonize His life and teaching with the Scriptures.

THE GLORIFICATION OF THE SON OF MAN.

The Inquiring Greeks. In our last lesson we were interested in those who were casting their gifts into the treasury, and especially the poor widow who brought her mites as an offering. Jesus, watching those who gave, was probably in that part of the temple known as the court of the women, where both men and women could come, but beyond which no woman could go. In the outer court, known as the court of the Gentiles, there were some men of the Greek nation, who were exceedingly anxious to see Jesus. These men had renounced their idolatrous worship and accepted the one true God and had come to Jerusalem to worship at the time of the great feast, the passover. There was a penalty of death awaiting any Gentile who should pass beyond the court bearing that name, so these men “came to Philip, who was of Bethsaida of Galilee, and asking him, saying, Sir, we would see Jesus.” Philip tells Andrew, and together they go and tell Jesus. Philip and Andrew are the only two disciples who have Greek names, and coming from Bethsaida they doubtless belonged to families who could speak the Greek language. Various reasons have been assigned for the coming of the Greeks to Jesus. The reply of Jesus is sufficient assurance that it was more than an idle curiosity that prompted them. Doubtless they came because they were attracted by His teaching and miracle working and wanted to know more of the message of salvation that He brought to man.

See Jesus. How much more beautiful and holy our lives would be if our morning prayer each day should be “We would see Jesus.” See Him in His tenderness toward all humankind that we too might become more tender; see Him in the beauty of His holiness that like Him we may be holy; see Him so that the world seeing us may know that we have been with Jesus and learned of Him.

God's Hour. The coming of the Greeks strangely stirred the heart of Jesus. Prophetic of the day when the great Gentile world should seek Him, it brought a keen sense of all that He must suffer to make possible man's redemption. Truly, the hour had come when the Son of man should be glorified, the hour that had been prophesied when after Adam's fall it was promised that some day the seed of the woman should bruise the head of the serpent; the hour of which the prophets of many centuries had foretold; the hour when God should make it possible for man to again have fellowship with his Creator; the hour when the lost, sin-sick soul should be redeemed. Truly it was God's hour and the Son of man should be glorified. Was not this the hour for which the disciples had been longing? True enough, but how mistaken was their conception of His glory, and lest His statement should mislead them, He illustrates His glorification by the grain of wheat that must die before it can enter into the glory of fruition.

Life Through Death. “Let us take a little journey up the Mississippi valley. As we ascend the valley we come to the largest corn states, representing one-half the corn supply of the world. Let us heap the year's corn harvest into one heap and start a corn wagon across the state. Let us follow that with another wagon, and let these wagons follow one another in steady succession. Let these wagons go across Illinois, then Indiana, Ohio, Pennsylvania, New Jersey; now freeze the Atlantic ocean and send these wagons across Belgium and the low countries, south Germany, lower Austria, the Danube principalities, the Black sea, ascend the heights of Asia, and on across the Pacific by Manila and Hawaii, on through California and Nevada and back to the banks of the Mississippi. Twenty-five thousand miles around the world this continuous stream of corn wagons has been extending, and now as you look on your pile of corn you will scarcely see a hole in it. You send around a second train, a third, and not until after the sixth have you exhausted your pile of corn. And all of this tremendous, mighty heap of corn came from a few kernels. The one kernel will multiply itself a hundredfold and each of these a hundredfold." The farmers might have said of the few kernels: "This is all the corn we have. We shall keep it for we will need it by and by for food." They were wiser than that. They buried the few kernels away in the dark, moist earth and through this death there came a larger life and in the golden autumn there was a wonderful harvest. Verily, he that loveth his life and tries to save it for selfish purposes shall lose it, but he who lives so unselfishly that he seems even to hate his life in this world shall keep it unto life eternal.

Service and Its Reward. Jesus answers the Greeks in the words: "If any man serve Me, let him follow Me; and where I am, there shall also My servant be; if any man serve Me him will the Father honor." Service according to the principles as just taught by Jesus,—a self-sacrificing service such as He has given,—is to be the program for those who follow Him, and the reward for such a service is the promised presence of Christ and the honor that will be bestowed by the Father upon him who serves, giving the servant the royal welcome, "Well done, thou good and faithful servant."

A Foretaste of Gethsemane. The dark shadow of the cross comes over the soul of the Master as He realizes that He must carry that cross to Calvary and there be crucified upon it before the Gentile world shall really see and know Him, and with that thought there comes something of the struggle through which He passed in the garden. As though unaware of the presence of the crowd about Him, He gave expression to His inmost thoughts. "Now is my soul troubled," as in Gethsemane He said, "My soul is exceedingly sorrowful even unto death." Here, it is, "Father, save Me from this hour"; in the garden, "O my Father, if be possible, let this cup pass from Me." "For this cause came I unto this hour." Much the same sentiment is expressed in the words, "If this cup may not pass away from me except I drink it, Thy will be done." The words of surrender, "Father, glorify Thy name," remind us of the words spoken later in the garden, "The cup which the Father hath given Me, shall I not drink it?" We cannot think it was from physical suffering that Jesus shrank; sin was about to do its worst for the human soul, and the Lord was about to lay upon Him the iniquity of us all.

Voice from Heaven. God sent an angel from Heaven to strengthen the Saviour in the garden; here there is a voice from Heaven as God assures His Son that His name has been glorified and will be glorified again. At the baptism of Jesus, in the beginning of His public ministry, when He was fulfilling all righteousness, a voice out of Heaven said, "This is my beloved Son, in whom I am well pleased." Again at the Transfiguration was the voice heard repeating the words and adding, "Hear ye Him." The perfect obedience manifested in the Saviour's life brought forth the approval of God. It will do the same for us.

The Great Magnet. Jesus assures the multitudes that it is not for His sake but for theirs that the voice has spoken. In the hour to which Jesus had come the world was being judged and the decision was against it and the Kingdom of God began its victorious course, for it is the lifting up of Jesus upon the cross that shall be the great magnet to draw the souls of men from the "prince of this world" unto God. Oh, glorious cross! There only can we find the burden of sin lifted and the peace of God that passeth understanding.

Quiz and Study. 1. What is the significance of the coming of the Greeks to Jesus at this time? 2. How may we see Jesus? What will binder us from seeing Him? 3. How was the Son of man to be glorified in the hour of His humiliation? 4. How can you reconcile the statement of Jesus, "He that loveth his life shall lose it," to the experience of so many who seem to gain so much by loving their life that now is? 5. Why could not Jesus have been the true Messiah and accepted an outward kingdom? 6. What constitutes true service? 7. How had Jesus glorified God's name? 8. Does the cross of Christ draw all men?

Practical Truths. 1. The more clearly we see Jesus, the better Christians we become. 2. The Kingdom and its glory could only come by way of the cross. 3. The men of Jesus' day did not know how to use their lives; Jesus suggests a way: invest them for the sake of others. 4. What a failure Jesus' life and ministry was from a purely human standpoint; what a marvelous success from the Divine. 5. Man's choice often lies between temporary gain and eternal loss. 6. No man can serve Christ without following Him to the sick and needy and sin burdened of earth. 7. There is an hour in the life of everyone for which all previous hours were but the preparation. 8. Human glory seems so weak and uninviting to those who live for God's glory. 9. Every conceivable power that can draw men to a life of righteousness is found in the crucified Christ.

REV. JUSTIN N. GREEN.

THE DESTRUCTION OF THE TEMPLE FORETOLD.

And as he went saith unto him, Master, see what manner of

and
what are here! And Jesus answering said unto him, Seest thou these great buildings? there shall not be left

that shall not be

DESTRUCTION OF THE TEMPLE FORETOLD.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 13:1-20.

Prayer: Our Father, As we study the words of doom pronounced upon Jerusalem and the temple, help us to realize that the debt of retribution must be paid by those who disobey Thee. Keep us from misconstruing the manifestations of Thy love into license for our own selfish desires. May we know that the way we live each day determines the judgment that must come upon us. Help us so to live that at last we may have an abundant entrance into Thy presence. In Jesus' name. Amen.

"Once to every man and nation comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of truth and falsehood, for the good or evil side;
Some great cause, God's new Messiah, offering each the bloom or blight, Parts the goats upon the left hand, and the sheep upon the right,
And the choice goes by forever 'twixt that darkness and that light."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Late Tuesday afternoon, April 4, A. D. 30. Place, Verses one and two were spoken just without the temple. The rest of the lesson from the Mount of Olives overlooking Jerusalem and the temple. Persons, Jesus and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: Prophecy and Fulfillment. Birth of Christ, Mic. 5:2; Matt. 2:1. Christ as Son of God, Psa. 2:7; Matt. 3:17. Miracle working, Isa. 35:5, 6; Matt. 11:4-6. Betrayal, Psa. 41:9; John 13:18, 21. Death, Isa. 53:12; Matt. 27:50. Burial, Isa. 53:9; Matt. 27:57-60. Resurrection, Isa. 26:19; Luke 24:6, 31, 34. Chief Corner-stone, Isa. 28:16; 1 Peter 2:6, 7. Conversion of Gentiles, Isa. 11:10; Acts 10:45, 47.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of this lesson are: 1. The foretold destruction of the temple, a great surprise to the simple-hearted disciples. 2. The warning against the false Christs. 3. The prediction of great international wars and terrible suffering that should come upon the people. 4. Perils of Christ's followers predicted. 5. All of this will not hinder the progress of the Gospel that must be preached to all nations. 6. The promised power of the Holy Spirit to aid the disciples in witnessing for Christ. 7. Though bitterly persecuted, the promise of salvation is to those who endure.

THE PASSING AWAY OF THE JEWISH NATIONAL LIFE.

Leaving the Temple. The past several lessons have impressed upon us the fact that the last day spent in the temple was a wonderful day of continued intellectual labor and conflict, of grand revelations and overwhelming denunciation, of which the evangelists have given us fuller accounts than of any other day of His life, unless it be that of the crucifixion. There is no record that Jesus ever again entered the temple after the departure mentioned in our lesson. He had been rejected by those in authority and as He took His farewell of the temple late that afternoon His departure was prophetic of the rejection of the temple that must soon become but a desolate and forsaken ruin.

Just as they were leaving one of the disciples called Jesus' attention to the magnificent temple building. "Well might he thus exclaim in regard to the building which Tacitus declared one of the wonders of the world. Fifty years before, Herod had begun the great work of its construction, and for forty-six years the work of rebuilding the temple of Zerubbabel, on plans of surpassing grandeur, went on. Colonnades and courts enclosing the central sacred building covered over nineteen acres, rising to a climax of splendor in the sacred 'noos,' the temple proper, in which gold and silver and brass and cedar, and rich carvings and gorgeous embroideries, and precious marbles, vied with each other to attract the eye and delight the heart." To these simple Galileans it never occurred that the world could contain anything to compare with it, or that it could ever be destroyed. What a thunderbolt to such hearts must have been the answer of Jesus, as He told them there should not be left one stone upon another that should not be thrown down!

The Inner Circle. After leaving the temple, the Master and His disciples descended into the valley of the Kedron, crossed the brook and ascended the Mt. of Olives. Coming to one of the many knolls, from which the whole splendid extent of the temple enclosure, two hundred feet below, could be seen, they sat down to rest. The view today with the magnificent Mosque of Omar upon the temple site, is most fascinating. What must it have been in Jesus' day! While resting, the three disciples of the inner circle, together with Andrew came to Jesus that they might ask Him privately when there should occur that great drama of destruction of which He had spoken and what should be the sign when these things are all about to be accomplished.

False Christs. In the account given by Mark the two questions here asked seem to refer to the same "things," although the addition of the word "all" in the second seems to be a widening of the thought. Matthew makes the matter clear by giving the second question more definitely, "and what shall be the sign of Thy coming, and of the end of the world?" While this is more definite it makes the explanation more difficult for it has reference to two distinct events; the destruction of Jerusalem and the end of the world. Whatever may be our application of these words of prophecy it is enough for our present purpose that the primary fulfillment was in the downfall of the Jewish state, with the previous or accompanying change from the Jewish to the Christian dispensation.

Jesus' first reply to the questions of the disciples is a warning against those who falsely impersonate Him as the Messiah and thereby deceive many. To know that this was literally fulfilled we have need only to turn to Acts 5:36, 37 and 1 John 2:18 and read of those who came making the false claims.

Josephus says that in the reign of Claudius (who died A. D. 54), "the land was overrun with magicians and imposters, who drew multitudes of the people into the deserts to see the signs and miracles which they promised. And now, as His coming draws near, there are arising many men with their new religions and doctrines, pretending to be better than Christianity, and to be the real Messiahs of humanity; and they still deceive many."

Troublous Times. How terrible were the words of Jesus! And yet how literally these words of prophecy were fulfilled. During the life of Christ peace prevailed over the entire world, but after His death "the war fiend ran riot" in Palestine.

"At Caesarea, the Jews and Syrians engaged in deadly conflict, 20,000 of the former were slain and the rest expelled from the city. This resulted in a series of conflicts in other cities, compassing the death of 20,000 Jews at Scythopolis, 2,500 at Ascalon, 2,000 at Ptolemais. At Alexandria, Damascus and other points there were similar scenes." There were earthquakes at Crete, Smyrna, Miletus, Chios, Rome, Laodicea, Hierapolis and Colossae. Three Roman writers mention a famine in Judea "in the days of Claudius Caesar." How fitting was this description given by our Lord to His confidential disciples at a time when all was peace and quiet and prosperous throughout the land!

From Nation to Individual. All that Jesus has mentioned pertained to the general experiences of the nations and no doubt the question has already arisen in the minds of the disciples as to their future as His followers during these terrible times. Here is their answer. They shall be delivered up to councils, beaten in synagogues, stand before governors and kings for His sake.

Again how literally were the words of Jesus fulfilled. Peter and John before the chief priests, scribes and elders; a subsequent occasion when the Apostles are summoned before the same tribunal; Stephen before the council. Herod, Felix, Festus, Agrippa, Gallio and Nero are some of the governors and kings before whom the Apostles bore witness for Jesus the Christ.

Paul tells how in the days of his unbelief he punished the Christians in the synagogues and strove to make them blaspheme. Just here is a heartening word for the disciples, for although they must endure bitter persecutions they are assured that the Gospel must be preached to all the nations. This too was fulfilled, for the Gospel had been preached throughout the Roman world as then known and every nation had received its testimony before the destruction of Jerusalem.

A Comforting Promise. Though compelled to paint a dark picture of the things He knew must befall His followers, how like Him to flood that picture with the light of a comforting promise! The Apostles were illiterate men and knew little or nothing of the laws of the different countries where they must witness for Christ and what could these men do in the presence of such men of rank as governors and kings! They were not to think of this. The Holy Spirit would be with them and He would give them the needed message.

Who Shall Be Saved? There was more of the dark picture, yes, and more of the comfort for these disciples who were just beginning to learn what it means to take up the cross and follow Jesus. The feeling against Christianity was to be so intense as to destroy natural affection until brother shall deliver up brother to death, and the father his child, and children shall rise up against their parents and cause them to be put to death. The Apostles would be hated for Christ's sake. And now for the comfort: "He that endureth to the end, the same shall be saved." Strange as it may seem, historians tell us that not a Christian perished in the siege of Jerusalem, "though there were many there when Cestus Gallus invested the city; but when he unexpectedly and unaccountably raised the siege, the Christians took that opportunity to escape." Christ's followers may be exposed to every peril, but, enduring in faithfulness, no final disaster can come to them, for beyond all is the eternal salvation at the right hand of God in Heaven.

Quiz and Study. 1. When the disciple called Jesus' attention to the magnificence of the temple what more did Jesus see than he? 2. Why was the Mount of Olives a good place for the utterance of this prophecy? 3. Mention the terrible things that were to befall the nations and tell how these were fulfilled. 4. What things were to happen to the disciples and what was their comfort? 5. Has the fact that today the Gospel is being preached to all nations any significance? What is it? 6. Who shall be saved?

Practical Truths. 1. Sad the day for us when Jesus leaves our temple and His voice is heard no longer pleading in our souls. 2. Too often, like the disciples, we give our thought only to the physical surroundings of the church. 3. We yearn to know of the end of the world, even as they of old, but we must not be wise beyond what is written. 4. All who bring us a mutilated or changed Gospel are false Christs. 5. Better a thousand wars than a war between the soul and God. 6. There is no shame in being abandoned by the world for Christ's sake, but, oh, the shame of abandoning Him for the world's sake.

REV. JUSTIN N. GREEN.

THE COMMAND TO WATCH.

Watch ye therefore: for ye know not when the master of the house at or at midnight, or at the or in

the

Lest coming suddenly he

And
what I say
unto you
I say
unto
all,

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 13:33-37. ALSO MATT. 24:42-48, AND LUKE 21:36-38.

Prayer. Dear Lord, We rejoice that having triumphed over death and the grave, Thou dost reign in Heaven and that Thou wilt return to Thy people in glory and power. May we lovingly watch and earnestly pray for Thy coming and so live each day, that Thou shalt find us ready at Thine appearing. Amen.

Watch, as if on that alone
Hung the issues of the day;
Pray that help may be sent down;
Watch and pray.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Tuesday of Passion week, April 4, A. D. 30. Place, Mount of Olives. Persons, Jesus and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: Watchfulness Enjoined. Necessity of watchfulness, Matt. 25:13. A safeguard against temptation, Matt. 26:41. Watchfulness commended, Luke 12:37. A Christian duty, I Thess. 5:5-6. Reason for watchfulness, I Pet. 4:7. The reward of watchfulness, Rev. 16:15.

Life and Conduct Setting: Jesus closes a remarkable prophetic discourse with, 1. The declaration of His second coming. 2. Warns His disciples that the time is known to no man. 3. He commands them to watch and pray for the time when He shall reappear in power and glory. 4. Exhorts them not to sleep but to make ready for His coming through the completion of the work He has left to them. 5. Closes with a final admonition to watch.

WHEN HE COMETH.

On the Mount of Olives. Jesus' reply to the question, "What shall be the sign of Thy coming, and of the end of the world?" was of a practical and yet prophetic character. He had not satisfied their curiosity by mapping out the future as time is marked on the dial plate, nor had He openly rebuked the four eager questioners, but in a wonderful discourse He foretold the end of the Jewish dispensation and the calamitous woe attending that end; the approach of the new dispensation built upon His words and life and death; its close and His own final coming in power and glory. It was not only a message for those about Him but for the remotest future, and nearly two thousand years after its deliverance His followers are only beginning to conceive of all the mighty truths and warnings contained in this "Discourse of the last things." Jesus and His disciples were on the Mount of Olives, sitting in the shade of a sheltering fig-tree, the holy city at their feet, and above them outlined against the afternoon sky they could see the two gigantic cedar trees which then held their stately position on the summit of the Mount. The entire discourse had been one of solemn warning and as under His touch a twig of the budding fig-tree had been transmuted into a parable to attest the certainty of His coming, He declared that "Heaven and earth shall pass away, but My words shall not fail."

No Man Knoweth the Time. They had asked to know when these things should be, for despite all His teaching, they still believed that Jesus would be an earthly king. If in some mysterious way that they could not comprehend, Jesus was to die and reappear, surely in His second coming He would claim the authority which they had hoped He would assert even now. Therefore it seemed important that they should know when to expect His coming. But how could He reveal to them that which is not even known in Heaven? For, "Of that day and hour knoweth no man, no, not the angels of Heaven, but My Father only." Ever since this utterance of Jesus there have been people and sects who, while obeying Jesus' command to watch for His coming, have disregarded His statement, "Ye know not when the time is;" and oftentimes an exact date has been set for our Lord's appearance. Believing they knew the exact day and hour when the world would come to an end, Christians have deserted business and the routine of duty, and even prepared white robes in which to meet their Lord.

An old man who was warned by one such enthusiast to quit his work and be ready to meet his Master replied, "My Bible tells me 'Ye know not when the time is' ". The tick of God's clock is not heard on earth until it strikes the hour.

Jesus Counsels His Followers. The little band listened in mystified silence and sadness. Jesus' heart was filled with solicitude. To the Creator of time—the One who had existed before its beginning, and by the Divine measurement of a thousand years as one day, it would not be long ere He should return to His own. All that He had told them concerning the old and the new dispensation would occur ere this generation should pass away. Save one, all present with Jesus on Olivet should shortly see the sign of His reappearing in the parted clouds which should receive Him, and from Heaven itself hear the announcement, "This same Jesus which is taken up from you into Heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into Heaven." But as we count years it would seem long, and in the interval they would meet persecution, tribulation, indifference and hatred. And the heart of our Lord yearned not only for the little group gathered about Him but for His followers through all the ages who should be discouraged and perhaps weary in their allegiance because the King in His glory came not.

The Command to Watch. "Take ye heed, watch and pray." Just as in the days of Noah, men refused to believe in the flood until it came and swept them away, so the uncertainty of Jesus' coming would make men careless and unprepared for His return. But He would surely and swiftly come, and His followers were to take heed that they should be ready to receive Him. They were to pray for endurance, patience and fidelity to their Master, absent or present. They were to watch lest they be given over to sinful pleasures and indulgences, or so engrossed with the things of this life as to forget the charge He had given them. One can almost see the tender solicitude of Jesus' face, and catch the earnestness of that Divine voice as our Lord charges His disciples to remember their Lord and to always prayerfully and lovingly watch for His return.

A sentry in the Prussian ranks was assigned to watch a certain pass. A change in the enemies' movements transferred the battle to another field. In the sudden change of realignment of troops, the sentry was forgotten. Day after day passed and no one came to relieve him from duty. His scant rations were exhausted; he was physically weary for lack of sleep. But it was his duty to watch the pass until relieved by his superior officer, and after five days he was found insane from lack of food and sleep, too weak to walk, but crawling on hands and knees, back and forth on his watch. For was he not to watch?

To Every Man His Work. To emphasize the lesson Jesus likened Himself to a man taking a far journey and His disciples were to be the trusted servants whom the master had set over his household to give food and care to its members until their lord should return. The master had given them special instructions before he started on his journey. Each man had his work to do; every one his task to perform in the absence of the master. During his journeying it was their duty to obey orders and follow the instructions he had given them. He had given them no information as to his return nor any intimation as to when they should look for him. He was likely to return at any time. Perhaps as the silver trumpet sounded the evening hour, or it might please him to arrive in the darkest hour of the night—at the midnight watch; he might return at that early hour when only the cock is crowing and all the rest of the world is asleep, or his sudden coming might be deferred until morning. What did it matter to his servants, if they had been faithful to the task he had assigned them and if he found them watching? So with the Son of man. What did it matter to His followers whether He came in the evening of the Jewish dispensation or at its midnight; or if He should wait till the early dawn of the new; or tarry until the light of His glorious Gospel shone on every hilltop and covered the earth, if He found them not sleeping, but watching?

A Message for All. "And what I say unto you, I say unto all, Watch." Through the telescope of the ages Jesus saw the centuries rolling on, generations passing with the hope yet deferred; He knew every disheartened follower, and to them all He spoke that wonderful word so fraught with meaning and blessing, "Watch!" Never before was a message so broad and of such double meaning compressed into a single word. Are we careless and indifferent, engrossed with the things of this world and forgetful of our Lord? Then in letters of fire Jesus' warning appears to us, "Watch." Do we long to see the King in all His glory? and are we disheartened because our Lord tarries? Then the blessed word of hope shines like a rainbow in the sky, Watch. It is Jesus' message not alone to the disciples or those on Olivet, but to all.

Quiz. 1. What king went up on Mount Olivet weeping? 2. What four Apostles questioned Jesus concerning the time of His reappearing? 3. Did Jesus satisfy their curiosity? 4. Why is the exact time of our Lord's return withheld from His people? 5. What counsel did Jesus bestow? 6. What great command did He give?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The Word of our Lord endures through eternity. 2. Those who ask God "When?" are always unanswered. 3. Jesus commands all His followers to "Beware!" "Watch!" "Endure!" "Pray!" 4. Each one has a work to do during His Lord's absence. 5. He who sleeps will miss the splendour of His Lord's coming. 6. The command to watch was three times repeated.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE TEN VIRGINS.

Then shall the kingdom of heaven be likened unto

and went forth
to meet
the

And

of them were wise,
and were foolish. They that were foolish took their and took no oil

with them:
But the wise took oil in their

While the bridegroom tarried, they all slumbered and

And at midnight
there was a cry
made, Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 25:1-13

Prayer: Dear Lord, May we not be among the foolish virgins who were unprepared for the midnight call. May our lamps be trimmed and burning and filled with oil. Fill our hearts with the Holy Spirit so that we shall be ready when the Bridegroom cometh. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"The Bridegroom is advancing,
Each hour He draws more nigh;
Up! Watch and pray nor slumber,
At midnight comes the cry."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Tuesday of Passion week, April 4, A. D. 30. Place, Mount of Olives. Persons, Jesus and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: The Bridegroom. John proclaims the Bridegroom, John 3:29. His loving provision, Isa. 61:10. Rejoices over us, Isa. 62:5. Seeking the Bridegroom, Song of Sol. 3:1-3. His coming, Rev. 22:11-12.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this beautiful and simple parable, 1. Jesus speaks of the church as a body. 2. He seeks to impress more indelibly the lesson of watchfulness and faithfulness. 3. Emphasizes the need of special preparation for His coming. 4. Teaches that profession is not enough. 5. The necessity for a vital, personal preparation. 6. That the righteousness of others will not avail. 7. Those who watch and wait doing the duty assigned them will have a part in the joys of the Kingdom. 8. Those who are not faithful to the end will be shut out.

THE MIDNIGHT CALL.

Meeting the Bridegroom. To impress the warning to watch and pray still more indelibly upon the minds of His followers, Jesus again taught them by parable and pictured a wedding scene. It is the bridal eve. The bridegroom is not present for he has been away on a long journey, but his arrival is momentarily expected. Though he has been so far away that there is no means of knowing the exact hour of his arrival, it is enough that he has said that he would surely return, and that this was the evening he set for the marriage. Who could doubt the bridegroom's promise? There could be happiness only and expectation at the home of the bride. According to Jewish custom all had been made ready and was in waiting for the bridegroom to come and take his bride to his father's house. His hearers hardly needed to be told that Jesus was the Bridegroom who should some day come to take His bride, which is His church, to His Father's house above. The disciples listened attentively while Jesus pictured the bridal attendants who waited only the summons which should proclaim the bridegroom's approach, that they might go forth to meet and welcome him.

The Marriage Procession. It might almost be called a torchlight procession for the lamps used on such occasions and which were carried by the bridal attendants were not unlike the torches of today. The round receptacle which held the oil for the wick was placed in a cup or deep saucer with a pointed end which fastened into the long wooden pole on which it was borne aloft. Ten such lamps were always carried on such an occasion just as ten attendants or witnesses were required to be present at the benedictions which accompanied a Jewish marriage ceremony, therefore in the parable there were ten virgins—young women friends of the bride—in the bridal company. A modest little procession which might have passed almost unnoticed through any village of Palestine, and yet it has attracted the attention of the ages, for do not these ten virgins represent His professed followers who should be ever in readiness to welcome their Lord's return? It is therefore of moment to study those fitting girlish figures as they are presented to us in this bridal scene.

Their Equipment. Their wedding garments were provided for them, just as church membership furnishes a cloak of righteousness, but each virgin carried her own lamp. This much was expected of them, even as there must be personal preparation on the part of all, who would welcome and receive the Heavenly Bridegroom. Five came without oil. They could not have forgotten the need of oil, but wilfully neglected to do what would have involved labor and trouble. The lamps would have been much harder to carry if the hollow vessels were filled with oil than without. They knew it was necessary to carry their own oil, but by specious reasoning convinced themselves that there would be a supply of oil in the house or that there would be abundant time to supply their need after the call to meet the bridegroom.

The Five Foolish Virgins. It is not strange that Jesus called these five attendants foolish virgins. Was it not foolish to come expecting to serve as bridal attendants; to don wedding garments and to provide themselves lamps and be in waiting to meet the bridegroom at any hour of the night, and to come without oil in their lamps? Yet mere church profession is like the empty lamp hung on the top of a pole that men may see it, but giving no light. There are professed followers of Jesus, who are like these five foolish virgins, ready to go forth to meet the Bridegroom with no oil in their lamps. They neglect the spiritual preparation prayer affords; think they can do without a personal religious experience; rely upon the righteousness of the church to which they belong or trust that there will be time for preparation ere their Lord cometh.

The Five Wise Virgins. There were five of the bridal attendants who not only brought their lamps but "took oil in their vessels with their lamps;" they were the five wise virgins of the parable. Together the five wise virgins and the five foolish virgins waited for the summons which should tell of the bridegroom's coming. Time sped on and still he tarried. Evening wore into night. Tired nature asserted itself and both the wise and foolish virgins "slumbered and slept." We notice that Jesus does not rebuke them for this natural weariness. Quiet still broods over the house. It is midnight, when all the world sleeps. Suddenly upon the still air breaks a cry so tremendous with joy that it penetrates the ears of the sleeping maidens. "Behold, the bridegroom cometh; go ye out to meet him." We fancy there was exultation in the voice of the Divine Teacher at this announcement, for He would teach His disciples that when the Bridegroom appears, whether it is when the hour has struck twelve and a darkened world awaits the end; or though it were only the midnight vigil of a sick room, there should be joy and each loyal soul, with lamp trimmed and burning, ready to go forth and meet Him.

The Awakening. "Then all those virgins arose and trimmed their lamps." They hastily drew up the wick and lighted it. Since there was no oil in the vessels, of course the flame in the lamps of the five foolish virgins immediately died out. They had never contemplated such an emergency, nor that the bridegroom should arrive so unexpectedly. How they regretted that they had not brought oil with them, but surely they can borrow from their more fortunate companions. "And the foolish said unto the wise, 'Give us of your oil; for our lamps are gone out.'"

It was impossible to comply with their request. The receptacle for each lamp held just enough for one lamp and it could not be made to fill two. If they divided with their sisters, there would not be enough oil in the lamps of either the wise or the foolish virgins to last their journey through, and the entire procession would be in darkness when the bridegroom came upon them. The oil must be their own. They must seek a merchant and buy for themselves; but the plan was not so easily carried out as they imagined; they were unlikely to find any place open where they might buy at that time of the night.

The Bridegroom Comes. Leaving the foolish virgins in quest of a shop where they might buy oil, Jesus portrayed the coming of the bridegroom when "they that were ready went in with him to the marriage; and the door was shut." No one can picture that marriage.

There have been royal alliances where, with gorgeous and dazzling display, amid the sonorous tones of a deep throated organ, the kingly bridegroom is united to the royal bride. But when the Heavenly Bridegroom comes to His own, there is joy and happiness unknown to the heart of man. It was useless for even the Divine Teacher to try to convey to His hearers the joy and beauty attending the final marriage of a faithful, loyal soul to its Lord. The door was shut, and though there has been much imagining and conjecture, human vision has not penetrated beyond, nor has a messenger emerged from that closed door to tell of the joy of the Marriage Feast.

The Closed Door. "The door was shut." Nevertheless the foolish virgins came, knocking and calling on the bridegroom to open to them. Even if they had been so fortunate as to have obtained oil for their lamps, it could have been of no possible use to them for the procession was past and their lamps were needed no longer. Though professing to have been bridal attendants, chosen to meet the bridegroom, they had not been in the procession which met him. He had not seen them when he came, so he could only answer from within, "Verily, I say unto you, I know you not."

Thus Jesus illustrated His coming. It will be when least expected. He will come suddenly, swiftly and surely. It is not enough to be in waiting. Mere outward profession and church membership will not answer. One may not borrow religion, nor light one's lamp with the prayers of a father or mother. There will not be time for preparation after His coming, and those who are not ready to meet Him will find the door closed, "Watch therefore, for you know not the hour wherein the Son of man cometh."

Quiz. 1. What wedding scene was the occasion of Jesus' first miracle? 2. What three great truths did Jesus desire to emphasize in this parable? 3. By what term is the church designated in Revelation? 4. Were the five wise virgins selfish in refusing to share their oil with the others? 5. Would it have been possible for them to do so? 6. What does this parable teach you? 7. What command of Jesus did the foolish virgins disobey? 8. Is your light shining?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Our Lord is never so far away that He may not come swiftly. 2. The Bridegroom will not fail to keep His promise. 3. Like a lamp without oil is the profession of godliness without the reality. 4. He who lives on borrowed religion ends in bankruptcy. 5. The end always comes unexpectedly to the unprepared.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE JUDGMENT.

Then shall the King say unto them on his right hand, Come, ye blessed of my Father, inherit the kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world: For I was an hungred, and ye

I was thirsty,
and ye

I was a stranger, and ye

Naked, and

I was sick, and ye

I was in prison, and Then shall the righteous answer him, saying, Lord, when saw we thee an hungred, and fed thee? or thirsty, and gave thee drink? And the shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these my brethren, ye have done it unto me.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 25:31-46.

Prayer: Dear Lord, We rejoice that though it was not our privilege to minister to Thee, when Thou wast upon earth, we can serve Thee through our ministry to the sinful, suffering, needy and afflicted. May we be ever ready to help and succor others doing all as unto Thee. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"Wondrous honor has Thou given
To our humblest charity,
In Thine own mysterious sentence,— Ye have done it unto Me!"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Tuesday of Passion week, April 4, A. D. 30. Place, Mount of Olives. Persons, Jesus and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: Duty to Others. To the poor, Lev. 19:9-10; Rom. 12:13. To the stranger, Lev. 25:35. To the hungry and naked, Isa. 58:7. To the thirsty, Mark 9:41. To the prisoner, Heb. 13:3. To the sick, Job 6:14.

Life and Conduct Setting: This parable declares,
1. The certainty of the last great judgment day.
2. That all nations shall appear before the throne of God for judgment. 3. The separation of the righteous from the unrighteous. 4. That the test of righteousness is the performance of duty toward others. 5. Defines our obligation to others. 6. Enunciates the great principle that we serve Christ when we serve our fellow man.

INASMUCH.

The Judgment Day. In poetic ecstasy David had pictured nature's joy in the presence of her Creator, the very trees singing because the Lord had come to judge the earth with truth and equity. Solomon taught that God's judgment was to be so thorough that every secret thing would be revealed. To Isaiah He was a "God of judgment"; Jehemiah declared the "Whirlwind of the Lord"; Ezekiel had visions of that great day and Daniel saw the thrones of all earthly kings cast down, the books opened, and One came with the clouds to receive everlasting dominion and glory. Joel prophesied of a day of the Lord so great and terrible that no man could abide it, and Micah saw the nations in fear. Zephaniah issued warning that neither their silver nor gold would be able to deliver those who had sinned against the Lord. Zachariah exhorted to repentance before that day when thrones and kingdoms should be overthrown, while Malachi foresaw the blessedness of those whose names were written in the book of remembrance.

The Son of Man. All had spoken as seers and prophets who had been given fleeting visions of the majesty, power and glory of their God. They were mouth-pieces only, of the living God. But in the waning afternoon sun of that memorable Tuesday, Jesus sat on the mountain slope with His disciples and spoke with knowledge. There was more than human majesty in His mein and a light never seen on mortal face radiated His countenance as He talked of the Son of man and His angel host, while the pageant of the nations passed before His entranced hearers, as He marshaled the nations and separated them as a shepherd divideth the sheep from the goats. In the peasant garbed figure of the Great Teacher, they must have recognized the Son of man.

An Old Command. Yet Jesus did not seek to lay down any new law or promulgate any new doctrine. Moses commanded the Jewish husbandmen to share his abundance with his needy brother by leaving the gleanings of the harvest field and vineyard for the poor and the stranger. As early as the days of Job it was a prescribed duty to visit the sick and afflicted. In psalms and hymns David taught the people the beauty of beneficence, and Isaiah declared that the only acceptable fast is to deal bread to the hungry, entertain the stranger, cover the naked and to recognize the sinful and sorrowing as of the same flesh as oneself. But just as fair cities have been buried out of sight under the accumulation and dust of the ages, so these commands of God had been buried under rabbinic tradition and priestly formalism; as the archeologist digs down under the rubbish of centuries to regain the beautiful marble statuary and treasures of the past, Jesus in the parable of the judgment, sought to resurrect and revivify these beautiful commandments of love and charity which so long ago God had given His people.

On His Right Hand. It is beyond the imagination of man to picture that gathering of all the nations and the final separation of the righteous from the unrighteous, the one on the right hand and the other on the left. The Father has committed all judgment to the Son—no longer the lowly Nazarene but the King, clothed in majesty and power—who says to the innumerable host on His right hand, "Come ye blessed of My Father, inherit the Kingdom prepared for you from the foundation of the world." We may imagine the amazement of the disciples at that welcome. All their lives they had been taught that at that last great day their God would separate His chosen people of the seed of Abraham, from the Gentiles; that they would enter a Paradise prepared for the Jews, while the heathen would be burned as stubble. But not one word did Jesus say concerning such a separation of Jew from Gentile, and plainly the welcome is not restricted to those of Jewish blood. Have their ears deceived them, or what great and wonderful deeds have these on His right hand done, that they should enter into the Paradise of the chosen race?

A Startling Declaration. "For I was hungry, and ye gave me meat; I was thirsty, and ye gave me drink; I was a stranger, and ye took me in; naked and ye clothed me; I was sick and ye visited me; I was in prison and ye came unto me." Ah, they had personally ministered to the King and were receiving the reward for service rendered to royalty. It may be that the disciples began to apply the parable to themselves. Perhaps Peter complacently thought of the number of times he had entertained Jesus in his home; the fishermen disciples may have recalled with satisfaction those trips when Jesus had been an occupant of their boat, and their strong arms had rowed Him to shore. John may even have reviewed with modest pleasure Jesus' visits to his home in Jerusalem.

Eager expectancy was on every face, for at last they were to be rewarded; they were to hear the announcement for which they had waited so long, and now they were to be accorded their places in the Kingdom of their Lord; Then Jesus pictured the astonished query of the righteous ones whom He has honored, "Lord, when saw we Thee an hungered and fed Thee? or thirsty, and gave Thee drink? When saw we Thee a stranger and took Thee in? or naked, and clothed Thee? Or when saw we Thee sick, or in prison, and came unto Thee? The reward was not for service rendered the person of the King!

Ye Have Done It Unto Me. Clear as a bell must have been the voice of Jesus as He uttered those words that ring down through the ages, "And the King shall answer and say unto them, Verily I say unto you, Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, My brethren, Ye have done it unto Me." The old command has been unearthed and rehabilitated. It has been given new life, for now we know that Jesus clasps the hand that is reached out to the fallen; that the Saviour Himself feeds upon the bread we give to the hungry; even a cup of cold water given in His name is blessed to the giver. That when we shelter a stranger we receive the Christ under our roof; that the protecting coat of which we deprive ourselves to give to our shivering, naked brother or sister is shared by the Elder Brother. The one who ministers to the sick serves the Great Physician, and above the poor, condemned being in prison there is a "form like the Son of God."

A sermon with these words of Jesus as a text sent the eighteen-year-old daughter of an English banker out to visit the poor, then to the prisons of Great Britain and the continent, until Elizabeth Fry became "The Prison Angel." Those words and a prison experience in France made John Howard devote his life and fortune to those that were in bonds, and when he died from fever contracted during a Russian prison tour, who shall doubt that he received the welcome of the King? "I was in prison and ye came unto me." Every orphanage, every sheltering home, every insane asylum and hospital; all the free dispensaries, refuges and missions owe their inception to this same declaration of Christ, for only in Christian lands do we find such institutions.

Ye Did It Not. It would be pleasant to close the picture with those beautiful words of the King, but alas for those on the left hand; they too had seen the hungry, but gave no meat; the cup of cold water was withheld from the thirsty. No stranger found shelter under their roof; the naked were not clothed and those sick and in prison were not visited. Perhaps they were busy with some great task for the Master. They may have been engrossed in their own pleasure, or they may have intended to render assistance later on. In those days on earth they thought they had good and sufficient reason for this neglect, but their excuses were futile when they stood before the King. Sternly and sadly He declared, "Inasmuch as ye did it not to one of the least of these ye did it not to Me." And they also received their reward.

Quiz. 1. What had the Jews been taught regarding the judgment? 2. How did Jesus' teaching differ from this? 3. Who were to be at the King's right hand? 4. What service had they rendered? 5. Are you acquainted with any beautiful poem on this subject? 6. How should every kind act be performed?

Seed Thoughts. 1. All thrones sink into insignificance before the throne of God. 2. All nations shall acknowledge and honor the Son at the final day. 3. He who bore the sins of the world is its best Judge. 4. It requires the discerning eye of the Great Shepherd to separate the sheep from the goats. 5. God prepared a Heaven before He created a world. 6. "Who bestows himself with his gift feeds three, himself, his hungering neighbor and Me." 7. Our Lord transmutes every kind act into service to the King.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE PASSOVER.

And the first of unleavened

when they

the passover, his said unto him,

Where wilt thou that we go and prepare that thou mayest eat the

And he sendeth forth and saith unto them, Go ye

and there
shall meet
you

of water: follow him.

THE PASSOVER.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 14:12-16. ALSO MATT. 26:17-19, AND LUKE 22:7-13.

Prayer: We come to Thee Thou Lamb of God, who hath given Thyself a sacrifice for our redemption, trusting in the blood of the everlasting covenant to shield us from the destroying angel of death. Keep us; help us. We would obey Thy command and make ready a place for Thee in heart and home, giving Thee the place of honor. Make each day of our lives a sacred passover of worship and service. Amen.

Not all the blood of beasts
On Jewish altars slain,
Could give the guilty conscience peace,
Or wash away the stain.

But Christ the Heavenly Lamb
Takes all our sins away,
A Sacrifice of nobler name
And richer blood than they.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Thursday of Passion week, April 6, A. D. 30. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus, Peter and John; an unknown disciple of Jesus and his servant.

Scripture Setting: The Passover. Passover ordained, Ex. 12:3-14. Time appointed, Num. 28:16. The first passover, Ex. 12:27-30. Christ's first passover, Luke 2:41-42. The passover a type of Christ's sacrifice, 1 Cor. 5:7-8. Christ the paschal Lamb, Isa. 53:5-7.

Life and Conduct Setting: In the preparation for the passover we note, 1. Jesus' observance of this religious rite. 2. The disciples' unquestioning obedience to their Master. 3. The foreknowledge and omniscience of Jesus. 4. The honor which the unknown disciple accorded his Lord, in giving the best room to Jesus. 5. But of supreme importance is the presentation of Jesus as the true paschal Lamb, a sacrifice for sin. 6. Our preservation through the Lamb of God.

PREPARING FOR THE SACRIFICE.

The Jewish Passover. Throughout Israel, all labor ceased on the fourteenth day of the month Nisan, and every male Jew not ceremonially unclean was hastening to Jerusalem. It was the passover in commemoration of the mercy of God on that mysterious and awful night when the death angel destroyed the first born of all the Egyptians and passed by the households of Israel on whose doorposts was blood sprinkled with hyssop. For two previous Sabbaths its observance was the subject of discourse in all the synagogues; the thoughts of all Israel converged toward that day, for did it not celebrate their deliverance from bondage and the beginning of the journey which led to their entrance into the promised land?

A few of the old forms and regulations had slipped into disuse, but the substance of the festival was the same as that of the first passover. As the Jewish day began at sunset, the commencement of the passover was at sunset, the evening of the thirteenth, and it was sometimes called the feast of unleavened bread, since as soon as the sound of the silver trumpets ushered in the sacred day, in all the houses of the orthodox, a solemn search was made with lighted candles for any leaven which might have been hidden away or overlooked, for every vestige of leaven must be removed from every house before noon in preparation for the passover in the evening.

The Paschal Lamb. The Israelites and the Egyptians were alike exposed to the death angel. In His great mercy God provided that in lieu of his first born, every Hebrew householder might offer a lamb as a sin offering, whose blood sprinkled on the doorpost would be accepted as a substitute for the son. The destroying angel, seeing the blood, passed over the household. The lamb, thus sacrificed, was to be roasted and eaten as a token of preservation and thanksgiving. As the sun was setting, the paschal lamb was slain at the temple and the blood and fat given to the priests. The lamb was then roasted whole, and eaten with bitter herbs and unleavened bread. On this passover 260,000 lambs must have been slain as a type of the Lamb of God who was to take away the sin of the world.

A Day of Rest. Jesus descended from the Mount of Olives to the hospitable home in Bethany and was welcomed by the two sisters, Mary and Martha, and their brother Lazarus. That night, in the spotless guest-chamber which Martha had prepared with extra loving care—for the last time on earth, Jesus lay down and slept. On Thursday morning, "Green Thursday" it was called in the Middle Ages, "He awoke never to sleep again." The meal was hardly over when His disciples came to receive instructions and to learn whether He would keep the passover in Bethany, as was permissible, or in Jerusalem.

The Last Passover. Though it had become a mere form to the great body of Jews, the real significance of the feast was ever present with Jesus. Year after year He had eaten the paschal lamb with His disciples and friends, knowing full well that He was celebrating His own death and that the paschal lamb was only a type of Himself as the Lamb of God who should be offered as a sacrifice for the whole world, that through the application of His shed blood all under judgment of eternal death might be preserved to everlasting life. Now His last passover had come, for on the morrow the true Paschal Lamb was to be sacrificed once and forever. Then the feast would lose all its significance, and be superseded by a Divine ordinance that through all the ages should serve as a memorial of the great Sacrifice of which the passover was a prophetic type. Therefore He must keep the feast in the holy city, where all Israel might witness the Sacrifice.

Preparing for the Feast. In response to the query of the disciples, Jesus called Peter and John and sent them to Jerusalem, where they should meet a man bearing a pitcher of water. They were to follow him to the house and send this message to the owner: "The Master saith unto thee, where is the guest chamber where I shall eat the passover with My disciples?" And His disciples went forth; for Jesus was ever the Master and they His obedient followers. His plans were never unfolded to them until He needed their services, and their confidence in their Lord was so great that they were content to obey. And as at all times, "they found it as He had said unto them." Not until later did they know that Jesus exercised His foreknowledge so that that last meal and the institution of the holy supper might not be interrupted as it might have been had the house or its owner been named in the hearing of Judas.

The Upper Chamber. It may have been the house of Joseph of Arimathæa, or Nicodemus, or it may have been the home of John Mark's father. Certainly the owner was one who loved the Lord, for though His disciples were not bidden to ask for the best room, this man accorded Jesus the upper chamber, or the best his house afforded. What a satisfaction it must have been to a follower of the Lord that the room was all in readiness when Jesus needed it.

Securing the Paschal Lamb. The room was ready. Since Jesus ever complied with the law (and it was a legal requirement that the paschal lamb should be purchased earlier), it is quite likely that Judas, who still served as treasurer, had purchased the lamb and other things necessary to the observance of the feast the previous afternoon—perhaps within the very hour in which he bargained to betray his Master. So there was little to be done, save to see that the lamb was slain.

It was half past one by our time when Peter and John ascended the temple Mount. There were worshippers from all countries and all parts of Palestine. The priests' court was filled with white-robed priests and Levites. Slowly the Levites chanted the eighty-first Psalm in three sections following the three-fold blast of the silver trumpets of the priests. The two disciples heard the wierd chant, "My people would not hearken unto my voice; and Israel would have none of me." How sad a meaning it held for them! Then, "Oh, that my people had hearkened unto me!" "He should have fed them with the finest of the wheat." They seemed to see again the Master, full of compassion, blessing the bread and breaking it for the famishing desert multitude.

The Lamb is Slain. Another moment, and ere the incense was burned for the evening sacrifice, the court of the priests was filled with the vast throngs of worshippers who were admitted in three divisions. Then another three-fold blast from the trumpets announced that the lambs were being slain. This, each Israelite did for himself. First among those in the first division are the two disciples. Peter and John had slain the lamb, whose blood was caught in a golden bowl by the officiating priests. The Levites chanting all the time, and now the people join them and as the two disciples heard the words, "Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord," they were reminded of the triumphal entry into the city only a few days before.

They shouldered the slain lamb, when it had been duly prepared according to law, and hastened back to the upper chamber. And the burden grew heavy on John's shoulders, for he was carried back to that day at the ford of Jordan, three years ago, when he saw Jesus approaching; and again he heard the mighty voice of the great desert preacher, "Behold the Lamb of God which taketh away the sin of the world."

Quiz. 1. By whom was the passover instituted? 2. State what occurred at Jesus' first passover in Jerusalem. 3. What home in Bethany sheltered the Master during this last week of His life? 4. Why did Jesus keep the passover in Jerusalem instead of Bethany? 5. What deep significance was attached to this feast? 6. What did the slain lamb typify?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The predictions of our Lord always come true. 2. The passover was a reminder of fearful doom and deliverance. 3. "Christ, our Passover is sacrificed for us." 4. He became our sacrifice to avert the fearful doom of eternal death which rested on all. 5. His blood saves to everlasting life.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

WASHING THE DISCIPLES' FEET.

After that he and began to

and to

wherewith he was girded.

So after he had washed their feet, and had

and was again, he said unto them, Know ye what I have done to you? Ye call me Master and Lord: and ye say well; for so I am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet; ye also ought to

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 13:2-16.

Prayer: Dear Lord, May we ever acknowledge Thee as our Master and follow Thy example of humility. Give us grace to enable us to perform the humblest service for Thee and for our fellow men. Wilt Thou wash us and make us every whit clean. For Thy glory. Amen.

Thy home is with the humble, Lord!
The simple are the best:
Thy lodging is in child-like hearts,
Thou makest there Thy rest.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Thursday of Passion week, April 6, A. D. 30. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: Humility. Honor accrues to the humble, Prov. 15:33. True greatness, Matt. 18:4. The greatness of service, Mark 10:43-45. Humility exalteth, Luke 14:11. Christ's example of service, Luke 22:25-27. The humility of Christ, Phil. 2:5-8. God raiseth the humble, James 4:10.

Life and Conduct Setting: In our lesson we are shown: 1. The weakness of human nature as exhibited by the strife of the Apostles for the place of honor at a moment so sad and sacred. 2. The lowly spirit of His Kingdom in contrast with the world. 3. He rebukes the disciples by His own great humility. 4. After washing the disciples' feet, Jesus enjoins a like humility upon His disciples. 5. All who call themselves His disciples must follow His example.

TRUE GREATNESS.

The Last Entry. Again Jesus walked with His disciples along the old familiar road that led to Jerusalem. How gay the scene! Before them lay the holy city all in holiday attire. At every step they encountered hastening pilgrims too bent upon arriving in the holy city before the first three stars became visible in the sky and ere the threefold blast of the silver trumpets of the priests announced the commencement of the passover, to notice the One whose appearance had heretofore drawn the multitude to Him. Therefore they entered Jerusalem unnoticed. How the compassionate Jesus must have yearned over the careless worshippers who thronged the streets, crowded the flat roofs and filled the temple courts. They did not know that so near to them was the real Sacrifice for their sins. Strong men, each bearing a sacrificial lamb on his shoulder, passed them, and not one recognized in the humble figure of Jesus the fulfillment of type and prophecy, who was to offer Himself up on the morrow as the true paschal Lamb. Busy thoughts filled the minds of those who followed Him. Judas lagged behind, lest he might meet the searching gaze of the Master. To the others, the air was pregnant with foreboding. There was absolutely no public acclaim, only ominous glances that boded evil to the gentle Figure at their side. Would Jesus at last use His supernatural power for His own glory and aggrandizement? Unless He did they were lost.

The Upper Room. The world has many sacred and historic shrines, but no place fraught with such sacred interest as that upper room. Imagine a room about fifteen feet square, with white walls unadorned, and bare of all save the most necessary furniture; a low Eastern table not higher than a bench, covered with a simple cloth, and two rows of single divans or cushions arranged around the table somewhat in the form of a horse-shoe. Yet here was instituted the Lord's Supper. We may even conjecture that three days later their resurrected Lord appeared to His disciples in this very room, and it may have been in this self-same upper room that the Holy Spirit descended in pentecostal flame on the waiting disciples who were bidden to tarry for the baptism of the Holy Ghost.

All the way from Bethany the Master had walked beside His disciples in sad loneliness. Not one of the Twelve could sympathize with Him. And as He entered the room furnished and ready for His use, with the weight of the woe and sin of a world bearing down upon Him, He could not even be sure that all His chosen Twelve would be true to Him in that hour when their dreams of an earthly kingdom and their own aggrandizement should be ruthlessly dispelled by the suffering, humiliation, abasement and death of their Lord.

Here in this upper room, ere one of the Twelve should betray Him, He must forever fix in their minds the eternal truths of His Kingdom, and plant in their hearts the lowly spirit and humility that become the followers of the meek and lowly One. Yet mild and gentle and grief stricken though He was, it was a kingly Figure that walked the heights of Olivet that eventide and as His expectant disciples looked at their Master seated at the table, they saw One who bore Himself as more than a conqueror.

The Place of Honor. According to Mosaic law, the passover was to be eaten standing, but the rabbis had changed this to the Gentile custom of reclining, since only slaves ate standing, and in their pride the Jews shrank from this reminder of their bondage in Egypt. Almost does it seem impossible that at such an hour and under such circumstances a dispute should have arisen among the close followers of the meek and lowly Jesus; and it is inconceivably sad that it should have been concerning who should have the chief seat or place of honor beside the Master. John sat at the right hand, but the chief place was the seat above him, at Jesus' left hand. They fancied it was a grave matter who should have that seat, since it might even determine who should be greatest in the Kingdom which they dreamed would soon be set up. Perhaps it was Judas who contended for that honor and won it, for the devil had entered into his heart and Satan is ever ambitious.

Then there may have been another cause for strife. It was, as we have seen, customary to remove the sandals worn at the door in order not to defile the clean, white mats which covered the center of the floor, with the dust and dirt of the street, while a waiting attendant bathed the traveler's feet. But owing to the privacy which Jesus had prescribed, there was no servant present to perform the ablution and none of the disciples were sufficiently lowly and loving of heart to perform an act which had always been the work of slaves, though it would have refreshed their Master.

Grieved by their selfish pride Jesus took occasion to set forth the lowly spirit of His Kingdom. "He that is greatest among you, let him be as the younger; and he that is chief as he that doth serve." "I am among you as he that serveth." Then to their amazement He who had made Himself one with God arose from the supper, laid aside His garments and took a towel and girded Himself. It was the attire of the lowliest slave. What a striking lesson of humanity and self-abnegation to the warring, self-seeking disciples! They, the Galilean fishermen and peasants, might not abase themselves by performing a menial service for the comfort of their Master and their brethren, but He who was Lord of Heaven and King of kings, considered it no abasement to humble Himself and take upon Himself the form of a servant that He might serve the weakest and the smallest, and even the meanest of His brethren, for was not the traitor Judas one of their number when, pouring water into a large copper bowl used for such purposes, without a word He began to wash His disciples' feet and wipe them with the towel?

Peter's Lesson. Shame held them silent until our Lord came to Peter. That impetuous disciple cried out in indignant protest, "Lord, dost Thou wash my feet?" Not till later would the full significance of his Master's reply dawn upon Peter. "What I do, thou knowest not now, but thou shalt know hereafter." Peter, carried away by reverent humility, declared vehemently, "Thou shalt never wash my feet." But it was a false humility which would have opposed the will of God, and Jesus, knowing the real love in Peter's heart, answered him, "If I wash thee not, thou hast no part with Me." With characteristic impetuosity Peter rushes to the other extreme, and he pleads, "Lord, not my feet only, but also my hands and my head."

Peter has several lessons to learn this night, and one is that he must accept what the Master chooses, not in his own way, but as the Master wills. Tenderly, as to a wilful child, Jesus again replies to His impetuous disciple, "He that is washed needeth not save to wash his feet, but is clean every whit." And then with sad reluctance, Jesus was forced to make the reservation, "But not all." For the Master had knelt at the feet of the traitor, and with kind and gentle hands had cleansed Judas' feet from the stains of that secret walk whose object had been his Master's betrayal.

The Exhortation. Having completed His lowly service, Jesus resumed His garments and again reclined at the table. "Know ye," He said, "what I have done to you?" "You call me Lord and Master, and ye say well; for so I am. If I then, your Lord and Master, have washed your feet, ye also ought to wash one another's feet." He had washed their feet to teach them humility, self-denial and love. Henceforth there were to be no struggles for precedence among those who bore His name, but self-effacement; dignity must give place to humility; self-seeking to service; authority to ministry. He who would be chief among them must fashion his life after the life of the One who "made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant," and "humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Thus shall His followers attain true greatness.

Quiz. 1. Name an instance when Jesus' feet were washed. 2. On what other occasions was Jesus forced to rebuke His disciples for self-seeking? 3. Why would Peter refuse to permit Jesus to wash his feet? 4. What would you say regarding Peter's course? 5. What lesson did Jesus seek to inculcate?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The spirits of pride and selfishness are the hardest to exorcise from the soul. 2. A mere question of place at table seemed of greater importance to the disciples than their Master's death. 3. Service instead of rule is the true title to greatness. He who is equal with God did not hesitate to stoop to the office of servant. 5. Jesus was never more God-like than when at Judas' feet. 6. True love is willing to serve to the uttermost.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

And as they were eating, Jesus

and

and

and

and said, Take, eat; this is my body. And he

and

and

saying, Drink ye all of it; For this is my blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins.

But I say unto you, I will not drink henceforth of this fruit of the vine, until that day when I drink it new with you in my Father's kingdom.

THE LAST SUPPER

BY LEONARDO DA VINCI

The artist was an Italian and a very wonderful man; not alone a painter but a scientist and engineer. He was skilled in a hundred ways, and exercised a powerful influence over his century.

"The Last Supper" was painted on the wall of a large dining room of a religious institution in Milan. The picture occupies one entire side of this dining room and seems to be a continuation of the room, with its timbered ceiling and three windows. The entire arrangement is artistic but artificial. Everybody is sitting on one side of the table, which is for convenience sake and to save confusion. The recently ironed tablecloth with all its folds and knotted corners is distinctly characteristic. As it is a long table it is sustained by four skids. The three windows, one large and the other two smaller, are exactly in the middle of the picture and Christ is drawn against the light, with His two hands spread out, as He talks. This gives Him the form of a pyramid, which is always impressive. The twelve disciples are divided into four groups of three each, and all the lines and movements in these groups lead toward the figure of Christ.

The moment represented is that in which Jesus announces that one of the disciples should betray Him. The excitement caused by this declaration is well expressed in each of the groups. On the immediate right of Christ one holds up the finger toward the beloved disciple John to learn from him who the unfaithful one might be. In the right-hand group one points toward Judas, and eagerly talks with his two fellows, who are holding their hands as if protesting innocence. One grasps his bosom, as if to say, "It is not I." On our left near the center sits John, with his sweet face and pure expression, which contrasts with the dark face of him who holds the money bag of the company, Judas; the only one with a dark face in the entire company.

This was at the time of the passover, when all the Jews ate unleavened bread, and Christ had come up with His disciples to observe the feast. Here the Saviour instituted the communion service, or Sacrament, which has been observed by all Christian churches from then until now. He took bread and broke it, giving to each one a portion, and distributed in the same manner the wine, saying, "This do in remembrance of me." Although all these figures are dressed in Jewish costumes the objects on the table are rolls such as would be found on any Italian table today. All of which makes the picture real and appeals to everyone who sees it.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

THE LAST SUPPER.

LEONARDO DA VINCI. 1452-1519.

No record of Leonardo da Vinci's birth exists. It is known, however, that Caterina, his mother, was married one year after his birth, in 1453, which thus curiously fixes the date of Leonardo's birth in 1452. His mother's marriage to an honest yeoman, Vacca Accattabriga, was hastened by his father's noble kinsmen, while the child found a warm welcome in his father's family. From his babyhood he won hearts. When his father married the second time, the stepmother lavished her love upon him even on her wedding morn.

Of the life of Leonardo's mother, after her marriage, nothing is known. Many writers have sought to show that the face whose mysterious beauty appears so often in his pictures is that of his remembered mother.

Leonardo never married, and was always proud of the mystery that surrounded his birth. In one of his manuscripts is found "A prayer of thankfulness for the divinity of my birth, and the angels that have guarded my life and guided my feet." In Leonardo's time lived also these: Shakespeare, Cervantes, Columbus, Martin Luther, Savonarola, Loyola, Erasmus, Michael Angelo, Titian and Raphael. It was a golden age of intellectual and artistic activity, of great accomplishment and splendid promise—the seedtime and growing time probably of all that is being harvested today. Among all these great men, none touched life at so many points or lived so fully rounded a life as Leonardo.

At twenty, he was a fellow student with Perugino under Verrochio, and being entrusted by his master with the painting of a single angel in one of his compositions, painted an angel of such exquisite grace that his master wept with joy and thankfulness that his pupil had so bettered his teaching, and never again attempted to paint. While in strength surpassing all his comrades—he was a consummate athlete—Leonardo even from boyhood, possessed the graces of the courtier and diplomat. As painter, sculptor, architect, engineer, naturalist and physicist, he was great in all, and to crown a life that for all round efficiency of performance probably has no parallel, made for himself a place secure in the field of literature by his writings upon the many subjects in which he was an original observer and an authority.

Commissioned by the Duke of Milan to execute an equestrian statue of the duke's father, he, in the intervals of carrying out this work, painted the famous portrait of the duke's favorite, Lucrezia Crivelli, now in the Louvre. Shortly after, by the favor of the Duchess of Milan, he commenced the famous "Last Supper," in the refectory of the monastery which was under her special patronage. Continuously, Leonardo had pupils in painting and sculpture. At this time he founded the Milan Academy of Art, and between times made designs for the duke's workers in silver and gold, drew patterns for the nuns to embroider, and gave them and the great ladies of the court lessons in literature and the art of poetry.

The painting of "The Last Supper" was slow. The prior was impatient. Five husky house painters could have done the job in a week. The prior could do it himself. The duke sent for the painter, whose gracious speech convinced the duke that men of genius do not work like hired hands. A masterpiece such as this, a monument to a wise and virtuous ruler could not be hastened; besides there was no one to pose for either the head of Christ or of Judas. The Christ must be ideal, and as for Judas, "Why, if nothing better can be found, and I doubt it, I believe I will take for model our friend the prior." The prior fled, and came not again till the picture was finished.

Probably more famous than "The Last Supper" is the portrait of *Mona Lisa del Gioconda, which hangs in the Louvre. This famous picture, painted when the artist had passed fifty, and four years in the painting, has been for four hundred years the despair and inspiration of portrait painters. In his student work, done for Verrochio, in the "Virgin of the Rocks," in the "St. Anne," the "Mary Magdalen"—even in the faces of the Jesus and St. John of "The Last Supper," are shown increasing glimpses of this same face, fully idealised in the Mona Lisa, who, inscrutable, all-wise, tender, loving, yet sphinxlike, smiles from her canvas at the questioning, admiring world.

Leonardo died in France in 1519.

JAMES BEALINGS.

*The "Mona Lisa" was stolen from the Louvre during the summer of 1911.

THE LORD'S SUPPER.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 26 :21-30. MARK 14:18-26. LUKE 22:14-30.

Prayer: Dear Lord, We reverence Thee for Thy great salvation and for Thy blood that was shed for us. May we find refreshment for our souls at Thy table and in all things grow like Thee, so that our lives shall bear Thine image and we shall be living witnesses of the power of Thy broken body and shed blood. We ask it for Thy name's sake. Amen.

Jesus spreads His banner o'er us,
Cheers our famished souls with food;
He the banquet spreads before us,
Of His mystic flesh and blood.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Thursday of Passion week. Place, the guest chamber of an unknown house in Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus and His twelve disciples.

Scripture Setting: The Holy Communion. One through the communion of Christ, 1 Cor. 10:16-17. Commemorates death of Christ, 1 Cor. 11:26. Kept by the disciples, Acts 2:42, 20:7. Demands self-examination, 1 Cor. 11:28. His body and blood, John 6:53-59.

Life and Conduct Setting: Our lesson is concerning the institution of the Lord's Supper. 1. Which is an abiding memorial of our Lord. 2. Commemorates His death and sacrifice. 3. Proclaims the faith of His followers in the virtue of His atonement. 4. As the blood of the passover lamb redeemed Israel from destruction, so His blood is a ransom for all God's people. 5. A symbol of the covenant which pledges His followers to faith and duty. 6. A spiritual communion with our Lord as the Bread of Life. 7. The bond of the brotherhood established by Jesus.

THE NEW PASSOVER.

The Order of the Feast. In Jesus' time this was the order of the passover: the lamb, having been slain at the temple, was roasted whole; the unleavened bread and bitter herbs, such as endives, lettuce and radishes, were placed on the table, around which the company reclined; the master of the household taking the place of honor. All being in readiness, some member of the family filled a cup with wine, which was given to the head of the household. By him it was taken in the right hand, he maintaining a reclining position and supporting himself on his left side and arm. In this position he thanked God in the words, "Blessed be Thou, O Lord our God, Thou King of the world who createst the fruit of the vine." He then tasted the cup and passed it around.

Since even the ferment of leaven in bread was forbidden during the passover, it is generally admitted that the paschal wine was a new wine, and as even this unfermented wine was mixed with one-fourth water, we may be sure the wine used by Jesus on this occasion was a pleasant and temperate drink. The bitter herbs dipped in a mixture of salt and vinegar were then eaten as a token of the hard life in Egypt. Thanks were given for them also, and the unleavened bread—the bread of affliction—was passed around. Then the bowl of cheroseth and the paschal lamb; the head of the company again gave thanks; a second single cup of wine mingled with water was filled; the youngest of the company propounded a prescribed question and the leader explained the meaning of the feast; recounted the sufferings of the Israelites in Egypt and their deliverance. A part of the hundred and thirteenth and hundred and fourteenth Psalms—a part of the Hallel—were sung. The close of the religious feast was marked by the passing round of the third cup, known as the cup of blessing, after which the supper proper may be said to have only begun.

The New Covenant. According to the above described order, the passover feast was now well advanced. Jesus and His disciples had partaken of the first and second cup of wine; the unleavened bread and bitter herbs had been eaten; the farewell morsel of the lamb had been received; the passing of the old order had been marked by the handing around of the third cup. Never again would the disciples observe another passover, for suddenly, with a few words and by a single act, Jesus changed the old covenant passover to the sacrament of the new covenant. It was the most solemn hour of that eventful night. Jesus had foretold His voluntary sacrifice in no uncertain terms, and He had declared it a triumph. "Now is the Son of man glorified, and God is glorified in Him."

The traitor was gone, for Judas had stolen away on his evil errand immediately after receiving Jesus' intimation that his intended betrayal was known to Him; Peter had been shaken from his self-complacency by the warning of his approaching denial of the Master; and the desertion of the remaining disciples was foretold. Yet, despite their weakness and cowardice, their boastfulness and unreliability, He had chosen them and they were infinitely near and dear to Him. Not for their own sakes alone, but for all who should follow after, there should be some rite, some memorial, which should strengthen their faith and render indissoluble their union with Himself and the Father.

His Body and Blood. During the passover the disciples had spoken freely among themselves and to Jesus, but now a reverent hush fell upon the assemblage, and the eyes of the Eleven were turned toward Jesus, who took the unleavened bread into His hands and, after giving thanks, broke it and gave it to the disciples, with the words, "Take, eat, this is My body which is broken for you; this do in remembrance of Me." Then taking the cup, which had been filled for the fourth time, in the same manner He gave thanks, and gave it to the disciples, saying, "Drink ye all of it; for this is My blood of the new testament, which is shed for many for the remission of sins; this do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of Me."

How simple the sacred ordinance Jesus instituted for those of the new Kingdom which the shedding of His blood was to establish. Picture the room unadorned and in its furnishings as simple as the Galilean disciples who reclined around the table. It needed naught save the presence of the Master, so close under the shadow of the cross that, already, in all save the outward manifestation, His body is broken and His blood is shed for the remission of sins.

Its Significance. Accustomed as they were to commemorative and symbolical rites and ordinances, the disciples easily understood the symbolic reference to the bread and wine as signifying His body about to be offered and His blood about to be shed for their redemption, for had they not heard the Master say, "The bread of God is He which cometh down from Heaven and giveth life unto the world"? and were they not present when He declared, "I am the living Bread which came down from Heaven; if any man eat of this bread, he shall live forever; and the bread that I will give is My flesh, which I will give for the life of the world"?

Now, they were beginning to understand that wondrous declaration, "He that eateth My flesh and drinketh My blood dwelleth in Me, and I in Him." "The bread which we break," Paul declares, "is the communion of the body of Christ; the cup of blessing which we bless is the communion of the blood of Christ." It required no miracle; for in the deepest spiritual sense Jesus gave Himself to His people when He said, "Take, eat, this is My body; this is My blood; drink ye all of it."

In Remembrance. The command, "This do ye, as oft as ye drink it, in remembrance of Me," uttered that night, reaches down through the ages, and now in every clime and in every country Christ's followers reverently observe the sacrament instituted during that last supper with His disciples. The early Christians partook of it joyfully, and in those dark and perilous days of bitter persecution foretold by Christ, His followers met in caverns and caves; in the deep forests, where by the flickering torch or the light of the stars, they gathered with one accord to partake of the Lord's Supper, and arose from the table refreshed and strengthened to endure "Till He come," for had they not spiritually partaken of His body and blood, receiving of His strength and endurance, His Divine patience and fortitude?

In the Middle Ages, with the soldiers drawn up in line, ere the battle began, each man dropped his weapon to his side and with bowed head and bended knee, received the sacrament from the priests who went down the serried columns of kneeling soldiers bearing the sacred emblems; and with an enthusiasm born from this reminder of their slain Lord, they sallied forth to battle with unbelievers, with glistening sword and the cry, "In His name, we conquer!" To dying souls, languishing on beds of affliction, the sacred tokens have brought the Master so very near that, seeing the sword-thrust and the prints of the nails, they, too, have welcomed the coming of the crucified One, by whose shed blood and broken body death has been shorn of its victory. And at His table, all His followers, of every race and color, of every condition and sect, are partakers of that one Bread and one Body and become one in Christ Jesus, dwelling in Him and He in them.

Quiz. 1. What new sacrament marked the end of the passover? 2. What is the significance of this ordinance? 3. How widely prevalent is its observance? 4. How do we receive the body and blood of Christ? 5. Why did Christ command its observance?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Jesus is a perpetual sin-offering—the one eternal paschal Lamb. 2. At His spread table Jesus is with us as truly as He was with His disciples in the upper room; we need only the eyes of faith to see Him. 3. As we feed upon the bread and wine, our souls feed upon His body and blood. 4. The observance of our Lord's Supper is a token of His love for us and our love for Him. 5. There is neither rank nor social status at His table. 6. All may be partakers of His body and blood.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

MANY MANSIONS.

Let not your heart be ye believe in God,

also in me.
In my Father's house are many

if it were not so, I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you.

And if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again, and receive you unto myself; that where I am, there ye may be also. And whither I go ye know, and the way ye know. Thomas saith unto him, Lord, we know not whither thou goest; and how can we know the way? Jesus saith unto him, I am the

the

and
the

no man cometh unto the Father but by me,

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 14:1-6.

Prayer: Dear Lord, We thank Thee for the knowledge that there is a Home prepared for us and that Thou wilt come again and receive us to Thyself. Help us to find in Thee, the Way, the Truth and the Life, and be led by Thee to our place in the Father's Home above. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"Upward where the sky is brightest, Upward where the blue is lightest,—
Lift I now my longing soul,
Far beyond the arch of gladness,
Far beyond these clouds of sadness,
Are the many mansions fair;
In that place of the holy—
I would find my mansion there."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Thursday of passion week. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus and the twelve disciples.

Scripture Setting: Our Home in Heaven. The dwelling place of God, 1 Kings 8:30. Prepared by God, Isa. 64:4, 1 Cor. 2:9. An enduring home, 2 Cor. 5:1-2. An everlasting habitation, Luke 16:9. A happy home, Isa. 35:9-10.

Life and Conduct Setting: These words of the Master have carried comfort to each successive generation of His followers. 1. He comforts His disciples. 2. Would inspire the same confidence in Himself as in God. 3. Assures them of a place in the "Father's House." 4. Shows that His departure from earth is necessary to prepare an eternal habitation for His followers. 5. Declares no one can come to the Father save through the Son. 6. That to know Christ is to know God. 7. Asserts more strongly His equality and union with God.

IN MY FATHER'S HOUSE.

Troubled Hearts. There was universal rejoicing in Jerusalem, save in the upper room in which Jesus and the disciples were assembled. If we could only roll back the centuries and look in upon the little band, we would see them with adoring gaze fixed upon the Master so soon to leave them, and we would not think them one whit less manly because of their tearful eyes and sorrowing countenances, for they are to lose the One whom they had learned to love as Guide, Teacher, Exemplar, and Master. The prescience of His death made the new rite He had so solemnly instituted very tender, while the unspeakably beautiful spirit of the Master in these last moments had softened the hearts that but so short a time before had been selfish and contentious. As they reclined around the table, so sad and silent, Jesus read their thoughts.

Words of Comfort. The night was wearing on; the feast was over. They sang the second division of the Hallel, and their voices choked over "The stone which the builders rejected is become the head of the corner." It was harder still to chant, "This is the Lord's doings," while the words, "Blessed is He that cometh in the name of the Lord," were a veritable prayer. But to sing "For His mercy endureth forever," was greater than their faith. Why prolong the scene that was wrenching their hearts? They were about to depart when they were detained by His voice. They needed His consolation and strength for the tragedy of the morrow. There was much He would say to them, and in a short hour or so He would be separated from them, and they like sheep without a shepherd. What wonder that for the first and only time these great stalwart men seemed and were addressed by Him as "little children"?

It is a question among Bible students whether the words of farewell were spoken in the "upper" room or in the outer darkness of that night of sorrow, conflict, and suffering. But we know the message of comfort was spoken at the table. Jesus turned toward them with loving compassion. "Let not your heart be troubled; ye believe in God; believe also in Me." The words came as oil upon troubled waters; to souls that were cowering and trembling under the foreboding clouds of an approaching storm. Already the terror-stricken and broken-hearted disciples were more quiet.

The Home Over There. It was a common Jewish idea that those in glory occupied different abodes or stations according to their rank. Even though their dreams of earthly power and position were to be dissipated, why such sorrow, since "In My Father's House are many mansions"? When we think of it, how foolish is self-seeking and strife over precedence and rank even in this world; and how much more foolish is strife and emulation after spiritual place, when all enter that one House of the Father in which there is a place for all!

They had often been led astray by their own false hopes and vain ambitions, but Jesus had never deceived them. When He said, "If it were not so I would have told you," they believed Him, for was He not the Way, the Truth, and the Life to them?

Under the marvellous power of the Master's presence and the spell of His words of comfort, their souls were uplifted, for His calmness was as that of the spring night with its promise of summer fruitage and autumnal harvest; and as the myriad stars irradiated the black pall of the night, so flashes of joy and triumph illumined His sadness. He was their Friend and Guide going Home before them to make a place for their coming. More than that, He would return to fetch them to the Heavenly Home. "That where I am, there ye may be also." He evermore comes in Spirit at the death of His followers, to convey them to that abode in the Heavenly Home He has prepared for them. Jesus had walked with His disciples so long, He had held such close converse with them concerning the Father and the Kingdom that surely they should have understood Him when He said: "Whither I go ye know and the way ye know."

Their Blindness. But alas, though they realized the nearness of their Lord's departure, they still clung so closely to their ideas of an earthly and material kingdom, that they knew not where that far-away country was of which so often He spoke to them. Thomas, perhaps the most obtuse of all, and certainly the slowest to accept and discern spiritual truths, put forth the perplexed query, "Lord, we know not whither Thou goest and how can we know the way?" Surely with the mightiest Teacher ever on earth, and with such patient, persistent instruction as Jesus had given them, Thomas should have known that when Jesus said, "I go to the Father," He meant His return to the Heavenly Father whence He came. But alas for human blindness and the dullness of an unawakened intellect—he must ask the question which so grieved Jesus.

Only a sentence betrayed the Master's disappointment at the dullness of these pupils of His as He declared, "I am the Way, the Truth and the Life. No man cometh unto the Father but by Me. If ye had known Me, ye would have known My Father also." He would introduce them to the Father, and, turning His gaze full upon them, He added, "From henceforth ye know Him and have seen Him."

No greater truth was ever uttered; for in all the discoveries of the twenty centuries since, no one has ever found a way to reach the Father save through faith in His Son as the Saviour. Every earnest seeker has found that in Jesus only is the truth. The darkness of heathenism, the stagnation of those ages that would have shut out Christ, and of the blindness of the individual soul that gropes its way upward without Christ; and the illumination which all nations and people receive through Him, witness that Jesus is the Light of the world.

The Father Is Shown. Again came an interruption. This time Philip could not understand. Did Jesus mean to intimate that through Himself it might be possible to obtain a literal vision of Jehovah, perchance such as was accorded Moses? Surely, man could ask no more than such a revelation, and impulsively he turned to Jesus, "Lord, show us the Father and all our wishes will be satisfied." Who has not felt with Philip that if one could hear the audible voice of God, or have a vision of His glory, all doubts and fears would vanish; longing would be satisfied, and the soul would ask no more? But the soul needs something greater than a momentary vision of God on His throne, even could the invisible be seen by mortal eyes. The answer of Jesus is pathetic. Had Philip walked with the Master three years; had he answered the Divine call; seen the dead raised to life, and sight restored to the blind; had he listened to the words of life and failed to discover that through all those blessed three years, he walked with God? Had he not seen the Father in the Son?

Though He uttered no rebuke, Jesus could not refrain from manifesting pained surprise at the obtuseness of His chosen disciples, "Have I been so long time with you, and yet hast thou not known Me, Philip? He that hath seen Me, hath seen the Father, and how sayest thou then, Show us the Father?" Could it be that they did not really believe His oft repeated declaration that He and the Father were One? Because He came in peasant garb instead of royal robes, and because He was humble and lowly, had they failed to discern that the Father was manifest in Him? Did they not know that the words He spoke were not His own but the words of the Father? Then so intense was His solicitude that they should both perceive and receive this truth, that He who was God manifest in the flesh, actually pleaded with His disciples, "Believe Me that I am in the Father and the Father in Me; or else believe Me for the very works sake," for their efficiency and usefulness as His chosen Apostles depended on the acceptance of this great truth.

Quiz: 1. How did Jesus seek to comfort His disciples? 2. How would He console them for their disappointment concerning earthly place and position? 3. What promise did He make concerning His return? 4. What is the meaning of that promise? 5. What important statement did Jesus make? 6. What is the central truth of this lesson?

Seed Thoughts. 1. A belief in God and in Christ is the surest consolation in trouble. 2. He who has great faith carries an untroubled heart. 3. Our Father's House is a House of many rooms. 4. Jesus prepares our mansions with the material we send Him. 5. No true follower of Jesus need fear final separation from his Lord. 6. There is only one road leading to the many mansions. 7. Jesus is the Way; the Father the goal. 8. He who has walked with Jesus, walks with God.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

THE VINE AND THE BRANCHES.

I am the

ye are
the

He that abideth in me, and I in him, the same bringeth forth much

for without me ye can do nothing
If a abide not in me,

he is

and is withered; and

and

and they are burned. If ye abide in me, and my words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you

THE VINE AND THE BRANCHES.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 15:1-8.

Prayer: Dear Lord, Thou art the true Vine and we desire to be so firmly grafted in Thee that we may bear the fruits of Thy Spirit. Help us to abide in Thee and may Thy word so abide in our hearts and minds that we may glorify the Father as fruitful servants and be true disciples of Thine. We ask it for Thy name's sake and glory. Amen.

"Not for Thine own,
But others' weal thou bearest fruit;
Thy gain is in thy deeper root,
In twining branches stronger grown,
And richer store of sap to thrill
Into new fruitage year by year,
And though the wintry days be drear
Does not My strength support thee still?"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Thursday of Passion week. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus and the twelve disciples.

Scripture Setting: Fruit Bearing. The fruit of the righteous, Prov. 11:30. Recompense of the righteous, Isa. 3:10. Fruit of repentance, Matt. 3:8. The increase, Matt. 13:23. Filled with fruit, Phil. 1:11. Fruits of the Spirit, Gal. 5:22-23. The Word bringeth forth fruit, Col. 1:6. Peaceable fruit, Heb. 12:11.

Life and Conduct Setting: In this allegory, 1. Jesus made the vine with its branches and fruit the earthly type of a Divine truth. 2. He declared Himself the Vine, supporting and giving life and fruitage to all His disciples. 3. Under the figure of the Father as the Husbandman, Jesus showed how God watches and overrules the surroundings of His children that they may bear much fruit. 4. By abiding in Jesus, all disciples become fruit-bearing branches. 5. He impresses upon His disciples the futility of expecting fruit from their efforts without an abiding love and faith in God the Father, and Jesus Christ, His Son.

HIS LAST TEACHING.

Some Famous Vines. Palestine has ever been famous for its vineyards. Nowhere else does the vine grow to such luxuriance or bear such immense clusters of grapes. As early as when Moses sent a representative from each of the twelve tribes of Israel to spy the promised land, he sent them at the time of the first ripe grapes; and by one of its brooks they found grape vines of such luxuriance that the branch they cut bearing just one cluster of grapes was so heavy that it could only be carried by fastening it upon a great pole, which two of their number carried between them, and the trophy made such an impression upon the Israelites that the grapes of Eschol have been famous ever since. Even in our own day, one cluster of grapes will often weigh from ten to fifteen pounds, each individual grape being the size of a plum.

A noted traveler tells of arriving at a village of Palestine where, in the garden of an inn, he found a vine whose stem was one and a half feet in diameter and thirty feet high, the branches forming a bower thirty feet broad and long. In ancient times when the cultivation of the vine was one of Israel's most important industries, the grape gathering was a joyous season; the grapes were gathered with shouts of joy, thrown into baskets which were borne on the head, or on a yoke thrown over the shoulders, to the press. The vine became an emblem of domestic happiness and peace, and it was much used in the imagery of the prophets.

The True Vine. Jesus and the disciples lingered long at the table; it was hard to break up and tear away from the loved circle. More than once did they rise to go and each time they were held by His words of promise, or warning, or comfort. Now the Master looks out through the latticed window and sees the leaves of a vine which the moonlight has silvered, and following His custom of using the common, every-day things of life to illustrate great truths, He again became the Teacher, and pointing to the moonlit vine He gave utterance to one of the most beautiful allegories that have ever taught a blessed, beneficent truth.

"I am the true Vine," Jesus declared. Now the vine was the symbol of the Jewish church and therefore this declaration is the announcement that Christ is the true Vine, the reality of all types, the fulfilment of all promises. He is the Head, Root, and Life of the church. Just as the sap necessary to the life of the branches and their fruitfulness, passes from the roots and body of the vine to the outermost leaf, the tiniest twig and farthest tendril, so the life-giving Spirit of Jesus reaches out to and dwells in the remotest disciple in whose heart the Lord can find an abiding place. He is the source of all Christian life.

Illustration. There is a fable that once on a time a vine grew on a beautiful terrace. It threw all its life sap into the branches that they might bear fruit, until they grew so long and strong that they reached up toward the sky and threw out great clusters of berries. The sky looked down on the clusters, until they reflected its hue. With the strength they received from the vine, the branches had climbed toward the sun, which kissed the round berries of the grape a deeper purple, and soft breezes fanned them until these grapes seemed destined to become the most beautiful in all the vineyard. As they ripened the branches became so proud of their beautiful fruit that they despised the brown, twisted vine and wanted to cut loose from it. They coaxed the breeze until one day it became a tornado and tore the branches with all their fast ripening fruit from the strong vine that fed and sustained them. After that no pulsing life sap came to them from the vine, and when the gardener came he found only dead branches and black, withered fruit.

THE VINE AND THE BRANCHES.

The Husbandman. "The Father is the Husbandman." The disciples had seen the husbandman in his vineyard. They knew how careful he was to see that each bunch might produce the largest possible amount of fruit, watching every leaf and every branch, cleansing those that were infested by any of the many enemies of the vine; enriching the feeble branches; pruning the useless ones, and helping all to put forth their best powers. The thought of this continual care of God, the great and good Husbandman, must have comforted them. Though He might call His Son home to glory, they would still be under the Father's providential care. Already the pruning had begun in the falling away of countless followers because of the growing unpopularity and persecution of their Master. The word of Jesus had exercised its cleansing power and in the tragedy of the morrow every whit of the dross of worldly ambition and self seeking should be purged from them.

The Branches. "Ye are the branches." Thus indissolubly Jesus bound His disciples to Himself. Jesus the Vine; they the branches, while their good works were the fruit of this marvelous union; just as the clusters of grapes have their origin and derive their luscious, refreshing properties, not from the branches, but from the vine itself, so goodness and spiritual power are not inherent in us, but flourish in us through the life-giving and spiritual quickening which we receive from Christ, the Vine. Not only the little circle in that upper room, but His church and its members are branches of Christ. What high, high honor and powerful privilege He thus bestows upon those who bear His name.

It is the custom of great business firms and banking houses to establish branches in various cities and countries. Every contract made by one of these branch establishments is as incontestable as though made by the head; every draft issued by the branch is honored by the main house, for the branch and the main establishment are one, the same power abides in them, and whatever the branch house desires is supplied by the head. The simile of the vine and the branches is the same, for Jesus at once declares some of the privileges comprehended in this union.

Abiding. The proper function of a branch

is to bear fruit in proportion to its size and vigor, but just as the branch could not bear fruit if it was separated from the vine, so His disciples can only hope to bear fruit by abiding in Him. "He that abideth in Me and in him, the same bringeth forth much fruit; for without Me ye can do nothing." Greater still should be the privileges of His disciples. "If ye abide in Me and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you."

Their call to discipleship had thrust them out from the lowly, but quiet shelter of those homes on the shores of Galilee, and would send them forth as wanderers, without resting place for weary head or bleeding feet, but the Master had given them an abiding place. Though they might never again return to their peaceful haunts and former occupations, they should bear fruit that would glorify the Father throughout the ages. "Ye shall abide in My love." Love! His abiding love would keep His disciples secure from harm, and give them ever a refuge from the storm, a covert in the tempest. Even while compelled to spend their lives in a transient and changing world, His followers may abide in Him and He in them.

Withered Branches. It seems strange that there could be branches of the true Vine that should not bear fruit. It must be those who profess discipleship, but in whom no vital union has been established in the true Vine; whose thoughts still abide in the world; whose heart is so occupied with other things that it contains no abiding place for the Master. So the Husbandman, finding a withered branch bearing no fruit, casts it outside to be gathered and burned.

Quiz. 1. What prophet called Israel an "empty vine"? 2. What great truth did Jesus seek to illustrate with this allegory of the vine and its branches? 3. Of what was the vine symbolic to the Jews? 4. What did Jesus teach as the purpose of the vine? 5. How may a Christian hope to bear fruit?

Seed Thoughts. 1. Jesus, the Father and His disciples stand in exactly the same relationship as the vine, the husbandman and the branches. 2. Apart from Christ, His followers can do nothing. 3. All the Master's vineyard is under the watchful care of the Great Husbandman. 4. Only those who have abiding communion with their Lord are fruitful. 5. God's pruning knife cuts away all that hinders Christian progress. 6. The abiding disciple rests in His Lord's will.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

But now I go my way to him that sent me; and none of you asketh me, Whither goest thou? But because I have said these things unto you, hath filled your heart. Nevertheless I tell you the truth; It is expedient for you that I go away: for if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you;

but if I depart, I will send him unto you. And when he is come, he will reprove the

of

and of

and of

Of sin, because they believe not on me; Of righteousness, because I go to my Father, and ye see me no more: Of judgment, because the prince of this world is judged.

THE WORK OF THE SPIRIT.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 16:5-14.

Prayer: Blessed Holy Spirit, We come to Thee for enlightenment and knowledge. Wilt Thou cleanse our hearts and sanctify our souls; convince us of sin; remove our doubts and fears and lead us to Jesus. Dwell in us and teach us so that we may ever be obedient to Thy will and glorify the Father. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

Our blest Redeemer, ere He breathed
His tender, last farewell,
A Guide, a Comforter bequeathed,
With us to dwell.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Thursday of Passion week. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus and the twelve disciples.

Scripture Setting: The Office of the Holy Spirit. Strives with sinners, Gen. 6:3. Guides, Ezek. 36:27. Dwells with Christ's followers, John 14:17. Teaches, John 14:26. Testifies of Christ, John 15:26. Imparts the love of God, Rom. 5:5. Helps our infirmities and intercedes for us, Rom. 8:26. Imparts joy, peace and hope, Rom. 15:13.

Life and Conduct Setting: Jesus promised His disciples that shortly after His departure the Holy Ghost, or Comforter, shall come into the world; 1. To carry home to the hearts of all a consciousness of sin. 2. To awaken a longing for righteousness in the hearts of men. 3. To bring them to a realization of the judgment passed upon the world. 4. And reprove them for their unbelief. 5. The Spirit of Truth will also be a Guide to His disciples. 6. Teach them concerning their Master. 7. Unfold the mysteries of His salvation which hitherto they have been unable to comprehend.

THE COMFORTER.

The Tri-une God. It is said of the great Napoleon that so different was the regal and august emperor of France from the Little Corporal loved by the Old Guards, and from the father who romped on all fours with his little son, the king of Rome, that only those intimates who had seen him in all three capacities knew the real Napoleon. It is still more true that he is unacquainted with the true God who has not bowed low before the King of kings; rendered adoration at the feet of the conquering Jesus, and opened his heart to the dove-like Spirit of the Holy Ghost. To really know God one must know the Father, Son and the Holy Spirit—the three manifestations of God known as the Trinity, for the Scriptures declare the threefold nature of God very plainly. The book of Genesis introduces us to the great and mighty Force who built the universe; and throughout the Old Testament He is a God of power and authority; the King of kings and Lord of lords; Jehovah, the mighty Ruler, who causes the rise and downfall of nations and against whom the mightiest cannot prevail. In Jesus the Christ, we have a revelation of the God of infinite compassion and love, the Teacher and Saviour of man. But there were other properties of God of which little was known by the world or even His chosen people—the convicting, convincing and propelling power of God in the spiritual realm as revealed in the Holy Spirit.

Too Sad for Words. Jesus had given the disciples comfort and teaching in view of His departure; He had declared their relationship to Himself and the Father; to each other and to the world. He had assured them of His love—a love stronger than death, and the Master had called them not servants, but friends. They were to meet persecutions and the enmity of the world, but they should rejoice that they were to suffer for His name's sake and even as their Master had suffered.

In a general way Jesus had tried to prepare them for this before, but never so definitely lest they should desert the Master. Now, that He was going away it was necessary that they should know just what confronted them. It was all so different from the ambitious dreams they had cherished, that it is no wonder they were cast down and unable to speak. The silence grew oppressive. Usually the announcement of one's departure arouses a volley of questions from one's friends, but these men who are the closest friends of Jesus, are too sad, too disheartened and dumfounded to ask a single question as to where He is going. Very gently Jesus reproves them for this selfish engrossment in their own sorrow. "None of you asketh me, Whither goest Thou? But because I have said these things unto you, sorrow hath filled your hearts." Will they never learn to put Jesus first?

The Comforter. In their selfish foreboding and sadness, the disciples had overlooked a marvelous and glorious promise, thrice repeated during the few brief hours they were at the table. They were not to be left alone, and they would not have to bear their sorrow without consolation. It was actually better for them that Jesus should go, "For if I go not away, the Comforter will not come unto you; but if I depart I will send Him unto you." It is good to know that the first office of the Holy Spirit is that of a Comforter. The world is so crowded with losses and bereavements that not only the Eleven had need of a Comforter but every disciple of Jesus needs the comforting power of the Holy Spirit. Looking at them as they sat sad and dispirited, they seemed ill-prepared for the great mission unto which they were called, a mission which would daunt the stoutest heart.

The Great Helper. These simple Galilean fishermen were given a Herculean task. It was nothing less than to bring the whole world to Christ. Well they may have wondered how they were to accomplish so great a work. How were they to combat the logic of the rabbis; overcome the prejudice of the scribes; convince the proud Pharisees of their need of a Saviour; convert the Sadducees into a belief in a resurrected Christ; and to draw a world at enmity with God to His only begotten Son? Truly it was impossible, if they were to rely upon their own efforts, notwithstanding those three years of daily walk with the Lord Jesus. Human eloquence was too weak for the task, human logic would fail. No human power might hope to convince man of sin or to win him to righteousness. The work could only be accomplished by God Himself, in the form of the Holy Spirit. Jesus promised them this great Helper, who would convict the world of sin, and of righteousness and of judgment.

A pastor noted for his eloquence was once assigned to a college town with the hope that his talents might win the college students to Christ, and his efforts seemed to be rewarded by weekly accessions to the church from the ranks of the students. When he questioned them concerning the particular message that had brought the truth home to them, none of the converts could tell. They had, each and all, simply been overwhelmed with a sense of sin and guilt; their eyes were suddenly opened to the beauty of Christ, and as never before they felt their lost condition unless saved through His righteousness. One morning he noticed that an old washerwoman, who sat in the gallery, kept her lips moving throughout the entire service, as in prayer. The following Sunday, the minister's wife occupied a seat beside the old woman and, listening, she caught the words, "Reprove John Bent with Thy Holy Spirit, Lord." Over and over the old saint prayed these words, until looking across at the students' gallery, the minister's wife saw an athletic young man bowed with grief, and at the close of the sermon the young fellow walked to the altar in response to the pastor's invitation. And then they discovered that the old washerwoman had made each student for whom she laundered the subject of similar prayer. They had been won for Christ, not by the minister's eloquent and profound sermons, but through the office of the Holy Spirit.

The Truthful Guide. Jesus had touched upon great and wonderful truths, at which they had marvelled with dull understanding. They needed to have even greater things declared to them, but not yet were they prepared to hear them. When Christ should withdraw His presence and send His Representative to take His place as Comforter, Teacher and Guide, then the Spirit of Truth would unfold these things by giving to them a spiritual illumination which should enable them to discern the truth.

In the new order of things and the new Kingdom which they were to set up, the Spirit of Truth was to be their Guide and lead the way. As the Son glorified the Father, so the Holy Spirit would glorify the Son. As Jesus had not spoken of Himself, but of the things He had heard from the Father, so He the Holy Spirit, will not speak of Himself, but of the things He has heard from God. He would purify and enlighten them; bring to their remembrance Jesus's own words, and reveal the things of Christ and of God; He would dwell with them and teach them and guide them in the way of truth; sanctify the disciples and enable them to preach the things of the Kingdom.

Greater than the creation of the world is the creation of a soul. The Eleven were devoid of great intellect; destitute of talent and without learning; braggarts, cowards and self-seekers, they were worse than nothing. But in the power of His Holy Spirit the God who created the world out of nothing made them into men whose words and deeds have influenced the world beyond the power of the mightiest genius, and whose works shall last through all the ages. Unknown and unheard of beyond their native village, they have become patron saints of nations, to whose honor the world's greatest poets and painters, architects and sculptors have devoted their what titles is the Holy Spirit known? 5. What is best energies.

Quiz. 1. In what form and on what occasion in the life of Jesus was the Holy Ghost manifest? 2. What three manifestations of God have been given to the world? 3. How many times during His last discourse did Jesus promise the Holy Spirit? 4. By His work? 6. Was that work restricted to the disciples or does it extend to all?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The world has never been left without a Comforter. 2. If Jesus had not met and conquered death, this would still be a world of mourning. 3. Only through the Holy Spirit can there be conviction of sin and conversion to righteousness. 4. The Spirit of Truth is the only true Guide. 5. The Spirit never proclaims self. 6. The Holy Spirit is the Divine Alchemist, transforming dross into gold. 7. God is not a respecter of persons; what His Spirit did for the Eleven, He will do for all His disciples.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

I pray not that thou shouldest take them out of the world, but that thou
shouldest

They are not of the world, even as I am not of the world.
Sanctify them through thy truth:
thy word is

As thou hast sent me
into the world,
even so have
I also

into the world. And for their sakes I sanctify myself, that they also might be sanctified through the truth. Neither

I for these alone, but for them also which shall

on me through their word; That they all may be one; as thou, Father, art in me, and I in thee, that they also may be one in us: that the world may believe that thou hast sent me.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 17:11-26.

Prayer: Dear Lord, We thank Thee that in Thy last moments on earth Thou didst pray for Thy disciples and that Thou dost still intercede for us. May we remember that Thou wouldst have us so live and love and work, that we may show forth Thy glory, and that Thy prayer may be fulfilled in us. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

He ever lives above,
For me to intercede,
His all redeeming love,
His precious blood to plead.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Thursday of Passion week. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Jesus and His disciples.

Scripture Setting: Our Intercessor. He is foretold, Isa. 53:12. He intercedes for His enemies, Luke 23:34. He still intercedes, Rom. 8:34. Saved through His intercession, Heb. 7:25. Our advocate, 1 John 2:1.

Life and Conduct Setting: In an intercessory prayer of wonderful power and tenderness, Jesus prayed not for the Eleven alone, but all His followers throughout all the ages, and these things He asked: 1. That His disciples everywhere and for all time to come, might be kept in the perfect love and unity of the Father and the Son. 2. That the joy of Christ might be fulfilled in them. 3. That though remaining in the world as His witnesses, they might be kept from evil. 4. For their sanctification through the Word of truth. 5. That they might be made perfect in love. 6. That the lives of His disciples might manifest Christ to the world. 7. That when their mission on earth was accomplished, His followers should be with Him and behold His glory.

OUR LORD'S PRAYER.

The Man of Prayer. If ever one might have considered Himself superior to the need of prayer, it would surely have been Jesus, the sinless, stainless One, who never needed to ask forgiveness; He whose own power was so great that all nature's forces were obedient to His word, and legions of angels awaited His command—the God-man, equal with God and Himself one of the Trinity. But Jesus might be called the Man of Prayer, resorting to God in physical weariness and spiritual depression; withdrawing from His disciples and seeking the solitudes of mountain and desert to pray; and often talking all night through with the Father. And so, before He went out into that last night, Jesus gathered His disciples round Him in parting prayer. He had taught them how to pray in that model petition commonly known as the Lord's Prayer, but now they were to learn how their Lord prayed.

A Sacred Moment. Ever since the days of Moses, once each year, upon the day of atonement the high priest had entered the holy of holies to offer sacrifice for the sins of the people. But he entered the holy place alone; no one save he might penetrate the veil. When Jesus was about to offer Himself as the eternal Sacrifice for the sins of the world, it was as though He tore aside the veil, and permitted His disciples to enter with Him into the holy of holies; for even the innermost sanctuary of the temple was not more holy than that upper room, where Jesus lifted up His eyes to Heaven and uttered that marvellous high-priestly prayer. Like His sacrifice, it covered not only the needs of a chosen few, but of all His followers throughout all generations and every age to the end of the world.

We may not have the high privileges accorded the Eleven, as according to Jewish custom they stood reverently round their Lord as He carried their needs and His desires for them to the Father. But though we may not actually hear the Divine voice of our Lord, nor visually see the tender face of the Master as He pleads our cause at the throne of God, we, too, may enter with Jesus into the innermost sanctuary when on our knees in solitude and silence we study His marvellous prayer for us, and thus learn what our dying Lord most desired for His followers.

The Prayer of Consecration. In the very beginning we learn the secret of prevailing prayer. Ere He prefers a single request for the great work He has begun or for those workers to whom He must intrust its completion, Jesus consecrates Himself. The hour had come for Him to offer Himself as the living Sacrifice for sin. Many times had the glory of God shone forth upon the altar, that the people might know that the sacrifice was acceptable. Thus Jesus besought the Father to glorify the Son, only that He might glorify the Father. After laying the gift of His own consecration on the altar, the Great High Priest presents His completed work to the Father. What a wonderful record of obedience it is! "I have glorified Thee on the earth; I have finished the work which Thou gavest Me to do; I have manifested Thy name unto the men which Thou gavest Me out of the world; I have given unto them the words which Thou gavest Me." And may not all who have been obedient to the Father's will approach God with a like confidence?

A Solemn Presentation. All has been laid on the altar of sacrifice—an altar made glorious by the costly gifts of our Lord, who placed thereon the royal diadem of the Prince of Glory in exchange for a crown of thorns; the dignity of the Son of God for the shame of a malefactor; the absolute authority of Divine right for the helplessness of One nailed to the cross.

The utter unselfishness of that prayer is manifest in every line. His first thought after His own consecration is made, is of them for whose sake He has consecrated Himself, and whom, as the Great High Priest, He now presents to the Father. Jesus presented His disciples as having belonged to God, even before they sought and followed the Master. "Thine they were and Thou gavest them Me." While they were yet simple Galilean peasants, mending their own nets, sailing their own fish boats and tending their own business, they belonged to God and owed allegiance to the Almighty Ruler as much as after they became professed followers of the Master. Their greatness and the claim which Jesus preferred in their behalf was that they had received His words and Himself as coming from the Father and they believed that the Father had sent Him. Surely our Lord is glorified in all followers of His who so truly accept Him.

His Greatest Desire. The soul of the Master is consumed with one great desire. He has seen them at strife with each other for the chief place; He has noted the absence of real love for each other and the lack of fellowship among the disciples. Unless they cast aside all dissension, division and strife and self-seeking, they would utterly fail in the building of a united Kingdom of God, therefore He prays, "Holy Father, keep through Thine own name those whom Thou hast given Me, that they may be one as We are."

Throughout the prayer for His disciples, this oneness is the ever recurrent thought. It is the golden link by which our Lord would bind His followers. "That they all may be one; as Thou, Father, art in Me and I in Thee, that they also may be one in us; that they may be one, even as We are One."

The Joy of Discipleship. Jesus wanted His followers to know the joy of Christian living. They were to be not only the salt but sunshine of the world. Jesus did not like long faces. Just as there was one source of unity, so there is only one real fountain of joy in the world, a fountain which bubbles with refreshing joy when every stream of pleasure and river of happiness has dried up in the world; a fountain of joy whose waters are as inspiring in helpless old age as in youth; a fountain that will bubble in the dungeon as well as in the pleasant plains of life; and Jesus prays that in the heart of every follower of His there may be this fountain. He would have His own joy fulfilled in His disciples.

Safe Keeping. It used to be thought that to fall a prey to contagious disease was a visitation of God, but now we know it is an evidence of previous ill health and of impure blood on the part of the victim. Science even declares that the man who has a sufficiency of healthy white cells in his blood may dwell in the yellow fever district with impunity and meet the dreaded cholera without fear; Jesus desired spiritual health for His followers. He might have taken His disciples with Him to glory, but the world had need of them, just as the world of today has need of healthy, wholesome, Christian character. Therefore He does not pray the Father to take them out of the world, or even for their retirement to the cloister, but He asks that the Father shall give them such spiritual health that they may live in the world and minister to sin-sick souls without infection, and that they be kept from evil.

He Prays for Us. With one bold sweep Jesus pushed aside the curtain of the centuries. The circle widened until it included every follower of His, through all the ages to come. Into that upper room He summoned you and me, and we may well bow the head and strain the ear to catch the burden of that prayer for us. He prays for the sanctification and perfection of His disciples. We are everywhere confronted by work half finished, but the great Architect of souls, leaves no work half done. Jesus would have every follower of His stand forth a completed work. He has shared with them the glory given Him by the Father, and His marvelous love would reach even beyond this earth. He asks that we who are His may be with Him in His Heavenly Home and behold and share His glory. And He ever liveth to make intercession for us!

Quiz. 1. For whom did Jesus pray? 2. What is His first desire? 3. What special requests did He make? 4. What great blessing does He desire for us?

Seed Thoughts. 1. The Christian world may well listen when Jesus prays. 2. All true prayer is grounded on concentration. 3. When all Christ's followers are one, the devil may well tremble. 4. Jesus wants our lives to witness for Him. 5. His love extends beyond Calvary to Heaven. 6. A heart bursting with love is the fruit of union with the true Vine.

MARGARET WINTRINGER.

JESUS IN GETHSEMANE.

And he cometh unto the disciples, and findeth them

and saith
unto Peter,
What, could ye not watch
with me
one hour?

and

that ye enter
not into the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak. He went away again the second time, and prayed, saying, O my Father, if this cup may not pass away from me, except I drink it, thy will be done. And he came and found them

for their eyes were heavy.
And he left them,
and

again, and prayed the third time, saying the same words. Then cometh he to his disciples, and saith unto them, Sleep on now, and take your rest: behold, the hour is at hand, and the Son of man is betrayed into the hands of sinners.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 2 6:36-45; MARK 14:26-41; LUKE 22:39-45;
JOHN 18:1.

Prayer: O Saviour, Who in agony too great for us to fathom, didst face the awful sufferings and death which alone could pay the price of sin, be with us when our souls are wrung with anguish and when we are called upon to face overwhelming trials. Thou, who hast so suffered, canst enter with deepest sympathy into our griefs and sorrows. Help us to pray, as Thou didst, "Not my will, but Thine, be done." Amen.

" 'Tis midnight; and on Olive's brow
The star is dimmed that lately shone:
'Tis midnight; in the garden now,
The suffering Saviour prays alone.

" 'Tis midnight; and for others' guilt
The Man of Sorrows weeps in blood;
Yet He that hath in anguish knelt Is not forsaken by His God."
—William B. Tappan.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Friday, April 7, A. D. 30, between twelve and one o'clock. Place, the Garden of Gethsemane, at the foot of Olivet. Persons, Jesus, His eleven disciples, and an angel.

Scripture Setting: Jesus in Gethsemane. His foreknowledge of His loneliness and the desertion of His disciples, Mark 14:27, 50; Isa. 53:3, 6. The culmination of His sorrow, John 12:27; Matt. 26:37; Luke 22:44; Heb. 5:7. His desire to do His Father's will, Matt. 26:39, 42, 44; John 4:34; 5:30; 6:38. Heavenly comfort was His, as it had been in the past, Luke 22:43; 3:22; Matt. 4:11; 17:5; John 12:28. We may learn from Him how to pray in trouble, Matt. 6:10.

Life and Conduct Setting: "In prayer and retirement Christ had prepared Himself for the beginning of His public ministry, and in prayer and retirement He prepared Himself for the terrible closing scenes of His earthly life." 2. This scene in Gethsemane shows us that in trial Christ turned to His Father and not from Him, that through prayer He sought to learn His Father's will, and that strength and comfort came to Him from this communion. 3. Christ acknowledged the omnipotence of God in His prayer, "All things are possible to Thee," and He yielded His will to that of His Father. 4. We learn from Christ's agony how heavy was the burden of our sins which was laid upon Him, and at how fearful a price was our salvation bought. 5. The presence of the angel not only brought physical and spiritual strength to our Saviour but also convinced Him that the cup could not pass from Him.

JESUS' MIDNIGHT HOUR.

The Walk to Gethsemane. After the hours spent together in that upper room, when Jesus had striven to prepare His disciples for His approaching death, and when He had partaken with them of the Last Supper, which should in the future recall to their minds His dying love, He led them out into the night. Here and there lights burned in the houses where the paschal lamb was being eaten, while He, the Lamb of God, was moving on to His sacrificial death. Through the eastern gate and down the hill went Jesus and His eleven disciples—the men who loved Him, and yet who had so failed to grasp the meaning of the work He had come to do, and the Kingdom He was sent to establish. Above their heads shone a full moon and its light silvered the waters of the little brook Kidron, over which they passed.

The Beginning of the Conflict. Near the base of Olivet, Christ turned aside into a garden, or orchard, where the thick branches of great olive trees cast heavy shadows. 'Twas a spot beloved of the Master, where He had often come for prayer and retirement. The calm and peace which had been His throughout the long hours of the evening now forsook Him. For His disciples alone had He thought, as He strove to strengthen them for the ordeal before them.

But now at last His thoughts turned upon Himself, and upon His awful fate which was so fast approaching. But He would not have His disciples witness His agony. Near the entrance of the garden, He turned to them and said, "Sit ye here while I go and pray yonder."

He felt the need of human companionship, however, and so He took with Him His nearest and dearest, Peter, James and John, who alone had witnessed His hours of power and glory, when He raised to life the daughter of Jairus, and when He was transfigured before them, and with them He went on into the darker recesses of the garden. But soon He could not bear the presence of even these loved disciples. He must face His supreme hour of trial alone. But it would comfort and sustain Him to know that they were near, so He said, "My soul is exceeding sorrowful, even unto death: tarry ye here and watch with Me."

Not My Will. He went forward a short distance to a spot where the interlaced branches shut out the glinting moonbeams and there He knelt in prayer. Soon the awful weight of His woe overcame Him and He fell on His face and prayed in agony, "O My Father, all things are possible unto Thee: if Thou be willing, let this cup pass from Me." There was a moment's pause and then from the white lips came the words, "Nevertheless, not as I will, but as Thou wilt."

"Abba Father, my Father," He said, and

CHRIST IN GETHSEMANE

BY HOFMANN

After the passover feast and institution of the Sacrament, Christ and His disciples wandered forth into the Mount of Olives to a place called Gethsemane. It was in the night, and Christ selected three disciples, Peter and the two sons of Zebedee, to go a few steps aside, where He prostrated Himself in prayer, and looked toward Heaven, saying: "If it be possible, let this cup pass from Me; nevertheless, not as I will, but as Thou wilt." Going back to his disciples He found them asleep and said to Peter, "Could ye not watch with Me one hour?" "Watch and pray, lest ye enter into temptation."

The picture by Hofmann is simple but effective. Christ lifts His noble face toward the darkened heavens, while a ray of light breaks through the clouds flooding His figure with light. The attitude is one of grace, but all the same impressive. A little way in the background sleeping men are vaguely visible, and the city looms up on the far-away height.

Here is a revelation of human nature mingled with Divine nature. Christ as God had no occasion to feel distress, or ask to be helped in His hour of trouble. Neither had He need of human sympathy. But He came to earth as a man subject to the laws of human life. This pleading prayer proves the actuality of His human side. He felt the pains of His coming torture as a man. He felt the seeming neglect of His disciples, who could sleep while He suffered.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

CHRIST IN GETHSEMANE

it is the first time we know of His using this personal term. Even in this hour of supreme struggle, He was conscious that His Father was near Him and He desired to do His will.

The Burden of Our Sins. But the burden seemed almost greater than He could bear, the cup too bitter for Him to drink. It was not only death from which he shrank, though He was a young Man, only thirty-three, in the prime and vigor of His beautiful manhood, and He would fain live longer; it was not alone the thought that the work He came to do seemed unaccomplished, for how few believed in Him, how limited His sphere of action had been—He would like to see the fruit of His labors; it was not alone the foreknowledge of His terrible sufferings which were so fast approaching, though the thought of the betrayal of Judas, the denial of Peter, the desertion of all His followers, the unjust trials, the terrible cruelties and insults, and the awful and ignominious death upon the cross must have overwhelmed Him; but it was sin which bowed Him to the ground. Those whom He had come to tell of His Father's love had spurned the message of salvation and would put the Messenger, God's own Son, to death. In Jerusalem, the city of His people, the city He so loved, would He be condemned to the shameful death of the cross. And not the sins of His countrymen alone did He bear, in that black hour, but the sins of the whole world were laid upon Him, and it was these that overwhelmed Him and made His sweat as it were great drops of blood falling down to the ground.

Human Help Fails Him. At last He could bear the agony no longer. He staggered to His feet and sought His friends, thinking He would gain help and comfort from their companionship. But, alas! they had failed Him in His hour of need, though it was the first personal request He is known to have made of them. Instead of watching with Him in His agony, they had yielded to their fatigue and He found them asleep.

Was it a presage of the awful loneliness which was soon to be His, when, deserted by His followers. He must face His foes alone! Reproachfully He spoke to Peter, who had so loudly and vehemently proclaimed his willingness to die with Him, "Simon, sleepest thou? couldst thou not watch with Me one hour?"

Then, seeing how they all started up from their sleep, and how pained they looked because they had failed to do as He requested, His heart was filled with tenderness for them. He excused their fault, but He desired to warn them of the danger of disloyalty to Him. "Watch and pray," He said, "that ye enter not into temptation: the spirit indeed is willing, but the flesh is weak." He returned a second time and found them sleeping.

The Victory Won. Again He went away and again He repeated the prayer of perfect submission to His Father's will. And as in the hours of temptation and trial in the wilderness, at the beginning of His career, He had met and conquered the powers of darkness in a threefold battle, so now, at the close of His life, He was thrice victorious when assailed by fiercest temptation and peril—temptation to assert His own desires against the will of His Father, and peril of failing to pay the full penalty of sin.

Angelic Ministrations. But the victory won after such a terrible struggle left Him exhausted almost to the point of death, and now, as in the wilderness, the tender Heavenly Father saw the human need of His well-beloved Son and sent an angel from Heaven to strengthen Him. Peter and the others had failed Him, but with this Heavenly succor, Christ could meet the awful trials which lay before Him. He returned to His sleeping disciples, but He no longer needed their help. During all the long hours of suffering which followed this lonely vigil, the Saviour never again showed a trace of weakness. With perfect calmness and majestic self-control, did He meet His enemies because, in Gethsemane, He had conquered outward foes and inward fears and had come into complete submission to His Father's will.

Quiz and Study. 1. What is the meaning of Gethsemane and why was it so called? 2. What is its present significance? 3. What was symbolized by the cup which Christ prayed might pass from Him? 4. Give passages of Scripture where cup is used as a symbol? 5. What is Christ's first recorded prayer? 6. When does the Bible tell us that He spent the whole night in prayer? 7. When did He pray for us? 8. When did He pray for His enemies? 9. When did angels appear to tell of Christ or to be with Him? 10. In what verse of the Psalms is the help of angels promised to us?

Practical Truths. 1. We shall be given strength to endure suffering and trial if, like Christ, we meet them with faith in our Father and perfect submission to Him. 2. "The Christian's conflict is illustrated in Christ's experience in Gethsemane; the battle between the willing spirit and the weak flesh; the armament, prayer; the victory, calm acquiescence in the Divine will." 3. From the agony which Christ endured, we may more vividly realize the awfulness of sin, and should feel a deeper gratitude because our Saviour paid its penalty for us. 4. "The cup of sorrow, which Christ drank, becomes the cup of our salvation. To Him it was wrath, to us it is mercy." 5. The calmness and serenity which Christ displayed throughout His trial and execution were only won through the hours of agony in the solitude of the garden; so periods of seclusion and prayer will yield strength to us.

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

JESUS BETRAYED.

And immediately, while he yet spake, cometh

one
of the twelve,
and
with him a great

from the chief

and
the

And he that betrayed him had given them a token, saying, Whomsoever I shall kiss, that same is he; take him, and lead him away safely. And as soon as he was come, he goeth straightway to him, and saith, Master, master; and

And
they

and took him.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 26:47-56; 27:3-5; MARK 14:43-50; LUKE 22:47-53; JOHN 18:2-12.

Prayer: Our hearts are torn with grief, O loving Saviour, as we read that all Thy disciples forsook Thee and fled. We know they loved Thee. We have read how boldly they announced that they would die for Thee. Keep us from a similar sin,—a cowardly desertion of Thee. Help us to search our hearts and, realizing our weakness, may we rely on Thee alone for strength in our hour of trial.

Keep us close to Thee, and may it be our highest joy and greatest pride to be known as Thy followers. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"By the thorn-road and none other,
Is the Mount of Vision won;
Tread it without shrinking, brother:
Jesus trod it,—press thou on."

—S. Johnson.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Friday, April 7, A. D. 30, between one and two o'clock a. m. Place, the Garden of Gethsemane. Persons, Christ and His twelve disciples, the temple-guard and their captain, and the Roman soldiers.

Scripture Setting: A study in conspiracy and betrayal. Christ, Matt. 12:14; Mark 3:6; John 5:16, 18; 10:39; 11:53; Matt. 26:14-16, 47-49. Esau, Gen. 27. Joseph, Gen. 37. Uriah, 2 Sam. 11. David, 2 Sam. 15. Amassa, 2 Sam. 20:9, 10; 1 Kings 2:5. Mordecai and the Jews, Esther 3. Daniel, Dan. 6. Paul, Acts 23:12-15.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Judas' treachery and baseness reaches its height when he betrays his Master with a kiss. 2. His remorse leads not to repentance but to self-destruction. 3. Christ's power is shown over both Jews and Romans, when the soldiers fall to the ground before Him; a proof that He voluntarily surrendered Himself to His enemies. 4. Peter's impulsiveness is shown in his one rash blow given in Christ's defense, but this blow, unauthorized by his Master, does more harm than good. 5. Jesus is deserted, in His hour of trial, by all His disciples, though, relying upon their own strength, they had so confidently asserted that they were ready to die with Him. 6. Christ's last act before His hands are bound is an act of mercy to one of His enemies.

THE TREACHERY OF A FRIEND.

The Armed Band. After leaving his Master and the disciples in that upper room, Judas had hastened to the high priest and had told him that Jesus could be taken safely that night. The priests had feared a revolt of the people, if they attempted to seize Jesus openly, as there were in the city many Galileans who were devoted to Him. But they agreed with Judas that in the darkness He might quietly be made a prisoner. Therefore the temple-guard and also soldiers from the Roman garrison were quickly dispatched with Judas to arrest Jesus. The Jews carried staves or clubs, while the Romans were armed with swords. All bore torches or lamps, fastened to long poles, for though the moon shone brightly, they were prepared to search for Jesus, if He were in hiding. This armed band was quite a large one, for it was not known how great a force Jesus could summon to His aid.

Judas' Treachery. Shortly after Jesus had returned from His third communion with His Father, He heard the tramp of feet. But instead of attempting to conceal Himself from His foes, He said to Peter, James and John, "Arise, let us be going: behold he is at hand that doth betray Me."

The four then walked towards the entrance to the Garden where the other disciples had been left. These, also, were found sleeping but Jesus awoke them and then awaited Judas who came a little in advance of his band. As he approached, Jesus addressed him, "Friend," (did not the loving word awaken shame in his heart?) "do that for which thou art come."

But Judas had arranged to give a dastardly signal. "Whomsoever I shall kiss," he had said, "that is He; take Him and lead Him away safely." Now stepping forward he threw his arms about Jesus and with the words, "Hail, Master," he kissed him several times. "Judas," cried Jesus, "betrayest thou the Son of Man with a kiss!" Ah, how the words must have stung the traitor!

Christ's Overpowering Majesty. Jesus would not be thus pointed out to the soldiers. He would give Himself to them. He, therefore, stepped forward and said, "Whom seek ye?" "Jesus of Nazareth," was the reply. "I am He," calmly answered Jesus.

But at the words the soldiers fell back and many of them prostrated themselves upon the ground. So majestic was Christ's form—such a wonderful light shone from His face that in awe they fell before Him. Surely this was some great King, instead of the criminal whom they had been sent to apprehend. Again He questioned, "Whom seek ye?" And once more came the reply, "Jesus of Nazareth."

Then said Jesus, "I have told you that I am He: if, therefore, ye seek Me, let these go their way." Even in His hour of peril, His thoughts turned lovingly to His disciples and He strove to secure their safety.

His Voluntary Surrender. The Roman captain now stepped forward and laid his hand upon Jesus. "Lord," cried the disciples, "shall we smite with the sword?"

Without waiting the reply, impetuous Peter, longing to defend the Master he so loved, struck heavily at the servant of the high priest. The man attempted to evade the blow but the sword descending cut off his right ear. "Put up thy sword, Peter," said Jesus, "for all they that take the sword shall perish with the sword." Then He added: "Thinkest thou that I cannot pray to My Father and He shall even now give Me more than twelve legions of angels? But how then shall the Scriptures be fulfilled that thus it must be?"

No, He would not ask Divine help in His need. He would drink His cup to its bitter dregs for thus only could He accomplish His work and save mankind.

His Act of Mercy. The soldiers now came forward to bind Him, but He said, "Suffer ye thus far," and reaching out His hand, He touched the one whose ear had been severed and healed him. The last act of those loving hands before they were bound and the last miracle which Christ performed was one of mercy to His enemies.

His Protest Against His Arrest. As He was being roughly bound like a criminal, He said: "Are you come out, as against a thief, with swords and staves to take Me? I sat daily with you in the temple, teaching, and ye stretched not forth your hands against Me," that is, "I have done no wrong, nor have I tried to escape; why am I treated like a base criminal?" "But," He added, "this is your hour and the power of darkness."

He is Forsaken by His Disciples. The disciples who had been suddenly aroused from sleep had appeared dazed and panic stricken, and now they all forsook Jesus and fled. Is it not the saddest part of the story? How short a time before had they declared that they would die with Him, and now, at the first moment of danger, they all left Him. How saddened and pained Jesus must have been by their desertion. It had been a terrible experience to have Judas, who had been constantly with Him for three years, turn against Him and betray Him in a dastardly way. But to have all the others, even Peter, James and John, His three nearest and dearest, leave Him! Ah, what crushing loneliness and grief must have been His! Bound and surrounded by soldiers, He was led away to the house of Annas.

Judas' Remorse. And Judas, the traitor—shall we follow him and see the result of his treachery? When he saw his Lord not only in the hands of His foes but condemned by them to death, then awful remorse seized him. Had he even then sought his Master, where He stood bound in the midst of His enemies, and thrown himself at His feet, begged for forgiveness, can we doubt that he, too, would have heard the loving words, "Son, be of good cheer; thy sins be forgiven thee?"

But no such thoughts came to Judas. His remorse drove him headlong to destruction. He determined to put an end to his miserable existence. First, however, he must get rid of the silver which scorched his hands and his soul. O the awful irony of each piece! On one side it bore an olive branch and on the other a censor, symbols of peace and prayer, and on it was the superscription, "Jerusalem the Holy," and this money he had been given to sell his Lord!

The Silver Returned. Rushing to the temple he cried out, "I have sinned in that I have betrayed innocent blood!"

Did he hope for help and sympathy? Did he think he might be shown a way in which he could expiate his crime? He had come to the wrong persons. Coldly the priests turned from him, the traitor whom they despised, though they had made use of him. "What is that to us?" they said. "See thou to that."

Crazed by their indifference and scorn, Judas stood for a moment irresolute. Then he felt the silver in his hand. That at least they should have again. Flinging it upon the marble pavement, he rushed from the temple.

Judas' Awful Death. Out of the city gate he fled, down into the Valley of Hinnom. Across the valley he went and up the steep sides of the mountain. Here jagged rocks rose perpendicularly and perhaps a stunted tree might here and there be seen. At last he was alone and now he would put an end to his torture. He unwound his girdle and tying it about his neck, he fastened the end to a branch of a tree. Then he threw himself from the rock upon which he had been standing. But the girdle gave way and he was precipitated upon the jagged rocks far below. Thus perished the man who through all time bears the awful stigma of having betrayed his Lord and Master, Jesus Christ.

Quiz and Study. 1. Describe the government of Jerusalem at this time. 2. What garrison was there? 3. Give a Scripture prophecy concerning Christ's sufferings. 4. Give a Scripture prophecy of the desertion of His followers. 5. Of what has Judas' name become a synonym? 6. What man stabbed his friend and caused him to say, "This was the most unkindest cut of all"?

Practical Truths. 1. Judas' plans succeeded, but the success of bad plans is the worst of failures. 2. Treachery to friendship injures most deeply the traitor himself. 3. Those who profess to be Christians but who act in an unchristlike way are really traitors to Him. 4. It is the bad men in the church who do most harm to Christianity. 5. Though seemingly defeated, Christ showed Himself a King, so in life the apparent failure of a good man is often the highest victory. President McKinley's helpful and inspiring influence was even greater and more far-reaching through his death than during his life. 6. Even in His hour of trial, Jesus thought only of others, seeking to provide safety for His friends and healing the wound of His enemy. We, too, should seek

"A heart at leisure from itself

To soothe and sympathize."

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

CHRIST TAKEN CAPTIVE

BY HOFMANN

Again the artist Hofmann shows his finished and elegant art, although the subject is quite different. After the three times repeated prayer, the disciples still sleeping, Jesus cried out to them: "Rise, let us be going; behold, he is at hand that doth betray me." Then Judas and his band of men, with swords and staves, coming with the Jewish priests and elders, laid hands on him. Judas, who had betrayed his Master with a kiss, is standing on one side, the bag in his hand, cringing within himself, already conscience-stricken.

In the picture Christ marches with great dignity, although bound and led with a cord by a villainous-looking man, who carries a lantern. Behind, a soldier rudely pushes the Lord along, and two officials lead the group, looking back to see what is going on. Just in the background is an individual (John, perhaps) with distressed face and clasped hands, as if in great grief. Christ casts a reproachful glance toward the unfortunate Judas, and yet His expression is full of kindness. The soldiers bear arms, one has a torch, and they are all in helmets and armor. In the rear are Peter and another disciple with halos about their heads, and Peter still carries the sword with which he had attacked the servant of the high priest. The landscape is a fanciful picture of the Mount of Olives, serving as a good background and to balance the composition.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

CHRIST TAKEN CAPTIVE

JESUS BEFORE THE COUNCIL.

And they

away
to the

and with him were assembled all the

and the

And the chief priests and all the sought for witness against Jesus to put him to death;

and found none. For many bare false

against him, but their witness agreed not together. And there arose certain, and bare false witness against him, saying, We heard him say, I will destroy this temple that is made with hands, and within three days I will build another made without hands But neither so did their witness agree together.

MARK 14: 53, 55-59.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 26:57, 59-68; MARK 14:53, 55-65; LUKE 22:54, 63-71; JOHN 18:12-14, 19-24.

Prayer: O Christ, Thou who didst suffer for our sake, such terrible indignities and insults, fill our hearts with deepest gratitude and love to Thee. Help us like Thee to be patient under trial and calm in the midst of foes. May our love be shown in tender pity for all who are called to bear trial and suffering. Amen.

O Jesus, Man of Sorrows,
Sole Son of God, the King!
What language shall I borrow Thy boundless love to sing?
No mortal words can measure
The burdens Thou didst take,
Accepting pain as pleasure,
All for my sinful sake.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Friday morning, April 7, A. D. 30, between one and five o'clock. Place, The palaces of Annas and Caiaphas, at Jerusalem. Persons, Christ, Annas, Caiaphas, members of the Sanhedrin, officers and soldiers.

Scripture Setting: Prophecies Concerning Christ. The false witness, Psa. 27:12; 35:11. His silence against accusation, Psa. 38:13; Isa. 53:7. The mocking, Psa. 109:25. The insults, Psa. 35:15, 21; Isa. 50:6; 53:3; Lam. 3:30. His patience under suffering, Isa. 53:7. The plotting together of His enemies, Psa. 2:2; 31:13; 94:21. His vicarious suffering, Isa. 53:4-6, 12. Christ our example, 1 Pet. 2:21-23; Matt. 5:39.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The examinations of Christ by Annas, and by Caiaphas before the Sanhedrin were marked by haste, injustice and illegality. 2. Christ's innocence was proclaimed by the impossibility of finding those who could testify against Him. 3. Only by perverting His words could any accusation be brought. 4. Throughout these hours of trial, Christ preserved an almost unbroken silence, a silence which proclaimed His innocence better than any words could have done. 5. When questioned, He declared His Messiahship, so that His accusers should not be ignorant of the crime they were committing. 6. Later He bore the cruelty and insults of the soldiers without rebuke or resistance, thus fulfilling Isaiah's prophecy.

THE MOCK TRIAL.

Jesus a Prisoner. After His arrest, Christ was led down the hill from Gethsemane, across the bridge below which flowed the little brook Kidron, its waters silvered by the moonlight, and up to the city gates. Entering these the band proceeded quietly on its way. Few people were in the streets, as those who were not still worshipping at the temple were asleep in their beds. In the city there were many Galileans who had seen Christ's wonderful acts of power and mercy, and it was feared that these and others who loved and honored Him would create a riot if it became known that He had been taken a prisoner. So in silence the band proceeded on its way.

Jesus Before Annas. Not to the temple was the prisoner taken—that might have occasioned trouble—but to the house of Annas, in the upper town. This Annas, a man seventy years of age, had been the former high priest, and he still wielded great authority. Indeed, the present high priest, Caiaphas, his son-in-law, was completely under his influence. Much of Annas' immense fortune had been amassed from his temple revenues, so he regarded Christ with peculiar hatred because of his action in driving out the money changers and traders from that holy place.

To him Jesus was now brought, and we can fancy how his wicked eye gleamed as he saw the pale face, bloodstained garments and bound hands of the One whose power he had feared and whose teaching he hated. At last the Nazarene was in his hands. Quickly messengers were sent by him to summon the members of the Sanhedrin to the house of Caiaphas, that a trial might there be held. To be sure, such proceeding could not be legal, for, according to the Jewish laws, no trial could take place at night. But so fearful was Annas of a rising of the people in favor of the Prisoner that he decided there must be no delay.

Jesus Taken to Caiaphas. From Annas' house Jesus was led higher up the hill to the residence of Caiaphas. Here He waited until the counsellors and witnesses were summoned.

The Illegal Trial. In the brilliantly lighted council hall the members of the Sanhedrin were seated in a half circle upon red cushions, Caiaphas in the center and Annas beside him. Before them was brought the Prisoner, tall and fearless, His hands still bound in front of Him, although He had willingly surrendered to His captors and had offered no resistance since His arrest.

And the trial began. But what a trial! The Jewish criminal procedure was carefully planned to make conviction in a capital case difficult, and among the laws governing it were the following: Every prisoner must have witnesses to speak for him; he could not be compelled to speak against himself; he was to be considered innocent until proved guilty; no enemy could sit in the council to judge him; a testimony against him must be confirmed by two witnesses; the sentence could not be given until the day after the trial, nor the execution take place until the day after the sentence had been given. But having broken the law that a trial could not be held at night, it was easy to disregard all these others. It was determined before He appeared that He was to be found guilty." Caiaphas, himself, had recommended some time before this that it was expedient that He should die and all who were to judge Him were His enemies. But they would have at least a mock trial.

Jesus Before the Sanhedrin. Caiaphas began by asking Jesus about His disciples and His doctrines. To the former question Jesus made no reply. He would not incriminate His friends. To the latter He answered: "I have spoken openly to the world. I ever taught in the synagogues and in the temple, where all the Jews come together, and in secret have I said nothing." (How different His actions had been from theirs,—open speaking and nothing done in secret, in contrast to His arrest, made in the darkness and to this secret trial.) "Why askest thou Me?" He continued, "ask them which heard Me what I have said unto them; behold, they know what I said."

What a reasonable reply this was, but the officer who stood near Jesus, accustomed to see prisoners cringe before the high priest, could not endure the calm, assured manner of an equal, with which He had spoken. He struck Him a cruel blow and asked, "Answerest Thou the high priest so?"

But even this insult did not arouse Jesus to anger. Calmly He replied, "If I have spoken evil, bear witness of the evil, but if well, why smitest thou Me?"

But to this question He received no reply, nor was the officer reproved for the brutal blow he had given.

The Witnesses. And now the witnesses were summoned, but their testimony was worthless, farcical. One said one thing, the next another—but, two at length did make similar charges. The Prisoner had said He could destroy the temple and build it in three days. (Such was the garbled report of words He had once spoken.) Now at last the accusers had something, confirmed by two witnesses, which they could consider serious. Had He spoken against their temple? Did He threaten to destroy it?

To this charge, as to all others, Christ made no reply. He had seen from the first that the trial was a sham, a mockery; what good would denial of the accusations do? Caiaphas arose and approached Him. "Answerest Thou nothing?" he exclaimed. "What is it which these witness against Thee?"

But Jesus held His peace. His calm silence enraged the high priest. He would force Him to speak. Jesus Declares Himself to be the Messiah. "I adjure Thee," said Caiaphas, "by the living God that Thou tell us whether Thou art the Christ, the Son of God."

Now indeed the silence must be broken, for these men must know whom they had before them. When Peter had declared Him to be the Christ, the Son of God, Jesus had commanded him to reveal the wonderful truth to no one, but now it should be told. "I am," He replied to Caiaphas' question in a clear, ringing voice. Then desiring that all should know of the glory that was soon to be His, he added, "And ye shall see the Son of man sitting at the right hand of Power, and coming on the clouds of Heaven."

But the words only aroused the high priest to fury. Rending his clothes to show his horror, he exclaimed, "What further need have we of witnesses? Ye have heard the blasphemy; what think ye?"

With one voice the Sanhedrin pronounced Jesus worthy of death. Now the council was broken up, its members returning to their homes to snatch a few hours of slumber, while Jesus was left in the hands of the temple guards.

Jesus Insulted by the Soldiers. Ah, if we might only blot out the ensuing scene. Taken to the court yard below, Christ was there most cruelly treated by those brutal men. He was spit upon, and blow after blow was given Him, but He spoke no word. His calm silence angered the rough men about Him as it had Caiaphas. They would make Him speak, so they blindfolded Him and giving Him a blow, mockingly asked, "Prophecy unto us, Thou Christ, who is he that struck Thee?"

But calm, unmoved, He bore their gross insults and offered no word of remonstrance. He was oppressed and He was afflicted, yet He opened not His mouth. Ah, what wondrous patience and resignation did He display! And for us He suffered,—for us He bore this contumely and shame that we might receive pardon for our sins.

Quiz and Study. 1. Describe a Jewish trial. 2. In what particulars was that of Christ illegal? 3. What were the words Christ had spoken about the temple, which the false witnesses perverted? 4. What prophecy refers to Christ as the Son of man? 5. When, before this, does Christ refer to Himself thus? 6. Give other passages of Scripture which refer to the second coming of Christ. 7. Give the Levitical law which declared blasphemy deserving of death. 8. What prophecy foretold the silence of Christ under accusation? 9. What commandment that He had given His disciples did He, Himself, thus illustrate?

Practical Truths. Though Christ was arrested and tried in secret, the crime could not be hidden; secret faults shall be revealed. 2. Annas and Caiaphas were influenced by hatred in their judgment of Jesus but their anger fulfilled the prophecy that the wrath of man shall praise Him. 3. By their act Christ's enemies unwittingly assisted in making true His words, which the witnesses perverted, for even bad men carry out the plans of God. 4. "Silence is deep as eternity, speech shallow as time. In the midst of exasperating circumstances, Christ answered 'never a word.' He who keepeth his tongue, the same is a perfect man." Carlyle. 5. That Christ's silence was caused by no cowardly fear is evidenced by His courageous declaration of His Messiahship. 6. Cruel treatment of others betokens a base and depraved nature. 7. By His patient submission to pain and insult, Christ has left us an example that we should follow "in His steps."

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

PETER'S DENIAL.

But he denied, saying, I know not, neither understand I what thou sayest. And he went out into

and the cock crew.
And a saw him again, and began to say to them that stood by, This is one of them. And he it again.

And a little after,
they said again to Peter, Surely thou art one of them: for thou art a Galileean, and thy speech agreeth thereto. But he began to curse and to swear, saying, I know not this man of whom ye speak. And the second time the

And Peter called to mind the word
that

Before the cock crow twice, thou shalt deny me thrice.
And when he thought thereon, he

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 26:58, 69-75; MARK 14:54, 66-72; LUKE 22:54-62; JOHN 18:15-18, 25-27.

Prayer: O loving Saviour, Make us true to Thee. Keep us from denying Thee by word or by silence. Thou, who hast so loved us that Thou didst suffer untold agony for our sakes, fill our hearts with such love for Thee that to all about us we may be known as Thy faithful disciples. Amen.

"In the hour of trial,
Jesus, plead for me;
Lest by base denial,
I depart from Thee;
When Thou see'st me waver,
With a look recall,
Nor for fear or favor Suffer me to fall."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Friday morning, April 7, A. D. 30, 2 to 3 o'clock. Place, court of Caiaphas' palace. Persons, Christ, Peter, John, maid and men servants.

Scripture Setting: A Study in Friendship. Qualities of friendship, Prov. 17:17; 18:24; 27: 6, 9, 17; John 15:13. A friend who proved a traitor, Matt. 26:47-50. A friend who proved a coward, Matt. 26:70, 72, 74; but who repented, Matt. 26:75; and became true to the death, Acts 4:13, 18-20; 5:27-33. A disloyal friend, 2 Sam. 15:12, 31; 16:20-23; Psa. 41:9; 55:12-14. A self-sacrificing friend, Ex. 32:30-32. A faithful friend, Ruth 1:16, 17. A man of many friends, Acts 20:36-38; Rom. 16. Three friends of Jesus, Luke 10:38, 39; John 11:3, 11, 33-36; 12:1-8. A friend of God, James 2:23; Gen. 12:1-4; 18; 22:12. A wonderful friend, 1 Sam. 18:1, 3; 19:1-7; 20; 23:16, 17; 2 Sam. 1:26. The perfect Friend, John 15:13-15.

Life and Conduct Setting: The central thought in this story is Peter's cowardice which led him to deny his Lord. The steps which led to the denial were these: 1. He had over-confidence in his own strength. 2. He struck an unnecessary and unbidden blow. 3. He forsook Jesus and fled. 4. He followed afar off. 5. He sat among the enemies of Jesus. 6. Christ's arrest may have led him to fear he, too, would be taken prisoner. 7. Jesus' inhuman treatment at the hands of His persecutors added to Peter's terror. The denial was marked by its repetition and emphasis. Though perhaps at first a sudden yielding to fear, it became a deliberate giving up of His Lord and it was emphasized even with oaths. But the crowing of the cock recalled to Peter's mind his Master's words and a look from Jesus aroused him to a consciousness of his guilt. His repentance, shown in his bitter tears, was deep and lasting.

DENYING ONE'S DEAREST FRIEND.

Following "Afar Off." We have seen that when Christ was taken bound from the Garden of Gethsemane, all the disciples forsook Him and fled, lest they, too, should be made prisoners. But two of them, Peter and John, seeing that they were not pursued, followed afar off. What thoughts must have surged through their minds! Their Master, bound as a prisoner, and taken to be tried for His life!

Keeping in the shadow of walls and houses, and out of sight of Christ's guards, the two disciples went to the house of Annas. After the short delay there, they followed their Master to the palace of the high-priest. This palace was built about an interior, quadrangular court, which was entered from the street by an arched passage. A heavy door, or gate, admitted beasts of burden to the court, and in this large gate was a smaller wicker one for the admission of people. A porter or portress attended to the opening of this gate.

As Christ and His guards passed through this entrance, John, who was known to the high priest, entered with them, but Peter, being unacquainted, was shut out. When, however, John reached the inner court, he perceived that Peter was no longer with him and he returned to the entrance, where he persuaded the portress to admit his friend. Jesus was taken to the judgment hall, which probably opened out from the court, and John followed Him thither, keeping as near his Master as possible, and glad to be known as His disciple.

Peter With Christ's Enemies. Not so Peter; instead of entering the judgment hall, he lingered in the court, fearing to be recognized as a follower of the Man who was now on trial for His life. Where was his boasted courage and loyalty? Alas, in the hour of danger, he proved himself a coward. But he would fain hear news of his Lord, even though he feared to stay near Him. In the center of the court a fire had been built, and about it were gathered the servants of the high-priest and the soldiers who had helped in capturing Jesus. Peter joined them and listened to the accounts of the arrest and examinations before Annas and Caiaphas, as these were given by those who had witnessed them. But the portress, seeing that Peter did not follow Jesus into the judgment hall, as John had done, pointed him out to a passing maid. "That is one of His disciples," she said; "he entered with the others."

The maid went up to Peter and said, "Thou, also, wast with Jesus the Galilean."

The First Denial. The sudden and unexpected remark threw Peter off his guard. There was a half question in the maid's statement which suggested a denial. Yielding to the temptation to save himself from danger, he replied, "I know not what thou sayest."

Thus a woman's question caused Peter to deny his Lord, and alas! this was not the only time he showed such cowardice.

The Second Denial. But now he longed to escape from the scrutiny of those about him. He could not leave the palace, as that would have been an acknowledgment of the charge, and, moreover, he desired to know the result of the trial. But he withdrew to the arched entrance, thinking that there he might be alone. 'Twas a vain hope, for immediately the portress turned to those about her and scornfully said, "This man, also, was with Jesus of Nazareth."

Angered at her words and still more at the tone in which they were uttered, but finding it impossible to change from his first position, Peter again denied his Lord. "I know not the Man," he asserted, and confirmed his statement with an oath.

The Third Denial. But he could not be as calm and indifferent as he desired to appear. His conflicting emotions—shame at his lack of loyalty and fear for himself—caused a restlessness which betrayed him. Once more he returned to the fire. Now, to divert suspicion, he joined in the conversation, asking questions and expressing opinions, but that which was done to allay suspicion, increased it, for his Galilean accent betrayed him.

The red glow of the fire threw its weird light on the bearded faces gathered about it. As Peter joined the others in discussing the trial, one and another leaned forward and studied his face and garb, which were quite unlike those of the Judeans about him and which showed him to be a stranger. Soon they began to question him, "Art thou not His disciple?" "Thou wert with Him." "Of a truth thou art one of them, for thy speech maketh thee known as a Galilean."

Then a kinsman of Malchus, the servant whose ear Peter had cut off, came up. "Yes, yes," he asserted, "I saw him in the garden." Turning to Peter, he asked, "Didst not thou give that blow to my kinsman?"

Now thoroughly frightened, Peter began to curse and to swear. "You are all mistaken, for I never saw this Man. I know nothing of Him."

The Look of Jesus. Peter's oaths did not convince his accusers, however; instead, they only made plain his fears. But their attention was now distracted from him by the people who thronged out of the judgment hall, for the hasty trial was over. The Prisoner, bound and conducted by guards, was led across the court to the guardhouse, there to be cruelly mocked and insulted. As He passed near Peter, the Lord turned and looked upon him. He did not indicate by any word or gesture how false His disciple had been, but hark!

The Cock Crows. And now, loud and distinct, could be heard the sound of a cock's crowing. Like a flash came to Peter's memory a scene which had taken place earlier that same evening. "All ye shall be offended in Me this night," Christ had said. But he had boldly replied, "If all shall be offended in Thee, I will never be offended."

How the Master's words now rang in his ears! "Verily I say unto thee, that this night, before the cock crow, thou shalt deny Me thrice."

He had not believed it possible. He remembered how he had answered, "Even if I must die with Thee, yet will I not deny Thee." And now he had again and again asserted that he had never known his Lord. Once more his memory brought him that look of Jesus. How it had penetrated to his very soul! There was no anger in it; only grief at his disloyalty, and love and pity for him. As he remembered it, Christ's words came to him, "Simon, Simon, behold Satan hath desired to have thee, that he may sift thee as wheat: but I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not."

And this Master who so loved him, who had prayed that he might resist temptation, whose forgiveness he had read in that wondrous look,—this Master he had denied!

Peter's Repentance. He rushed from the court into the blackness of the night. He must be alone, where he could give way to his grief; no solitude was possible in the city, so he hastened from the eastern gate. Down the hill he went and across the Kidron, retracing the steps he had taken a little earlier in the evening. At the Garden of Gethsemane he paused; here he could be alone. Among the deep shadows, where his Master had wept in agony, he, too, gave way to bitter weeping. Good cause had he for grief and remorse. He had fallen asleep when Jesus, longing for human sympathy, had asked him to watch with Him during His hours of agony; and now he had basely denied all knowledge of Him, and thus inflicted another sorrow upon his Master at the time when He was undergoing such terrible trials. But, like his Lord, he, too, won a victory in Gethsemane; his were not fruitless tears. From henceforth he was no longer Simon, the coward, but Peter, the rock, whose loyalty to his Master, in hours of greatest trial and peril, none might question.

Quiz. 1. Trace the steps in Peter's downfall. 2. How often did he deny his Lord? 3. What did Christ's look do for him? 4. Tell of Christ's thrice repeated question to him after the resurrection. 5. Give instances in his later life which proved that his repentance was true and sincere and that he was a changed man. 6. Give some of the qualities of true friendship. 7. Give instances in history of those who have endangered their own lives to be true to their friends.

Practical Truths. 1. Those who trust in their own strength often find that it fails them at a critical hour. 2. There is great danger in following Christ "afar off." 3. Cowardice leads to lies, disloyalty and other despicable sins. 4. Christ's love never fails us and His look will recall us to a consciousness of sin and will lead us to repentance. 5. Judas' remorse led to death, but Peter's repentance restored him to a better life. 6. "Peter denied Christ once and wept forever after it; we often deny Him, and never weep at all."—St. Augustine.

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

CHRIST REJECTED

BY BENJAMIN WEST

Benjamin West was American born, but he became court painter to George the III of England; also President of the British Royal Academy.

West's conception of this scene differs greatly from Munkacsy's, and the moment in the trial is not the same. Jesus was led into Pilate's judgment hall, but the Jews remained in the outer court for fear of defiling themselves at the moment of eating the passover. Pilate cross-questions the holy prisoner in the judgment hall, but finally takes him out to the multitude of the Jews, declaring that he found Him not guilty of any crime. But to please the people Pilate demanded whether he should release to them Christ or a famous criminal called Barabbas, as it was the custom to release some noted prisoner at the time of the passover, but the Jews said, not the Christ but Barabbas.

West has conceived a meek and lowly Jesus, not a proud, erect one. He stands wearing the crown of thorns they had plaited, and they are putting on Him, with mock humility, a royal robe and have thrust into His hands a reed in place of a scepter. They abuse Him and whip the crown of thorns into His head with the reedy scepter. Pilate comes out from the inner chamber, a fine, youngerly man with a characteristic Roman face, and he really pleads with the high priest in favor of Jesus. But the high priest stretches his arms in vehement expostulation, rejecting the suggestion that Christ should be the person released to them, while everybody pointed to Barabbas, some on the right hand calling for his release. There is a large gathering here, each one a character which may be studied. One among them seems to be John, the beloved disciple, who clasps his hands and looks earnestly on the scene. Behind him one weeps; another shakes his fists and looks ugly; again others cry out for the robber.

Many women, friends of Christ, look on sorrowfully. One prostrates herself pleadingly. On the left are workmen with spades, hammers and other tools getting ready the cross. All through the picture are touching incidents, as the little boy who rests his tender face on the soldier's strong arm; on the right a young person is weeping on an elderly woman's breast; two children in the balcony play together on the dangerous top of the wall. If examined carefully, each inch of the picture will present numerous interesting incidents.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

EDMUND WEST

CHRIST REJECTED

By Permission of the Pennsylvania Academy of the Fine Arts.

BENJAMIN WEST. 1738-1820.

"Answer me! What is thee doing, Benjamin?"

"N-nothing," stammered the boy.

"Show me what is in thy hand." Fearful that punishment would follow, little Benjamin West, then six years old, handed his Quaker mother a sheet of paper on which he had drawn a picture of his baby niece in the cradle. Turning with it to her grown-up daughter, she exclaimed, "Look daughter, I declare, he has made a likeness of little Sally."

"Who taught thee to draw pictures?" she asked the boy. "Nobody, I just made it up," he replied.

Encouraged where he had expected to be punished, he continued to surprise his parents by his skill in producing pictures of objects about him. Other painters had models and lessons. This boy, at six years of age, in the backwoods of Pennsylvania, without help of any kind, produced original work.

He was born of Quaker parents in Springfield, Pa., October 10, 1738, the youngest of a large family. At seven years of age he started to school. One day a year later, an Indian gave him some bits of red and yellow pigment such as they used to decorate their bodies.

The boy was delighted and ran home, breathlessly exclaiming, "Here mother, see what I got." This gave her an idea and she gave him a piece of indigo from her wash-tub. Thus he had the three primary colors.

At a loss for a brush, he cut the hair off the point of the cat's tail. This worked but did not last long and soon poor puss looked as if he had the mange.

Mr. Pennington, a relative of the family, from Philadelphia, having seen his attempts sent West a painting outfit of colors, brushes and canvas, and a set of six engravings.

One day, after receiving them, his mother found him in the attic when she supposed he was in school. From two of the engravings he had painted a composite picture that astonished her.

Forgetting to punish him for truancy; forgetting her Quaker reserve, she gathered the boy in her arms and kissed him, exclaiming; "O thou wonderful child." The picture was left just as it was. His mother said another touch would spoil it. Sixty-seven years later it was shown in the same room with his famous picture "Christ Rejected," and his tribute to his mother was, "My mother's kiss made me a painter."

At Mr. Pennington's next visit he took young West back with him to Philadelphia, where he lived until he was twenty-one, studying and earning money painting portraits. He then moved to New York, where he doubled the prices for his work and saved his money to go abroad. By this time his work was being talked about.

In 1760 he landed at Rome. News of his coming preceded him. A young man fresh from the wilds of America, of a queer religious sect, who began painting as a child prodigy, was coming to Rome to study art!

He spent three years studying in Italy, after which he went to England. George the Third was on the throne, and Oliver Goldsmith, David Garrick, Dr. Johnson and Sir Joshua Reynolds were then living.

His first exhibit of work in London brought him such a rush of orders that he refused an offer of £700 per year.

A pretty romance surrounds his marriage to Elizabeth Shewell, whose acquaintance he made during his college days in Philadelphia. He sent for his father to visit him in London and wrote Miss Shewell to come with his father, telling her on what vessel he sailed. Her brother, with whom she lived, saw the letter and locked her in an upstairs room till after time for the vessel to sail. Three young men, learning of the situation, gave her a rope ladder, which she concealed in her skirts and by which Miss Shewell descended from her room after dark. They assisted her to the vessel, which waited down the river for her till the next morning. The young men were Benjamin Franklin, Hopkinson, later one of the signers of the Declaration of Independence, and the third was afterwards first bishop of the Episcopal church in America.

A valued patron, Archbishop Drummond, introduced him to King George, and when he completed his picture, "Agrippina landing in the ashes of Germanicus" for the archbishop, the king sent for him and commissioned him to paint "The Departure of Regulus."

King George also commissioned him to paint the royal chapel at Windsor, and appointed him court painter at a salary of £1,000 per year, besides buying numerous of his works.

He and Sir Joshua Reynolds were fast friends. Together they founded the Royal Academy of Arts.

Naturally the great events of the Bible attracted him, and the success of his picture, "Christ Healing the Sick," led to his painting "Descent of the Holy Spirit," "The Inspiration of St. Peter," "Christ Rejected," "Christ Crucified" and "The Ascension."

After over fifty years of happy married life his wife died in 1817, and he followed her in 1820, and his body lies in St. Paul's Cathedral, in London, beside that of Sir Joshua Reynolds and Sir Christopher Wren.

JAMES BEALINGS.

JESUS BEFORE PILATE.

And Jesus

and the governor asked him, saying,
Art
thou
the

of the Jews? And Jesus said unto him, Thou sayest. And when he was accused of the chief

and elders, he answered
nothing.
Then
said unto him, Hearest thou not how many things they witness against thee? And he answered him to never a word; insomuch that the governor marvelled greatly. And Pilate, when he had called together the chief priests and the rulers and the

Said unto them,
Ye have brought this man unto me, as one that perverteth the people: and, behold, I, having examined him before you, have found no fault in this man touching those things whereof ye accuse him:
No, nor yet

for I sent you to him; and, lo, nothing worthy of death is done unto him.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 27:1, 2, 11-25; MARK 15:1-14; LUKE 23:1-24; JOHN 18:28-40.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, Help us to make the right choice. Keep us from the sin of choosing Barabbas, in whatever form the evil may be presented, instead of Thy dear Son. May we realize that we cannot shift the responsibility of our actions upon others and may we, therefore, always obey the dictates of our conscience. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"Once to every man and nation Comes the moment to decide,
In the strife of Truth and Falsehood,
For the good or evil side;
Some great cause, God's new Messiah,
Offers each the bloom or blight,—
And the choice goes on forever
'Twixt that darkness and that light."
J. R. Lowell.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Friday, April 7, A. D. 30, early in the morning. Place, The Sanhedrin hall, the judgment hall of Pilate and the balcony in front of his palace, and the palace of Herod. Persons, Christ, Pilate, Herod, the priests and Jewish people.

Scripture Setting: A Study of Pilate's Question, Matt. 27:22. Shall Jesus be a stumbling block, 1 Cor. 1:23; and a rock of offense, 1 Pet. 2:8; Matt. 13:57. Shall He be forsaken, John 6:66; despised, Isa. 53:3; and rejected, John 19:15. Or shall He be our Saviour and Redeemer, Isa. 60:16; our High Priest, Heb. 4:14, 15; and Mediator, 1 Tim. 2:5; our Way, Truth and Life, John 14:6; our King, 1 Tim.

6:15; our Master, John 13:13; our Shepherd, John 10:14; our Friend, John 15:14, 15; our Elder Brother, Rom. 8:14-17; and our Resurrection and Life, John 11:25.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Injustice and protracted suffering continued to be the marked features of Christ's trial. 2. Pilate and Herod both testified to His innocence. 3. Through a cowardly fear of the Jews, Pilate condemned Jesus and thus brought upon himself everlasting shame. 4. The blindness and fury of a mob was shown by the excited people who allowed themselves to be persuaded to choose Barabbas, a murderer, instead of Jesus, their best friend.

THE REJECTED KING.

Jesus on Trial. In the early morning, following the trial of Jesus, the whole council was convened to ratify the action of the previous night and to determine how to win Pilate's consent to His death. Pilate was the Roman governor, and to him, in the early morning, the Jews conducted Christ.

Though their hearts were filled with hatred and murder, they would not enter the palace lest they should be defiled, and thus debarred from a participation in the sacrifices which were to be offered that day. They therefore sent a message to Pilate, asking that he listen to their charges upon the "Pavement." This pavement, which received its name from the beautiful and rare colored stones with which it was paved, was a raised balcony, where cases were sometimes heard. When Pilate appeared and seated himself in the chair of exquisitely carved white ivory, he looked down upon the sea of faces beneath him. There were the priests with their hard faces and the excited multitude which had been attracted by the arrest of this well-known Preacher and Healer.

In the midst of the throng, surrounded by guards, was the Prisoner, calm and unmoved by the turmoil about Him, and yet showing in His face the signs of the suffering through which He had passed. "What accusation do ye bring against this Man?" inquired Pilate.

"We found Him perverting our nation," replied the Jews, "and forbidding to give tribute to Caesar, and saying that He, Himself, is Christ, a King."

While they spoke Jesus stood quietly and made no denial of their charges, so that Pilate wondered at His silence. "Answerest Thou nothing?" he asked; "hearest Thou not how many things they witness against Thee?"

But still no word came from the Prisoner's lips. Then Pilate determined to examine Jesus privately, and commanding that He should be taken into the judgment hall, he went to Him there.

Jesus Before Pilate. "Thou! Art Thou the King of the Jews?" he asked incredulously, for this Man, in His peasant attire, did not look as if he were one to make arrogant claims.

"Sayest thou this of thyself," asked Jesus in reply, "or did others tell it thee concerning Me?" That is, "Do you personally wish to know about Me, or are you simply repeating the words of others?"

Jesus would make no reply to His unjust accusers, but He would not refuse to answer Pilate if he wished to know the truth. "Am I a Jew?" was Pilate's contemptuous reply; that is, "would I have any personal interest in the affairs of the Jews? Thine own nation and the chief priests delivered Thee unto me; what hast Thou done?"

Then Jesus, seeing Pilate's desire to give a just decision, said, "My Kingdom is not of this world; if my Kingdom were of this world then would My servants fight, that I should not be delivered to the Jews; but now is My Kingdom not from hence."

How strange such words must have sounded to Pilate,—a Kingdom of another world! Why should he condemn a man for such a belief? "Art Thou a King, then?" he repeated.

"Thou sayest that I am a King" (or "I am indeed a King"), said Jesus. "To this end have I been born, and to this end am I come into the

CHRIST BEFORE PILATE

BY MUNKACSY

Following His arrest, Jesus was taken to the high priest's palace and questioned by the officials. The multitude which followed always cried out against Him. They dragged Him before Pilate the governor, whose imperial commission came from Rome. As Pilate was not a Jew, and in no way understood the people's prejudice, his aim was to please the multitude, while still seeking to ease his conscience, because he was afraid of this wonderful Man and dared not be severe with Him. He could find no crime in the Saviour. But the insistence of the Jewish priests and elders, and clamor of the multitude convinced him that it would be easier to let them have their own way, so he finally delivered the Saviour to them to be crucified.

Munkacsy, the artist, has rendered this scene with greater actuality than any of those artists whose work we have been considering. In the governor's palace Pilate sits in the judgment seat. He is represented as an overfed animal, who seeks to avoid trouble for himself because lacking in energy. Surrounding the governor are the Jewish officials, one of them making an impassioned address condemning the holy prisoner; another sits on a bench with a very self-satisfied air, approving of the speaker's words and shutting his mouth with that determination which says the Christ must be crucified. Others to the right and left are listening attentively or attempting to get in a word for themselves. They are imposing men in the rich garments of their class. In the multitude are various manifestations of human nature: the soldier doing police duty, holding the crowd back with his spear; the bellowing, excited man, with his arms in the air to attract attention; next him a quiet youth, interested in the proceedings; and beyond these another points and shouts.

Immediately contrasting with the still figure of the Saviour a young man frantically lays hold of Christ's garments and insults Him boldly. The one bit of sweetness in all this hatred is the beautiful young mother, holding her babe, whose pity is excited. She knows nothing of the value of the evidence, but would love to spare the man Jesus all this unpleasant experience. Christ stands calm, erect and independent; saying nothing, but using His piercing eyes. The carpet on the floor suggests a palace; the massive walls have carvings and paintings suitable to the place.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

CHRIST BEFORE PILATE.

MIHALY DE MUNKACSY. 1844-1900.

At a village fair in Hungary a company of strolling artists from Vienna caught sight of some decorated wooden chests exposed for sale by the village carpenter. Plenty of such wedding chests and linen chests had they seen in their travel from one country fair to another, and all of them more or less decorated after the current fashion of the country side. But these were different—they had a style, a touch. Curiously they asked who the author was. They were presented to a young farmer lad: a tall, broad-shouldered son of the soil, with an ambition to become a successful tailor, a taste for gay society and Hungarian wine, and for dancing and trifling with the peasant maidens of the place.

"You should be a painter. You should go to Vienna and study," said the strolling artists. "Come with us and we will take you to Buda Pesth, and see you started." And so, a friendly uncle arranging for his release from his master, Mihaly Lieb left the village.

Here there came the round of small things: the drawing of pictures on wood for the block cutters who illustrated for the printers the small and cheap books of the country side; the occasional painting from life, in very oily oil, the coarse features of some well-to-do small merchant or back street money-lender; the painting of a tavern sign; the patching and repairing of a dilapidated altar piece for the church around the corner—all such occupations by which the budding painter keeps his head sheltered during his period of study and probation.

Presently, by dint of self-denial, he had saved enough money to go to Dusseldorf and put himself under the master Adolf Knaus. At last, though still poor, he determined to set up his own studio. Bold in color, unusual and strong in treatment, his work was attracting the notice, not all kindly, of the critics. It was now he conceived the idea of "The Condemned," a subject so large that he had not the money to buy the canvas to paint it on, and for which, accordingly, he used the back of an old pew. Viewed by the Willstacks of Philadelphia before completion, it was forthwith purchased, and on its completion his patron insisted on its dispatch to the Paris Salon of 1870. Munkacsy did so with doubt, and fear of the fate of his picture at the hands of the critics. He knew them well enough to know their fear and hatred of anything unlike what they have been accustomed to praise. In a night he was famous. The picture had taken Paris by storm. From that day his fame was secure.

Finally purchased for $6,000, "The Condemned" was brought to New York.

Munkacsy's work began to be sought for. He grew prosperous. He was distinguished with knighthood in the order of the Iron Cross of Austria, and was made a chevalier of the French Legion of Honor. Sketching on the Rhine, he met the Baroness de Marches. It was a case of a very sincere, deep and honorable attachment, the end of which was the painter's marriage to the baroness some time after the death of her husband.

Upon leaving his native village for the world outside, the artist had dropped his family name, and changing the Hungarian Mihaly to Michael, had adopted that of his native village as a nom de guerre. Now famous and wealthy, there was a reversion to the boyhood name, with the French "de," as signifying "of": Mihaly de Munkacsy.

Other famous paintings by Munkacsy owned in America are "Kittens," "The Village Wrestler," "Milton Dictating Paradise Lost," and perhaps more famous than any, "Christ Before Pilate," owned by Hon. John Wanamaker of Philadelphia.

His magnificent house in the Avenue de Villiers in Paris, where he lived in luxurious style, was known among the artistic coteries of Paris as a brilliantly furnished museum of rare objects of art and handicraft.

In 1900, on the first of May, the strange dramatic history of Munkacsy's life ended with his death at the age of 56.

JAMES BEALINGS.

world, that I should bear witness unto the truth. Everyone that is of the truth heareth My voice.”

“The truth?” repeated Pilate. “What is truth?”

Jesus Declared Innocent. He left the only Man who could have answered his question without waiting for a reply, and going back to the balcony he spoke loudly, so that all might hear him. “I find no fault in this Man,” he said.

But the Jews were aroused to fiercer anger by his words. “He stirreth up the people,” they cried, “teaching throughout all Judea, and beginning from Galilee even unto this place.”

Jesus Sent to Herod. This answer suggested to Pilate a way by which he might escape condemning an innocent man to death. He therefore sent the Prisoner to Herod, the ruler of Galilee, but Jesus would neither answer his questions nor perform a miracle to gratify him. Enraged, Herod mocked and insulted Him, then sent Him back to Pilate.

Christ or Barabbas. Pilate now summoned the chief priests, rulers and people to appear once more before him and said unto them, “Ye brought unto me this Man, as One that perverteth the people; and behold, I, having examined Him before you, found no fault in this Man touching those things whereof ye accuse Him; no, nor yet Herod; for he sent Him back unto us; and behold, nothing worthy of death hath been done by Him. I will therefore chastise Him and release Him.”

But loud cries of “Away with Him! He is worthy of death,” were the only responses he received. Another expedient now occurred to him by which he might avoid unjustly condemning Jesus to death. At the passover it was customary to release a prisoner, whomsoever the Jews might choose. A certain Barabbas, who had led an insurrection against the Romans and who was both a robber and a murderer, was at this time in prison. Knowing that the chief priests had delivered Jesus for envy, and thinking that their hatred might not be shared by the people, Pilate turned to them and asked, “Ye have a custom that I should release unto you one at the passover, will ye, therefore, that I release unto you the King of the Jews?”

As Pilate asked the question, a servant appeared, bringing him a message from his wife. “Have thou nothing to do with that just Man,” she entreated him, “for I have suffered many things this day in a dream because of Him.”

We do not know the cause of her interest in Jesus; perhaps she had heard of His acts of love and mercy; perhaps some dear friend of hers had been helped by Him, or possibly she, herself, had seen and heard Him. Her message affected Pilate deeply and he determined to save the life of the Prisoner.

But the momentary interruption had given the priests time to pass in and out among the people and to tell them to ask that Barabbas and not Jesus be released. “Shall I release this Man unto you?” again asked Pilate.

“Not this Man,” cried the people, “but Barabbas.”

Crucify Him. “What shall I do then with Jesus, who is called the Christ?” asked Pilate.

Back came the awful answer, “Let Him be crucified.”

Then Pilate said unto them, “Why, what evil hath he done?”

But louder and more terrible became the cries, “Crucify Him! Crucify Him!”

And he said unto them the third time, “Why, what evil hath this Man done? I have found no cause of death in Him; I will therefore chastise Him and release Him.”

But his plea for mercy was answered by shrieks and yells of rage, “Away with Him! Crucify Him!”

Fearing that a tumult would be the result of any further delay, Pilate reluctantly yielded to the demands of the people. But he determined to free himself from the guilt of this sentence, which he knew to be an unjust one. Summoning a servant, he had water brought and washing his hands in the sight of the multitude, he said, “I am innocent of the blood of this righteous Man; see ye to it.”

Then answered all the people and said, “His blood be on us and on our children.”

Moments of Opportunity. To Pilate came the opportunity to give a just decision. He might have been known to history as the one who saved Jesus from His enemies. Instead the words, “suffered under Pontius Pilate,” in the creed have made him known to all Christendom as the one who condemned Christ to death. He hoped to escape the guilt by washing his hands but as the power to judge and to give decisions was vested in him, he could not thus free himself from responsibility.

To Herod, also, came the opportunity of befriending Jesus, but instead of embracing it, he cruelly mocked Him.

The people were allowed to choose between Christ, who had spent His life in loving service for them, and Barabbas, a robber and murderer, and they chose the latter.

Suggestive Words. “What shall I do with Jesus?” This question each must answer for himself. Shall I take Him as my Saviour, or shall I grieve His loving heart by turning from Him with indifference, and refusing to be known as His follower. 2. “I am innocent of the blood of this righteous Man.” Not by words or symbolic act could Pilate escape guilt, nor can we free ourselves from responsibility by putting the blame upon others. We are given freedom of choice, and for our own acts, we, ourselves, and not others, will be held accountable. 3. “I find no fault in Him.” Even Christ’s judge testified to the purity of His life. 4. “His blood be on us and on our children.” The words were spoken in excitement and anger but how terribly have they been fulfilled! Forty years after this, the temple and city of these Jews were laid in ruins, amidst scenes of unparalleled horror, and more than a million of them perished. Since that time this nation has been without a country and its people have often been subjected to bitter hatred and cruel persecution.

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

JESUS MOCKED.

And they

and

and

Then came Jesus forth, wearing and the purple robe. And Pilate

saith unto them,

And after that they had mocked him, they

from him, and put his own

and led him away to crucify him.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 27:26-31; MARK 15:15-20; LUKE 23:25; JOHN 19:1-16.

Prayer: We thank Thee, our Saviour, that the name of King, given Thee as a mockery and insult, is Thy true title. Be indeed King over our lives and may the knowledge of the suffering and indignities which Thou didst patiently endure for our sakes fill our hearts with such love and gratitude that we may ever be Thy loyal subjects. Amen.

"Oh Sacred Head, now wounded,
With grief and shame bowed down,
Now scornfully surrounded
With thorns, Thine only crown.

What Thou, my Lord, hast suffered
Was all for sinners' gain;
Mine, mine was the transgression,
But Thine the deadly pain."

J. W. Alexander, tr.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Friday, April 7, A. D. 30, from 7 till 8 a. m. Place, the judgment-hall and "pavement," or balcony, of Pilate's palace. Persons, Christ, Pilate, the chief priests and Jewish multitude, and the Roman soldiers.

Scripture Setting: Sharing Christ's Suffering. For His sake, Mark 13:9, 12, 13. The Apostles, Acts 5:18, 40, 41; Peter, Acts 12:3-6; James, Acts 12:2; Stephen, Acts 7:57-60. The early Christians. Acts 8:1, 3; Paul, Acts 13:50; 14:5, 19; 16:22-25; 21:13-31; 22:23; 2 Cor. 11:23-27. The saints, Rev. 7:14. Our privilege, Heb. 13:13; 1 Pet. 4:12-14; Rom. 8:17.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Christ patiently endured even the awful scourging that He might taste all human woes. Paul and others who endured this punishment could say

"No pain that we can share
But He has felt its smart."

2. The mockery and insult grieved Christ more from the awful depravity of the Roman soldiers, which they revealed, than from the physical pain they caused Him. 3. Christ's sufferings touched Pilate with pity, but awoke no sympathy in the hearts of His countrymen. 4. "Ecce Homo," the Man stands forth an object of indifference, hatred or scorn, or One who awakens passionate love and adoration. 5. "The Son of God" He had called Himself and never was He more truly God's Son than when He suffered for others all these indignities and insults for man's redemption. 6. The Jews made a final rejection of Christ and took upon themselves the awful guilt of His death.

THE THORN-CROWNED KING.

The Scourging. Failing in his different attempts to save his Prisoner, Pilate finally yielded to the demands of the Jews. He released Barabbas, who, as St. Luke tells us, for sedition and murder was cast into prison, and delivered Jesus to the will of His enemies. Before crucifixion, a prisoner was subjected to scourging. So terrible was this punishment that it was called "the intermediate death," and the Roman law forbade its being inflicted upon a Roman citizen. As Jesus endured this awful suffering, Pilate sat looking on, and the majesty of demeanor and patient submission of the victim must have impressed even his callous nature.

The Crown of Thorns. After the scourging, Jesus was taken into the Praetorium, or hall of judgment, where the whole band of Roman soldiers was gathered. Here, recalling Herod's treatment, they made mock of the title which had been given Him. "A King is He," they cried, "let us array Him as such."

The scarlet cloak of one of the officers was thrown about His bleeding shoulders and He was led to a raised place and made to sit upon this improvised throne. "Now He must have a crown," cried the brutal soldiers.

One of them cut some long twigs from a jagged thorn that grew in the palace garden and twined them into a wreath. This he put upon Jesus' head, pressing the cruel thorns into His brow. Another brought a reed and placed it in His hands for a sceptre. Then, one by one, the soldiers knelt before Him in mock reverence, saying, "Hail, King of the Jews," and as each one rose from his knees, he took the reed and struck Jesus on the head, driving the thorns deeper into His brow, or he spat in His face, the others laughing and jeering to see the Prisoner thus mocked. And Jesus bore all this pain and insult in silence, nay, more than this, we feel sure that instead of being angry with those cruel, wicked men, He prayed His Father to forgive them, for in Jesus' heart there was always love and not hate.

"Ecce Homo." After the soldiers had carried on their brutal play for some time, Pilate entered the room and seeing Jesus, pale, covered with blood and bowed from the scourging, he thought, "Surely even His enemies will think that He has borne enough suffering." Once more, therefore, he went out on the "Pavement," and said, "Behold, I bring Him out to you that ye may know that I find no fault in Him."

He motioned to the soldiers, and Jesus was led forth. About His shoulders was the scarlet cloak, while the cruel crown of thorns pressed His brow and the reed, the mock insignia of royalty, was in His hands. His form was bowed from the terrible scourging but in His face no anger or resentment could be traced; only patient suffering, and pity for those who had so cruelly treated Him. "Ecce Homo" ("Behold, the Man"), said the governor, pointing to Jesus.

But the only response was the awful cry, "Crucify! crucify!"

"But I find no fault in Him," reiterated Pilate.

"We have a law, and by that law He ought to die," shouted the multitude, "because He made Himself the Son of God."

The Son of God. At these words Pilate trembled, for the Romans believed that the gods did sometimes come down in the likeness of men. Had he not hesitated to condemn this man as he had never hesitated before? Had not his wife been warned in a dream concerning Him? He returned to the palace and ordered Jesus brought before him. "Who art Thou?" he eagerly asked. "Whence didst Thou come?"

But no answer came from those pale lips. Irritated, Pilate exclaimed, "Wilt Thou not speak? Knowest Thou not that I have power to release Thee or to crucify Thee?"

Then answered Jesus, "Thou wouldst have no power against Me except it were given thee from above: therefore they that delivered Me unto thee have the greater sin."

The Final Rejection. This reply troubled Pilate greatly, and again he sought to free this remarkable Prisoner, but the raging mob would listen to no appeal for mercy. "If thou release this Man," they shouted, "thou art not Caesar's friend; everyone that maketh himself a King speaketh against Caesar."

When he heard that his own interests were at stake Pilate hesitated. The Jews had complained of him once before, and Tiberius Caesar had taken their part. Another complaint and he might lose his office. This Man's freedom surely was not worth such a risk. Taking his seat on the balcony, he ordered Jesus brought before him. Pointing to the pitiable figure he said, "Behold your King."

"Away with Him! Away with Him! Crucify Him!" came the fiendish cries.

"Shall I crucify your King?" inquired the governor.

"We have no king but Caesar," was the reply of the chief priests.

Then the unjust judgment was pronounced and Jesus was delivered to the Jews to be crucified.

Illustrations. At the "World in Boston," I heard Miss Emily Wheeler, a missionary from Turkey, tell of an experience she had during the persecution of the Christians in that country. I give the incident in her own words as nearly as I can recall them. "As I was passing through the streets," she said, "a woman spit full in my face. The act was so unprovoked and so insulting that my hands clenched until the nails cut into my palms, drawing the blood. I could hardly wait to reach home to wash away the marks of this gross insult. Then the thought came to me, 'Thus was my Saviour treated,—so they spat upon Him.' And my hands unclenched and I rejoiced that I was found worthy to share His sufferings."

One of the features of Jesus' trial that impressed me most at the Passion Play, at Oberammergau, was its length. One realized from those terrible scenes how protracted was the agony; Gethsemane, the examination of Annas, the examination before the Sanhedrin, the mocking and insults of the Jewish guard, the examination by Pilate, the questioning and mocking by Herod, the second appearance before Pilate, the scourging by the Roman soldiers and their brutal insults and at last the pronouncing of the sentence. As I sat and saw all this portrayed, the words that rang ever in my ears were: "For my sake, for my sake; He suffered all this for me." And I longed, as never before, to show my gratitude by service to Him.

Anna Shipton tells of a suffering Christian woman who, shrinking from a prospect of prolonged anguish, had a vision in which there appeared to be a minute crown twined here and there with thorns, and by its side one composed wholly of large acanthus spines, such as probably composed the wreath of painful mockery pressed on the Saviour's brow. "I thought," said she, "some One seemed to say, 'I wore this for thee,' pointing to the large, heavy crown; 'wear this for Me.'" Ever after she meekly endured her sufferings.

Quiz and Study. 1. Describe the Roman scourging. 2. What disciple endured it? 3. What leader in the Crusades refused to wear a crown in the city where his Master had been crowned with thorns? 4. Mention some great pictures which show Christ crowned with thorns and give the names of their artists. 5. What was Pilate's end? 6. Give a passage of Scripture which foretells Christ's sufferings. 7. For whom were they endured?

Practical Truths. 1. "A flower has been discovered in South America, which is only visible when the wind blows; it is of the species cactus and, when stirred by the wind, a number of beautiful flowers protrude from the little lumps on the stalk. So in these trials of Jesus are brought out His noble nature, His love, His patience, faith, and hope."—Peloubet. 2. In His suffering Christ fulfilled the prophecies given in Isa. 50:6 and 53:3-7, and thus proved Himself the promised Messiah. 3. In Handel's great oratorio, "The Messiah," the chorus, "All we like sheep," gives a light note in the midst of the awful tragedy, so does the indifference of those for whom He died add to the sorrows of our Saviour. 4. The Jews chose Caesar rather than Christ for their King, so do we choose wealth, power, influence, and give to these the allegiance due to Him.

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

BEARING THE CROSS

BY LUDWIG THIERSCH

In many parts of the Orient where the punishment of crucifixion was common it was considered proper that the condemned should bear his own cross to the place of execution. Some of the sacred writers speak of Christ as the Cross Bearer.

The artist Thiersch pictures the Saviour as falling in the road, overcome with fatigue and the weight of this heavy structure. In the illustration we see the hill of Calvary in the distance, where previously used crosses were left standing.

Seen through a little gap in the principal group are the two thieves crucified with Christ, with their hands bound behind their backs. But Christ's hands are free, and His hand is extended toward His sympathetic followers. He still wears the cruel crown of thorns and about His waist is the cord which bound the cross to Him. An executioner holds the cord ready for the new fastening, while another raises the weighted frame from him. An officer also lends a helping hand. There is a hammer in the waistband of one of the executioners—a suggestive instrument. Two priests stand in the foreground, one of them pointing to Calvary and ordering that the journey proceed at once. There are soldiers in armor, one of them mounted. Another savagely pushes back a pretty woman who moves up too closely because of her sympathy. Women with children represent the sympathy and tenderness of their sex in contrast with the savagery of the men. They are doubtless Christ's followers, and play their parts in the events following the execution, as we may read in the Scriptures.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

BEARING THE CROSS.

LUDWIG THIERSCH. 1825.

Born in Munich, during the full sway of the great classic tradition of painting, which in France was represented by David, and in Germany by Winterhalter, Ludwig Thiersch represents a survival of the "grand manner" in painting. The academic impressiveness of Thiersch's style has been amplified if anything, by the fact that the major part of his work, and the most important, has been in fresco painting for the decoration of great churches.

During his studentship, a group of great German artists were bringing to a successful conclusion a series of researches and experiments, designed to establish anew the principles and practice of true fresco painting. True fresco, contrary to the popular idea—which dignifies every application of paint to a wall surface with the name of fresco—is properly the title of but one mode of work. This consists in the preparation of the wall surface to the last coat of plaster. And then, as much of the last coat being spread at a time as the painter can cover in his day's work, the painter, with his colors mixed with water and the substance of the plaster in greater or less degree, paints directly on the wet plaster. The colors, sinking into the moist surface, become, with the setting of the plaster, locked up in it, and the design in all its dignified splendor, becomes an integral part of the wall itself.

Studying at the Munich Academy, first in sculpture under Schwanthaler, and then in painting under Heinrich Hess, Schnorr, and Karl Schorn, Ludwig Thiersch found himself interested deeply in this revival of the most monumental mode of painting. To perfect his knowledge at the fountain head of true fresco painting, he went to Rome; and in 1852 to Athens, where, commissioned by the Russian government, he painted a series of frescos in the church of St. Nicodemus based upon his work and research in the Eternal City.

In 1855, Thiersch came to Vienna, where he executed a similar commission in the Greek Church. In 1860, he went to St. Petersburg, where he decorated the chapels of the Grand Dukes Nicholas and Michael, and the Protestant Church of Saint Catharine. His easel pictures include a "Sakuntala" (1848), "The Raising of Jairus' Daughter" (1864), "Christ at Gethsemane" (1865), "Christ at the Pool of Bethesda," "The Temptation," "Christ in the Desert" (1874), "St. Paul Preaching" (1865), "Alaric Victor in Athens" (1879), and "Bearing the Cross."

JAMES BEALINGS.

And he went forth into a place called the place of which is called in the Hebrew Golgotha: Where they

and with him, on either side one,

and Jesus

And

wrote a title,
and

And the writing was, JESUS OF NAZARETH THE KING OF THE JEWS.

The Jews therefore, because it was the preparation, that the bodies should not remain upon

on the sabbath day, (for that sabbath day was an high day,

that their legs
might be broken, and that they might be taken away. Then

and

of
the first,
and
of which was crucified with him. But when they came to Jesus, and saw that he was dead already, they brake not his legs: But

and forthwith came there out blood and water.

THE CRUCIFIXION

BY MUNKACSY

This picture follows Munkacsy's scene of Christ before Pilate, and a number of the characters are the same in this as in that picture. There is a group of disciples who had dared to gather about the dying Saviour at the moment of His agony. The two Marys are plainly indicated. A man with a ladder and a hatchet, who evidently has been busy with the execution, looks scornfully at the women, and he was in the other picture; also the excited boy who takes an attitude is here again. A group of priests turn homeward, still discussing the event. The soldiers look back at the work they have helped to do and manifest a cold-blooded interest in it. The centurion has mounted his horse to retire from the scene. The agony of Christ and the miserable thieves, sharing His fate, would move the stoutest heart. Some are railing at the holy sacrifice and some are weeping over their loss of a loving guide and teacher. There is darkness overspreading the sky, as the Scripture relates.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

THE CRUCIFIXION

JESUS CRUCIFIED.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT.27:31-56; MARK 15:20-41; LUKE 23:26-49; JOHN 19:17-30.

Prayer: We thank Thee, Heavenly Father, that Thou didst so love the world that Thou gavest Thine only begotten Son that whosoever believeth on Him should not perish but should have everlasting life. Help us to take Him for our Saviour and may our lives, purchased at so great a price, be used wholly in His service. In His name and for His sake we ask it. Amen.

"There is a green hill far away,
Without a city wall,
Where the dear Lord was crucified,
Who died to save us all.
We may not know, we cannot tell
What pains He had to bear;
But we believe it was for us
He hung and suffered there."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Friday, April 7, A. D. 30, from 9 a. m. to 3 p. m. Place, Calvary (Golgotha), just outside the city of Jerusalem, probably on the north. Persons, Christ, the centurion and Roman soldiers, the priests and Jewish multitude, Mary and other women, John.

Scripture Setting: Prophecy concerning Christ's death fulfilled. Death foretold by prophets, Isa. 53:8; Dan. 9:26. Death foretold by Self, Matt. 20:19; John 3:14; 12:23, 24, 32, 33. Pierced hands and feet, Psa. 22:16. Numbered with transgressors, Isa. 53:12. Raiment divided by lot, Psa. 22:18. Bitter drink, Psa. 69:21. Stared at, scorned and mocked, Psa. 22:7, 8, 17; 109:25. Surrounded by enemies, Psa. 22:16. Darkness over earth, Amos 8:9. Cry of despair, Psa. 22:1. Last words, Psa. 31:5. True character made manifest through death, John 8:28. Universal salvation purchased by death, John 12:32.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Through the unspeakable suffering and base ignominy of a death on the cross Christ paid the price of sin and brought salvation to all the world. 2. Forgiving those who were inflicting upon Him the pains of death, He has given us a wonderful example of forgiveness. 3. From His promise to the thief we may know that no cry for pardon is ever unanswered by Him. 4. To Him came even the horror of separation from His Father that we may learn to trust even in darkness. 5. His work was "finished" and our pardon assured if we believe that He died for us. 6. His last words showed the confidence with which a Christian may approach death and give himself into his Father's keeping. 7. The temple veil was rent in twain because the way into the Holy Place was opened by Christ, and God can now be approached freely and at all times through Him.

THE PRICE OF SALVATION.

The Via Dolorosa. After the sentence of death was pronounced upon Christ, the scarlet robe and crown of thorns were taken off and He was clothed in His own garments. The heavy cross was laid upon His shoulders because a cruel Roman law required a prisoner to bear his own cross. Preceded by a centurion, surrounded by a guard of four soldiers and accompanied by two thieves, similarly guarded, who, also, were to be crucified, Jesus was led forth to His terrible death. The place of crucifixion was outside the city gate, at no great distance, but the long hours of sleeplessness and torture had so worn upon Christ that the burden of the cross was greater than He could bear. He stumbled and fell, and even his brutal guards recognized the fact that He could not complete the journey thus burdened. They, therefore, compelled a stranger, Simon, of Cyrene, who was just entering the city, to carry the cross for the exhausted Prisoner.

As the party slowly proceeded on its way, crowds of people followed it. Many were attracted by an idle curiosity to see the end of so noted a Preacher; others, through hatred, desired to witness His cruel death, but some went along that road, which for His sake has ever since been called the Via Dolorosa (Way of Sorrow), with hearts filled with love and wrung by pity. There were women whom he had comforted, whose sick He had healed and whose children He had blessed. These sobbed aloud in their grief and agony over His suffering. The sound of their weeping came to His ears, and turning to them, He said, "Daughters of Jerusalem, weep not for Me but weep for yourselves and your children." Then He foretold the doom which hung over the city and His prophecy was soon terribly fulfilled.

The place of crucifixion was a small knoll, shaped like a skull and hence called Golgotha* (Hebrew for skull). To ease the sufferings of those condemned to die this awful death, the women of Jerusalem prepared a drink of wine mingled with a powerful narcotic drug which somewhat dulled the sense of pain. This was offered to Christ, but though He tasted it to show His recognition of the kindness, He heroically refused to drink it, for He wished to have clear faculties and alert powers in order to pay to the full the price of sin.

After the Prisoner was nailed to the cross, the heavy vertical beam was sunk into the hole prepared for it. In the midst of the indescribable suffering which this must have caused Him, Christ's lips parted and a prayer came from them—not for relief from suffering nor for strength to bear His pain. No, there was no thought of self in this first utterance. Instead it was of others He thought, even of those who were so cruelly treating Him. "Father, forgive them," He prayed, "for they know not what they do."

The Superscription. It was customary to place above the cross a white tablet, stating the crime for which the prisoner died. To revenge himself upon the Jewish leaders who had compelled him to condemn this Man to death, Pilate, in bitter irony, had ordered written upon His tablet, "The King of the Jews," in Latin, the language of the Romans, in Greek, that of the foreigners and visitors; and in Hebrew, that of the Jews. When this superscription was placed over the cross, the chief priests were greatly offended and they hastened to Pilate and remonstrated with him. "Write not, 'The King of the Jews,'" they said, "but that He said, 'I am the King of the Jews'."

*In Latin the word is "calvaria," from which comes our English Calvary.

But Pilate would not yield to their demands. "What I have written, I have written," he replied. And so Christ's Kingship was proclaimed in the languages of religion, culture and power.

The Spectators. Beneath the cross of Jesus the four soldiers, who composed His guard, divided His garments among them, casting lots as to which portion each soldier should have, and especially as to whom the seamless robe should belong, thus fulfilling the ancient prophecy. (Psa. 22:18). Now to the tortures of burning thirst and raging fever were added the insults of the spectators. Those who passed to and from the city, on the thoroughfare that lay near the place of crucifixion, cried in mockery, "A King is He! Let Him now show His power!"

Those who had witnessed the trial, remembering the accusation, exclaimed, "Thou that destroyest the temple, and buildest it in three days, save Thyself: if Thou art the Son of God, come down from the cross." How little these realized that the Divine Sufferer was even then fulfilling the true meaning of His words.

The chief priests and scribes added their insulting words. "He saved others; can He not save Himself? Let Christ, the King of Israel, now come down from the cross, that we may see and believe."

At each side of Him hung one of the thieves, that the Scripture might be fulfilled, "He was numbered with the transgressors (Isa. 53:12), and even one of these men joined in the mocking cries. But the other rebuked him, saying, "Dost not thou fear God, seeing thou art in the same condemnation? And we indeed justly; for we receive the due reward of our deeds: but this man hath done nothing amiss." And to Jesus he said, "Lord, remember me when Thou comest into Thy Kingdom." And Jesus said unto him, "Verily I say unto thee, Today shalt thou be with Me in Paradise." We love to know that in the midst of His terrible suffering the Saviour had the joy of welcoming this poor sinner to His Kingdom.

Near the cross there were many women who had loved and followed Jesus. Looking down He saw among these His mother, overcome by grief at His suffering, and near her the disciple whom He so dearly loved. A smile of infinite tenderness lit up His white face as He said, "Woman, behold thy son." And to John he entrusted her with the words, "Behold thy mother."

The Hours of Darkness. At noon, after Christ had endured three hours of agony, a strange darkness came over the sky, which seemed to indicate the horror of nature at the awful scene which was being enacted. This darkness seemed to descend into Christ's very soul, shutting Him off even from communion with His Father, a communion that had been unbroken throughout His entire life. "Eloi, Eloi, lama sabachthani? (My God, my God, why hast Thou forsaken Me?) He cried aloud in His agony.

"He calleth Elias," said the crowd, "let us see whether he will come to help Him."

Then, "I thirst," came from those parched lips and a soldier, kinder than the others, dipped the sponge, which corked his bottle, into his own wine and lifting it on a reed, gave it to Christ to drink.

"It is Finished." Then with a loud voice Jesus cried, "It is finished," and with the sweet consciousness of His Father's presence once more restored to Him, He added, "Father, into Thy hands I commend my spirit." Thus did the purest soul and bravest spirit that ever blessed our earth heroically meet His death.

Once more nature revealed her horror at this awful crime that had been perpetrated. A great earthquake shook the earth and brake in pieces large rocks, the graves were opened and from them later the dead came forth. In the temple the great veil was rent from top to bottom, revealing the Holy of Holies, which no one but the high priest might enter, and even he only once a year. The way into the Holy Place was now opened to all through the Saviour's death.

The watchers on Calvary smote their breasts in fear and even the Roman centurion, dropping to his knees, exclaimed in awe, "Truly this was the Son of God!"

Practical Truths. 1. By His death on the cross Christ finished the work of redemption, and salvation becomes ours if we will but accept it. 2. He suffered the agonies of thirst that we may partake of the water of life freely. 3. Wicked men, in heaping insults upon Jesus, only fulfilled the prophecies of Scripture and proved Him the promised Messiah; thus does God cause even the wrath of men to praise Him. 4. Through the atonement of the cross God can fulfil His law that the soul that sinneth, it must die and yet save the sinner who through faith dies in Christ. 5. In no other way could God's love for us and His hatred of sin have been so clearly shown. 6. Having given us His Son shall we doubt that the Father will give us freely all other blessings? 7. Christ's love, as shown in His death, should call forth our deepest gratitude. "Thou gavest Thy life for me, what can I give to Thee?" should be the prayer of our hearts.

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

THE BURIAL OF JESUS.

When the even was come, there came a rich of Arimathæa, named Joseph, who also himself was Jesus' disciple: He and begged the body of Jesus.

Then Pilate commanded the body to be delivered. And when Joseph had

he

in a clean linen cloth, And laid it in his own new which he had hewn out in the rock: and he and departed.

And there was Mary Magdalene,
and the other Mary,

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 27:57-66; MARK 15:42-47; LUKE 23:50-56; JOHN 19:31-42.

Prayer: We thank Thee, Heavenly Father that because Thy dear Son rose triumphant from the grave, we may know, when we lay our loved ones to rest, that the power of death is destroyed. We rejoice that no watching guard nor imperial seal was strong enough to prevent the carrying out of Thy plans. Help us to realize even in our hours of darkness that Thy loving guidance directs all our ways. For Jesus' sake. Amen.

"He died that we might be forgiven,
He died to make us good,
That we might go at last to Heaven,
Saved by His precious blood.
There was no other good enough
To pay the price of sin;
He only could unlock the gate
Of Heaven, and let us in."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting. Time, Friday, April 7, A. D. 30, between 3 and 6 p. m. Place, on and near Calvary. Persons, Christ, Joseph of Arimathea, Nicodemus, women, Pilate, the chief priests, the Roman centurion and soldiers.

Scripture Setting: Ancient thoughts of the grave, Job 7:9; Ps. 6:5; 49:14; 88:5; Eccles. 9:10; Isa. 38:18. Contact brought defilement, Num. 19:16. Hope of righteous, Ps. 49:15. Promise of victory. Hos. 13:14. Christ's power over, prophesied, John 5:28. Revealed, John 11:43, 44. Paul's song of triumph, 1 Cor. 15:51-57.

Life and Conduct Setting. The special features of this story are: (1) The fulfillment of the prophecies concerning the body of Christ. (2) The burial by Joseph and Nicodemus, which involved the disgrace of their being known as disciples of the Nazarene. (3) The interment in a new tomb which prevented any doubt as to the identity of the body. (4) The guard set by the Pharisees and the sealing of the stone, which caused the fact of Christ's resurrection to be known to both the Romans and the Jewish leaders.

THE LAST OFFICES OF FRIENDS AND THE LAST PRECAUTIONS OF FOES.

The Passover Ceremonies. The second day of the passover was even more sacred than the first, for then the "wavesheaf" was offered to the Lord. As the sun went down the previous evening three men reaped a sheaf of barley. The corn was then threshed out, parched and ground, and on the second paschal day this flour, mixed with oil and frankincense, was waved before the Lord. It was a joyous ceremony and there must be nothing to mar it.

The Jewish law ordered that the body of a criminal should not be left hanging over night, lest the land be defiled. The chief priests, who had not hesitated to put to death a just Man—One in whom Pilate had found no guilt—were scrupulous about the letter of the law. They went, therefore, to the governor and begged that the bodies of the crucified men might be removed from the crosses before their Sabbath began. According to Roman custom such bodies remained upon the crosses until devoured by birds of prey, but Pilate yielded to the request of the chief priests and sent soldiers to dispatch the criminals.

Prophecy Fulfilled. With a heavy wooden mallet the legs of the two thieves were broken and death at once resulted. But when the soldier came to Jesus, he found that He was already dead, so no bone was broken of that perfect form. When the Jews were told how they should eat the paschal lamb, on the night before their departure from Egypt, they were bidden to break no bone, nor was a bone broken of the "Lamb of God who taketh away the sin of the world," and thus was the prophecy fulfilled which said, "He keepeth all His bones: not one of them is broken (Psa. 34:20).

But the soldier, to assure himself of Christ's death, thrust his spear into His side, thus once more fulfilling prophecy (Zech. 12:10). Out from the wound there flowed both blood and water. Some have thought from this that Christ died literally of a broken heart. Whether this be true or not, we know that it was the burden of sin—our sins as well as those of His murderers—that caused His death.

And the water and blood which then flowed forth may well typify the expiation and sanctification which He died to purchase for us. St. John, who tells us of this incident, dwells upon its meaning (1 John 5:6-8), and our two sacraments of Baptism and Communion commemorate it.

Joseph's Request. In the Sanhedrin there was a certain Joseph of Arimathea, a man of wealth and position, both just and good in character. He had secretly believed in Jesus but had never had the courage to openly profess his faith, because of the decree that all followers of the Nazarene should be put out of the synagogue. He had not consented, however, to the counsel of the Jews and we like to believe that he had endeavored to avert the doom imposed upon Jesus.

As he witnessed Christ's awful death, he found the courage which he had hitherto lacked, and going to Pilate, whom perhaps

CHRIST BORNE TO THE TOMB

BY ANTONIO CISERI

After Christ's death, as the Sabbath was approaching and it was not well that the body of Jesus should hang on the cross, a man of position and rank, named Joseph of Arimathæa, and a secret follower of Jesus, went to Pilate and begged the body. He wrapped it in linen and they bore it to a tomb belonging to Joseph. This was a new tomb never used before and it was hewn from the solid rock.

The Italian artist, Ciseri, has made a most effective group of the disciples bearing the body. We may see John, a handsome young man, and Mary Magdalene with disordered hair, and Mary the mother of James, and the mother of Zebedee's children, and Joseph of Arimathæa who begged Pilate for the body, and Nicodemus, who came to Jesus by night. All are sad-faced as they bear their burden along. This is one of the most beautiful compositions in this series and the feeling of grief and despair is forcefully rendered.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

CHRIST BORNE TO THE TOMB.

he had first propitiated by a rich gift, he begged the body of Jesus. "Is He already dead?" asked Pilate in surprise. Not content with the assurance of Joseph that this was indeed true, he called the centurion and had the report confirmed by him. He then granted Joseph's request and the latter hastened back to the cross.

Nicodemus' Help. Nicodemus was another man who had not been brave enough to acknowledge Christ openly. We remember how he had gone to Jesus secretly by night and told Him that he knew that He was a Teacher come from God. And then had followed that wonderful conversation about the new birth of which St. John tells us (chap. 3). Nicodemus had asked in the Sanhedrin if it were lawful to judge Christ before He was given a hearing and for this question he had been accused of being a disciple (John 7:50-52). Now, like Joseph, he longed to do for the dead what he had not done for the living, so while Joseph was obtaining Pilate's permission to bury the body, he brought spices to embalm it and fine linen cloth in which it might be wrapped.

Tenderly was the Saviour lifted from the cross and the cruel nails taken from the feet, which had gone about the country day after day in loving service to the people, and from the hands, which had wrought so many deeds of kindness and healing. The wounds were washed and the body wrapped in the pure white cloths which had been sprinkled with the spices.

It is thought by some that John had taken Jesus' mother to his own home immediately after she had been commended to his care. But painters and sculptors have agreed in thinking that Mary remained on Calvary until the end, and in Reuben's wonderful painting, "The Descent from the Cross," Angelo's exquisitely carved "Pieta," and other masterpieces, we see her near her Son or holding Him once more in her arms.

But there were not many who followed the body to its resting place—only Joseph and Nicodemus, a few women and perhaps some of the disciples. He who had wept with those who mourned and, more than once had called their dead back to life, was forgotten by the people when death claimed Him.

The New Tomb. Joseph had a large garden, not far from Calvary, where the spring flowers were at their loveliest and where beautiful trees cast restful shadows. Hither, with the help of the others who loved Him, Joseph brought the body of our Lord, and laid it in a new tomb which he had built for himself. Leaving more careful embalming to be done later, they rolled a large stone before the entrance of the tomb. These friends had had to perform these last sad rites with haste, for the Sabbath began at six o'clock, after which no work could be done. Indeed, by touching the dead body, they had made themselves unclean, so they could have no part in the passover sacrifice and feasting. But their hearts were too sad to care for that. Was this indeed the end? Were all the hopes they had cherished really buried in the tomb with their Lord and Master? Such questions must have filled their minds as sadly they took their way back to the city.

The Sealed Stone. But, though forgotten by His friends, words of Christ's were recalled by His enemies. Hastening to Pilate, the chief priests and Pharisees said: "Sir, we remember that that deceiver said, while He was yet alive, 'After three days I will rise again.' Command therefore that the sepulchre be made sure until the third day, lest His disciples come by night and steal Him away, and say unto the people, 'He is risen from the dead'; so the last error shall be worse than the first."

Pilate was tired of the whole matter and answered them with impatience, "You have a guard; go, make it as sure as you can." So, taking the guard, they hurriedly went to the garden. There they sealed the stone with the imperial seal, which it was death to break and left the soldiers to guard the grave. Thus again unwittingly did they carry out God's plans and make the fact of the resurrection known to both Jews and Gentiles.

Quiz. 1. What prophecies were fulfilled by Gentiles in this story? 2. Tell of a great Gentile king who was an instrument in carrying out God's plans for His people. 3. Give instances of those who, like Joseph and Nicodemus, have been braver in hours of trial and danger than at other times. 4. Tell of some great pictures or sculptures, other than those mentioned, which describe Christ's descent from the cross or His entombment. 5. Describe an oriental tomb. 6. How did the action of the chief priests in setting a guard help to affirm the truth of the resurrection? 7. What other stone, mentioned in the Bible, was sealed with a king's signet?

Practical Thoughts. 1. Let us ever guard against having our religion one of form rather than of spirit. 2. The Jewish leaders endeavored to prevent the spreading of a report of Christ's resurrection but instead they helped to establish the proofs of its truth; evil men cannot prevent the fulfillment of God's plans. 3. How little the Roman soldiers appreciated the importance of their watch; so seemingly trivial duties may accomplish a great purpose. 4. Let us treat our friends with the same love and tenderness in life that we would show them in death. 5. The grief and overwhelming sorrow of Jesus' friends and followers were succeeded by joy greater than they had ever known, so our own affliction worketh for us more and more exceedingly an eternal weight of glory.

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

JESUS RISEN.

His countenance was like

and
his white as snow: And for fear of him the

did shake,
and became as

And the angel answered and said unto the

—•—
Fear not ye: for I know that ye seek Jesus, which was crucified.
He is not here: for he is risen, as he said.
Come,
—†—

where the Lord lay. And go quickly, and tell his disciples that he is risen from the dead; and, behold, he goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see him: lo, I have told you. And they departed quickly from the sepulchre with fear and great joy; and did run to bring his disciples word.

MATT. 28:3-8.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 28:1-15; MARK 16:1-8; LUKE 24:1-11.

Prayer: We thank Thee, O living Saviour, that Thou didst forever rob death of its sting and the grave of its victory. We bless Thee for the great proof which the resurrection gives us that Thou art indeed the Son of God. And now, having vanquished death, wilt Thou not free us from the power of evil also, so that we, being dead to sin, may live unto righteousness. Amen.

"Christ, the Lord, is risen to-day,
Sons of men, and angels say;
Raise your joys and triumphs high!
Sing, ye heavens! and earth, reply!

"Vain the stone, the watch, the seal;
Christ hath burst the gates of hell;
Death in vain forbids Him rise; Christ hath opened Paradise."

—Charles Wesley.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Sunday, April 9, A. D. 30, at early dawn. Place, near Calvary. Persons, the Roman guard, two angels, the women and the disciples.

Scripture Setting: The Resurrection of Christ. Foretold in prophecy, Psa. 16:10. Foretold by Himself, Matt. 16:21; 20:19; Mark 8:31; 9:31; Luke 9:22; 18:33. Basis of Apostles' preaching and teaching, Acts 1:22; 2:24, 32; 3:15; 4:10; 10:40-43; 13:30-39; 17:31; Eph. 1:20; Col. 2:12. Resurrection of man foretold by prophets, Job 19:26; Psa. 17:15; Dan 12:2. Taught by Christ, Luke 14:14; John 5:28, 29. Preached by Apostles, Acts 4:2; 17:18; 24:15; Rom. 6:5; 8:11; 1 Cor. 15; Phil. 3:21; 1 Thes. 4:14-17; 2 Pet. 1:11; 1 John 3:2. The moral resurrection, Rom. 4:24, 25; 8:11; Col. 2:12, 13; 3:1-3.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The great central truth of this lesson is the resurrection of Christ. The actual death of Christ was a necessary basis for the reality of the resurrection. (a) His death is proven by the spear, the spices, the sepulchre, the stone, the seal, the soldiers. (b) His resurrection is proven by the broken seal, the rolled away stone, the empty sepulchre, the discarded shroud, the terrified soldiers, the shining seraphs, the women's story, and the living Saviour. 2. Even the soldiers' wonderful story could not convince the hardened hearts of the chief priests of Christ's Divinity. Having compassed His death by deceit and lies, they attempted to conceal the fact of His resurrection by falsehood. 3. As angels announced the birth of Christ so again they came to tell that He had conquered death. 4. The tender love, which brought the women early to the tomb to perform the last sad rites for their dead Master, was rewarded by a vision of angels and by the first annunciation of the risen Lord. 5. The joy that filled their own hearts the women were eager to share with Christ's sorrowing disciples, but lack of faith prevented the latter from accepting the comfort their message might have given.

THE FIRST EASTER MORNING.

The Second Paschal Day. On the Jewish Sabbath, which followed the burial of Jesus, the second day of the passover was joyously celebrated. The priests wore their richest robes, the silver trumpets were blown, the choruses sang their loud anthems of joy, while sacrifices were offered upon the altar.

Meantime the disciples of the crucified Nazarene spent the day in weeping and fasting, for their Lord was dead and buried. They did not believe Him an imposter, as did the chief priests; instead, they still thought Him the Son of God and expected to meet Him in Heaven, or possibly they looked forward to His coming again in glory at the end of the world. But they had entirely failed to grasp the meaning of his oft repeated words that He would rise again from the dead, and their hearts were sad and lonely.

Perhaps they met together in that upper room where they had partaken with Him of the passover and had heard His last loving words and His prayer for them. There they recalled the wonderful days they had spent with Him, and they talked of His acts of mercy and healing. How could they live without Him? They had hoped that all the nation would believe on Him, but how could they prove that He was the Son of God when He had died such a shameful death? Over and over they asked each other these perplexing questions. How little they realized that soon the mystery would be solved, their doubts removed, their sorrow turned to joy.

The Startling Vision. Before the tomb the Roman guard kept their lonely watch. When evening came a fire was built, as the nights were cool, and the soldiers gathered about it. The hours passed slowly in that quiet place, but just as day was breaking an earthquake was felt. Startled, the soldiers sprang up and, to their amazement, saw the great stone rolled back from the entrance of the tomb, and on it an angel sitting, clad in dazzling white. Overpowered by the radiance which shone from his eyes, the soldiers fell to the ground, covering their faces in terror.

The Jewish Calumny. When the soldiers recovered somewhat from their fright, they found that the tomb was empty. Quickly they fled from the place and sought the Jewish leaders. To them the astounding story was told. A conference of the chief priests was immediately held and then the soldiers were summoned. "Take this," said the priests, offering them a large sum of money, "and say that His disciples came by night and stole the Body while you slept."

"But for a soldier on guard to sleep is death," they exclaimed.

"Have no fear," replied the priests; "we will see that you get into no trouble." So for many years this report was circulated among the Jews. But how different was the truth!

The Early Visit of the Women. Among the last at the tomb on Friday had been the women who loved Jesus,—Mary Magdalene, Mary the mother of James the less, Salome the mother of James and John, and others. As they returned to their homes, they bought spices and ointments to embalm His Body. They rested on the Sabbath, for they would not profane that sacred day even to do a last loving service to their dear and honored Master. But very early the next morning they started for the tomb.

The air was still chill on that spring morning and they could hardly distinguish the way in the dim light. As they neared the garden, one of them exclaimed, "The stone! How shall we roll it away!" They knew nothing of the seal and the Roman guard but they had seen the stone placed before the entrance of the tomb and they knew that it was far too heavy for them to move. But on entering the garden, they found that their fears were groundless for the stone was rolled away. Startled at this sight they quickly entered the vestibule of the tomb.

The Angel Announces the Resurrection. Here they saw the angel whose appearance had so terrified the guard. They, too, were greatly frightened, but he said unto them: "Fear not, for I know that you seek Jesus who was crucified. He is not here, for He is risen, as He said. Come, see the place where the Lord lay. And go quickly and tell His disciples and Peter that He is risen from the dead; and behold, He goeth before you into Galilee; there shall ye see Him; lo, I have told you."

After hearing this wonderful news, the women hastily left the tomb, trembling with fear and amazement, yet with hearts filled with joy. They stopped to speak to no one as they ran to tell the good news to the disciples.

The Unbelieving Disciples. But the disciples could not believe such a wonderful story. "It was dark and you could not see," they said; "these are merely idle tales."

Jesus was alive! He had burst the bonds which fettered Him; the grave clothes wound tightly about His Body, the new sepulchre, the heavy stone carefully sealed, the watching guards, all had been powerless to prevent His rising again from the grave. "On the third day I will rise again." Over and over had He thus foretold His resurrection to His disciples. But their hearts were filled with doubt. To even an angel's words they could not give credence; they must see and touch before they would believe. And so yet longer must they sit in darkness because they doubted the news that would have given them such comfort and unspeakable joy.

The Dead Come Forth. And now near Jerusalem

strange things happened. From the graves, which had been opened by the earthquake at the time of the crucifixion, came the dead. The silent figures stole back to the city and entering the homes in which they had lived, they revealed themselves to their loved ones. Was there then really a resurrection? It had been a disputed question, the Pharisees believing in it, the Sadducees denying it, but surely the appearance of these who had been dead proved it. And if true, were the reports which began to be circulated throughout the city that Christ had risen, also to be believed? Such questions passed from mouth to mouth, but who could solve the mystery?

The Meaning of the Resurrection. For us there is a mystery no longer; instead, we may walk in the light. Because Christ rose from the dead, we know that we, too, shall rise, to share with Him eternal life. We lay our loved ones in the grave, believing that there is a beautiful awakening for them. And even here there is a new life for the Christian, since Christ can free us not only from the power of death and the grave, but also from the power of sin. As St. Paul declares, "We are dead and our life is hid with Christ in God." Thus the Easter joy may fill our hearts all through the year.

Illustrations of the Resurrection from Nature. The awakening to life of grass and flower, bush and tree, after the sleep of winter; or, as Longfellow describes it, "the annual miracle of the spring," are symbols of the resurrection. The emerging of the free and joyous butterfly from its cocoon, after its existence as a creeping caterpillar, and the dragonfly* coming from the grub and darting about in joyous flight, typify the new life which shall be ours.

Quiz. 1. At what other time did an angel give news of Christ? 2. When did angels minister unto Him? 3. What proofs have we of Christ's resurrection? 4. What illustrations of the resurrection do we find in nature? 5. How did the fact of the resurrection prove Christ to be the Son of God? 6. How does it prove our immortality? 7. Does it give us comfort when our friends are taken from us?

Practical Truths. 1. Christ's resurrection proves His Divinity. If He had not risen from the dead, as He had said again and again that He would do, how could we believe His assertion that He was the Son of God? 2. The change of the Jewish Sabbath to the Christian Sunday marks the importance of the day upon which Christ arose. 3. His resurrection proves that there is immortal life. 4. It is an assurance of our own resurrection. 5. It is the symbol of the moral resurrection; being dead to sin, we are alive unto God. 6. If Christ could conquer death, we may be sure He can overcome all our enemies. 7. Angels are ministering spirits. As they were a guard about Elisha and as they bore a message of love to the sorrowing women, so they come to help and comfort God's children now. 8. No device nor deceit of the chief priests could prevent the great fact of the resurrection from becoming known. 9. The women would not break the Sabbath even to embalm the Body of the Master they loved. 10. How often do we find that difficulties which we have dreaded are already removed before we meet them.

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

*See Mrs. Gatty's beautiful story of a dragonfly in "The Life Beyond."

FIRST EASTER DAWN

BY J. K. THOMPSON

Having rested on the Sabbath day, some of the disciples went early in the morning of the first day of the week, to visit the tomb where Christ had been laid. They found it empty. An angel in shining garments asked why they searched for the living among the dead, as Christ had risen.

The artist Thompson shows us angels in shining garments descending from Heaven to roll away the stone from the door of the tomb. The dawn of this Easter morning is illuminating the horizon and light falls on Calvary's top where the three crucifixes still stand. These angels have graceful forms, with long, feathery wings. One of them shades the eyes against the light while looking at the spot where Christ was laid.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

THE FIRST EASTER DAWN

THOMPSON.

Cephas Giovanni, elder, 1775-1856.
 Cephas Giovanni, younger, 1809-1888.
 Jerome K., 1814-1886.

The portrait painter in early New England days was as much a recognized part of the constituted social order as was the village clockmaker or the town attorney. Not infrequently, so simple was the organization of early colonial society, he practiced clockmaking and mending, or land surveying and map drafting, or perchance wheelwrighting and blacksmithing, or he taught music and elocution in the intervals of those commissions in which he portrayed the features of his fellow citizens, who, impressed with the responsibility of growing prosperity, felt the equal responsibility of leaving record of themselves to posterity.

Quite commonly the portrait painter of that day had a "circuit," so to speak, which he travelled regularly. More often than not, he paid for his lodging and the care of his horse with some slight sketch; or, asked to undertake a more important record, took his pay in some likely heifer or promising colt, with store of red apples, soundly barrelled cider, glowing pumpkins, a sack of seed corn, or such other homely produce.

The names of not many of these itinerant knights of the brush survive. Among those who attained to a certain exclusive distinction was Cephas Giovanni Thompson, the elder (to distinguish him from his son). Born at Middleboro, Mass., in 1775, he in no long time found his way to the South. The South, given to the maintenance of ancestral tradition, welcomed Thompson, as one capable of supplying an institutional need of good society. Hence, the elder

Thompson found the South a fruitful field of work, numbering among a list of sitters that comprised the wit and beauty of the Old South: John Marshall, John Howard Payne, and Decatur.

Cephas Giovanni, the younger (1809-88), portrait and figure painter, born also at Middleboro and for a short time the pupil of his father, was chiefly self-taught. He painted principally in Boston, Providence, New York and Philadelphia. In 1852 he visited London, Paris and Florence, and settled in Rome, where he spent seven years. Upon his return to the United States in 1860 he took up his residence in New York City, and was made an associate of the National Academy. His portraits include those of Longfellow, Charles Fenno Hoffman (New York Historical Society), Sebastian Cabot (after Holbein), Hawthorne, and Dr. Matthews (New York University). Among his best known figure paintings are the "Guardian Angel," "Prospero and Miranda," and "Saint Peter Delivered from Prison." His most celebrated picture is his copy of Guido Reni's "Beatrice Cenci."

His brother, Jerome Thompson (1814-86), landscape and figure painter, studied for a short time under his father, and then with Morse and Jarvis. He painted chiefly in New York City, where he took up his residence in 1832. In 1850 he was made an associate of the National Academy. Among his paintings are the "Old Oaken Bucket," the "Dakota Canon" (1880), the "Indian's Prayer" (1884), a "Study from Nature" (1886), and "First Easter-Dawn."

JAMES BEALINGS.

But Mary stood without and as she wept, she

And seeth

the one at the head, and the other at the feet, where the body of Jesus
had lain.

And they say unto her,

Woman, why
weepest thou?

She saith unto them, Because they have taken away my Lord,

and I know not where they have laid him.

And when she had thus said, she back, and saw and knew not that it was Jesus.

Jesus said unto her,
Woman, why weepest thou? whom seekest thou? She, supposing him to be the saith unto him, Sir, if thou have borne him hence, tell me where thou hast laid him, and I will take him away. Jesus saith unto her, Mary. She turned herself, and saith unto him, Rabboni; which is to say, Master.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 28:1; MARK 15:47; 16:1, 2, 9-11; LUKE 23:56; 24:1, 12; JOHN 20:1-18.

Prayer: O loving Saviour, We thank Thee that because Thou first showed Thyself to a sorrowing woman after Thy resurrection and addressed to her words of tender sympathy, we may know of Thy love and sympathy for all who are in grief and distress. May we ever come to Thee for comfort and help in our hours of darkness. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"I leave it all with Jesus, for He knows How to steal the bitter from life's woes;
How to gild the tear-drop with His smile,
Make the desert garden bloom awhile:
When my weakness leaneth on His might,
All seems light."
—Ellen H. Willis.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Sunday, April 9, A. D. 30, at early dawn. Place, near Calvary. Persons, Christ, two angels, Mary Magdalene and other women, Peter, John and other disciples.

Scripture Setting: The Love and Tenderness Shown by Christ to Women. 1. His first miracle performed to please His mother, John 2:1-11. 2. His last loving thought for her, John 19:26, 27. 3. His first annunciation of Himself as the Messiah to a woman, John 4:4-27. 4. His healing of women, Luke 13:11-13; Mark 1:30, 31; 5:25-34; Luke 8:2, 3; Matt. 15:22-28. 5. His forgiveness of a repentant woman, Luke 7:36-50. 6. His pardon of a sinful woman, John 8:3-11. 7. His raising to life the widow's son, Luke 7:11-15. 8. His raising to life the daughter of Jairus, Mark 5:22-24, 35-43. 9. His deep sympathy for Mary and Martha, John 11:33, 35. 10. His greatest miracle performed for them, John 11:43, 44. 11. His appreciation of Mary's loving act, Mark 14:3-9; John 12:1-8. 12. His first appearance after His resurrection to Mary, John 20:14-17. 13. His second appearance to the women, Matt. 28:9, 10.

Life and Conduct Setting: The chief features of the story are: 1. Mary's love, which is shown by her coming early to the sepulchre. 2. The proof of the resurrection which is furnished by the empty tomb and discarded grave clothes. 3. John's conviction of the fact of the resurrection which was produced by the sight of the empty sepulchre and the linen clothes, even before the risen Lord had been seen. 4. Christ's first appearance to Mary,—a high honor given her as a reward of her devoted love. 5. Her quick recognition of Him when He spoke her name, a presentiment of our recognition of friends after death. 6. Her willingness to leave Him that she might carry His message of comfort to His sorrowing disciples. 7. Christ's second appearance to the women, who seemed more easily convinced of His identity than were the men who had followed Him. 8. The incredulity of the disciples, who required tangible proofs of His resurrection.

CHRIST'S FIRST APPEARANCE AFTER HIS RESURRECTION.

Mary's Love for Christ. As we heard in our last story, one of the women who started for the tomb very early on the morning after the Jewish Sabbath was Mary Magdalene. Some years before, she had had a terrible disease which, in those days, was called being possessed of devils. She had gone to Christ in her great trouble and He had cast out the seven demons which had caused her such dreadful distress. Since that time she had followed the Master from place to place, doing all that she could for Him to show her love and gratitude for what He had done for her.

She had watched Him with a breaking heart as He hung upon the cross. She had followed the Body to Joseph's garden and then she had lingered near the tomb, after all the others had gone, for she could not bear to leave her Lord, even though He were dead. Through the Sabbath her mind had been entirely filled with thoughts of Him. She remembered His words of love and deeds of mercy and how, unlike other men, He had always been tender and considerate to women, for in those days they were not always treated so kindly.

And then before it was light the next morning, she and the other women started for the tomb that they might embalm the Body of Jesus with the spices and ointment which they had prepared. But Mary's eagerness was so great that she hastened on ahead of the others and she was therefore the first to enter the garden. The perfume of the flowers made the air sweet, and a soft gray light was in the sky.

The Stone Rolled Away. But as Mary came near the tomb, what did she see! The stone had been rolled aside. "They have stolen my Lord," she thought. Turning swiftly, she hastened from the garden to tell the disciples the dreadful news. She came first to the house where Peter and John were staying and told them of her discovery.

"They have taken away the Lord out of the sepulchre," she said, "and we know not where they have laid Him."

Peter and John at the Tomb. At her words Peter and John sprang to their feet and hastened to the garden. John, being the younger, outran Peter and reached the tomb first. Here he paused and, looking in, saw the empty niche and the linen clothes lying at one side. Very soon Peter joined him and he at once entered the tomb, followed by John. It was indeed true! The Body of their Lord was not there! But there were the grave clothes, lying at one side and near them was the napkin neatly folded, which had been about His head. It did not look as if the Body had been stolen, for there were no signs of haste or violence. What could it mean? To John, the Saviour's best beloved, first came the wonderful thought. "He is not dead: He has risen." But he could not speak of his belief even to Peter. Silently and buried in thought the two disciples returned to their home.

Christ Appears to Mary. But Mary—she could not leave the place where her Lord had been. Tears flooded her eyes. Could she not even perform the last sad rites for His dead Body! She stooped and looked into the sepulchre and lo, it was not empty. Two radiant forms were seated there; one at the head and one at the foot of the place where the Lord had lain. Mary was startled but, as she gazed upon them, they asked, "Woman, why weepest thou?"

Their question reminded her of her great loss and forgetting her fears in her eagerness to know the truth, she replied, "Because they have taken away my Lord and I know not where they have laid Him."

Just then a shadow fell upon her and looking back into the garden, she saw a man standing near her. Her tear-blinded eyes prevented her from seeing clearly and she supposed Him to be the gardener. Surely He would be able to answer her question and tell her what she wished to know. Before she could speak, however, He repeated the question which the angels had asked, "Woman (the Galilean word of tenderness and respect), why weepest thou?" His first words after He had conquered death were not a paean of victory nor a great message of truth but, instead, a tender inquiry of sympathy. "Whom seekest thou?" He added. How well He knew that her thought was only of Him, but He would have her give expression to her love.

"Sir," she replied, "if thou hast borne Him hence, tell me where Thou hast laid Him, and I will take Him away. To her great love anything seemed possible, even the carrying of the Body of her Lord.

But what did she hear! Her own name, "Mary," spoken in softest, tenderest accents. But one voice could so speak it. She gazed upon Him. Now she saw! It was indeed He! "Rabboni" (Master), she cried, as she flung herself upon the ground, weeping for joy, and would have clasped His feet.

But He motioned her back. "Touch Me not," He said gently, "for I am not yet ascended to My Father." Thus far Mary had loved Christ because she could hear Him, see Him, touch Him, but now He would teach her that He was more than a human friend, so that when He left her, she might still feel His spiritual presence near her. But He would let her serve Him, that she might find expression for her love. "Go unto my brethren," He added, using this tender term for the disciples whom He so loved, "and say unto them, I ascend unto My Father and your Father, and My God and your God."

Ah, how hard it was for Mary to leave her Lord, whom she had believed to be dead and who, instead, stood there by her side alive! But she could do something for Him. Joy and love gave wings to her feet.

The Unbelieving Disciples. Into the room where the disciples sat, silent and grief-stricken, she came, —a joyous bearer of good tidings. "He is alive!" she said. "He has risen from the dead! I have seen Him and He bade me tell you that He would ascend unto His Father and your Father and His God and your God."

While she was speaking, came Peter and John. Yes, the tomb was empty, they affirmed, and John, hearing Mary's wonderful news, told of the hopes that filled his own heart. Could the disciples believe that Christ had indeed risen from the dead? While they hesitated, back came the other women, whose first accounts of the angel's announcement they had not credited. "We have seen Him!" they cried. "As we were returning to the sepulchre we met Him—Christ Himself—and He spoke to us, saying 'All hail.' We fell at His feet and worshipped Him, and He said unto us, 'Be not afraid; go tell my brethren that they go into Galilee and there shall they see Me.'"

But the disciples could not yet believe. It was too wonderful,—indeed it was impossible. In spite of the assurances of the women, they still cherished their doubts and sat in darkness, with hearts bowed down by grief.

But Mary's joy was greater than any she had ever known. He was living, her Lord and Master! Though she had seen Him die upon the cross, though He had lain in the grave, He was not dead. Ah, how the wondrous thought filled her eyes with glad tears, how her heart sang for joy! The disciples might doubt, but she knew. Had He not come to her and called her by name? All her life she would serve Him to show her gratitude for this evidence of His tender love for her.

Practical Truths. 1. The Lord who cast out seven demons from Mary can destroy the power of sin over us. 2. Like Mary, we should show our gratitude for what Christ has done for us by devoting our lives to His service. 3. Even in her grief, Mary clung to her faith in Christ, so we, like her, should say, "My Lord," even in hours of darkness. 4. While Mary was weeping over the stolen body, her risen Lord stood beside her; let us not by thinking of our losses and blindly giving way to grief, miss the rich blessings which God has provided for us. 5. Let us listen for Jesus' voice, so we may respond instantly to Him, when He speaks our name. 6. And may we obey His commands which send us with messages to His brethren.

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

THE WALK TO EMMAUS.

And, behold, two of them went that same to a called Emmaus, which was from about three-score furlongs. And together of all these things which had happened. And it came to pass, that, while they communed

together and reasoned, Jesus himself drew near, and

But their eyes were holden that they should not know him. And they drew whither

they went:
and he made as though

THE WALK TO EMMAUS.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS LUKE 24:13-35; MARK 16:12, 13.

Prayer: O Lord, Open Thou our eyes so we may behold Thee. Wilt Thou make the Scriptures a new revelation to us, as Thou didst to the two disciples on the way to Emmaus. May Thy Holy Word tell us of Thee. May we see Thee in nature,—in budding tree and opening flower, in the glories of sunrise and sunset, and in lofty mountain and storm-tossed sea. We would see Thee in our fellow-men, also, so we may realize that service done to even the lowliest is done to Thee. Amen.

"Hath not thy heart within thee burned,
At evening's calm and holy hour,
As if its inmost depths discerned
The presence of a loftier power?"

"It was the voice of God that spake
In silence to thy silent heart;
And bade each worthier thought awake,
And every dream of earth depart.
—Berthold Tours.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Sunday afternoon, April 9, A. D. 30. Place, On the road to Emmaus, at Emmaus, and at Jerusalem. Persons, Christ, Cleopas and another disciple, the ten disciples.

Scripture Setting: Some of the Prophecies Concerning Christ to Which He May Have Referred. The seed of the woman shall bruise the serpent, Gen. 3:15. The birth in Bethlehem, Mic. 5:2. The Triumphal Entry, Zech. 9:9. And Christ's sufferings, Psa. 22; Isa. 53. He is typified by the brazen serpent, Num. 21:8, 9. Moses in the law foretells the coming of a Prophet, Deut. 18:15, 18. Through Christ, David's kingdom shall be established forever, 2 Sam. 7:16; Jer. 23:5, 6; Psa. 89:4, 29, 36, 37. Like a shepherd shall He feed His flock, Isa. 40:11. He shall be the Messiah, Dan. 9:25; the Desire of all nations, Hag. 2:7; the Messenger of the Covenant, Mal. 3:1; and the Sun of Righteousness, Mal. 4:2. His reign shall be one of peace, Isa. 11; and it shall be everlasting, Isa. 9:6, 7.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. By overcoming the doubts of those to whom He appeared, Christ firmly established the truth of His resurrection. As has been said, "they doubted that we might believe." 2. Because these two disciples loved Jesus and because their minds were so filled with thoughts of Him that they could talk of nothing else, He appeared unto them, enlightening their darkness and bringing joy to their hearts. 3. The sympathy, which He always feels for those in trouble, drew forth their confidence. 4. His new interpretation of the Scriptures, rather than His bodily form, caused their hearts to burn within them. 5. Had they not urged Him to abide with them, they would have missed the joy and blessing which His presence afforded; for Christ enters no home uninvited. 6. Joy unshared is not true joy; the great fact of Christ's resurrection these two were eager to share with the disciples.

THE OPENED SCRIPTURES.

On the Way to Emmaus. On the afternoon of the day on which Mary and the women saw the Lord, two of the disciples left the city of Jerusalem by the western gate. One of these was Cleopas, whose wife had been among the women who stood near the cross on the day of the crucifixion. Perhaps he, too, had been in that sad group. We do not know the name of the other disciple. Possibly it was St. Luke, who has given us the account of this incident. We do know, however, that both these men had loved Jesus and had been His followers and now they could think and talk of nothing but Him, as they went towards Emmaus, where one of them lived.

As they climbed the hill towards the little town, sweet flowers blossomed by the wayside, while, on the trees, the gold of orange and paler yellow of lemon gleamed among shining leaves. The day drew to its close and the sun went down amidst a blaze of glory, but they had no eyes for any of these beauties. Their hearts were crushed with sorrow and their faces bore the marks of sadness, for He whom they loved was dead and buried. They were returning from Jerusalem, where they had heard the report of what the women had seen at the sepulchre of Christ, but the strange tale had only added to their doubts and perplexities.

Christ Joins Them. Christ knew both their love and their grief, and He came to comfort them. Had He not promised to manifest Himself to those who love Him? As they walked on, He overtook them, but St. Luke tells us that their eyes were "holden," and St. Mark that He appeared in another form, so they did not recognize Him. Certainly they had no expectation of ever seeing their Master again, and they supposed this Man was only one of the many strangers who filled the city, as Mary had thought Him the gardener. They were surprised, therefore, when He addressed them. "Of what are you talking?" He asked, "and why are you so sad?" He spoke in so kind and sympathetic a tone that they could not resent His questions.

Hardly glancing at Him, Cleopas replied, "Are you a stranger in Jerusalem that you do not know of the things which have happened there in these days?"

"What things?" asked Jesus.

"The things concerning Jesus of Nazareth," they replied, "who was a Prophet, mighty in deed and word before God and all the people. And how the chief priests and our rulers delivered Him up to be condemned to death, and crucified Him. But we hoped that it was He who should redeem Israel.

And besides all this, it is now the third day since these things happened. Moreover certain women of our company, who were early at the tomb, amazed us by saying that His Body was not there but that angels had told them that He was alive. And certain of the disciples went to the sepulchre and found it empty just as the women had said, but they did not see Jesus."

Christ Opens the Scriptures. Then Christ said: "O foolish men, do you not believe all that the prophets have spoken? Was it not written that Christ must suffer all these things before He entered into His glory?" Then He began to explain the Scriptures to them. He reminded them that the Lord had said in the garden of Eden that the seed of the woman should overcome the Serpent, or the Evil One, but that He should be bruised in the conflict. He told them that the brazen serpent, which was lifted up in the wilderness to save the people from the death which their sins had merited, was a type of Christ's death on the cross which saved the people from their sins.

He repeated Isaiah's prophecies which foretold that the Messiah should be a man of sorrow and acquainted with grief, despised and rejected of men, and cut off from the land of the living. Other prophecies, also, He explained and as He talked the two disciples listened first with wonder and then with joy. How blind they had been not to see that Christ's death, instead of destroying all their hopes, really proved that He was the promised Messiah.

The Disciples Recognize Their Lord. The end of their journey came while they were still talking and the stranger was about to leave them. But they urged Him to stay with them. "Abide with us," they said, "for 'tis toward evening and the day is far spent."

And He yielded to their entreaties and entered their home. Soon their simple meal was ready and they gave Him the seat of honor at the head of the table. Taking up the bread, He gently broke it in pieces, then reverently bowing His head, He asked the Father's blessing upon it. Was it the familiar and beautiful attitude, as He bent His head in reverence; was it the tender and reverent tones of His voice; was it a loving request for them that finally opened their eyes? We do not know, but at last the wondrous truth dawned upon them. He whom they had believed dead was alive; their Lord and Master was again with them here at their table! In love and awe they gazed upon Him, but before they could give expression to their astonishment and joy, He vanished from their sight.

Then they remembered the walk and the wonderful conversation. How could they have failed to recognize Him before! "Did not our hearts burn within us," they said to each other, "while He talked with us by the way and while He opened to us the Scriptures? We must tell the others," they cried; "they, too, must know that Jesus is really alive."

Sharing the Good News. They did not stop to finish their meal but started at once back to Jerusalem to tell the glad tidings to the other disciples. When they reached the city, they went at once to the upper room where ten of the disciples were gathered. Perhaps it was the very room where the Last Supper had been eaten. As they entered, some of the disciples cried out, "The Lord has risen indeed and hath appeared unto Peter!"

"We, too, have seen Him," said Cleopas and his friend, and then they told of their wonderful experience. But though most of those who were gathered in that upper room rejoiced because their Lord was alive once more, some still doubted, finding it impossible to believe that Christ had really risen from the dead.

Quiz. 1. Where was Emmaus? 2. Give a promise, made by Christ in His talk with His disciples at the Last Supper, which He fulfilled in this story. 3. Tell of others, besides the two in this story, who failed to recognize him, when He came to them after the resurrection. 4. Give other passages in which Christ is called a Prophet. 5. At Christ's birth what two people spoke of Him as a Redeemer? 6. Give some of the passages regarding Christ which He may have repeated to these two disciples. 7. At what other times did He break bread with His disciples? 8. On what other occasions did He suddenly vanish from sight?

Practical Truths. 1. When our minds are filled with thoughts of Christ, a vision of Him is often granted to us. 2. If we search the Scriptures, we, too, shall find that they are they which testify of Him. 3. He makes Himself known to those who are loyal and true hearted, however humble may be their station in life. 4. His companionship will turn sorrow into joy. 5. We may be conscious of our Saviour's presence at all times, as we gather about the table, as we walk along the highway and as we engage in any right duties or pleasures. 6. Faith opens the eyes which unbelief has darkened. 7. Hospitality shown to strangers often brings unexpected blessings. 8. Whatever new truth or experience comes to us, we should hasten to share with others. 9. Christ will not enter our hearts or our homes unless we invite Him to do so.

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

JESUS APPEARS TO THE APOSTLES.

Then the same day at being the first day

of the week,
when the

were shut where the were assembled for fear

of the Jews, came Jesus
and

and saith unto them, Peace be unto you. And when he had so said, he

and

Then were the disciples glad, when they saw the Lord.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 20:19-23; LUKE 24:36-48; MARK 16:14.

Prayer: Dear Saviour, We thank Thee for the loving tenderness with which Thou didst convince Thy disciples of Thy resurrection. Thou wast not disheartened by their blindness and lack of faith; instead, Thou didst remove all doubt from their minds and give them joy unspeakable. Wilt Thou give us, also, visions of Thyself, O risen Saviour, and may we be witnesses of Thee unto all men. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"Strong Son of God, immortal Love,
Whom we, that have not seen Thy face,
By faith, and faith alone, embrace,
Believing where we cannot prove!

"Thou seemest human and Divine,
The highest, holiest art Thou:
Our wills are ours, we know not how;
Our wills are ours to make them Thine."
—Tennyson.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Sunday evening, April 9, A. D. 30. Place, An upper room in Jerusalem. Persons, Christ, the ten disciples and others.

Scripture Setting: Jesus' Presence. Brings peace, John 20:19; Eph. 2:13, 14; Col. 1:20; John 14:27. Removes doubt and fear, John 20:20; Luke 24:38-43; Rom. 8:15; Heb. 13:6; 1 John 4:18. Cures unbelief, Luke 24:25-27, 41-43; Mark 5:36; John 20:24-28; John 1:7. Removes sadness, Luke 24:38-43; John 16:20. Gives enlightenment and understanding, Luke 24:27, 32, 45; Acts 16:14; Eph. 1:17, 18; Col. 2:2, 3; 2 Tim. 2:7; 1 John 5:20. Brings joy, John 20:20; 15:11; 16:22; 1 Pet. 1:8.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The fact that the disciples were convinced that Christ had risen from the dead, in spite of their unbelief, is a strong proof of the truth of the resurrection. 2. Christ removed their doubts by showing them His hands and feet and by eating before them. 3. Their sorrow was thus turned into joy. 4. Unto them, as unto the two on the way to Emmaus, Christ opened the Scriptures, showing that His sufferings proved Him to be the Son of God. 5. He gives them the high dignity of being witnesses of Him, and, as He had been sent from the Father to save men from sin, so He now commissions them to preach forgiveness of sin through His name.

JESUS TURNS THE SORROW OF HIS DISCIPLES INTO JOY.

The Disciples in the Upper Room. What eager, excited voices were heard in that upper room as the wonderful news of Christ's resurrection was discussed. Peter, whose days had been sad and bitter with remorse since his denial of his Lord, had now a face shining with joy and a heart overflowing with gratitude because Christ had come to him and spoken words of love and forgiveness. Of the truth of the resurrection he, at least, had no doubt. Nor had John, to whom the wondrous fact had come as a possibility even as he looked at the empty sepulchre and discarded grave clothes. The women's stories were commented upon with doubt or faith by the wondering disciples and also the account of Christ's walk to Emmaus which had been given them by Cleopas and his friend. What could it all mean? Some still maintained that it was impossible He should rise, such a thing could not be—it was only a vision these different ones had seen or imagined. Others were ready to believe that Christ could transcend even the laws of life and death.

Jesus Appears Unto Them. As the disciples talked His marvellous Presence glided into the room! The loud voices ceased as one by one they discovered Him, and terrified, they gazed upon the wondrous Form, like and yet unlike their Master. For a radiance was about Him, an ethereal light that they had never seen before; such joy, such peace did His countenance express; no longer was there a trace of sadness or suffering. Was it He! Had the closed doors, which had been locked for fear of the Jews, no power to keep Him out? Was He no longer bound by natural laws? Or was this only a spirit that suggested Him to their minds? As they gazed in doubt and terror upon Him, they heard the greeting, the usual one given by one to another in those days but assuming a new meaning as it fell from his lips, "Peace be unto you."

He Quiets Their Fears. Seeing their white and terrified faces, Jesus asked, "Why are ye troubled?" He loved these dear friends so tenderly, and He wanted to make them rejoice because He was no longer dead. He could not bear to see them so terrified. "Wherefore do questionings arise in your hearts?" he asked. "See my hands and my feet that it is I, Myself: handle Me, and see; for a spirit hath not flesh and bones, as ye see Me have;" that is, "See, it is really I. Look at My hands and My feet, and come and touch Me."

Then He showed them the print of the nails in His hands and in His feet and the wound in His side where the spear had pierced Him. The disciples were overcome with joy. Was it really their Master come back to life again! It seemed too wonderful to be true.

He Removes All Doubts. Seeing that they still found it hard to believe, Jesus turned to the table where they had been eating their evening meal and asked, "Have ye here anything to eat?"

Quickly they brought Him a piece of broiled fish and a little honey. And He took these and ate them. Then they were sure He was not a spirit but their own dear Lord. How often they had eaten with Him!

Memories of the Past. They had helped Him feed the five thousand with the five loaves and two small fishes and again the four thousand with the seven loaves and few fishes. They had watched Him at the wedding in Cana, when His mother had called Him from the table to change the water into wine. They had heard His tender story about the debtor who loved much, when he sat at the Pharisee's table and the repentant woman had washed His feet with her tears; and they had seen His look of love as He praised Mary for the costly ointment with which she had anointed His head when He sat at meat in the house of Simon the leper.

They had been with Him in that beautiful home in Bethany and had heard His loving words of reproof to Martha who was so eager to give Him of her best that she took no time to listen to His words, as Mary did. They remembered that everywhere they had gone Jesus had loved to share the social life of the people and that it had been His joy to break bread with them. Not only to rich men's houses like the Pharisee's had He gone, but to those of the despised, like Matthew's, where He had eaten with publicans and sinners because, as He had told the Pharisees, it was just such people that He had come to help. He had asked Zacchaeus, also, whom every one looked down upon, to entertain Him. All these occasions the disciples remembered.

Then, most precious memory of all, the disciples recalled the last passover they had had together, when Jesus had washed their feet to show them how they must love and serve each other; when He had asked them to remember Him, as they broke the bread and drank the wine, and when He had prayed to the Father, asking Him to keep them safe from the evil in the world.

But those hours of tender fellowship had been followed by such terrible scenes. In spite of their love for their Master and the devotion which they had so loudly professed, they had deserted Him in His hour of need, and Peter had even denied Him. The remembrance of their disloyalty, and of His sufferings and awful death on the cross which had been followed by His burial, and the crushing of all their hopes, had left them too overcome by grief to care for food. Ah, what hours of darkness and doubt they had had! But now He was with them again—their risen Lord—He was once more eating with them. Glad tears filled their eyes and their hearts sang for joy.

The Prophecies Foretold His Sufferings. And then He talked with them. First He showed them, as that afternoon He had shown Cleopas and his friend, how the prophecies had all told of His sufferings and death, and they, too, saw how those terrible scenes in His life, which they had thought the end of all, were, instead, the proof that

He was indeed the Messiah. He reminded them how He had told them again and again that He must be betrayed into the hands of the chief priests and be mocked and scourged and crucified, but that He should rise again on the third day. And now these words, which they had never before understood, were all plain to them.

Their Call to Service. And then He said to them: "As My Father hath sent Me, even so send I you." What wonderful words! Were they really to take His place,—to comfort and help people and to turn them from evil ways and lead them to desire a holy life? "I want you to tell every one," He continued, "that if they repent and believe in Me, their sins will be forgiven. Ye are My witnesses," said He. Ah, they could be that! They could tell others of Him: of His life of loving service, and of the cruel death He had died that He might save people from their sins. After giving them this service to do for Him, the Saviour vanished as suddenly as He had come.

Quiz and Study. 1. What promise of Christ's in regard to the gathering together of two or three in His name did He fulfill in this scene? 2. Give some of the passages in which Christ, during His life, had told His disciples of His sufferings and death. 3. Why did the Heavenly Father send Christ into the world. 4. Give the verse that tells of Christ's promise to see His disciples again and to turn their sorrow into joy. 5. Give another instance when the disciples thought that Christ was a spirit. 6. Tell of some occasions when, instead of hiding behind locked doors, the disciples bravely preached of Christ and risked death for His sake. 7. What patriarch heard news which he could not believe for joy? 8. Tell of another company which was assembled together, praying, when, suddenly, the man for whom they prayed knocked at the door.

Practical Truths. 1. Christ gave ample proofs of His resurrection to all who doubted and so convinced were the disciples of its truth that they made it the basis of their preaching. 2. Through their words, they led thousands to believe in it, also. 3. Their lives were transformed by the great fact that they were willing to sacrifice even life itself rather than relinquish their faith in it. 4. Jesus' recognition by His disciples gives us assurance that we shall know our friends after death. 5. No doors will keep Christ away from His disciples when they are in grief and sorrow. 6. He says to us, as He said to the disciples, "Why are ye troubled?" and He will remove all cause for sorrow, if we but hearken to His words. 7. He came to prove the truth of the Scriptures, as they in turn prove that He is the Son of God. 8. We, too, may be witnesses of the risen Lord. 9. "As the Father has sent Me, even so send I you." These words mark the three-fold relation of the church to the Son, to the Father, and to the world, and her position in it."

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

But Thomas, one of the twelve, called Didymus, was not with them when Jesus came. The other disciples therefore

We have seen the Lord. But he said unto them, Except I shall see in his hands the print of the nails, and put my finger into the print of the nails, and thrust my hand into his side, I will not believe. And after eight days again his disciples were within, and Thomas with them: then came Jesus, the

and

and said, Peace be unto you. Then saith he to Thomas, Reach hither thy finger, and behold and reach hither thy hand, and thrust it into and be not faithless, but believing. And Thomas answered and said unto him, My Lord and my God. Jesus saith unto him, Thomas because thou hast seen me, thou hast believed: blessed are they that have not seen, and yet have believed. And many other signs truly did in the presence of his disciples, which are not written in this book: But these are written, that ye might believe that Jesus is the Christ, the Son of God; and that believing ye might have life through his name.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 20:24-29.

Prayer: Dear Jesus, We thank Thee that Thou hast given us such strong proofs of Thy resurrection that, though we cannot touch Thee, as Thomas did, we may know Thee as our risen Savior.

Take doubt out of our hearts. May we know that, having conquered death, Thou canst protect us in danger and keep us from sin. And may our faith in Thee enable us to do great things for Thee. Amen.

"My Father, it is good for me
To trust, and not to trace;
And wait with deep humility
For Thy revealing grace.

"So faith and patience, wait awhile!—
Not doubting; not in fear;
For soon in Heaven my Father's smile Shall render all things clear."

—George Rawson.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Sunday evening, April 16, A. D. 30. Place, An upper room in Jerusalem. Persons, Christ, Thomas and the other ten disciples.

Scripture Setting: A Study of Faith. A definition, Heb. 11:1. Jesus, the Author and Perfecter, Heb. 12:2; Examples, Heb. 11:4-38. Praised by Christ, Matt. 8:10; 15:28; John 20:29. A condition of healing, Matt. 9:29. Brought healing, Matt. 8:13; 9:6, 7; 15:28; Mark 5:34; 10:52; Luke 17:19; Acts 3:16; 14:9, 10. Brought forgiveness of sin, Matt. 9:2; Luke 7:48, 50. Prayer of faith answered, Matt. 21:22; Jas. 1:5, 6. Purifies hearts, Acts 15:9. Justifies, Rom. 4:5; 5:1; Gal. 2:16. Sanctifies, Acts 26:18; Col. 1:21-23. A shield, Eph. 6:16. A breastplate, 1 Thess. 5:8. Dead without works, Jas. 2:17.

Made perfect by works, Jas. 2:22. Faith overcomes the world, 1 John 5:4.

Life and Conduct Setting: The special features of this story are: 1. Thomas' unbelief in spite of the positive assurance of all the disciples that they had seen the Lord. 2. His assertion that he would not believe that Christ was alive again until he, himself, had touched Him. 3. Jesus' love and tenderness in giving this doubting disciple the proofs he required. 4. His gentle reproof of Thomas' faithlessness. 5. Thomas' confession of faith, which is another proof of the truth of the resurrection. 6. Jesus' words of approval to those who walk by faith and not by sight. 7. Jesus appears unto James.

JESUS TENDERNESS TO HIS DOUBTING DISCIPLE.

Thomas' Grief. When Jesus appeared to the disciples in that upper room, Thomas was not with them. This disciple had been so crushed by Jesus' awful death that he no longer wished to live. He stayed by himself, thinking sadly of all the dreadful things which had happened and not wishing to see even the other disciples.

He Is Told of Christ's Resurrection. But one day some of the disciples came to him and exclaimed: "Good news, Thomas! Such wonderful news we have to tell you! Jesus is no longer dead! He is risen and we have seen Him!"

As Thomas looked up incredulously, they said: "Mary Magdalene saw Him first and then some of the other women, but when they told us of it, we could not believe such a thing possible. But last night, as we sat at meat, Peter came in and told us that he, too, had seen the Lord and, just as he finished speaking, Cleopas and his friend entered the room and told us that Jesus had overtaken them on the way to Emmaus. They did not know Him at first and He walked to their home with them, explaining the Scriptures and showing how they foretold the Messiah's sufferings. They asked Him to come into their home, and when He blessed and brake the bread, they recognized Him.

"We were all filled with wonder, but it was so inconceivable that Christ could be alive once more that we still doubted, when, suddenly,—ah, how can we tell you—He stood in our midst! The doors were tightly locked for fear of the Jews, but notwithstanding that, He had entered. At first we were all terrified and thought He was a spirit, but He said: 'Fear not: it is really I, your Master. See the prints of the nails in My hands and feet. Come and touch Me and see for yourselves that I am not a spirit.'

"And, Thomas, then we were convinced, and you may know how glad we were that He is alive again. He even ate before us that no doubt of His reality might linger in our minds. Then He said that He wished us to be His witnesses and tell others of His life and death and of His rising again from the grave. We have hastened to share the good news with you, for we knew how sad you were."

Thomas' Unbelief. But Thomas shook his head. "Such a thing could not happen," he replied. "You have all been deceived. Unless I, myself, can see the print of the nails in His hands and put my finger into those prints, and my hand into the wound in His side, I will not believe."

"Ah, Thomas," replied the disciples, "why will you be so doubting of heart? What joy might be yours if you would only believe." Sadly they turned away, but at the door they stopped. "Will you not at least meet with us, Thomas?" they asked. "Each night we shall be in that upper room and perhaps, oh perhaps Jesus may come to us again."

Thomas consented to do as they wished and that evening he went to the disciples, but as the hours passed and Jesus did not come, he was strengthened in his doubts. Still he waited evening after evening in that upper room, growing more gloomy and sad each day. He had doubted even when the disciples first joyously brought their news, and now he was convinced that there could be no truth in what they had said. They had seen only a spirit or a vision. On Saturday night he said, "I shall come no more to these meetings: I am going to Galilee to-morrow."

"Oh, wait just one more day, Thomas," they urged. "It is just a week to-morrow since Jesus rose from the dead and since we saw Him,—that day will always be sacred to us for that reason, and each week we shall remember Him upon it. Perhaps to-morrow He will come again to us."

"Well, I will come one more evening," Thomas replied.

Jesus Appears. When Sunday evening came, once more the eleven disciples were together; the ten, glad of heart in the sure faith that their Master lived and might at any time appear to them; Thomas, sad and depressed, convinced that he should never again see the Lord whom he so loved. But suddenly, there was a slight movement and, looking up, the disciples saw that Jesus was in their midst.

Ah, how wonderful was His appearance! The face that had been white and drawn with pain, when they had seen Him on the cross, was as bright as the sun. Such a look of rest and peace was in His eyes, for all suffering and pain had passed. He was like the Jesus they had known,—the same dear form, the same tender looks and loving smile, and yet He was different. Such a radiance, such a glory was about Him that they could scarcely look upon Him. They hid their faces, as they had done upon the Mount, when He was transfigured before them.

Jesus Removes Thomas' Doubt. He turned first of all to Thomas: "Ah, My Thomas," He said, "Could you not believe that I was alive unless you touched me? Then come, put your finger in these nail prints in My hands, and put your hand in the wound of the spear here in My side, and be not faithless but believing."

But the doubt had vanished from Thomas' heart. He threw himself at Jesus' feet and amidst the sobs which shook him,—tears of repentance and of joy—he exclaimed, "My Lord, and my God."

Lovingly the Saviour laid His hand upon the head of the weeping disciple, "Ah, Thomas, dost thou believe now thou hast seen Me," He said; "blessed are they that have not seen and yet have believed."

Jesus Reveals Himself to James. To one other doubting one did Jesus show Himself. One of the griefs of His earthly life had been the knowledge that his own brothers did not believe that He was the Son of God. He had so loved them and He had longed to have them among the first to receive the Father's message which He had brought. But at one time, when He was doing His wonderful works of healing and when the people were thronging about Him, so that neither He nor His disciples could find time to eat, His brothers had tried to take Him away, because they thought He had gone crazy.

Indeed, so little did they believe in Him and His message that one day when He was told that they wished to speak with Him, He sadly replied: "You are more truly my brothers than are they, for whosoever shall do the will of My Father who is in Heaven, he is My brother."

But now that He had risen from the dead, surely they would believe, so He sought His brother James, and revealed Himself to him. We do not know what was said at that interview, but we know that not only was James led to believe that Jesus was really the Son of God, but that he influenced his brothers, also, to believe, so after that we find them working with the disciples. It must have been a great joy to Jesus to have the members of His own family at last believe in Him.

And so from the minds of one and another of those whom Jesus loved and who loved Him did He remove all doubt. His voice was enough for Mary, while Thomas required an actual touch. But in convincing them all of the reality of His existence, He has given such strong proofs of His resurrection that we may sing with Tennyson:

"Strong Son of God, immortal Love,
Whom we that have not seen Thy face,
By faith, and faith alone, embrace,
Believing where we cannot prove,"

and may rejoice with glad hearts in a living Saviour.

Quiz and Study. 1. Why would not Thomas believe that Christ had risen? 2. What proofs did Jesus give him? 3. What were the words in which he confessed his faith? 4. Whom did Jesus declare to be blessed? 5. What is the chapter on faith in the Bible? 6. What definition does it give of faith? 7. Give the names of those mentioned in it who lived lives of faith. 8. How did Noah show faith? Abraham? Gideon? 9. Give an instance of some missionary who showed faith. 10. Give an instance of faith of which you have known.

Practical Truths. 1. Thomas' confession of faith, "My Lord and my God," should be ours, also. 2. By convincing the disciple who doubted that He had risen from the dead, in spite of what the others said, Jesus gave an infallible proof of His resurrection. 3. Christ is able to save us from doubts as well as from sin. 4. All things are possible to him that believeth, but doubt prevents any successful action. 5. Faith is the basis of business, invention and discovery, and how much more of a right religious life, for without faith it is impossible to please Him. 6. In His own country Christ could do no mighty works because of the unbelief of the people, so we, through lack of faith, often miss the blessings God would so gladly bestow upon us. 7. "Lord, I believe; help Thou mine unbelief," should be the cry of our hearts.

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

JESUS AND PETER

He saith unto him the third time, Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou me?

was grieved because he said unto him the third time, Lovest thou me? And he said unto him, Lord, thou knowest all things; thou knowest that I love thee.

said unto him,
Feed my

Verily, verily,
I say unto thee,
When thou wast young, thou thyself,

and walkedst whither
thou wouldest:
but when thou shalt be thou shalt stretch forth thy

and another
shall

and whither thou wouldest not. This spake he, signifying by what death he should glorify God. And when he had spoken this, he saith unto him, Follow me.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS JOHN 21:1-19.

Prayer: O loving Saviour, Who didst so tenderly call Thy erring disciple back to Thy service, Thou knowest that we love Thee. But wilt Thou not make our love burn more brightly.

"More love to Thee, O Christ, more love to Thee! Hear Thou the prayer we make on bended knee."

Not for a selfish love do we pray, but for one that shall show itself in service. May we hear Thy call to feed Thy lambs,—the little ones of Thy fold —and to give to Thy sheep the blessings which Thou hast lavished upon us. Amen.

"O Love, that will not let me go,
I rest my weary soul in Thee;
I give Thee back the life I owe,
That in thine ocean depths its flow
May richer, fuller be."

G. MATHESON.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting. Time, the last of April or first of May, A. D. 30. Place, the Sea of Galilee. Persons, Christ and seven disciples.

Scripture Setting: The Similitude between Peter's Life and a Present Day Disciple. He was called to service, Matt. 4:19; 28:19. His confession of faith, Matt. 16:16; 10:32. He showed his love in words rather than deeds, Luke 22:33, 34; Matt. 7:21. He denied Christ, Matt. 26:69-74; Isa. 53:3, 6. But Christ's look of love led him to repentance, Luke 22:61, 62; Rom. 2:4. And his repentance worked a transformation in his character, Acts 2:14-36; 5:29-32; Eph. 4:22-24; Col. 1:21, 22. He was protected by an angel, Acts 12:7-10; Psa. 91:11, 12. His service entailed suffering, John 21:18; Matt. 5:10, 11. But brought rich rewards, Matt. 5:12; 1 Pet. 1:3-8.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Waiting for Christ did not prevent the disciples from engaging in their customary work: 2. While thus engaged, their thoughts were upon their Master, for love and labor may go hand in hand. 3. Christ's power was shown in the miraculous draught of fishes but this miracle was dependent upon the obedience of the disciples. 4. John's love made him the first to recognize his Master and Peter's zeal brought him first to His side. 5. Not only did Christ have thought for the spiritual needs of His disciples, but He also tenderly provided both food and warmth for their physical needs. 6. Though Christ, by His thrice repeated question, recalled to Peter his triple denial, He reinstated him before the other disciples by entrusting him with His work. 7. Not by words only, but by service to others, was Peter's love for Christ to be shown. 8. Trial and suffering are often a part of service for Christ, for the disciple must be as the Lord. 9. "The last word and the first word of Christ is the same, 'Follow Me.'"

"LOVEST THOU ME?"

The Disciples Return to Galilee. The days passed and the disciples did not again see Jesus after that meeting in the upper room with Thomas. Even Sunday, the day on which He had twice appeared to them, went by and He did not come. Then they remembered that He had said to the women, "Tell My disciples to go into Galilee," so they started for their old homes, hoping to meet Him there. But again they waited day after day, and Jesus did not come to them.

How vividly the Lake of Galilee reminded them of Jesus! There they had been chosen to be His disciples. From it they could see the mountain where Jesus had preached His great sermon about those who were blessed and about true righteousness and had taught them the Lord's prayer. Near there, also, He had fed the multitude and had performed many of His great acts of healing.

As seven of the disciples sat one evening by its blue waters, thinking of their Master, they saw the sailors hoisting their sails and going out in their boats to fish. Among the seven disciples were Peter, John, and his brother James, Thomas, who doubted no longer, and Nathanael, who had been a faithful follower of Christ ever since he had been persuaded, years before, that He was indeed the Son of God. After watching the boats, as, one by one, they sailed away, Peter suddenly sprang up and said, "I am going fishing." Then said the others, "We will go with you."

So Peter hoisted the sail on his own boat and put the torch in the stern to attract the fish, and the disciples started. All night long they sailed up and down but they caught no fish. Weary from their hours of fruitless effort, they decided, when the first faint streaks of morning appeared in the sky, to give up and come in.

The Miraculous Draught of Fishes. As they neared the shore, they saw, in the faint light, a stranger standing on the white beach. "Children," He called (using the sweet term often applied even to grown people), "have ye aught to eat?" (or "Have you any fish?") "No," they answered. They thought that perhaps He wanted to buy some fish.

But He spoke again to them, "Cast the net on the right side of the ship, and ye shall find." Had He perhaps seen a shoal of fish there, they thought. Quickly they obeyed Him and cast the net as He directed when—O marvel of marvels!—it grew heavier and heavier, so it was all they could do to hold it. John remembered that other scene when Jesus gave them the wonderful draught of fishes and then called them to be His followers, and turning to Peter, He said, "It is the Lord."

Impulsive Peter, upon hearing these words, at once jumped into the water and swam swiftly to shore, as he could not bear to wait to reach his Master in the boat. The others, leaving their ship anchored, took the little boat which was fastened to it and rowed ashore, dragging the net after them.

Jesus Gives the Disciples Food. On the shore there was a little fire which seemed good to the disciples, after the long hours spent in the cold. On the coals a fish was broiling and a loaf of bread was near the fire. Jesus—for it was really He,—said to the disciples, "Bring of the fish which you have just caught."

Peter sprang up and, with the help of the others, pulled the heavy net up on the shore. Then they found that there were one hundred and fifty-three large fish, and yet the net had not broken. Then Jesus said, "Come and break your fast."

He took the bread and fish and gave them to the disciples. Would He show them first through the miraculous draught of fishes and now through this provision for their temporal needs that, in their work as fishers of men, they must look to Him for spiritual support?

"Lovest Thou Me." After they had breakfasted, Jesus turned to Peter and said, "Simon, son of Jonas" (his old name before he had become a disciple), "lovest thou Me more than these?"

Peter at once remembered that night before the crucifixion when, as they were going to Gethsemane, Jesus had told His disciples that they should all be offended because of Him and he had boastfully answered, "Though all should be offended because of Thee, yet will I never be offended." He recalled, too, how he had added, when Christ told him that he would deny Him, "Though I should die with Thee, yet will I not deny Thee." And yet he had forsaken Him and fled and, worst of all, he had denied Him thrice. Jesus indeed had come to him alone, since His resurrection, and had heard his confession of sorrow and repentance. Would He still remind him of his sin? These thoughts passed through the mind of the erring disciple, but Jesus wished the other disciples to know that He still loved Peter, in spite of his sin, and trusted him with His work. So He asked, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me more than these?"

Peter was no longer boastful. He did not reply as before, "I love Thee better than the others and would do more for Thee." He did not even use Christ's word for love, which meant a reverent love, based on well considered choice; instead, he replied humbly, "Yea, Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee," the word he used meaning personal attachment and friendship.

Jesus said unto him, "Feed My lambs," that is, "If you care for Me, I will give you work to do for Me. Take care of the little children whom I love."

Again Jesus said to Peter, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me?" And once more Peter answered, "Yea Lord, Thou knowest that I love Thee."

And now Jesus said, "Feed My sheep." ("Guide and protect the grown people, also, whom I love.") Then Jesus said the third time, "Simon, son of Jonas, lovest thou Me?" And now He used Peter's word, "Are you sure that you care for Me as a friend?"

Peter was grieved because He asked him the third time, "Lovest thou Me?" He knew that he had denied Christ thrice but he felt sure that Jesus knew how deeply he had repented. Surely Jesus must know that he loved Him, so he answered, "Lord, Thou knowest all things. Thou knowest that I love Thee." And now Jesus said, "Feed My sheep (a word which meant both sheep and lambs), that is, 'I want you to care for people, as I have done, guiding and protecting them, and giving them all that they need.'"

As Peter heard these words and knew that Jesus wished him to work for Him, in spite of his fall, his heart was filled with love and he was eager to enter upon the service.

"The true lesson of this scene is for all the disciples of Christ. We are all, through Peter's experience, admonished to show our love for our Master, not by asking permission to do great things (as to walk on the waves), not by refusing to accept His humiliation for us (as by refusing to allow the feet-washing), nor yet by professing what we will do in the hour of difficulty and danger (as by the assurance, 'I will not deny Thee'), nor even by entering into fierce battle against His foes (as by drawing the sword on Malchus), but by laying down the life in quiet, humble, self-denying service for the Master's sheep—the followers of Christ, the wanderers from the fold, and the weakest and feeblest in the fold."—Abbott.

Quiz and Study. 1. Tell of another time when Jesus gave the disciples a miraculous draught of fishes. 2. Tell how He called Nathaniel to His service? 3. John writes that this is the third time Jesus showed Himself to his disciples after He was risen from the dead (v. 14); what were the other two? 4. Why did Jesus ask Peter three times if he loved Him? 5. What did He mean by feeding His sheep and lambs? 6. Give passages in which Jesus speaks of Himself as a Shepherd, or is called this name by others. 7. How did Peter serve Christ after this? 8. What death did he die?

Practical Truths: 1. Jesus asks each of us, as He asked Peter, "Lovest thou Me?" 2. Our answer should be given not only in words but in service. 3. In spite of our failures and sins, Jesus loves and desires us to work for Him. 4. While pursuing our daily work, we, like the disciples, may have a vision of our Lord. 5. As He provided warmth and food for them, so He gives us all that we need. 6. Through obedience the disciples received a rich blessing, so may we when we obey Christ's commands. 7. "The risen Christ on the eternal shore, unrecognized, guides His people's work on life's tossing sea."

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

Then the eleven

into into a where Jesus had appointed them. And when they saw him they but some doubted. And Jesus came and spake unto them, saying, All power is given unto me in and in

Go ye, therefore, and teach all nations, baptizing them in the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Ghost:

them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you:
and, lo, I am with you always, even unto the end of the world. Amen.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MATT. 28:16-20. READ MARK 16:14-20; LUKE 24:46-48.

Prayer: Dear Saviour, May we obey Thy last and great command. As the disciples felt themselves to be Thy witnesses and gave their lives to spreading the Gospel, so may we witness for Thee and devote our time, our money and our prayers to the work of missions. May we thus help to hasten the day when all nations shall know and worship Thee. For Thy name's sake. Amen.

"We've a message to give to the nations,
That the Lord who reigneth above,
Hath sent us His Son to save us,
And show us that God is love.

"We've a Saviour to show to the nations,
Who the path of sorrow has trod,
That all of the world's great people Might come to the truth of God."

—H. E. Nichol.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, probably early in May, A. D. 30. Place, a mountain in Galilee. Persons, Christ and His eleven disciples.

Scripture Setting: The Evangelization of the World. The ingathering of the nations prophesied, Isa. 52:10; 62:2; Psa. 98:2, 3; and the sending of missionaries, Isa. 52:7. The command obeyed: (1) By the disciples to the Jews, Acts 2:4, 32, 41; 4:20; 5:32; and to the Gentiles, Acts 8:26-39; 10:34-48. (2) By Paul to the Jews, Acts 13:5, 14; and to the Gentiles, Acts 13:46-48; 16:9-13; 17:22-31, etc.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. All power was given to Christ, but He used it in teaching, not in subduing, the nations; He wished them to give Him a voluntary, not a forced allegiance. 2. "His power is exercised in patience, long-suffering and love and has its highest exemplification in the cross."—Abbott. 3. The knowledge of this power of Christ's gives strength to His disciples as they preach of Him. 4. The Jews kept their faith to themselves, but Christ's Gospel was to be preached to every creature. 5. The Gospel of Jesus Christ is adapted to all nations, as it is a universal religion. 6. We become disciples through baptism and we remain such through obedience to Christ's commands. 7. Christ's promise is "I am," not, "I shall be, with you." He is ever present, and as the promise was given in connection with His last command, we may be especially sure of His help in all our work for missions.

CHRIST'S LAST COMMAND.

Christ Meets His Disciples. Before leaving Galilee, Christ wished to have a last talk with His disciples, so He sent them word to meet Him on a mountain. As they waited, eagerly expectant, they saw Him approach, but so radiant was His appearance, so dazzling His face, that some thought an angelic presence drew near. Jesus, perceiving their doubt, came closer to them, so that they might see Him more distinctly and touch Him, if they chose. As they perceived that it was really their beloved Master, they bowed to the ground, in awe and deepest love, and worshiped Him. "All power is given unto Me," He said, "in Heaven and in earth."

Now indeed had He come into His Kingdom: not as King of the Jews only would He reign, though to Him was now given the throne of His father David, but His was a universal realm.

"Go Ye Into All the World." In establishing this Kingdom, He would allow His disciples to be co-workers with Him. "Go ye," He said, "and make disciples of all the nations, baptizing them into the name of the Father, and of the Son, and of the Holy Spirit: teaching them to observe all things whatsoever I have commanded you." And then He gave them a promise, the one of all others they would most rejoice to receive: "Lo, I am with you always," He said, "even unto the end of the world."

Never more should they be alone, never again without Him! If sad or discouraged, He would comfort them, if overburdened, His help would be theirs; His presence would lessen their sorrows, increase their joys and give them strength and inspiration. And the work He asked of them, how glorious it was! What a high privilege to tell others of Him, to make them His disciples through baptism, to teach them to do His will and to obey His commandments.

The Last Command, Obeyed by the Disciples. Joyfully the disciples listened, and faithfully did they obey this last command of their risen Lord and Master. After the Holy Spirit came upon them at Pentecost, they preached with all boldness. Weak and faithless Peter, who, terrified by a woman's question, had denied his Lord, became fearless and eloquent. Even before the dread council did he tell of Christ, and boldly declare that he should obey God rather than men and continue to preach, in spite of the commands of the chief priests. The other disciples, also, with equal fidelity, spread abroad Christ's Gospel, so that thousands were baptized in a single day.

The Converts Proclaim the Good News. And not only was the good news proclaimed by the eleven disciples; those, also, who had been baptized, took up the work, for Christ's last command was given to all His disciples, not only to those whom He had called, but to all others who would be known by His name. Stephen's consecrated life and active service so aroused the opposition of the chief priests that he was stoned to death, and others suffered persecution. But this persecution only increased the number of Christians, for the disciples rejoiced that they were called to be partakers of Christ's sufferings.

The Gospel Preached to the Gentiles. And now they learned that it was not only to their own people that they were to proclaim God's love, as shown in the life and death of His Son: Peter, in a vision, was shown that to the Gentiles, also, was he to preach; Philip was sent to an Ethiopian eunuch; Paul heard and obeyed a call for help from Macedonia, and through Asia Minor, Greece and other countries he told of the Christ who was crucified for the sins of the world. Many of the disciples laid down their lives for the Gospel, but the terrible persecutions under the Roman emperors could not stamp out the new religion.

The Gospel Carried to India by Carey. And now the years pass and to other Christians does the call come. William Carey, teaching geography to the boys of his school, thinks of the countless millions in those far-away lands who know nothing of Christ. As he makes shoes in his little shop, he ponders over Christ's last command, "Go ye into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature."

At last he gathers courage to present the subject at a meeting of ministers and, though receiving a severe rebuff at first, he persists in urging the duty of sending out missionaries. At length a society is formed and Carey is sent to India. The account of his life and work there reads like a romance; he preaches and teaches, he founds schools, he translates the Bible into the many different languages which are spoken in that country, undaunted by the hardships and perils which he is called upon to endure.

Morrison Goes to China. And as the Gospel was carried to India by Carey, so in China did Morrison labor to bring the people of that vast land to the Saviour. He was in constant peril of his life; at times he dressed like a Chinaman, ate with chopsticks and lived in the basement of a warehouse. But though it was seven years before he had a single convert, he was not discouraged, but kept constantly at his great task of translating the Bible into that most difficult tongue.

Missionaries to Africa. Into darkest Africa went David Livingstone, showing the black people the love of Jesus through his own life of loving service. He died to bring the light to that dark land and begged that the door which he had opened might never be closed.

Judson Goes to Burmah. Adoniram Judson was another hero whose life was filled with thrilling experiences, and through whose efforts two Missionary Boards were started in our own land. He was taken prisoner by pirates and cast into a French prison; he was refused permission to live in India, after his long voyage out there, and being unwilling to return to America, he and his wife went alone to Burmah. After years of toil and hardship in that country, he was thrown into an awful prison and kept there for almost two years. But at last, largely through the efforts of "the Jesus man," as Judson was called, Burmah was opened to missionaries.

The Gospel Preached to the Indians. And in our own land we read of the great heroism of Marcus Whitman who, with his equally heroic wife, carried the good news of Christ's love to the Indians. He took one of the most wonderful rides ever recorded in history and was at length massacred by the red men to whom he had devoted his life.

Other Heroic Missionaries. There is not time to tell of Keith-Falconer, the Scottish nobleman and world renowned athlete, who left home, wealth and position to give his life to the Mohammedans in southern Arabia; of Queen Kapiolani, the converted Hawaiian queen, who dared the terrible fire goddess, Pele, in her burning lake of fire, to free her people from superstition and give them a knowledge of the true God; of Pundita Ramabai, who is devoting her life to the rescue and education of the poor little Hindu widows in India; of Dr. Grenfell, who, through countless perils on land and sea, has carried the Gospel to the people of northern Newfoundland and Labrador, those countries in the frozen North.

Open Doors for Us to Enter. All of these and countless more have given time, money and life itself to obey Christ's command. And now the countries are open to missionaries,—China, Japan, Korea, which were once hermit nations, India, Africa, the Isles of the Sea, all now welcome those who come to preach Christ's Gospel. But though the fields are white to the harvest, the laborers are few. Let us each one heed Christ's call and, if possible, carry His Gospel to some foreign land. But if we, ourselves, cannot go, let us do our share at home, helping with our time, our prayers, and our money to send the Gospel, so that, in this generation, all the nations of the earth may know and love our Lord and Master, Jesus Christ.

Quiz and Study. 1. How do we regard the last request of a friend? 2. What words in Christ's last command show that it was addressed to others besides the eleven disciples? 3. Give the life of some early missionary. 4. In what foreign country are you most interested? 5. Tell of the missionary work which has been done there. 6. Tell of some missionary whom you have known personally. 7. Are you going out as a missionary? 8. If not, what are you doing for missions?

Practical Truths. 1. "Christ's commission comes from an Almighty King and requires an aggressive ministry. 2. It defines Christianity as a universal religion, adapted to all nations."—Abbott. 3. It has been said that the question is not whether the heathen can obtain salvation, if the Gospel is not preached to them, but whether we can be saved, if we fail to obey Christ's last command. 4. When told that India seemed like a gold mine as deep as the center of the earth, Carey replied that he would go down if those at home would hold the ropes. If we cannot go to foreign lands, we can at least "hold the ropes" for those who do go. 5. When scornfully asked if he really expected to make an impression on the great Chinese empire, Morrison replied, "No, but I expect God will."

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

JESUS ASCENDS INTO HEAVEN.

And he

out as far as to Bethany, and he lifted up his hands, and

And it came to pass, while he blessed them, he was parted from them, and carried

And they worshipped him, and returned to with great joy: And were continually praising and blessing God. Amen.

LUKE 24: 50-53.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS MARK 16:19, 20; LUKE 24:50-52; ACTS 1:2-12.

Prayer: O risen Saviour, Once more we thank Thee, with hearts overflowing with gratitude, for Thy life of loving service and for Thy sufferings and death. We rejoice that the grave could not hold Thee but that Thou didst ascend to Thy Father and our Father. We know that, at His right hand, Thou dost plead for us, as our Advocate and High Priest. Make us Thy loving, faithful followers here below and, at our death, take us to be with Thee in that bright world above. Amen.

"Hail the day that sees Him rise,
Glorious to His native skies!
Christ, awhile to mortals given,
Enters now the gates of Heaven.

"See, the Heaven its Lord receives!
Yet He loves the earth He leaves:
Though returning to His throne, Still He calls mankind His own."

—Charles Wesley.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, May 14, A. D. 30. Place, Mount of Olives, near Bethany. Persons, Christ, His eleven disciples and two angels.

Scripture Setting: Christ parted from His disciples with a blessing, Luke 24:51; and left them with hearts filled with joy, Luke 24:52; He was seen in Heaven by Stephen, Acts 7:56, and John, Rev. 1:13-18; He came from Heaven to call Saul to His service, Acts 9:3-6. In Heaven, He prepares a place for us, John 14:2, where we shall be with Him, John 17:24. He sits at the right hand of God, Luke 22:69, where He acts as our Advocate, 1 John 2:1, our Mediator, 1 Tim. 2:5, and our High Priest, Heb. 8:1; 4:14-16; and from thence He shall come in glory, Matt. 26:64, to reward every man according to his works, Matt. 16:27; 25:31-46, and to give a crown of glory to those who love His appearing, 1 Pet. 5:4, 2 Tim. 4:8.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Christ's ascension to His Father denoted the completion of His work upon earth. 2. Having beheld Him ascend into Heaven, His disciples no longer expected to see Him upon earth and they could thenceforth think of Him as their risen Lord, sitting at the right hand of God. 3. That the disciples still clung to their Jewish belief in the establishment, by the Messiah, of an earthly kingdom for their race, was evidenced by their last question to Him, but, in His answer, He strove to lead them to realize that, through their own work, they could hasten the coming of His universal realm. 4. The promise of the Holy Spirit was Christ's greatest promise to His disciples and to us, since, through Him, a consciousness of the Saviour's continual presence may be felt. 5. The Heavenly messengers were ever ready to carry the Father's words of comfort and enlightenment, and through their ministrations, the disciples returned to Jerusalem with hearts filled with joy, rather than sorrow, and eager to take up their great work of spreading the Gospel.

JESUS RETURNS TO HIS FATHER.

A Retrospect of Christ's Earthly Life. At last the earthly days of our Saviour drew to a close. For thirty-three years He had lived in human form. He had been a wonderful Child, in His manger cradle in Bethlehem, adored by His Mother and worshipped by shepherds, and wise men from the East; a gentle, obedient Boy, in His home in Nazareth; and a great Teacher and Preacher, explaining and illuminating the law,—transforming it, indeed, so that justice might include mercy, purity be that of thought and look as well as deed, love be shown to the enemy as well as to the friend. He had performed wondrous acts of healing which drew about Him great crowds of followers. He had chosen as His disciples, fisherfolk, a publican, and other men of lowly station, whose lives He had strengthened, beautified and uplifted, so they might be His witnesses unto all men.

Then through days of decreasing popularity and increasing opposition and hatred, He had gone on His way, calm and serene, continuing His deeds of love and mercy. But at length the last days had come and His life had closed amidst scenes of unparalleled suffering,—the hours of agony in Gethsemane, when, alone with His Father, He had faced and accepted His awful fate, the unjust and protracted trials, which, though deserted by His friends and scorned and buffeted by His foes, He had endured with marvelous patience and courage, and the terrible scourging, cruel mockery and awful death upon the cross, which had marked its end.

The Price of Salvation Paid. The end did we say? With joy and gratitude we may change the word, for Christ's life did not end thus. It was indeed the end of His work. By this great price was salvation bought for all mankind, and through His death, the demands of the law that the soul that sinneth it shall die, were fully met. But from the grave Christ rose triumphant, and by one marvelous manifestation after another, He removed the doubt and incredulity from the minds of His disciples and followers, and changed their sorrow into joy. In Jerusalem and in Galilee He met them, being recognized by His voice, in the breaking of bread, and through His appearance, which, though still human, had about it much of the Divine.

The Necessity of the Ascension. And now He must leave these earthly scenes, which were so dear to Him, and these disciples and friends whom He so tenderly loved. He must return to His Father and, in order to still further confirm the faith of His followers, He must do this in their sight. They had learned that death had no power over Him; they knew that He could transcend human limitations, entering rooms through closed doors, appearing and disappearing from their sight, and now they must see Him rise towards Heaven, so they should no longer expect Him to be among them in His human form. But through the teaching of the Holy Spirit, they would learn that He was indeed still with them,—more really with them than when He walked by their side.

The Promise of the Holy Spirit. Once more He met them in Jerusalem and again He repeated His commission. They were to preach the good news that, through repentance and faith in Him, men might be saved, and they were to baptize those who believed. First in Jerusalem, then throughout all Judea, next into hated Samaria, and at last to all the world, they were to carry His Gospel and be witnesses of Him. But before starting upon this glorious mission, they were to tarry in Jerusalem until the Holy Spirit, with whom John had foretold He should baptize them, had come upon them, giving them power for their great work.

The True Nature of Christ's Kingdom. When they heard these words, the disciples recalled Joel's prophecies, which foretold such an outpouring in connection with the establishment of the Messianic Kingdom, and eagerly asked, "Lord, wilt Thou at this time restore again the kingdom to Israel?"

But Christ would free them from their narrow Jewish prejudices. The Holy Spirit, whom He would send, would teach them that His Kingdom was a universal one, not to be confined to the Jews alone, as they had believed, but "open to all mankind, without distinction of race or rank, of bond or free, of barbarian or Greek, of Jew or Gentile." And the gift of the Holy Spirit would mark the establishment of this Kingdom. Later, He, Himself, would indeed come in glory, but of that He would not now speak. "It is not for you to know the times or the seasons," He replied, "which the Father hath set within His own authority. But ye shall receive power, when the Holy Spirit is come upon you, to do this great work with which I have entrusted you."

Christ's Last Walk With His Disciples. After this earnest talk, which they realized was indeed His earthly farewell to them, He led them out of the eastern gate of the city, across the brook Kidron, past the Garden of Gethsemane, where He had struggled in agony and won His great victory, and up the Mount of Olives. Those who passed them saw only the eleven disciples, but not their Master, and thus did He manifest Himself to them and not to the world, as He had said He would do.

And now, as they were near Bethany, the home of His dearest friends, He took them aside to a retired place, hidden from both road and village. Below them lay Jerusalem, the city He loved and over which He had wept; the city which had rejected and crucified Him, and which still contained His tomb and refused to acknowledge His resurrection. We know not what thoughts filled His mind, as He gazed upon it, nor are we told what were His last words of farewell to His followers, but we know that they were full of tenderness and love for those who were so devoted to Him.

The Ascension. After speaking to them, He spread out His hands and once more invoked the Father's blessing upon His disciples. Then slowly He rose from the ground and floated up towards the sky, which has always been regarded as a symbol of the abode of God. As with eyes filled with love and longing, His friends watched His retreating form, a cloud received Him out of their sight.

The Heavenly Welcome. Let us follow Him as He rises through the air and let us listen to the words of the angels who have come down to meet Him (those words of the Psalmist's, which Handel has set to such wonderful music in "The Messiah"). "Lift up your heads, O ye gates; and be ye lift up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in."

"Who is the King of glory?" sing the angels within the pearly gates.

"The Lord strong and mighty, the Lord mighty in battle," comes the answer, in a strong chorus of those with Jesus. "Lift up your heads," again they sing, "O ye gates; even lift them up, ye everlasting doors; and the King of glory shall come in."

"Who is the King of glory?" is once more questioned.

"The Lord of hosts, He is the King of glory," comes the glad reply.

Thus we picture Christ returning to Heaven, not to resume merely His former state of glory, but to receive the added honor and approbation which His great work of bringing salvation to mankind merited, and to hear ten thousand times ten thousand angels and thousands of thousands singing His praise: "Worthy is the Lamb that was slain to receive power and riches, and wisdom, and strength, and honor, and glory, and blessing, forever and ever."

The Angels' Message. But now we must return to Christ's friends, from whom He had parted. As with fascinated gaze, they continued to look up, behold, two men in white apparel stood by them, who said: "Ye men of Galilee, why stand ye looking into Heaven? This Jesus, who was received up from you into Heaven, shall so come in like manner as ye beheld Him going into Heaven."

The angelic messengers, who announced Christ's birth, who came to strengthen Him in the wilderness after His temptation, and in Gethsemane, during His agony, and who announced His resurrection to the sorrowing women, now came once more to tell His followers of His coming again in glory.

The Joy of the Disciples. Their presence and their promise of the return of Christ in glory removed the last trace of sadness from the hearts of His followers. With great joy and with songs of praise, they went back to the city, for had they not seen their Lord return to Heaven. Now indeed they could say, "He lives; He is with the Father. We saw Him ascend, in His human Body, towards the sky."

From this time on they spoke of His return as a triumph (Acts 2:33-35; 5:31; Phil. 2:9-11), and they knew Him now as King of kings and Lord of lords (I Tim. 6:15). "Gradually Christ had raised their conception of Himself from a great Teacher to the Son of God, and then, through His resurrection, to the promised Messiah, the Conqueror of death, the Lord of all."

Their Transformed Lives. Now in Jerusalem the disciples could await with glad and eager expectation the outpouring of the Holy Spirit upon them. And when their patient waiting was rewarded, they were transformed by that wonderful experience. From that time on, with boldness and faith, they preached Christ, telling of His life of love, of His suffering and death for the sins of the world, and of His resurrection and return to the Father.

Christ Is Indeed Immanuel. And still is it the task of Christ's followers to be witnesses of Him, and still their joy and high privilege to know that He is Immanuel, God with us. By going farther away, He has in reality come nearer. Were He in the world today, in human form, He could only touch, as He did when here, a limited number of people; He could only do His wondrous works in a very limited space, but now, through His Holy Spirit, He can be with His followers throughout the whole wide world. "His pitying eye still looks upon us, His powerful hand still reaches out to save," and at the right hand of the Father, He ever maketh intercession for us. And we may be conscious, daily, hourly, of this Divine communion. "Speak to Him, thou, for He hears, and Spirit with Spirit can meet—

Closer is He than breathing, and nearer than hands and feet."

Quiz and Study. 1. How did the sight of Christ's ascension add to the faith of the disciples? 2. What great gift did He promise them? 3. Why can the Holy Spirit do even more for Christians than Christ Himself could have done, had He remained upon the earth? 4. Describe the difference between the Kingdom of the Messiah, as the Jews had conceived it, and the Kingdom Christ came to establish. 5. Describe the change in the lives of the Apostles which Christ's resurrection and ascension produced. 6. Give verses of Scripture which tell of the honor given to Jesus because He had redeemed mankind. 7. What is now His exalted position in Heaven? 8. What offices does he perform there for His followers?

Christ's Continued Influence. "No life ends for this world when the body by which it has for a little been made visible disappears from the face of the earth. It enters into the stream of the ever-swelling life of mankind, and continues to act there with its whole force for evermore. Indeed, the true magnitude of a human being can often only be measured by what this after-life shows him to have been. So it was with Christ. His influence on the modern world is evidence of how great He was."

"The life of Christ in history cannot cease. His influence waxes more and more; the dead nations are waiting till it reaches them, and it is the hope of the earnest spirits that are bringing in the new earth. All discoveries of the modern world, every development of juster ideas, of higher powers, of more exquisite feelings in mankind, are only new helps to interpret Him; and the lifting-up of life to the level of His ideas and character is the programme of the human race." (Condensed by Blakeslee from Stalker's "Life of Christ.")

Practical Truths. 1. "Between us and Christ's visible presence—between us and that glorified Redeemer who now sitteth at the right hand of God—the cloud still rolls. But the eye of faith can pierce it; the incense of true prayer can rise above it; through it the dew of blessing can descend."—Farrar. 2. "The ascension is the guarantee for the continued existence of Him who became incarnate for our sakes, and for the continued effect of His work."—Sanday. 3. From our knowledge of Christ's life, which was filled with acts of love and mercy, we may know how tenderly He will intercede for us, as our Advocate and Mediator, in Heaven. 4. But if we refuse to accept Him,—if we spurn His proffered mercy—then He becomes our Judge and not our Saviour. 5. "In the days of His humiliation Christ walked among men seen but unknown; now the exalted and glorified Christ still walks among His followers known but unseen (Matt. 28:20). 6. Christ's ascension was prophetic of the experience of all who love Him, who are not only raised up together with Christ, but made to sit together in Heavenly places in Christ Jesus." (Luke 24:51.)"—Blakeslee.

LAURA ELLA CRAGIN.

SECOND DIVISION
THE ACTS

And when the day of

was fully come,
they were all with one accord in one place. And suddenly there came a sound from heaven as of a rushing mighty wind,
and it filled
all the house

And there appeared unto them cloven tongues like as of fire, and it

And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost, and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit
gave them utterance.
And there were dwelling at Jerusalem Jews, devout men, out of under heaven.

Now
when this was noised abroad, the

came together, and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 2:1-36.

Prayer: Our Father, We pray for the giving anew of the Holy Spirit unto us, unto the church and unto the world. In the name of Christ. Amen.

Proceeding Spirit, our defence,
Who dost the gifts of tongues dispense
And crown'st Thy gifts with eloquence.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 30. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, the Apostles and other followers of Christ, the Jews and foreigners in the city.

Scripture Setting: Study of Pentecost. The Feast of Weeks, Lev. 23:15; Deut. 16:10. Description of, Num. 28:26-31. Preparations for, Ex. 34:22. Private offerings at, Num. 28:26; Deut. 16:10-12. Restricted to one day, Lev. 23:21; 23:26. Mentioned in historical books, 2 Chron. 8:13.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. "The Pentecostal gift furnished new evidence of Jesus' claim to be the promised Saviour. 2. The age of promise preceded and the people of God waited long; but then the fulfilment occurred suddenly." 3. "The Holy Spirit is given, not to the contentious and ungodly, but to those who dwell together in unity, and continue in supplications and prayers." 4. "United prayers, when they are perseveringly offered, are specially acceptable and effectual." 5. "The human heart is never empty; in the same proportion in which it is delivered from the love of self, of the creature, and of sin, it is filled with the Holy Spirit. 6. O blessed fulness of the Holy Spirit! It does not burden, but rather lifts up the soul and impels it to adore God." 7. "The same measure and the same gifts were not bestowed upon all; nevertheless, each one was filled, receiving the measure of the Spirit which corresponded to his capacity, and to the work in which God designed to employ him."

ONE OF GOD'S GREAT GIFTS TO MEN.

The Gift Expected. Jesus had been put to death; had risen from the grave and ascended into Heaven. Now the disciples were without His visible presence, but they were to carry on His work. He had promised that when He would leave them He would send them another Comforter. They had His promise. They knew what was to come. They knew that when they received this gift the future would be prepared for. Now they were expecting the fulfilment of the promise, preparing for it in the way Jesus had commanded. He had bidden them gather in Jerusalem, and to wait until endued with power from on High.

They were all in that city and were waiting. The believers had gathered together from all the region round about. "The day of Pentecost was fully come." That was an appropriate time. God often uses special occasions and seasons, though He does not limit His work to them. It is a mistake to underrate the value of special times and seasons, but it is also an error to make God's work depend upon them. God works how and when and where He wills. But there was a beautiful fitness in the coming of the great gift of God's Spirit on the occasion of a great Jewish feast, when multitudes were in the city, when the work could have opportunity to spread and touch many lives and people of many nationalities.

"They were all with one accord in one place." They were fulfilling the conditions. For a divine gift there is needed the readiness to receive. For a gift in common to many, united readiness, sympathy, unity of purpose are essential. A harmonious church, with union of spirits, devoted to one great end, is the one that obtains the blessing. All friction, antagonism, selfishness, interfere and prevent the outpouring of the Divine favor. Being "in one place" was the natural and useful outcome of unity of desire. Christians who are really eager for the growth of God's kingdom, who are in harmony with their fellow-workers, will be moved to gather in one place: to the place of public worship. When, unless prevented by providential reasons, they do not so assemble, it is proof that their spirits are out of harmony with their Christian brethren.

God has many ways of working, of doing His wonders. There is infinite variety in the ways of Providence. Sometimes His footsteps are very noiseless and His presence can be discerned only by the gradual results. Again He speaks in the storm, in revolutions, in great and sudden changes in society and in the lives of individuals. Though in that special revelation to the Old Testament prophet, God was not in the storm or in the whirlwind, but in the still, small voice, that is not to say He is never in the storm. We are to seek for the signs of His presence in all. It was fitting that when the Holy Spirit descended upon the little band of Christians, at the beginning time of the Church, there should be such unmistakable manifestations of God's presence that no one could doubt, and such as would make all the people in that great city marvel.

"And suddenly there came a sound from Heaven, as of a rushing mighty wind, and it filled all the house where they were sitting." They were a small group of people; they were not of the mighty ones of the world; they felt their own weakness; they were to go out into the great world and meet all its enmities. It was good for them then that the manifestation should be one of power. Their Leader was no longer visibly present, and it was reassuring and encouraging to them that the new gift should come accompanied by signs of might. It was no feeble, silent force that was entering into their work and into their hearts, but a mighty one. As the Spirit came with sound and shaking, so they were to go forth to fill the earth with a message that would be mighty and would shake the world. We are not to confuse noise with spirituality, nor shouting with instruction, but on the other hand we are not to ignore that all great reformations and revolutions, both spiritual and secular, have had outward manifestations quite the reverse of quietude. While we are not to seek mere outward demonstrativeness, on the other hand we should not be too much afraid of this. Certain evils cannot be smitten down and destroyed quietly.

"And there appeared unto them cloven tongues, like as of fire, and it sat upon each of them." It was an impressive and significant symbol of the Gospel. It is good news to be proclaimed. It is to be made known by human speech, by the tongue. Its message was to shine and glow and burn like fire. "It sat upon each of them." Every one was to be a messenger, a missionary, with a tongue of fire, with a burning message. That which Christianity always needs is the uttered message that enlightens and burns. A church, in any age or place, with the tongue of fire, will win the world for God.

"And they were all filled with the Holy Ghost and began to speak with other tongues, as the Spirit gave them utterance." God suits His gifts to the needs of the time and place. If the Gospel was to be proclaimed by that group of Christians they needed a supernatural endowment for it. They were to go into foreign lands, among people of many languages. There were already gathered in that city people who spoke numerous strange tongues. What could the Christians have done without some special gift? It is unlikely that any one there was accustomed to speak or understand more than one or possibly two languages. Because of the widespread use of Greek and Latin, it may be that a few of them could speak a little of these tongues, in addition to their native Aramaic. The Christians would have been hampered, and it would have taken such unscholarly persons a long time to learn in the ordinary manner. But now they were miraculously gifted.

We are often told of the latent powers in nature, latent in steam, latent in coal, latent in electricity. When they are awakened and used, they change the face of the world. We have little conception of the latent power in any congregation. If it could be roused and used, miracles would be accomplished.

Rejoicing in this Divine gift of the Spirit and of tongues, they went out into the city and began to speak. This was noised abroad and "the multitude came together and were confounded, because that every man heard them speak in his own language." The astonishment was the greater because the Christians were recognized as chiefly from Galilee, a province less in contact with the larger world and where the people mostly spoke but one language. Mention is made in Acts of the many nations represented in the multitude, and the variety of these made it all the more astonishing. Nothing else could have made a greater impression than that this group of representatives of Christ should suddenly have become able to address a cosmopolitan multitude in so many languages.

The Scoffers. But such as sought to find a base interpretation, mocked, saying, "These men are full of new wine." Only such could believe this as failed to recognize that the disciples were speaking correctly in several tongues, that to them sounded meaningless, as Chinese would to us. But the foreigners themselves, each recognized his own speech and were amazed.

Peter met this scornful criticism by a common sense answer, the force of which was felt by all, then and there familiar with the customs of that day. It was early in the day and Oriental people do not begin to drink wine at such an hour. Then Peter pressed upon the people the great truth that indeed the Holy Spirit had been poured out upon the Christians, as God's prophets had foretold, and that the ability to address all men in their own language was one of the signs of His presence. He then proclaimed Christ to them, with great power and with the result that many were converted.

Practical Truths. 1. God does not need to supernaturally endow us today with knowledge of foreign tongues, since he has given us means and abilities to learn for ourselves, if called on to go as missionaries. 2. Providence is just as much now in the fact that the Bible has been translated into all the languages of the earth. 3. The Holy Spirit comes as actually to us now as to the disciples of old. As they did, so we must observe the commands of Christ in order to receive the blessing.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

Then they that gladly received his word were baptized: and the same day there were added unto them about three thousand souls. And they continued stedfastly in the apostles'

And fear came upon every soul: and many wonders and signs were done by the

And all that believed were together, and had all things common; And sold their possessions and and parted them to all men, as every man had need. And they, continuing daily with one accord and breaking bread from house to did eat their meat with gladness and singleness of heart, Praising God, and having favour with all the

And the Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 2:37-41.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee for Thy Church established in the world for our guidance, comfort and salvation, and for Thy honor and glory. Help us to reverence Thy house and to appreciate its privileges. In the name of Christ. Amen.

Beyond my highest joy
I prize her Heavenly ways,
Her sweet communion, solemn vows,
Her hymns of love and praise.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 30. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, the Apostles, other followers of Christ, and converts.

Scripture Setting: A Study of the Church. The Church built on faith in Christ, Matt. 16:18. Persecution of, Acts 8:1; 12:1. The local church, Acts 13:1. Local government, Acts 14:23. Received by, Acts 15:4. Officers in, Acts 15:22. Establishing in faith, Acts 15:41. Feeding, Acts 20:28. The name of, 1 Cor. 1:2. Teaching in, 1 Cor. 4:17. Intelligible speech in, 1 Cor. 14:19. Messengers of, 2 Cor. 8:23. Head of, Eph. 1:22; 5:23. Subject to Christ, Eph. 5:24. Loved by Christ, Eph. 5:25. The Body of Christ, Col. 1:24. Preaching in, 2 Tim. 4:2. The corner-stone, Eph. 2:20.

Life and Conduct Setting: The Apostolic church has always been regarded as the real model for all churches, and it is evident that this should be the case. The various branches of the church do not agree as to what were all the features of the primitive organization of the Kingdom of Christ. But if we take the book of Acts as revealing to any considerable extent what these characteristics were, it is certain that the early church used no elaborate ceremonies. Ceremonies that have been added since the apostolic days may be justified, however, on other grounds than the earliest usage, if they have spiritual meaning.

THE FIRST ARMY OF CHRIST.

The Army Forming. The dawn of a new day was just beginning. A few men and women were being gathered together, with one mind and one heart, that they might make warfare against the darkness of ignorance and sin. They had in their hearts the most beautiful and vital love for Jesus, who had been for years their Companion, Friend and Teacher. He had now gone from their sight, up into Heaven, but He had committed unto them the carrying on of His work. They were undertaking this mission, in spite of many difficulties and their own weakness, because of their great love for Him. They were a little band, but one that was to grow into a vast host, and it was formed not through hatred of others, as armies are often formed, but through a mighty love for the great Invisible Leader and through love for mankind. This was indeed a small company to entertain so ambitious a design as to change the world, but it was inspired by love, the most wonderful and powerful of motives, and it had the greatest of all Leaders, that is Christ. It was also making ready to meet and destroy the most terrible foes of mankind, sin and ignorance.

It was a very valiant band. There never were braver people than they nor any who were readier to meet all odds and suffer all consequences. They had seen their Leader on the cross, had seen Him triumph over death and ascend into Heaven. This experience and their love for and faith in Him had taken away all dread of death; so they were ready to carry His message and do His work without any fear at all. When you have an army with such motives and with such fearlessness, and with such a splendid cause to do battle for, you may be sure the enemy will be put to rout.

The Army Recruiting. The first little band of Christ's followers, which He had gathered about Himself, was commissioned to add to themselves others who were of like disposition and who would give allegiance to their Captain, Jesus Christ. And now the Apostles, the disciples and all the men and women who had become followers of Christ were beginning to recruit their army. They were at first assembled in the city of Jerusalem. There the Holy Spirit came upon them and prepared them with wonderful gifts for what was before them. Their hearts were filled with a great message to other men.

A Great Victory. They began the warfare. It was opened by a sermon. We must remember that words are very real things—just as real as bullets—and they reach much farther and accomplish more than bullets do. "Ideas go booming through the world like cannon shot." To the vast multitude that was gathered in Jerusalem at that time, Peter preached. He preached about Christ, who had been crucified in that very city only a brief time before. He told the people that Christ had risen from the dead, that He was the Son of God and the Savior of men. He told them they were sinners and that they could be saved only through Christ, and that it was their first duty to repent of their sins. This onslaught of the little army produced a very great effect. Three thousand people surrendered to Christ and then joined His followers. That surely was a great victory, and was a promising beginning for the first little army of Christ. A full regiment consists of one thousand men. Now Christ's host had gained three regiments in one day.

Nobody had been hurt; no one had been killed. Three regiments had been won over from the enemy and no one was the worse off, except Satan.

The Onward March. This was merely a beginning. The Christians shortly afterward started out into all the region round about, and then into all countries, giving battle to every evil thing and spreading light and knowledge and salvation everywhere. The whole world has felt the redeeming power of the Christian army.

The Officers. Now every army has an organization of some kind, and the early church had its organization. It is undoubtedly true that the Apostles of Christ were the leaders at that time. Twelve men who had been with Christ during His ministry, who had been witnesses of His resurrection, had in their hands the organization of the Church to a large degree. But it is also true that all the other followers of Christ had some share and part in this founding of the Church. We are to remember that at this time all that pertained to the Church must have been of the simplest kind. The Christians had at first no church buildings of their own, but they met from house to house. There were no learned men among them until Paul was converted. They had no wealth. They met together in private houses, sang hymns, read the Scriptures, prayed, partook of the Lord's Supper, and exhorted one another.

At Drill. The converts were received into the company of believers through baptism with water, which rite signifies the washing away of sins. It is recorded that they "continued steadfastly in the Apostles' doctrine," that is the teaching of those who had themselves been taught by Christ. There can be no intelligent religion without instruction, and these people who had just become Christians needed to be taught the simple truths about Christ and the way of life through Him. They also "continued in fellowship." They were received into the company of Christians; they met together in frequent worship; they talked and prayed together, and lived as much as possible with Christians. They "continued in breaking bread," that is in the observance of the Lord's Supper, in memory of His sacrifice. The Early Church undoubtedly observed the Lord's Supper much more frequently than is common now in most of the churches. "They continued in prayer." They communed with God as an ever-present Helper and Friend.

At the funeral of his son, who had died from dissipation, a prosperous business man said to a lifelong friend: "James, you and I have departed from our old relations to the church at the expense of the well-being and safety of our families. Though trained in the church, we have been led away, by prosperity, into pleasure-seeking. Sunday has lost its sacredness for us. We have deserted the house of God. We and our families have spent the Sabbaths in automobiles and in doing whatever we desired. You behold the result in my household. My daughters, who both married reckless men, are divorced, and are themselves thoroughly worldly. A year ago I buried my first son, who was wrecked by self-indulgence. Now I stand by the coffin of my last boy. Both perished through worldliness, too much money and dissipation. Had I kept my family in the church and lived as we used to live, my children might have been spared to me."

True Comrades. It is also recorded that the believers had "all things in common." It has at times been argued from this statement that the possession of private property is contrary to Christian ideals, but this is not the case. It is rather to be concluded that the early Christians gave as they could into a common treasury for the necessities of those who had nothing.

Being chiefly Jews at first, the Christians in Jerusalem still continued to follow certain Jewish usages. They went daily to the temple. It was not until later, after Paul had come into prominence, that the Christians separated themselves entirely from Jewish customs.

The early Christian army was characterized by gladness, by joy. "They ate their meat with gladness." After they grew in numbers and came in contact with the pagans, the latter were astonished at their happiness. They found the Christians the sunshiniest, most joyous people they had ever seen. And it was the evident happiness of the followers of Christ that won many a convert.

The first army of Christ was also notable for the fact that it was always winning others to unite with it. "The Lord added to the church daily such as should be saved." The Christians were always enthusiastic, always diligent, always seeking converts and daily gaining some.

The first army of Christ succeeded wonderfully, and it should be an inspiration to us in all our work. It faced vastly greater difficulties than we now have to face. It had all the world against it. But it won by faith and love. It won chiefly because of its great love for its Leader. If we are to fight the battles of Christ successfully we, too, must have that deep and mighty love for the Captain of our salvation which His first followers had.

Practical Truths. 1. The Church is established in the world for the advancement of the Kingdom of God. It aims to save individuals and to reclaim the whole world for God. We should, in all our relations to it, keep clearly in mind that for which it exists. 2. Our personal interest in the Church will depend upon the regularity of our attendance at the services, and upon the spirit we bring to the work of organized religion. Irregular attendance is sure to destroy enthusiasm. 3. We should think not so much of what we can get from the church as of what we can bring to it. We should give not only money, but ourselves, our work and enthusiasm.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

THE LAME MAN HEALED.

Now Peter and John went up together

at the hour of prayer,
being
the ninth hour. And a certain man lame from his mother's womb whom daily

at
the

which is called Beautiful, to ask alms of

Who seeing Peter and John about to go into the temple
asked an alms.

And Peter, fastening his eyes upon him with John, said, Look on us. And he gave heed unto them, expecting to receive something of them.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 3:1-16.

Prayer: Our Father, We also, like the lame man, would wait before Thy Temple and be healed of our infirmities. In the name of Christ. Amen.

"While Thy ministers proclaim Peace and pardon in Thy Name,
Through their voice, by faith, may I Hear Thee speaking from the sky!"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 30. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Peter, John and a lame beggar.

Scripture Setting: A Study in Miracles. Jesus approved by, Acts 2:22. God in, Acts 19:11. A gift of God, 1 Cor. 12:10. Jesus' first, John 2:11. Evidence of Divine mission, John 3:2. Evidence of goodness, John 9:16. Greatest miracle, Rom. 1:4.

Life and Conduct Setting: The greatest gift is spiritual health. We are morally sick by nature. Redemption through Christ restores us to normal condition. The lame man found the temple a good place, for there he was healed. The church is the place where we can most surely find help.

A BEAUTIFUL DEED.

A Beautiful Gate. Beautiful gates, or doors, should lead into beautiful places, where beautiful things happen. And there never was a more beautiful gate than the one so-called that belonged to Herod's temple. There never was any place more beautiful than that temple into which it led. And there never was anything more beautiful happened than one event near that gate. The histories tell us of many wonderful gates of ancient, walled cities. Those of Thebes were very magnificent. Those of Troy and those of Athens were also wonderful. But we know of none more remarkable than those of the later Jewish temple, and of all these the one called Beautiful was the finest.

We have an accurate description of it in the writings of the historian Josephus. He says, mentioning several and then this one, "Now, nine of these gates were on every side covered over with gold and silver, as were the jambs of their doors and their lintels. But there was one gate that was without the inward court of the holy house, which was of Corinthian brass, and greatly excelled those that were only covered over with silver and gold." This was the Beautiful Gate. "Each gate had two doors, whose height was severally thirty cubits, and their breadth fifteen. However, they had large spaces within of thirty cubits, and had on each side rooms, and those, both in breadth and in length, built like towers, and their height was above forty cubits. Two pillars did also support these rooms, and were in circumference twelve cubits. Now, the magnitudes of the other gates were equal one to another; but that of the Corinthian gate, which opened on the east, over against the gate of the holy house itself, was much larger; for its height was fifty cubits and its doors were forty cubits; and it was adorned after a most costly manner, as having much richer and thicker plates of silver and gold upon them than the other. There were fifteen steps which led to this greater gate; whereas those that led from the other gates were five steps shorter."

A Beautiful Habit. So we see this was a very wonderful gate. But still, with all its gold and silver and brass, it was not as truly beautiful as the event that happened near it, on the occasion of a visit of Peter and John to the temple. These two had gone up to the temple at the hour of prayer, the time of evening sacrifice, the ninth hour or three o'clock in the afternoon. They were still in the habit of observing certain of the Jewish forms of worship, but no doubt with a new view of these. It was a good errand they were upon, but even that was to be outdone by a certain event before they departed from that holy place.

Helping Others. What do you think is the most beautiful thing a human being can do? There may be many answers, but surely one of the very most beautiful is to help some one who is in distress. The greater his distress and the deeper his need, the more beautiful is the help. If some one has a hurt finger and you can bring a medicine that quiets that slight pain, that is worth while. But if you find some one in great peril of death and rescue him, that is still more worth while. Near that Beautiful Gate there was a man who was so lame that he had to be carried by others. He could not walk one step alone. More than that, he had been lame all his life. He had never taken one step in his life. While we have the use of our limbs and can walk and run and play, we have little idea what it means to be deprived of this strength and freedom. We take our soundness of limb as a matter of course. But when an accident occurs and we are confined to the house for a few days only, how hard we find it to bear this limitation of our freedom. What must it be to be lame all the time, and never to have known what running and playing mean. It surely is a sad misfortune. At its worst it forces one to be dependent. The very lame cannot work, or can do only a little. So it is a sorrowful thing to be helplessly lame.

It is said that Galen, the great physician, was converted from atheism by study of the human skeleton. He defied any man in an hundred years to devise a more suitable location for a single member of the human body than Providence has already arranged for.

Helpless. Such a man now lay near the Beautiful Gate, whither some friends carried him every day; or perhaps he had to pay some one to do this by giving him a part of the results of his begging. For he was a beggar. What else could he be? What could he do, this helpless man? This added, if he had any natural pride, to his humiliation. For it is a dreadful thing to be a beggar; not to be able to earn your own food and shelter in this world; not to have any relatives, if you are helpless, who are able and willing to provide the common necessities of life. Oh it is sad to have to beg; to lay aside all pride and self-respect and to hold out your hand for the chance offerings of passers-by.

Hoping. On this afternoon, this poor man saw two men going by. They were Peter and John, but he did not know who they were. He cried out, no doubt with the whining tone that beggars commonly use, "Sirs, give me an alms. Pity me, a helpless lame man." The two noble followers of Christ stopped just as they were about to enter the temple. A glance of their compassionate eyes revealed the condition of the man. Peter said, apparently in a commanding way, "Look on us." The man's eyes were already upon them, but now he gazed intently, for his expectations had been aroused, since the men had stopped and were noticing him. His thought was, they are about to give me something. And that was true, though he was not to receive what he expected but something vastly better.

There are many beautiful gates in life to higher and better things: The Gate of Hope, the Gate of Love, the Gate of Character, the Gate of Faithfulness, the Gate of Prayer. Jesus Christ is the Beautiful Gate to eternal life.

The temple of religion has a beautiful gate in it; but in one important respect it differs from the beautiful gate of the Jewish temple. On the pillars on either side of that gate were engraved in Greek the words: "Let no stranger pass beyond this, on pain of death." Through the beautiful gate of the Gospel every one is free to enter into the holiest place. And that at all times.—Peloubet.

Healed. Then Peter quickly disappointed his expectation of money, saying, "Silver and gold have I none." The beggar's heart must have sunk at that. Why did these men stop to tell me they have nothing to give? Peter went on, "but such as I have I give thee." Surely the beggar must have stared in astonishment; men without money were talking of giving him something! What could they give? Again Peter speaks, "In ing, but the command must have seemed to him idle. His glance must have fallen on his shrunken limbs and on his helpless feet that had never borne his weight during all the years of his existence. Perhaps he sank back disappointed, wondering if these men were mocking him. But at once the big man beside him reached down his great arms and lifted him to his feet and held him there a moment.

Rejoicing. What is this feeling that rushes through him? Some great change is happening in his body. He feels some power entering those crippled limbs. He tries to move his feet and is amazed to find that strength, unknown before, has come into feet and ankles. Why, he can stand alone! He can move his feet! He can take a step! He will see how far this wonder can go; he tries to leap, and he succeeds. Then from his lips breaks forth praise unto God. The two men, who have wrought this wonder in the name of Jesus Christ, are passing onward into the temple. He, too, calling loudly the praises of God, walking and leaping, follows into the house of God to worship.

All God's works are miracles. Luther, in a crisis of the Reformation, when the bravest had grown timid, wrote to a friend: "I have recently witnessed two miracles. This is the first: As I was at my window, I saw the stars and the sky and that vast and glorious firmament in which the Lord has placed them. I could nowhere discover the columns on which the Master has supported His immense vault; and yet the heavens did not fall. And here is the second: I beheld thick clouds hanging above us like a vast sea. I could neither perceive the ground on which they reposed, nor cords by which they were suspended; and yet they did not fall upon us, but saluted us rapidly and fled away."

Practical Truths: 1. We can find relief for every trouble in Christ. 2. When one appears to be in the most desperate situation he may at that moment be on the very verge of speedy relief. The friends of the lame man carried him that day to the gate in what seemed a hopeless condition. Before the sun had set he was healed. 3. Miracles, in the ordinary meaning of the word, may not be wrought today, yet it is undoubtedly true that God is constantly working wonders in all realms through the means He puts into our hands. 4. Learn to take every difficulty to Christ. Either the matter will be remedied or you will be made equal to meeting it. 5. The lame man, when healed, burst into praise to God. Let us not forget to render gratitude to the Heavenly Father for all mercies. 6. Beautiful as was the Beautiful Gate, it had no power to help the lame man. Art cannot take the place of religion. In Christ alone is our help.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

PETER AND JOHN BEFORE THE COUNCIL.

And it came to pass on the morrow, that their rulers, and elders, and scribes, and Annas the high priest, and Caiaphas, and John, and Alexander, and as many as were of the kindred of the high priest, were gathered together at Jerusalem. And when they had set them in the midst, they asked, By what power, or by what name, have ye done this? Then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said unto them, Ye rulers of the people, and

of Israel,
if we this day be examined of the good deed done
to the impotent

by what means he is made whole; be it known unto you all, and to all the

of Israel, that by the name of Jesus Christ of Nazareth, whom ye whom God

even by him doth this man stand here before you whole. This is the

which was set at nought of you

which is become the head
of the

Neither is there salvation in any other: for there is none other name under heaven given among men, whereby we must be saved.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ACTS 3:11-25 AND 4:1-31.

Prayer: Our Father, May we learn from this lesson not to fear what man can do unto us. Help us so to love and trust Thee and Thy Word, that we may have confidence under all circumstances. May we realize that Thou dost take care of Thy children always. In the name of Christ. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 30. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Peter and John, Annas, and other members of the Jewish Council.

Scripture Setting: A Study of Suffering. Benefits of, Job 5:6, 7, 17; Ps. 94:12. Consolation in, Gen. 21:17. Impenitence in, Lev. 26:23-24. Prayer in, Exod. 17:4; Ps. 3:1. Prayer of afflicted answered, Ps. 22:4-5. Manasseh, 2 Chron. 32:20-23. Hezekiah, 2 Kings 13:4. Daniel, Dan. 2:19-23. Leper, Matt. 8:2-3. Centurion, Matt. 8:5-13. Design of, Deut. 8:2. Deliverance from, Exod. 6:5; Ps. 34:15, 17.

Life and Conduct Setting: The experience of Peter and John before the council suggests the weapons by which Christians, younger or older, may meet unbelief and antagonism. 1. The weapon of Christ's name—the Apostles made it clear that the power which healed the lame man was of Christ. 2. The weapon of the proved deeds of Christianity—the healed man was a living testimony. 3. The weapon in our own hearts of the Holy Spirit—"then Peter, filled with the Holy Ghost, said." 4. The weapon of a holy boldness is what we know to be the cause of right and truth. 5. The weapon of clear, pointed statements of the sins of those we would convince. 6. The weapon of having been with Jesus and making it undeniably so appear. 7. The weapon of calm confidence in our cause and in the protection of God.

BRAVE MEN IN THE HANDS OF FOES.

Gaining Courage. Courage is always a fine quality, but it is particularly admirable in any one who has been timid and has overcome that feeling. This is so for the reason that into such bravery enters a spiritual quality. Such courage is a victory not merely of the body but of the mind and soul. One may be so strong and hardy in body as scarcely to know what fear means; and bodily hardihood is good and serviceable. But when one knows what fear is and then overcomes it he has achieved something by moral power. So moral courage is regarded as a higher quality than bodily bravery alone. It is not justifiable to say that Peter and John had ever been cowards, though they had done cowardly deeds. Doubtless they, as fishermen, had faced storms of all kinds, severe toil, hardships, dangers by land and water, many times. While in the company of Christ, they had usually been daring enough. But when Jesus was arrested by His foes, these two, with all the other disciples, fled. At the trial, Peter denied Jesus with oaths. But now they had gone far past the stage of fear and were courageous as lions. The boy or girl should not, therefore, become discouraged if occasionally timid, but should realize that by moral and spiritual means this weakness may be overcome.

Changed Men. Now we behold Peter and John changed into entirely fearless men. Sometimes people rush into danger without knowing it, but that is not courage; it is blindness. But Peter and John saw the danger clearly and then faced it without a tremor. When the lame man had been healed at the gate of the temple a great multitude ran to see him. Men and women in that city were just like other people, and certainly if today a man in our community were cured of a serious lameness, which all of us well knew had long afflicted him, everybody would hasten to see him and to find out all about what had happened. So the Bible tells us the people of Jerusalem assembled. It tells us also that they hurried to the place where he was; "the people ran together unto them." When Peter and John saw this multitude gathering they knew perfectly well that before it dispersed they personally would be involved in trouble. They knew that the enmity of the priests to Christ and His cause was as bitter as before the crucifixion, and that a miracle done by His disciples, and the gathering of a crowd on that account, would center this hatred upon them.

Power from Christ. But they cared nothing for that fact. They saw something more important; an opportunity to preach to the multitude about Jesus. Then Peter began to speak. If he and John had been ambitious, selfish men, they would have allowed the crowd to make heroes of them and to believe they had done this miracle by their own power. But their conduct is a beautiful example to all who are tempted to grow vain because of what they can do with their talents. Our talents are really gifts from God. Peter turned attention at once from themselves to Christ. He said, "Why look ye so earnestly on us, as though by our own power or holiness we had made this man to walk?" Then he preached to them of Christ, saying, "His name through faith in His name hath made this man strong." He proclaimed that Christ had risen from the dead, and called upon them to repent.

A False Arrest. The guard of Levites that kept order in the temple heard the noise of the great crowd. The priests and the Sadducees looked on from afar, asking of any who passed by what had occurred. Some replied, "The lame beggar has been healed." "The disciples of Jesus, whom you put to death, performed the cure." "The people are being told by the disciples of the crucified Man, that He has risen from the dead, that He is the Messiah, and that it was by His power the beggar was cured." So the news came to the foes of Christ. They were startled. Evidently, the multitude was being influenced by what these disciples were saying. Something must be done to interfere. A Sadducee said, they are re-teaching that false doctrine about a resurrection, and should be silenced. Another declared they could not interfere merely on account of a doctrine. "Arrest them, then, for making a tumult in the streets!" cried another. That would serve as an excuse, so the captain of the guards of the temple ordered his men on and on through the crowd, on to where Peter and John stood. "Arrest them!" cried the captain, and his men laid hands on them. Peter and John were not surprised. They made no resistance, for their Master had made none, and they followed His example. Once Peter would have fought, but Jesus had taught him better. They are led away and a prison door opens; they pass in and it shuts behind them. This was the reward they received from men for healing the lame man. But they did not complain; neither had they expected aught else. Their Master had been crucified for teaching the purest truth and for living the best and most loving life conceivable. Moreover they knew that a victory had been won for Christ. The multitude had been reached; and as it proved, five thousand men were led to believe.

The good minister, Dr. Samuel Rutherford, was many years ago put in prison for conscience sake. While he was thus confined he used to date his letters "Christ's Palace, Aberdeen" (Scotland). He wrote to a friend, "The Lord is with me; I care not what man can do. I burden no man. I want nothing. No king is better provided than I am. Sweet and easy is the cross of my Lord. All men I look in the face, of whatsoever rank—nobles and poor. My chains are overgilded with gold. No pen can express to you the loveliness of my only Lord Jesus."

A Plot. That night there was much converse among the rulers of the Jews as to what could be done to get rid of these Christian disciples and to end their influence with the people. Many things were suggested, but it was still not clear what could be done in any effective way. On the next day, the guards brought John and Peter out of their wretched prison and led them to the palace of Annas, the high priest, where were present also Caiaphas, Alexander, John and other relatives of the high priest. Peter and John sat down in the midst of these high officers of the Jewish nation as calmly as they would have done with a group of fishermen by the Lake of Galilee.

Forbidden to Speak. When the high priest had seated himself, he said, in his most impressive and dignified way, that would have cowed many a man, "By what power, or by what name, have ye done this?" There was no denial that a miracle had been performed. The question was how it had been accomplished.

It might have been expected that, while Peter might address without embarrassment a general crowd, the apostle would feel some timidity and difficulty in speaking before the highest official of his nation. He seemed to be an unlearned fisherman. But he spoke with such ease and fluency that his hearers marveled. He declared the miracle had been done by the power of Christ, who, he said, had risen from the dead, and in whom alone is salvation. The confidence, the faith, the directness of this speech proved that the disciples could not be overawed. Looking around, the priests beheld the man who was healed standing by, so there was no possibility of denying the miracle.

At Their Wits' End. Quite at a loss how to deal with such a case, the priests held a private conference. They said among themselves it was plain a miracle had been done, and that it would be useless to deny it. The only method to prevent the influence of this wonder spreading among the people was to forbid the apostles to speak again in the name of Christ. This would have been a simple way if it had been effective. But when Peter and John heard the command not to speak further in the name of Christ, they put their foes to confusion by replying, "We cannot but speak the things we have seen and heard."

Practical Truths. 1. God uses courageous people, or He makes the timid brave. 2. A simple, faithful Christian may often disconcert the boldest worldling. 3. The truth cannot be successfully silenced. 4. Unjust imprisonment, for the sake of truth or right, often proves advantageous to the truth and gives it wider hearing and influence.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

ANANIAS AND SAPPHIRA.

But a certain man named Ananias, with Sapphira his sold a possession, and kept back part of the price, his wife also being privy to it, and brought a certain part, and

But Peter said, Ananias, why hath Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land? Whiles it remained, was it not thine own? and after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? thou hast not lied unto but unto God. And Ananias hearing these words and gave up the ghost: and great fear came on all them that heard these things. And the young men arose,

and

and

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ACTS 4:32 AND 5:1-11.

Prayer: Our Father, May we learn from this lesson to be sincere and true. Forbid that we should try to deceive men or God. Deliver us from all hypocrisy. Create in us clean hearts and renew within us right spirits. In the name of Christ. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 30. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Ananias, Sapphira, Peter, other apostles and the congregation of the Christians.

Scripture Setting: Study in Lying. The devil, Gen. 3:14; John 8:44. Cain, Gen. 4:9. Sarah, Gen. 18:15. Jacob, Gen. 27:19. Samson, Judges 16:16. Michal, 1 Sam. 19:14. Gehazi, 2 Kings 5:22. Peter, Matt. 27:72. Forbidden, Lev. 19:11; Col. 3:9. Hateful to God, Prov. 6:16-19; 12:22. Hinders prayer, Isa. 59:2-3. Connected with hypocrisy, Isa.

57:4. Will be detected, Prov. 12:5. Punished, Psa. 5:6. Excludes from Heaven, Rev. 21:8, 27.

Life and Conduct Setting. This teaches the fatal nature of hypocrisy. 1. The sin brought punishment at once. 2. The consequences vividly emphasized the magnitude of the sin. 3. The exposure was before many witnesses. 4. Peter merely reproved, but the punishment came from God. 5. Peter had no authority or right to take life, but God, who gives it, has the right to make an end of the unworthy.

STAINED NAMES.

A great poet wrote these words, "One sad losel stains a name for aye." Losel is an old word for scoundrel, and the sentence, put in more prosaic form, means that one scamp, if he is notorious, injures his family name forever. Thousands of good people may have borne it and have made it honorable, while one rascal can render it infamous. It is quite certain that you never knew a boy whose parents had him baptized as Ananias, nor a girl who was called Sapphira. And yet these were both honorable names until two people, of whom we read in the book of Acts, disgraced them. To show what fine names they were before that, we may remind you that Ananias is the Greek form of Hananiah, and it means "Jehovah has graciously given." Sapphira is probably from the Aramaic language and means "beautiful." Was it not too bad that a name which means God's Gift and one that signifies Beautiful should be dragged down into the mire and soiled so that all the ages since have not cleansed them! More than that, several very excellent men are mentioned in the Bible by the name of Ananias and they deserve to be remembered, but the bad Ananias stained the name so that when we mention it we think not of the good men but of the hypocritical one.

No Boys Now Called Judas. There are a great many stained names in the world, names which no intelligent parents would ever think of giving to their children. Did you ever know a boy named Judas or Esau or Ishmael? Probably not, and if you did their parents should have known better than to christen them in this manner. But you know many boys called Abraham, John, Matthew, Mark, Peter, David, and their names trace back through the ages to the great, noble men who were so called. You know many girls named Sarah, Mary, Hannah, and the like, christened after the splendid women of the old times who made these words shine by their fine character.

The story of the disgrace of the names Ananias and Sapphira begins in this way. They had joined the Christian church. Perhaps they had been awakened by the sermons of Peter and had been carried along with the enthusiastic multitudes who joined the church in great numbers at that time. It is probable that to a considerable extent they were sincere. They accepted Christ as the Savior of the world. They enjoyed meeting with the Christians and taking part in their worship. Since men and women are neither wholly good nor wholly bad, we have no reason to assume that these two had no good qualities or aspirations at all.

Love of Praise and Love of Money. But there was mixed with whatever of sincerity and goodness they had in them, two dangerous things. These were the excessive love of praise and love of money. Oftentimes there is a very narrow line between a good quality and a bad one. Proper self respect, a just valuation of righteous public opinion, an honorable desire for the good will of our fellow beings, are virtues. But if these virtues begin to be exaggerated they may come very close to vanity, over-much love of praise and a gross egotism. The proper desire for financial independence, honest and just accumulation of goods and right use of money, are virtues. But honest thrift may be perverted into a craze to get money at any cost and in any manner, and there may grow such love for money for its own sake as to make it master of all other desires.

The Common Treasury. In the beginnings of the Christian church most of the followers of Christ were poor. Certain Jews who had been fairly prosperous were cast out by their brethren for becoming Christians and their business was destroyed. So it became necessary that the Christians should care for the needy. To this end they had a treasury to which all who could contributed. In many cases only a little was given. In other instances men and women sold part of their property and added the result to the common fund. In a few cases certain people sold all they had and gave all. There was no uniformity; there was no rule; there was no compulsion. It was a voluntary matter. The principle was that none should be allowed to suffer. It is clear that all did not give their whole property or so much stress would not have been laid upon the exceptional sacrifice of Barnabas, who did give everything he had. There would have been no point in praising his conduct if everyone else had done the same thing.

The Second Great Crime. This was the situation when Ananias and his wife Sapphira were misled by the love of money and of praise to commit a great sin. This has been called "the second great crime which stained the profession of Christianity—the treason of Judas having been the first—and which called down a judgment as signal. "Ananias and Sapphira wished to gain distinction among the Christians and they desired to do this without deserving it. They were vain and selfish. Barnabas had given all that he owned to the Apostles and he stood as a shining example of sacrifice and beneficence and unselfishness. Everybody admired him, everybody praised him, his name was on all lips. As the Apostles were the great leaders in organization and in preaching, so Barnabas was the conspicuous man of generosity and philanthropy.

Man and Wife Plot. Ananias and his wife talked it all over by themselves. We too will make a name for generosity. We too will be talked about. We too will have the Apostles praising us. We will sell that piece of land; tell nobody what we get for it; put away part of the money and then at a public meeting, when everybody is present, we will go forward and lay down the part of the money, pretend it is all, and so have the praise and still have the rest for our own use. They convinced themselves this was right. It was their money, and they would give what they chose and none would be the wiser. They overlooked what Peter later pointed out as the wrong in their conduct.

The Sale. So the sale was made. The money was in the hands of the man and his wife. They counted it out into two piles. They discussed the division time and again. They took the part they decided to keep for themselves and hid it away. There was to be a meeting of the Christians the next day.

The Apostles were to be ready to receive offerings for the general good. Ananias decided on the plan.

The Bag of Money. The hour came, and the Christians were assembled. Ananias, with a bag of money, came through the door. He started across the floor. He had a bag of money in his hand. All eyes were upon him. With pompous manner he strode forward, laid down the coins, and announced that he had sold a piece of land, and was happy to contribute the price of it to the common treasury. The people nodded approval at this beneficence. But Peter fixed him with his eyes, and said, "Ananias, why has Satan filled thine heart to lie to the Holy Ghost, and to keep back part of the price of the land? While it remained, was it not thine own? And after it was sold, was it not in thine own power? Why hast thou conceived this thing in thine heart? Thou hast not lied unto men, but unto God."

Ananias' End. Unmasked thus publicly; disgraced where he had thought to win praise; seeing clearly that his deception was not only before men but before God, Ananias was overwhelmed. He shuddered, gasped, fell down and died.

Then, in obedience to the command of the Apostles, the young men came forward, wrapped him in sheets and carried him out for burial.

Sapphira's End. Three hours later, his wife, not knowing what had taken place meanwhile, came in. Peter at once asked, "Tell me whether ye sold the land for so much?" And she said, "Yes." Then Peter cried, "How is it that ye have agreed together to tempt the Spirit of the Lord? Behold the feet of them that have buried thy husband are at the door and shall carry thee out." Instantly, Sapphira fell down and died, and the young men wrapped her form in linens and carried her away for burial.

Practical Truths. 1. A lie may be acted as well as spoken. It consists in the intention to deceive. 2. Hypocrisy tends to undermine everything good in character. The beginnings of deception are the beginnings of decay of character. Evil grows to a point where it becomes master. 3. We cannot overrate the value of sincerity of speech and act. 4. Sins are not merely against men, but against God. 5. Jugglings with conscience are always perilous. Ananias and his wife perhaps to a certain extent deceived themselves. They reasoned that they were doing a generous act, were giving voluntarily a part of their money. This would have been all right if they had so declared. But they were marning a good act by accompanying it with deception.

DR. C. D. WILSON

Then the high priest rose up, and all they that were with him, (which is the sect of the Sadducees,) and were filled with indignation, and and put them in the common prison. But the angel of the Lord by night

and

and said, Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life. And when they heard that, they entered early in the morning, and taught. But the high priest came, and they that were with him, and called together, and all the senate of the children of Israel, and sent to the prison to have them brought. But when the officers came, and found them not in they returned, and told, saying, The prison truly found we shut with all safety, and the

but when we had opened, we found no man within.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ACTS 5:12-42.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee that Thou art the great Deliverer, the same yesterday, today and forever. We thank Thee for the ministry of Thy shining ones. Help us to realize that Thou art

THE SUBJECT IN

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 30. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Peter, John, the high priest; the Sadducees, Gamaliel, prison guards and people.

Scripture Setting: A Study of Persecution. First foretold, Gen. 3:15. Of Jesus foretold, Isa. 53:2-10. Jesus persecuted, Matt. 2:13; Luke 4:28-29; John 5:16; Matt. 26:27. Righteous persecuted, Job 1:12; Jer. 38:6. Three Hebrews, Dan. 3:8-23. The Baptist, Matt. 14:3-12; Apostles, Acts 12:1-4. The Church, Acts 8:1; Paul, 2 Cor. 11:23-33. Others, Heb. 11:25-38. Purpose of, 1 Cor. 4:9-11; Acts 8:4. Rewards of, Matt. 5:10-12; Isa. 43:2. Conduct under Matt. 5:44. Victory in spite of, Rom. 8:17, 35-37.

Life and Conduct Setting: The righteous are persecuted, while sinners often enjoy popular favor. 1. Goodness is a living reproach to evil-doers and ever watching over us and that Thy loving care protects us on every side. Make us patient and trustful under life's prison experiences, that we may honor Thee. In the name of Christ. Amen.

ITS RELATIONS.

renders them uncomfortable. 2. The unrenewed heart is in natural antagonism to holiness. 3. The summons to repentance involves acknowledgment by word and life that one has been wrong, and this is repugnant to the unregenerate heart. 4. Obedience to God sometimes calls for social changes and losses, and many men rebel against such reformations. They prefer to have present abuses continue rather than submit to the discomforts of an upheaval. 5. The wicked therefore break forth in denunciations, endeavor to make it appear that the righteous are in the wrong, are revolutionists and incendiaries. They strive to silence them by persecution. 6. Every worker for God must count upon the antagonism of evil men. He must be ready to meet it in the strength of his Master.

FREED BY ANGELS.

Milton declares that "millions of spiritual creatures walk this earth, both while we sleep and while we wake." The Bible teaches the existence of angels. Would it not seem strange if the Almighty had never made any higher beings than ourselves? Have you ever watched a sunset, with all its marvels of color beyond human description? Does not all that splendor seem that it was made to be appreciated? Does it not suggest a vast host of spectators to enjoy it? Is it not quite unbelievable that the Creator lavishes all that glorious spectacle in the sky simply for occasional glances of heedless men and women, most of whom scarcely cast their eyes toward it? The wondrous beauty of the universe would of itself lead one to conclude that there are hosts of beings everywhere to enjoy the works of the Supreme Artist.

Higher Beings Than Man. Then God uses means. He works through causes. Is it not natural to think that He has hosts of messengers whom He sends on His errands? The word angel means "the one who is sent." We see in this world many orders of beings, grading from the lowest creature up to the highest man. It is reasonable to suppose that the gradations continue above man, in rank after rank. The Scriptures teach that the angels are beings of higher rank than man, with finer and more perfect powers.

Awe in the Church. Now these higher beings, angels, appear in this story lesson. After the death of Ananias and Sapphira for lying and hypocrisy, great awe came upon all the Christians. They were made very serious. They realized more completely that God requires absolute sincerity in all His people. This event also made worldly-minded outsiders hesitate to join the church; but there were many conversions among the more earnest persons. Miracles and signs were wrought continually. The people throughout the whole city and region round about heard of the cures that were performed, and they came in great crowds to the vicinity of the temple, where the Apostles daily preached.

More Miracles. The sick were brought on beds and couches into the streets, that even the shadow of Peter might fall on them as he passed. And the sick and those who had unclean spirits were all healed. Such a stir had not been known since when a few years before that Jesus had wrought His wonders and the multitude had followed Him. The Jewish authorities who had put Jesus to death and had believed that would be the end of His influence were now amazed and perplexed to find the Apostles were doing as their Master had done, and were leading the multitude away from themselves.

Plotting. The leaders of the Jews gathered together and conferred as to what could be done. They agreed that something must be done. If this work of the Apostles continued to grow the whole city would become Christian. The high priest and the Sadducees declared that, whatever came of their action, these men must be silenced. They therefore voted to order their arrest. They said, "Put them behind prison walls." The command went forth to the officers of the guard. The Apostles were taken by force, led away and shut up in the common prison, an ill-smelling, foul, wretched place. "Now," said their foes to each other, "they will not disturb us further. We will keep them behind stone walls, and if necessary we will have them put to death."

The fathers of the Christian Church taught that every human being, from birth to death, is accompanied by an angel appointed to watch over him.

In Prison. But, like all evil-minded men, they forgot God. They forgot that God works differently from men. They forgot that to God stone walls are as the mist that rises and vanishes. Armed men stood day and night before the prison doors, but God is mightier than soldiers. The Apostles within their prison were at perfect peace. They knew they were engaged in Christ's work and that in His own time and way the path would be opened for them.

A Heavenly Visitor. They went to sleep as calmly as if in their own home. Outside the doors stood the guards. Around them were stone walls. Windows and doors were shut fast and barred. But suddenly there appeared to the Apostles a Heavenly being. He stood over them and roused them from their sleep. He bade them follow him. And, rising up, he and they passed through doors that opened at their approach. They walked past soldiers, who gave them no more heed than if they had become invisible. The doors swung shut once more. The angel led them on into the street, and said, "Go, stand and speak in the temple to the people all the words of this life." Then he vanished. The servants of the Lord were free.

At the Temple Again. When morning came the Apostles appeared in the temple as if nothing had happened, and began to teach. At a later hour the high priest called the council together and there assembled with them the senate of Israel, composed of the elders, ready to confer as to further action in regard to the Apostles. They wished the prisoners brought before them, and to that end they sent officers to bring them. But soon the officers came back with the astounding news that the prisoners were not to be found. The doors had been found shut and the keepers were standing guard, but when they had looked within they found no man.

Their Foes Amazed. Great was the astonishment of all who heard this report. What could have happened? Where were the prisoners? To what will all this grow? While they were pondering over these troublesome questions a breathless messenger ran in, crying, "The men whom you put in prison are in the temple, preaching as before." Amazement filled all hearts. But the high priest recovered himself sufficiently to order the guard to bring the Apostles from the temple. Now the captain of the guard saw that the sympathies of the multitude were with the Apostles and that violence on his part might enrage the crowd against himself. So he quietly asked the Apostles to accompany him, which they fearlessly did.

Refuse to Be Silent. Once more before the authorities, they were asked, "Did not we command you that you should not teach in the name of Jesus? Behold you have filled Jerusalem with your doctrine. You are trying to bring the blood of this man upon us. But Peter and the other Apostles answered, "We ought to obey God rather than man. God has raised up Jesus, whom you slew, and exalted Him as Savior, to give repentance and forgiveness of sins. We are His witnesses."

Gamaliel. Cut to the heart, his hearers conferred together what should be done. Most of those present declared that the Apostles should be put to death. But Gamaliel, one of the wisest men of his day and a good man, advised that nothing be done. He declared that more than once agitators had risen and it had seemed as if they would overthrow all things, but in time they and the excitement they stirred up had passed away. He advised to let these men alone; that if their work was of men it would come to nothing, but if it was from God it would be folly to fight against God. His wise counsel prevailed, and it was decided to let them go.

Rejoicing in Suffering. The Apostles were recalled into the presence of the council. There they were scourged, as the law permitted. They were forbidden to speak again in the name of Jesus. Then they were permitted to depart. Rejoicing that they were allowed to suffer for Christ, they began again to preach in the temple, as before.

A Christian youth, in the early ages, was very bitterly tormented by his persecutors, in order that he might deny Christ. He endured his pain patiently, and both his foes and his Christian brethren wondered at his courage. When asked by what mighty faith he was enabled to refrain from crying out, he said, "It was, indeed, painful; but an angel stood by me when my anguish was at the worst with his finger pointed to Heaven."

Practical Truths: 1. "The Heavenly Friend is friendly at all times. He thinks of us in the night of sorrow and trial." 2. "The sin and folly of fighting against God is manifested." 3. "The duty of being sure that God is with us." 4. "We should not court persecution, neither should we shun it when it comes in the way of duty."

And in those days, when the number of the disciples was multiplied, there arose a murmuring of the

against
the Hebrews, because
their

were neglected in the daily ministration. Then the twelve called the multitude of the disciples unto them, and said, It is not reason that we should leave the word of God, and

Wherefore,
brethren,
look ye out among you

of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business. But we will give ourselves continually to prayer, and to the ministry of the word. And the saying pleased the whole multitude: and they chose Stephen, a man full of faith and of the Holy Ghost, and Philip, and Prochorus, and Nicanor, and Timon, and Parmenas, and Nicolas a proselyte of Antioch: Whom they set before the apostles: and when they had prayed, they

And the word of God increased; and the number
of the disciples multiplied in Jerusalem
greatly; and a great company
of the

were obedient to the faith.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ACTS 6:1-7.

Prayer: Our Father, May we be willing to take any place and to do any work that Thou dost appoint to us in Thy kingdom. May nothing seem small or unworthy while it serves to further Thy kingdom in the world. In the name of Christ. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 31. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, the Apostles, the Christian congregation and the seven deacons.

Scripture Setting: Church Officials. Appointed of Holy Ghost, Acts 20:28. Are foundations, Eph. 2:20. Ordained, Acts 14:23; Tit. 1:5. To be honored, 1 Tim. 5:17-19. To be obeyed, Heb. 13:17. Different gifts, 1 Cor. 12:5, 28; Eph. 4:11. Duties, Eph. 4:12; Jas. 5:14; 1 Pet. 5:2-3. To be humble, Matt. 23:11. To be studious, 2 Tim. 2:15. To be peaceable, 2 Tim. 2:24-25. Rewards, 1 Pet. 5:4. Qualifications for bishop, 1 Tim. 3:1-7; Tit. 1:7-9. Qualifications for deacon, 1 Tim. 3:8-13. Faithful deaconesses, Rom. 16:1-4. The presbytery, 1 Tim. 4:14.

Life and Conduct Setting: These new officials were chosen by the people and not by the Apostles.

HONOR OF BEING CHURCH OFFICERS.

If when you young people come to years of maturity you have the opportunity to serve God as officers of His church you will be wise to enter this field of service. In whatever denomination you may be, the various official boards of trustees, elders, vestrymen, or whatever they may be called, open paths of usefulness for such as are fitted by talents, uprightness of life and spirit. Such positions should not be sought after through vanity or selfishness. They should not be accepted by such as know themselves unworthy by conduct or lack of ability. But for good people of fair abilities they provide opportunities for much usefulness.

Workers Needed. God needs willing workers. Yet it is true today in many churches that it is difficult to induce men to assume the responsibilities of the church offices. They are too busy with other matters. They are not sufficiently interested, to make sacrifices of time and strength. It is much easier to get men to give money to churches than to give themselves. But we would have the young people now growing up take a different view of this situation. We would have them glad and willing to accept and fill such positions in the Christian church as are open to them, and to do this in the spirit of devotion to the Kingdom of Christ.

Days Not Long Enough. In the early days of the Christian church all things were on a very simple plan. The Apostles, who had been with Christ for three years and had witnessed all His deeds and heard His words, were in charge of the church. They preached, they worked miracles, they decided all questions. While there was but

ITS RELATIONS.

1. This is a fine illustration of the democracy of the early church. 2. Without entering into the subjects of controversy between the different branches of the church, it is permissible to emphasize the priesthood of the whole body of believers. 3. Under whatever form of government any church may exist today, it is vital to the fulfillment of its whole mission that the authority which resides in the so-called laity should be fully recognized. 4. All reforms in organized Christianity have been accomplished by return in some degree to the spirit and practices of the first ages of the church, and those times still remain as our exemplar. 5. The choice of the seven deacons demonstrated the ability of the people to select wisely. The people who are trained as followers of Christ can be, and should be, trusted.

a handful of Christians, as it were, this plan was sufficient, but now they were increasing rapidly. Large numbers of poor people belonged to the church and needed to be cared for. The Apostles found that the days were not long enough for them to preach, heal, become acquainted with the needs of all the people and to minister to the sick and the poor personally. They were willing to do everything, but they were not able.

Some Neglected. There were two parties in the early church. The one was called the Grecians, or Hellenists, and the other the Hebrews. The term Grecian did not mean what we might expect it to mean—that is, a Greek, or man of Greek blood. In the New Testament it means a Greek-speaking or foreign Jew. A Hebrew meant a Jew speaking a dialect of the Hebrew language. You may know that the conquests of Alexander the Great had spread the use of the Greek language very extensively throughout western Asia. Those Jews who spoke Greek were known in that region as Grecians, though they might be of pure Hebrew blood. Those Jews who spoke Hebrew fancied themselves superior to the others. This jealousy between the two parties was carried into the Christian church, in which there were both Grecians and Hebrews.

Complaints. These were the parties whose differences led the Apostles to arrange for a new set of officers in the church. The Grecians complained that their widows were neglected. This means that they felt the widows of the Grecian party received less attention in the distribution of charities than others. There may have been natural reasons for this fact without intentional neglect of any. The Grecian widows may have been strangers to the Apostles. In any case, the Grecians complained. They did not accuse the Apostles, but they complained that the Hebrews slighted the needy of their party. When food was given to the poor their widows were overlooked.

Organization. So it seemed necessary that this matter should be undertaken in a systematic way. The church needs organization, just as any other important work done. No business could get along without systematic organization. Young people should remember this fact and not permit certain people later in their lives to persuade them that religion is simply a personal matter and requires no outward organization. Without the church religion would long ago have perished.

So the twelve Apostles called the large company of the Christians together. This is the first time we learn of steps being taken to establish any institution for the government of the church. Jesus had given principles but had arranged no organization. The Apostles declared it was not reasonable that they should turn from preaching the Word of God to distribute food to the poor and widows. Theirs was the spiritual part of the service. Other matters could be attended to by others, and should be.

Thus far all gifts had been brought and laid at the feet of the Apostles. They had distributed according to their best judgment. This was a simple matter at first, but now, on account of increasing numbers, it had become practically impossible for them to deal with both services. They revealed a proper spirit. They had no jealousy that the temporalities, the handling of money and goods, should pass out of their hands. They had never touched such matters except through necessity and now they would gladly be rid of the burden and responsibility. It would be impossible to attribute selfish motives to them in such matters. They cared nothing for money except that by its means the poor of the Church could be cared for.

Qualifications. The people were instructed what they should do. "Wherefore, brethren, look ye out among you seven men of honest report, full of the Holy Ghost and wisdom, whom we may appoint over this business. But we will give ourselves continually to prayer and to the ministry of the Word." If you young people look forward to some day taking part in the work of the church, see to it that you keep your lives clean now and always. Those who serve Christ in the church should be "of honest report." The value of a good reputation cannot be overestimated. Many young men have recklessly thrown away their good name and then have wished to gain respect and standing and found it hard to re-establish themselves in the good opinion of their fellow beings.

Such as serve the church should also be "full of the Holy Ghost and of wisdom." No matter how talented men may be, they should be devout in order to serve the church rightly. It is not enough to give money. The church needs consecrated, religious men and women.

"The Seven." The suggestion of the Apostles appealed to the judgment of the people. Forthwith they selected from all the members these seven for this special work: Stephen, Philip, Procorus, Nicanor, Timon, Parmenas and Nicolas.

These seven men were brought to the Apostles as the choice of the people. Then the Apostles lifted up their voices unto God in prayer for His blessing upon these men and upon the work in which they were to engage. Then the Apostles laid their hands on their heads, as the sign that they were set apart for a special duty in the church. It was all very simple and all very beautiful, as all religious ceremonies should be. They should be simple, so that all can understand. They should have real meaning. Forms are good only if they have spiritual significance.

"Doing What the Hand Finds to Do." Then the "Seven," who today would be called deacons, took up the work of ministering to the poor among the Christians. They were willing to do what was assigned to them at the time. The true Christian is glad to do that which comes in his way for the good cause, however humble it may be. Indeed that is the path to promotion. Certain of those who began as humble deacons became eminent in the service of Christ.

It is told of a former Lord Treasurer of England that when he went from his office to his own home he was accustomed to throw off his gown, which was the emblem of his authority, and say, "Lie there, Lord Treasurer." When we enter the service of Christ it is befitting that we take off the thoughts and desires of the world and say, "Lie there, world; lie there, sinful pleasures—I am going to serve Christ."

Practical Truths: 1. The Apostles set a good example to all in the church and outside of it, in their willingness to hear reasonable complaints and in planning to deal justly with all concerned. It is easy to resent a criticism, but it is much wiser and better to weigh the matter fairly and to change where change is needed. 2. The fact that the widows were neglected shows that "to overlook is human. To correct and improve is apostolical and Christian." 3. If the Apostles were censured we can take courage. But, like them, also we should act upon whatever of wisdom is in the adverse opinion. 4. We should not undertake too much, but arrange, when possible, for division of labor. 5. A rearrangement of our work, better methods, may be a simple matter if we can see what should be altered and how to do this.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

And they

calling upon God, and
saying,
Lord Jesus,
receive
my spirit.
And he and cried with a loud voice, Lord, lay not this sin to their charge. And when he had said this, he fell

And Saul was consenting unto his death.
And at that time there was a great

against the church which was at Jerusalem; and they were all scattered abroad throughout the regions of except the apostles.

And devout men

and made great lamentation over him.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 6:8-15; 7:1-60.

Prayer: Our Father, Help us to be true witnesses for Thee and for our Savior Jesus Christ. We thank Thee for all the noble company of the martyrs who have faced death for the sake of the truth. We pray that we and all may have the same spirit. In the name of Christ. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 37. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Stephen, high priest, Saul of Tarsus, Libertines, members of the Council.

Scripture Setting: Christian Heroism. Courage enjoined, Deut. 31:7, 8, 22, 23; Josh. 1:1-9. The Israelites, Lev. 26:6-8; 2 Chron. 32:7, 8. Solomon, 1 Chr. 22:13; 28:20. Asa, 2 Chr. 15:1-7. Against dismay, Ezek. 2:6; 3:9. Be strong, 1 Cor. 16:13. Instance of Abraham, Gen. 12:1-9. Offering of Isaac, Gen. 22:1-14. Ezra on perilous journey, Ezra 8:22, 23. The three Hebrews, Dan. 3:16-18. Daniel, Dan. 6:10. Personal bravery, Joshua and Caleb, Num. 13:30; 14:16-17. Gideon, Judg. 7:7-23. Deborah, Judg. 4. Peter and other disciples, Acts 3:12-26. Paul, Acts 20:22-24; 24:14, 25.

Life and Conduct Setting: Stephen's was the first Christian martyrdom. 1. Gibbon, in giving the five causes which, in his opinion, led to the rapid spread of Christianity, included the Christians' contempt for death and willingness to die for the sake of Christ; undoubtedly this fact had a profound influence upon the pagan nature. 2. Stephen was the pioneer of that noble host who by their death hastened the spreading of the Kingdom of God. His personal traits and talents, which must have been remarkable, his complete consecration, with the rich endowment of the Holy Spirit, made his death especially poignant and pathetic in the eyes of his fellow believers. 3. His martyrdom made it plain to many that that for which such a man could willingly die must be of extraordinary value and import. 4. The enemies of Christianity, striving to exterminate it, had not counted on the sacrifice of this man as a priceless asset of the struggling church, but so it proved. 5. The vision of Jesus vouchsafed to Stephen in his last moments became the assurance of the immediate presence of Christ with His people in suffering. Thousands thereafter went to death joyfully in the light of that experience.

STONED FOR CHRIST'S SAKE.

An old saying that is still full of meaning is this: "The blood of the martyrs is the seed of the church." Such as have suffered unto death for Christianity have, by their devotion, extended the Kingdom, subdued foes, melted the heart of the world. The finest honor roll on earth is that of the men and women who have died for Christ. It is a glorious record, the story of the best, purest, loftiest-souled of the earth, and is an eternal inspiration to all who love Christ. Its influence should be felt by every boy and girl today and always. The blood of the martyrs should today make you better Christians.

A Witness. Stephen was first of the Christian martyrs. The word "Martyr" means a witness, but in the usage of Christian history it has come to mean a witness unto death. The Apostles and all Christians were witnesses for Christ by life and word, and all the Apostles, save John, later suffered death for the cause, but Stephen was the first who was actually killed for Christ's sake. So he has the honorable, noble position at the head of the glorious roll. It is not probable that any of us, unless we go as missionaries to some savage country, will be put to death for our religion. But we can be just as loyal as the martyrs; we can be willing to die if need be for the cause. More than that, a lifelong service of sacrifice has as much value as actual dying.

One of "The Seven." Stephen was one of "The Seven," later called deacons, who were appointed to take charge of the charities of the early church. As we learned in a previous lesson, the Greek-speaking Christians had complained that their poor were neglected in the giving of alms in favor of the Hebrew-speaking Christians. So "The Seven" were set apart to see that justice was done to all. It is worth noting that the names of all "The Seven" are Greek, for this means that men from the complaining party were chosen. It indicates that for the sake of quieting criticism, and making certain of justice, the whole matter of the charities was put into the hands of those who had noted the wrong and complained of it. This was a generous and Christian thing to do, and we should learn from it to be magnanimous, and more, in dealing with such as have grievances.

The new arrangement in the church worked well. It quieted contentions, united all parties, did justice to all, and the Gospel was given a fresh impulse. The deacons were zealous, discharged the special duties well, and several of them grew wonderfully in spiritual power and extended their work beyond charitable service to preaching. Philip became known as "Philip the Evangelist." But Stephen became the leader of them all in faith, in the influence of his preaching, and in the miracles he wrought.

Stephen's Success. The wonderful success of Stephen in making converts, and the extraordinary miracles wrought by him, centered the hatred of certain foes of Christianity upon him. His wisdom and power of speech pointed him out as one of the greatest leaders of the Christian movement, and it appeared to his enemies that, unless he were silenced, he would carry all the people with him into the church. These opponents belonged to "the synagogue of the Libertines, and Cyrenians and Alexandrians, and of those from Cilicia and Asia." The Libertines were freedmen, probably Jews, who had been taken prisoners by Roman generals during wars in Syria, enslaved, and then emancipated and returned to their own country. Cyrenians and Alexandrians were from Cyrenia and Alexandria, in Africa. The Asiatics represented those of Western Asia in general, while the Cilicians were from the region from which Saul of Tarsus came. These people all took the stand that Stephen and the Christians were enemies of the law, trying to destroy the temple worship and to supersede the law of Moses.

False Witnesses. When in argument with Stephen on the relations of Christianity to the law, his foes were not able to answer him, nor to meet his wisdom and spiritual power in such a way as to convince the people. Angered and dismayed by their defeat, they determined to destroy him by other means. These foes, therefore, sought and found men willing to swear against Stephen. They spread abroad this testimony, making it appear to the public that Stephen was a dangerous man; an enemy of the Jewish nation and customs.

Having created this current of opinion, the Libertines suggested to the scribes and rulers that if Stephen were arrested, information that would condemn him would be supplied. His arrest followed, and he was carried before the council. The usual methods of that court were pursued. The high priest presided and the prisoner was placed on one side, under guard.

The Trial. The high priest listened to the charges from certain of the scribes. Then witnesses were called. These men, who had been bribed, stood up, one by one, and swore, "We have heard him speak blasphemous words against Moses and against God. This man ceaseth not to speak blasphemous words against the temple and the law of Moses. We have heard him say that Jesus of Nazareth shall destroy the temple and change the customs which Moses delivered to us."

These were serious charges, if they had been true, according to the law and customs of the Jews. Every nation has the right to protect its own existence, and if the Christians had been really aiming to overthrow the national institutions of the Jews, the rulers would have had the right to resist them by proper means. But wrong teachings should be met, not by persecution, but by the truth. The Jews may have thought they were right in defending their institutions, but they were wrong in their methods.

During all these accusations, Stephen sat calm and serene, so that all who looked upon him "saw his face as if it had been the face of an angel."

Stephen's Defense. When the witnesses had done their worst, the high priest turned to the prisoner and asked, "Are these things so?" Stephen was now permitted to speak for himself, and he made a bold defense. His speech is one of the most remarkable passages in the New Testament. He recounted the history of the Jewish people and the dealings of God with them. His argument inferred that their pretended zeal for the law was hypocrisy; that they had continually broken it and profaned the temple, while blind to the spiritual meaning of both. He declared they had never kept the law themselves. He declared that they had betrayed and murdered Jesus, just as their fathers had slain the prophets. Turning on them with righteous indignation and with shining face, he cried, "Ye stiff-necked and uncircumcised in heart and ears, ye do always resist the Holy Ghost. As your fathers did, so do ye."

This change from accused to accuser, and the use of these severe denunciations, were more than his hearers could endure. They gnashed on him with their teeth. But he looked upward and cried, "I see the heavens opened and the Son of Man standing on the right hand of God."

Stoned for Christ's Sake. Infuriated, losing sight of the fact that they had no right to put a man to death, they put their fingers in their ears, that they might hear no more. They shouted aloud. They ran upon him with one accord. They seized him, hurried him outside the gates of the city, and every man hurled stones at him until he fell, bruised and dying. Still they rained upon him the cruel stones. He was able now to struggle to his knees, and pray, "Lord Jesus, receive my spirit. Lord, lay not this sin to their charge." Then he fell asleep, the first Christian martyr.

Practical Truths: 1. If Christianity was worth all the blood of all the martyrs it is worth our living for. 2. It should be a joy to make sacrifices on behalf of that which has cost so much. 3. We should aim to be witnesses for the truth and for Christ, just as really and actually as were the martyrs. 4. We are "the heirs of all the ages" and heirs of the martyrs. That which is inherited is to be used and passed on to the next generation.

THE DISCIPLES SCATTERED.

As for Saul, he made havock of the church, entering into every

and haling committed them to

Therefore they that were scattered abroad
went everywhere the word.

Then Philip went down
to the

of Samaria, and preached Christ unto them. And the people with one accord gave heed unto those things which Philip spake, hearing and seeing the

which he did.
For unclean spirits, crying
with loud voice, came out of many that were possessed with them: and many taken with palsies, and that were

were healed. And there was great joy in that city.

ACTS VIII: 3-8.

THE DISCIPLES SCATTERED.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 8:1-25.

Prayer: Our Father, May we learn that Thy goodness is in those events that seem most trying, as well as in those that are pleasant to our natures. Thy providence is wonderful and great. We behold how Thou didst bring blessing to many when Thy disciples were scattered. May we see Thy providence also in our own day and in our own lives. In the name of Christ. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 37. Places, Jerusalem, Judea and Samaria. Persons, Saul of Tarsus, the disciples, Simon Magus.

Scripture Setting: A Study in Witnessing. Command to witness, 1 Chr. 16:8-9; Psa. 9:11; Psa. 18:49; Luke, 12:8; Rom. 10:9. Men are God's witnesses, Isa. 12:4, 5, 6; Isa. 43:10; Luke 24:48. A figure of, Mark 4:21. Grateful witnesses, Mark 5:16-20; Luke 8:38; John 4:28. Disciples appointed to, John 15:27; Acts 1:8, 22. Love essential to, 1 Cor. 13:1. Paul's witnessing, Phil. 3:7; Acts 26:12-23. Exhortation to, 1 Tim. 6:12. Dangerous to neglect, Heb. 2:3. Resolve to, Psa. 22:22. Perfect expression of, Psa. 23; Psa. 27:1-6. A heathen's, Dan. 4:1-3, 34, 37. The blind man's, John 9:17.

Life and Conduct Setting: Here note, 1. Saul was at first on the edge of the whirlpool of persecution, "consenting to Stephen's death." Presently he is drawn into the very abyss. 2. The persecution rages at the then center of the Christian-Church-world—Jerusalem. The city had beheld similar scenes many times. Jesus had characterized it as notorious for its bitter intolerance. 3. Before the force of the storm that now broke the Christians were scattered, but each of the band carried a light unto those in darkness. 4. This event developed the latent talents of many of the Christians. A proper inference is that all who were scattered abroad "went in all directions preaching the word." Times of trouble often loosen the tongue to speak for God. 5. The season of stress brought into action the abilities of Philip and strengthened him for that work which won him the distinction of being known as "The Evangelist." Strong people increase in strength under trial. 6. Good came out of evil, and the Kingdom of Christ was prospered through the very means by which His enemies had sought to destroy it.

OUT OF THE NEST.

No doubt it is a wonderfully comfortable existence for little birds in their mother's nest. It is nice and warm, and the birdies are together. Mother bird nestles them with her soft feathers. Mother and father birds capture the daintiest worms and flies and sail through the air to the wide open mouths of the little ones to feed them. The nest appears to birdies the finest palace imaginable; the sides seem as high as walls, and as thick as any home need be. The lining is downy and soft. O! it is a nice home, and no parents could be more considerate.

Outgrowing the Nest. But the little birds grow, and as they get bigger they crowd each other. Afterwhile the house seems terribly little. Each bird's head is now so high that it peeps over the walls every time it stretches. If one moves, it is in danger of falling out entirely. And then presently there is not by any means room enough. Something has to be done. So they step up on the edge and look around. Then they venture on to a limb. Then perhaps they try to fly, after the manner of mother and father. Perhaps one tumbles clear off the tree, down and down through a great abyss, as it seems, and finds itself on the ground. It learns to run and to flutter and then to fly. Pretty soon the little birds get to hunting for their own food, they go off by themselves, and then later have nests of their own. Where there was one little nest with four or five birdies, now there are four or five other nests, each with a group of little birdies in it. Somehow the first little nestlings could not stay where they were; they would grow up; and finally they would fly for themselves and have nests of their own. Such is the order of things.

The Nest in Jerusalem. Now the Christians in Jerusalem were in some degree like a nest of little birds. They had been all in one place, the home city, the great capital city of the nation. The scenery was all familiar. The place was full of home associations. They had had their troubles, but so far they had been together in one place. Just as God has arranged that birds grow up and leave their nests, so He arranges that men and women to whom truth is given shall be led to take it and give it to other people. Christ had come and lived and died, and had gone to Heaven, and had bidden His disciples carry the Gospel to the world. But the Christians were all staying in Jerusalem. This was necessary at first, while they were growing, to stay in the nest. But now they were strong enough and there were enough of them to start out with the message to the world.

The First Stirring. They were stirred out of their nest in this way. The martyrdom of Stephen was the first move. The enemies of Christ found that they had been successful in their first strong effort. They had put a leader of the Christians to death and the Romans had done nothing about it. This may have been because there was no Roman governor in the country at that time. Anyway, the Jews were not punished. They decided to follow up this crime by other persecutions.

Saul. When Stephen was being stoned, there was present a certain young man named Saul, who was born and reared in the city of Tarsus in Cilicia. Saul was a very learned young man, very strong in character and very vehement in his faith in the Jewish religion and law. He had heard of these Christians and did not like them. It is presumed that, being in Jerusalem at the time of the trial of Stephen, he was present in the council when Stephen spoke. He was very bitter against him and thought that he should be put to death. He himself did not cast any stones. What he did was to stand by and consent to his death, and when certain men wished to have their arms free so as to throw straighter and harder, he held the long cloaks they cast off for the time. So he took part in the crime, to that extent.

The City Searched. When it was all over, Saul got into the full current of the persecution. He was ready to do anything to get rid of these Christians. So he went to the council and got authority from it to hunt out and arrest any followers of Christ whom he could discover. Saul was a very energetic and active man, and whatever he undertook he gave his mind and body to that end fully. So he set about this persecution in a thorough and savage way. As he was armed with legal authority for this purpose, he took a company of men and went from house to house, wherever he had reason to think Christians lived, and he had them dragged out and cast into prison. The whole city was searched as by detectives and the prisons were being filled with Christians.

The Flight. This terrible persecution struck terror to the hearts of many. They began to plan for flight. In the twilight and in the dark and in the early mornings there could be seen little companies of men, women and children, slipping down the streets, hiding as much as possible, slipping out of the gates, and hastening away over the hills. The children were asking their mothers as they clung to them, "Where are we going? Why are we leaving home? Are the bad men after us? Won't Christ take care of us?" These were the Christians fleeing from the terrible persecutions of Saul of Tarsus. This was the way the birds were being driven out of the nest.

The Good of It. This seemed very pitiful, but vast good was to come of it. It is supposed that only the Apostles were left in Jerusalem of all the large number of Christians who had been there. Now the Christians were scattered throughout Judea and throughout Samaria. Some of them went through Phenicia into Syria as far as Antioch. Some went to the island of Cyprus. Everywhere they went they proclaimed Christ, so that thousands heard of Christ as a result of this scattering abroad.

Simon Magus. Philip, who was one of "The Seven" set apart to minister to the widows, went to preach in the city of Samaria, and there he did many wonderful works and cast out unclean spirits. In that place there was a man named Simon Magus, who was a sorcerer, and he had persuaded the Samaritans by his trickeries to think he was a great and supernatural being. He was doing a great deal of harm when Philip came. When he saw the miracles that Philip wrought and heard him tell by whose power he worked miracles, Simon realized that this was a man who did genuine wonders, while his own were mere tricks. So he was much impressed, and he believed that Christ who gave Philip such power must be indeed a Divine being. So Simon was baptized.

A soldier of the Civil War, who had lost his right arm, said to a member of the famous Christian Commission, which did so much during that strife to carry the Gospel to the army, "It seems to me that I cannot be grateful enough for losing my arm. It made me thoughtful and opened the way for your delegates to visit me and ended in my finding Christ."

Word of what was being accomplished in Samaria was sent to the Apostles in Jerusalem, and they came to Samaria to help in the work. The Apostles laid their hands on the converts and they received the Holy Spirit. When this sorcerer Simon saw that such as had the Apostles' hands laid on them received the Holy Spirit, he desired to have power to do the same thing. As he had been a trickster all his life, and had become a nominal Christian only because he thought the ability to work miracles would help him to get rich, he offered Peter money if he would impart to him this power. But Peter repulsed him, saying, "Thy money perish with thee, because thou hast thought that the gift of God may be purchased with money." Peter so denounced the man that he was terrified, repented and asked the Apostle to pray for him.

Then all the Christians continued in the good work of carrying the Gospel into all the region round about. Multitudes were converted. And all this came as a good result from the fact that the Christians were compelled to leave Jerusalem on account of bitter persecution.

Practical Truths. 1. We can preach the Gospel by word and life anywhere and under all circumstances. 2. While the miracles of Philip served a purpose, it was the preaching of the Word to which he especially gave himself. We have the same Word, and it can accomplish as much today as it did in any previous time. 3. The Holy Spirit is the gift of God and cannot be purchased. Simon Magus, whose name is perpetuated in the infamous word "simony," was a self-seeking and perhaps self-deluded man who was engaged in deluding others. 4. A pure heart is essential to all good work for God or man. 5. There can be no compromise with selfish worldliness. 6. Religion must not be a cloak for personal ends.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

PHILIP AND THE ETHIOPIAN.

And the

of the Lord spake unto Philip, saying, Arise, and go toward the south unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is

And he arose and went: and, behold, a man of an eunuch of great authority under Candace

of the Ethiopians, who had the charge of all her and had come to Jerusalem

for to worship,
was returning,
and

read Esaias the prophet.
Then the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near,
and join thyself to this chariot. And Philip thither to him, and heard him read the prophet Esaias, and said Understandest thou what thou readest? And he said, How can I except some man should guide me

And he desired Philip that he would come up, and sit with him

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 8:26-40.

Prayer: Our Father, Incline our hearts to follow in the path of duty which Thou dost point out to us. May we know that in that way we shall find good, since Thou dost direct us in it and accompany us. In the name of Christ. Amen.

"Just as thou art, without one trace
Of love, or joy, or inward grace,
Or meetness for the Heavenly place,
O guilty sinner, come!"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 37. Place, the desert road from Jerusalem to Gaza. Persons, Philip and the Ethiopian.

Scripture Setting: Searching the Scriptures. Sword of the Spirit, Eph. 6:17. Word of Christ, Col. 3:16. To be read publicly, Deut. 31:11-13. Expounded, Neh. 8:8. Searched, Acts 17:11. Testify of Christ, John 5:39; Acts 10:43; 1 Cor. 15:3. Perfect, Psa. 19:7. Cleansing power, Psa. 119:9. Precious, 2 Pet. 1:4. A lamp, Psa. 119:105. Hidden in heart, Psa. 119:11.

Life and Conduct Setting: The notable characteristics of this passage are: 1. The Ethiopian was in earnest and in search for light. 2. Though he had accepted Judaism in his own country, had made a long pilgrimage to the Holy City and had worshiped there, he felt the need of further knowledge. 3. He was making good use of his time by reading the Scriptures even under the disadvantages of his position in a moving chariot. 4. He was ready to acknowledge his own ignorance. 5. He was willing to accept aid from a man who evidently was not of his rank. 6. He was prompt to act upon the truth when it was given him. 7. He was a courtier, and "not many noble are called." 8. Philip was obedient to the leading of the Spirit. 9. He preached Christ to one who might have been an enemy of the Master and of the Christians and have turned upon him as a persecutor. 10. He satisfied himself of the worthiness of the Ethiopian before he baptized him.

FROM THE LAND OF THE SUNBURNT.

The Desert Road. Philip the Evangelist had been preaching in Samaria, and now the Spirit of God bade him go elsewhere on a special mission. He was told to go "toward the south, unto the way that goeth down from Jerusalem unto Gaza, which is desert." There were, and are, three roads from Jerusalem to Gaza. So Philip had to choose between them. If he had been seeking to reach Gaza he could have done so by any one of the three. But as he was to perform a certain duty on the way he had to select a particular road. It is not only arriving that is important, but what happens on the way is also vital. He was bidden to take "the desert way," that is, the one through a deserted region, without villages or cultivated fields. One of the three roads that still leads from Jerusalem to Gaza is such a way.

The Meeting of Two Men. On that desert road an event was about to happen that would change the spiritual destiny of one man, send him back to his own country with a message to his countrymen. The story of that event was to find a prominent place in the Bible. In Palestine that day it is quite certain that no one would have said the chief event from sunrise to sunset was to be upon the desert road to Gaza, where an Evangelist, walking through the dust, would greet a foreigner sitting in his chariot. Yet that happening made that day forever memorable.

Philip's Walk. Philip went on his way in perfect faith. There were no houses in sight, and there were few marks of travel on the roadway. For a long time Philip did not catch a glimpse of a single human being. No place could seem more unpromising for a missionary whose business it was to carry the message of salvation to men. But Philip had no doubts. He did not slacken his steps, or look back, but he pressed right on. For a while he did not know what was to happen, but he knew that God's angels make no mistakes and do not send men on useless journeys. He thought of Christ, who had made so many like journeys on foot throughout that land. He thought of the great work that had been accomplished in Samaria. He rejoiced that though the Christians had been scattered by persecution they were enabled to reach souls in many places. His heart was full, and he was ready to speak for Christ to any one he might meet or overtake.

A Chariot in Sight. At last Philip saw a cloud of dust far down the road. At first he could not tell whether someone was coming toward him or going from him. But he kept looking with the earnestness of one who was seeking for men to whom to give the Words of Life. Presently it was plain that the chariot, for such it appeared, was going from him. But it was moving very slowly. Whoever was in it was evidently in no haste. So Philip quickened his steps and drew nearer. He could now see that the chariot was evidently that of a man of importance. It was handsomely equipped; he could see the glitter of the gilt upon it. He could see the shining of the metals on the harness of the horses. He could see the driver, holding the lines loosely while he gazed around, letting the steeds advance at a slow walk. He could see a man, arrayed in silks and turbaned, bending forward as if nodding from sleep. He could see horsemen riding in advance as if for protection of the important personage who was evidently the owner of the chariot.

A Man Reading Aloud. As Philip came still nearer, he could hear the murmur of a voice. It did not sound like conversation, for there was but one voice. Still nearer, Philip recognized that the man who seemed to be nodding from sleep was reading aloud; but this did not surprise him, for the habit of reading aloud to one's self was, and is, general in the Orient. Now "the Spirit said unto Philip, Go near and join thyself to this chariot." Philip ran thither toward it, and now he could hear what the man was reading. The words were from the prophet Isaiah. Evidently this was a religious man, or at least one who was studying religious matters.

Philip was now beside the slow-moving chariot. At sight of the running man the occupant of the chariot looked up. Philip glanced at the manuscript in the stranger's hands, then at his dark face, and said, "Do you understand what you are reading?" The stranger looked seriously into the earnest face beside him, found in it intelligence and sympathy, and replied, "How can I, except some man should guide me?" Then he kindly invited the Evangelist to enter the chariot and sit by him.

The Ethiopian. As we may justly infer, the stranger told Philip who he was. He was a man from Ethiopia, the Greek word for which means the land of the sunburnt. His country lay south of Egypt, and of it Nubia and Abyssinia now form a part. He was the treasurer of the queen of that land, where the queens were all called Candace, just as Roman emperors were called Caesar and Egyptian kings were called Pharaohs. Under the influence of Jews living in Ethiopia he had been converted to Judaism. He had come on a pilgrimage to Jerusalem and was now on his way home.

A soldier said he had "learned in army drills to obey the word of command, 'Right about face.' And when Jesus spoke to him it meant 'Right about face' from where he was before." That was his way of putting the fact of conversion which he had experienced.

A Courtier Willing to Learn. We do not know what his name was, but tradition has it that his name was Indich, and this will answer to distinguish him by. Philip doubtless made himself known as a disciple of Jesus, of whom Indich perhaps had heard while in Jerusalem. Indich declared that he was anxious to learn more of the Scriptures and of their meaning, that he had worshiped in Jerusalem, had been reading in the prophets; but now he was puzzled. He laid his finger on the passage which he had been striving to understand.

"The place of the Scripture which he read was this: He was led as a sheep to the slaughter; and like a lamb dumb before his shearer, so He opened not his mouth."

"Tell me, sir," he said, gazing earnestly at the man by his side, "I pray thee, of whom does the prophet speak this? Does he speak it of himself or of some other man? If he speaks of another, who was this man?"

Then Philip instructed him. He said it was a foretelling of Jesus. He told him of Jesus, who He was, what He had done, how He had suffered, died, risen again and ascended to Heaven. He told him what Jesus had commanded: repentance, faith, baptism, obedience.

A Convert. Long and earnestly did they talk together. Many were the questions of Indich, but Philip, guided by the Spirit, answered all clearly and plainly and convincingly. The Ethiopian's heart was touched, his mind was satisfied. He longed to take another step toward being a Christian. As they conversed there was a gleam far down the road, as of the sun shining upon water. They drew nearer and there indeed appeared a pool of clear water. Then Indich said in his eagerness, "See, here is water. What doth hinder me to be baptized?"

Philip said, "If thou believest with all thine heart, thou mayest."

And he answered and said, "I believe that Jesus Christ is the Son of God."

At Indich's command the chariot stood still. Philip and Indich went down to the water. There by the wayside of that desert road, reverently and earnestly the stranger from Ethiopia confessed Christ, and Philip solemnly baptized him in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost.

Then, rejoicing that his pilgrimage from a far land had ended in his soul being flooded with the light of Christ, Indich left Philip behind, while he pursued his homeward journey, and carried to his own people the message of eternal life. Thus had God guided Philip on that desert way to bring to a stranger the blessing of salvation.

Practical Truths. 1. We should study earnestly the Word of God. 2. We should be willing to be instructed in the truth. 3. We should act with decision upon what we learn from the Scriptures. 4. We should accept Christ with all our hearts. 5. We will, like the Ethiopian, if we do, go on our way rejoicing. 6. We should, like him, carry the message to our own people.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

SAUL OF TARSUS CONVERTED.

And Saul, yet breathing out threatenings and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord, went unto the

and desired
of him
letters to Damascus
to the

that if he found any of this way, whether they were men or women, he might bring them

unto Jerusalem.
And
as he

he came near Damascus: and suddenly there shined around about him a

And
he

and heard a voice saying unto him, Saul, Saul, why persecutest thou me?

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS IN ACTS 9:1-20.

Prayer: Our Father, May we too be truly converted from all sin and error. Though a special revelation may not be given to us as to Saul of Tarsus, may we nevertheless be as certain as he was that Jesus is our Savior. May we, in our degree and place, serve Christ as faithfully as he did. In the name of Christ. Amen.

"Askest thou in exultation
What the cross of Christ has done;
Ask the splendors of creation
If they feel the noonday sun;
Ask reviving vegetation,
Rushing forth on joyous wing,
If it feels the inspiration
Of the breath-enchanted spring."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 37-40. Place, near Damascus. Persons, Saul of Tarsus and Jesus.

Scripture Setting: Conversion. New creature, Rom. 13:14; 2 Cor. 5:17; Col. 3:9-10; 2 Pet. 1:4. Life from dead, Ezek. 16:6; Rom. 6:1-6; Gal. 2:19; Eph. 2:1. Spiritual light, 2 Cor. 4:6; Eph. 5:8. Repentance, Ezek. 18:30; Hos. 6:1; Acts 3:19; Mark 1:15. Converting a sinner, James 5:20. Law of the Lord, Psa. 19:7. Converting others, Luke 22:32.

Life and Conduct Setting: A Jew, a Pharisee, a Greek by birth, a scholar, a Roman citizen, a persecutor was converted. He was changed during a period of relentless persecution. He was arrested by a great light, a voice and a vision. His experience was followed by blindness, then by prayer, then by restored sight. The sinner became a saint, the foe a friend, and the self-righteous Pharisee an humble Christian.

AN ENEMY BECOMES A FRIEND.

When one is reading, or hearing, a fiction story he likes to have remarkable and unexpected things happen. The more wonderful they are the better, provided it can be made to appear that they really could have occurred. In real life more extraordinary things do come about than any romancer could conjure up in his imagination.

Too Good to Be True. If the persecuted Christians, in the early history of the Church, could have found time and inclination to listen to the most remarkable, romantic stories then written, they might have heard them without much enthusiasm, or have considered them less extraordinary than many events they had known or heard of. But if they had been told that the most terrible, cruel, and remorseless persecutor of the Church would soon become a devout, earnest, aggressive follower of Christ and friend of their cause, they would not have believed a word of it. Yet that incredible thing, that most unexpected of events, was about to happen.

Faith in the Good. One of the most beautiful facts in the world is that the bad often become good; foes become friends; ignorance is displaced by knowledge; error is overcome by truth. We cannot believe too much in the power of the good and the true. Yet there is an almost universal tendency to feel that evil is the stronger.

There is a tradition that when St. John was on his way from Patmos to Ephesus, thieves laid hold of him. Among them was a young man, who was their captain. To him St. John gave good counsel as to abandoning his sins. The effect of his words was so great that the man was converted and afterward labored with his fellow robbers to give up their wicked ways. Many of them were converted.

Saul of Tarsus. We are now face to face with an extraordinary event that was to change a man's life and to have a tremendous influence upon the future of Christianity. There was a man named Saul, who was a native of the city of Tarsus, in Cilicia. He was by race a pure Jew, but he had grown up in a heathen, Greek-speaking city. He belonged to the sect of the Pharisees and had been educated in Jerusalem. He was a man of pure life, of great earnestness of heart, fearless and determined. He was an enthusiastic believer in the strictest interpretation of the Jewish religion and of obedience thereto. He was proud and strong and self-reliant, and intolerant of opposition. When he first heard that Jesus of Nazareth, who had appeared to be a simple Galileean teacher who had been put to death on the cross, was being proclaimed as the Messiah and as having risen from the dead, and as the Son of God, he considered this blasphemy. When he learned that Stephen was influencing thousands to accept Jesus as the Christ, Saul agreed that he was worthy of death. When Stephen was on trial Saul was one of those who gnashed on him with their teeth and hurried him outside the city to be stoned. Saul aided that deed by holding the garments of those who cast the stones.

An Enraged Persecutor. Infuriated now, as a wild beast that has tasted blood, Saul leaped to the forefront of the persecution, and threw himself with all his vast energy into the work of exterminating the Christians. His name became one of terror to all the Christians.

There was an abbot who very much wished to buy a piece of land that lay near his monastery. The man who owned it declined to sell, but said he would rent it. The abbot agreed to this and contracted to sow it with only one crop. He sowed it with acorns, that lasted three hundred years. So the evil spirit seeks to sow in the young the first crop. Early conversion is the highest wisdom.

Organizing. Whatever Saul did he did with his whole heart, mind and body. He organized the persecution into a great campaign to reach wherever there were any Christians and to capture them in one vast net. Like a true leader, he went to the front himself. Learning that many Christians had fled to Damascus, he determined to pursue them thither. To this end he obtained letters from the high priest, directed to the chief of the synagogues in Damascus, authorizing him to make search for Christians and bidding Jewish elders there to help him in his work.

On the Way. Thus prepared, he set forth on horseback, with a company of followers. His savage determination is described in the words "breathing out threatenings and slaughter." He was like some fierce creature whose every breath was flame, to burn whatever it touched. Now what will this terrible man do? You say he will hasten to Damascus; he will search every street and every house; he will cruelly bind every Christian; he will return to Jerusalem with a band of prisoners, will deliver them to the high priest, have them cast into dungeons and then put to death. This is what he planned to do, and that is what he would have done, if something most unexpected had not happened.

A Miracle. Saul and his company had almost completed their long journey "across the vast level east of the Lake of Tiberias, 'the desert of Damascus.' The earth in its length and breadth, and all the deep universe of the sky, is steeped in light and heat. The towers of the most ancient city in the world are now in full sight."

"Suddenly there shined round about him a light from Heaven." He and all the company were stricken from their horses and fell to the earth. Then Saul saw a vision of the Son of God near him. And he heard a voice calling him by name, "Saul, Saul," and the voice said reproachfully, "Why persecutest thou me?" Saul, amazed, cried, "Who art thou, Lord?" And the voice answered, "I am Jesus whom thou persecutest." Saul, trembling and astonished, said, "Lord, what wilt thou have me to do?" And the Lord bade him arise and go into the city and it should be told him what he must do.

Those with him were as amazed as he, for they heard the voice but saw no one. Saul arose from the ground, tried to look about, but found he was blinded by the vision, so that the others had to lead him by the hand into Damascus.

A Changed Man. Thus the terrible persecutor had in a moment been changed into a helpless man, needing to be led by the hand, while for three days he took neither food nor drink. Then Jesus appeared to a Christian man of the city, bearing the same name as the hypocrite who had lied to the Apostles, but very different in character, one Ananias, and Jesus bade him go to Saul, whom he would find praying. Jesus told him that Saul also has had a revelation of Ananias coming to him. At the mention of a visit to Saul, Ananias shrank, saying, "Lord, I have heard by many of this man, how much evil he hath done to Thy saints in Jerusalem, and he has come here with authority to bind all that call on Thy name." But Jesus said to him, "Go thy way; for he is a chosen vessel unto me, to bear my name before the Gentiles and the children of Israel."

So Ananias visited Saul, declaring that Jesus, who had appeared to him on the way, had sent him, that he might receive his sight and be filled with the Holy Ghost. Immediately there fell as it were scales from the eyes of Saul and he received his sight. Soon afterward he was baptized. He remained certain days with the disciples in Damascus.

An Indian and a white man attended the same church and were convicted of sin. The Indian soon became joyous in his sense of pardon, while the white man continued much depressed. Meeting the Indian some time afterward, the white man said, "How is it that I do not have the joy you have found?" The Indian replied, "Me tell you. There come along a rich prince. He offer you a new coat. You look at your coat and say, 'I don't know. My coat pretty good. I think it will do.' He then offer me a new coat. I look at my old blanket. I say, 'This good for nothing.' I throw it quick away, and take the beautiful coat. Just so you try to keep your own righteousness. But poor Indian had none. Therefore I glad to receive the righteousness of Christ."

Practical Truths. 1. A conversion may be as real as was Saul's without its miraculous accompaniments. We need not question the reality of a change of heart simply because no startling phenomena are manifested. 2. The sinner who has been convicted of sin must be ready to meet the doubts of others as to the reality of the change until demonstrated by a good life. 3. We should believe in the power of Christ to convert the worst sinner. 4. A strong character is likely to be intense in conduct, either good or bad. For Paul there was no half-way place between being a persecutor and an apostle. A very bad man often, when converted, makes a very good one.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

And straightway he preached Christ in the

that he is the Son of God.
But all that heard him were amazed, and said; Is not this he that destroyed them which called on his name in and came hither for that intent, that he might bring them

unto the chief

But Saul increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt at Damascus, proving that this is very Christ. And after that many days were fulfilled, the Jews took counsel to kill him: But their laying await was known of Saul. And they watched the day and night to kill him.

Then the disciples took him
by night,
and

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 9:20-32.

Prayer: Our Father, May we learn to be courageous in Thy work. May we turn wholly from error unto truth and live and teach the truth without fear. In the name of Christ. Amen.

"And when these earthly years are past and gone, Temptation's battle fought, the victory won, From Heaven shall gently come this message down, They that have borne the cross shall wear a crown."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 37-43. Places, Damascus, Arabia and Jerusalem. Persons, Saul of Tarsus, Jews and Barnabas.

Scripture Setting: Preaching. Christ preaching, Matt. 5:1. Jesus in the synagogues, Matt. 9:35. In the temple, Luke 20:1. Preachers as watchmen, Ezek. 3:17. Rule, Jonah 3:2; Matt. 10:7. Morals, Isa. 58:1. Good preaching, Acts 6:4; Acts 20:27. For conversion, 2 Cor. 5:20.

Life and Conduct Setting: "It was solely the impulse of his own heart to proclaim that Savior, who had graciously manifested Himself to those who knew Him not, that led Paul to speak to the Jews in the synagogues concerning Jesus."

THE PERSECUTOR A PREACHER.

What do you think a man should teach and preach to others? You will properly reply: That which he believes himself. To be sure. For unless a truth has entered into one's heart and mind deeply, he cannot expect others to be affected by what he says. Well, what had Saul, soon to be called by his Roman name Paul, to preach? An experience. Was he to tell merely that he had seen a light and heard a voice, and had fallen from his horse, had been blind three days and then had received his sight? No, there was more than that. There was a great central fact in his experiences on the road to Damascus. That was, that he had seen Jesus of Nazareth; he had seen Him as the risen Christ, had heard Him speak and had spoken to Him.

The Basis of Faith. One of the marks of an Apostle was that he had seen Christ after the resurrection. It is probable that Saul of Tarsus had never beheld Christ during His earthly life. But he saw the risen Christ at the time of his conversion, near Damascus. This experience then qualified him, in that far, to be an Apostle. That personal interview with Jesus also gave him the foundation for all his ministry. We modern Christians have a somewhat different basis for our faith. We do not have special revelations of Christ in person, but we have the proofs of Christ's presence in what His Spirit does in us and in the world. The early Christians did not really have as much proof as we have, for we have the historical wonder of nineteen centuries of Christ's influence in the world. Every life that overcomes sin is a demonstration of Christ's presence. The progress of Christianity in making a better world is a proof of Christ's presence. So we can believe as firmly as Paul did.

Saul's First Preaching. Saul, now converted, a changed man, with his heart burning with the wonderful revelation that had been given to him, began to tell of what he had seen. After he had been with the Christians a few days in Damascus, he began to speak in the synagogues. These were the churches of the Jews. It was to the chief Jews in the synagogues that he had intended to bring letters from the priests in Jerusalem to ask aid in persecuting the Christians. To these very people he now went to tell of Christ.

The Jews Amazed. The Jews, who had expected to assemble in the synagogues and to see the famous persecutor enter and fiercely denounce the Christians, now saw the same man rise up and tell them that he had seen Jesus of Nazareth risen from the dead and that he was the Son of God. It appears they were so astonished at first that they did not know what to do. There is no hint that at first they tried to stop him in this preaching. There is record of their complete astonishment. "All that heard him were amazed, and said, Is not this he that in Jerusalem made havoc of them which called on this name? and he had come hither for this intent, that he might bring them bound before the chief priests."

In Arabia. Thus Saul at once bore his testimony in spite of the astonishment of his hearers. He could not be silent until he had taken his stand for Christ. And yet, he knew he was not fully equipped for his future work. He doubtless was led by the Spirit to understand that after bearing his testimony there were other preparations for him to make before he should enter further upon the mission of spreading the Gospel. Different scholars are not agreed as to just the point in the narrative of Luke, in the ninth chapter of Acts, where Paul's departure for Arabia should be introduced. But it is reasonably safe to say that Paul preached in the synagogues in Damascus first and then went away to Arabia. Paul himself tells us in one of his epistles that he retired into Arabia for three years. It has been thought by some that he went into the neighborhood of Mt. Sinai, but we do not know the exact place where he spent those years. His motive was to study, meditate, commune with Christ, and fit himself for his later work.

Preparation. All of us may learn from this conduct of Paul that preparation of heart is essential for Christian work. There is an extreme of timidity in Christian work, and there is also an extreme of boldness. The boy and girl should be willing to undergo preparation. We should all make every effort to be ready. Prayer, study of the Bible, meditation, public worship, the Sunday school, reading good books, all are essential to preparation for Christian work. It must have been a wonderful period of communion and meditation for Paul, far away in Arabia. At last he came forth from it fully armed for his wonderful future.

He returned to Damascus, the scene of his conversion, the scene of his first preaching, as the chosen field for his renewed campaign for Christ. Now, he was no longer a new disciple, but he came after three years to proclaim what he had declared before, that Jesus was the Son of God. He came now, after a long course of study in the Scriptures, to show from them that Jesus is the Christ. He came with a humbler spirit, a deeper love, a chastened spirit. He came with matured thought and ordered argument. He came also a stronger man. He was now the blazing Apostle, irresistible and overwhelming, so that it is written "Saul increased the more in strength, and confounded the Jews which dwelt in Damascus, proving that this is the Christ."

They Try to Kill Saul. Again the disconcerted Jews brought forth their old argument,—death. "They took counsel to kill him." They could not answer this man, whom they held to be a traitor to their cause, this man who once had been their chief champion,—so they would slay him, if they could. But the plot was discovered. The Jews in turn suspected that news of their conspiracy had reached the man they sought; so they set spies at the gates to note if he went out and to follow him, and kill him. But the Christians also were wide-awake in the crisis. They would protect this precious life. So they did not let him risk passing through the gates. They took him to the top of the wall, unobserved, which was not difficult in a poorly-lighted ancient city, and attaching ropes to a basket, they seated him in the basket and lowered him to the ground.

It must have been with a deep joy that Paul endured this persecution for Christ's sake. He had come to Damascus the first time as a foe of Christ. Now he was being honored by being driven from the city as a friend of Christ. To his strong and loyal spirit this must have appeared as at least a partial atonement for his misdeeds. He was suffering with and for Christ.

To Jerusalem. Full of this joy, his heart burning with love to Christ, he sped away toward Jerusalem. Now he came as a Christian, but the Christians were still fearful of him. They suspected some concealed plot, as if he were a spy in disguise. Paul was a man with such greatness of mind as to recognize that this was just punishment for his former conduct. He did not complain. But he proved his case to Barnabas, who vouched for him to the Apostles. That must have been a most interesting scene when the Apostles listened gravely and silently to the wonderful story of the change of the bitter persecutor into a friend of Jesus. When they heard of the vision by the way, then of the bold preaching in Damascus, then of the peril and flight, their hearts must have told them this was indeed the work of Christ in the nature of Paul. So they welcomed him.

Now from the company in that city Paul goes forth into Jerusalem. How they must have been confounded by this change in one who outside those very walls had stood and held the garments of those who had stoned Stephen! Oh, they hated him and would kill him. But the brethren, taught by many bitter experiences to be on the watch, learned of the danger to Paul. So they took him to Caesarea and sent him on his way to Tarsus.

An artist was employed to paint the Last Supper. It was his object to throw all his art into the figure and countenance of Jesus, but he put on the table, in the foreground, some ornamental cups, the workmanship of which was very beautiful. When his friends came to see the picture on the easel, one said, "What beautiful cups." "Ah," said the painter, "I have made a mistake. These cups have diverted your eyes from the Lord." He blotted the cups from the canvas, that the figure of Christ might be the chief object of attraction.

Practical Truths. 1. Saul no longer wished for controversy. He desired only to win men to Christ. Our aim should be to enlighten, rather than to debate. 2. We should undertake only to tell what we know by experience of Christianity. A little of truth passed through the alembic of the heart has more real power than long treatises on deep truths that have not been felt in one's own life. 3. We should be willing to prepare ourselves by study and meditation for Christian work.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

And it came to pass, as Peter passed throughout all quarters, he came down also to the saints which dwelt at

And there he found a certain man named Æneas, which had kept his bed eight years, and was of the palsy. And Peter said unto him, Æneas, Jesus Christ maketh thee whole: arise, and make thy bed. And he immediately. And all that dwelt at Lydda and Saron saw him, and turned to the Lord. Now there was at a certain disciple named Tabitha, which by interpretation is called Dorcas: this was full of good works and alms-deeds which she did. And it came to pass in those days, that she was and died: whom when they had washed, they laid her in an upper

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 9:33-42.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee that Thou art mightier than all the illnesses of our flesh, and that Thou rulest over death itself. May we bring all our infirmities unto Thee for remedy. Enable us to bear what Thou dost not see fit to remove. In the name of Christ. Amen.

"There is no death!
What seems so is transition;
This life of mortal breath
Is but a suburb of the life elysian, Whose portal we call death."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 36. Places, Lydda and Joppa. Persons, Peter, Æneas, Dorcas and other believers.

Scripture Setting: A Study in Good Works. Jesus an example of, John 10:32. Remembered of God, Neh. 13:14; Heb. 6:9-10. Evidence of faith, Matt. 25:34-40; Jas. 2:14-20. God honored by, John 15:8. Make us brethren of Christ, Luke 8:21. Relation to eternal life, Luke 10:25-26. What God requires, Micah 6:8. Fruitful in, Col. 1:40. A blessing follows, Jas. 1:25. Parables relating to: the talents and pounds, Luke 19:12-27; the laborers in the vineyard, Matt. 20:11-15; the two sons, Matt. 21:28-31; the barren fig tree, Luke 13:6-9. Salvation not gained by, Rom. 4:2; Rom. 11:6. Blessedness of, Rev. 22:14.

Life and Conduct Setting: The spirit of Christianity awakened a large part of the world to the value and necessity of charitable work. 1. It rebuked and condemned the pagan spirit which lacked sympathy and neglected the weak and the struggling. 2. It pointed out the way to a better and kindlier world through the helpful employment of the opportunities and talents of the least as well as of the greatest. 3. It emphasized the truth that spiritual development comes by the exercise of sympathy and helpfulness toward the unfortunate. 4. It taught that the motives in good deeds are the measure of their value rather than the magnitude of the deeds themselves. 5. It consecrated all kind acts to the unhappy by declaring that the needy are representatives of Christ.

ÆNEAS AND DORCAS.

The storm of persecution had passed by for the time. There is ebb and flow in human affairs as in the sea. Periods of great excitement are followed by seasons of quiet. After war comes peace. Even persecutors cannot be at white heat all the time.

The foes of Christ no doubt had been much discouraged and weakened by the defection of Paul to the Christians. We read, "So the church throughout all Judea and Galilee and Samaria had peace, being edified, and, walking in the fear of the Lord and in the comfort of the Holy Ghost, was multiplied.

Peter Visits the Churches. During this happy period a visitation tour of the churches was made by Peter. It must have been a great joy to him to find so many congregations devoted to his Master now flourishing in the three provinces of the country. So Peter went from village to village, encouraging the Christians, instructing them, preaching and exhorting, and healing the sick. In the course of this tour he came to Lydda. This place is now called Ludd, is nine miles from Jaffa, and is the first town on the northernmost of the two roads between Jaffa and Jerusalem. "The Benjamites occupied, fortified and enlarged it originally, as told of in Chronicles, and re-occupied it after the return from Babylon. The Romans named it Diospolis. It became the seat of a bishopric. Here was buried, and probably born, St. George, England's legendary patron saint and martyr; a church in his honor was erected over his remains, the beautiful ruin of which still stands."

The Town of Lydda. Lydda, or Ludd, stands in a part of the great maritime plain which anciently bore the name of Sharon. The water course outside the town is said still to bear the name of Abi-Butrus (Peter), in memory of the Apostle. "It is, for a Mahometan place, busy and prosperous. Buried in palms, and with a large well close to the entrance, it looks from a distance inviting enough, but its interior is very repulsive on account of the extraordinary number of persons, old and young, whom one encounters at every step, either totally blind or afflicted with loathsome diseases of the eyes."

Æneas. In Lydda, Peter found a certain man named Æneas, who was so badly paralysed that he had kept his bed for eight years. The Christians desired to have him healed and brought Peter to his side. We are to remember that but a few years had passed since Jesus had worked miracles of healing all through that land, and doubtless many were yet living who had been restored by Him. The gift of healing had been given to the Apostles as well as to certain other disciples, and many extraordinary cures had been wrought by them. Indeed, the Christians of that day considered the healing of diseases and cures of all kinds to be one of the marks of true Christianity. Certain Christians through all the ages since have believed in healing by the power of faith in Christ.

By the Power of Christ. We are to note carefully that Peter did not claim to work miracles by his own power, but by the power of Christ. Peter went to the bedside of the paralytic Aeneas and said unto him, "Jesus Christ healeth thee. Arise and make thy bed." Not Peter, but the Prince of Life achieved the wonder that followed. The man who had not walked for eight long years straightway arose. Aeneas, being well known to all the people in that region, the fame of his cure spread from lip to lip. The town and all the Sharon plain was stirred. Men and women rose up, giving glory to Christ. There was a universal acclaim of Christ as Lord. In a day all in that vicinity who saw the man Aeneas now well and strong gave themselves to Christ. There never was another so speedy and complete conversion of a community as a whole to Christ.

Joppa. Nine miles away from Lydda was Joppa, now called Jaffa. It was the seaport of Jerusalem. It was "the fabled scene of Andromeda's exposure to the whale; this legend is a tradition derived from Jonah's history, through the Phenicians. The town is on a high hill, with a harbor difficult of approach, hence not used much except in going to and from Jerusalem. It was by way of Joppa that Hiram sent to Solomon the timber from Lebanon for the temple; also Cyrus for Zerubbabel's temple. Here Jonah embarked for Cilician Tarsus. . . . Joppa has now a soap manufactory. Its oranges, pomegranates and watermelons are noted. It is one of the oldest cities in the world."

Sorrow of the Christians There. The disciples in Joppa having learned of Peter's presence in Lydda sent for him to visit them. They had a special reason in addition to the wish to have him include their church in his general visitation among the Christians. They were in sore distress. One of their most beloved and useful members had died. She was one who had won her way into all hearts by good deeds, sympathy and helpfulness. She was called, in the Aramaic language, Tabitha, and in the Greek, Dorcas, her name meaning a gazelle. In the Orient the gazelle is generally associated with the perfection of female beauty, but Dorcas "has become the type of the greater loveliness with which she clothed the poor by the labor of her own hands."

When Sir Philip Sidney, after having been wounded at the battle of Zutphen, was returning to the camp, he was almost overcome by the heat. Calling for a drink of water, a soldier with great difficulty procured one for him. Just as he was raising it to his lips, a poor wounded soldier was carried by, who turned his eyes wistfully toward the cup of water. Instantly, Sidney passed the water to him, saying, "Your necessity is greater than mine."

Dorcas Raised to Life. The lamenting Christians received Peter at the house of Dorcas. The pure tenement of her body, with those hands folded which had done so many good deeds, was prepared for burial and placed in an upper room. When Peter came the disciples took him into this chamber, while the widows, whom she had tenderly helped so often, stood by weeping, and showing the coats and garments which Dorcas had made. Sympathizing with their sorrow, Peter determined to bring this grief unto his Master. Bidding all company to leave him alone in that upper room, he knelt down and prayed. What were the words of his prayer we know not, but we know that he asked his Master to once more work that greatest of miracles whereby life is restored unto those who have passed through death. Having prayed thus, Peter stood by and said, "Tabitha, arise." At once the eyes of the woman opened. Then beholding Peter, she sat up. Peter took her by the hand and lifted her up. Calling the disciples and the widows, he presented her unto them alive.

Great Joy. Great was their joy and amazement to see their friend, who had been dead, alive again. Never had Joppa been thrilled as now by a sense of the Divine power and goodness. Dorcas was welcomed as if she were an angel from Heaven. And again she went in and out among the needy, doing good works.

Wonderful as was this miracle, we are to remember that the gift of life which all of us have is in itself just as marvellous. Marvellous also is that power which gives spiritual life to the sinner. So we also in our time should praise and magnify the name of the living God and the living Christ who gives us all our mercies.

After the battle of Antietam, a gentleman, who was passing over the field, saw a man washing clothes at a brook. He recognized him as the pastor of one of the largest churches in Philadelphia. He said, "Doctor, what are you doing?" The minister straightened up and pointed across the field, saying, "Over yonder are six hundred wounded men. Most of them are lying in bloody shirts. Our supply of shirts is all gone. We can get no more until tomorrow. I thought I would take a few of the worst and wash and dry them in the sun." The gentleman said, "Doctor, I know God has blessed you in your work in Philadelphia. But I do not think the Master ever looked upon any act of your life with as much pleasure as this."

Practical Truths. 1. Opportunities for unselfish service are universally distributed where men and women are to be found, and the humbler forms of usefulness, or those that seem to be such, are frequently the ones that count for most. 2. A warm heart will find chances to do good where an unsympathetic nature complains of lack of opportunity to benefit others. 3. Kind deeds open the way into hearts to which we can bring the message of salvation. 4. Dorcas did the work at hand in the spirit of love, with no thought of herself, and yet the Dorcas societies have perpetuated her name and made her a sort of patron saint of good works. "The path of duty is the way to glory." 5. The Prince of Life who raised up Dorcas and gave her back to her companions will, in due season, give to us all reunion with our friends on the other side.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

PETER'S VISION.

And when the

which spake
unto Cornelius was departed, he called two of his house hold

and a devout of them that waited on him continually; and when he had declared all these things unto them, he sent them to Joppa. On the morrow, as they went on their

and drew nigh unto the city,
Peter went up upon the

to pray about the sixth hour: And he became very hungry and would have eaten: but while they made ready, he fell into a trance, and saw

and a certain vessel descending
unto him, as it had been a and let down to the earth.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 10:1-20.

Prayer: Our Father, Grant unto us, we pray, the vision of our duty in all things. Open our eyes, as Thou didst those of Peter, to see clearly our right relations to our fellow beings. Take from us all narrowness and uncharitableness of heart and prepare us for our work in the spirit of Christ. For His name's sake. Amen.

"The Gospel banner wide unfurled Shall wave in triumph o'er the world;
And every creature, bond and free,
Shall hail the glorious jubilee."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 36. Place, Joppa. Person, Peter.

Scripture Setting: The Gospel for the World. Prophecies of, Isa. 2:3-5; Isa. 4:2-6; Isa. 9:2-7; Isa. 52: 7; Isa. 55:1-5; Isa. 61:1-3; Ezek. 34:23-31; Joel, 2:28-32; Mic. 4:1-7. The New Covenant, Jer. 31:31-34; Heb. 8:6-13; Angelic announcement, Luke 2:10-34. Christ preaching, Matt. 4:23. Proof of Messiahship, Matt. 11:4. To be preached everywhere, Matt. 24:14. Jesus' command to preach, Matt. 28:18-20.

Life and Conduct Setting: Christianity is the only religion that aims to bless and save the whole world. 1. It aims to obliterate caste. 2. In the spiritual realm it ignores differences of race, language and condition. 3. It seeks to destroy local and provincial prejudices, and to bring all men to a mutual understanding of their common ties, duties and relationships. 4. It treats all as sinners who may become saints; as lost who may be found, as children away from home, who may find welcome in the Father's house. 5. Its whole message is open and clear. The Greek philosophers ignored the multitude. The Egyptian esoteric religion was only for the initiated. But the Gospel is for all alike.

A GREAT SHEET AND WHAT WAS IN IT.

One of the hardest lessons to learn is to treat all others as human beings, as boys and girls, as men and women, without regard to money, position, dress, education, or anything else except character and personal worth. Young people find this just as hard as do older persons, and there is as much feeling of distinctions and differences among young people as among their elders. If a boy or girl has parents with more money, more education or culture than others in the school or on the street, this boy or girl is apt to feel that he or she is superior to the others. While in fact others may have more mind, more talent, more energy, more kindness, better dispositions and may become much more useful men and women than they. We should aim to treat all on the basis of their personal worth.

Caste. This sense of superiority and inferiority is found all over the world and in all ages. The Asiatics think they are superior to the Europeans and the Europeans think they are better than the Asiatics, and so on round the world. Each nation prides itself on its strong points and sometimes on its weak ones. This feeling was even more marked in ancient times, when nations knew much less about each other than they do now. The Greeks spoke of all other nations as "barbarians." The Romans considered all peoples outside Italy inferior to themselves. And the Jews had even a more intense national pride than any other people. "The nations," or "The Gentiles" was with the Jews not merely a descriptive term, but one of contempt. The Jew felt himself contaminated by the mere touch of a foreigner and he refused to even eat with a Gentile.

While Christianity at first was given to the Jews, since it arose in their country, and they were to be afforded opportunity to accept it, the Master commissioned His disciples to "preach the Gospel to all nations." Yet it appears that the Apostles did not for a time fully comprehend their mission to the whole world. No effort was made for some time to reach any but Jews. Now a broader outlook was about to be taken.

The House of Simon the Tanner. After Peter by the power of Christ had restored Dorcas to life, he continued many days in the town of Joppa, making his home with Simon the tanner. Tradition still points out the house of this man with whom Peter lodged. Whether it be the actual house or not does not matter much; the one that tradition has singled out is a very old dwelling and is visited by multitudes of people from year to year. Doubtless it is very like the real house even if it is not the original one. It stands in full view of the Mediterranean sea and has a flat roof, such as Peter might have visited for his seasons of prayer.

Peter's Prejudices. While he lodged with Simon the tanner, Peter was accustomed to ascend at noon to the housetop for solitary prayer. There he communed with his Master. We must remember that Peter had grown up as a strict Jew and had lived his whole life among the Jews, and as a Christian Apostle his work thus far had been among Jews. He had been taught that the Jewish nation was the holy people and that all other nations were unclean and without God. We must not attribute to him our more liberal modern ideas, but try to understand him as he was. While he had followed Christ for three years and had been a loyal Apostle of the Master since His ascension, he had not yet comprehended the breadth and fulness of Christ's teachings in all respects.

The Vision. One day Peter retired to the housetop of Simon's home for prayer, as his custom was. There he prayed earnestly for a long time, until hunger came upon him, and apparently he summoned some member of the household and requested food to be brought him. While this was being prepared for him, Peter fell into a trance and had a vision. It was a vision suitable to a hungry man, but nevertheless certain elements in it were repugnant to a strict Jewish conscience. He saw the heavens opened and a vast sheet descending, let down by four corners upon the earth. Within this sheet were all kinds of four-footed beasts, and creeping things and fowls.

Clean and Unclean. The Jewish law clearly and definitely distinguished the forbidden and permitted, the clean and unclean animals, birds and fishes, which a Jew could eat or could not eat. The law forbade the eating of the camel, the coney, the hare and the swine. It forbade the use of anything that comes out of the water that has not scales and fins; this would exclude oysters, clams, and crabs among other things. The Jews could not eat the eagle, the vulture, the kite, the owl, the hawk, the cuckoo, the cormorant, the swan, the pelican, the stork, the heron, the lapwing or the bat. To eat any of these or to touch the dead bodies of them, or to touch anything that had come in contact with them was to violate the law and be rendered ceremonially unclean.

Reasons for Distinctions. Doubtless there were good reasons for these prohibitions, especially in hot countries. The flesh of swine and such things as shellfish are today regarded as dangerous food in the tropics. Others of the prohibited kinds are generally considered unfit for human food. While still others are frequently eaten by men in other climates.

The very sight of these unclean creatures in the sheet caused Peter to shrink as from contamination. But the sight was accompanied by a voice which said, "Rise, Peter, kill and eat." Instantly the impulsive Apostle answered, "Not so, Lord, for I have never eaten anything that is common and unclean." But the voice came a second time, saying, "What God hath cleansed, call not thou common." But instead of remaining within his reach, the sheet was now caught up into the air and vanished.

The Meaning. But at last his mind's eyes cleared. He caught a glimpse of what God meant to teach him. He saw himself as a narrow Jew. He saw the wrong that had been in his own heart in thinking to treat men who were not of his own race as if the Gospel were not for them. He saw the dividing lines between nations and races growing less and less as he apprehended more of what his Master had meant when he bade him, and the other disciples, "Go into all the world and preach the Gospel to every creature." He felt his heart expand and warm toward mankind. He looked up gratefully toward Heaven to thank his Master that He had taught him this lesson. He there determined to live forever after in the presence of that larger and grander truth.

How blessed a time it will be for the world when all learn this lesson! How much pain will be spared! How much warmer and kindlier will life be! How much more of brotherhood will come!

Let us each one in our own place and condition learn this lesson. Let young people carry this spirit into the school and into the playground and into companionship with all other young persons. It does not follow that there should not be distinctions of good and bad, of honesty and dishonesty, of cleanliness and filth. No! The differences that should be ignored are those foolish ones that have no foundation in character and in deeds.

One of Tamerlane's followers once dug up a gold coin from the earth and brought it to the emperor. Tamerlane gazed at it and saw that it was good gold. Then he looked again and saw that the image stamped upon it was not his own but the face of a Roman ruler. Crying, "It is worthless," he cast it away. Yet it was good gold and would have passed current anywhere in the world. He thought it worthless, though it was minted by a greater power than his own, simply because his own face was not upon it. What narrowness and ignorance. Yet it is common to judge our neighbors and fellowmen in general in no more intelligent way, simply because they do not in all things agree with us.

"The rank is but the guinea's stamp;
The gold's the man."

Practical Truths: 1. We should strive against bigotry as an evil in itself and as the source of many other evils. 2. We should hold every good thing which God has given us as a trust for the benefit of our fellow beings. 3. The brotherhood of man can become a reality only when all alike aim to be just and kind. 4. The law of love and the Golden Rule both are opposed to every form of narrowness and bigotry. 5. We should treat all on the basis of their personal worth.

PETER AND CORNELIUS.

And Cornelius said, Four days ago I was fasting until this hour; and at the ninth hour I

in my house,
and,
behold,
a

in bright clothing, and said, Cornelius, thy prayer is heard, and thine alms are had in remembrance in the sight of God. Send therefore to Joppa, and call hither Simon, whose surname is Peter; he is lodged in the

of one Simon a tanner by the who, when he cometh, shall speak unto thee. Immediately therefore I sent to thee; and thou hast well done that thou art come. Now therefore are we all here present before God, to hear all things that are commanded thee of God. Then opened his mouth, and said, Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons: But in every nation he that feareth him, and worketh righteousness, is accepted with him.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 10:1-48.

Prayer: Our Father, We bless Thee that Thy goodness and mercy, revealed in Christ, are for all who are willing to turn unto Thee. May we, like Thy servant Peter, go gladly unto those who need the Gospel, no matter what their condition or race may be. May the Gospel reach all men everywhere for their salvation. In the name of Christ, Amen.

Then let us pray that come it may,
As come it will for a' that,
That sense an' worth, o'er all the earth,
Shall bear the gree an' a' that.
It's comin' yet, for a' that
That man to man the world o'er Shall brothers be for a' that.

—Burns.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 36. Places, Joppa and Caesarea. Persons, Peter, Cornelius, angel, soldier and servants, Christian brethren, kinsmen and friends of Cornelius.

Scripture Setting: Relations to Roman Empire and Rome. Empire ruled by Augustus, Luke 2:1. By Tiberius, Luke 3:1. By Claudius, Acts 18:2. By Nero, Phil. 4:22. Citizenship in, by nativity, Acts 22:28. By purchase, Acts 22:28. Rights of citizens, Acts 16:37; 22:25-29. Right of trial, Acts 25:16. Right of appeal, Acts 25:10-21. Abominations in, Rom. 1:18-32. Paul's visit to, Acts 28:11-16. Visit of Onesiphorus, 2 Tim. 1:16-17. Paul preaches in, Rom. 1:15. Christians in, Rom. 16:5-17. Phil. 1:12-18; 4:22; 2 Tim. 4:21.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. In the very seat of Roman paganism in Palestine is found a man ready for the Gospel. 2. This man, who is of the class deemed the least susceptible to religious influences is deeply yearning for the message of salvation. 3. He is an officer, by family of one of the most illustrious of the Roman clans, the Cornelii, and by tradition of the most tenacious adherents to ancestral forms of worship. 4. A Roman of broad sympathies, who included in his charities the despised and subject Jews. He had gained their good opinion in spite of their dislike to his nation. 5. He was the first pagan who was brought directly into the Christian church, for it is doubtful if he was a "proselyte of the gate." 6. Cornelius' prayers had "come up as a memorial before God." The Divine will reveals itself to him who earnestly seeks it. 7. Neither the centurion nor the Apostle questioned concerning the outcome of God's command. 8. God in answering the centurion's prayer opened the new church to the Gentile world. The prayer of a devout man availeth much.

PAGANS AND CHRISTIANS UNITED.

A Roman soldier was for centuries the synonym of conquest and power. The Jews disliked the Romans with especial bitterness, for they meant to the Jew loss of independence and of ancient glory.

One Roman Soldier. This dislike of the Romans by the Jews remained unchanged when Peter was in Joppa. Further up the coast of the Mediterranean stood the city of Caesarea, the stronghold of Roman power in that land, and there was stationed the body guard of the procurator, in addition to other troops. Of the Roman legions in Palestine, there was one distinctively known as the Italian band, or regiment. This was composed of men from Rome or its vicinity. A cohort usually consisted of 555 infantry and 66 cavalry. A centurion was the commander of approximately one hundred men. We are interested especially in a certain centurion named Cornelius. As a Roman soldier and citizen, as a representative of the hated foreign rule, he was the last man with whom a Jew would ordinarily wish to have dealings.

Special Revelation Needed. Peter was in Joppa, Cornelius in Caesarea, and God wished these two men to meet. That seems a simple matter, but in fact, it required two visions from Heaven to accomplish this end.

Cornelius was already a devout man but it is doubtful if he was a Jewish proselyte, as certain commentators declare. He was a Roman pagan who had learned, possibly through living in the land of the Jews, a true conception of God and he had trained his household in the worship of Jehovah. He was, likewise, charitable, giving much alms to the people. He was a man of prayer, and was always seeking for more light that he might have a fuller understanding of God's will.

God was now moving to accomplish his ends in regard to this man. He was preparing his heart. One afternoon at about three o'clock Cornelius was at prayer. While in this reverent spirit, he saw a bright presence, which he knew was not that of man and this Heavenly visitant called him by name. The angel had come from above with a mission to one man. At the call "Cornelius," the brave man who had often faced death on the battlefield was awed, overcome, afraid, and he said, "What is it, Lord?" The angel answered, "Thy prayers and thine alms are come up for a memorial before God. And now send men to Joppa, and call for one Simon, whose surname is Peter: He lodgeth with one Simon a tanner, whose house is by the sea side: he shall tell thee what thou oughtest to do." Then the angel vanished, leaving the centurion alone with the wondrous thought that God had spoken to him through a special messenger.

Being a soldier, Cornelius acted promptly. He summoned two of his household servants, and a soldier whom he could trust, and he

ECCE HOMO

BY ANTONIO CISERI

Ciseri was an Italian painter of the last century. Naturally his painting shows much study of Roman, that is, classical art, with all its grace, carefully arranged draperies and artificial attitudes. It is beautiful work and highly finished. The scene is the balcony of Pilate's palace, from which the governor looks down on the multitude below, pointing to Jesus, still arrayed in His mock-royal purple and wearing the tormenting crown on His head. Pilate cries out to them, "Behold the man." Christ feels the insults heaped upon Him, but endures them patiently. Pilate's chair with the leopard skin stands on the left, and by it is the half-naked keeper of the prisoner, holding the reed scepter with which they had beaten Christ, while with his left hand he holds firmly the bonds which retain the Saviour. Beyond are soldiers and attendants. There are sorrowful women on the right and the lawyer with his scroll. Pilate hopes to excite the pity of the multitude as he presents the thorn-crowned and scarred Christ and exclaims, "Behold the man." But there is no pity in the clamoring crowd seen through the balcony railing.

As a painting it is beautifully executed, and the feeling of light, falling on all the figures, has been admirably attended to.

—JAMES WILLIAM PATTISON

ECCE HOMO

Antonia (Soy)

ANTONIO CISERI. 1821-1891.

In a little village, near Ascona, upon the famous Lago Maggiore, and in the Swiss canton of Ticino, in 1821 was born Antonio Ciseri. Round about, across the water, up the water, and up the valley, lie the Lepontine Alps, peak after peak, range after range, their snows flaming in rose and gold at day-break, their soaring aguilles at evening violet and purple silhouettes against the redly darkening western sky. And at their feet always was their own reflection in a water, darkly, deeply blue as the daylight skies above. Small wonder that in such surroundings Antonio, inspired with the beauty about him, in such ways as were possible to a small farmer's son in Northern Italy, sought to express in some measure the loveliness that filled his soul.

Artists grow in Italy as do soldiers and patriots. But the little village among the hills was no place for one to develop in. Thence, as elsewhere, must the student find his way to the recognized gathering places of the masters of his craft. There was a good harvest, and the father's goats had been liberal with their milk and kids that spring. So upon a day, the youth Antonio, counseled and commended by the priest, admonished by father, reminded by mother of certain items of personal comfort he must not forget, kissed and hugged by brothers and sisters, with gay farewell, took his place in the stage, bound southward. Through Lombardy, by famed Milan and Pavia, by Piacenza and Parma, crossing the Etruscan Appenines, he worked his way to Florence. At every turn of the highway across the plains of Lombardy had been disclosed some spot of historic interest, some fresh prospect of natural beauty. In Florence were gathered all these things, and amid her towers and palaces, the memory of all those great in the world of art who before him had walked by the Arno, or across its famous bridge. The birthplace of Dante, Florence was the residence of Boccaccio, the great writer, and the scene of the mighty labors of Cimabue, Giotto, Taddeo

Gaddi, Aretino, Brunelleschi, Lucca della Robbia, Ghiberti, Donatello, Fra Lippo Lippi, Ghirlandajo, Fra Angelico, Leonardo da Vinci, Raphael, Michael Angelo, and Andrea del Sarto, to name but a few of the great artists, architects and sculptors whose names and that of Florence mean the same thing: the great and splendid age of the Renaissance (the new birth of the classic tradition in art and letters) in Italy, the age which saw the invention of printing, the discovery of America and the rounding of Africa.

A student in the atelier of Bezzuoli, Ciseri became saturated with the beauty of the renaissance ideal. Unlike other men of his time, unlike his master, his capacity for fresh sight, for original expression was not extinguished by the renaissance tradition, that in its decay, beginning toward the end of the sixteenth century, had in the sixteen, seventeen and early eighteen hundreds, become merely a manner of painting, an accepted style, in which subjects were assembled on the canvas according to rule and precept, and colored almost by recipe.

At the same time in England and at Rome, in a small band of German artists working there, was growing to a head a revolt against the merely cut and dried modes of composition and representation into which the once glorious renaissance spirit had sunk. By all this was Ciseri affected, and his resultant works therefore show a freshness of conception, a strength, and a distinctive viewpoint that marks him among the painters of his time.

His most noted pictures are "The Unbelief of Thomas," painted for the Church of the Saviour in Jerusalem, the "Ecce Homo" (behold the man) in the Gallery of National Art, Rome, and "Christ Borne to the Tomb," said to be in the church of Santa Maria del Sasso, at Locarno, near his birthplace. Honored and respected among the painters of Florence for many years, his life ended there in 1891.

JAMES BEALINGS.

bade them go to Joppa, thirty-five miles away, find Peter, and invite him to visit him in Caesarea.

God Preparing Peter. The messengers of Cornelius protected by a soldier left Caesarea that evening, for the rough, slow journey which would take until noon of the next day. At that very noon hour Peter also was being enlightened by a vision. God was teaching him by means of a sheet let down from Heaven, containing all manner of beasts and birds and creeping things, not to call common or unclean that which He had cleansed. The meaning of this vision was beginning to dawn upon the mind of Peter who had been brought up in all the prejudices of the Jew. He was seeing that God meant him to carry the Gospel to other men than Jews. But perhaps it may be that he was not entirely prepared to be sent to a Roman soldier.

Messengers Arrive. There was a knocking at the door of the house of Simon the tanner. The door opened from within. Perhaps the soldier, the protector of the servants, was spokesman. Perhaps a gruff military voice asked, "Is this the house of Simon the tanner?" A member of the household replied, "It is." "Is a man named Simon Peter here?" "He is."

Above, on the housetop, the Spirit said to Peter, "Behold three men seek thee. Arise, therefore, and get thee down and go with them doubting nothing: for I have sent them." Obedient to this leading, Peter went down to the men who were sent to him from Cornelius. "Behold I am he whom ye seek," said Peter; "What is the cause wherefore ye are come?" The reply was: "Cornelius, the centurion, a just man, and one that feareth God, and of good report among all the nation of the Jews, was warned from God by an holy angel to send for thee into his house, and to hear words of thee." This Peter could well believe after his own vision, so with the deep realization that God was in this matter he bade the men enter and lodge for the night. The next day, the third after Cornelius had seen the angel, Peter, accompanied by brethren from Joppa set off for Caesarea with the messengers of Cornelius.

The Apostle Under a Roman's Roof. Cornelius, awed by the manner in which God had visited him, was eagerly waiting to hear that truth which he had so often longed and prayed for, and he had invited kinsmen and near friends to be present at this divinely-arranged meeting. As Peter entered his house, Cornelius, true to his Roman blood and customs, cast himself down at his feet as if worshipping him, for there still remained in this man something of the pagan conception that gods appear as men. No Jew would have so acted, and Peter lifted him up, saying, "Stand up; I myself also am a man."

Profound indeed must have been the interest with which these men looked upon each other, knowing that God had so miraculously brought them together. When they had joined the company, Peter, now shorn of all his prejudices, said, "Ye know how that it is an unlawful thing for a man that is a Jew to keep company or come unto one of another nation; but God hath shewed me that I should not call any man common or unclean. Therefore came I unto you without gainsaying, as soon as I was sent for: I ask therefore for what intent ye have sent for me?" Cornelius reverently rehearsed his experience and concluded, "Now, therefore, are we all here present before God to hear all things that are commanded thee of God."

The Gospel for All. Then before that little company of Romans and Jews Peter uttered some of the grandest words that ever fell from human lips; words that are as the Magna Charta of a world religion; words that embrace all humanity in one vast family. God was no longer to be conceived of as the God of the Jew only; the Gospel was for mankind. For the Roman also Christ died.

"Of a truth I perceive that God is no respecter of persons," said Peter; "but in every nation he that feareth Him and worketh righteousness is accepted with Him." Wonderful truths to fall from the lips of a Jew who but four days before had been bound by his old and inbred prejudices!

Before the Apostle had ended telling of Christ, the Holy Spirit fell upon that company. Then the Roman centurion and his friends were baptized in the name of Jesus. Forgetting the Roman soldier in the man, Peter welcomed his national enemy into that glorious assembly where all are friends.

Illustration. A father wishing to make plain to his children the influence of the Holy Spirit, said, "Here is a needle that has received an electric shock and here is one that has not. They look alike, yet one has hidden qualities which the other lacks. The one needle is a magnet and when properly balanced it will enable man to find his way across the trackless ocean. So the soul which has received the electric shock of the Holy Spirit may point wanderers to Heaven."

Practical Truths. 1. God is ready to shape the affairs of our lives if we are ready to co-operate with Him. He knows each one of us as individuals. 2. God uses men as well as angels for His work. Peter was necessary to complete that for which the angel made preparation. 3. The prayers and alms of sincere souls have a high value, but it is not enough simply to rest in these. 4. God desires to remove from our minds and hearts injurious scruples and prejudices that hinder the best and most far-reaching work for Him. 5. The "respect of persons" is fatal to Christian progress. Nothing is common that God has cleansed.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

Now they which were abroad

upon
the

that arose about Stephen travelled as far as preaching

the word to none but unto the Jews only.
And some of them
were men of Cyprus
and which, when they were come to Antioch, spake unto the Grecians, preaching the Lord Jesus. And the hand of the Lord was with them: and a great number believed and turned unto the Lord. Then tidings of these things came unto the ears of the church which was in and they sent forth

Barnabas,
that he should go as far as Antioch.
Then departed Barnabas to

for to seek Saul: And when he had found him, he brought him unto Antioch. And it came to pass, that a whole year they assembled themselves with the church, and taught much people. And the disciples were called Christians first in Antioch.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 11:1-30.

Prayer: Our Father, We rejoice in the great Captain of salvation whose love and grace are mightier than armies; mightier than intellects; mightier than the sins and ignorance of earth. Blessed are we to have such a Leader. May we with unconquerable faith go forward in loyal service until the whole world shall be brought to the feet of our Lord. In the name of Christ, Amen.

"I may not stay to see the day
When the great Saviour shall hold sway.
And earth shall glitter in the ray
That cometh from above,
But come it fast or come it slow,
'Twill come at last I surely know.
And Heaven and earth shall feel the glow
And men shall call it Love."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 42. Place, Antioch in Syria, Jerusalem. Persons, Barnabas, Saul, disciples in Antioch and in Jerusalem.

Scripture Setting: Study in Names for Followers of Christ. Disciples of Jesus, Matt. 10:1; 20:17. Acts 9:26; 14:20. Twelve called Apostles, Matt. 10:2-4. Barnabas called Apostle, Acts 14:14. Those of the way, Acts 9:2. Nazarenes, Acts 24:5. Galileans, Acts 2:7. Saints, Eph. 2:19. Brethren, Acts 11:1, 12. Christians, Acts 11:26; 26:28; 1 Pet. 4:16.

Life and Conduct Setting: The first Gentile church founded. 1. Through persecution. Persecution extended Christianity beyond the boundaries of Israel. 2. It was accomplished not by the Apostles, but by ordinary Christians and church members. 3. The presence of the Holy Spirit and the conversion of the heathen were the Apostle's authority for founding the church. 4. Barnabas, the special messenger of the Jerusalem church, set his approval on the workings of the church at Antioch. 5. This church demonstrated its essential unity with other Christians and the reality of its practical religion by ministering to the needs of the brethren in Judea. 6. Antioch, a Greek-speaking city, hit upon the one fitting and immortal name for followers of Christ—"Christians."

FIRST CALLED "CHRISTIANS."

The scene now changes to another very famous city, Antioch. It was known at that time as the "Capital of the East," and it had been the capital of the Greek kings before the Roman power arose. Antioch was one of the Greek colonies which owed its existence to the conquests of Alexander and his followers in the Orient. The Greek culture and language were predominant there, though the masses of the people were Syrians.

The Greatest Conqueror. Antioch had seen the conquering hosts of Alexander the Great; it had heard the iron tread of the Romans; now it was to feel the mighty influence and soul-conquering power of Christ. Henceforth its importance in human history was to be due not to soldiers but to the redeeming grace of Christ. The writer of the book of Acts glances back a moment to the martyrdom of Stephen. He tells of those who were scattered abroad at that time. Some of these had gone into Phoenicia, the narrow strip of land on the Syro-Palestinian coasts; others had fled to the neighboring island of Cyprus; while still others had proceeded to Antioch, the capital of Syria. Some of these Christians began to preach to the Jews only. But among the scattered Christians were natives of the island of Cyprus, and of Cyrene in North Africa, known as "Grecians;" that is, men of Jewish blood but born in Greek-speaking regions and speaking Greek. The men from Cyprus and Cyrene began to preach not only to Jews and to Greek-speaking Hebrews, but to the heathen Greeks.

Even that which appeared adverse, and humanly speaking, destructive of the welfare of the church proved to be advantageous and helped to extend the Kingdom. Those who were persecuted were united in faith and love, and were more firmly banded in one brotherhood by reason of their common sufferings. Wherever they went, they carried the Gospel.

A Church in Antioch. Shortly after the conversion of Cornelius, there were many converts in Antioch, both Jews and Greeks. A heathen city had been stormed and taken for Christ. The results were marvellous. Greek culture and Greek mythology were not able to completely resist the truth in Christ. Of the work of these disciples it is written that "the hand of the Lord was with them, and a great number believed, and turned unto the Lord."

Illustration. One day during a siege as Charles the Twelfth of Sweden was dictating a letter a bombshell from the enemy fell upon the house, broke through the roof and burst near his apartment. The secretary was alarmed and his pen fell from his hand. "What's the matter?" asked the king; "why do you not continue writing?" "Most gracious sire," said the secretary, "the bombshell!" "Well!" said the king, "what has the bombshell to do with the letter? Go on with the writing." So should the Christian keep on with his duties amid all perils and confusion.

When the brethren in Judea had heard that Peter baptized Cornelius and his fellow Romans and ate with them they had criticized him harshly. But when Peter rehearsed his vision, they had swiftly changed their minds and glorified God, saying, "Then hath God also to the Gentiles granted repentance unto life." Being in a changed state of heart toward the Gentiles, the Christians at Jerusalem received with joy the news of the spiritual work at Antioch. They conferred together and decided to send one of their number to Antioch to aid the disciples there.

Barnabas. For this mission they appointed Barnabas, a man of the tribe of Levi, who had lived in Cyprus. He had generously contributed all his possessions to the treasury of the Christians. It was he who vouched for Saul's sincerity when Saul had visited Jerusalem after his conversion and the other disciples had feared him as a possible spy.

What Barnabas saw in Antioch gave him great joy. Evidently the work there was accomplished by the Spirit of God. Barnabas encouraged the disciples to be steadfast in the faith and to cleave unto the Lord. His coming strengthened the believers, and they entered with still more vigor into winning souls to Christ. Large numbers of converts were gained.

Help Needed. The work grew from day to day, and the church flourished. But Barnabas found that he was not equal to his share of the labor. Perhaps he felt that in spite of the wonderful success of Christ's cause there, an especially strong man—a leader and a scholar—was required. He knew Saul of Tarsus to be such a man. We are not informed how Barnabas knew so much about Saul, but it is known that his home island, Cyprus, was usually annexed to the province of Cilicia, which was Saul's country, so that Saul and Barnabas were compatriots. The two might have been educated together in Tarsus, or Barnabas may have known Saul while he was a student in Jerusalem. Saul was at this time in Tarsus, and there Barnabas went to seek him.

Saul in Antioch. The Lord had told Ananias that Saul was a chosen vessel to bear the Gospel to the Gentiles. So Saul went to Antioch and there for a whole year he and Barnabas labored for Christ. There Saul brought his great mind and heart, filled with love to Christ, to bear upon the people of that heathen city. That was a ripe field and under the labors of Paul and Barnabas there grew a church whose light and influence extended throughout that whole region.

Indeed, the grain of mustard seed of which Christ had spoken was becoming a great tree. The Gospel which had at first been heard by only a few among the Jews now came to multitudes with its life-giving power.

Christianity, which at first had seemed to many as but a sect of Judaism, was revealing itself more and more as the church of Christ, a new and vaster power.

Illustration. A man said to a boy who was scratching on a pane of glass with a diamond, "Do not write there." "Why?" "Because it will not rub off." Yet Christ is able to rub out even diamond marks from a heathen's or a sinner's heart and put a better writing in their place.

The First Gentile Church. So greatly did the church in Antioch grow, that in the history of the diffusion of Christianity it occupies a place even more conspicuous than in Jerusalem itself. It became not only large in numbers but wide in influence, and a center for the spreading of the Gospel into all the East.

Believers in Christ were first called "Christians" in Antioch. The followers of Christ had styled themselves "the disciples" or "learners," "the saints," "the believers," "the brethren," "those of the Way," while the Jews called them "the Galileans," or "the Nazarenes." In Antioch the title was given which is most significant and appropriate, and which has lasted through all the ages since.

Christian Sympathy. This strong and growing church, which had sprung up in a heathen city, now demonstrated its sympathy with other Christians. A terrible famine came upon Judea, and the Christians there were threatened with starvation. The church in Antioch contributed, every man according to his ability, and sent money and food by Saul and Barnabas to the elders in Judea. Thus Saul, who a few years before had spread terror among the Christians in that region, now comes as a brother, bearing the means to minister to the needs of his suffering fellow Christians.

What a happy errand it must have been for him! What a demonstration it was that Christianity knits men of all nations and races together, when he came with the gifts of the first Gentile church to the mother church in the land of the Jews.

Practical Truths. 1. Persecution and misfortune often prove blessings in disguise. However loyal we may be to our own church, yet we should rejoice above all in the name "Christian." 2. We should recognize all followers of Christ as Christians, without prejudice or bigotry. 3. When Peter recounted to the Jewish Christians his experience with Cornelius they gave up their old point of view gladly in the light of better knowledge. 4. We should be so evidently devoted to Christ that others may instinctively recall Him and name us for Him. 5. True brotherhood began with the churches. 6. Charity, according to means, is one of the most beautiful flowers of true religion.

PETER DELIVERED FROM PRISON.

And the angel said unto him,

thyself,
and

And so he did. And he saith unto him, Cast thy garment about thee, and follow me. And he and followed him;

and wist
not
that it was true
which was done by the

but thought he saw a vision. When they were past the first and second ward, they came unto the iron that leadeth unto the city; which opened to them

of his own accord:
and they went out,
and passed on through one street; and forthwith the

from him.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 12:1-25.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee that chains and prisons cannot bind and confine Thy truth. We thank Thee that Thou dost overrule the plots of kings and mighty foes! We bless Thee that Thine angels have charge over Thy people. In the name of Christ, Amen.

"The seraph's wing
Outspread in parting flight. With snowy trace Awhile it hovered, then like radiant star
From it's orbit loosed, went soaring up, High o'er the arch of night. Then Peter knew."
—Lydia Sigourney.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 44. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Peter, Herod Agrippa I, angel, soldiers, Rhoda the maid, and disciples.

Scripture Setting: Study of Angels. Guard tree of life, Gen. 3:24. Law given by, Acts 7:53. Medium of revelation, 2 Kings 1:15. Announce birth of Samson, Judges 13:3. Announce birth of Baptist, Luke 1:11-20. Of Jesus, Matt. 1:20-21. Minister to Jesus after temptation, Matt. 4:11. During passion, Luke 22:43. At tomb of Jesus, Matt. 28:2-6. At the ascension, Acts 1:10, 11. At second coming, Matt. 25:31. At judgment, Matt. 13:39, 41. Minister to righteous, Gen. 24:7. Ex. 23:20. Psa. 91:11.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Herod, an ambitious, unscrupulous king, is willing to court popularity by crimes against innocent people. 2. His inconsistency is shown in forbidding trials and executions during a religious feast and making a spectacle of human suffering on the day after. He was both an interested patron of heathen games and a strict observer of Jewish rites. 3. Neither imprisonment nor death can affect the vitality of pure religion. That Peter could sleep in prison bound to guards is proof that God keeps in perfect peace the mind that is staid on Him. 4. Deliverance came through Peter's unquestioning obedience. 5. Prison doors and walls are no barriers to the accomplishment of God's purposes. 6. Inevitable suffering comes to those, who, like the soldier guards, have even a formal part in the persecution of the righteous. 7. The Word of God grew and multiplied in spite of persecutions. God will protect His church.

PRISON DOORS OPENED BY AN ANGEL.

A sudden blow aimed at two of the strongest leaders of the church was about to fall upon the Christians in Judea. James, an apostle and brother of John, one of the two "Sons of Thunder," was to be taken. "Peter, the Rockman," was also plotted against. If these men should fall, the church would be greatly weakened, so it has been decided by the foe that they must perish.

To Please the Jews. Herod Agrippa the First, grandson of Herod the Great, was now a local king, subject to the Roman Emperor. He was of the Jewish faith, and, since the Emperor Claudius had given him control over Judea, he usually resided in Jerusalem. Not only was he a strict Jew, observing rigidly the ceremonial law, but he was a demagogue as well, and aimed to please the people in every possible way.

This king was capable of doing any evil thing if he thought it would make him more popular with the Jewish people. The Christians had been increasing in numbers and influence and the Jews looked upon them with growing enmity. Herod, the political trickster, saw that it would be a popular stroke for him to open a campaign of persecution. At the first hint of this proposal, the Jews rejoiced, and Herod knowing that the multitude would be on his side, laid hands on certain Christians.

The First Martyred Apostle. Herod's policy was to cripple the church by crushing its strongest leaders, so he had his soldiers arrest James the brother of John and the leader of the church, and condemn him to death. The Jewish law decreed that such as led men to a strange worship should die. If they were few, they were to be stoned. If they were many, they were to be beheaded. The fact that James was beheaded might indicate, therefore, that Herod considered the number of the Christians great enough to bring them under the latter class. So James, the first of the Apostles to suffer martyrdom, was slain.

Shouts of Approval. Great was the rejoicing among the Jews. The king was on their side, the leaders of Christianity were falling; the church would soon be destroyed. Leaders of the Jews praised Herod, or congratulated him in person. The crowds shouted approval as he passed in his chariot. Herod saw that the tide was with him and he decided to go further in persecuting the Christians.

Peter Arrested. The other great outstanding figure among the Christians in Jerusalem was Peter. It was the Passover season, and Peter, too, was present for the feast. Herod's men were sent out to find him. He was located and the soldiers took him and carried him off to prison. Orders were given to keep him fast. Four companies of soldiers, consisting of four men to each company, were set to guard him. Four men kept watch at a time, a watch of three hours. Two stood at the door, while two were chained to Peter in the cell.

The trial of Peter could not take place, according to the Jewish rule, during a feast. Herod, who was fond of spectacular exhibitions, planned that at the end of the Passover week the trial of Peter and his execution should be a show for the amusement of the populace. Meanwhile, the Christians, though sorrowful on account of the death of James and the imprisonment of Peter, prayed without ceasing for his deliverance.

Illustration. When the Marquis of Montrose was sentenced to death the judge ordered that his head and limbs should be severed from his body and hanged in the Tolbooth in Edinburgh and in other towns of the kingdom. The marquis heard the sentence with a grim smile and cried in defiance, "I wish I had flesh enough to be sent to every city in Christendom, as a testimony to the cause in which I suffer."

The King of Kings Interferes. On the evening of the last night of the Passover, Herod had given his orders concerning Peter. All was ready for a spectacular trial and execution the next day. The Jews were exulting. The worse elements of the people were looking forward with morbid curiosity to the excitement of it all. Herod was pleased at the prospect, foreseeing that the city would be filled with applauding multitudes. The Christians were continuing earnestly in prayer for the beloved Apostle. Peter lay in his cell in the gloomy prison, chained between two soldiers. Outside the locked and barred doors the sentries paced back and forth, but trusting his case to God, whether he might live or die, Peter slept just as he would have slept if he had been back on the shores of Galilee.

Suddenly there shone into the prison a great light, and in the glow of that light stood an angel. This being, to whom walls and locks were no obstacles, stood by Peter. Then he smote him on the side and, grasping him by the arm lifted him up, saying, "Arise up quickly." Peter, now awake, stood up and as he beheld the light and the angelic figure the chains fell from his hands. While the soldiers still slept on, the angel bade Peter array himself in the garments he had laid aside for the night. Fastening his girdle about him, binding on his sandals, and wrapping himself in his cloak, Peter obeyed, scarcely knowing what he did. Then the angel said, "Follow me."

Walking behind the angel, Peter passed beyond the door of his cell as if in a dream. The two passed the first and the second guard; then they reached the iron gate, which opened of itself, and they entered the street. Along this they walked a little way, Peter still doubting if it were not a vision. Suddenly the angel departed from him. Finding himself alone, Peter said, "Now I know of a surety that the Lord hath sent His angel and hath delivered me."

Friends Amazed. Realizing now what had happened, he considered what to do, and decided to visit a Christian home and relieve the household of their apprehension about him. He passed along the dark streets and finally arrived at the home of Mary the mother of John-Mark. In response to his knock, the maid-servant Rhoda came, asking who was without, and recognizing Peter's voice, she was so filled with joy that instead of opening to him she ran to tell the family that Peter was at the door. This seemed incredible, and all declared that she was mad. She reasserted her statement, and they in turn declared it must be his angel.

But the knocking continued, and several members of the household went together to learn the truth. When they had opened the door, they saw Peter indeed. He motioned for silence, as their exclamations might have brought the watch, and then he related what had happened to him. Without entering the house, he bade them tell James, the Lord's brother, and the other brethren of his deliverance. He declared he was about to leave the city. He and they could understand that the Lord had not rescued him from prison in order that he might needlessly expose himself further to danger. Then he departed from his astonished friends.

Fate of Soldiers and Herod. The escape of Peter brought consternation to the soldiers. Herod wrecked his wrath and disappointment upon the unfortunate guards and they were put to death. Shortly afterward Herod himself, clad in royal purple, was addressing certain men from Tyre, and Sidon and his speech so stirred them that they ascribed to him Divine honors, as if he were a god speaking. Receiving blasphemously these tributes as if he were worthy of them, he was smitten to death by an angel.

Christ's Cause Prospers. In spite of all this persecution the word of God grew and multiplied. Barnabas and Saul returned to Antioch, taking with them John-Mark. Encouraged by the deliverance of Peter, the followers of Christ went forward in their work.

Illustration. Count Ziska, the brave Bohemian captain, commanded that after his death his body should be flayed and the skin made into drum heads to send dismay to the hearts of their enemies when his followers went out to battle for the faith.

Practical Truths. 1. The prayer of faith, even when men can see no way to its answer, is certain to find an extraordinary answer. 2. Often we exercise a general faith in God but still doubt His willingness if not ability to grant us an answer in particular instances. 3. The realization that others are praying for us in trials in a source of strength and we should let our friends know that we thus remember them. 4. Injustice should be endured patiently and with confidence that God will in due time set things right. 5. Peter slept peacefully in his prison. 6. God can deliver from the prisons of sin. 7. The strong side is that on which God is. 8. The angel smote both Peter and Herod. Like the sun on a flower bud and a carcass, it brought liberty to one and decay to the other.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

Now there were in the church that was at certain prophets and teachers; as Barnabas, and Simeon that was called Niger, and Lucius of and Manaen, which had been brought up with the tetrarch, and Saul. As they ministered to the Lord, and fasted, the Holy Ghost said, Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them. And when they had fasted and prayed, and they sent them away. So they, being sent forth by the Holy Ghost, departed unto and from thence they

to

And when they were at

they preached the word of God in the synagogues of the Jews: and they had also John to their minister.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 13:1-12.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee for the noble and fearless men who left their homes and carried the Gospel into other parts of the world. We thank Thee that messengers came unto our fathers, and that we have received the truth. Help us in our time to spread the good news abroad until all men shall know Thee. In the name of Christ, Amen.

"For sadder sight than eye can know,
Than proud bark lost, or seaman's woe,
Or battle fire, or tempest cloud,
Or preybird's shriek, or ocean shroud—
The shipwreck of a soul."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 46. Places, Antioch and Cyprus. Persons, Paul, Barnabas, John-Mark, Sergius Paulus, Elymas the sorcerer.

Scripture Setting: A Study of Conviction of Sin. Cain, Gen. 4:13. Job, Job 40:4, 5. David, Psa. 51:1-17. Isaiah, Isa. 6:5. Peter, Luke 5:8. Saul, Acts 9:1-10. Adam and Eve, Gen. 3:8-10. Joseph's brethren, Gen. 42:21, 22. Pharaoh, Ex. 9:27, 28. The Israelites, Ex. 33:4. King Saul, 1 Sam. 15:24. Belshazzar, Dan. 5:6. Judas, Matt. 27:3-5. Felix, Acts 24:25.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Paul's apostolate really begins at this time. He is now sent forth. 2. The long preliminary period had been one of preparation for his real work. 3. The order of names was at first "Barnabas and Saul," but it soon comes to be "Saul and Barnabas." 4. The name Saul is now displaced by Paul, as the new work overshadowed his past. 5. The missionaries were called and sent by the Holy Ghost rather than by the church. 6. It was through a man that the Holy Ghost spoke, but by which one of those persons named we do not know. 7. The church likewise was an agent in sending them on their mission. 8. The conviction that they were sent was the source of the strength and joy of the missionaries.

BLESSING THE WORLD AND BLINDING AN ENEMY.

"Sent by the Holy Spirit." Christianity was too great a force to be contained within Palestine or Syria. It had grown to the point where, as if by a law of progress, it must widen its boundaries. This great out-reaching movement was now to spread; not from the mother church at Jerusalem, where Jewish narrowness was but slowly overcome, but from the First Gentile church; that in Antioch in Syria. Christianity, transplanted to that city, had taken on a clear vision and a large outlook, and was surveying the world for the best ways along which to extend the spiritual empire of Christ.

The movement originated not with man but with God. We are told that in the church at Antioch were certain prophets and teachers, as Barnabas, Simeon Niger, Lucius of Cyrene, Manaen, and Saul. The New Testament prophets were considered the immediate organs of the Holy Spirit; what they uttered came directly from God; that is, they were inspired. The teachers were more directly guided by their own judgment, after due meditation, and furnished instruction to others. We do not know which of the five men mentioned were considered prophets and which were teachers. We have no reason to suppose that these five acted alone, but that, rather, what was done was the action of the whole church at Antioch. As these Antioch Christians prayed and fasted, the Holy Spirit came upon them. The Divine command was uttered to people prepared and waiting to obey. The Spirit said, "Separate me Barnabas and Saul for the work whereunto I have called them." With fasting and prayer and the laying on of hands, doubtless by the people as well as by the officers of the church, the first missionaries were sent away.

A Famous Voyage. Many men have set forth by sea or by land on journeys that have been memorable in history. But none of their achievements so vitally concerned mankind as the setting forth from Antioch in Syria of three Jews, who passed down the Orontes to the seaport Seleucia and took passage on a trading ship for the island of Cyprus. There was the beginning of the "Christian Odyssey." Then began that movement which "snatched Christianity from the hands of a local faction and turned it to a universal faith whose powerful word shook all the gods from Cyprus to Gibraltar, and turned the tide of history and thought."

The First Mission Field. Barnabas and Saul, with John-Mark, chose the isles of the Gentiles for the beginning of their mission. Pompey had suppressed piracy and rendered the Mediterranean safe. The Greek language was widely extended, and Roman law afforded protection. So these men spoke a language which could be used almost everywhere. They were free from the peril of pirates, and they were protected by law. Cyprus may have been chosen, since it was the native place of Barnabas and in it they would find numerous Jewish synagogues. For a hundred miles the travelers passed over the blue sea and then came in sight of the famous island of Cyprus, one hundred and forty-eight miles long and about forty miles broad.

The missionaries landed at the city of Salamis. There they entered the Jewish synagogues and "continued preaching the word of God." How long they stayed there we do not know; but presently they began to traverse the whole island, and at last came to Paphos on the western coast.

Idolatry and Superstition. In that age, the faith of the Romans and the Greeks had declined into an almost universal scepticism, and immorality was at its worst. While external forms of worship still existed among these nations, few really believed in the national gods. Accompanying this decline there had been a general lapse into immorality. On the other hand, superstitions had in many cases taken the place of religion. Feeling the need of some connection with the unseen world, men resorted to sorcerers and quacks. Augurs, astrologers, fortune tellers, interpreters of dreams, found access to many minds that were empty of real faith. Pliny tells us that in Paphos there were two schools of soothsayers. Doubtless to one of these schools belonged the Elymas, or Bar-jesus, told of in this narrative.

Sergius Paulus, the Roman proconsul at Paphos, had come under the influence of Elymas, and, indeed, had given him a place in the residence he himself occupied. In his belief in this sorcerer he did not differ from many another Roman. But it appears that he wished also to hear the new teachers who were proclaiming the Gospel and attracting much attention. Saul and Barnabas, being called before him, preached the Word of God.

Evidently the preaching produced an impression upon Sergius Paulus, for at once Elymas entered into controversy with the missionaries. He undertook with great vehemence to show to Sergius that this teaching, which Paul taught, was false.

Meeting Opposition. Saul, who now for the first time is called Paul, perceiving that the sorcerer was combating the Gospel for selfish reasons, as he feared Sergius would accept the truth and thus get from under his power, turned upon Elymas, denouncing him unsparingly.

To meet one who claimed to perform wonders, with a real miracle, would be the best way of convincing him as well as of defeating him and influencing Sergius. Doubtless, Elymas, who knew his own works to be frauds, had no faith that Paul's denunciation would have any effect. Great must have been his horror as he felt a mist and a darkness coming over his eyes. He shuddered. He, indeed, was stricken blind. His hands were stretched out in front of him to feel his way. He rolled his now sightless eyes hither and thither. Horror fell upon all who were present. Men stared at Paul, and stood watching, as if here was a supernatural being. Sergius looked on amazed. Then some one came forward, took Elymas by the hand, and led him out of the room.

The struggle for the soul of Sergius Paulus had been a long and severe one. There was the influence of his training and environment to be overcome, and it is always difficult to uproot deep prejudices. There were both the personality and the popularity of the sorcerer, who apparently for a considerable time had had great influence with Sergius and with the multitude.

First Results. Sergius evidently was not to be brought into the light by any ordinary means—the Spirit of God was striving with him. Paul had prayed for him and had instructed him. He had also been prepared to employ miraculous power in order to deliver this soul from the bondage of darkness and evil, for the destiny of an immortal soul was at stake.

The astonished proconsul saw his favorite sorcerer, who so often duped him with tricks, now being led away helpless, while before him still stood the preacher who had been telling him of Jesus. In answer to his questionings, Paul made known to Sergius that it was not by his own power but by the power of Christ that this miracle was accomplished. Teaching him further, from time to time, of the things of the Gospel, Paul led the proconsul to accept Christ.

Illustration. Richard the First of England on his way to the Holy Land was taken captive and thrown into a dungeon. His favorite minstrel, Blondel, knew that his king was imprisoned somewhere in a castle dungeon. So he went from one castle to another, playing well-known airs before the dungeon bars, until at last he was answered by the voice of the king from within. This led to the escape of Richard and his restoration to his throne. So the spirit of man answers to the Divine music.

Practical Truths. 1. The Lord prepares and sends laborers for His harvest. 2. God as really calls us now to our work as He called men in the days of Paul. Our calling is usually indicated by circumstances, but circumstances may also be Divinely arranged. 3. Not to be interested in missions is to neglect one of the chief duties of the Christian life. 4. We should realize that our modern civilization is one of the results of missions and that we ourselves are their direct beneficiaries. 5. The spirit in a consecrated man, such as Paul was, detects the unreality and falseness of fraudulent persons such as was Elymas. 6. The result of wilful opposition to truth is blindness. 7. All sin tends toward public exposure and shame. 8. A fraudulent business ends in wreck. 9. The giving up of a true faith is very commonly followed by becoming a victim to superstitions. 10. An honest occupation is the only one that is worth while.

PAUL AT ANTIOCH.

And the next sabbath day came almost the whole together

to hear
the word
of God.
But
when
the Jews
saw the

they were filled with envy, and spake against those things which were spoken by Paul, contradicting and blaspheming.
Then Paul and Barnabas waxed bold, and said, It was necessary that the should first have been spoken to you: but seeing ye put it from you, and judge yourselves unworthy of everlasting life, lo, we turn to the Gentiles. For so hath the Lord commanded us, saying, I have set thee

to be a

of the Gentiles, that thou shouldest
be for salvation
unto the ends
of the

And when
the

Gentiles heard this, they were glad, and glorified the word of the Lord: and as many as were ordained to eternal life believed. And the word of the Lord was published throughout all the region. But the Jews stirred up the devout and honourable

and the chief men
of the city, and raised against Paul and Barnabas, and expelled them out of their coasts.

ACTS XIII: 44-50.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 13:13-52.

Prayer: Our Father, Help us to be loyal to the work which we undertake. May we not put our hand to the plow and then look back. May we trust Thee to help us in all difficulties. In the name of Christ, Amen.

"Labor is sweet, for Thou hast toil'd
And care is light, for Thou hast cared:
Let not our works with self be soil'd,
Nor in unsimple ways ensnared;
Thro' life's long day and death's dark night,
O gentle Jesus, be our light!"

—Faber.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 46. Places, Perga in Pamphylia and Antioch in Pisidia. Persons, Paul, Barnabas, John-Mark, Jews, Proselytes and Gentiles in Antioch.

Scripture Setting: Study of Opportunity for Repentance. Refused, Prov. 1:24-33. Past, Jer. 8:20. Used, delivers, Ezek. 3:19. Neglected, dooms, Matt. 10:14, 15. Not appreciated, Matt. 11:20-24. Should be anticipated, Matt. 24:1-13. Used and unused, Matt. 25:14-30. Brings responsibility, Luke 12:47.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The instability of Mark's course was a misfortune to his companions, to himself and to the cause. 2. The synagogues, while frequently centers of opposition to Christ, often proved a vantage ground from which to get a hearing for the Gospel. 3. Paul's sermon at Antioch is a model as showing the value of choosing a common ground for yourself and those you would convince. 4. Paul and Barnabas failed with one class of people, but succeeded with another class that seemed hopeless. 5. The work flourished after those who had laid the foundations departed.

IN ASIA MINOR.

To the Mainland. Paul, Barnabas and John-Mark now prepared to leave Paphos in the island of Cyprus. They took a trading boat for Perga in Pamphylia in Asia Minor. Travellers in those days ordinarily were compelled to take what boats they could and make for the port nearest the place to which they wished to go. No doubt the fact that a boat was ready to set forth for Perga had something to do with the Apostles' going to that particular place at that time. Their general object was to reach the mainland. Perga was a Greek city, and was celebrated for its temple of Artemis.

Mark Goes Back. At Perga, John-Mark announced his purpose of returning to Jerusalem. This apparent desertion displeased the Apostle, but Barnabas, who was Mark's cousin, does not appear to have been critical toward the young man. John-Mark was young; his mother was living in Jerusalem, and he was much attached to Peter, who was living at the Jewish capital. He had found hardships on the journey thus far, and still greater ones were in view.

Paul and Barnabas were not discouraged when others forsook them. One of the trials of all earnest workers is to find those fail on whom perhaps they have most counted, and for whom they have had most affection. It was a long time before Paul was able to overlook Mark's desertion and come to an appreciation of the young man's good qualities.

Perga. On this visit to Perga there is no record that the missionaries preached. It has been surmised that since the season was the middle of spring, the population, according to custom there, had removed inland to escape the malaria and the heat. Caravans now passing into the interior provided the missionaries protection. Doubtless they joined themselves to one of these, and so passed on with the people.

While it is true that the whole world is the field, and that the Gospel is to be taken to all men, we need not be discouraged when we find that we are not successful with all. After about a week of journeying they arrived at Antioch in Pisidia. This city occupied a central position, having roads that communicated in all directions and was a great commercial center.

Paul's Trade. Among the ancient Jews, it was the rule to teach their sons a trade. This was to assure them a livelihood in any case. Paul was a tent-maker, having learned to make tents of goat's hair. We know that it was Paul's custom on his missionary journeys to work at his trade sufficiently to prevent his being chargeable to the people. During such work he could meditate, and doubtless, talk with those who gathered about him.

Illustration. Daniel Webster was once asked, "What is the greatest thought you ever entertained?" He replied, "The most important thought I have ever had was that of my personal accountability to a personal God."

In the Synagogue. The Jews, who were scattered everywhere in search of business, had their synagogues in almost every town and city. It was the custom of the Apostles, according to the Divine command, to offer the Gospel first to the Jews. The synagogue gave them the best opportunity to this end.

On the Sabbath day Paul and Barnabas went into the synagogue and took their seats among the worshippers. The prayers began, being read in Greek by the "angel of the synagogue." The first lesson was read from the Law in Hebrew and translated by the interpreter. The book used was a roll kept in a chest, or ark, and was handed to the reader by the clerk. The second lesson was from the Prophets. Then came the sermon, or explanation of the Scripture.

Paul Preaching. The sermon in the synagogue was not delivered always by the same man. It was customary to invite any stranger who might be thought able to speak profitably. Probably it was already known that Paul and Barnabas were teachers of some new doctrine. The clerk was sent to invite them to speak. Paul arose in his place, and raising his hand for silence began his address. Doubtless he had founded it upon the two passages of Scripture that had been read.

Paul began most courteously. He referred to God's goodness to Israel, outlining several main points in their history and thus standing with them on common ground. He stated that from David's descendants God was to raise up the Messiah. He declared that this Messiah had come, and that He was Jesus. The rulers in Jerusalem had put Him to death, but God had raised Him from the dead. He himself was a witness to that fact. He showed from prophecy that this event had been foretold. He argued that only through this Jesus could come remission of sins.

Now everything seemed to promise well for a favorable hearing of the Gospel. The great Apostle had before him many who had been trained from childhood in the religion of his fathers and theirs. He and they had the bonds of the same blood and the same inheritance. He brought them the message which was the fulfillment of their own hopes if they would but receive it.

With his whole heart Paul strove to win them. He swept the strings of their souls by recounting that which he and they believed in common in regard to God's dealings with their nation. And then he led them on to listen to the truth as it was fulfilled in Christ.

The Effect. The sermon made a deep impression. As the people left the synagogue all asked that they might hear more of this subject. Jews and proselytes followed Paul and Barnabas to ask questions. The Gentiles also were interested and begged that on the next Sabbath they, too, might hear of these things. A vast crowd gathered at that time, but the great popularity of these strangers, and the fact that the Gentiles were included, excited the envy of the Jews. Therefore, on this second Sabbath, Paul met with antagonism from many hearers, who spake against what Paul had taught, contradicting and blaspheming. The excitement was so intense that Paul could not proceed. He, therefore, cried out to the Jews that he had fulfilled his duty to them in the offer of salvation, but since they had proved themselves unworthy of eternal life, he would turn to the Gentiles. He declared that God had "set him for a light to the Gentiles, that he might be for salvation unto the ends of the earth."

Opposed by the Jews, Paul found favor for the Gospel with the Gentiles. Gladly did many welcome the message that told of the grace of God offered to them. On the heels of failure came success, and Paul's heart rejoiced. God does not permit final failures in His work. Some reject, but some accept; some are hardened, but some are won.

Illustration. A legend says that a potter of Burmah became envious of the success of a washerman, and, that he might be lord of the white elephant, he persuaded the king to order the washerman to wash one of his black elephants white. The washerman replied that by the rules of his business he must have a vessel large enough to wash the animal in. The king ordered the potter to make such a vessel. When finished it was crushed by the elephant's first step in it. Many trials failed and the potter was ruined by the plan he devised for the destruction of his enemy.

Rejoicing of the Gentiles. Hearing this message flung in the faces of the haughty Jews, and learning that they themselves were included in the salvation proclaimed, the Gentiles rejoiced. They flocked about Paul and his companion. Paul preached to them and taught them, and large numbers accepted Christ.

Now opposition leaped forth, but Paul was used to that. He knew the human heart and the evils from which antagonisms to the truth arise. Christ has not promised anyone freedom from opposition in His work; on the contrary he has warned us to expect it as something sure to come. Our experience probably will not be like those which came to Paul. We meet unbelief, worldliness, indifference, more often than open hatred and persecution. But whatever comes, we must stand firm in the faith, and work on undiscouraged.

Enemies Successful. In Antioch were many rich women of high rank who were Jewish proselytes. These had great influence with the Roman rulers of the city. The Romans tolerated most forms of religion, but they disliked the excitements that arose from religious differences. As the town had been quiet until the Apostles came, and now was rent with dissensions, the Romans, under the influence of these rich and powerful women, expelled the Apostles from the city, but the church they had planted thrived, and they left many hearts filled with the joy of the Gospel message.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

PAUL AT LYSTRA.

And there sat a certain man at Lystra, impotent in his feet, being a from his mother's womb, who never had walked:

The same heard Paul speak: who stedfastly beholding him, and perceiving that he had faith to be healed, Said
with a loud voice,
Stand upright on thy feet. And he and walked. And when the saw

what had done, they lifted up their voices, saying in the speech of Lycaonia, The

are come down to us in the likeness of men.
And they called Barnabas,
Jupiter; and Paul, Mercurius, because he was the chief speaker. Then the

of Jupiter,
which was before their city, brought unto the gates, and would have done sacrifice with the people:

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 14:1-28.

Prayer: Our Father, We worship Thee as the sole Author of all good and as the Maker of all things. We would lift up our hearts far above the good and great men who have wrought wonders in Thy name, unto Thyself who gave them this power. In the name of Christ. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 47. Places, Southern Galatia, including Iconium, Derbe and Lystra. Persons, Paul, Barnabas; the lame man, the priest of Jupiter, the people.

Scripture Setting: A Study of Superstition. In Israel, I. Sam. 4:3, 10, 11. Philistines, I. Sam. 5:5. Syrians, I. Kings 20:23. Jews, Jer. 44:17-19. Nebuchadnezzar, Dan. 4:8-9. Sailors, Jonah 1:4-16. Disciples, Matt. 14:26. Herod, Mark 6:14-16. Gadarenes, Matt. 8:34. Disciples, Acts 12:14, 15. Ephesians, Acts 19:13-19. People of Melita, Acts 28:6.

FAITHFUL THROUGH PERSECUTION.

When one undertakes the service of God, he must be prepared beforehand to endure much and without complaint. The Apostles had counted the cost, and were ready to die, if need be, for Christ. What they endured is almost incredible, but they rejoiced in their sufferings, since they were for Christ's sake.

Having been driven out of Antioch in Pisidia, Paul and Barnabas followed a well-beaten road over plains where grazed wild asses and innumerable herds of sheep. After sixty miles of travel, they came to the oasis on which was the city of Iconium, in the district of Lycaonia, now known as Konieh. This place was besieged, during the Crusades, by Godfrey of Bouillon.

Making Enemies. Here, as in other cities, the missionaries sought lodgings in the Jewish neighborhood, and found occupation by which they could earn a livelihood. As was their custom, they entered the synagogue on the Sabbath and accepted the invitation to address the congregation. From Sabbath to Sabbath they spoke with such effect that a great multitude of Jews and Greeks were converted. Once more the Jews who did not believe grew envious of the success of the messengers of the Cross. They sought out the Gentiles, conversed with them and poisoned their minds against Paul and Barnabas. The two Christian leaders stood firm against the storm of opposition, preached boldly, and wrought miracles. But antagonism grew, until the multitude was divided, part holding with the Jews and part with the Apostles. With the numerous Gentiles they had won to their side, the Jews planned to put Paul and Barnabas to death by stoning, but faithful friends warned them of this conspiracy, and again they fled for their lives.

"Before Jehovah's awful throne
Ye nations bow with sacred joy;
Know that the Lord is God alone,
He can create and He destroy."

ITS RELATIONS.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The Jews had fostered distrust and divided Iconium into two parties. 2. On this account it was the part of wisdom in the Apostles to flee, and this accorded with the command of Christ. 3. Though the Apostles changed their place, they did not change their purpose. 4. They came into an atmosphere of pagan legends, such as produced misunderstanding of present events. 5. The living God presented by Paul was in marked distinction to the gods whom the people of Lystra conceived the Apostles to be. 6. One day the multitude was ready to worship, and another day to stone.

A Cripple. Making their way some forty miles on the main road, they came to Lystra. In that town and in the region round about, for some time they preached with success. Then occurred an event that involved the missionaries of Christ in a singular series of circumstances. On one occasion, while Paul was speaking he noted a man who had been crippled in his feet from birth, listening with great intentness. This man's heart burned with hope as he heard of the mighty Christ who had wrought miracles while He was in the flesh, and who had risen from the dead. This was the message that he needed. Visions of what this Christ might do on his behalf rose before him.

It was the lame man's attitude of mind that proved important. His expectation of assistance prepared the way. This faith came to him by the hearing of the Gospel. His faith was founded on Christ, although that which he immediately desired was for the body rather than for the spirit. Salvation reaches from the spirit to the body, and so salvation may begin with the body and extend to the spirit. If the cripple had not heard this Gospel and had not been aroused to a degree of faith that he would be saved, nothing would have happened.

A Cripple Healed. Paul, ever ready to recognize the signs of faith, and ever ready to minister to those in need, paused in his discourse and turned toward the lame man. Then he said with a loud voice, "Stand up on thy feet!" Feeling a Divine power thrill his being and his soul kindle with a great hope, the lame man struggled to obey. In a moment he, who never before had walked, stood up, walked, and leaped.

Illustration. President Lincoln was one day walking with his secretary when he stopped and peered into a bush. Then he stooped and felt among the twigs. His secretary asked, "What do you find there, Mr. Lincoln?" "Why," said he,

"here is a little bird fallen from its nest, and I am trying to put it back again."

The Effect of the Miracle As this miracle probably occurred in the open air, and not in a synagogue, a vast mixed crowd was present, many of whom were native pagans and worshippers of the heathen gods, Jupiter, Mercury, and the others. These people, beholding the wonderful cure of one they well knew as having been lame all his life, leaped to the conclusion that the Apostles were themselves gods in human form. They shouted in their native dialect, which Paul and Barnabas did not understand, "The gods are come down to us in the likeness of men!"

Staring in awe at the two Apostles, noting the majestic appearance of Barnabas and the fiery eloquence of Paul, the people declared that Barnabas was Jupiter and Paul was Mercury.

Oxen and Garlands. Swiftly the word spread that the gods had appeared as men. The people had been taught the legends of Greece and Rome, and had been told that such events had occurred in other days. Apparently this had come to pass once more. The rumor reached the priests of the gods, who either believed that it might be so or else wished to take advantage of the superstition of the people to turn the tide from the new teaching back to their own form of worship. They may have thought that Paul and Barnabas would accept the proffered honors, pretend to be gods, and then aid the priests in their own deceptions. In this case, the new impulse given to pagan worship would accrue to the benefit of the priests of the gods.

From whatever motives, the priest of Jupiter prepared to render the Apostles pagan honors. He gathered his followers and bade them prepare for sacrifices. Oxen were wreathed with garlands, ready for the offering before the gates. Fires were kindled on the altars. The people were shouting praises to the gods. Someone who understood the dialect of the people, and at the same time understood the views of the Christian missionaries, ran to the Apostles, crying, "The people take you for gods. The priest of Jupiter is at the altar about to offer sacrifices to you as to Jupiter and Mercury."

Stopping the Sacrifice. Without a thought of the flattery thus proffered to human pride, but stricken with horror at the unintentional blasphemy of the ignorant pagans, Barnabas and Paul rent their clothes as a sign of their grief, and ran to the gates. Then they sped in among the people and to the altar, crying out, "Sirs, why do ye these things? We also are men of like passions with you, and preach unto you that ye should turn from these vanities unto the living God, which made Heaven, and earth, and the sea, and all things that are therein."

The crowd fell back a moment. Some did not understand the language in which the Apostles spoke. Some could not understand how men who were able to do such wonders could be mere men. It was with great difficulty that the Apostles turned the priest and his followers from their intent to sacrifice the oxen unto them as gods.

Foes on Their Track. Having disposed of this trouble for the time, another was soon to overtake them. Certain Jews from Antioch and Iconium, coming to Lystra either on business or following the Apostles with intent to do them harm, set about exciting the people against them. The people, ever ready to go to extremes, and disappointed that these men were not gods, now turned against them. They began to hurl stones at him whom they so recently had hailed as Mercury. Perhaps the priest of Jupiter joined in this attack, being disappointed that the Apostles had not fallen in with his scheme. Fortunately, the stoning which Paul now received was not at the hands of the Jews, for when the Jews stoned a man, they did it with good aim and sustained the attack until the man was dead. These pagans, however, seem to have made their assault without method. Paul, though dragged outside the gates as dead, was merely unconscious, and while the disciples he had gained in that city stood around about him mourning, he rose up and re-entered the town.

The next day the Apostles departed to Derbe. There they preached for a time. Then they returned to Lystra, and to Iconium, and to Antioch in Pisidia. Doubtless they re-entered these towns secretly and with a view to safety, since they now desired chiefly to strengthen the disciples and to exhort them to continue in the faith. They ordained elders in each church, praying and fasting and commending them to the Lord. Passing through Pisidia they came to Pamphylia, preaching in Perga, and going into Attalia. Thence they set sail for Antioch in Syria, having completed the first missionary journey.

Practical Truths. 1. No amount of persecution should be allowed to stop us or to sway us in the course of duty. 2. We can greatly admire good men without unduly exalting them. 3. Let us beware of fickleness in all things, especially in religion. It is contemptible to be one thing to-day and another thing to-morrow. 4. Make no gods, but worship the true God. Idolatry of money, pleasure, self, is as common in civilized lands to-day as is the worship of idols in heathen countries. 5. Be not ambitious to be thought what you are not, but aim to be what you would have others think you are.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

THE CONFERENCE AT JERUSALEM.

Then all the kept silence, and gave audience to Barnabas and Paul, declaring what and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them. And after they had held their peace, James answered, saying, Men and brethren, hearken unto me: Simeon hath declared how God at the first did visit the Gentiles, to take out of them a people for his name. And to this agree the words of the

as it is written, After this I will return, and will build again the of David, which is fallen down; and I will build again the thereof, and I will set it up: That the residue of might seek after the Lord, and all the Gentiles, upon whom my name is called, saith the Lord, who doeth all these things. Known unto God are all his works from the beginning of the world. Wherefore my sentence is, that we trouble not them, which from among the Gentiles are turned to God.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 15:1-35.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee that Thou hast freed Christians from the burden of the old ceremonial law, and that the simpler way of salvation through Christ is given unto us. We bless Thee that we may carry a free Gospel of faith unto all the nations. In the name of Christ. Amen.

"In a service which Thy will appoints
There are no bonds for me;
For my inmost heart is taught the Truth
That makes Thy children free;
And a life of self-renouncing love
Is a life of liberty."

—Anna L. Waring.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 48<sup>50</sup>. Places, Antioch in Syria, Phoenicia, Samaria, Jerusalem. Persons, Paul, Barnabas, Peter, James, John, Judas Barsabas, Silas, Judaizers, and the people.

Scripture Setting: Study of the Ceremonial Law. Until Messiah come, Gal. 3:19. Temporary, Jer. 3:16; Dan. 9:27; Matt. 5:17-45; Luke 16:16, 17. Fulfilled in Christ, John 1:17; 4:20. Faith-fulfillment, Acts 13:39. Advantages of Jews, Rom. 3:1, 2. Dead to law by Christ, Rom. 7:1-4. Christ greater than law, Rom. 8:3. Freedom of Christians, Gal. 4:30. Ministration of Spirit, II. Cor. 3:7-14. A shadow of things to come, Col. 2:14-23. Ineffectual, Heb. 10:1.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Paul declared that God, and not man, opened the door to the Gentiles. 2. The plan of the Judaizers was to obstruct a work already successful. This was the blindness of bigotry. 3. An extreme literalism is always the foe of progress. 4. Paul and Barnabas wisely took the course that was most likely to adjust the matter to the profit of the church, and they did not insist on their personal decisions being accepted as final. 5. The fruits among the Gentiles were accepted as demonstrations of the righteous methods pursued. 6. The principle involved—that of the liberty of the Gospel—was settled on the side of the Gospel as against the literalism of the law. 7. The decision of the Jerusalem Conference affected all the future of Christianity.

"Free discussion in a loving Christian spirit, and examination of the facts with minds open to the Holy Spirit of truth, will lead to peace, to clearer views of truth, to broader vision, to more perfect harmony. Christian discussion is a sign of life. To refuse discussion is like sitting on the safety valve of a steam boiler: it will result in explosion and destruction."

—Peloubet.

AN IMPORTANT DECISION.

It must have been stirring, indeed, for the Antioch Christians to greet and to hear the very first returned Christian missionaries. A general wave of excitement must have passed through the households of that church when the word came that Paul and Barnabas actually had arrived after the perils and varied experiences of the long tour they had made in foreign lands as emissaries of the Cross.

Their Report. On the Sabbath the church was filled with eager listeners. What a story those people heard that day—of the encounter with Elymas the sorcerer; the conversion of Sergius Paulus the proconsul; of being driven out of the other Antioch; of the healing of the lame man at Lystra, and the inclination of the pagans there to offer sacrifices to them as gods; of Paul's being stoned and left for dead; of storm, and hunger, and thirst, and all that these faithful ones had endured. With thrilling hearts the people must have listened, as they were told of converts among Jews and Gentiles, of the little churches that had been founded, and of the devotion and faith of the followers they had gained for Christ. All rejoiced at the news that confirmed them in their hopes, for "God had opened the door of faith unto the Gentiles."

Trouble Makers. Paul and Barnabas now were permitted opportunity to rest and recover their strength after their hardships. These had been so severe that years afterwards Paul several times referred to them in his letters. When persecutions and bodily injuries were added to the necessary hardships of such a primitive journey as theirs, we can understand that these men needed a season of rest. But as soon as they had recovered strength they once more began work in Antioch, preaching and winning new converts.

The Christian's times of rest should be preparation for more and better service for the Master. These are not for self-indulgence but for renewal of strength.

While Paul and Barnabas had been absent, certain men had come from Judea and had unsettled the minds of the Christians in Antioch. These were converts from Judaism, but they had certain old Jewish ideas, and they held that the Christians were still bound by the old Jewish law. These men had not been sent by the church at Jerusalem, but had come of their own accord, having learned that Gentiles were admitted into the Antioch church without being circumcised. They claimed that circumcision was still binding upon all Christians and thus a great stir was made in the church. Some argued for and some against the necessity of this old rite. When Paul and Barnabas came back they found the church agitated over this matter. Paul asserted that the old law had been fulfilled in Christ, that salvation was by Christ alone, and that it was wrong to impose the old ceremonies of the Jews upon the Gentile Christians. Some agreed with him, and some differed.

Illustration. When cranes are at peace they are hard to capture and are wary of approaching foes, but when they fall out among themselves they fight so fiercely that they beat one another down, and so are easily captured as they fight.

The Conference in Jerusalem. Since this question was making so much disturbance in Antioch, Paul received a revelation urging him to bring the matter before the church at Jerusalem. The Antioch brethren also were moved to send messengers thither to ask what should be done. The congregation met and appointed Paul and Barnabas, with others, to visit the brethren at Jerusalem. These men set out on their journey, and on their way they visited the churches in Phoenicia and Samaria, relating their experiences in Cyprus and Asia Minor and the conversion of the Gentiles. The brethren received the messages with profound joy. Arriving in Jerusalem, they were welcomed by the church, the Apostles, and the elders. To them also they recounted the marvels of God's grace, as shown on their missionary tour. The Christians in Jerusalem were greatly moved by the wonderful story.

Private Conferences. Paul conferred privately with James, Peter, and John, telling them the Gospel he had preached and what he had done. The Apostles recognized that God had committed to Paul and Barnabas "the Gospel of uncircumcision," and that miracles and the Spirit had confirmed this teaching, while "the Gospel of circumcision" had been committed to Peter. They gave Paul and Barnabas the right hand of fellowship, as the sign of agreement that the two should go to the Gentiles and they themselves to the Jews.

Public Discussion. But this was a matter for the church as well as for its officers, therefore a public meeting was called. Among the converts in Jerusalem were certain men who had been Pharisees, hence were strict observers of the law. Before the assembled multitude these men said, "It is necessary to circumcise the Gentile converts and to charge them to keep the law of Moses." They argued that while Christianity was added to the old law, it did not do away with the law, and that if circumcision was necessary for the Jew, it also was required of the Christian.

Convincing Proof. Then Peter arose. He declared that the principle had been settled already; that he had been sent to Cornelius, and that God had given the Spirit to the believing Gentiles just as to the Jews. He affirmed that the new dispensation relates to the inner life—that God "had purified their hearts by faith." As they believed that salvation came to all alike through the grace of Christ, it was tempting God to add a yoke to the Gentiles.

Now Paul and Barnabas addressed the people, declaring what miracles and wonders God had wrought among the Gentiles by them. If God had confirmed their work by miracles and by the Spirit without their having observed the details of the Jewish law, that should be accepted as proof that circumcision was not necessary.

James, the brother of the Lord, spoke next. He reminded his listeners that Peter had told them of the Divine intimations that led to the call of the Gentiles. Quoting a prophecy to show that this was in line with the Divine plan, he declared that the Gentiles never would accept the whole of the Mosaic law, and gave his judgment that they should release the Gentiles from all restrictions except four. The hearing of the law in the synagogues would remind Gentile converts that it is binding for them only so far as charity to the Jew requires; and the Jews would learn that Christians had no wish to do away with the law for them.

The Decision. The conclusion arrived at was that circumcision was not necessary for Gentile converts. Judas Barsabas and Silas were chosen to accompany Paul and Barnabas to Antioch and to confirm the written letter which they carried. The epistle stated, "We have commissioned Judas and Silas, who themselves shall tell you the same things by word of mouth. For it seemed good to the Holy Ghost and to us to lay no greater burden upon you than these necessary things; that ye abstain from things sacrificed to idols, and from all uncleanness."

With this message, all returned to Antioch. Thus the church in Antioch was authorized to do as before—to receive Gentiles without forcing them to accept Jewish rites. A great point in the liberty of the Christian church had been gained. The wall of separation between Israel and the nations had been broken down. Thus by kindly brotherly counsel together, one of the difficulties of the early church was, at least, lessened. Without this conference the two parties would have grown farther apart, to the injury of the cause.

Practical Truths. 1. We should beware of making trouble in the churches of which we may be members. It is a wrong thing to do, and usually the troublemaker comes to grief. 2. We should not insist overmuch on our own opinions, but should consider that there are other points of view. 3. In a general discussion, we should kindly and gently state the matter as it seems to us, but remain open to new light and to conviction. 4. We should not bind upon ourselves nor upon others as essential anything that the Gospel does not plainly teach. 5. We should, above all, seek the help of the Holy Spirit in deciding all questions.

And a

appeared to Paul in the night;
There stood a and prayed

him, saying,
Come over into Macedonia, and help us. And on the sabbath
we went out of the city by a where prayer was wont to be made; and we sat down, and spake unto the women which resorted thither.

And a certain named Lydia, a seller

of purple,
of the

of Thyatira, which worshipped God, heard us: whose heart the Lord opened, that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul. And when she was baptized, and her

she besought
us, saying,
If ye have judged me to be faithful to the Lord, come into my

and abide there. And she constrained us,

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS IN ACTS 15:36-41; 16:1-15.

Prayer: Our Father, We praise Thee that the Gospel came to Lydia by the riverside. We praise Thee that it may come to men and women under the simplest conditions, at work, or at prayer, and that it is not confined to costly temples. In the name of Christ. Amen.

For we must share if we would keep,
That good thing from above;
Ceasing to give, we cease to have,
Such is the law of Love.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 51-54. Places, Syria, Cilicia, Lycaonia, Phrygia, Galatia, Troas, Macedonia. Persons, Paul, Silas, Timothy, Eunice, Lois, Luke, Lydia.

Scripture Setting: Study of Conversion. Ruth, Ruth 1:16. Sailors with Jonah, Jonah 1:5-9, 16. Ninevites, Jonah 3. Gadarenes, Luke 8:35-39. Samaritans, John 4:28-42. Thief on the cross, Luke 23:39-43. At Pentecost, Acts 2:41. The Ethiopian, Acts 8:35-38. Saul of Tarsus, Acts 9:3-18. Sergius Paulus, Acts 13:7-12. Cornelius, Acts 10. Jews and Greeks at Antioch, Acts 13:43. Jailer, Acts 16:27-34. Greeks, Acts 17:4, 12. Andrew, John 1:40, 41. Man possessed with demons, Luke 8:39. Blind man, Matt. 9:28-31. Dumb man, Mark 7:32-36.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The zeal of Paul is one of the most wonderful facts in all history, secular or sacred. 2. A ministry at home would have given him a comparatively easy life. 3. His great love for his converts is constantly manifest. 4. He was the pioneer of foreign missions because he followed the will of God as made known to him. 5. Paul was prevented from preaching the word in Asia because he was more needed in Macedonia. 6. Responding to this call gained for Christianity an entrance into Europe. 7. He counted no sacrifice too great if only he might win souls. 8. Paul's heroic labors were a triumph of the spirit, for apparently he was not physically strong. 9. Paul gave to the humble worshippers at the river side the same high ministry that he bestowed upon his most important churches.

FOR THE LOVE OF CHRIST.

Paul, having tasted the joys of the missionary, said to Barnabas, "Let us go again and visit our brethren in every city where we have preached the word of the Lord, and see how they do."

Paul and Barnabas Separate. Barnabas responded with enthusiasm. He was ready to go, but he declared that he wished as a companion John-Mark, who had begun the first journey with them and had then left them. Paul, still feeling keenly that desertion, and aware of the perils of this new enterprise, feared that John-Mark would again shrink from hardships, and he refused to consider that young man as one of the party. Barnabas insisted, and they decided to separate. Barnabas took Mark with him and set off for Cyprus. Paul chose Silas as his companion and began a visitation of the churches in Syria and Cilicia.

Visiting the Churches. Paul first wished to strengthen the churches he had already established. To this end he and Silas visited those of Syria and Cilicia. This brought them to Tarsus, Paul's own home. Thence they probably chose the most traveled road through the Cilician Gates, the one through which centuries afterward the Crusaders passed.

Again Paul came to Derbe, but this time he arrived from the opposite direction. Before, Barnabas had been with him; before, he had come with the wounds of the stoning to preach to the people for the first time the faith of Christ. Great must have been the joy of the Christians to behold him now coming unannounced, but full of love toward them. Paul was happy to find his disciples loyally following in the way he had taught them.

Lystra Again. Undismayed by his previous experience in Lystra, where he had been stoned, and anxious to learn how the Christians there were persevering in the faith, Paul and Silas came into that town. Several years had passed, and the church had grown in numbers and in faith. Great was Paul's joy at what he found.

In Lystra dwelt a Jewess called Lois and her daughter Eunice, who had married a Greek. Eunice and her Greek husband had a son named Timothy. During his former visit Paul had converted Timothy, and then or later his mother and grandmother had accepted the Christian faith. It is probable that Timothy's father had died while he was a child, and we know that he had been taught the Scriptures from early years, by his grandmother and his mother.

Timothy Chosen. It is probable that Paul and Silas were the guests of Lois and Eunice during this visit. They were treated as intimate friends. Timothy had become a man and was of "good report." It is likely that for some time he had been active in Christian work. Paul now expressed the desire that Timothy should join him on his missionary journey. The heart of Timothy responded to the invitation. Eunice was willing to make the sacrifice, and this youth, of whom Paul afterwards spoke always with affection, was set apart for this great work. Paul, now accompanied by Timothy as well as by Silas, pushed on through Phrygia and Galatia, and passing by Mysia came to Troas.

Illustration. At the battle of Shiloh, an officer rode furiously up to General Grant and touching his cap, said, "General, I want to make one report. Schwartz's battery is took." "Ah," said the General, "how was that?" "Well, you see, General, the secessionists come up in front of us, and the secessionists flanked us, and the secessionists come in the rear of us. And Schwartz's battery was took." "Well," said the General, "you, of course, spiked the guns." "What," exclaimed the Dutchman, "spike them new guns? No, it would spoil them." "Well," said the General sharply, "What did you do?" "Do? Why, we took them back again." Paul was engaged in again capturing for God the world, which sin had alienated.

On Classic Ground. Now Paul and his companions were at the scene of the Trojan war—every foot of ground rendered poetic by Homer. At Troas Paul was joined by Luke, the writer of the third Gospel and of the book of Acts, a man of culture and a physician. He afterward accompanied Paul on many of his journeys.

Near the scenes of Homer's tale; near where Alexander had crossed from Europe into Asia, Paul beheld in a vision "a man of Macedonia," uttering the cry of the western world, "Come over into Macedonia and help us." It had been Macedonia that sent Alexander to the conquest of Asia. Now Macedonia invites conquest by the spiritual force whose cradle was in Asia. Luke says, "after he had seen the vision, immediately we endeavored to go into Macedonia, assuredly gathering the Lord had called us for to preach the Gospel unto them."

They, therefore, set sail from Troas, coming with a straight course to Samothracia, and the next day to Neapolis. From there by road way they passed to Philippi, a city of Macedonia, and a Roman colony, the very scene of the defeat of Brutus and Cassius. The few Jews there were without a synagogue, but they had an "oratory" outside the city, where they met for prayer. At such a place wandering traders would gather, not being allowed within the walls. These traders dealt, among other things, in dyed stuffs, brought from Asia Minor.

The First European Convert. Among these traders was a certain woman named Lydia, a seller of purple, of the city of Thyatira. She had been converted to Judaism, and was accustomed to meet with other women at the "oratory." Thus, not in a splendid temple or church, but by the river side, was won the first European convert to Christianity. On the Sabbath, Paul and his companions went out to the place where these people were accustomed to meet for prayer. There they sat down and spoke to the women who had gathered and the Lord opened the heart of Lydia "that she attended unto the things which were spoken of Paul." She and her household were converted and baptized, and her house became the home of the Apostle and his companions while they were at Philippi.

From this conversion of one woman, began a movement that was to affect the whole great continent of Europe and the future of European civilization everywhere. But like many other revolutions the vast changes could not be measured by their source. How beautiful it was to see the great Paul devoting himself to the enlightenment and saving of Lydia, with the same zeal that he would have given to the richest or noblest in the land. Thus, in this simple way, did Christianity come to Europe, and a beginning was made of that wonderful spiritual conquest by which the name of Christ has been placed supreme above all kings and nobles in the western world.

From Lydia's conversion dates, so far as Europe is concerned, the vast work of women in the church. What the church and the world owes to the devotion of Christian women, cannot be estimated. A very large part of the success of Christianity has been, and is, due to that devotion. And Lydia, humble and unknown, was the first of all that glorious company in Europe.

Illustration. A well-known physician once lost much money from investments. A friend, meeting him soon afterward, expressed his sympathy. "I had rather you had not reminded me of it," the physician said. "Thank God I have gotten over it." "How have you managed that?" was the question. "Well, I was unable to forget it, thought of it day and night, till my mind wandered and my family were sad and fearful. I felt that this must not continue. So I took refuge in the Almighty. I hurried to my room, shut the door, and fell on my knees to pray with my whole heart. Then I felt as if God appeared to me and said, 'Have I not the key of all the treasures? And can I not far more than replace thy loss? Be of good courage'. And now I have got over it. I am once more happy in God. Prayer has done all this."

Practical Thoughts. 1. We can do infinitely more than we think we can, if we are possessed by a God-given motive. 2. The great source of energy is faith in Christ. 3. We should not underrate small beginnings, but consider the wonderful things that may grow out of them. 4. Hardships seldom kill, but rather they become sources of increased strength. 5. It is better to be a pioneer in good works; to find new fields and new methods, than merely to build on others' foundations. 6. The one who wishes to serve Christ will be shown the best way. 7. To love and imitate Christ is to do good work.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

PAUL AND SILAS IN PRISON.

And suddenly there was a great earthquake, so that the foundations of the were shaken:

and immediately
all the doors were opened, and everyone's bands
were loosed.
And the

awaking out of his sleep, and seeing the

he and would have killed himself, supposing that the prisoners had been fled. But Paul cried with a loud voice, saying, Do thyself no harm: for we are all here. Then he called for a

and

and came trembling
and

before Paul and Silas. And brought them out, and said, Sirs, what must I do to be saved? And they said, Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ, and thou shalt be saved, and thy house.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 16:16-40.

Prayer: Our Father, We, too, would rejoice in the midnights and sing Thy praises in the prisons. We bless Thee that Thou dost sustain the spirit of Thy people under all trials and give them great joy in all troubles. In the name of Christ. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 51-54. Place, Philippi. Persons, Paul, Barnabas, the girl possessed by an evil spirit, her owners, the magistrates, jailer and his family.

Scripture Setting: Study of Songs of Praise. Song of Moses, Ex. 15:1-9. Of Miriam, Ex. 15:21. Of Deborah, Judges 5. Of Hannah, 1 Sam. 2:1-10. Of David, 2 Sam. 22. Bringing Ark to Zion, 1 Chron. 16:8-36. David at end of reign, 1 Chron. 29:10-19. For God's goodness to Israel, Psa. 46; 48; 65; 66; 68; 76. For God's goodness to righteous men, Psa. 23; 34; 36; 91; 100; 103; 107. At the Passover, Matt. 26:30. Of Moses and the Lamb, Rev. 15:3, 4. Spiritual singing enjoined, Eph. 5:19; Col. 3:16. Of redemption, Rev. 5:9, 10. Of the redeemed, Rev. 14:2-4.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. For money-profit men degrade their own souls and the souls of others. 2. The slaves of sin are the slaves of other sinners. 3. Even degraded souls divine the

THE LOVE OF MONEY.

After the conversion of Lydia and her household, Paul and his friends continued for some time as guests in the family. They preached frequently wherever they could find hearers, and in addition they went daily to the river side to the open-air place of prayer.

The Pythoness. In the city there was a poor slave girl who was possessed by a spirit of divination. To what extent she had any real ability to foretell events we do not know, but the record attributes such strange powers as she had to the presence of an inner evil spirit. This poor girl appears to have been especially successful in gratifying the superstitious tastes of the people. Doubtless she had hit upon incidents and facts often enough to give her a reputation with the crowd. The weak and the silly were accustomed to seek her out, to listen with awe to her predictions, and to report what seemed to be her marvellous powers.

Being, no doubt, of an excitable, nervous temperament, singular, and unable to care for herself, she had fallen into the clutches of conscienceless men, who held her in practical slavery and made her prophecies and fortune-telling the means of livelihood to themselves. Noting that the crowds followed Paul, this girl also joined the throng going toward the river side. In the manner of one speaking under some mysterious inspiration, she cried out, "These men are the servants of the Most High God, which shew unto

There are briars besetting every path,
That call for patient care;
There is a cross in every lot,
And an earnest need for prayer;
But a lowly heart that leans on Thee,
Is happy anywhere.

ITS RELATIONS.

superior power of good men. 4. Paul was unwilling to have the Gospel brought into disrepute by the irresponsible zeal of the demoniac. 5. He saw in the slave girl the ruin of a soul, while her masters saw in her only the means of gain. 6. Such as profit by evil are the only real disturbers among men. 7. Paul for the first time is persecuted by money-greed, rather than by Jewish religious enmity. 8. Paul maintained the fitting dignity of a Christian and asserted the right of himself and of Silas to be publicly cleared of wrong conduct. 9. Paul's imprisonment is a glorious example of the power of the Gospel: dauntless courage of the apostle; prison doors opened; jailer converted; prisoner released by magistrates. 10. The contrast between worldly and Heavenly power. 11. The jailer's "What must I do to be saved?" has become the cry of all mankind. Paul's "Believe in the Lord Jesus Christ": is the WAY of salvation for all. 12. The impulse of service is the first that comes to the converted soul.

us the way of salvation." She continued these cries day after day, her wild, excited manner attracting the notice of all passers.

Casting Out the Spirit. Paul, troubled that a human soul should be thus under control of an evil spirit, and grieved that the people in regarding this poor girl as an inspired being would confound the Gospel with soothsaying, turned and said to the spirit, "I command thee in the name of Jesus Christ to come out of her." From that time she became a normal human being, perfectly sane and natural.

The evil men who had profited by the poor girl's condition, instead of rejoicing at her restoration to health of body and mind, thought only of the loss to their pockets. They looked with disappointment upon the cured girl, and with fury upon the man who had healed her. After conferring together, they determined to arraign these strangers as disturbers of the peace. They recognized them as Jews, and it was well known that the Roman rulers had much trouble everywhere with Jews. Springing forward through the crowd, they seized Paul and Silas, and dragged them along the roadway through the gates into the city and to the market place.

The Accused. There before the rulers these infuriated men cried out, "These men, being Jews, do exceedingly trouble our city, and teach customs which are not lawful for us to receive, neither to observe, being Romans. As Philippi was a Roman colony, the language of the accusation was doubtless Latin, and it is probable that Paul and Silas knew little of Latin. They may not have understood clearly the accusation against them. The magistrates, ready to please the people, and looking upon these Jews as forlorn and friendless strangers, commanded that their clothes be rent from them and that they be tied to posts and cruelly flogged. The multitude was pleased by this brutal treatment; and when the backs of Paul and Silas were bleeding from many stripes the magistrates ordered the missionaries to be cast into prison and kept safely.

In Prison. The instrument of punishment, the pillory, then in common use, had five places for feet, wrists and neck, but in this case the jailer fastened only their feet in the stocks. Although bruised, bleeding, shut up in a foul cell, and unable to move their feet, Paul and Silas were, nevertheless, not cast down. The consciousness that they were suffering for Christ's sake sustained their spirits. The dark midnight could not shut out Christ. Instead of groans there were heard prayers and hymns of praise to God. One can imagine that they sang some of the great Psalms which have been the consolation of multitudes throughout the ages. This was a wonderful triumph of the spirit over the flesh; of faith over circumstances. No better proof could be given than this.

Illustration. John Bunyan lay in the jail of Bedford for twelve years, but out of that prison came the immortal allegory, "Pilgrim's Progress", which has cheered, comforted and guided more souls than any other single book the Bible excepted.

A Jailer Converted. Suddenly there was a great earthquake, which shook the prison to its foundation. The doors flew open, and the stocks were loosed. The jailer, roused from sleep and beholding the doors ajar, thought his prisoners had fled, and terrified at the thought of having to face the rulers under such circumstances he drew his sword and was about to fall upon it when Paul cried out, "Do thyself no harm; for we are all here." Relieved by the sound of a prisoner's voice, the jailer called for a light, sprang into the dungeon and fell down with awe before the untterrified Paul and Silas, who, though freed from the stocks, had not fled through the open doors. Then he brought them out and cried, "Sirs, what must I do to be saved?" There in the prison Paul declared to the trembling jailer the great truth, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved and thy house."

And now "the prison is converted into a church." The jailer did not wait for morning or for a more convenient season. He must have light now; he must find the way of life that selfsame hour. Earnestly, with passionate eagerness, he forgets all else to inquire about Christ. The burden of sin concerns him more than does his personal safety. God's Spirit leads him to the feet of the appointed teachers of Christ. Blessed moment when he utters his cry of faith and receives the truth.

When the jailer had led them into his house and assembled his family, Paul taught him and them concerning Christ. They all believed, and were baptized. Now, changed from the unfeeling keeper to a Christian brother the jailer washed their wounds and set food before them.

Release. Perhaps the magistrates were frightened by the earthquake. Perhaps on reflection they repented their haste. In any case, when the day dawned, they sent officers to the jail to bid the jailer, "Let those men go." Their keeper was overjoyed, and he gladly carried the message to Paul, bidding him depart in peace. But Paul felt that he and Silas had been outraged as Roman citizens so he bade the messengers return and tell the rulers that as they had publicly beaten and without trial, two Roman citizens, and had cast them into prison they would not accept a secret deliverance. "Let them come themselves and fetch us out," he said.

When these words were reported to the magistrates they were terrified. They had not suspected that these Jews were also Roman citizens. They knew that if Paul and Silas made public complaint of the treatment they had received the authorities at Rome would deprive them of their offices. Very meekly, therefore, the magistrates came into the jail, made due apologies, explanations and excuses and led the men away from the prison, thus acknowledging before the people that a wrong had been committed.

To avoid further trouble, the rulers urged Paul and Silas to depart from the city. Unwilling, however, to go without seeing the brethren and giving them parting words of exhortation, they first visited the house of Lydia; then called together their disciples and delivered to them their counsels. Then they departed leaving Luke in Philippi.

Practical Truths. 1. The greatest of questions is "What must I do to be saved?" Do not let another hour pass without accepting salvation in Christ. 2. Be poor rather than enrich yourselves with the blood-money of other souls. 3. Sing praise to God in your greatest trials. 4. Seek not only your own salvation but that of your household. 5. There is something to be thankful for in every condition. 6. We can bring the power of the Gospel to bear against all evil spirits, forces, dispositions, and works.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

And the brethren immediately sent away Paul and Silas by

unto Berea: who coming thither went into the

of the Jews. These were more noble than those in Thessalonica, in that they received the word with a readiness of mind, and

daily,
whether those things
were so.
Therefore
many of them believed;
also of honourable which were Greeks, and of men, not a few. But when the Jews of Thessalonica had knowledge that the word of God was preached of Paul at Berea, they came thither also, and stirred up the

And
then immediately
the brethren sent away
Paul to go as it were
to the

but Silas and Timotheus abode there still.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 17:1-15.

Prayer: Our Father, We thank Thee that Thy servants of old endured hardships that the Gospel might be given to the world. We pray for strength that we may bear the lesser burdens given unto us. Grant unto us the same spirit of devotion that was vouchsafed to them. In the name of Christ. Amen.

"We need not bid, for cloister'd cell,
Our neighbor and our work farewell,
The trivial round, the common task,
Will furnish all we ought to ask;
Room to deny ourselves—a road
To bring us, daily, nearer God."

—Kemble.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 51-54. Places, Amphipolis, Apollonia, Thessalonica, Berea. Persons, Paul, Silas, Timothy, Jews, Greeks, Jason, converts and brethren.

Scripture Setting: Study of Reasoning. With God, Job 13:3, 17-28. God reasons with men, Ex. 4:11; 20:5, 11. Isa. 1:18; 5:3, 4; 43:26; Hos. 4:1. Mic. 6:2. Natural understanding, Dan. 4:36. To be applied to religion, 1 Cor. 10:15; 1 Pet. 3:15. Not a sufficient guide, Deut. 12:8; Prov. 3:5; 14:12. Of the Pharisees, Luke 5:21, 22; 20:5. Of Paul from Scriptures, Acts 18:4, 19; 24:25. The Gospel cannot be explained by, 1 Cor. 1:18-28; 2:1-14.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The Thessalonians were emotional converts, not students of the Scriptures. Being not well-grounded they were but half-defenders of Paul and Christianity during the disturbance by the rabble. 2. The Bereans were thoughtful students of the Scriptures. Daily research in their Bibles convinced them of the truth of Paul's teaching. To search the Scriptures with an open mind and an open heart is to accept Christ. 3. In his clear arguments that Christ was the expected Messiah Paul's ultimate appeal in all cases was to the Scriptures. 4. Jealousy of temporal power and established custom creates enmity toward Christ. 5. The church is now, and always will be subject to the teachings of the Bible. 6. Traditions are not to be exalted to a place beside the Bible. 7. Daily Bible study is essential to the best results in Christian life and work.

TURNING THE WORLD UPSIDE DOWN.

Having left Philippi, Paul, Silas and Timothy took the main road, known as the Via Ignatia, for the city of Amphipolis, about thirty-three miles distant. Paul found no synagogue at that place so he passed on the next day toward Apollonia, thirty miles further. Staying there but a night, they pushed forward forty miles more to Thessalonica, the capital of Macedonia, and a great commercial center, also the seat of the Roman proconsul. It is now a seaport of Macedonia, known as Saloniki.

In the Synagogue. The chain of synagogues that reached to the towns and cities where Jews of the dispersion were numerous, had a link in Thessalonica. After finding lodging and opportunity to earn his livelihood, it was Paul's custom always to seek out the Jewish place of worship and address his countrymen. For three Sabbaths Paul "reasoned with them from the Scriptures." As the word "reasoned" is literally "dialogued," this meant that Paul asked and answered questions. Any one in the congregation was privileged to make inquiries. We are not to think of him as giving only regular addresses, but as determined to satisfy the minds of the people assembled, listening to their queries, objections and difficulties. The basis of Paul's teachings was the Old Testament Scriptures, which they and he accepted as the Word of God. He had been trained from childhood in the knowledge of the Old Testament, and for years had studied in Jerusalem at the feet of Gamaliel, one of the greatest and best of the rabbis. Since his conversion, he had spent many years in investigating what the Old Testament says about Christ. Every Jewish congregation also was instructed in the prophecies about the Messiah. Paul and his hearers could, therefore, agree as to the fact that the Messiah had been foretold, and they could agree as to many passages that had a bearing on the coming of the Messiah.

The Messiah Is Jesus. Paul's special task with these people, then, was to show that the Messiah was not foretold as a temporal king but as a spiritual Savior; that He was to suffer, to be put to death, and to rise from the dead. By calling attention to the passages of Scripture that foretold these things, Paul could convince many minds that their old conception of a temporal Messiah was an error. When they had agreed that the Messiah was to come as a spiritual Savior, even to be put to death and to rise from the dead, Paul had the further task of making it clear that Jesus of Nazareth was the Christ foretold. He could present the commonly accepted facts of the life of Jesus: that he had been born in Bethlehem; had grown up in Nazareth; had gathered disciples and taught for several years; had wrought miracles; had been arraigned at the instance of the Jewish rulers and priests before the Roman authorities; and had been crucified. It could also be made clear that His disciples asserted He had risen from the dead and that they had seen and talked with Him after His resurrection. At this point, Paul could add the weight of his own experience; could relate how he had been notoriously a persecutor of the Christians; had undergone a sudden conversion, and had seen for himself the risen Christ. "This Jesus," he said, "whom I preach unto you is Christ."

Thessalonian Converts. A few Jews were converted, but the majority of the Hebrews refused to believe in a crucified Redeemer. Many Greeks and many women of the higher ranks, however, accepted Paul's personal testimony as to the risen Christ, but they failed to study the Scriptures and to confirm his teachings by the Word of God. Thus their grasp of the truth was much slighter than it would have been after diligent study. As Greeks, they were, of course, without that knowledge of the Scriptures which was common among Jews, nevertheless those who professed themselves to be converted were numerous.

Jealous Enemies. The conversion of such great numbers to a crucified Messiah whom they rejected; the success of Paul and his companions, awakened the jealousy of the Jews. Perhaps, meanwhile, there had come reports as to what Paul and his companions had done elsewhere, for the synagogues were in close communication with one another. It is certain that the Jewish opponents of Christianity in each place visited, sent scandalous messages to other towns in regard to Paul and the other gospel messengers, warning the Jews against them. The Jews in Thessalonica, therefore, began to spread abroad tales that Paul, Silas and Timothy, as well as Christian workers in Palestine, Syria, and elsewhere, were engaged in fostering a general revolution throughout the world. They incited the mob, and having gone far enough to realize that they had sympathizers they led the rabble to the house of Jason, where the missionaries were being entertained. They assaulted the house, and, not finding Paul or the other leaders, they dragged Jason and certain brethren before the rulers of the city.

"These that have turned the world upside down are come hither also," they cried out. They accused Jason of having received them and declared him to be one of them, adding, "these all do contrary to the decrees of Cæsar, saying, that there is another king; one Jesus." It was the old cry of the enemies of Christ; the accusation of being foes of the established order of things. Doubtless the Jews knew that Christ's followers had no intention of antagonizing the government of Cæsar, and that the Kingdom of the Lord was spiritual. But for their purposes it suitied well to claim that these Christians were enemies of the Roman power. The rulers in Thessalonica, however, proved to be less susceptible to influence from the mob than had those in Philippi. Apparently they saw that Jason and his friends did not look like men who could disturb the throne of Cæsar. They demanded only that they give security to keep the peace, and then they let them go.

In Berea. Finding further successful work at that place impossible just then, Paul and Silas set out for Berea, leaving Timothy behind. Probably Jason and others had been forced to pledge their goods that no further disturbance would arise, and Paul would consider the welfare of these brethren and deem it best to depart. They took a little-frequented road and came to an unimportant town, where for a time they could have refuge. Once more they sought a synagogue. The congregation proving to be "more noble" in spirit than the Jews in Thessalonica. When Paul argued from the Psalms, from Isaiah, and from Habakkuk, of the Messiah who was to suffer, die, and rise from the dead, these "received the word with all readiness of mind and searched the Scriptures daily, whether these things were so." Grounding their faith in such daily study of the Scriptures, many were converted, including many Greek women of rank.

But foes were on the scent. The Jews at Thessalonica learned of the whereabouts of Paul; heard of the effect his teaching was having, and with the tirelessness of hate, pursued him into his refuge. There they stirred up and troubled the multitude. The brethren, therefore, appointed certain men to take Paul to the sea and accompany him to Athens.

Illustration: A great many people, young and old, are woefully ignorant of the Bible. A little boy, when asked what was his favorite text in the Bible, repeated the stirring order of General Dix when he was Secretary of War: "If any man hauls down the American flag, shoot him on the spot."

Practical Truths. 1. It should be our fixed custom to attend public worship. 2. It is essential that emotion enter into our religion, but it is vital that we have also a thoughtful grasp of the truth. 3. We must expect religion to make such changes in our natures, in our lives and in society at large, as to be in a real sense a "turning of the world upside down." 4. It is true nobility to have the mind ready to receive truth. 5. We are not called upon to blindly accept any teaching, even from an Apostle. We should daily search the Scriptures. 6. The study of the Scriptures is a great privilege, as well as a sacred duty. 7. We should oppose in ourselves and in others a fanatical spirit. 8. There is no excuse for a negative Christian.

PAUL AT ATHENS.

Then Paul stood in the midst of

and said, Ye men
of

I perceive that in all things ye are too superstitious. For as I passed by, and beheld your devotions, I found an altar with this inscription,

Whom therefore ye ignorantly worship, him declare I unto you. God that made the

and all things therein, seeing that he is Lord
of heaven and earth, dwelleth
not in

made with hands;
neither is worshipped with men's hands, as though he needed anything, seeing he giveth to all

and breath,
and all things;
and hath made of one blood
all

of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth, and hath determined the times before appointed, and the bounds of their habitation: that they should seek the Lord, if haply they might feel after him, and find him, though he be not far from every one of us.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 17:15-34.

Prayer: Our Father, We adore Thee as the maker of Heaven and earth. In Thee we live and move and have our being. Keep up from unworthy thoughts of Thee. As we are Thy offspring, may we be lifted above idolatry of the things that are made. In the name of Christ. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 51-54. Place, Athens. Persons, Paul, Stoics, Epicureans, and people.

Scripture Setting: Study of Idols and Idolatry. Manufacture of, Acts 19:24, 25. Manufacture, forbidden, Ex. 20:4. Made of gold, Ex. 32:3, 4. Isa. 2:20. Of silver, Isa. 30:22. Wood and stone, Lev. 26:1; Ezek. 20:32. Prayer to unanswered, 1 Kings 18:25-29. Sun, moon and stars, Deut. 4:19. Images of angels, Col. 2:18. Animals, Rom. 1:23. Gods of Egypt, Ex. 12:12. Golden calf, Ex. 32:4. Pictures on walls, Ezek. 8:10. Earrings, Gen. 35:4. Worshippers not enter Kingdom of God, 1 Cor. 6:9. Idolaters lost, Rev. 21:8.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Man must have a God. 2. He knows the true God only through revelation. 3. The Athenian philosophers could "Fear not to build thine eyrie in the heights,

Bright with celestial day,
And trust thyself unto thine inmost soul
In simple faith, alway;
And God shall make Divinely real
The highest forms of thy ideal."

ITS RELATIONS.

mock but could not find God. There is no enduring strength in a philosophy of culture that does not include Christ. 4. The wisdom of Athens did not satisfy the conscience. 5. Doubt and the absence of hope, together with vice, helped to pull down Athenian greatness. Although Paul adapted himself to his learned audience in a city where intellect was worshipped rather than goodness, the converts were few. 7. The spirit of novelty-seeking leads few to the truth. 8. The aspirations of men prove God, but Christian tact and courtesy seldom fail to gain a hearing. 9. Even so great a man as Paul could not be certain of immediate results. The Athenians in not accepting Christ, rejected Him. 10. Christianity alone makes known the true God.

AMONG MARBLE DEITIES.

Paul had come to Athens, the city most famous for intellect, art, and poetry. When he was hurried away from Berea by friends, he left Silas and Timothy behind for a time, that they might establish the disciples in the faith, but he sent word by those who accompanied him to Athens to bid Silas and Timothy follow him speedily. During the days that he was alone in the beautiful Greek city, he seemed to have divided his time between walking about beholding the temples and statues, and reasoning with the few Jews in their synagogue. Nothing is related of what he said to them, save that "he disputed in the synagogue with the Jews, and with the devout persons." We are not told that he made any converts among these people.

In the Market Place. In Athens, there are four hills, and in the valley between them was the Agora; the market place—a public resort. It was on this spot where Socrates had discoursed five hundred years before, that Paul now began daily to reason with the people.

During his walks about the city he had been most impressed by the great multitude of statues. In Athens there were more statues than in all Greece besides. Certain of these were figures of heroic men, but a large number were representations of gods and goddesses. The most famous of all was that of Athene by Phidias. To Paul, any material representation of a divinity was an idol. We today look upon those wonderful Greek statues merely as works of art, and the sculptors themselves may have considered them as such only; nevertheless, they were representations of divinity, and the masses of the people considered them objects of worship.

Illustration: Socrates visited the shops of the sculptors, and observing them at their work, he said, "How careful these men are and how industrious in making stones look like men, while men in the meantime, turn themselves into very blocks and stones."

The Man and The Fact. The Greeks in general believed, or had believed, in the gods and goddesses of Olympus. They were polytheists, that is, worshippers of many gods. The patron goddess of their chief city was Athene. A widespread doubt and scepticism had come over the pagan world, and many of the Athenians had ceased to believe in their own gods. Nearly all their philosophers were, indeed, sceptics. Paul had come to a city of art and intellect; a city supposed to be loyal to the gods of Olympus; while, in fact, there was little real faith in anything.

To this confused and sceptical multitude Paul preached two great certainties: a Man and a Fact—Jesus and the Resurrection. Here he told that Jesus, who had lived and died in Palestine, was the Son of God and the Savior of the world; that He had taught the true way of life; had wrought miracles; had risen from the dead and had ascended into Heaven. He testified that he himself had seen the risen Lord and had been commissioned by Him to go and speak to the nations the Gospel of Christ.

Epicureans and Stoics.—In Paul's audience there were certain philosophers and their followers. Two schools of philosophy especially seemed to have been represented. The Epicureans, followers of Epicurus, were materialists, that is, they did not believe in the spirit, but only in matter. They taught that the body is all there is of man; that the best way to live is to get as much pleasure as possible, as death is the end of life. The Epicureans, therefore, denied what Paul preached, and considered the resurrection was impossible and unbelievable. The Stoics, on the other hand, taught that a stern morality should be cultivated, but that man had nothing to expect or to hope from the gods; that fate was over all, and that man's duty was simply to bear the ills of life without complaint or hope. The Stoics argued against Paul's teaching, declaring that Jesus could not be the Son of God; that God takes no interest in men.

A Sower of Words. The light-hearted novelty-seeking crowd of Athenians in general stood by smiling and mocking. Some said, "What will this babbler say?" Others, only half-listening, as if attention were not worth while, caught a few words and jumped at a conclusion. "He seemeth to be a setter forth of strange gods."

To The Areopagus. The writer of Acts does not indicate that Paul was seriously arraigned before judges. The chapter seems rather to suggest that these jesting people surrounded him and pushed him along up the hill called, in Greek, the Hill of Ares, and in Latin, Mar's Hill, to the place where the city judges often sat. There, when he was further elevated above the crowd than was possible in the valley, they cried, "May we know what this new doctrine, whereof thou speakest, is? For thou bringest certain strange things to our ears: we would know, therefore, what these things mean." The statement of Luke that "all the Athenians and strangers which were there spent their time in nothing else, but either to tell, or to hear some new thing," conveys the impression that their present conduct toward Paul was a whim of novelty-seekers rather than an arraignment before judges.

Paul's Great Sermon. Before that jesting crowd, Paul stood and uttered those mighty truths which have outlived in influence the words of Greek orator and poet. It is believed that he did not call them "superstitious," as we read in the King James version. He cried out, "Athenians, I observe you to be in all things eminently religious." As an example of this, Paul turns from all their temples and statues to one altar which bears the inscription, "To the Unknown God." Paul, an orator who had been called Mercury by pagan islanders; who addressed this audience after the manner of their own orators as "Athenians"; who, instead of denouncing them, compliments them as religious; who chooses an inscription from one of their altars as his theme; this wonderful man seizes their attention in spite of themselves. He declares he is about to tell them not of strange gods, but of One whose altar they themselves had erected. "Whom, therefore, ye ignorantly worship; Him declare I unto you." Grandly he tells them of "God that made the world and all things therein." "The Lord of Heaven and earth"; "He giveth to all life, and breath, and all things; and hath made of one blood all nations of men for to dwell on all the face of the earth." He appeals to their own poets, "For we are also His offspring." From God's fatherhood, Paul argues the folly of idolatry. "Being then the offspring of God, we ought not to think that the Godhead is like unto gold, or silver, or stone." Facing the Parthenon, he cried, "The Lord of Heaven and earth dwelleth not in temples made with hands." He declared that God had been forbearing with men in times of ignorance, but "now commandeth men everywhere to repent." He told them how God has appointed a day of judgment, and has ordained a Judge; "whereof He has given assurance unto all men, in that He hath raised Him from the dead."

The Mocking Athenians. His hearers could not help being impressed by much of what Paul said. They must have felt its universal truth. But when he announced the resurrection of the dead, he lost their sympathy. Before him rose a sound of derision. Here was a novelty for Athenians, but it was one beyond their conception. Yet, beside the mocking voices were others that said, "We will hear thee again of this matter." Even in that audience were some souls that were impressed. So in mocking, intellectual, novelty-seeking Athens, a beginning had been made for the work of Christ. Today in the city that was the greatest intellectual center of the ancient world, Christ is honored and adored, while the gods and goddesses have become myths.

Illustration: It is told of Michael Angelo that one day as he was walking with some friends in an obscure street of Florence he saw a fine block of marble lying neglected in a yard, and half covered with rubbish. Although not dressed for rough work, Angelo at once fell to clearing away the debris and strove to lift the block from the mire in which it lay. His companions in astonishment asked him what he was doing and what he wanted with that worthless piece of rock. "Oh," said he, "there's an angel in the stone, and I must get it out." So Paul was engaged in getting the angel out of the rough blocks of sinful and ignorant people.

Practical Truths. 1. We should be stirred in spirit by the presence of sin and error. 2. Our personal observation of life should be used to stimulate our zeal. 3. The higher our truth and the finer the life and actions, the more surely will we arouse mockery in certain minds. 4. The mere seeking for novelty is an unworthy aim. Art has a higher purpose, but it is capable of ignoble use. 5. Anything that leads away from God is sin. 6. A positive faith is necessary to draw believers to Christ. 7. The Gospel wins where arguments fail. 8. As Christ was the turning point of history, so should He be the turning point in every life.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

After these things Paul departed from Athens, and came to and found a certain Jew named Aquila, born in Pontus, lately come from Italy

with his

Priscilla; (because that Claudius had commanded all Jews to depart from and came unto them.

And
because he was of the same craft, he abode with them, and wrought:
for by their occupation they were

And he reasoned in the

every sabbath, and persuaded the Jews and the Greeks. And when Silas and Timotheus were come from Macedonia,

was pressed in the spirit, and testified to the Jews that Jesus was Christ.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 18:1-17.

Prayer: Our Father, Thou dost send Thy light and truth into the midst of darkness and sin. Thou art not content to have the children of men continue in evil ways and afar from Thyself. We thank Thee for Thy changeless, loving desire to draw men unto Thyself. Make us glad and willing to be bearers of Thy light unto sinners. In the name of Christ. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 52-54. Place, Corinth. Persons, Paul, Silas, Timothy, Aquila, Priscilla, Crispus Justus, Gallio, Sosthenes, Jews, and Christians.

Scripture Setting: Study of the Cross. Preaching the cross, 1 Cor. 1:17, 18. The law not sufficient, Gal. 5:11. Glorifying in, Gal. 6:14. Enemies of, Phil. 3:18. Bearing, Matt. 16:24. The reproach of, Gal. 3:13. The flesh crucified, Gal. 5:16, 17, 24. Loss for Christ, Phil. 3:7-9. For sake of the weaker, 1 Cor. 8:10-13. As Christ suffered, 1 Pet. 4:1.

Life and Conduct Setting: Friendship with Paul means acquaintance with Christ. 1. Aquila, Priscilla and Paul working at their trade and planning for the spreading of the Kingdom of Christ, show admirably how the material and spiritual can be nobly combined. 2. The Scriptures tell us of the trade of Paul, while secular history tells of the importance of that trade in his native land, giving us another of the many points at which the learning of the world confirms the sacred narrative. 3. Paul declaring Christ to be the Jewish Messiah is driven from the synagogue only to find that Justus, a Roman colonist, has opened his house to the preaching of the Gospel. 4. Vice-degraded, commercial Corinth afforded a glorious field for preaching the truth.

WHERE COMMERCE REIGNED.

Leaving Athens, Paul set out for Corinth. It is probable that Paul went by water to within a few miles of Corinth. The distance by land is forty miles, while a sail of five hours would bring him to Cenchreæ and leave a walk of only eight miles to the city. In Paul's day, Corinth was the Roman capital of Achaia. The old Greek city had been ruined, and a new city had been rebuilt by Julius Cæsar and peopled by Roman veterans and freedmen. It speedily had become a rich and famous center. Jews had come as merchantmen. Greeks had flocked thither, attracted by the fame of the place, and by the Isthmian games. Stately buildings arose. The luxuries of the world poured into this capital. Corinth of that period had been called "the Vanity Fair of the Roman Empire." The population was a mixture of Romans, Greeks, Jews, Phœnicians, and slaves.

Its Immorality. Corinth was perhaps the most immoral city of that day. This condition arose partly from its vast numbers of slaves and partly from the presence of hosts of sailors. The religion of the people was celebrated with scenes of wildest debauchery. Drunkenness was almost universal. The chief entertainments of the people were fights of wild beasts, impure theaters, and athletic contests. Trickery, cheating and fraud were very general in the trade of the place.

Paul Finds Friends. Into this brilliant, beautiful, evil city Paul came to preach Christ. Its very wickedness must have seemed a pitiful appeal for a Divine Redeemer. Coming thither alone (for Silas and Timothy were for the time left behind), he must have felt deeply his solitude, until, looking for opportunity to labor at his trade, he discovered that a converted Jew and his wife had their temporary home in Corinth. Aquila and Priscilla were of Jewish stock, but it is entirely probable that they had become Christians before they met Paul. They had been living in Rome when the Emperor Claudius issued a decree expelling all Jews from that city. For two hundred years Christians were confounded by the Romans with the Jews, and were looked upon merely as a sect of the Jewish religion. Aquila and Priscilla were tent-makers by trade, and it may have been while in search of work at this occupation that Paul met these persons, who were thereafter to be his close friends and helpers. With them he now joined in tentmaking and here in Corinth he dwelt and preached for a long time.

Preaching to The Jews. Paul began at once to speak in the synagogue on the Sabbath, seeking to persuade Jews and Greeks. In Athens he had attempted to convince the Athenians by polished address and by interpreting their religion as having a common natural basis with the true one. Now in Corinth he determined to use no "enticing words of man's wisdom," but to ignore philosophy, and to preach only "Christ and Him crucified." When Silas and Timothy rejoined him, he redoubled his efforts to convince the Jews that Jesus was the Christ. But the people of the synagogue rose up against him, railing at him and his doctrine. So violent were their demonstrations that it was evident it was useless to attempt further to convince them. So Paul, standing before the congregation shook his raiment, after the Jewish manner, saying, "Your blood be upon your own heads. I am clean (that is, from further responsibility for you): from henceforth I will go unto the Gentiles."

The Church in a House. Leaving the synagogue, Paul and his followers went into the house of a man named Titus Justus, whose home was near the Jewish church. This man, probably, had been a Jewish proselyte, and he was converted by Paul. Wonderful to relate also, in spite of the state of mind of the Jews in general, the chief ruler of the synagogue, Crispus, was converted with his whole family, and these were baptized by Paul. Stephanas and his household were added from the Gentiles. Then, for several months Paul continued to preach in a room of the house of Justus. Many of the converts were of lowly rank, yet among them were certain of the richer people, as Gaius, Chloe, and Erastus, the chamberlain of Corinth. During the two years in which they remained in Corinth, Paul and his companions extended their work into the towns round about. They founded a little church at Cenchreae, and there were Christians in many of the villages of that region.

Illustration: A gentleman once took an acquaintance to the upper porches of his house to show him his estate. Waving his hand around he said, "This is all mine." His friend said, "Do you see that little village yonder? Well, there lives a poor woman in that village who can say more than you." "Why, what can she say?" "She can say, 'Christ is mine!'"

Before Gallio. Now that Paul had finally broken away from the Jews and had established a church near them, they excommunicated him, denounced him and his followers, and strove in every way to interfere with his work. But Paul was comforted by a vision in which the Lord appeared to him and said, "Be not afraid, but speak, and hold not thy peace; for I am with thee; and no man shall set on thee to hurt thee; for I have much people in this city."

The hatred and antagonism of the Jews finally came to a crisis when the new proconsul Gallio, a brother of Seneca, was appointed.

The Jews thought they could influence this mild-mannered person and make what tumult they chose. They, therefore, seized Paul and brought him before the proconsul's judgment seat, but the Roman looked upon the excited throng and the prisoner and awaited developments. The spokesman of the Jews cried out, "This fellow persuadeth men to worship God contrary to the law." In spite of the fact that the Emperor had expelled

Jews from Rome, the Jewish religion was rated as a legalized religion in the Empire. Under the Roman rule, some religions were "legalized" and some "unlegalized." These Jews attempted to make clear to Gallio that while he might think that Judaism and Christianity were the same thing, this was not really the case. They declared that Paul was preaching what was not legalized Judaism at all. Paul was about to speak, but Gallio ignored him; interrupted the Jews, and said in substance, "Had this been a matter of legal injury or a moral offence it would be reasonable that I listen to you. But if you come before me with questions about words and names and your own law, I am not called upon to be a judge of such things."

Gallio discerned that Paul was brought before him by the hatred of the Jews and not because he had done anything wrong. He, therefore, ordered these men to be driven from before his judgment seat. The pagans who were present, seeing that Gallio was indifferent and that the Jews were being hurried out by the officials, joined in and laid hold of the ruler of the synagogue who had succeeded Crispus, one by name Sosthenes, and flogged him before the judgment seat. Gallio, who was familiar with the fanaticism of the Jews, perhaps thought that it was well for them to have a lesson. So he did not interfere. In this way Gallio came to stand to the minds of many people as a type of indifference.

Illustration.—When the tyrant Maxentius learned that Constantine the Great was coming to Rome, he ordered his soldiers to erect a bridge of boats over the Tiber and lay the planks on the boats, so that when the army should come upon the planks, the boats would sink and thus drown the men. But Maxentius, hearing the sudden approach of Constantine, was in such a rage that he rushed out of the gates of Rome, ordering his soldiers to follow him. In his anger he forgot what he had ordered to be done, and led his men onto the bridge. The boats sank and he and his followers were drowned.

Practical Truths. 1. Self-support should be every one's ambition. 2. The Jewish plan of having every boy learn a trade, even if he did not follow it, is worthy of modern imitation. 3. A pure life is necessary to an uplifting influence. 4. It is possible to live a good life in the midst of wickedness. 5. The word of God prevails under true discipleship. 6. We should be bold in standing for and proclaiming the truth. 7. Christ says to His workers now, as ever, "Lo, I am with you always." 8. Those who attempt to make trouble for others often end in entangling themselves. Slander, malice and all evil passions recoil upon the authors. 9. True strength for work comes only from an assurance of Christ's presence, and the certainty that the work is that of Christ. This brings confidence in the success of the work itself, no matter what happens to the worker.

Then certain of the vagabond Jews, exorcists, took upon them to call over them which had evil spirits the name of the Lord Jesus, saying, We adjure you by Jesus whom Paul preacheth. And there were of one Sceva, a Jew, and chief of the which did so. And the evil spirit answered and said, Jesus I know, and Paul I know; but who are ye? And the man in whom the evil spirit was leaped and overcame them, and prevailed against them, so that they naked and wounded. And this was known to all the Jews and Greeks also dwelling at Ephesus; and fear fell on them all, and the name of the Lord Jesus was magnified. And many that believed came, and confessed, and shewed their deeds. Many of them also which used curious arts brought their together, and before all men: and they counted the price of them, and found it fifty thousand pieces of silver. So mightily grew the word of God and prevailed.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 18:18-28; 19:1-20.

Prayer: Our Father, Thy truth is pure, and it purifies the heart and the life. It makes no compromises with evil. It will not accept even the testimony of evil beings. We rejoice that it cleanses like fire, and we pray that it may cleanse our hearts from all insincerity and every wrong desire. In the name of Christ. Amen.

"Wherever in the world I am,
In whatsoever estate,
I have a fellowship with hearts
To keep and cultivate;
And a work of lowly love to do,
For the Lord on whom I wait."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 53-55. Places, Cenchreae, Ephesus, Jerusalem, Antioch, Galatia, Phrygia. Persons, Paul, Aquila, Priscilla, Apollos, sons of Sceva, exorcists, Jews and Ephesians.

Scripture Setting: Study of Money. Silver used as, Gen. 17:12, 13. Ex. 12:44. Num. 3:48-51. 2 Chron. 24:5. Gold used as, Gen. 13:2. Copper used as, Mark 6:8. Weighed, Gen. 23:16. Image on, Matt. 22:20, 21. Conscience, Judges 17:2. Matt. 27:3, 5. Atonement, Ex. 30:12-16. Priest's portion, 2 Kings 12:16. Lust for, punished, Amos 8:5-8. Love of, the root of evil, 1 Tim. 6:10.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Paul persevered

in each city, in first offering the Gospel to the Jews in the synagogue after he might seem to us to have been justified in ignoring his countrymen altogether. 2. The desire for Christian fellowship was so strong in Paul as to carry him on a long journey to Jerusalem. 3. Apollos showed an admirable willingness to be further instructed. Christianity that does not include the gift of the Holy Spirit is imperfect. 4. The excellent Christians, Aquila and Priscilla, though not public teachers, went about matters in the right way by inviting Apollos to their homes and giving him privately the benefit of their better knowledge of Christ.

CAPTURING MORE TERRITORY FOR CHRIST.

After his experience before Gallio, Paul continued his preaching in Corinth for many days. He then decided to go to Jerusalem to keep a feast and visit the brethren there. He had not been in that city for almost three years. Having made his farewells to the Christians of Corinth, he, in the company of Aquila and Priscilla, started for Cenchreae. Paul considered that the Jewish law and customs were not binding either on the Gentiles or on Christian Jews, but that those who had been born Jews, like himself, could keep feasts and follow certain customs, if by so doing they could help themselves spiritually or keep in closer touch with Jews who might thus be converted. Paul, who evidently had reasons for wishing to be in Jerusalem at the season of a national feast, had imposed upon himself a vow, after the Jewish manner, possibly in gratitude for some deliverance. This vow of a temporary Nazarite implied abstinence from wine and letting the hair grow long. While this vow required that the head should be shaved in Jerusalem, it seems to have been permitted to Jews who dwelt far away from their capital to have the hair cut elsewhere. The hair thus removed was preserved to be burned in the fire of the peace offerings. Paul had his hair shorn at Cenchreae, and then took ship for Ephesus.

A Brief Stay in Ephesus. While Paul's destination was Jerusalem, it was found convenient to take ship for Ephesus rather than to make the whole voyage directly. Besides, it was to Ephesus that Aquila and Priscilla wished now to go, probably as a more favorable place to carry on their trade. There, Paul at once addressed himself to the Jews, who appear to have received him favorably. Indeed, they invited him to remain with them a longer time, but his vow demanded that he hasten toward Jerusalem. Promising to come again, "if God will," Paul sailed for Cæsarea. From that port he set forth for Jerusalem, to make report of the churches he had founded at the many points included in this his second journey. He brought word of the converts in Philippi, Thessalonica, and Corinth. But it appears that the Judaizers (that is, the Christians who still claimed that the Jewish observances were binding, and who did not therefore agree with Paul's liberal interpretation) had been gaining great influence with the Jerusalem church. For this reason Paul's reception by the mother church was by no means so cordial and enthusiastic as it ought to have been for the man who carried the Gospel into so many countries and into Europe itself. Luke, the writer of Acts, simply states that he "saluted the church" and then set out for Antioch, where we may be sure that he was received in the heartiest manner. Having spent some time in Antioch, he started on his third missionary journey, visiting the churches in Galatia and Phrygia, and perhaps in other places.

Apollos. While Paul had been absent from Ephesus, on his journey to Jerusalem and Antioch, there had come to Ephesus a man named Apollos, who preached with great earnestness and effect. He was a Jew from Alexandria, a city famous for its learning and particularly noted for the culture the Jews there attained during the life of Philo, one of their greatest teachers. This man Apollos had been trained thoroughly in the Old Testament Scriptures, and he had become a Christian in the sense that he had been taught and baptized by the disciples of John the Baptist. Apollos had an extraordinary gift of eloquence, so that his name in that day became the synonym for powerful and moving speech. Coming to Ephesus, he entered the synagogue and preached to the Jews concerning Christ. Aquila and Priscilla, having heard him, and recognizing that his knowledge of Christ was imperfect, being only such as a disciple of John the Baptist might have, took him to their home and conferred with him concerning Christ. They showed him that John had been but the herald of Christ, and they instructed him in the later life, works and teachings of Christ. Being thus advanced further in knowledge, Apollos preached with remarkable results. Aquila and Priscilla told Apollos of the work that had been accomplished in Corinth, and he desired to go thither to preach. These friends encouraged him to depart, and they gave him letters to the church there. In this city Apollos was enabled to help the believers and to confute the Jews.

Paul in Ephesus Again. Having made his visitation of the churches in Galatia and Phrygia, Paul now came to Ephesus, the city destined to become one of the greatest centers of Christianity. His first work was with certain disciples who, like Apollos, had been imperfectly instructed, being, indeed, followers of John the Baptist rather than of Christ. When asked, "Have ye received the Holy Ghost since ye believed"? they told him, "We have not so much as heard whether there be any Holy Ghost." He asked, "Unto what then were ye baptized"? and they said, "Unto John's baptism." Paul then instructed them that John had baptized with the baptism of repentance, saying unto the people that they should believe on Him who should come after him, that is, on Jesus. So they were baptized in the name of the Lord Jesus, and when Paul laid his hands on them they received the Holy Ghost. There were about twelve of these men.

The Schoolroom of Tyrannus. Paul now entered into the synagogue and on the Sabbaths for three months he preached, endeavoring to persuade the Jews to believe in Christ. In spite of the fact that these people had at first received Paul favorably, there was now developing a strong opposition to him. They not only rejected, but they reviled him. They even took measures to hinder his work among the Gentiles. It was plain that again Paul must break away from his countrymen and from the synagogue. He summoned his converts around him and hired as a meeting place the schoolroom of a heathen sophist named Tyrannus. In Ephesus there were numerous schools of philosophy and rhetoric, such as that of Tyrannus. In such a room the Christians could meet daily. For two years Paul made Ephesus the center of his labors. Luke declares "all they which dwelt in Asia heard the word of the Lord Jesus, both Jews and Greeks."

Paul's Miracles. Not only were numerous converts made, but many miracles were wrought by Paul. So remarkable had his influence become that the people came with handkerchiefs and aprons and touching his body with them they carried them to the sick and by this means expelled diseases and evil spirits.

Wandering exorcists who noted that Paul wrought wonders in the name of Christ, adopted the same means, just as they would have used any supposedly magic spell or words. They would conjure the evil spirit, saying, "We adjure you by Jesus, whom Paul preacheth." They did this for money. A Jew named Sceva had seven sons who followed the occupation of exorcists and they strove to conjure in the name of Christ. But the evil spirit replied, "Jesus I know and Paul I know; but who are ye?" The man possessed by the evil spirit leaped upon these magicians and beat them, so that they ran away in terror. The report of this spread abroad, so that fear fell upon all, and the name of Christ was magnified.

Illustration: A captive was led before an Asiatic monarch. The sword was raised above his head to decapitate him, when, being excessively thirsty, he asked for a cup of water. This was handed him, but he held it as if fearful the sword would descend before he could drink. The king said, "Take courage, your life will be spared until you drink this water." Instantly the prisoner dashed the water upon the ground. The king's word had been passed and the captive believed him. It was enough. The monarch told him he was free.

Burning of the Books. Many of the magicians who dealt in trickery were so awed by the real miracles done in the name of Christ that they believed, repented and turned from their frauds. Some of these brought the books that were supposed to teach their art and burned them in a public place, before the multitude, that men might know they were giving up their pretenses. The value of these books has been estimated as more than ten thousand dollars. This remarkable incident must have added greatly to the fame of the Gospel in that region for we are told that "mightily grew the Word of God and prevailed."

Practical Truths. 1. Public confession and repentance for evil doing is the best beginning of a new life. 2. Disgrace is the inevitable end of every fraudulent career. 3. The word of man perishes, but the Word of God abides. 4. We should not make use of the name of Christ or of religion for selfish purposes. 5. Beware of superstition of all kinds and in every degree. 6. Splendid opportunity to work for God may be found in what seem the unlikely places.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

And the same time there arose no small stir about that way. For a certain man named Demetrius, a silversmith, which made silver for Diana, brought no small gain unto the craftsmen whom he called together with the of like occupation, and said, Sirs, ye know that by this craft we have our wealth. Moreover ye see and hear, that not alone at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much saying that they be no

which are made with hands: so that not only this our craft is in danger to be set at nought; but also that the

of the great goddess

should be despised, and her magnificence should be destroyed, whom all Asia and the world worshipped. And when they heard these sayings, they were full of wrath, and cried out, saying, Great is Diana of the Ephesians.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 19:21-41.

Prayer: Our Father, May we have part in the building of that spiritual temple which is to endure forever. We thank Thee that as it rises higher the temples of evil come nearer to their fall. Deliver, we pray Thee, all Thy children from every error, and bring every one to the knowledge of the truth. In the name of Christ. Amen.

"Trust no party, sect or faction;
Trust no leaders in the fight;
But in every word and action,
Trust in God and do the right.
Some will hate thee, some will love thee,
Some will flatter, some will slight.
Cease from man and look above thee,
Trust in God and do the right."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 57. Place, Ephesus. Persons, Paul, Demetrius, Alexander, Gaius and Aristarchus, Ephesians, Christians, Jews, the town clerk.

Scripture Setting: Study of Deceit. God abhors, Psa. 5:6. Tongue an instrument of, Rom. 3:13. Forbidden, Prov. 24:28. Shun those addicted to, Psa. 101:7. Wicked full of, Rom. 1:29. Wicked delight in, Prov. 20:17. False teachers are workers of, 2 Cor. 11:13. Impose on others by, Rom. 16:18. Hypocrites devise, Job 15:34, 35. Deceit hides knowledge of God, Jer. 9:6. Punishment of, Psa. 55:23.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Shrine making was remunerative but soul destroying. 2. Demetrius alarms masters, artists, and workmen through their common interests to make common cause against Christianity. 3. Loyalty to Christ imperils many money-making schemes. 4. The Gospel is often opposed through selfish interest. 5. Many think more of their earnings than of Christ or the welfare of their fellowmen. 6. Devotion to Diana—the worldly pride of the Ephesian—was made a subterfuge for joining in the riot. 7. By Christian enlightenment all unrighteousness in business will be destroyed.

CHRISTIANITY AND DIANA.

The chief object of worship in Ephesus and in Asia Minor was Diana. The attributes of the Ephesian Diana, however, differed greatly from those of the huntress of Greek mythology. Her characteristics were rather those of the Phœnician Astarte, and her worship was signalized by impurity and revolting debauchery. The first great temple to this goddess that was erected in Ephesus was constructed long before the time of Paul, and it was burned by Herostratus, B. C. 355. The temple had been rebuilt on a still more magnificent scale. It was a marvel of architecture, and it contained masterpieces of Phidias, Praxiteles, and other great sculptors. Many paintings by the most noted Greek painters adorned its walls. The temple was used also as the treasury house for the wealth of western Asia. Behind the altar hung a great purple curtain, and behind the curtain was a holy place where stood the image of Diana, the most venerated idol of classic paganism. Still further back was a room containing the treasures, and this was regarded as the safest bank in the ancient world, as it was under the protection of the goddess.

The Image of Diana. The famous image of Diana was believed to have fallen from Heaven. There is uncertainty as to whether it was composed of the wood of the vine, of ebony, cedar or of stone. In reality this image was hideous, being a mummy-like figure, with a trident in one hand and a club in the other. But superstition is not commonly repelled by unattractive aspects of the objects of its worship, and the very ugliness of this Diana seems to have added to the awe of the multitude. The adoration of the image was Asiatic rather than Greek. The priests of the goddess were a degraded company, but were recipients of large proceeds from extensive estates and fisheries. They, with priestesses and slaves, had entire charge of the worship of her who was regarded as the "mother of the gods." Flute playing, jangling of timbrels, and wild dances were included in this worship.

An Asylum. The temple of Diana with a considerable space round about it was considered sacred as a place of refuge. Criminals and evil-doers of all kinds could flee thither and be safe from pursuers. Consequently, there dwelt within the vicinity of the temple a multitude of the worst sort of men and women who had come thither to escape the just deserts of their offenses. Ephesus was also a center of every kind of superstition, therefore a resort of sorcerers, exorcists and impostors.

Makers of Images. In this center of superstition dwelt numerous workers in metals, gold, silver and copper, whose occupation it was to manufacture copies of the shrine of Diana and of her image. The month of May had now arrived, the time specially dedicated to this goddess. At this time was held the great fair, known as Ephesia, when hosts of people came from all parts of Asia. The season was observed with every sort of display and revelry. The streets were filled with processions, and the theater and stadium were crowded by those who desired to listen to music, see horse races, athletic shows, or contests between men and beasts. During this festival the makers of images reaped their chief harvest of sales to visitors to the city.

Christ and Diana. For more than two years, Paul and his co-laborers had been proclaiming the Gospel to the people of Ephesus and the region round about. Among other truths that had been rung in the ears of the multitudes was that gods made by men's hands are not gods. In addition to the large number who became followers of Christ, there must have been hosts of others who were led to pause and consider. It is probable that the increasing influence of the Gospel had diminished the crowds which usually appeared at the annual festival of the goddess. It is certain that the decrease of sales of images was felt by the makers of these idols.

The Stir. "And the same time there arose no small stir about that way." Everybody was talking of the falling off of interest in Diana, and the priests were complaining. The leader and spokesman of the malcontents, Demetrius, a silversmith, was a man whose business as a maker of images had been affected. This year there was little demand for the tiny silver shrines and images. He, therefore, called a general meeting of the skilled artisans and common workingmen of his trade, and made them a speech saying in substance, "Sirs, ye know that by this business of ours we have our wealth. And ye see and hear, that not only at Ephesus, but almost throughout all Asia, this Paul hath persuaded and turned away much people, saying that they be no gods which are made with hands. Not only is there danger that our trade will come into disrepute, but also that the temple of the great goddess Diana will be made of no account, and that she herself will even be deposed from her magnificence, whom all Asia and the world worshippeth."

Illustration. A certain prince named Pharnaces rebelled against Caesar, but at the same time sent him a crown. Caesar returned the crown, with this message: "Let him return to his obedience first, and then I will accept his present."

The shrewd speech of Demetrius appealed to the self-interest of the men to whom it was addressed, while it spread a religious cloak over their selfishness. There arose a great shout, vibrant with fanatical appeal, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians." Inflamed, angry, set upon creating a counter current against Paul, these men rushed from their meeting place, and soon throughout the city rose the cry, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians."

The riot spread. Certain of the rioters began to search for Paul, but as he could not be found, they laid hold of Gaius and Aristarchus, two of his companions, and the mob dragging these two men rushed to the theater. When Paul learned of the peril of his fellow-workers he desired to follow them and strive to rescue them, or to try the effect of an address upon the multitude. But his friends compelled him to remain hidden. Also certain officers of the city sent him word not to venture into the theater. Not being able to find Paul, the rioters fell into confusion, some crying one thing and some another, while the greater part of the assembly did not know why they had come together.

Alexander. The unreasoning mob began to shout against the Jews in general, knowing that Paul was a Jew. The Jews who were present felt this an opportune moment to explain that the Christians were not of the same party as themselves. They, therefore, set forth one Alexander, a coppersmith, as spokesman. But when the crowd recognized him as a Jew, they again took up the shout, "Great is Diana of the Ephesians," and for two hours they continued this cry.

The Town Clerk. Not until their lungs were exhausted did the multitude cease their noise. Then a city officer, the town clerk, fearing that a riot would bring down on them the wrath of the Romans, appealed to the mob to keep order. He said, "Ye men of Ephesus, what man is there that knoweth not how that the city of the Ephesians is a worshipper of the great goddess Diana, and of the image which fell down from Jupiter? Seeing, then that these things cannot be spoken against, ye ought to be quiet, and to do nothing rashly. For ye have brought hither these men, which are neither robbers of churches nor yet blasphemers of your goddess. Wherefore, if Demetrius and the craftsmen which are with him have a matter against any man, the laws are open, and there are deputies; let them implead one another. But if ye enquire anything concerning other matters, it shall be determined in a lawful assembly. For we are in danger to be called in question for this day's uproar, there being no cause whereby we may give an account of this concourse."

This appeal had immediate effect. The people saw that this man had spoken truth. Then he bade them depart; the crowd melted away.

Practical Truths. 1. The sacrifices made for the truth are not real losses. 2. Follow no business on which you cannot ask God's blessing. Live up to your profession. 3. Be wary of the cant that is mock religion and of the zeal which springs from self-interest. 4. Take part in the building of God's spiritual temple. 5. Be disinterested in the service of God and man. 6. Do not attack the belief of others, but prove the superiority of Christianity by your life and spirit.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

And now, behold, I go bound in the spirit unto

not knowing the things that shall befall me there:
save that the Holy Ghost
witnesseth
in every saying that bonds and afflictions abide me. But none of these things move me, neither count I my life dear unto myself, so that I might finish my course with joy, and the ministry, which I have received

of the Lord Jesus,
to testify the of the grace

of God.
And when he had thus spoken, he

and prayed
with them
all. And they all

sore,
and fell on Paul's neck,
and

Sorrowing most of all for the words which he spake, that they should see his no more.

And they accompanied him unto the

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 20:1-38.

Prayer: Our Father, We are glad that the Gospel brings Thy people together in tender and abiding relations. We thank Thee that while separations take place, the ties of fellowship, of sympathy and of love last through all changes. In the name of Christ, Amen.

"To live as always seeing

The invisible source of things,
Is the blesseddest state of being,
For the quietude it brings."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 57-58. Places, Ephesus, Macedonia, Achaia, Troas, Miletus. Persons, Paul, Luke, Eutychus, elders of the church of Ephesus.

Scripture Setting: Study of Farewells. David and Jonathan, 1 Sam. 20:42. Elijah and Elisha, 2 Kings 2:11, 12. Joseph and brethren, Gen. 45:21-25. Paul at Tyre, Acts 21:5, 6. Ruth and Naomi, Ruth 1:16, 17. Jesus and disciples, John 14:1-4.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. We get a glimpse of the observance of Sunday, or the first day of the week, instead of the Sabbath, the seventh day. 2. The meeting of the Christians at Troas is a mingling of the religious and social relations. 3. Paul was able to restore Eutychus to life because he had the Christ power within him. 4. Paul kept back nothing of the truth. 5. Paul's labors in Ephesus included both public and individual ministrations. 6. Paul did not separate repentance and faith. 7. The Apostle calls the Gospel "the word of the grace of God." 8. Paul's attitude to his fellowmen and to the church was that of the true Christian. He was an example in both temporal and spiritual things. 9. Earnest, unremitting effort is certain to tell for Christ. 10. The highest type of friendship is among Christians.

A GREAT-HEARTED MAN.

Paul now had been more than two years in Ephesus; had established a strong church, and had seen the work spread throughout the whole region. His purpose was to visit Macedonia and Achaia, then pass on to Jerusalem, and afterward to visit Rome. To prepare the way for his tour of the churches in Greece, he had sent Timothy and Erastus in advance. Meanwhile, he had remained in Ephesus, where it is supposed that he was arrested and imprisoned for a brief time following the riot.

Avoiding a Plot. Paul set out for Macedonia, accompanied by Gaius of Derbe, and Aristarchus of Thessalonica, and two Ephesians, Tychicus and Trophimus. Having visited the churches in Macedonia and exhorted them, Paul went on to Achaia. There he spent three months. His intent now was to embark at Corinth and sail directly for Palestine, but suddenly his friends discovered a new plot of the Jews to slay him on shipboard. It was decided, therefore, that he should return through Macedonia. An escort of friends accompanied him, while other friends went on by sea to Troas. Coming to Philippi with Luke, Paul remained there to celebrate the passover, after which he sailed for Troas, arriving after five days.

Eutychus. Paul remained in Troas seven days, where he was rejoined by his friends who had left him in Corinth. From the time of the resurrection of Christ, the Christians had begun to hold special religious services on the first day of the week, and it was now on Sunday evening that the Christians in Troas assembled for worship. As Paul was to depart the next day, the services were of particular moment. According to their custom, the Christians "broke bread," that is, they celebrated the Lord's Supper.

On this evening they were met together in an upper third-story room such as was used as a guest chamber, being the coolest part of an Oriental home. Luke mentions the fact that there were many lamps in the room. Windows in those days did not have glass, but were simply of lattices that could be opened or closed. In the niche of one of these windows, the lattice being open to admit the breeze from the sea, sat a youth named Eutychus. Paul's visit being near its end, and he having many things to say, prolonged his sermon until midnight. The youth, probably affected by the lights, the crowd and the heat, and perhaps not comprehending all that Paul said, had "fallen into a deep sleep." Then suddenly losing his balance he fell out of the window from that third loft "and was taken up dead."

A cry of alarm rang through the congregation from those who had observed the accident. Paul paused, and learning what had occurred, he "went down and fell on him and, embracing him, said, 'Trouble not yourselves, for his life is in him.'" Calming the excitement of those around him, Paul returned to the upper room, broke bread with his friends, talked with them even till the break of day, and then departed. Eutychus was quite recovered and his friends were comforted.

Illustration. A ship captain told that it was his lot to fall in with a steamer which was badly crippled. The night was closing in and the sea was rolling high. He asked if help was needed. "I am in a sinking condition," cried the other captain. "Had you not better send your passengers on board directly?" he was asked. "Will you not lay by me till morning?" was the response. "I will try," replied the other; "but had you not better send your passengers on board now?" "Lay by till morning," was again the answer. The other tried to fulfill this request, but at night the sea was so heavy that he could not keep his position and he never saw that steamer again. In an hour and a half after the captain had said, "Lay by till morning," the vessel with most of those on board had gone down.

The Further Journey. Paul now went by land to Assos, while Luke and the others took ship for the same place. Taking in Paul at Assos, they went on to Mitylene. The following day they anchored near Chios; the next they touched at Samos, and the day after they arrived at Miletus. Paul wished to stop at Ephesus, but he forebore, as he had little time to spare if he would reach Jerusalem for Pentecost.

As the ship tarried at Miletus, Paul wished to make the best of the delay. So he sent messengers to the elders of the church at Ephesus urging them to come to him. The distance being only about thirty-five miles, it was possible for them to reach him on the next day.

Illustration. It is told of Bishop Usher and Dr. Preston that as they were about to part one said to the other, "Come, good doctor, let us talk now a little of Jesus Christ." Then the doctor said, "Come, my lord bishop, let me hear your grace talk of the goodness of God. Let us warm each other's hearts with Heaven, that we may the better bear this cold world."

Paul's Farewell. And now the great Christian Apostle and minister is about to separate from the officers of that flock to which he had lovingly ministered so long and faithfully. It was a great trial for him and them, but duty called elsewhere.

His farewell to the elders of Ephesus was full of tenderness and counsel. It is one of the most beautiful of Paul's compositions, giving much insight into the Apostle's relation to the churches. It is full of appeals to their memories of him and of his work. "Ye know, from the first day that I came into Asia, after what manner I have been with you at all seasons, serving the Lord with all humility of mind, and with many tears, and temptations which befell me by the lying in wait of the Jews."

He reminded them that he had not shrunk from speaking whatever was good for them, and that publicly and from house to house he had testified concerning repentance and faith in Christ. Now he was going to Jerusalem not knowing the things which would happen to him there, though the Spirit had warned him that in every city he would meet bonds and afflictions. He held his life as nothing, he declared, that he might finish his course with joy and fulfill his ministry.

His tears and those of his friends mingled as he announced that they would see his face no more. He called on them to bear witness that he had done his duty. He warned them to take heed to themselves and to the flock of God. Sad but necessary was the warning that wolves would enter among them. "Therefore, watch," he bade them. With overflowing love, he commended them to the grace of God as he fitly reminded them that he had not labored among them for their money, but had toiled with his hands for his own support. He held before them his example, and he bade them remember those words of Christ, quoted only by Paul in this discourse: "It is more blessed to give than to receive."

Having spoken with tenderness, love and sympathy to these men among whom he had labored so long, with full hearts all knelt down while Paul prayed. All these strong men, the elders of the Ephesian church, "wept sore, and fell on Paul's neck and kissed him; sorrowing most of all for the words which he spake, 'that they should see his face no more.'". Then they accompanied him to his ship. While the sails filled the ship lifted anchor and started on its course.

Paul was able to give a good account of his service of love among his people.

Illustration. A little girl, after a Bible class, said to her teacher, "I want to say something to you," while she anxiously waited for her companions to go out of the room. The teacher was weary and knew that she was needed elsewhere. Nature said, "I have not a minute to spare. Come to me another time." But grace said, "Take up thy cross and work while it is called today. Listen to this little child." No sooner were the two alone than the child burst into tears. "What shall I do? I am so wicked. I cannot bear to think of death. Do come and pray with me." That prayer was answered and the teacher was glad that she did not wait until another time.

Practical Truths. 1. Be not a sleepy hearer, either physically or spiritually. 2. Christ is the strength of the nobly influential life. 3. Faithful study of the Bible is necessary to the building of Christian character. 4. Let your works bear out your word. 5. So live that farewells may bring no regret for things done amiss or left undone. 6. On occasions worthy of them be not ashamed of tears. 7. Value those ties which cannot be broken by distance or death. 8. Be wisely affectionate in all the relations of life.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

And when the seven days were almost ended, the Jews which were of Asia, when they saw him in the stirred up all the people,

and

And all the

was moved,
and
the

together: and they took Paul, and drew him

and forthwith
the doors were shut.
And as they went about to kill him, tidings came unto
the chief of the band, that all Jerusalem was in an uproar.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 21:1-36.

Prayer: Our Father, May we devote ourselves and our lives to Thy Truth. In some little way may each of us help to make clearer to other minds Thy grace and Thy Son, who is the Way, the Truth and the Life. In the name of Christ, Amen.

"He saw a hand they could not see
Which beckoned him away,
He heard a voice they could not hear
Which would not let him stay."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 57-58. Places, Caesarea, Jerusalem. Persons, Paul, Philip, Agabus, James, elders, mob, Roman captain and soldiers.

Scripture Setting: A Study of the Will of God. Test of relationship to Christ, Mark 3:35. Christ's submission to, Matt. 26:39. In prayer, Matt. 6:10. Jesus' source of strength, John 4:34. Just judgment for obedience to, John 5:30. Jesus came to do, John 6:38. Renewed mind proves what is God's will, Rom. 12:2. Paul's habit of qualifying promises by, "if the Lord will," 1 Cor. 4:19.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Against warning of danger Paul persisted in going to Jerusalem that he might unite the churches. 2. The knowledge that he would suffer in Jerusalem came by the Spirit, but human nature entreated him not to go. 3. Paul withstood the pleadings of friends to follow the voice of God. 4. The love of Christ maintains Christian fellowship. 5. Paul's willingness to suffer for Christ is one of the most inspiring examples of Christian heroism. 6. "The will of the Lord be done" is the Christian's motto. 7. Paul's conforming to the law was not an acknowledgment that it was necessary for salvation, but an act of love to remove prejudices from the minds of Jewish Christians. 8. Paul is the great type of Christian liberty. He surrendered nothing of truth, nor did he yield the principle that salvation is only of Christ.

FACING PERIL.

Having made his farewells to the elders of Ephesus, Paul, with his companions from Miletus, sailed to the island of Cos. The next day they sped on to Rhodes. Passing thence, they arrived at Patara, where they took ship bound for Phoenicia. After four days they reached Tyre.

Paul's Friends. Here Paul spent several days with Christian converts and his loving ministrations greatly endeared him to them. Being filled with the Spirit, they foresaw perils to Paul in venturing into Jerusalem, and they attempted to dissuade him from his purpose. But duty urged, and he prepared to set forth. The impression he had made upon these people is shown by the fact that all men, women and children accompanied him out of the city to the beach. There they knelt upon the sands, prayed, and bade one another farewell.

Again taking a ship, the missionary party passed on to Ptolemais, the modern Acre, where they spent one day with the Christians of the town, and now traveling by land for forty-four miles, they came to Caesarea and spent several days in the home of Philip the Evangelist, one of the seven, he who had preached among the Samaritans and had baptized the Ethiopian. In this household were the four daughters of Philip, who were endowed with prophetic gifts.

The Warning of Agabus. The prophet Agabus, who long before, in the days of Claudius, foretold the famine, had come from Jerusalem to Caesarea to warn Paul of his danger. Adopting the symbolic methods of the ancient prophets, Agabus unfastened the girdle of Paul, and with it bound his own feet and hands, saying, "Thus saith the Holy Ghost, 'So shall the Jews at Jerusalem bind the man that owneth this girdle, and shall deliver him into the hands of the Gentiles.'"

The scene produced a deep impression upon the company of Christians assembled in the house of Philip, and all including Luke besought Paul not to go up to Jerusalem. But Paul said, "What mean ye to weep and to break mine heart? For I am ready not to be bound only, but also to die at Jerusalem for the name of the Lord Jesus."

When his friends saw that they could not persuade him, they said, "The will of the Lord be done."

Illustration. The martyr Elizabeth Folkes embraced the stake at which she was to be burned, saying, "Farewell, all the world; farewell, faith and hope; but welcome love."

On to Jerusalem. Setting his face, as did his Master, to go to Jerusalem, Paul departed and with him went his companions and certain disciples from Caesarea; Paul carrying with him the offerings to the poor of the church of Jerusalem from the Gentile churches that he had founded. Arrangements had been made that Mnason of Cyprus, an early disciple, should be their host upon their arrival, and he now traveled in the company.

After a three days' journey over the seventy-five miles, they came in sight of the ancient city, to which crowds were thronging from every direction. This was Paul's fifth visit to Jerusalem since his conversion.

Here twenty-five years before he had taken part in the death of Stephen. Now in all the vast crowds which he beheld he had few friends, and to multitudes his very name was an incentive to murderous thoughts.

His Reception. In the house of Mnason Paul was gladly welcomed. The next day, he and his companions met with James and the elders, James being the presiding officer of the Jerusalem church, and to them he delivered the contributions of the Gentile churches; a gift which must have been most welcome to the impoverished Christians of Jerusalem. One by one he rehearsed the things which God had wrought among the Gentiles by his ministry. Luke states that "when they heard it, they glorified the Lord," notwithstanding they at once began to reproach Paul.

James and the elders, who knew well the liberal views and practices of Paul, said, "Thou seest, brother, how many thousands of Jews there are which believe, and they are all zealous for the law. And they are informed of thee that thou teachest all the Jews which are among the Gentiles to forsake Moses, saying that they ought not to circumcise their children, neither to walk after the customs." The great crisis had now come between the spirit of Judaism and the Apostle of the Gentiles. It was not only the unconverted Jews who were against him, but Jewish Christians who held that the law was still binding. They knew Paul had preached that the way to salvation was through grace, and not through the Jewish law.

"What is it, therefore? The multitude must needs come together; for they come." Excitement would spread with the news that the great missionary, Paul, he who was said to be teaching everywhere not only that the Gentile Christians did not need to observe the law of Moses, but that Jews among the Gentiles were also free from the law, had arrived in Jerusalem. There would be division; there would be tumult now.

Paul was advised, therefore, to conform publicly to Jewish usage, and prove that he himself kept the law. Four men had taken a vow upon themselves and Paul was urged to undergo with them the ceremonial purification prescribed by the law, and to pay the charges for them "that they may shave their heads." This ceremony involved considerable expense, and it was regarded as a charitable act to pay the costs for the poorer vow-takers. The person who thus defrayed the costs was considered as sharing the vow, inasmuch as he must remain at the temple with the Nazarites during the week of their purification.

But Paul's personal conformity to the law did not produce the effect which the elders had expected. When the seven days of the purification were almost over, certain Jews from Asia Minor, men who doubtless had seen and heard Paul during his journeys, recognized him. They were indignant with him for having preached that the Jews living among the Gentiles did not need to observe the law. They also had seen him in the city with Trophimus the Ephesian, and they thought, or pretended to think, that Paul had taken this Gentile into the temple and profaned it.

These Asiatic Jews caught hold of Paul and shouted, "Men of Israel, help: This is the man that teacheth all men everywhere against the people, and the law and this place, and further brought Greeks also into the temple and hath polluted this holy place."

At this cry the people ran thither and dragged Paul out of the temple. The Levites, in order to save the temple from bloodshed, closed the heavy gates. The Roman commander of the Tower of Antonia was accosted to keep certain soldiers on the roof of the passageway which connected the fortress and the temple, so that at a moment's notice they could hasten down the stairs into the midst of the crowd. As soon as the Roman officer at this time noted the commotion and saw that the mob was trying to kill Paul he took soldiers and ran down unto them. When the crowd saw the chief captain and the soldiers, they left off beating their victim.

The chief captain laid hold on him and ordered him to be bound with two chains. Then he demanded who the man was, and what he had done. But so great was the uproar that the officer could make nothing of what was said. He ordered Paul to be taken into the castle but so great was the throng that the soldiers had to lift Paul upon their shoulders and bear him away, while the multitude shouted, "Away with him."

Practical Truths. 1. Do your duty, no matter what trials may come. 2. We must beware of being influenced by friends whose first thought is merely our personal safety. 3. Make the will of God the law of all conduct. 4. The effort to make peace may lead to the very opposite results; act only on principle. Often an act of kindness is turned into a weapon against the doer. 5. Cultivate firmness of character.

PAUL'S DEFENCE.

And it came to pass, that, when I was come again to Jerusalem, even while I

I was in a trance;
and saw him saying unto me,
Make haste, and get thee quickly
out of

for they will not receive thy testimony concerning me. And I said, Lord, they know that I

and in every synagogue them that believed on thee: And when the blood of thy

Stephen was shed,
I also
was standing by, and consenting unto his death,
and

of them that slew him. And he said unto me, Depart: for I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 21:37-40; 22:1-23.

Prayer: Our Father, We bless Thee for Christian enlightenment, tolerance and charity. We are grateful for the heroic men who withstood the storms in olden times and who by their sufferings made better things possible for us. We pray that we may by Thy grace be enabled to further Thy kingdom without hatred or malice toward any men. In the name of Christ, Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 58. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Paul, Lysias the chief captain, the Jewish mob.

Scripture Setting: False Accusations. Forbidden, Ex. 23:1. Talebearers condemned, Lev. 19:16. Malignity of, Psa. 41:5-9. Christians blessed when enduring, Matt. 5:11. Prohibited to soldiers, Luke 3:14. Monstrosity of, 2 Tim. 3:3. Happy if reproached, 1 Pet. 4:14.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Paul makes a pulpit of castle stairs and an audience of a mob.

ON THE CASTLE STAIRS.

The Situation. Antonius Claudius Felix was appointed procurator of Judea about 53 A. D. His rule had been cruel and especially irritating to the Jews. In the year 57 he had employed the zealot assassins to slay the high-priest Jonathan in the temple. This had led to the organization of the companies of Sicarii, or assassins. Josephus relates that after the death of the high-priest there appeared an Egyptian imposter, who led four thousand of these assassins into the desert. He came back at the head of thirty thousand men, before whom he posed as the Messiah, declaring that he would restore the kingdom of Judah. Encamped on the Mount of Olives, he had threatened the Roman garrison. Felix attacked him and slew or scattered his followers, while the Egyptian himself escaped.

Lysias Questions Paul. In view of such disturbances as this, the Romans were compelled to be on the alert at every sign of tumult among the Jews. Coming now to a point beyond the crowd, Paul addressed Lysias, the chief captain. The captain, who had supposed this was the rioting Egyptian, was astonished to hear himself spoken to in the Greek language. "Can'st thou speak Greek?" he asked. "Art not thou that Egyptian, which before these days madest an uproar and leddest out into the wilderness the four thousand men that were murderers?" Paul replied, "I am a Jew, of Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, a citizen of no mean city, and I beseech thee, suffer me to speak unto the people." The chief captain, thinking no doubt that the prisoner might quiet the tumult, gave his consent and bade a soldier release Paul's right hand.

"And so in the wearisome journey
Over life's troubled sea,
I know not the way I am going,
But Jesus shall pilot me.
I know not the way I am going,
But well do I know my Guide.
With childlike trust I give my hand
To the Mighty Friend at my side."

2. The preacher, a former persecutor in chains, proclaims Christ. 3. Conscious of innocence; pitiful toward misled countrymen; confident of Divine protection, Paul delivers his message. 4. The crowd, unreasoning, passion-swayed, is silenced by the language of Moses and the prophets. 5. Sincerity, charitableness, truth, all are wasted upon fanaticism. 6. Unless hearers are converted to the belief of the speaker they are in danger of becoming hardened. 7. The Christian man and leader shines in greatness before the mob.

Illustration. A ship was ploughing its way through a raging sea, when the cry rang out, "A man overboard." A form was seen struggling in the water, but before boats could be lowered the man had been left far behind. His cries, however, could still be heard and when the boat was launched the rowers bravely struggled against the huge waves. "Save him! Save him!" came in agonizing tones as into the throng on deck rushed a man, throwing his arms wildly and shouting, "A thousand pounds to the one who saves his life." The voice was that of the captain of the ship, and the man who was drowning was his brother. To Paul, perishing men were his brothers.

Paul's Speech. Standing on the stairs; raising his hand and beckoning for silence; Paul began to speak. Oriental mobs are much more quickly influenced by their feelings than are western peoples; in a moment the angry tumult ceased.

The first words of Paul fell upon the crowd like a spell, for they were in the familiar speech of the Jews, the Aramaic dialect of the Hebrew. It was evident this man then was not a mere Greek-speaking Jew, but one who knew well their own tongue. There is a wonderful charm about what is familiar to us. To hear our own language in a foreign land; to see our own flag in some unexpected place, acts like magic.

Paul addressed the mob without anger or bitterness. A few moments before he had been in the hands of infuriated men, ready to tear him to pieces. Now he was standing out of their reach, surrounded by soldiers with drawn swords, speaking to a silent throng beneath. He began as if these Jews before him were his friends. "Brethren and fathers, hear ye the defense which I now make unto you." In breathless silence they permitted him to continue. He now had the opportunity to justify himself in his course, which was one of his purposes in coming to Jerusalem.

What Paul said was perfectly adapted to the situation. His hearers had been excited by all manner of rumors about him. Doubtless, many of them were not familiar with the details of his life, where he was born, how long he had resided in Jerusalem, or what part he had taken in persecuting the Christians. He was to them a man of mystery. In spite of themselves they were interested in hearing the facts of his life. If we were part of a vast crowd, wrathful against some man, and that man began to explain who and what he was, beginning his speech by saying, "I am an American," we should be the readier to hear him. Paul struck a responsive note when he declared, "I am a Jew." Instantly every man before him felt that in this he was one of them. He did not repudiate his race; he did not call himself by some other name. "I am a Jew, verily a man, born in Tarsus, a city in Cilicia, yet brought up in this city at the feet of Gamaliel." The chord of local attachment was struck. Now he could sway his audience. This teacher Gamaliel, the greatest of the rabbis of that day, was still living. The audience recognized that Paul had at least been properly taught in the traditions of the Jews; taught according to the perfect manner of the law of the fathers, and was zealous toward God as they all were that day. He reminded them that their fathers were his fathers; that he was no alien, but was one of them. He admits their zeal; he does not denounce it, but he would show that their zeal was misdirected. He virtually says to them, "As ye persecute the Christians, so did I. If you are not familiar with the facts, the high-priest himself can tell you I speak the truth, and all the elders can testify that I bore letters from them to Damascus to bring Christians to Jerusalem to be punished.

But a change came to me. I was on my way to Damascus on an errand of persecution, when a revelation was given me. I fell to the ground. Jesus appeared and spoke. My course was changed. I was blind for a time. At Jesus' command I went into Damascus and there Ananias, a devout man, well reported by all the Jews in that city, restored my sight. He announced to me that the God of our fathers, Jehovah, the God of Israel, had appointed me to know His will, to see the Righteous One, and to be a witness unto all men of what I had seen and heard. It was Ananias who baptized me and then I came to Jerusalem going to the temple to pray; there I fell into a trance, and I saw Jesus, who said to me, "Make haste, and get thee quickly out of Jerusalem, for they will not receive thy testimony concerning Me."

"I pleaded with the Lord that I should remain in Jerusalem, to give my testimony here. I said that they knew I imprisoned and beat those who believed in Him, and kept the garments of those who stoned Stephen. But he would not permit me to testify here. He said unto me, 'Depart:' for I will send thee far hence unto the Gentiles."

Illustration. The Marquis de Lafayette sent to General Washington, by Paine, the key of the Bastille. In conveying the key to Washington the bearer said, "I feel myself happy in being the person through whom the marquis has conveyed this early trophy of the spoils of despotism—the first ripe fruits of American principles transplanted into Europe. That the principles of America opened the Bastille is not to be doubted, therefore the key comes to the right place." Paul was the man who with the key of truth opened the door of salvation to the Gentiles.

Up to this point the multitude listened in silence. They could bear all that had been said except that God's grace was not only for Jews but for the despised Gentiles, and that this man was the herald of such a message. As one man the crowd roared, "Away with such a fellow from the earth; for it is not fit that he should live." Oriental mobs, the worst of all, act as if their members had suddenly gone mad. The Jews broke into hideous rage. They yelled, gnashed their teeth, waved their arms, cast off their clothes, and threw dust into the air, furious and frantic, until Lysias led Paul away into the castle.

Illustration. A chaplain injured at the battle of Gettysburg was lying on the field at night. In the darkness he heard a voice saying, "O, my God!" The chaplain knowing that someone near him was in trouble, said to himself, "How can I reach him?" As he was unable to walk, he started to roll toward the sufferer and he rolled himself through blood and among dead bodies until he came to the dying man, and there he preached Christ. Two soldiers in passing carried him to a dying officer. In this way he spent the long night, carried by the soldiers from one dying man to another. He prayed with all of them, while he himself was compelled to lie on his back.

Practical Truths. 1. Pray for a great faith that can sustain you in the most trying situations. 2. As a citizen of the kingdom of God fear nothing. 3. Have the martyr spirit which rises above all that men can do to you. 4. Maintain nobility of spirit under the greatest stress. 5. Every event of life may be used for Christ; do not fall to the level of antagonists. 5. Remember that you owe all to the grace of God.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

But when Paul perceived that the one part were Sadducees, and the other Pharisees, he cried out in the Men and brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee: of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question. And when he had so said, there arose a dissension between the Pharisees and the Sadducees: and the was divided. For the Sadducees say that there is no

neither

nor spirit: but the Pharisees confess both. And there arose a great cry: and the that were of the Pharisees' part arose, and strove, saying, We find no evil in this man: but if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God. And when there arose a great dissension, the chief fearing lest Paul should have been pulled in pieces of them, commanded the soldiers to go down, and to take him by force from among them, and to bring him into the

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 23: 1-11.

Prayer: Our Father, Thou art our refuge and present help in time of trouble. Thou dost strengthen and uphold all who put their trust in Thee. Be Thou graciously with us in the seasons of stress and storm. Be Thou with us when men are angry against us. May we ever find our rest and peace in Thee. In the name of Christ, Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 58. Place, Jerusalem. Persons, Paul, Lysias the chief captain, soldiers, the high priest Ananias, priests and Sanhedrin.

Scripture Setting: Study of Citizenship. Peaceful citizens, Jer. 29:7. Paying tribute, Matt. 17:24. Duties to God and to Caesar, Matt. 22:17. Subject to authorities, Rom. 13:1. Prayer for authorities, 1 Tim. 2:1. Violation of rights, Acts 16:37. Instances of loyal Israelites, Josh. 1:16-18; 2 Sam. 3:36, 37. David, 1 Sam. 24:6-10. Hushai, 2 Sam.

"Calmly see the mystic Weaver Throw His shuttle to and fro;
'Mid the noise and wild confusion,
Well the Weaver seems to know
What each motion and commotion,
What each fusion and confusion,
In the grand result will show."

17:15, 16. David's soldiers, 2 Sam. 18:12, 13. Mordecai, Esth. 2:21-23.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. As always, Paul used the means at hand to further the cause of Christ. The fact that he was a Pharisee was useful to Paul as an ambassador of Christ. 2. The apparent results of Paul's great discourse were the wrath and fury of the mob. 3. Uncontrolled passion exhibits human nature at its worst. 4. Oftentimes the world investigates after men have suffered unjustly. 5. The protection of one's flag is a great privilege.

ROMAN SWORDS AND ANGRY JEWS.

It must have been a surprise to the chief captain Lysias, when the mob which had listened for a time so attentively to Paul, broke forth into a frenzy of rage. He knew Greek and Latin, but he could neither speak nor understand the Aramaic-Hebrew, which language Paul had used in addressing his countrymen. Lysias could judge what Paul was saying only by its effect, therefore during the speech, save for the last sentence, Lysias must have felt that the Apostle was convincing the crowd of his innocence. But suddenly wrath leaped forth from the mob, and only the swords of the Romans kept the Jews from seizing Paul and tearing him to pieces.

"I Am a Roman." The uproar may have been interpreted by the captain as an evidence of crime. In many ages and countries it has been the custom of the authorities to question the accused by some means of physical torture. The Roman method was to bind the prisoner and scourge him. Lysias, in order to ascertain the cause of the present fury, bade his soldiers take Paul from the stairs into the barracks of the castle and there he commanded his men to scourge him. Instantly obedient hands seized him, stripped his back, laid him along an inclined post, and bound him with thongs. Three times before Paul had been beaten by Roman rods. Five times he had received the thirty-nine lashes administered by the Jews with thongs. Now the command was to apply the whip under which many a victim had died.

Paul had submitted thus far, but now he said calmly to the centurion who stood by, "Is it lawful for you to scourge a man that is a Roman, and uncondemned?" He could not have said anything to that officer that would have startled him as much as this that he was a Roman citizen. Such a fact carried rights and privileges and exemptions throughout the then known world. Wherever the Roman eagle perched, the citizens of the Empire were protected in their sacred rights. The centurion who had been chosen to see that the scourging was carried out, at once bade the men desist; then hastened to the chief captain, saying, "Take heed what thou doest: for this man is a Roman."

A Roman's Rights. It was now Lysias' turn to be startled, for if this man were indeed a citizen of the Empire, the chief captain had already invaded his rights as he had bound him and given an order to question him by torture. Lysias hastened to Paul's presence and said, "Tell me, art thou a Roman?" Paul answered simply, "Yea." Lysias himself was probably a Greek, and had been compelled to pay for his privilege as a citizen. Paul had told the captain that he was a Jew, and Lysias was puzzled to know how he had gained this right. In explanation of his doubts Lysias said, "With a great sum obtained I this citizenship." "But I am free born," declared Paul.

In an empire composed of many subject peoples, mixed populations, vast hordes of slaves, and numerous freedmen, relatively few were citizens. A special privilege came by being the child of a citizen, or by special favor of the Emperor or by purchase. At certain periods this right was sold at a low price, but at the time named in this chapter the sum demanded was large. Paul inherited his citizenship from his father. Many Jews had this privilege, some having gained it by favor of the emperors and others by purchase.

Lysias was till anxious about his treatment of his prisoner. The men with the whip unbound the thongs and departed, but it appears that the chains were still kept upon Paul. Being informed that the cause of the mob's wrath was a religious question, Lysias sent word to the chief priests and the Sanhedrin to assemble on the next day. This could scarcely have been a meeting capable of disposing of Paul's case, for a Roman officer had no authority to call together the Jewish court, and he certainly would not have given up a Roman citizen to their judgment. Apparently he wished to shift as much responsibility as possible.

Before the Council. On the morrow Lysias removed Paul's chains and accompanied him with his soldiers before the priests and Sanhedrin, as he would not risk the safety of his prisoner by leaving him unprotected. A full attendance of the members of these bodies was present, and the high-priest presided. We must remember that while the Romans permitted the Jews to retain their organizations, they had, in fact, only the shadow of power. It is evident that the usual preliminaries of such a meeting were gone through with, that accusations were made and that it was after this that Paul was permitted in regular course to make his defense.

Illustration. A prisoner at the bar smiled when hard things were said against him. One asked him why he treated the matter so lightly and he replied, "It is no matter what they say, so long as the judge says nothing." It is of little importance what the world says, so long as God approves.

Paul calmly and steadily surveyed the faces before him. It must have been with deep interest these Jewish leaders saw before them in their court the man who had stirred a considerable part of the world with the doctrines which they fiercely hated. "Men and brethren," Paul began, "I have lived in all good conscience before God until this day." It may have been Paul's addressing them as "brethren," as if he were on an equality with them, that irritated Ananias, the high-priest—though Paul could rightly claim to be a Rabbi, and he once had been a Sanhedrist—or it may have been Paul's declaration of innocence that was offensive. Whatever the reason, the high-priest Ananias, a man noted for violence, and one of the worst characters that ever filled the high priestly office, commanded those that stood by to smite the speaker on the mouth. We need not attempt to justify Paul in his reply, since the best men are imperfect. Stung by the blow, he cried, "God shall smite thee, thou whited wall." We are to remember that Paul had been absent from Jerusalem for many years, and that the high-priests changed office frequently, so that Paul did not know this man by sight. When they that stood by said, "Revilest thou God's high-priest?" Paul replied, "I wist not, brethren, that he was the high-priest: for it is written, Thou shalt not speak evil of the ruler of thy people."

Pharisees and Sadducees. The violent act of the high-priest at once created dissension in the council, composed of Pharisees and Sadducees. Seeing this division, Paul took sides with the Pharisees. He had come to Jerusalem to preach the Gospel as the fulfillment of the law. To this end he announced himself as against the Sadducees in their disbelief in spirits, angels and the resurrection and with the Pharisees in these beliefs. He wished to lead the Pharisees to the fulfillment of their own belief in the risen Christ. He, therefore, cried out, "Brethren, I am a Pharisee, the son of a Pharisee; of the hope and resurrection of the dead I am called in question."

But Paul's declaration only added to the discord. The assembly was divided. A great clamor arose. Then certain scribes belonging to the party of the Pharisees stood up saying, "We find no evil in this man: but if a spirit or an angel hath spoken to him, let us not fight against God." Then so violent did the dissension become that the chief captain feared Paul would be torn to pieces. He gave command to his troops and instantly, with drawn swords, the soldiers marched to where Paul was in the midst of the contending parties. They drove back Sadducees and Pharisees alike, and placing Paul within their ranks, they marched off to the castle, leaving behind them the quarreling men, some shouting for Paul and some crying for his death.

Illustration. The Romans considered as sacred a statue or building that had been struck by lightning. Surely, Paul's experiences in being smitten so often by the lightning of human wrath but rendered him the more revered.

Practical Truths. 1. Love your country and prize its citizenship. 2. Always aim to be able to say that you have lived with a "good conscience." 3. Defend yourself, when necessary, with courage, humility, calmness and frankness. 4. Under no circumstances forget proper dignity and above all your reverence for God. 5. Be ready when attacked to admit a fault; remember that in the end, if you are in the right, fair-minded persons will come to your point of view. 6. If you speak the truth you have nothing to fear. 7. Do what is right, stand for what is right and you will be stronger than all who are opposed to you.

THE PLOT AGAINST PAUL.

And when it was day, certain of the Jews banded together, and bound themselves under a curse, saying that they would neither till they had killed Paul. And when Paul's sister's son heard of their

he went and entered into the and told Paul. Then Paul called one of the centurions unto him, and said, Bring this young man unto the chief for he hath a certain thing to tell him. So he took him, and brought him to the chief captain, and said, Paul the called me unto him, and prayed me to bring this young man unto thee, who hath something to say unto thee. Then the chief captain and went with him aside privately, and asked him, What is that thou hast to tell me?

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 23:12-35.

Prayer: Our Father, We bless Thee that Christ is always near us and that we are safe until our work is done. When Thou hast accomplished Thy purposes with us and in us, receive us unto Thyself. In the name of Christ, Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 58. Places, Jerusalem, the highway, Antipatris and Caesarea. Persons, Paul, conspirators, Paul's nephew, Lysias, Roman soldiers and Felix.

Scripture Setting: A Study of Wicked Plots. Against the just, Psa. 37:12. Against Esau, Gen. 27:6-17. Against Joseph, Gen. 37:26-28. Against David, 2 Sam. 15:10-12. Against Naboth, 1 Kings 21:7-14. Against Jews, Esther 3:8-11. Against Hebrew children, Dan. 3:8-18. Against Daniel, Dan. 6:4-17. Against Jesus, Matt. 12:14; 26:14-16. Note the punishment of these plotters.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The safest place

"O wonderful story of deathless love!
Each child is dear to that heart above.
He fights for me when I cannot fight;
He comforts me in the gloom of night;
He lifts the burden for He is strong;
And stills the sigh and awakes the song."

ITS RELATIONS.

for Paul was a prison. 2. Christ and His assurance made the prison a cheerful place. 3. In the act of the men who took a religious oath to commit murder we see how men may juggle with conscience. 4. The Sadduceean members of the Sanhedrin, who doubtless approved the conspiracy, reveal the affinity of materialism with crime. 5. The church at Jerusalem does not appear to have been greatly concerned for Paul's welfare, since it was a Judaizing body. 6. The affection and loyalty of kindred may often be depended upon when other things fail.

SAFE AMONG ENEMIES.

The Conspiracy. Paul's foes, enraged at their failure to kill him in the temple; to snatch him from the hands of the soldiers; and to get the Sanhedrin to agree in his condemnation, now were planning to assassinate him. The day had scarcely dawned when more than forty Jews gathered in a secret place, whispered, plotted and took an oath. It doubtless was similar to the one king Saul pronounced, when he said, "Cursed be the man that eateth any food until evening, that I may be avenged of mine enemies." These dark conspirators pronounced together something like this: "May I be accursed if I eat or drink until Paul is killed!"

Having thus sworn, they went, or sent certain of their number, to the chief priests and to such members of the Sanhedrin as they knew were specially venomous against Paul. Coming to them as secretly as possible, they told them what they were planning. "We have bound ourselves under a great curse that we will eat nothing until we have slain Paul. Now, therefore, ye with the council signify to the chief captain that he bring him down unto you tomorrow, as though ye would inquire something more perfectly concerning him; and we, or even he come near, are ready to kill him."

Forty against one is an imposing force. It looked ominous for Paul; then the oath introduced the element of changeless determination. It might have seemed that out of forty resolute daring men one could get near enough the person of Paul to end his life. But there is nothing more foolish than a conspiracy of evil-doers. Sin and evil are short-sighted.

Unblushing Priests. It is an amazing fact that the priests and elders, the highest officials of the Jewish religion at that time, instead of repulsing these evil men and refusing to connive at assassination, approved of the plan and lent their sanction to the proposed murder. This is a terrible commentary on the possibilities of fanaticism.

Illustration. When the famous sculptor Canova was about to begin work on his noted statue of Napoleon the First he had before him a splendid block of marble, which had been brought at much expense and trouble from the quarries at Paros. He had examined this block several times and approved it, but just when ready to start at his work his keen eye detected a tiny red line running through one portion of the block. He declared it would not do and rejected it. So small sins destroy usefulness and injure the whole life.

Loyal Kinship. As has been said, "evil is not perfect in its cunning." It usually overlooks something. Doubtless on that day of plotting certain of the more than forty men engaged in the scheme told their families and other friends what was brewing. Perhaps their friends noticed these Jews in the act of arming themselves with daggers. Paul's sister lived in Jerusalem, and possibly whisperings of what was going on reached her, and it was she who sent her son with a warning to Paul. It is not unlikely that the young man himself overheard mutterings of the plot. In some way, this youth had learned of his uncle's danger, and although he knew there was risk to himself in doing anything to interfere with the would-be assassins, family affection, if nothing more, determined him to try to save his relative. As Paul was now recognized by the Romans as a privileged man under their protection, there could have been little difficulty in the young man gaining admission into the castle and into Paul's presence. We may be sure that Paul, who reveals in several letters, his affection for his kinspeople, received the youth with gladness, for he had yet to learn of the plot whose revelation brought great risk to the boy. God uses means, and the Master who had cheered Paul in the prison used a boy to be in part the agent of His servant's safety. The providence is no less real and the agent no less from God, because the means seem commonplace and natural.

The Plot Defeated. But Paul knew it was his duty to use the means put into his hands so he called to a centurion, "Bring this young man unto the chief captain: for he hath a certain thing to tell him." The centurion did as Paul commanded, and when the chief captain had heard the message he took the young man "by the hand and went with him aside privately and asked him, 'What is that thou hast to tell me?'"

Then Paul's nephew told his story: "The Jews have agreed to desire thee that thou wouldst bring down Paul tomorrow into the council, as though they would inquire somewhat of him more perfectly. But do not thou yield unto them: for there lie in wait for him of them more than forty men, which have bound themselves with an oath that they will neither eat nor drink until they have killed him: and now are they ready, looking for a promise from thee." Lysias listened attentively to the end, then said, "See thou tell no man that thou hast showed these things to me." Then he sent the youth away safely.

Illustration. John Knox was accustomed to sit at the head of the table with his back to the window. On one evening, without being able to give a reason, he would neither sit in that chair nor permit anyone else to occupy it. That night a bullet was shot in at the window to kill him. It grazed the chair in which he usually sat.

Prompt Action. Lysias called a centurion and said, "Make ready two hundred soldiers, and horsemen three score and ten, and spearmen two hundred to go to Caesarea at the third hour of the night." He added, "Provide them beasts that they may set Paul on and bring him safe unto Felix the governor."

Darkness came and the streets were empty. At nine o'clock, the appointed hour, the four hundred and seventy Roman soldier guard stood at the castle doors. Paul, who had been notified of what was to be done for him, appeared and mounted a horse, having, however, a chain on one arm attached to that of a soldier on a horse beside him. We may be certain that he, with his never-failing courtesy, gave Lysias due acknowledgement of his protection. Then came the order to march, and along the streets of Jerusalem went the soldiery. The fact of troops passing in and out of the city was too familiar to all the inhabitants of the city for this procession to suggest any special significance at this time. Probably the conspirators themselves, if they saw the soldiers pass, were not led to suspect that their plot was known.

Now Paul, who has forty men seeking his life, has more than four hundred protectors. Enemies have conspired; enemies have put on the mask of religion to destroy him, but the Lord exposes their malice. He influences the hearts of men to befriend Paul. Cunning and deceit are met by bringing a base purpose to light. The Lord takes Paul under a powerful escort safely through the midst of his enemies.

Watchful against an ambuscade while near the city, they pushed on thirty-five miles to Antipatris. There they remained until dawn. Then the four hundred soldiers returned to Jerusalem, leaving the seventy cavalymen to convey Paul twenty-five miles further to Caesarea.

The centurion took Paul into the presence of the governor, Felix, delivered the letter of Lysias to him, and departed. When Felix had asked Paul of what province he was and had learned that he was from Cilicia, Felix told him, "I will hear thee when thine accusers are also come." Then he put Paul in charge of a soldier to be kept in a guard room in the Herodian palace, which was now occupied by the procurators.

Illustration. A chamois hunter in Switzerland fell many feet into one of the great crevasses of the ice, but without injury. He appeared to be in a hopeless position, as he could not climb out and he would soon freeze if left there. A stream of water was flowing down the crevasse and this he followed, wading, stooping, crawling as best he could. At last he came to a vaulted cavern, from which he could see no outlet. Commending himself to God, he cast himself into the stream. For a few moments he was whirled along through darkness. Then sunlight burst upon him and he was cast up amid the meadows of the valley of Chamouni.

Practical Truths. 1. In the greatest need be sure that Christ will afford the greatest comfort. 2. Do your work in the confidence that God will care for everything else. 3. It is the duty of the Christian as well as his privilege to be cheerful. 4. Have some worthy objective point in your plans for future work. 5. The belief that God has a plan for every life and that that plan will be carried out is a source of unfailing strength. 6. Servants of the Lord will find a way to do His will. 7. God sometimes uses a very humble instrument. His hand makes sacred the humblest undertaking.

"But a time came when my spirit
Grew weary of its place
And I cried 'Come back, my Conscience,
For I long to see thy face!'
But Conscience cried 'I cannot;
Remorse sits in my place.'"

—Paul L. Dunbar.

DE. C. D. WILSON.

And when Felix heard these things, having more perfect knowledge of that way, he deferred them, and said, When Lysias, the chief to keep Paul, and to let him have shall come down, I will know the uttermost of your matter. And he commanded a and that he should forbid none of his acquaintance to minister or come unto him. And after certain days, when Felix came with his

Drusilla, which was a Jewess, he sent for Paul, and concerning the faith in Christ. And as he reasoned of

and

to come, Felix trembled, and answered, Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 24:1-27.

Prayer: Our Father, Keep us from sin. May we so live that the proclamation of truth may have no terrors for us. May we so walk in righteousness and temperance that the judgment to come may be looked forward to in hope and trust. In the name of Christ, Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 58-60. Place, Caesarea. Persons, Paul, Felix, Ananias, Tertullus, priests, members of the Sanhedrin and Drusilla.

Scripture Setting: Study of Guilty Conscience. Afraid, Job 15:21. Made penitent by, Psa. 51:1-14. Grieved, Psa. 73:21. Makes wicked flee, Prov. 28:1. Condemns, Matt. 27:3-5. Makes superstitious, Mark 6:14. Conviets, John 8:9. Pricks the heart, Acts 2:37. Seared, lies, 1 Tim. 4:2. Defiled, Tit. 1:15. Remedy for, Heb. 9:14. Apprehensive of judgment, Heb. 10:26.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The high priest and his companions stooped to anything to effect their purpose. 2. Tertullus, an insincere orator, revealed the weakness of his case by flattery of

A RINGLEADER OF THE NAZARENES.

Paul's Accusers Arrive. It must have been with deep chagrin that the high-priest Ananias and other priests and members of the Sanhedrin discovered that their proposed victim had been taken from their jurisdiction, and that they themselves would be compelled to make a long journey to Caesarea in obedience to the requisition from Felix in order to accuse Paul. This being a case to be tried before the Roman procurator, Ananias and his friends engaged the services of a professional lawyer, Tertullus, doubtless a well-known orator and of Italian origin, living in Jerusalem.

The Proceedings. The court was constituted in the regular manner with Felix presiding. Formal accusations were made; the prosecuting lawyer arraigned the prisoner, and the Jews swore to the charges. Tertullus began by flattering the judge. Felix had suppressed a sufficient number of rebellions to give color to the fulsome statement of the orator: "Seeing that by thee we enjoy great quietness and that very worthy deeds are done unto this nation by thy providences, we accept it always and in all places; most excellent Felix, with all thankfulness." In plausible terms and oratorical manner he set forth that Paul was first a "pestilent fellow," and a mover of insurrections among all the Jews throughout the world; second, that he was a "ringleader of the sect of the Nazarenes;" third, that he had profaned the temple. He declared that the Jews would have judged him according to their law, but Lysias had violently taken Paul out of their hands, and ordered his accusers to come before Felix. Tertullus stated that Felix

"But a time came when my spirit

Grew weary of its pace,
And I cried 'Come back, my Conscience,
For I long to see thy face!'
But Conscience cried, 'I cannot;
Remorse sits in my place.'"

—Paul L. Dunbar.

ITS RELATIONS.

the judge: a resort of the weak and servile. 3. Tertullus dealt in assertions rather than proof. 4. Paul replied logically to the charges and stated the true case. 5. Again, Paul's citizenship announced in the letter of Lysias saved the Apostle, for Felix, anxious to please the Jews, would have surrendered him if he had dared. 6. Although Paul was always a conscientious man he had not "a conscience void of offense" until after his conversion. 7. Unawed by rank and power, Paul was not afraid to condemn wickedness in high places. He virtually condemned his own judge. 8. Felix shows his ignorance of the Christian ideal by believing that Paul would pay him a bribe for liberty.

would find the truth of these accusations if he would examine Paul.

Illustration. Alexander the Great was wounded by an arrow and the hurt was delayed in healing, whereupon he said to his flatterers, "You say I am the son of Jupiter, but this wound proves me a feeble man."

Paul's Speech. When the prosecutor had stated his case and the Jews had given their testimony, the governor beckoned to Paul that he might defend himself. Felix had now been procurator for six or seven years, and in this length of time might be supposed to be fairly familiar with Jewish matters. Paul does not approve the man, but he suggests that his length of service, promised knowledge of the conditions in that land. "Forasmuch as I know that thou hast been of many years a judge unto this nation, I do the more cheerfully answer for myself." He appealed to Felix that he could readily ascertain it was not more than twelve days since he had gone up to Jerusalem. That was a brief space in which to commit all the offenses with which they had charged him. He had not disputed with any man in the temple; had not stirred up a crowd, nor had he disputed in the synagogues or anywhere in the city. He challenged his adversaries to prove the contrary. He admitted that he had served God "after the Way." He did not call himself a Nazarene, nor a Christian, but he used the expression then common among Christians, "the Way," explaining that while serving God in this manner, he believed "all things which are written in the law and in the prophets," having "hope toward God, which they themselves also allow, that there shall be a resurrection of the dead both of the just and unjust."

In all this, Paul asserted that he strove "to have a good conscience void of offense toward God and toward all men." He claimed that his motive in this visit to Jerusalem after many years' absence, was to bring alms and offerings, as was the common custom of the Jews who were scattered throughout the world. He had gone to the temple, where he had observed the lawful requirements for purification. He said that his accusers now before Felix could truthfully say nothing more than that he had before the council asserted his faith in the resurrection.

Paul's defense is a fair instance of noble sincerity. He confined himself to the simple facts, and it is evident from results at this time, and later, that Felix was impressed by the character of the Apostle and by the genuine ring of his words.

In defending the truth, or ourselves, or any righteous cause, there is no better way than to make use of the simple truth, fully realized and earnestly expressed. The truth has a power of its own.

The Outcome. Felix now saw clearly that the issue between the Jews and Paul was a matter of difference of faith, and not one of which the Roman law could take cognizance. Felix knew something of Christianity, even more than the Jews and their lawyer had been aware. The first Gentile converts had been among the soldiers in Caesarea and it is probable that Felix learned of Christianity through them. He was, however, unwilling to displease the Jews by setting Paul at liberty, and he announced that he would postpone the case until Lysias could be heard from in person. He ordered a centurion to take Paul in charge and to give him every indulgence, also to permit his friends to visit him freely. Luke and Aristarchus, and no doubt the family of Philip, and Cornelius, often cheered Paul by their companionship.

Felix and Drusilla. Of Felix, Tacitus says, "He exercised the authority of a king with the disposition of a slave in all cruelty and lust." His wife Drusilla, said to be the most beautiful woman in the world, was a Jewess, and had been married to Azizus. Felix, in order to win her, sent Simon Magus, the notorious sorcerer, to use all his wiles to persuade her to leave her husband and marry him. The weak woman forsook her husband, who was an honorable man and a king, and married the unprincipled Felix.

Paul's Reasoning. Drusilla had heard much of the famous Paul of whom multitudes were talking. It was to please her that Felix requested Paul to come before them and to tell of his beliefs. We may be sure that Paul testified, as his custom was, to the revelations of Christ vouchsafed to him personally. And then, seeing before him a man and a woman who had violated the law of God and man, he applied the truth of Christ in its bearing upon their own misconduct. "And as he reasoned of righteousness, temperance and judgment to come," Felix trembled and answered, "Go thy way for this time; when I have a convenient season, I will call for thee."

Felix may have thought he would find in the Gospel something to quiet his fears, but it only alarmed his conscience. The sinner never can find it otherwise. Wrong must be condemned, and the sinner must be awakened. If Felix had been willing to repent and give up his sin, he could then have enjoyed peace, forgiveness, and reconciliation. To break with his past, to cease to sin, and to begin over again was what Felix was not ready to do. Only that alone could have brought relief to his troubled conscience. He put aside his opportunity. He knew what he ought to do, that he should at once turn from sin. His really "convenient season" was that hour. Then his conscience was awakened; then God was calling. The better time never came for him, because he was unwilling to repent.

Felix's Base Purpose. Again and again Felix invited Paul to tell him more of Christianity. The subject seems to have fascinated him, yet he was never ready to do more than treat it as a matter of curious inquiry. In addition to what was probably a real intellectual interest in what Paul had to say and a recognition of the greatness of Paul's personality, there was mixed in Felix's treatment of Paul a base desire to get him to pay a bribe for his liberty. Paul's statement that he had brought offerings from far countries up to Jerusalem probably led him to suppose that he still had money. Felix also opened the way for Paul to see his friends and to get help from them. He doubtless hoped Paul would weary of prison and that he and his friends would buy his liberty. For two years Paul was detained in the guard room at Caesarea. In the year 59 A. D. there were murderous encounters in Caesarea between Jews and Syrian Greeks. Many Jews were slain. The accusation was made before the emperor that Felix had permitted the slaughter of the Jews and he was recalled to answer this charge. At the point of his departure in order to make peace with the Jews he left Paul in his prison.

Practical Truths. 1. Distrust the motive of flatterers. 2. Emulate the serenity, fortitude and sincerity of Paul. 3. Rely on Divine wisdom in difficulties. 4. Insincere speech, however ornate, produces no vital and lasting effect. 5. Live in all respects according to the Word of God and you will have nothing to fear.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

PAUL BEFORE AGRIPPA.

And as he thus spake for himself, Festus said with a loud voice, Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad. But he said, I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the words of

and soberness.
For the knoweth of these things, before whom also I speak freely: for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him; for this thing was not done in a corner. King Agrippa, believest thou the

I know that thou believest. Then Agrippa said unto Paul, Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian. And Paul said, I would to God, that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost, and altogether such as I am, except these bonds. And when he had thus spoken, the king

and
the

and Bernice, and they that sat with them: And when they were gone aside, they talked between themselves, saying, This man doeth nothing worthy of death or of bonds.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 25 AND 26.

Prayer: Our Father, May our faith never be shaken by the unbelief of others. May the realities that are eternal, though unseen, be the inspiration of our lives. In the name of Christ, Amen.

"Since with firm and pure affection,
Thou on God hast set thy love,
With the wings of His protection
He shall shield thee from above."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: A. D. 60. Place, Caesarea. Persons, Festus, Agrippa and Bernice, priests and elders, military and citizens.

Scripture Setting: Study of Worldly Wisdom. Disastrously obtained, Gen. 3:6. As nothing before God, Job 4:18. Craftiness a means of destruction, Job 5:13. God respects not, Job 37:24. Counsel against, Prov. 3:7. Joy of foolish, Prov. 15:21. Deceptive, Prov. 16:25. Woe unto, Isa. 5:21. Perishable, Isa. 29:14. Not to be trusted in, Isa. 47:10. Inferior to animal instinct, Jer. 8:7. To be sacrificed, Matt. 6:23. Builds on sand, Matt. 7:26, 27. Real wisdom hidden from worldly, Matt. 11:25. Leads to idolatry, Rom. 1:21. Cross mightier than, 1 Cor. 1:17, 26. Puffeth up, 1 Cor. 8:1. Beware of, Col. 2:8.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. That Paul preferred trial in pagan Rome to trial in the Holy City has a sad significance. 2. The Roman custom of refusing to deliver one to death before he had met accusers and had opportunity to defend himself is worthy of honor. 3. Paul's defense led up to the Messiah in whom Agrippa might be supposed to believe if he accepted the Old Testament Scriptures. 4. To the pagan Festus Paul's address was based on unrealities; he could not comprehend Paul's point of view. 5. Paul had a wonderful opportunity to preach Christ, and the point was gained also that those in authority were convinced of his innocence as to capital matters. 6. Out of the maze of accusation, persecution and trial came at last the opportunity to preach in Rome.

IN THE PRESENCE OF POMP AND POWER.

A new procurator, Festus, had come to Caesarea. On his first visit to Jerusalem the foes of Paul gathered about the governor and asked that the prisoner be sent again to the Holy City. Festus replied that this could not be, but that his accusers should appear at Caesarea. At the hearing there the case against Paul broke down, and Paul declared to Festus that he would appeal to Caesar.

Appeal to Caesar. Paul was perfectly aware that to go to Jerusalem would mean the gathering of a mob; attempts on his life, and delays; and that a fair trial before the Sanhedrin was an impossibility. Caesarea with military protection, was better than Jerusalem. Paul, therefore, replied, "I stand at Caesar's judgment seat, where I ought to be judged; to the Jews have I done no wrong, as thou very well knowest. For if I be an offender, or have committed anything worthy of death, I refuse not to die: but if there be none of these things whereof these accuse me, no man may deliver me unto them. I appeal unto Caesar." There was but one thing for Festus to do. The appeal of a citizen to Caesar could not be refused, so Festus, after conferring with his own associates as to technicalities, answered, "Hast thou appealed unto Caesar? unto Caesar shalt thou go."

Agrippa. Herod Agrippa II, the son of Herod Agrippa I, in A. D. 52 was appointed by the Emperor Claudius to the tetrarchies formerly held by Philip and Lysanias with the title of "king." Bernice was his sister. Several cities of Galilee and Peraea were added to his kingdom by Nero in A. D. 55. A few days after Paul's hearing before Festus, Agrippa and his sister visited Caesarea in compliment to the new procurator, as diplomacy dictated. Paul was now awaiting a ship to take him to Rome. Festus was pondering a letter to be sent to the Emperor explaining the case of his prisoner and why he was being sent to Rome. Agrippa's arrival was, therefore, opportune. Being of Jewish stock and familiar with the religious questions and customs of the Jews, he was the very man to assist Festus, in his quandary. After the festivities in honor of the king and his sister were over, Festus laid Paul's case before Agrippa, explaining the situation in detail, telling him that the prisoner had been arraigned on "certain questions against him of their own superstition, and of one Jesus which was dead, whom Paul affirmed to be alive," and when "Paul had appealed to be reserved unto the hearing of Augustus, I commanded him to be kept till I might send him to Caesar."

Agrippa Hears Paul. It is entirely probable that Agrippa knew something of the Christians and of Paul, and that he already was anxious to hear what a leader of the new religion had to say. His reply, "I would also hear the man myself," can be translated, "I was wishing to hear the man myself." At once Festus promised him the opportunity. "Tomorrow," said he, "thou shalt hear him."

Paul's appearance before Festus and Agrippa was in no sense a new trial. Under no circumstances could Agrippa be his judge, and Paul was merely waiting to be sent to Rome. This was merely an occasion when Paul was given an opportunity to speak and the others to hear. It was, in fact, made a gala occasion. The chief "place of hearing" was made ready. Agrippa and his sister arrived with great pomp. The chief military personages and the principal citizens of the city were invited. Paul was brought in with a chain on his arm attaching him to a soldier.

Illustration. When Sinbad the sailor voyaged into the Indian Ocean his ship came within the influence of a magnetic rock. This attracted his vessel nearer and nearer, while silently the metal bolts were drawn from the ship's side, one by one, until the timbers fell apart and Sinbad was cast into the sea. Such is often the effect of worldliness on the moral nature.

Festus made a public explanation of the purpose of the assemblage. He told Agrippa and all present that Paul was accused by the Jews of being worthy of death, but that he had found nothing to make him think he had forfeited his life. He explained that Paul had appealed unto Caesar, and that he had determined to send him to the Emperor. Of Paul he says, "I have no certain thing to write unto my lord, wherefore I have brought him forth before you, and specially before thee, King Agrippa, that, after examination had, I might have somewhat to write. For it seemeth to me unreasonable to send a prisoner, and not withal to signify the crimes laid against him."

As Agrippa was the guest of honor and had been appealed to in order to aid Festus in explaining the case to the Emperor, it was he who now addressed the prisoner, on whom many curious eyes were fixed, as he said, "Thou art permitted to speak for thyself."

Agrippa Convicted. Then the Apostle who had been Divinely called to "bear the name of Jesus before Gentiles and before kings," gave forth his most remarkable defense of Christianity. He addressed Agrippa as one conversant with the customs and questions of the Jews. He defended himself as a good Jew, and proclaimed that he had been a persecutor of Christianity. With glowing emotion he narrated the story of his conversion and of his missionary work, in which he had called Jews and Gentiles to repentance. Taking his stand on Moses and the prophets, he declared that he preached the Messiah whom they had foretold.

Illustration. Among the ruins of Pompeii was found the body of a woman who evidently had perished while in the act of gathering up her jewelry before trying to make her escape. Thinking that she could save both her possessions and her life, she had risked the latter for the sake of the former and had lost both. Such is the attitude of thoroughly worldly people.

While much of this story was familiar to Agrippa, it was strange to Festus to hear of visions and revelations and prophecies and the resurrection. Listening intently, but carried away by amazement, Festus interrupted with a loud voice, crying, "Paul, thou art beside thyself; much learning doth make thee mad." But Paul, thus checked in his lofty speech, was unruffled, and replied calmly, "I am not mad, most noble Festus; but speak forth the words of truth and soberness. For the king knoweth of these things before whom I also speak freely; for I am persuaded that none of these things are hidden from him; for this thing was not done in a corner." Then addressing Agrippa directly, he earnestly asked, "King Agrippa, believest thou the prophets? I know that thou believest." Agrippa replied, "Almost thou persuadest me to be a Christian." Paul declared nobly and earnestly, "I would to God that not only thou, but also all that hear me this day, were both almost and altogether such as I am, except these bonds."

Paul had borne his testimony. Those who had come out of curiosity had been gratified by a remarkable scene. All could realize that this man was no criminal, but a man of great ability and lofty character. Festus and Agrippa had found out all that was necessary to write to the Emperor. Agrippa rose from his seat a sign that the assembly might disperse. In private conference the procurator and king agreed. "This man doeth nothing worthy of death or of bonds," and Agrippa said, "This man might have been set at liberty, if he had not appealed unto Caesar."

Illustration. When Aristides, acting as judge, was asked by the poet Simonides, who had a case before him, to stretch a point in his favor he replied, "As you would not be a good poet if your lines ran contrary to the rules of your art, so neither should I be a good judge or an honest man if I decided aught in opposition to law and justice."

Practical Truths. 1. Lange says the Christian has a right to appeal "from the sentence of the wicked to the judgment of the righteous; from the passions of the moment to the justice of the future; from the opinions of the world to the testimony of conscience; and from the tribunal of man to the judgment seat of God." 2. Remember that knowledge is nothing without faith. 3. Keep before you that it is true sanity to accept Christ. 4. Speak the words of soberness and truth and in the end others will realize their value. 5. Aim to be so true that you can sincerely say you wish others were in the same position as yourself. The test of every Christian is his own experience.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

And falling into a place where two seas met, they ran the ship and the forepart stuck fast, and remained unmovable, but the hinder part was with the violence of the waves. And the soldiers' counsel was to kill the lest any of them should swim out and escape But the willing to save Paul kept them from their purpose; and commanded that they which could should cast themselves first into the sea, and get to land: And the rest, some on and some on broken and so it came to pass, that they escaped all safe to land.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 27; 28:1-6.

Prayer: Our Father, Thou hast created sea and land and Thou reignest over both. Thou rulest over the tempests on the sea and canst keep Thy children when the elements rage. Likewise in the storms on the sea of life Thou dost watch over us. We praise Thee for Thy loving care, which is everywhere over Thy children. In the name of Christ, Amen.

"Be still, my soul; thy God doth undertake
To guide the future as He has the past.
Thy hope, thy confidence let nothing shake;
All now mysterious shall be bright at last.
Be still, my soul; the waves and winds shall know
His voice who ruled them while He dwelt below."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 60. Place, ship-board in the Mediterranean sea and island of Malta. Persons, Paul, Luke, Aristarchus, centurion Julius, soldiers, sailors.

Scripture Setting: Study of Sea and Ships. Sea, creation of God, Gen. 1:9, 10. Limits of, established by God, Psa. 1:9. Calmed by Jesus, Matt. 8:24, 26. Dead given up by, at resurrection, Rev. 20:13. Symbolical, in Daniel's vision, Dan. 7:2, 3. In John's vision, Rev. 4:6. Travelers on, see wonders of God, Psa. 107:23-30. Ship used by Jesus to teach from, Matt. 13:2. For passage, Mark 5:21. Wreck of, used as figure of spiritual disaster, 1 Tim. 1:19.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Paul was blessed on his journey by two congenial friends. 2. The native kindness of the human heart is finely illustrated in the centurion's treatment of Paul at Sidon. 3. The narrative by its accuracy in naval matters proves that it was written by an eye-witness. 4. Paul's far-sighted counsel was rejected probably on the principle that he was not a seaman. 5. The mild south wind proved a lure to peril. 6. In the crisis Paul was able to inspire courage. 7. The vision granted to Paul became a source of strength to the others. 8. Paul prayed that all his companions might be saved from the sea. 9. His alertness as well as his spiritual greatness serves in time of need. 10. Paul reflected the grace, spirit and character of his Master.

A CHARMED LIFE.

A general belief among the Indians who encountered George Washington in border warfare was that he was protected by a spell, since their best warriors had sent arrows and bullets in vain at his body. It is better to believe that he was protected by Providence. The soldiers of Napoleon the First were convinced that he also bore a charmed life; but Napoleon deemed himself a child of destiny. When Julius Caesar was in an open boat on the sea during a storm, and the oarsmen were terrified, he said, "Have courage. You carry Caesar." He felt in himself that he had work yet to do in the world, and this confidence rendered him entirely fearless.

Paul's Confidence. One of the most important facts about life is the reality of the unseen world. Until we are vividly aware of its ever-present existence we have learned but little. While Paul was yet in the Tower of Antonia in Jerusalem, he had a vision of Christ, and was told by the Master that he must bear witness to Him in Rome also. Mobs might rage and enemies plot, but they could not destroy this man. No matter what storms might arise or ships sink, He, who holds the waters in the hollow of His hand, would care for the life of this man and bring him to his destination.

Off for Rome. After Festus decided to send Paul to Caesar there was some necessary delay before a ship could be found to carry him. It is difficult for us of these modern days to understand the limited facilities in ancient times for transportation on the seas. With our great steamers crossing the broad oceans, with relatively few mishaps to voyagers, we are inclined to underrate the perils on what seems to us so small a body of water as the Mediterranean. Yet the Mediterranean was full of perils to the crafts of ancient times and for a considerable part of the year sailors did not venture upon its waters.

The Roman government had its warships, but it neither owned nor controlled others, and it did not employ its navy, as a general rule, to carry prisoners from remote parts of the empire to its capital city. Commercial ships, however, carrying grain and other products, frequently passed from port to port during the season of navigation, and these commonly carried passengers. A line of boats conveyed wheat from Alexandria to Italy, and there was also the coasting trade.

Festus detailed a centurion named Julius, of the Augustan cohort, to take charge of Paul and other prisoners on the way to Rome. Julius was accompanied by certain of his soldiers. With Paul went Luke and a friend and co-worker, Aristarchus. All went on board of coasting boat of Adramyttium, in Asia Minor, whose ports were various places on the Asiatic coast. It was now late in August and the navigation season was drawing toward its close. The first day's voyage was favorable, and after a journey of somewhat over sixty miles along the coast, they came next day to Sidon, where Julius gave Paul leave to go ashore to see his friends "and refresh himself." This phrase of Luke, a physician, suggests that Paul was ill, and the ministration of friends in their homes was, therefore, most welcome.

Putting to sea again, they found it advisable to sail under Cyprus "because the winds were contrary." Passing through the seas off Cilicia and Pamphylia, they came to Myra, a city of Lycia. There Julius found an Alexandrian wheat ship bound for Italy, but driven out of its course. On so large a vessel there was abundance of room for Julius, his soldiers, and his prisoners, and the transfer was made. For two months it seemed to every eye but that of faith that Paul was doomed. Never did the character of a great Christian shine out more grandly than did Paul's during that time. In each experience of his there are fresh revelations of the wonders of providence and the splendor and strength of the human soul. Under delays, accidents; in darkness, storm and wreck we see a soul serene, hopeful, sympathetic and wise. Setting forth for Cnidus, one hundred and thirty miles away, which in good weather could have been reached in one day, required many days' slow sailing. On arrival the winds would not permit them to enter the harbor. From here their direct course would have been for Cythera, but the northwest wind drove them southward. Doubling Salmone, the eastern point of Crete, they sailed under the lee of the island and came with difficulty to the fine harbor called Fair Havens, near the city of Lasea.

Paul Advising Seamen. In this harbor for a long time they remained wind-bound. The day of Atonement was past, which indicates that it was now late in September and the seas were increasingly dangerous. Paul's personality had already made a deep impression upon Julius and all on board the ship. In times past he had experienced perils of the sea, and he now entered into the discussion as to what they should do. They were debating as to whether they should winter where they were, though the haven was not commodious, or should put to sea and try to reach Phenice, thirty-four miles further east, where harborage was better.

Paul advised strongly against this move, saying, "Sirs, I perceive that this voyage will be with hurt and much damage, not only of the lading and the ship, but also of our lives. The centurion, who seems to have had the deciding vote, was influenced in a matter like this more by what the officers said than by Paul's words, and he voted to set forth.

Illustration. A man journeying along the coast of Scotland chose a road by the sands as seeming most pleasant. It lay between the beach and the cliffs and was safe only at low tide. Delighted with the view of the waters and the precipices, he sauntered on. Some one on the heights hailed him, saying that the tides were rising and that his only safety would be to ascend the cliffs, as that was the only place that would admit of his climbing. The stranger gave no heed to this counsel but passed on. Presently he noted that the waters had risen on the road in front of him. He turned hastily only to see that the beach was covered behind him. A glance revealed that the precipice at that point was too steep for him to climb. He sought refuge on a projecting rock, but soon the waters rose round him and he perished.

The company on shipboard awaited favorable signs. At last a soft south wind began to blow, and the officers taking this as a good omen, lifted their anchor, let out their mainsail, and keeping close to shore, passed Cape Matala, five miles from Fair Havens. All seemed to be going well, but one mind on board that ship had discerned that behind the gentle wooing of that south wind lurked danger.

Euroclydon. In a moment, as the ship sped onward there burst down upon it a tempest smiting it with terrific force. This east-northeast wind, coming from the island of Crete, is described as "typhoon-like," and is called "Euroclydon." Today such gales in the Levant are often accompanied by terrific squalls from the mountains. The sailors at once recognized their enemy by its name, and the dread word "Euroclydon!" rang from their lips. Nothing could be done in that raging storm but let the ship drive before the gale. No sailors on the wide seas could have furled that sail. On and on through the wild waters the ship drove, reeling and rocking as if she would break into pieces. For twenty-three miles, she was whirled madly onward. Happily, after that awful run she came under the lee of a small island called Claudia, where, with difficulty, the boat they had been towing was pulled upon the deck, thus providing a possible means of escape in case the ship should be wrecked. Fearful that she would fall asunder, the sailors lowered cables under the prow, and then drawing them toward the middle of the ship, they fastened them as tight as they could. Fearing now that they would be driven upon the quicksands on the Libyan coast, "she lay to under a storm-sail with her starboard side to the wind." (Smith.)

And now, headed away from the African coast, they drifted slightly to north of west at the rate of about a mile and a half a day.

The storm continued all night. The ship was leaking and when day came they began to cast overboard whatever could be spared. On the third day, as the leaks grew larger, and the pumps failed to keep out the waters, the passengers and sailors together heaved overboard the main mast. There was nothing more that men could do and they rushed into the black heart of the tempest: Neither sun nor stars were visible. All hope was abandoned. Wet, cold, without fire to prepare food, their courage had oozed away. But there was one soul that was undismayed. Gathering about him the whole company, Paul exhorted them to be of good cheer. Paul's account of visions had seemed absurd to Festus when he sat listening comfortably to his words at Caesarea, but a man with encouraging words from Heaven did not seem insane to these who now listened. They were hungry for any word of hope. "Sirs, ye should have hearkened unto me," Paul was heard saying, "and not have loosed from Crete, and to have gained this harm and loss. And now I exhort you to be of good cheer: for there shall be no loss of any man's life among you, but of the ship. For there stood by me this night the angel of God whose I am, and whom I serve, saying, 'Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Caesar; and lo, God hath given thee all them that sail with thee. Wherefore, sirs, be of good cheer; for I believe God, that it shall be even as it was told me. Howbeit we must be cast upon a certain island.'"

We may be sure that these words awakened new hope in many hearts, and that the conviction of Paul nerved all to renewed efforts. But that hope was to be further tried, as the tempest continued and the ship was drifting in the sea of Adria. On the fourteenth night after their leaving Clauda, the sailors, warned probably by breakers, sang out that they were drawing near land. They took the soundings, and found twenty fathoms. They sounded again, and found fifteen fathoms. Then, fearful of being cast upon a rocky shore, they let go four anchors from the stern and "wished for the day."

Paul Averts a Peril. When day dawned and the shore could be seen, the sailors plotted to lower the boat under pretense of casting more anchors, this time from the foreship, and pull for land, leaving the others to their fate. Paul, ever watchful for others, discerned their intent, and he said to Julius, "Except these abide in the ship, ye cannot be saved." Julius promptly ordered his soldiers to cut the ropes of the boat with their swords and set it adrift.

Illustration. When Mahomet was once encamped with his followers he heard one of them say, "I will loose my camel and commit it to 'God.'" Mahomet called to him, "Tie thy camel and commit it to God."

The light was increasing. All would need strength and courage for what was before them. Paul gathered the two hundred and seventy-six men about him and said, "This day is the fourteenth day that ye have tarried and continued fasting, having taken nothing. Wherefore I pray you to take some meat: for this is your health; for there shall not a hair fall from the head of any of you." Then he took bread, and having given thanks to God before them all, he began to eat. Taking hope from his words, all began to eat and presently a spirit of cheer pervaded the whole company.

To lighten the ship and so to enable it to run closer to shore, they cast their cargo of wheat into the sea. They were able by this time to see more clearly and a bay was discovered with a beach. After consultation they decided to cut away the anchors, to let down the rudders, hoist the foresail, and make for the beach. The spot they had mistaken for a creek was at the mouth of a little strait separating an islet from the larger island, "a place where two seas met." The ship was run aground and stuck fast, when the open sea, rushing in through the channel, broke the hinder part of the vessel to pieces; but the foreship remained unmoved.

The soldiers began to fear that their captives might leap into the sea, swim to shore and escape, therefore, according to Roman custom, they decided to kill them. But Julius, upon whom Paul had made a deep impression, to save him ordered the soldiers to desist from their purpose, and at his command such as could swim jumped into the sea and got ashore, while the others floated planks, or whatever movable things they could find, and so all escaped safe to land.

Illustration. When Anaxarchus was being crushed to death to make sport for his tormentors, he cried out, "Break the body of Anaxarchus, but his mind you can never break."

Practical Truths. 1. Christian graces win the admiration and respect of both friend and foe. 2. Loyal following of Christ will prepare you to meet every crisis of life. 3. Do not despise good counsel. 4. In times of shipwreck the Christian takes command. 5. We should hope in the darkest hours. 6. God is sovereign.

DR. C. D. WILSON.

And when we came to the cen-turion delivered

the

to the captain of the guard: but Paul was suffered to dwell by himself with a that kept him.

And it came to pass, that after three days Paul called the chief
of the

together: and when they were come together, he said unto them, Men and brethren, though I have committed nothing against the people, or customs of our fathers, yet was I delivered

from Jerusalem
into the hands
of the

Who, when they had examined me, would have let me go, because there was no cause of death in me. But when the Jews spake against it, I was constrained to appeal unto Cæsar; not that I had ought to accuse my nation of. For this cause therefore have I called for you, to see you, and to speak with you because that for the hope of Israel I am bound with this chain.

ACTS XXVIII: 16-20.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS ACTS 28:7-31.

Prayer: Our Father, Great and gracious are the gifts which Thy Gospel brings unto barbarians and civilized men alike. We thank Thee that the Spirit of Christ came as a benediction unto the people of Malta and unto the great city of Rome, and that it carries blessings everywhere. In the name of Christ, Amen.

"My cage confines me round,
Abroad I cannot fly;
But though my wing is closely bound,
My heart's at liberty.
My prison walls cannot control
The flight, the freedom of the soul.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 62-64. Places, Malta, Puteoli, Rome. Persons, Paul, centurion Julius, natives of Malta, Publius, soldiers, Christians and Jews in Italy.

Scripture Setting: Study of Contentment. Appreciation of possessions, Psa. 16:6. Rest in the Lord, Psa. 37:7. In one's self, Prov. 14:14. A merry heart, Prov. 15:13, 15, 30. Little with righteousness, Prov. 16:8. Quietness and strife, Prov. 17:1. A medium condition, Prov. 30:8. In labor, Eccl. 2:24. Sight and desire, Eccl. 6:9. With wages, Luke 3:14. With lot assigned of God, 1 Cor. 7:17. Without envy, Gal. 5:26. In whatever state, Philip. 4:11. Godliness with, 1 Tim. 6:6. Based on promise of God, Heb. 13:5.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Good qualities are found among all races. 2. Superstition by its very nature leads from one extreme to another. 3. Paul the Christian gains unsought ascendancy over Publius, Julius and all the pagans. 4. Paul was safe from harm and able to minister to others. 5. Christian fellowship was added to the assurance that came to Paul through the fulfillment of the promise that he would come safe to land. 6. Paul rightly explains to the Jews in Rome the facts in regard to himself. 7. In coming to cosmopolitan Rome Paul brought Christianity to the world. 8. Although chained to a soldier, the Apostle was a free man in Christ Jesus.

THE DREAM OF PAUL'S LIFE COMES TRUE.

Paul long before had said, "I must see Rome also, for Jesus had promised that he should bear witness to Him in that city. During the many weeks of stormy voyage on the Mediterranean, the vision of this promise fulfilled had been his source of strength and joy. He had escaped many perils, and was now well on his way.

Paul Makes Himself Useful. All the sailors and passengers of the Alexandrian wheat vessel had escaped from the wreck to the shore. Certain of the people of the thinly populated island noted as the day dawned, the shipwreck, and saw the men struggling to land. The news spread quickly, and many thronged the shore to assist the wet, shivering, hungry men. The inhabitants of this island of Malta, descended from Phoenicians, did not speak Greek, hence they are classed under the general name "barbarians." They made a fire, spoke words of welcome and in every way showed uncommon kindness.

Paul joined the others in gathering brushwood. He had laid a bundle of sticks on the fire when a viper, revived by the heat, crept out from the pile and fastened on his hand. The superstitious natives, seeing this, said to one another that "he must be a murderer who, having escaped the sea, was pursued by justice on land." But Paul shook the viper into the fire and suffered no bad effects. When they saw that Paul was not harmed, they said among themselves that he must be a god.

A Friendly Refuge. The scene of the wreck proved to be not far from the property of the Roman who was in charge of the island, a man named Publius. Finding that a centurion and some soldiers were in the party he invited them, with Paul and his friends, to his home and provided much-needed hospitality for three days. The father of Publius was seriously ill, and when Paul learned of this, he asked permission to visit him. Entering his room, Paul prayed with him, and then, laying his hands upon him, healed him. The fame of this miracle quickly spread abroad, and the native people brought their sick friends to Paul, who cured them. These wonderful deeds caused the people to look upon Paul as a blessed benefactor, and in gratitude they heaped upon him and his friends many honors. Upon their departure the people supplied abundantly such things they most needed.

Illustration. Pisistratus, the Athenian, was always accompanied by a servant with a bag of money, from which was supplied the wants of the sick, the poor, and the unfortunate. So Paul was always ready to serve and help.

There were yet three months before the season of navigation would open. During that period Paul must have made the Gospel known to many of the people. About the beginning of February another Alexandrian ship, the "Castor and Pollux," or the "Twin Brothers," which had wintered in the harbor, made ready to sail. Julius, his soldiers and prisoners engaged passage and bidding their friends on the island farewell they sailed for Syracuse. There they remained three days, then again setting sail they tacked in a circuit on account of the direction of the wind, and came to Rhegium where they stayed a day waiting for a south wind to spring up. On the second day afterward they came to Puteoli.

In Italy. Escaped from many perils, Paul and his company at last set foot on Italian soil. At Puteoli they were rejoiced to find Christian brethren, who gave them warm welcome and urged them to partake of their hospitality. Rested and refreshed in body and spirit, the company again set forth for the famous city now one hundred and forty miles away. Word had reached the Christians in Rome that the great Apostle was coming and a devoted company from the city came some forty miles to meet him and his companions. With what great joy Paul must have greeted these brethren at the market of Appius. Three miles further on they met a second group of Christians at the Three Taverns. At these manifestations of sympathy and love, Paul thanked God and was filled with new courage.

Julius Delivers His Prisoner. At last the Eternal City itself, the capital of the world, is in sight; the great center of power and wickedness, which Paul has so yearned to capture for Christ. His heart leaped within him. Christ had fulfilled the promise given to Paul in the castle in Paul's far away country, and given again in the midst of a raging storm on the sea. With what thrilling emotions Paul must have gazed! blended as was his presence there with the Divine intention, promise and protection. Many a conqueror had come to those gates to be received in triumph, but no man ever had entered that city before whose coming was the fulfillment of the direct promise of Christ.

It was in March, 61 A. D., in the seventh year of Nero, that Julius delivered Paul into the charge of that body of Praetorian Guards whose duty it was to watch over the person of the emperor. The captain of the guard was then the celebrated Burrus, an honest and upright man. Doubtless on account of a favorable report from Julius in regard to Paul, he granted him special favors. Though remaining coupled by a chain to a soldier, Paul was permitted to hire a house, in the vicinity of the quarters of the Guards, and to receive his friends, write letters and enjoy many privileges.

Conference with Jews. With his heart always longing for the conversion of his own race and recognizing that the command was to preach to Jew and Gentile; with a natural desire also to be understood by his own people; Paul sent an invitation to the chief Jews at Rome to visit him. When these men, three days after Paul's arrival, came to him, he addressed them as "brethren," and explained to them how he had come into his present position. He assured them he had done nothing against his race nor its customs. He declared that though he had appealed to Caesar, he had no intention of making an accusation before the emperor against his nation. They, on their part, stated that they had not received letters from Judea about Paul, nor had any of the Jews who had come to Rome reported to them any harm concerning him. They said that they would be glad to have Paul give them his thoughts about Christianity, which they knew was everywhere spoken against.

Preaching to the Jews. On an appointed day a large number of Jews went to Paul's lodgings and he spent the hours from morning until evening proving from the Scriptures that Jesus was the Messiah, the hope of Israel, the One for whom they all looked and prayed. Some were convinced, while others strongly disagreed. Toward the end of the conference there must have been some violent dissent for at the conclusion Paul applied to them a passage of Isaiah, declaring that their hearts were gross, their ears dull and their eyes closed. As a farewell word he declared, "Be it known, therefore, unto you, that the salvation of God is sent unto the Gentiles and that they will hear it."

The Jews in Rome had had their opportunity and had lost it. Henceforth Paul addressed himself to the Gentiles. For two years Paul lived in his hired lodging a prisoner, but one who enjoyed many privileges. Timothy was much with him, as were also Luke and Aristarchus. The church at Philippi sent him contributions. In that prison Paul wrote some of his great Epistles and thus reached a wider circle than he could have done with his spoken words. Many visited him, to whom he spoke and they were converted. He even reached some who were of the household of Caesar.

With cheerful and unbroken spirit Paul bore his confinement and made his prison a center of Gospel light and salvation unto many. At the end of two years he was set free. He afterward returned to Rome and went on to Macedonia. He spent a winter at Nicopolis and visited Dalmatia. He was apprehended in Asia and brought again to Rome, where he suffered martyrdom.

How marvelously Christ watched over this great servant of His carrying him safely over the seas, strengthening him to make his prison a scene of usefulness and of faith until at last He was ready to receive his redeemed spirit into Heaven!

Practical Truths. 1. Take part and help in all good works. 2. Go out of your way to show your Christian fellowship. 3. Make the best of the conditions around you. 4. Keep cheerful. 5. Realize that your service may reach much further than appears. 6. Sin is the only chain of bondage which can fetter your soul.

THIRD DIVISION

THE EPISTLES

AND

REVELATION

CHRIST OR DIANA

BY EDWIN LONG.

The incident upon which Edwin Long's famous picture is founded occurred during the Roman occupation of Ephesus, and shortly following Paul's institution of a Christian church there.

Among those attracted by the faith of the Nazarene was a virgin, daughter of a noble family, whose affianced lover was a junior commander of the Roman forces.

As in other Roman cities, those professing the new faith were subjected to indignity, torture and death. At the public gladiatorial festivals it was no uncommon thing for condemned Christians, refusing to abjure their faith in favor of the pagan gods, to be thrown to the lions, tigers and other wild beasts in the great amphitheatres, before a bloodthirsty, holidaying populace.

Ephesus was the seat of a famous temple of one of the pagan deities, Diana, corresponding to the Greek Artemis. The Roman governor of the city was merciless in persecution of the Christians. The picture presents the dramatic moment when, upon a public assembly in honor of the goddess Diana, the virgin convert, having been fruitlessly pleaded with by those near to her, was required to make public election of life by offering a sacrifice of incense to the many-breasted Diana, whose image shows at the left of the picture. Her soldier lover pleaded with her in vain. Even the Roman governor in the foreground at the left, the stern old arch priest of the pagan deity's temple, and the chaste, cold maidens, sworn to perpetual virginity in honor of the "virgin huntress of the moon," were touched by the conflict between love and true religion in one so young and beautiful. The Roman commander at the right, perhaps a friend of the junior commander, lays a restraining hand upon the shoulder of the Roman officer, as though he would delay the reading of the warrant. No need; her decision is made, despite the pleading of the dearly loved one, with noble fortitude, for Christ, and death, and life everlasting.

—JAMES BEALINGS

2 BY THE JOHN A. HERTEL CO.

CHRIST OR DIANA

After Edwin Long's painting by Jas. Bealings.

Births

William Richard Lecocq.

Born, October 7th, 1857.

Mary Ethel Lecocq.

Born, March 3rd, 1858.

Alma Inesien Lecocq.

Born, February 1st, 1859.

PEACE WITH GOD.

Therefore being justified by faith, we have

with God
through our Lord

Christ: By whom also we have access by into this grace wherein we stand,

and in hope of the glory of God. And not only so, but we glory in tribulations also: knowing that worketh

And patience, experience; and experience, hope: And maketh

not ashamed;
because
the

of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost which is given unto us.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ROM. 5:1-15.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Thy power is wonderful in moulding hearts and lives. Thou hast sent Thy Holy Spirit to fashion the human spirit into forms of wondrous beauty. Come, Thou great Artist, and recreate us in Christ, so that we may glorify Thee at all times. May Christ be formed in us the hope of glory, and may our lives reflect the radiance of His Heavenly nature and spiritual beauty. For Christ's sake. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, about A. D. 60. Place, where written, Corinth. Persons, Paul and the Roman Christians.

Scripture Setting: The Wonderful Salvation. God's inheritance, Psa. 33:1-12. Election of grace, Rom. 9:16-26. The perfected work, Phil. 1:1-11. The Spirit artist, Rom. 5:1-11. He will heal and save, Hos. 14:1-9. Kept by the peace, Phil. 4:1-7. The indwelling Christ, Gal. 2:17-21. Glorious and beautiful, Eph. 5:22-33.

Life and Conduct Setting: Sometimes it is asked if life is worth living; and also if it is possible to live a good life in this wicked world. Both questions are answered, as we think of the mighty forces at work, fashioning this new and true life, and

"There comes to my heart one sweet strain,
A glad and a joyous refrain,
I sing it again and again,
Sweet peace, the gift of God's love.
Peace, peace, wonderful peace.
Coming down from the Father above,
Sweep over my spirit forever I pray,
In fathomless billows of love."

CHISELS FOR CARVING CHARACTER.

The Chisel of Faith. Did you ever visit the studio of a sculptor? If so, you probably saw him patiently at work, chipping away the granite or marble from the block. Slowly the face and figure are formed according to his model. Some of those finished statues you have seen in parks, museums or art galleries.

Something like that is going on in the world among people. The material is the human soul and face, and the chisels must be specially fitted for working on such material. The Holy Spirit is the sculptor, and Jesus Christ is both the power and the pattern. The finished work is not a statue, but a living character. This story is about the chisels which carve characters in flesh and blood. The first chisel is faith, for Paul says that "being justified by faith we have peace with God." Faith is a wonderful chisel by which the Holy Spirit makes a beautiful character. That character is described here as at "peace with God." If so it must also be at peace with itself and with all men. When we remember how much of anger and envy are in most people we can see how great is the work which is done by faith. Sometimes this chisel is called trust, for it lets the Holy Spirit use it just as He pleases. The very first thing that is done, when faith begins to work, is to throw down the old model of self and set up the true and new model of Jesus Christ. The faith chisel will work on any kind of human material, even the very worst, for its motto is, "All things are possible with God." So it chips away the old, the marvelous results produced in the soul. 1. Set free from Satan and sin, by the finding of the highest court, vs. 1. 2. Fellowship and partnership with God and all the good everywhere, vs. 1. 3. All secured by Jesus Christ and assured in one's own faith, vs. 2. 4. Meeting, mastering and even utilizing life's hardest experience, vs. 3, 4. 5. The heart satisfied and made strong by the Holy Spirit, vs. 5. 6. This is done for the weakest sinner, and because he is weak and sinful, vs. 6-8. 7. And now doubly guaranteed both by the death of Christ and by His life, vs. 9, 10. 8. Producing a joy that is from God, and also in Him; a joy in sacrifice, in service, in faith, in love, in victory, vs. 11.

and fashions all after the new model. Personal faith in Jesus Christ gives strength and beauty to the life.

Why the Tree Fell. A slight storm laid low a tall, sturdy-looking oak. Then it was discovered that the tree consisted of a shell, its heart eaten away by the canker of rot. An insignificant stroke of disease carried to his grave a man tall, well-proportioned; apparently his vitality had been wasted away by the use of alcohol. Like the hollow tree, there was nothing to withstand the blast.

Sir Galahad, the old knight who stood as the type of chastity, said: "My strength is as the strength of ten, because my heart is pure." It is so still. The man whose heart is right has the power of ten average men from the very fact that his heart is right.—Selected.

The Chisel of Hope. Perhaps you are wondering why you never saw any of these chisels at work, as you can see the sculptor's chisels in his studio. Well, this is because the real work is hidden, and known only to the Holy Spirit. He works on mind, heart, conscience and will, and the result of the work is seen in the life—the way one looks and acts, and the way he treats other people, and especially the way he treats God. This chisel of hope changes one from despondency and despair to a character that is beautiful and happy and confident. Hope seems rather to be the brush of the artist than the chisel of the sculptor. But its strokes are so fine that the effect is like that of the brush. Hope creates a character that expects the best and very much of it, so that it is made to "rejoice in the hope of the glory of God."

What Makes the Face Beautiful? Sometimes, in passing through a crowd, we see a face that attracts us by its sweetness of expression. Perhaps it is an old face, crowned with a glory of hoary hairs; yet love, joy, and peace shine out of every dot and wrinkle in it. Sometimes it is a young face that beams with health and purity and beauty. But whether old or young, when we see that unmistakable soul-light in a face, we know the heart behind it is pure, the life good, and that the body thus illuminated is the temple of the Holy Spirit. Hope and joy are the true cosmetics of the soul and the face.—Ex.

The Chisel of Trial. It is called here tribulation, but it means trial. There is a picture in that word tribulation. It is of the man who is threshing out the grain in the old way. He used a sledge which they called a tribulum; and he would drag it over the corn and tear the grain with it. This would separate the husk from the kernel, and then they would blow the husk or chaff away, and leave the pure grain. Now trial does that to the character, when used by the Holy Spirit. Among the beautiful things that trial fashions is the character begetting patience, experience and hope. Many years ago, fathers and mothers used to name their girls after these graces. There was Patience in one family, Hope in another and Experience in another; and sometimes two or all three in the same family. This was because they thought so much of these qualities. The chisel of trial carves all these on the character, and so makes it very beautiful. The use of this chisel is often very painful, and may seem even unnecessary; but the great Sculptor knows when to use it. Then, too, even the model, Jesus Christ, was made perfect through suffering; and his followers may expect the same.

"All These Things Are Against Me." We remember a parable in which a preacher said, "I listened to a flute one day, complaining that it was spoiled by having a number of holes bored in it. It said, 'Once I was a piece of wood, very beautiful to look upon; now I am spoiled by all these rifts and holes;' and it said all this mournfully and musically. 'O thou foolish flute,' I said, 'without these rifts and holes thou wouldst only be a mere stick, a bit of mere hard, black ebony, soon to be thrown away. Those rifts and holes have been the making of thee; they have made thee into a flute; they are thy life, thy character, thy music and melody, and thou wilt not now be cast aside with contempt, but touched by even the fingers of future generations.'"—Sunday at Home.

The Chisel of Love. "The love of God is shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Spirit." Love is the chisel, and love is the character chiseled. This love chisel is a very peculiar and effective instrument. There are several kinds of it—as the love of God in giving His Son, the love of Christ in dying on the cross, and the love of one person for another. The Holy Spirit knows how and when to use each. In one of Paul's letters he speaks of the result of the Holy Spirit's work under another figure, namely, that of a fruit or growth. He puts love at the very first of these nine fruits of the Spirit. If you were in an orchard and saw an extra fine and ripe apple on the topmost bough of the tree, that would be like love. Love is quite different from trial, as a chisel; for love does its work usually so gently and tenderly that one scarcely knows that it is chiseling away part of one's very nature and life. This is the last chisel used, and it leaves the character very beautiful and lovable.

And note this—that this love is all of God in Jesus Christ. This is specially emphasized in verses 8-10. It is said that God "commendeth" His love, which means that He causes it to stand forth, and shine forth before the eyes of all. This love as seen in the sacrifice of Christ is the very highest in quality and the very greatest in quantity. It stands alone in its redeeming and forgiving power; for however great human love may be it cannot take away sin. And the action of this love chisel on the character is two-fold, both negative and positive. The negative result is stated in the phrase "saved from wrath." This of itself is a very great blessing, corresponding to the pardon bestowed on a criminal.

But Christ does much more than to pardon and that is shown in the phrase "saved by His life." This is beyond human comprehension; but we know it means to have a life like that of Christ; to be growing more and more into the fulness of His character; to have the spiritual power of Christ; to come at last into the Heavenly glory in Christ and with Him "changed into the same image from glory to glory." This is the crowning work of the chisel of love by the great artist, the Holy Spirit.

Quiz and Study. 1. What four Scripture words describe wrongdoing, and give meaning of each? 2. How may one know he is not at peace with God? 3. What does God think of sin and the sinner? 4. How is God's love shown for the sinner? 5. What are the five steps in salvation?

Practical Thoughts. 1. Jesus Christ alone secures to us the love of God and His peace. 2. The Christian should show both the fact of salvation and its beauty and glory. 3. Blessings and duties are linked and interlinked; and each needs and assures all the others. 4. The peace that God gives puts one in right relations with himself, with God, and with his fellow man. 5. To the Christian even trials and difficulties are but steps to service and glory. 6. The Heavenly joys are some of the best proofs of a Heaven to come. 8. The Christian should learn the art of soul sculpture, in the studio of Christ, under the training of the Holy Spirit.

DR. J. M. COON.

For

the { Wrath Anguish
Gnashing of teeth
Eternal night
Separation from God } of Sin is { Darkness Exposure Astonishment Terror Hopelessness }

But

the { Godliness Immortality
Fellowship with God
Triumph over death } of God is eternal { Light Inheritance
Freedom Exaltation }

through Jesus Christ our Lord.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ROM. 6:12-23.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, May we hear Thy call to us, "Choose you this day." As Thou hast set before us life and death, help us to choose life. Keep our feet in the straight and narrow way that leads to life eternal. May we hear Thy voice saying unto us, "This is the way—walk ye in it." For Christ's sake. Amen.

"We pass out at the world's wide gate,
Turning our back on all its state:
We pass along the narrow road
That leads to life, to bliss, to God."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 58. Place where written, Corinth. Persons, Paul and the Roman Christians.

Scripture Setting: Choose Life and Peace. Way of wisdom, Prov. 9:1-12. Remember thy Creator, Eccl. 12:1-8. Redeeming the time, Eph. 5:15-21. Turn and live, Ezek. 18:25-32. The living God, Heb. 10:26-39. All else is loss, Phil. 3:1-11. Seizing an opportunity, Mark 10:46-52. Choose now, 2 Cor. 6:1-10.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage is full of reasons, both negative and positive, why one should choose life and the way of peace. 1. Because it is man's duty to love and serve his Creator and Redeemer. 2. Because God has made it possible, and even easy so to do. 3. Because greatest privileges and honors go with the choice and service. 4. Because the judgments of God fall on those who do not choose. 5. The very past life of sin now calls loudly to take the true and right way. 6. Because the end of the sinful way is death, and the end of the holy way is life and blessedness.

A STORY OF TWO WAYS OF LIVING

Two Kinds of Spirit. When Rome was the queen city of the world, it was said that "all roads lead to Rome." It cannot be said of the life roads that people travel that they all lead to one place. They do all lead to eternity, and to one or the other of two places—Heaven or hell—the one the road to eternal life and the other to eternal death. This story is about the two ways of living. It will be seen that the travelers on these two roads are very different in many ways. By noting the difference we can discover which kind of life we are living; and if we are on the wrong road we can change to the right one.

Now the very first point of difference in persons is a difference of heart and spirit. When you look at George or Irene or Frances, you do not see the real boy or girl. That is hidden from view, and none can know it fully except God, who looks on the heart. We can judge of the heart and spirit, to some extent, by the way they act out in the life. Paul has just given us a picture of the two kinds of lives, and this shows that there are two kinds of spirit or heart—the holy and the sinful. One is "the servant of righteousness" and the other is the "servant of sin." God says to all boys and girls, and to older people, also, "Son, daughter, give Me thy heart"; and in Proverbs (4:23) it is commanded, "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."

The New Heart and New Life. You may as well hope to make a good painter or musician by hearing a lecture on the arts of music and painting as a righteous life by hearing a lecture on the ten commandments. There is but one way to become godly. "He that doeth righteousness is righteous."

The hearing of the Word is but wasted time if we are not going to practice what it teaches. And no one can or will practice the new life unless he first has received the new heart and spirit through faith in Christ.—Exchange.

Two Kinds of Purpose or Object. What are you looking at, and looking for? What are you hoping and working for? How far can you see and what do you see? The answers to these questions show which kind of life one is living. Where are you going? If to New York, then you are facing that way; if to San Francisco, then you keep facing towards the west. Just so, if one is planning to reach Heaven he will be found living the Christ life and traveling the Heaven road. The road may lead through the valley, or there may be enemies and difficulties, but we do not judge of it by these. The end of the journey, and the peace and joy on the one hand, or the misery on the other hand, are evidences of the kind of life one is living, and so of the kind of road he is traveling.

Have you read about the "thousand mile boulevard"? It starts near Washington, D. C., and ends at St. Louis, and follows the old highway route of a hundred years ago. But how much better and grander is the boulevard of eternal life which Christ has built for sinful man. It cost His life blood, and it starts from every man's home town and ends at the pearly gates of Heaven.

The converted Indian was altogether right when he said that he was now walking on "the Jesus road." Those who walk in that way live the true and godly life, for their purpose is to find God and Heaven and all the good. We have many lights and guide posts to show us this true way.

Steering by Mother's Light. "A father and daughter were out at sea in a storm, and near a dangerous coast. The mother lighted a lamp, and started up the worn stairway to the attic window. 'It won't do any good, mother,' the son called after her. But the mother went up, put the light in the window, knelt beside it, and prayed. Out in the storm the daughter saw a glimmer of gold on the water's edge. 'Steer for that,' the father said. Slowly but steadily they came toward the light, and at last were anchored in the little sheltered harbor by the cottage.

"'Thank God!' cried the mother as she heard their glad voices and came down the stairway with a lamp in her hand. 'How did you get here?' she said.

"'We steered by mother's light,' answered the daughter."—Exchange.

Two Kinds of Masters. There are really only two kinds. They may differ in appearance and claim and manner of acting, but in fact there are only two kinds of masters. These are Christ and Satan. Everyone is choosing one or the other as a master. The choice may be by act, rather than by word, but it is just as truly a choice. Indeed, it is more of a choice when made by the actions, for "actions speak louder than words." Then, also, it is true that if one fails to choose Christ he really chooses Satan, for one must choose one or the other. Satan pretends to give a world of pleasure and success, but he really gives only failure, disappointment and death. Jesus Christ may seem sometimes to lead one through trouble and sorrow, but He always gives eternal life. Jesus said, "I am come that they might have life, and that they might have it more abundantly."

Blessed Christ Road. A man has invented what he calls the shock absorber for automobiles. By a little relieving device near the rear wheels the rough places are not felt. Is our life road rough? Do strange and difficult experiences beset us? Here stands our Comforter, our Peace, our Shock Absorber. Here is One who will bear our burdens with us. Here is One who intercedes for us. Here is our Rest. What a wonderful Christ is ours, who comes to us, who abides in us and with us, who absorbs the shocks and woes of life and brings us peace.—Exchange.

Two Kinds of Wages. Another way by which we can tell what kind of a life one is leading is by the wages he gets, and by the master who pays him. A look at the picture page will help anyone to a right choice. Who would want to accept the invitation of Satan, that deceiver of souls? And who could resist the pleading word and face of the gracious Saviour, offering forgiveness and welcome? Then the contrast between "wages" and "gift" is suggestive. Who would not prefer the gift of God which is eternal life, to the wages of Satan, which are eternal death? The contrast between the two results and the two masters, is also helpful to a right choice. The black list of "wages" ending in eternal death is enough to terrify and paralyze; while the blessings and joys from the "gift" of God invite and appeal to all, both because of present benefits, and because of eternal joy and fellowship. God in the "gift" of His Son has given us assurance of the Divine help in working out our salvation. Jesus Christ as very God, came down to earth for this express purpose; to save and to give life, while Satan goes about continually doing all he can to hinder and destroy the soul.

These two kinds of living end in two kinds of destiny. The two life roads both lead into eternity, but how different that eternity in each case. Only the eye of God and the great judgment day can rightly divide these countless millions of earth travelers. But when that division is made one class shall hear the dread word "Depart," and the other will be welcomed by the sweet message "Come ye blessed." In which class shall we be then? In which class are we planning to be?

Where Will I Be? What a company that will be, gathered at the Judgment Day, before the Great White Throne! Yet there is something for each one of us to think of besides the immensity of the throng: I shall be somewhere in that crowd. More, there will be no possibility of escaping the piercing eye of the Judge. It will be impossible for one to hide himself behind another—Jesus will find every individual there and will know unerringly just what is in his heart. But why should we wish to hide from the gaze of the King? His is a loving eye. If we try to hide nothing from Him during the days of life we shall not wish to hide anything when life is done.

Quiz and Study. 1. Mention some things which draw people into the way of death. 2. Name four reasons for choosing the narrow way of life. 3. If one does not choose life, what road is he in?

Challenge Text. Enter ye in at the — gate, for — is the gate and broad is the — that leadeth to —. Matt. 7:(?).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Each one must choose for himself whether he will go in the way of life or not. 2. All reasons are in favor of serving God; many excuses are given for not serving Him. 3. God's love, Christ's death on the cross, the Holy Spirit's pleading are the great motives for a right choice. 4. The example of Christians and the soul's own interests urge to the same choice. 5. Decided choice of Christ is the only gateway to eternal life and blessedness. 6. It is a gracious providence which puts people in a position where they must choose. 7. The neglect to choose may be intended as only temporary, but death may make it permanent. 8. Not to choose Christ as Saviour is to choose that He shall not be your Saviour. 9. Satan says, "Not yet"; the Holy Spirit says, "Now is the accepted time," and it may be the only time.

DR. J. M. COON.

THE LIFE-GIVING SPIRIT.

There is therefore now no condemnation to them which are in Christ Jesus, who not after the flesh, but after the Spirit.

For the law of the Spirit of

in Christ
Jesus
hath made me

from
the law
of

and

For what the law could not do, in that it was weak through the flesh, God sending his own

in the likeness of sinful flesh,
and for sin,
condemned sin
in the flesh:
That the

of the law might be fulfilled in us, who walk not after the flesh, but after the Spirit. For they that are after the flesh do mind the things of the flesh; but they that are after the Spirit the things of the Spirit.

ROMANS VIII: 1-5.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ROM. 8:1-18.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, We thank Thee for the gift of the Holy Spirit who convicts of sin and gives the new heart. Make us willing to receive Him, and glad to live in and for Him. May He come to many who are indifferent and careless, and quicken them into life. For Christ's sake. Amen.

"We are but organs mute, till a master touches the keys—
Verily, vessels of earth into which God poureth the wine;
Harps are we, silent harps that have hung on the willow trees,
Dumb till our heartstrings swell and break with a pulse Divine.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, About A. D. 60. Place, where written, Corinth. Persons, Paul and the Roman Christians.

Scripture Setting: The Holy Spirit's Work. Revival by the Spirit, Acts 2:1-13. Life by the Spirit, Ezek. 37:1-14. Revelation through the Spirit, 1 Cor. 2:1-10. Gift of the Spirit, Joel 2:21-29. A guide to the truth, John 16:7-15. Power by the Spirit, 2 Cor. 3:12-18. Prayer by the Spirit, Rom. 8:15-27. Refreshing by the Spirit, Acts 3:12-21.

Life and Conduct Setting: The Holy Spirit is named about sixteen times in the first sixteen verses of Rom. 8. In these verses His place and work are indicated. 1. He is the new law and Guide to the believer, vs. 1, 2. 2. He gives power, in Christ, to follow the Guide and obey the law, vs. 3, 4. 3. He weans the believer from worldly things and draws him to the spiritual, vs. 5, 6. 4. He brings the believer into full fellowship with God in Christ, vs. 7-9. 5. He makes him active, energetic, consecrated, vs. 10, 11. 6. He gives him a new vision of life, vs. 12, 13. 7. He imparts to him the Divine nature and power, vs. 14-16.

HOW PEOPLE ARE SAVED.

The Gracious Power of God. Here is a man on horseback, and lashing his horse into a gallop, faster and faster. If you were near enough you could hear him whisper to himself, "I am afraid I am too late! I wish I had five minutes more, or even one minute." And then he looks at his watch, and whips his horse into a faster gallop. He is encouraged by seeing a procession of men slowly marching. He knows now that the deserting soldier has not been shot and that he has still another minute of time. Why is he hurrying so? He has a pardon for the convicted man. Now he is near enough to call, and he shouts, "Pardon, pardon!" The man is saved, for they all wait to see what news he brings from the president. By this pardon he is freed from the penalty of death. He is a saved man. This is a picture of the sinner who is saved by Jesus Christ. "There is therefore now no condemnation to them who are in Christ Jesus." By the Holy Spirit the sinner was quickened in his inner life. He saw that he was a sinner; he saw, too, that Jesus Christ was able to save, and was actually offering pardon. He hails the offer and joyously accepts the pardon. It is the life giving Holy Spirit who has made him willing to be saved, and who has made him will, or choose to be saved.

The Power of Love. I sat down in the cell on the iron floor and put my arm around the boy. I told him how much I thought of him, and how I despised the bad things he did. Yet what could I do if he did not help me? I might help him, but I could not carry him; I would always be his friend, but he was getting both himself and me in trouble if he "swiped things." How could he expect a judge to keep his job if his boys did such things? He saw the point, and standing upright there in the cell, the light in his eyes speaking better than his words, the earnestness of his promise to "stay wid yer, Judge," as he tearfully declared he would never get me into any trouble and we would both keep out of jail.—Judge Lindsay.

Are You Trying to Save Yourself? We all are sinners, and we know it full well. But all do not accept God's way to be saved. Many people think they can be saved by a good life. But the Bible teaches us that the good life is a result of salvation, and not the cause of it. People may do many right and good acts before they are saved, but they cannot act right before God until they are right with God; and they can be right with God only by accepting Jesus Christ as their Saviour, trusting only in Him. All are in the grip of sin and death, and only the "Spirit of life in Christ Jesus" can break the fetters and set one free. Often you hear people say, "It is impossible to reform a person by law." This is true; for all the law can do is to hold back the forces of evil so that the true reformer can work. It is just the same with the sinner. The good life cannot save him. It can only help to bring him where he can be saved. This is what is meant by the words, "What the law could not do in that it was weak through the flesh," etc.

Is the Soul Connected? Have you ever toyed with the key of a telegraph instrument while the circuit was closed? The lesson is plain. It is in spiritual telegraphy as in material. If the battery is not working, the message is mere clatter. We may do, but if God is not doing through us, then all our doing is naught. Prayer connects you with the Divine battery of life and power. Prayer puts you "in the Spirit," and "it is the Spirit that quickeneth." From the chamber of prayer you come forth to men with the unction, the subtle power, the thrill of God's own life upon you; and as you touch them in speech, deed or prayer, "virtue goes forth from you," for then it is not you, but God that worketh in you. As you keep asking, God keeps doing. When you grow prayerless, your deeds grow powerless.—Selected.

A Pardon Message from Heaven. "God sending His own Son in the likeness of sinful flesh," is the pardon courier and the message from the King of kings. Jesus Christ is both the message and the Messenger, for He said, "I am the Way, the Truth, and the Life." The case was urgent. The law could not save the sinner, but rather condemned him. Good works could not save him, but rather added to his guilt. "I will save him," said the Son of God. So God sent Him, in the fulness of time. "God so loved the world, that He gave His only begotten Son." Jesus Christ is the swift courier of salvation, sent from Heaven with a full pardon for sinful man; every man, every boy, every girl, every woman. He says, "Lo, I come to do Thy will," and He speeds on the way "to seek and save" before it is too late. It was a long hard journey by which He came, requiring much sacrifice of His Heavenly glory, and needing that He become just like the sinner he would save—like him in appearance and nature, but still kept holy and pure from sin. This was necessary if He would save from sin. And now what is that we see? When the journey is nearly ended, wicked men catch Him and bind Him and beat Him and mock Him, and crucify Him. Alas, alas, has He failed to get the pardon to the sinner in time? No, God makes this put the seal on the document, for it is sealed by His blood; and now it is complete, He Himself says, "It is finished." Here is pardon—pardon for all who will accept it. He has come, and He is here in time to save us.

The Verse That Saves. There died recently in the city of Philadelphia a minister of considerable prominence in his church and profession. The remarkable thing about his life was his wonderful conversion. He was born of Christian parents and brought up in a Christian home. When he reached those years of boyhood when his parents thought he should decide for Christ and join the church, his mother made him the special subject of her prayers. At sixteen the boy was still indifferent to religious things, though quite regular in his attendance at church. One Sunday the pastor preached on the text, "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ." Looking at this boy, he added, "sinner, that verse has saved millions, it will save you. You are condemned in your trespasses and sins, but here is the verse that saves." He felt that it was just what he needed and it led to his immediate and sound conversion.

How One May Know If He Is Saved. There are several ways. If one has heard and obeyed the gracious invitation of the Saviour, he must be saved. Those invitations are, "Come," "Repent," "Believe;" and whosoever believeth shall be saved. Then when "the righteousness of the law" is fulfilled in him he gives evidence that he is saved. At creation God said that "all was very good," and at this new creation of a soul by the Holy Spirit all is seen to be very good and beautiful. Once more, if one is in the habit of obeying the Spirit, instead of his own selfish desires, he has proof that he is saved. It all depends on who is your master, Christ or Satan. "They that are after the flesh (the unsaved) do mind, or obey, the things of the flesh; and they that are after the Spirit do mind or obey the things of the Spirit." This is the best evidence of all that one is saved.

Faith and Works. There isn't much good in religion which doesn't do anybody any good. If our profession is like a hat or coat, to be worn at certain functions, or when it is convenient, it will not affect the life in any noticeable way. If religion doesn't make a new man out of the one who espouses it, we need a new kind of religion.

Quiz and Study. 1. What other names does the Holy Spirit have? 2. How did the Spirit descend on Christ and when? 3. What was the symbol of the Spirit at Pentecost? 4. What other figures are used to describe the Spirit? 5. Name four things the Spirit does.

Challenge Text. "When He is — He will — the world of — of — and of judgment." John 16: (?).

Practical Thoughts. 1. The Holy Spirit is gentle, all pervasive and mysterious as the air. 2. The sinful heart is blind until enlightened by the Spirit. 3. This 8th chapter of Romans is the victory chapter of the Bible. 4. The Holy Spirit works upon man, for man, in man, by man. 5. Man may resist the Spirit, grieve the Spirit, quench the Spirit, sin against the Spirit. 6. The various works of the Spirit are suggested by His different emblems, fire, oil, water, door, voice, wind, rain and dew. 7. The Spirit's Deity is shown by His equal association with God and Christ, and by the titles, Spirit of Christ, Spirit of the Lord, etc.

DR. J. M. COON.

Who shall separate us from the love of Christ? shall tribulation, or distress, or or

or

or peril,
or

As it is written, For thy sake we are killed all the day long; we are accounted as for the slaughter.

Nay, in all these things
we are more than through him that loved us. For I am persuaded, that neither

nor

nor

nor principalities, nor powers, nor things present, nor things to come, nor height, nor depth, nor any other creature shall be able to separate us from the love of God, which is in Christ Jesus our

Lord.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ROM. 8:28-39.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, We thank Thee for the covenant of grace which brings us a sure salvation. May we trust Thy love and power whatever the difficulties and enemies that confront us. The good work which Thou hast begun in us Thou wilt finish, as Thou hast promised. Grant that we may see Thy hand in all the affairs of life, working our good and Thy glory. For Christ's sake. Amen.

"When I fear my faith will fail,
Christ will hold me fast.
When the tempter would prevail,
He can hold me fast.
I could never keep my hold,
He must hold me fast;
For my love is often cold,
He must hold me fast."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, About A. D. 60. Place, where written, Corinth. Persons, Paul, and the Roman Christians.

Scripture Setting: Kept of God. Kept by God, 1 Pet. 1:5. By the indwelling Christ, Gal. 2:17-21. By the peace of God, Phil. 4:1-7. By a wakeful God, Psa. 121. By the Good Shepherd, John 10:7-18. Under His shadow, Psa. 91. By the life of Christ, Col. 3:1-11. Shall never perish, John 10:22-30.

Life and Conduct Setting: The security of the believer is frequently emphasized in the Word.

It is taught in this passage. 1. By the fact that all forces in the world work for his good. 2. By the fact that he is known by name to God and Christ. 3. By the fact of likeness to Christ who lives forever. 4. By the fact of complete and satisfactory justification before God. 5. By the fact that God has covenanted to be ever in him and with him. 6. By the fact of Christ's victories and effective intercession for him. 7. By the fact that both God's promises and the believers' faith affirm the certain "security" of the believer.

THE CHRISTIAN SAFE AGAINST ALL ENEMIES.

A Seven Division Army. What great war days those were in 1861 to 1865! The whole country north and south, east and west, was stirred with the marching of soldiers, the shout of battle and the groans of the dying. The great army of the North had six general divisions, and the army of the South probably had as many. We are rejoicing now that the soldiers of the blue and of the grey are shaking hands over a forgotten past, and are joining ranks in fighting the common enemies of our day and nation. In our story today we have a picture of a mighty army marching against the Christian. It has seven large divisions, led by as many generals. There is General Tribulation, leading the forces of Distress, with his host of anxieties and troubles that lurk and camp in one's own homeland. General Persecution, who cruelly follows his victims wherever they flee; General Famine, with his gaunt and bony soldiers; General Nakedness, whose army strips even the clothing from one's back; General Peril, who is ever threatening to dash over the line with his bushwhackers and raiders; and General Sword, with his swelling ranks of the flashing blades dipped in blood. Is there any chance whatever for the Christian to escape from all of these enemies?

The Christian's Conquering Leader. Look! "Who is this that cometh, traveling in the greatness of His strength?" "I that speak in righteousness, mighty to save." He has seen all these divisions of the opposing army with their generals and their hostile attacks, and He says, "I will tread them in Mine anger and trample them in My fury, for the year of My redeemed has come." "I looked, and there was none to help; and I wondered that there was none to uphold; therefore Mine own arm brought salvation." This is the Christian's conquering Leader, "going forth conquering and to conquer." Nothing can defeat him or withstand him. This Christ King and General conquers all easily, for by Him "we are more than conquerors." By this is meant that the very enemies and difficulties are made to help the Christian. A few verses before it is said that "all things work together for good to them that love God." One enemy or difficulty may seem to work harm; but when taken together with all other things the result is good. Christ is the conquering Leader who makes all things to work out good, and helps the Christian to win the victory over all enemies.

"All Things Through Christ." On the occasion of defeat, Napoleon at one time said petulantly: "I cannot be everywhere." Our living Christ is everywhere at all times. He is the Omnipresent and Omnipotent Leader. The admirers of Charlemagne set up his corpse in its grave, crowned his pulseless temples, and put a sceptre in his bloodless fingers, as if to declare that he should still lead them to conquest (Foster). What mockery and weakness! Our King and Leader lives. He has come out from the grave; on His head are many crowns; in His hand are the keys of death and the grave; and He goes forth conquering and to conquer.

The True People of Destiny. Here is a remarkable thing. The Christian looks out into the future and declares that he is mightier than any and all forces that can come against him. Read that long list of the greatest possible opposing agencies. "Death," who is the very king of terrors; "life," that is full of dangers; "angels," with their strange power; "principalities," representing princely and royal dignity; "powers," all the great physical forces of nature; "things present and things to come," in the changing orders of time; "height and depth," suggesting unbounded powers for destruction; "any other creature" in the whole universe of God. Amidst all these possible enemies and difficulties the Christian stands enfolded and kept by the love of God. That love that redeemed him will also keep him. Nothing can separate him from it. He not only does not fear any of these forces, but he knows he is superior to them.

Why is the Christian so confident in this spirit of victory? Because he has so clear a vision of the keeping power of Christ. In verse 35 Paul cries out with a challenge to all the world, "Who shall separate us from the love of Christ?" In verse 39 he states the same fact by a positive affirmation. We need to remember that the power is not in ourselves, but only and altogether in Christ. He graciously allows this great power to operate in and flow through the Christian. When the obedience and consecration are perfect the people of God go forward like the moving of "an army with banners," and all because the Holy Spirit is giving guidance and power.

The Spirit of Conquest. After the battle of Lookout Mountain, where our army cleared the heights with such an irresistible charge, General Grant inquired of Wood and Hooker and Sheridan, "Did you order that charge?" They each replied, "No; the men were filled with such enthusiasm that they leaped to the fray, defying danger and death, and nothing could stop them." This illustrates the words of Christ, "The Kingdom of Heaven suffereth violence and the violent take it by force." The Laymen's Missionary Movement in these days seems to point to the time when the Church will be filled with such enthusiasm for the conquest of the world that its members will go forward, whether leaders give the word of command or not. And pastors who lag behind will find a fire kindled, either within them, or underneath them.—Exchange.

The Three-fold Love That Conquers All. "Were you not afraid?" said one after I had told him of going up to the top of Eiffel tower. "Not at all," I replied. The fact is that I had faith in the genius that built it, and in the iron and steel that were used. These were the great factors and laws of the material world, and they could reasonably be trusted. But here are the mightier forces of the spiritual world, all combining for the protection of the Christian. Certainly then he can trust them, and shout his victorious challenge to all the world. This three-fold love is the love of God, who plans salvation and protection; the love of Jesus Christ, who carries out the plan by giving His life; and the love of the Holy Spirit, who fills the soul with the truth and power of Christ, and who inspires the Christian to say, "I can do all things through Christ, who strengtheneth me." As human love is the mightiest human force, so Divine love is the mightiest Divine force. When these three Divine loves are united it is impossible to break through them to hurt or destroy. The Christian is just as secure and safe as the throne of God itself. God is "able to keep that which we have committed to Him, against that day." "That soul, though all hell should endeavor to shake, I'll never, no never, no never forsake."

The Lord's Property. "You are His by donation, for the Father gave you to the Son; His by His bloody purchase, for He paid the price for your redemption; His by dedication, for you have consecrated yourself to Him; His by relation, for you are named by His name and made one of His brethren and joint-heirs. Rise to the work with all your powers: and when the great sweat stands upon your brow, and you are tempted to loiter, cry, 'No, I cannot stop, for I am Christ's.' 'I am a Roman!' was of old the reason for integrity; far more, then, let it be your argument for holiness, 'I am Christ's.'"—C. H. Spurgeon.

Quiz and Study. 1. How may we know that "all things work for good"? 2. What four things are stated about Christ as our Saviour? 3. What does God the Father do for our salvation? 4. What does God the Holy Spirit do? 5. What are the four proofs of conversion?

Challenge Text. "For we know that all ——— work together for ——— to them that ——— God." Rom. 8:(?)

Practical Thoughts. 1. The Christian life is a blessed one, as well as a safe one. 2. Our approach to God and Heaven is only in and by Jesus Christ. 3. As God has assured to us our salvation, so we should render to Him our service. 4. This finished salvation of the tri-une God leaves the sinner altogether without excuse, if he does not accept it. 5. It is the highest honor and glory to become a sharer in this salvation. 6. The greatest trials and sufferings are not worthy to be named in comparison with the "future glory."

Dr. J. M. Coon.

FAITH AND CONFESSION.

But what saith it?
The word is nigh thee,
even in thy mouth
and in thy heart:
that is, the word of faith, which we

That if thou shalt confess with thy mouth
the Lord Jesus, and shalt

in thine heart
that God hath thou shalt be saved. For with the heart man believeth unto and with the mouth confession is made unto salvation.

For the scripture
saith, Whosoever
believeth
on him shall not be

For there is no difference between the

and the

for the same Lord over all is rich

unto all that call upon him. For whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved.

ROMANS X: 8-13.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ROM. 10:1-13.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Greatest of all Thy gifts to us is faith in Thee. Greatest of all Thy commands to us is confession of Thee. May these twin truths and facts be seen in our lives. By word and act and constant influence may the heart declare its love and loyalty to the Saviour who makes it all possible. For Christ's sake, Amen.

"In ourselves the sunshine dwells;
In ourselves the music swells;
Everywhere the heart awake Finds what pleasure it can make;
Everywhere the light and shade
By the gazer's eye is made."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 60. Place, where written—Corinth. Persons, Paul and the Roman Christians.

Scripture Setting: Faith and Confession. Walking in Christ, Col. 2:1-7. Power of faith, Rom. 1:16-17. Holding fast our faith, Heb. 4:1-16. A dead faith, Jas. 2:14-26. Profession not enough, Matt. 7:13-23. Confessing Christ, Matt. 10:16-33. Walking worthily, Eph. 4:1-16.

Life and Conduct Setting: The way of salvation, vs. 9, 10 is the centre of the lesson. The righteousness of faith is compared with the righteousness of the law. The passage shows the origin and growth of a genuine faith. We see the proofs of such a faith. 1. It trusts entirely to Christ's sacrifice and merit. 2. It magnifies the righteousness of Christ. 3. It roots in and grows by the Word of Christ. 4. It is planted in the heart of man, and becomes the ruling and dominant force. 5. It expresses itself along all lines of outward activity. 6. It brings the Divine approval and blessing. 7. It is open and offered to all, and may be had for the asking, for it is the gift and work of the Holy Spirit.

FOUR SIGNS OF LIFE.

The Sign of the Heart. Two friends were looking at a statue in an art gallery. "How beautiful it is," said one. "Yes, and how life-like," said the other. "You would almost think it might speak." We all know that the statue is not alive, however life-like it may seem. It has no heart and no breath. Our story is about the new life in Jesus Christ, started by the breath of the Holy Spirit. One of the signs of that life is the action of the heart. It is called faith, and is the love of the heart for the Saviour, or the breathing of the soul because of that love.

"Can you feel his heart beat," the policeman asked as they were examining the body of the man rescued from the lake. The heart beat is the test of life. The little boy who accidentally killed his playmate, said that he put his ear to his heart and he heard it beat once and then stop. He was just alive and then died. Paul tells here of "the word of faith which we preach". He says that if thou "shalt believe in thine heart that God hath raised Him from the dead thou shalt be saved"; that is, shall be made alive in heart and soul. And all have the opportunity to hear and believe; at least all in this Christian land. That first picture is what can be seen everywhere. Christ is preached and taught as a Saviour in churches, in Sunday schools in Young People's societies in Christian homes.

Taking God At His Word. A little girl of seven was taught in a children's meeting the prayer, "Create in me a clean heart," and told that only Jesus could do this, but that He would if she believed Him. That night she asked the Lord to take her old heart entirely away and give her a new, clean heart. The next night her mother noticed that she did not pray, "Create in me a clean heart." She asked the child whether she had forgotten it. "Oh, no, mamma," was the answer, "but it would not be right to ask God again for a clean heart, would it? I asked Him for it last night, and he said He would do it, if I asked him; so I know he has given it to me, for He is sure to keep His promise. He can't say 'No,' can He, mamma?"

The Sign of the Tongue: "With the mouth confession is made unto salvation." The tongue is made to stand for the outward life, as the heart does for the inner life. If one is alive to God, and for Him, he will show it in his life, by such acts and words as are becoming in a Christian. That fourth picture shows how this may be done. At the very start one confesses Christ by his baptism and joining the church. In this way he tells everyone that he has faith in Christ, and has accepted Him as a Saviour. Then his life is a confession of his faith. God expects, and the world expects that he will make his life correspond with his faith. Not to do so makes him a hypocrite of the worst kind. The tongue is one of the hardest members to control, and if one confesses Christ with his tongue he is likely to confess Him every other way.

Then, too, the tongue is one of the chief life builders—a bad tongue building a bad life, and a good tongue a good life. "With the mouth confession is made unto salvation," if true not only in the beginning of salvation, but in its growth and influence.

The right kind of a tongue, and rightly used, can make a life beautiful, and strong, and so it is one of the best signs of the new life. "Then they that feared the Lord spake often one to another; and the Lord harkened, and heard it, and a book of remembrance was written," etc.

The minister, who wished to reprove a member for neglect of prayer-meeting, used this sign. After warming himself by an open grate, he took the tongs, and placed a live coal alone on the hearth. It soon grew dim, and at last was only a black mass. The guilty man spoke up and said, "you need not say a word to me, for I'll be at prayer-meeting next Wednesday night." The tongue is both a sign and a source of the new life.

An Unruly Tongue. "Have you heard of the two dangerous doors a boy has? The doors I mean are pink or scarlet; and when they open you can see a row of little servants standing in white, and between them is a little lady dressed in crimson." "They need a strong guard on each side, or else there is great trouble." "Why, what comes out?" said little Peace with wondering eyes. "When the guards are away," said cousin Will, "I have known some things to come out sharper than arrows, and they make terrible wounds. They are words spoken by this little crimson lady, which is the tongue."

The Sign of the Divine Favor. Does God love all people? Yes, but not in the same way. He loves the unsaved sinner in a way to influence and persuade him to be saved. He loves the saved sinner in a way to show His joy and approval. The first is called the love of benevolence, the second the love of approbation, or approval. This latter is a sign of life, for it shows that one is saved. "Whosoever believeth on Him shall not be ashamed." He shall not be put to shame, for he will have the protecting and favoring love of God. This favor of God is peculiar in the case of the Christian for it makes all things work for good to him. And it enables him to see the love of God even in the trials and troubles of life. Thus even this earthly life is full of beauty for it has the sign and seal of the Divine favor on it.

Many times even in the new life, the love of God is crowded out by the love of the world. These are two things which cannot mingle and work together. If either one flourishes the other will languish and weaken.

It is said of two rival Scottish clans that even their bloods would not mix when poured into the same dish, so great was their hatred of each other. So God and the world will not work together. "Ye cannot serve God and mammon." As worldly love and worship prove that one is a follower of Satan, so love to God and worship of Him are a sure sign of the new and true life. Also God's special blessings and favor are a part of this sign.

The Poetry of Life. There is no such poetry as that of a genuine Christian character. It is the beauty of life. Life is sweet, life is beautiful. In the spring of the year, when life is bursting forth from every tree, every shrub, and every plant, all nature is clothed with beauty. The Christian religion is not merely a creed, or a bundle of ceremonies, or a profession, but a life. Let no one be content with a mere form of religion, for then he will never see its real beauty. As one can feel physical life throbbing through his nerves, so the Christian can feel spiritual life palpitating within. The most beautiful life of all is the life of God in the soul of man.—Ex.

The Sign of the Bible. God's Word tells who are alive and saved. "Whosoever shall call upon the name of the Lord shall be saved." All such are made alive by the power of the Holy Spirit, and because of the sacrifice of Jesus Christ. This is the best sign of all. Each of the other signs is interpreted in part by one's own experience, and some allowance may be made for that. But the Bible sign is the plain and strong promise of God to those who honestly and sincerely come to Him for life and salvation. The bare promise of God has held many a Christian in time of trial and weakness; held him until the heart could begin to beat again, and the tongue and life could begin to confess again, the favor and love of God could be seen again. By the Bible test and sign we may find among the saved those who differ greatly in appearance as shown by the last two pictures. We may find also that those who differ in manner of life and conduct are yet alive and safe according to the promise of God.

The Wonderful Word of God.—"If I follow the thundering Nahum, when his horses plough the waters; or Habakkuk, when he sees the tents of Cushan in affliction; if I read Malachi, when the earth is burning like an oven; if I turn to the smooth page of John, who tells of love; or the rugged chapters of Peter, who speaks of fire devouring God's enemies; if I turn aside to Jude, who launches forth anathemas upon the foes of God, everywhere I find God speaking. It is God's voice, not man's; the words are God's words; the words of the Eternal, the Invisible, the Almighty, the Jehovah of ages. This Bible is God's Bible; and when I see it, I seem to hear a voice springing up from it, saying, 'I am the book of God; man, read me! I am God's writing; study my page, for I was penned by God; love me, for He is my Author, and you will see Him visible and manifest everywhere.'—Spurgeon.

Quiz and Study. 1. What other word of the same number of letters describes faith? 2. When may it be said that you have faith in your mother or father? 3. Who is meant by "whosoever" in verses 11 and 13? 4. If the heart is right what kind of fruit will it bear? 5. If the fruit of the life is not good, what kind of a heart is back of it?

Practical Thoughts. 1. "Be ye perfect" may be realized by the believer only in and by Christ. 2. As salvation was impossible by works, so God provided one through faith. 3. The truths necessary to salvation are all plain and simple as revealed facts. 4. Satan keeps many souls from the facts of the Gospel by undue emphasis of its mysteries. 5. A mere intellectual faith does not save for even the devils have that. 6. True saving faith is a product of the love of God, the sacrifice of Christ and the work of the Holy Spirit.

Dr. J. M. COON.

Be kindly affectioned one to another with brotherly

in honour preferring one another;
Not slothful
in fervent in spirit; serving the Lord; Rejoicing in patient

in continuing instant

in

Distributing to the necessity of saints; given to Bless

them
which you: bless, and curse not. Rejoice with them that do

and weep
with them
that

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS ROM.12:1-21.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Thou art both the life, and the way to life. Make us altogether like Thyself in nature and in conduct. Be Thou our perfect pattern. Be Thou the power and skill in us to fashion our lives like Thine. For Christ's sake, Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 60. Place, where written, Corinth. Persons, Paul and the Roman Christians.

Scripture Setting: Rules for a Right Life. Imitating Christ, Phil. 2:1-11. Right aim and end, 2 Tim. 4:8. True spirit and purpose, Rom. 12. The supreme gift, 1 Cor. 13. Earnest for the right, 1 Cor. 9:19-27. Heeding good counsel, Prov. 3:5-18. Right ideals and motives, 2 Cor. 5:14-19. Constant in good works, Eph. 2:1-10.

Life and Conduct Setting: "We find in these verses six laws of Christian character. 1. The law of thoroughness. The Christian should be sincere, pronounced, decided. He should be 'out-and-out' for Christ and against sin. 2. The law of frater-

"To do him any wrong was to beget
A kindness from him; for his heart was rich,
Of such fine mould, that if you sowed therein
The seed of hate, it blossomed charity."

nity. The Christian belongs to the greatest brotherhood on the earth, the church of Christ, He will love all who love Christ. 3. The law of fidelity. The Christian, though not of the world, lives in the world. Let him be faithful in all his house. 4. The law of sympathy. He should have a heart and hand open to the needy; a prayer for those who persecute him, and a tear to drop with those who weep. 5. The law of humility. Christ honors those who are lowly. The mighty may conquer the earth, but it is the meek who inherit it. 6. The law of kindness. There are two ways to conquer an enemy—one way by war, the other and the better by love; for love that conquers turns the enemy into a friend.—Hurlbut.

A BEAUTIFUL AND FRAGRANT LIFE.

A Cluster of Graces. What is more beautiful than a lovely bouquet of flowers? On the pulpit on Sunday, or in the sick room, or in the home anywhere, it always catches the eye, refreshes with its fragrance, and almost whispers the message of love and joy. A good and true life is something like that, and such a life our story tells about. In the first part of this chapter we see what kind of soil a good life grows in, and how it is fed and kept. Such a life is seen to be very natural, and easy when it has these conditions. This first cluster of graces and virtues is a picture of one's life in his own home or in his home church. There is love, the glorious and beautiful queen among the life forces: love to God and love to man. There is business which really means here a quick energetic and constant doing of things for Christ and His cause. There is hope with its bright and radiant face, made possible by the faith and love which always accompany it. There is tribulation, whose root has a bitter taste, but which grows "the peaceable fruit of righteousness" in the soul. There is prayer which so easily and constantly is telling the Saviour all about everything. These graces all belong to the Christian, and the first pictures help to give you a better idea of them. But the best illustration of them is in a beautiful and godly life. Love is the queen of the cluster.

Influence of One Life. A Boston daily paper contained this item one day: "Phillips Brooks walked down Newspaper Row yesterday at lunch time, nodding and smiling as he passed many friends, and although the heavens were overcast with clouds and the pavements were wet with rain, the street seemed to be filled with sunshine." That was a great thing to say of a great man. Phillips Brooks had a big heart. He was an unselfish Christian man. His thoughts were great and warm and his soul was bright and manly. He was a burning and a shining light, and he made the city of Boston brighter by living in it.

Invisible Hands of Welcome. The picture thought in that word "hospitality" is one in which the hands are extended to greet. It means that the person is really glad to see the coming guest, whether friend or stranger. It is quite different from that hospitality which is in words alone. The graces that are spoken of in this chapter are those which are shown to the world in general outside of home and church. In this group there is a dark grace also, shown by that picture of persecution. What are the hands of welcome to that? They are the forgiving spirit by which we are able to "bless them which persecute." The "joy and rejoice" extend glad hands of real pleasure and greeting. Those who weep find wonderful comfort and sympathy in the voice with tears in it and by the hands which soothe. Altogether it is a most beautiful picture of the true attitude towards the great outside world.

Do something for somebody, somewhere,
While jogging along life's road;
Help some one to carry his burden,
And lighter will grow your load.

Do something for somebody gladly,
'Twill sweeten your every care;
In sharing the sorrows of others
Your own are less hard to bear.

Do something for somebody striving
To help where the way seems long;
And the homeless hearts that languish
Cheer up with a little song.

Do something for somebody always,
Whatever may be your creed;
There's nothing on earth can help you
So much as a kindly deed.

—Rev. J. S. Cutler.

A Right and Bright Example. Every life touches the world of sin and sinners. It is very important that it be true to itself and to God. Only in this way can the world be made to see the beauty of the Christian life. After the twelve "blesseds", in the sermon on the mount Christ said, "ye are the light of the world". That was just another way of telling them to shine. And the true Christian will shine no matter how much there is to discourage. Moody said once, "Do you know what the moon did when the dog barked at it? It just kept on shining." Surely the Christian can do as well as the moon, for he has God's help in a special way. And the world needs just the light which the Christian can cause to shine out. The Christian will be just the opposite of that demon-looking fellow, sitting there with his falsehoods, slander, and hate. The Christian has truth and counsels and love; and by them he sets an example to all, and so commends the religion he professes. Even the youngest Christian can shine, when love is in the heart, and the need of others is seen.

Did you ever think what a dark and cheerless world this would be if no one cared or tried to let his light shine?

I read of a man once who had a dream of a world without God. All was dark and terrible, and under the power of Satan, for Christ alone can "bring life and immortality to light." This man sought everywhere for God, above, beneath, within, but found none. At last a great bell began to toll the hour of time which would plunge all into the gulf of a hopeless despair. Just then he awakened from sleep and was glad to find that it was only a dream. He rejoiced that there was a God of love, of life, of salvation, and that he had the privilege of making Him known to others.

How many there are who have never heard of the Christians' God! Some never will hear and love Him unless you and I are faithful to declare and reveal Him. Each one is a light in his own world, large or small. "Let your light so shine before men that they may see your good works and glorify your Father who is in Heaven."

Why She Looked So Bright. Grandma was attracted by the cheerful way of a little girl, and she asked her, "What makes you look so bright all the time?" "Why, I have to," said Susie. "You see, papa's been ill a long while, and mamma is tired out with nursing, and the baby's cross with her teeth; and if I wasn't bright, who would be?"

"Yes, yes, I see," said dear old grandma, putting her arms around this streak of sunshine. "That's God's reason for things; they are because somebody needs them. Shine on, little sun; there couldn't be a better reason for shining than because it is dark at home." —Apples of Gold.

How to Win an Enemy. This story starts in the home, and now reaches to the outmost circle of life. It shows how one can not only conquer an enemy, but actually win him to be a friend. Napoleon could conquer his enemies, but he never made any of them over into friends. That picture of a man with a dagger is the Napoleon way of conquering an enemy. This, too, was the usual way in the world before Christ came and showed a better way. The pictures of giving food and drink are intended to teach that kindness of any sort is the very best way to win an enemy. There is an Irish proverb which reads, "A copper farthing given with a kind hand, is fairy gold, and blesses as it goes". So you see it is not the amount that is given, nor even what is given, which influences; but the spirit in which it is given. That last picture is a queer one. It almost makes one think of the burning bush which Moses saw. They are alike in that God was in both of them. The fire here is intended to show that these acts of kindness make one seem almost to burn with shame and regret that he ever had done harm to such a friend. He will now be changed from an enemy to a true friend. Every heart, however tightly locked has its key. By that key even the heart of an enemy can be opened to the Saviour and to man.

The Alchemy of Love. An ancient emperor having threatened to slay all his enemies who had engaged in a certain insurrection, he yet pardoned them all. On being taken to task for breaking his word, he declared he had kept it, for they are no longer enemies, but transformed into friends.—Foster's Cyclopaedia.

Quiz and Study. 1. What are the nine fruits of the Spirit? .See Gal. 5:22, 23. 2. Is it right to love some persons more than others? 3. What special friends did Christ have? 4. How did Christ say we should love all others? 5. What is the great love ("charity") chapter of the Bible?

Practical Thoughts. 1. Christian living will follow from Christian love. 2. Here are gathered all the deeper graces of the new life—loving, holy, humble, loyal, forgiving, sympathetic, kind, helpful, prayerful. 3. Each moment has its duty, and each person one meets offers an opportunity. 4. The Christian spirit transmutes and transforms all it touches—enemies, difficulties, sorrows, toils. 5. To overcome evil with good is the secret and summary of the Gospel of Christ. 6. "But if a brother hates and treats me ill, Must I return him good and love him still?" Echo: "Return him good, and love him still."

Dr. J. M. Coon.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSONS ARE: PSA. 33:12; PROV. 14:34; ROM. 13:1-10.

Prayer: Almighty God it is by Thy good pleasure that we have become a great nation sent to sow beside all waters and to multiply sure dwelling on the earth, deepen the root of our life in everlasting righteousness and let not the crown of our pride be as a fading flower. Through Jesus Christ our Lord, Amen.

Lord, while for all mankind we pray
Of every clime and coast,
O hear us for our native land
The land we love the most.
Unite us in the sacred love
Of knowledge; truth and Thee
And let our hills and valleys shout
The songs of liberty.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATION.

Historical Setting: Time and Place. Psalm 33, anonymous. It was probably in use about 600 B. C. in connection with the national worship at Jerusalem. The Book of Proverbs may have been in general circulation in Israel about 1000 B. C. The Epistle to the Romans was written by Paul about A. D. 58. Persons, Roman Christians.

Scripture Setting: The Nation at Peace. Isa. 60:17-18. God in The National Life, Ezek. 34:25-28. The Duty of Good Citizenship. 1 Tim. 2:1-2. The Safeguard of Nations, Ps. 121:1-8. Love of Country, Ps. 137:5-6. Praying for the Nation, Neh. 1:1-11. How to Make the Nation Prosperous, Deut. 28:1-14.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The Psalmist puts religion at the basis of national prosperity. 2. The Wise Man assures the people that there is no national greatness apart from ideals of righteousness and justice. 3. The Apostle sets forth the necessity of obedience to law as the foundation of the state's well being. 4. He also exhorts reverence for authority as the test of good citizenship.

THE HIGHEST PATRIOTISM.

The Necessity of National Life. We do not choose to be born, nor do we choose the land of our birth. But being born we have a life to live; and being born in America we ought to live as Americans. Living as Americans we ought to see that the American manner of life is the best there is. Nominally this is a Christian nation. There is no state church; the name of Christ does not appear in the Constitution; many states do, and all might, exclude the Christian Bible from tax-supported schools. But in spite of this the national ideals to which we give allegiance are Christian ideals, the individual and public morality upon which we insist is Christian morality. The social and industrial relationship, imperfect and inadequate as they are, have as their informing spirit the Christian objective and the Christian rule of life. The founders of the nation were all profoundly religious men, differing of course in their theological points of view, but all uniting in the acceptance of Christ's ideal as the ideal of personal and national life. If we are to be loyal to the best traditions of the fathers of our country, we, too, must exalt and enforce the Christian ideal; it is this sort of righteousness which exalted a nation. This is our contribution to the nation's welfare.

He Helped Put It There. An American boy mortally wounded in the battle of Belleau Wood heard his comrades cheer. He asked eagerly what it meant. Upon being told that his comrades had "put the flag over" he sighed contentedly "I helped to put it there."

The Bible and Patriotism. The Bible is a manual of patriotism. The Jew had two passions, his country and his God. It is this, in part, which makes the Bible a people's book. The passages most familiar and most popular are charged with this devotion. The stories of Ruth and of Esther widely different as they are in atmosphere and detail but identical in the central motive. The Psalms are full of passionate love for Israel and for Israel's God. "If I forget Thee, O Jerusalem, may my right hand forget its cunning and my tongue cleave to the roof of my mouth." Jesus too was a patriot. See Him as He looks lovingly upon the city which has rejected Him. "How often would I have gathered you as a hen gathereth her brood under her wings and ye would not."

Religion in a Democracy. In a nation governed by one or by a few the people do not need to think or to take responsibility for the public welfare. That is all done for them by their rulers. But in a democracy the situation is wholly different. The people must think; they must take responsibility; they are each other's keeper in spite of themselves. And if this is to be done in any adequate way two tempers are absolutely necessary—justice and brotherly kindness. Where are these tempers to be found? How are they to be nourished? It is only in a God-fearing nation that such tempers are developed and maintained.

The Modern Pharisee. Germany had a great deal to say about God, but it was merest lip-service. At heart she was thoroughly pagan. Had she truly learned of God she would never have entered upon a war of extermination as a means of promoting justice and brotherly kindness. God was on her lips, but not in her thoughts.

As a democracy therefore religion is necessary to our life and to our prosperity. It is not in wealth to make or keep us great, nor in our form of government, nor in our national institutions, nor in our public schools. It is only in character, in that sturdy, indomitable and unconquerable integrity of mind and heart which is the fruit and the best fruit of religion.

E Pluribus Unum. Our nation is made up of many people. "We need a unifying and cementing principle. That, too, is found and found only in a people who exercise the supreme tempers of religion—justice and brotherly kindness. Only thus are we to be made one. Laws will help, economic adjustments will help, philanthropic activities will help. But a common passion for God is the one tremendous necessity. In a sense we have been chosen of God to make a real demonstration of the unity of the race, how God has made of one blood all nations to dwell upon the face of the earth.

The Blood of All the World. At a dinner given to American soldiers by the French in the recovered city of Sedan, a young American officer spoke on behalf of his country and fellow soldiers. As a climax to his speech he took from his pocket a little silk flag his wife had sent him and presented it to the French officer who was presiding. The officer was profoundly moved. Springing to his feet he held the flag aloft and cried aloud, "The blood of all the world." Upon which the whole company stood, while all the French shouted, "Vive l' Amerique!"

Religion and National Evils. The nation is exposed to a variety of threatening evils. It is enough to name some: Mormonism, Vaticanism, Bolshevism, Luxury, Intemperance, Licentiousness, Unscrupulous Politics, Greed for wealth and the like. There is no natural remedy for such. It is only by the power of God that such devils can be cast out. While they remain the country is always in danger. And how is the power of God to be invoked in our behalf? Of course we must pray for it. But we must do more. We must work for it. There must be an aggressive evangelistic spirit in the church; there must be a revival thorough and widespread of "family religion"; we must take the Sunday School seriously that the children of the nation may have their chance at religion; we must promote intelligently and earnestly all agencies of religious education that the rising generation may know and feel how significant religion is as a national asset.

The Bible and the Public School. Desirable as the Bible in the public schools may be it is not indispensable. It is better to avoid denominational controversy than to have the Bible mechanically read in the public schools under protest. It is for the church and the family to make the Bible not only popular but effective.

Letter and Spirit. The Bible was and is a text book in German schools. Bible instruction was and is systematic and thorough. Many young people are letter perfect both as to the Bible and the national church creed. But it lies unfruitfully in the mind. It is not quickened by the spirit. The outcome is a dead and powerless religion, a form of paganism.

Quiz and Study: 1. In what sense is our country Christian? 2. What is to be said about excluding the Bible from the public schools? What are some of the immediate perils to our national life? 3. What is the Christian attitude towards Roman Catholicism? 4. Towards Mormonism? 5. Towards enforcement of the Prohibition law? 6. Towards Socialism? 7. Towards foreign immigration? 8. Is Japan to be regarded as a threat at our national existence?

Practical Thoughts: 1. It is sweet to die for one's country; it is quite as sweet to live for it. 2. No nation can get along without God, least of all a democracy. 3. The best practical solution to our national problems is high character. 4. The nation has a right to look to the church as its right hand in making high ideals prevail. 5. National honesty is quite as imperative as individual honesty. 6. There can be no national security but on a basis of justice and brotherly kindness. 7. America should lead the world in a liberty which is protected by law.

DR. CHARLES M. STUART

THE TEMPLE OF GOD.

For other

can no man lay than that is laid,
which is Jesus Christ.
Now if any man

upon this foundation
gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; Every man's work shall be made manifest: for the day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is. If any man's work abide which he hath built thereupon,

he shall receive the

If any man's work
shall be

he shall suffer loss: but he himself shall be saved; yet so as by fire. Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the

of God
dwelleth
in you?
If any man

the temple of God, him shall God destroy; for the temple of God is holy, which temple ye are.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS I. COR. 3:11-17.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, I thank Thee for this human body, so wonderfully made, so mysteriously responding to my will. And I thank Thee that Thou too wast made flesh and dwelt among men. Abide still, we pray Thee, in our midst. Send Thy Spirit into my heart, that as my body responds to my will, so my will in all things may respond to Thy Spirit. Thus shall my life be filled with power and glory. Amen.

“Soul—that mysterious thing,
Which hath no limit from the walls of sense,
No chill from hoary time, with pale decay
No fellowship, but shall stand forth unchanged,
Unscorched amid the resurrection fires
To bear its boundless lot of good or ill.”
—Sigourney.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Written by Paul from Ephesus in the spring of 57 A. D. It is now believed that Paul wrote to the Corinthian church an earlier letter, now lost, as well as the later one preserved as II Corinthians. The inhabitants of Corinth lived wantonly and luxuriously. The letter is a reply to the church there inquiring about the duties of a Christian life.

Scripture Setting: The Life Where God Dwelleth. False and true foundations, Matt. 7:24-27. Christ the foundation chosen of God, 1 Pet. 2:4-9. False temples and false worshippers, Jer. 7:2-11. The temple of Christ's body, John 2:13-22. Heaven one vast temple, Rev. 21:1-4, 22-27.

Life and Conduct Setting: This passage presents the church as the building of God. 1. Christ is Founder; His character and teachings the foundation. 2. Every life contributes something to its strength and adornment. 3. Life materials vary in value; only actions worthy and sincere survive the test. 4. Sin profanes the temple, alienating the Holy Spirit, robbing life of its glory, marring the image of God.

HUMAN LIFE A DIVINE TEMPLE.

Its Foundations Elected by Divine Choice. “For other foundation can no man lay than that is laid, which is Jesus Christ.” Originally the idea of a temple was the simplest possible. The priest in the most primitive times came forth carrying his holy measuring rod and his holy knife for cutting the turf. Entering the pasture meadow, he ran his line around a well-selected spot, and separated it from all the rest by a deep trench. Taking sole possession he dedicated it, as his temple, which means a portion cut off. No foot but his ever crossed that trench, no hand was ever raised there but his, and that only to sacrifice.

Now if we will go back in like manner to Christ's birth we shall see that the Holy Spirit acting as high priest ran the measuring line of consecration and sanctification around the body of one Virgin in all the world and decreed that the Holy Child to be born of her should be the only begotten Son of God. Later Mary was to have other sons, but the Holy Spirit first fell upon the mother of our Lord that His body might be a sanctified spot, a sacred site, a holy temple for a Holy Life. So that in the wide waste wilderness of our fallen human nature there is one selected, separated, sanctified spot of holy ground chosen of God to be kept forever inviolate as a prepared temple site—the character of Jesus. And thus it comes about that the whole society of the regenerate is looked upon as one great, united temple; Jesus Christ Himself being the chief cornerstone; in whom the whole building fitly framed together groweth into an holy temple in the Lord.

Its Materials Selected by Human Choice. “Now if any man build upon this foundation gold, silver, precious stones, wood, hay, stubble; every man's work shall be made manifest.” In Corinth existed side by side strange extremes of fortune: great temples in gorgeous splendor between which were the mean dwellings of the poor and profligate. The temples were constructed of marble and granite, the capitals of their columns and their roofs were richly decorated with silver and gold. The hovels of the poor had walls that were boarded up, with straw in the crevices, and roofs that were thatched with straw, or stubble. In a conflagration this difference of material would be very manifest, for while the noble temples would pass through the fire practically unharmed, the wretched edifices of wood and straw standing near would be burned to the ground. Is there anything else quite so important as the choice of the stuff we select to build into the temple of character?

King Solomon gathered gold and ivory and precious stones from afar for the walls of his temple, and so perfectly were the great stones hewn at the quarry that noiselessly the great fabric sprang into being. Through all the years of life we are silently building, by the choice of our thoughts, ideals, companionships, and pursuits.

A sleeper once dreamed that after death he was carried by angel hands to the skies. Deeply moved at the sight of noble mansions on either bank of the river of life, he asked for his. His complaint was bitter when the attending angel pointed to one made of coarsest materials and daubed with mud. The angel could only reply, "You only complain against your own choice; for this was built of the materials you sent up to us day by day." He awoke, resolved that golden deeds and precious ministries should mark the rest of his life.

The Builder's Responsibility for His Own Work. "If any man's work abide, he shall receive a reward. If any man's work shall be burned, he shall suffer loss." It was not boasting when Paul declared that through the grace of God he was a wise master-builder. Paul built his lifework on the truth of the Gospel revealed in the person of Jesus. Stone by stone, course by course, year by year steadily grew the walls of his life's building till the capstone was laid in the blood of martyrdom.

Its Fiery Test on the Judgment Day. "The day shall declare it, because it shall be revealed by fire; and the fire shall try every man's work of what sort it is." The lapidary subjects doubtful jewels to the acid test. The paste imitations either crumble or are hopelessly eaten by the acid. The precious stones pass through the test unharmed and are set in places of honor in rings of dazzling gold.

The judgment day is the acid test of the Divine Judge. Some shall sit upon thrones forever; some shall pass out to eternal rejection. Only a life-work built on the Rock of Ages can endure the fiery ordeal of that long-expected day. Hearts will be sifted, conduct weighed, and motives laid bare. The light straw of hollow professions shall only feed the flames. Some described by Jeremiah as falsely crying, "The temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord, the temple of the Lord are we," shall be condemned. "I will cast thee out of my sight." But the least grain of the real gold of faith shall never be lost. "Rejoice that the trial of your faith, being much more precious than of gold that perisheth, though it be tried by fire, might be found unto glory at the coming of Jesus Christ."

This passage is often quoted by the Roman church in support of purgatory, a supposed fire of purification and punishment which begins at the death of all who commit venial sin. But the fiery test described by Paul is not until the last day. The fire of purgatory tries the persons of men, the fire of Paul only their works. The fire of purgatory brings great gain to the sufferer; the fire of Paul brings great loss to the owner. The fire of purgatory is for a great intermediate class, neither the best nor the worst; the fire of Paul is for mankind universally. We conclude, then, that the doctrine of purgatory rests not upon Scripture but upon the practice of solicitous survivors praying for their dead.

Its Indwelling Presence and Distinctive Glory. "Know ye not that ye are the temple of God, and that the Spirit of God dwelleth in you?" It is recorded that at the dedication of Solomon's temple when the priest brought into the holy of holies the ark of the covenant the glory of the Lord filled the place so that the priests could not stand to minister because of the cloud or shekinah. It is also recorded that at the birth of Christ in Bethlehem the angel of the Lord came upon the shepherds, and the glory of the Lord shone round about them. It was seen afterwards that as the Christ-child grew, and waxed strong in spirit, that the grace of God was upon Him.

The temple of Solomon taught that God communes with men; the incarnation of Christ taught that God dwells in man. One of the names given to Christ is very significant—Immanuel, which means God with us. Whenever a human soul clambers up to the consciousness that his body is the temple of the Holy Ghost his entire manhood is ennobled thereby.

Hang on the wall of an humble home some master's conception of the Madonna and her child, and the mother heart may learn there a new conception of motherhood. In the spirit of the picture she will teach her child the way of faith and prayer. The gracious influence of the Holy Spirit will begin to work in the living organism of that home. The human body is a wondrous temple, but the heart is the holy of holies where the glory of the Lord shines round about.

Lord Rosebury went to see Gladstone for the last time, when the great Christian statesman rose in his bed, saying, "Rosebury, mind your soul, mind your soul!"

Quiz and Study. 1. What patriarch set up and consecrated a stone to mark the spot where God blessed him? What did he name it? 2. In what did the Israelites worship during the return from Egypt? After what pattern was it built? 3. What three temples stood on Mount Moriah? 4. When and where did Jesus read to His neighbors, "The Spirit of the Lord is upon Me"? 5. What did Christ say to the Samaritan woman concerning where to worship? How to worship?

Challenge Text. "Know ye not that your body is the — of the Holy Ghost, which is in you, which ye have of —, and ye are not your —." 1 Cor. 6: (1).

Practical Thoughts. 1. The fundamental notion of temple is not construction, but separation, when through the religious motive we cut or sever a portion of time, interest, or possession for the highest use and honor. 2. There can be no true temple without true worshippers. 3. The presence of the Holy Spirit makes the soul God's most beautiful temple. 4. The church's foundation is not abstract doctrine about Christ, not scriptural history of Christ, not a human disciple of Christ, but the Divine-human Personality,—Christ Himself.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE SCRIPTURE ACCOUNT IS 1 CORINTHIANS 12:4-27; JOHN 6:1-14.

Prayer: In the multitude of thy mercies, O Lord, give to us real passion for the coming of Thy Kingdom which will lead us to seek and promote fellowship with all who are like minded. Help us in our measure to make real the desire of our hearts that all may be one in Him who alone can subdue all Kings unto Himself. Amen.

Help us to help each other Lord
Each other's cross to bear;
Let each his friendly aid afford
And face his brother's care.

Help us to build each other up
Our little stock improve;
Increase our faith, confirm our hope
And perfect us in Love.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, The first epistle to the Corinthians was written by Paul in the Spring of 56 A. D. Place, Just before he left Ephesus for Troas in the course of his third missionary tour (Acts, 19). Person, The Corinthian Christian. The Gospel of John is said to have been written by the beloved disciple some time toward the close of the first century A. D. Persons, The people of Galilee.

Scripture Setting: A Hymn of Brotherhood. Psa. 133. How one king works with another, 1 Kings, 5:1-12. A whole people working together, Neh. 3:1-32; 14:15-23. Good team work, 1 Sam. 14:1-23. The New Commandment, John 13:34; 15:12-17. The apostolic exhortation, 1 Thess. 4:9; 1 Peter 4:8.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Every man has his gift; he is using it to the best purpose when he is using it for the advantage of the community and world. 2. His gift, whatever it is, comes from God who bestows it not as a personal perquisite, but for the common good. 3. Gifts differ, but all have their place in furthering the common interests. 4. The ideal situation is where every man subordinates his own good for the good of all and cordially acquiesces in a policy of the majority which looks unselfishly to bettering social conditions. 5. The common interest involves not simply material good, but intellectual, moral and spiritual good. 6. The union of Christian forces is one of the Kings most needed in our day. There is a duty laid upon every Church member of promoting such union in the spirit of heartiest co-operation.

THE FIGURE OF THE BODY.

Harmony in Working. It is a striking figure the Apostle uses to urge the necessity of co-operation in the community life. It is true of any community; it is particularly true of the Christian community. The body, he says, is made up of many members, and all its members, many as they are, constitute one body. Comfort, delight and efficiency turn upon the people co-ordination and harmonious working of these members. Where one is deficient the whole is weakened. The members differ in function but they all contribute to the general well being of the body. The human frame is a masterpiece of God. He has adjusted the members each to each and each to the whole that, properly developed, we have the symmetrical man. The eye cannot say to the hand, "I do not need you," nor the head to the face, "I do not need you," but eye and hand, head and feet are integral parts of the whole and each necessary to the perfect working of the body. So, he concludes, ye are the body of Christ. If you begin disputing among yourselves as to which shall be greater, whether the one who teaches or the one who prophesies, or the one who works miracles, then it is as if the eye were denying the dignity of the hand and as if the head were despising the feet and the result that the whole body is crippled. This has been the bane of the Christian Community in all the centuries. Her divisions and schisms have crippled her progress and have hindered rather than helped her success.

A Condition of Progress. Other Scriptures are equally insistent. The miracle of the loaves and fishes was performed not only to show that Jesus was the true bread come down from heaven, but also to show that in performing a miracle Jesus made use of all the helps offered Him by the people. He can get large social results even from the good natured open handedness of a hungry boy. Similarly when any are willing, in the day of His power, God can bring to pass the wonders of a changed world whether by the genius of Luther or Wesley or the humble efforts of Robert Raikes. Solomon was able to build a shrine in Jerusalem with the help of Hiram of Tyre and that shrine did more for the patriotism of Israel than any other one thing in the history of that wise and glorious ruler. Jonathan and his armor bearer by mutual support in a critical moment saved Israel and routed her enemies. The history of the world would have been changed had the armor bearer been unwilling for team work. The history of civilization is just one long and vivid commentary on the word of Paul, "We are members one of another." "Mutual aid," says one historian, "is the foundation of success; co-operation is one of nature's most effective agencies for a social standard and a social feeling."

Some Maxims on Co-operation. Some of the national proverbs illustrate this truth: "Woe to him who stands alone even though his platter be full," says a Slavic proverb. "He that belongs to no community is like unto one without a hand." "The common household waxes rich." "The more bees in the hive, the heavier it weighs." "United we stand, divided we fall." The recent war furnishes a memorable illustration of the value of working with others. It was when the Allies got together and recognized a unified leadership that Germany was defeated. In response to the question, "What is the greatest need of the world today?" Mr. John D. Rockefeller replied, "The world needs above all else co-operation, that is, working together, which implies friendship, brotherhood, mutual endeavor, mutual sympathy, and mutual support."

Co-operation in Church Work. The most important issue for the church in these days is that of Church federation and Church union. The issue has two aspects—one relating to interdenominational co-operation, the other to denominational union. There is no reason of consequence which makes necessary so many kinds of Methodists, or Presbyterians or Baptists or Lutherans. The world would be vastly more Christian without this accentuation of what in the very nature of the case must be incidental and immaterial differences. The waste of money, of effort and of temper which annually goes towards perpetuating these differences is little short of criminal. It is the perpetual scandal of our modern Church life.

There may be valid reasons for the distinctions between Presbyterian and Methodist, between Episcopalian and Lutheran, between Roman Catholic and Protestant. But there is no valid reason why these churches might not co-operate to a greater extent than they do. The churches exist not for themselves but for the Kingdom of God. When, in any given community, they become rivals rather than helpers of each other they sin against the most sacred interests of the Kingdom. There are many community enterprises upon which they might and could unite. There are many communities from which feeble and dying churches might profitably withdraw, leaving the field to more prosperous and aggressive churches.

How Co-operation May Be Secured. For this desirable end there is but one virtue necessary—the passion of love for the Kingdom. In that atmosphere all things are possible, even the disappearance of rivalries and the assertion of an active and attractive unity. The Presbyterian in our day has substantially the same gospel as the Methodist and, for that matter, all the evangelical churches. It cannot hurt a Methodist to hear the Gospel from Presbyterian lips, or for a Baptist to get religion in a Congregational revival.

One used to hear a great deal about the fundamental differences between Calvinism and Arminianism; it was indeed the battle ground of the Presbyterians and Methodists for many a year. But just what happened? The great revivalists of this country, Jonathan Edwards, Gilbert Tennent, Charles G. Finney, Dwight Moody were all Calvinists and not the last nor the least of the products of their work was the great army of converts who found their way into the Methodist fold.

The Dawn of Better Days. We are very much better off in the matter of Christian co-operation than we used to be. In this the Church has been helped by Christian movements outside of the Church. The temperance campaigning which has been steadily maintained during the greater part of our national history has shown how Christians may think theologically apart but work practically together. The various philanthropic movements, notably, the Young Men's Christian Association, the hospital movements, missionary enterprises and settlement work have all helped to a new feeling about the essential oneness of all professing the Christian faith. The return of the soldiers helped still further. At the front in the world's war denominational differences were hardly thought of. An exalted Christ brought all together in the hope of a common and complete salvation in Him who loved us and gave Himself for us.

Quiz and Study. 1. How many denominational divisions are there in Protestant Christianity in the United States? 2. Are these divisions necessary? 3. When there are two or more churches in a community which might decently support one what should be done? 4. Should not all evangelical churches unite to support a week day school of religious education? 5. What is the value of a reasonable denominationalism?

Practical Thoughts. 1. It is the mission of the church to make God near and dear to the world. 2. A church united in this common aim and working harmoniously and earnestly together is the most efficient instrument for getting this accomplished. 3. Denominationalism has its value, but it is a sin to make of it a Fetich. 4. Different denominations may be one in spirit though separate in organization. 5. A passion for the Kingdom is the best qualification for church membership. 6. The indifferent church member is the greatest hindrance to the success of the Gospel. DR. CHARLES M. STUART.

And though I bestow all my goods to

and though I give my body
to be

and have not charity it profiteth me nothing

Charity suffereth long and is kind Charity envieth not Charity vaunteth not itself
Is not puffed up
Doth not behave itself unseemly
Seeketh not her own
Is not easily provoked Thinketh no evil

Rejoiceth not in iniquity but Rejoiceth in the truth
Beareth all things
Believeth all things
Hopeth all things
Endureth all things
Charity never faileth:
And now abideth

these three; but the greatest of these is charity.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS I COR. 13.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, Thou art the embodiment of love at its best. Thou hast put a Heavenly radiance and glory on all earthly loves. Thy Kingdom is a Kingdom of love, and Thy subjects are subjects of the heart. Help us to see Thee in Thy wondrous spiritual beauty. Then help us to reflect that love and life to all about us. For Christ's sake. Amen.

"Yet Love will dream, and Faith will trust (Since He who knows our need is just),
That somehow, somewhere, meet we must.

Alas for him who never sees

The stars shine through the cypress trees!
Who hath not learned in hours of faith
The truth to flesh and sense unknown,
That Life is ever lord of Death,
And Love can never lose its own."

—John G. Whittier.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 57. Place, written at Ephesus. Persons, Paul to the Christians at Corinth.

Scripture Setting: Christian Love. Love described, 1 Cor. 13. Love and law, Rom. 13:1-14. Love commanded, John 13:31-38. Obedience of love, John 14:15-24. The great commandment, Matt. 22:34-46. Love is of God, 1 John 4:4-14. The climax of love, 1 John 3:14-24. Love and service, 2 Cor. 8:8-24.

Life and Conduct Setting: This inspired encomium on love is unsurpassed in all literature. It sets forth the nature, place and power of love.

1. Love's queenly position and worth, verses 1-3. It is (1) superior to eloquence, (2) superior to learning of all kinds, (3) superior to faith at its greatest and best, (4) superior to sacrificing toil, and even martyrdom. 2. Love's royal train of virtues and graces, verses 4-7. Six of them are of the negative type, and eight of them of the positive kind. What a splendid retinue of attendants on this heart queen! 3. Love's abiding supremacy and power. Love endures even after the supernatural gifts have passed away. Love is the goal and climax of all, and abides ever as the greatest of all—the greatest thing on earth, and the greatest thing in Heaven.

A LOVE LETTER TO THE CHURCH.

Love Superior To All Gifts. Did you ever see the jewel called a "sunburst?" It is composed of pearls or diamonds, or both, so set together as to reflect the light in many charming ways. However you look at it, it sparkles and flashes, as if a bit of the sun itself were struggling to get free, and in the effort all is made most beautiful.

Love is the "sunburst" gift and grace. Of the one hundred great chapters of the Bible this thirteenth of 1st Corinthians might be called the "sunburst" chapter. Love is a queen, and in this chapter she is radiant and glorious in her beauty. This is one of the short chapters of the Bible, but for importance it stands far up the line towards the top. Some great gifts are named in the first verses of this chapter, but love is greatest of all. There is eloquence, the gift of tongues, which sometimes seems to have the very message of Heaven in it, and the very voice of an angel; but it is all only as so much vain clatter if love be absent. Next is a group of three great gifts—a power which is very much like a genuine inspiration, and a knowledge that is full and wonderful, and a faith that seems to accomplish the impossible; but if one have all of them yet he is nothing if love be lacking. Then there is the angel of mercy, laden with needed blessings, and actually sacrificing life to bestow the blessings; yet it brings no credit or joy or power if there is no love in the service.

Love Inspires All Graces. Here is a wonderful list of qualities, and all in the ordinary life and such as should be and can be manifested by everyone. There are fourteen in all, and someone has said that "these seven graces of love shine like the seven colors of the rainbow, and as the rainbow is a token of the power of the sun over the rain, so love shows itself mighty in and over the natural heart of man."

Let us name some of these beautiful rays or colors, which show what love is. Love is patient, for that is what is meant by long-suffering; patient over the slowness and weakness and even the wickedness of others. Love is kind, and ever on the watch to help others to do and be their best; full of thoughtful service for others. Love is generous, and does not envy the good which others have, and is even willing that others should be first and more favored. Love is humble, and does not vaunt itself, for it is all the time thinking and planning for others. Love is courteous, and very careful about her manners; is winsome in all that she does; is never rude or harsh, but always polite and respectful. Love is unselfish in spirit and act. Instead of looking out for number one, she is rather seeking to give than to receive. She is happiest when all others are happy. Love is sweet-tempered, not allowing anything or any person to provoke her or make her fretful. Love is open hearted, and never takes account of the faults of others in her notebook. She does not even think any evil of them. Love is sincere, without any dross or foreign substance in it, to mar its purity; is not glad when others fail or fall, but rejoices with every good thing and good person everywhere.

Secret of Home Happiness. "We never quarrel," said one member of a delightful family, "because when one of us is slightly off color, and inclined to say naughty things, some one else immediately begins to talk in a particularly good humored strain. The antidote works like a charm, and the first thing we know the threatened storm has blown over."

There are three garments which should be worn in the home in order to make it a happy home. First is that charming covering, thoughtfulness for others. It becomes everybody, imparting to the wearer a peculiar beauty all its own. Then there is the mantle of large human sympathies, a beautiful garment capable of sheltering many besides the owner. And, lastly, there is the robe of love, which envelops from head to foot with a radiance so splendid that it not alone protects the wearer, but seems to draw the sting from every unkind word and look.—Ex.

Love Does More Than All. Nothing is too great or too hard for love. The seventh verse in this chapter is the "all things" verse, and love does not hesitate to undertake to do these "all things." Love "beareth all things," or covereth them as with a mantle. The word has a picture in it, as of a roof that does not leak. As a mother in every right way will cover the faults of her child, so love does. Love "believeth all things," that is, believeth the best always. Love is a true optimist in all her pictures of the world and of the people in it. She is constantly making credit marks for persons and things, and then helps to make them true in every case. Love "hopeth all things," and goes right on believing that the hope will be realized. Hoping often against hope, and when all others are discouraged. Even if she can not see the good ahead she is sure it will be found after the next turn in the road. Love "endureth all things," continuing to think good thoughts and perform good deeds in spite of all difficulties and perils, and in spite of all hardships and sacrifices.

The Heart of Love Is Sacrifice. Love does not consist in giving and receiving praise, flattery, compliments and personal favors. All this may exist, to be sure, where there is love; it generally does. But it may also exist where there is no love. Love is a self-sacrifice; it is a life out of self and in another. Its very essence is the preferring of the comfort, the ease, the wishes of another to one's own for the love we bear to that other. Love is giving and not receiving. Love is not a sheet of blotting paper or a sponge, sucking in everything to itself; it is an outspringing fountain, giving from itself. Its motto and mission is to make all others happy and loving.—Ex.

Love Is the Greatest of All. Professor

Drummond has written a little book on "The greatest thing in the world." It tells the story of this wonderful chapter. Love is greatest in its origin and nature and ministry. It is greatest in its power to do things, and in the many different ways it has for doing them. It is greatest because it is most like God, and greatest because it comes from Heaven and returns to Heaven. It is greatest for it never fails and abides for ever. It is greatest for it makes man most like God in spirit and conduct. It is greatest in that all may have it and all should have it. Here are some of the things which men have said about love: "Love alone has unconditional worth. It carries in itself its own contents. Everything else obtains worth through it. It puts the crown on all excellencies." "The central gift of Christianity—not transient, but permanent—the diamond excellence, of which all other virtues are a phase, is love." "All critics look upon this chapter as one of Paul's genuine gems. It has something of the rhythm, as well as the splendor, of poetry in it." "Love is not only an eternal grace, but the highest among the eternal; other graces contribute to Heaven, but love constitutes Heaven."

Quiz and Study. 1. This is one of the ten greatest chapters of the Bible. Can you name some of the other nine? 2. What are the six negative qualities of love? 3. What are the eight positive qualities? 4. Who is called the apostle of love? 5. Who might be called the apostle of faith? 6. And who the apostle of work?

Challenge Text. "And be ye ——— one to another, tender-hearted, ——— one another, even as God for ——— sake hath ——— you." Eph. 4: (?)

Practical Thoughts. 1. Love is the greatest gift. (1) It is greatest in its nature, noblest, deepest, happiest, most pervasive, most heavenly. (2) It brings us closest to God; makes us partakers of His nature, His children and heirs. (3) It is the one thing without which faith and hope are of little avail. (4) It is the most powerful, exerts the widest influence for good, is the strongest motive for the upbuilding of character. (5) It is universal. Every person, of every degree, may have this love. More than all other things together, it makes those that have it "free and equal." (6) With faith and hope, love is eternal. The longer one lives, the more love he can have. It will expand and grow forever and ever, in increasing blessedness and glory.—Peloubet. 2. Love is not only the best gift, but discovers and uses the best. 3. All things take their rank and get their power from the heart, which is the governing principle of the spiritual life. 4. Love is the greatest of gifts, but it may be had and used by the least of saints. 5. Love is both the gold and the gliding of the character and the life.

"Can I be stem, and another be wheat?

Can I be shell, and another be meat?

Another be head, while I am feet?

Yes, if God will."

THE RESURRECTION.

Behold, I shew you a mystery;
We shall not all sleep, but we shall all be

In a moment,
in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump: for the

shall sound,
and the dead
shall be

Incorruptible, and we shall be changed. For this corruptible must put on incorruption, and this mortal must put on immortality. So when this corruptible shall have put on incorruption, and this

shall have put on then shall be brought to pass the saying that is written,

is swallowed up in

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS I COR. 15:12-26, 50-58.

Prayer: "O gracious God, grant that before Thou takest from me that breath which Thou gavest me, I may truly repent of the errors of my life past; that my sins may be forgiven, and my pardon sealed in Heaven, so that I may have a place of rest in Paradise with Thy faithful servants, till the general resurrection, when the good Lord vouchsafe to me a better and an everlasting life, through Jesus Christ. Amen." Prayer of Bishop Wilson.

"Now I hold you fast in my hand,
You marvellous butterfly,
Till you help me to understand
Life's infinite mystery,
From that creeping thing in the dust
To this shining bliss in the blue!
God give me courage to trust
I shall break my chrysalis too."
—Alice Freeman Palmer.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Same as previous lesson. The letter itself indicates it was written by Paul about Easter in the third year of his residence at Ephesus. This chapter was written primarily to refute the free-thinkers who formed a party within the Corinthian church.

Scripture Setting: Christ's Resurrection the Supreme Fact. Prophecy of the resurrection fulfilled, Acts 2:23-32. Many resurrection witnesses, 1 Cor. 15:3-11. The Apostles, personal resurrection witnesses, Acts 1:15-26. Walking in newness of life, Rom. 6:4-11. A heavenly voice and the angel reaper, Rev. 14:13-16.

Life and Conduct Setting: Paul's argument

shows the effect of the resurrection on religious faith: 1. Four infallible proofs of His resurrection: (a) the guards are helpless, the stone is rolled away, (b) He appears afterwards to many, talking and eating, (c) fear and despair depart from the disciples, (d) a new moral life springs up wherever the Gospel is preached. 2. Four certain results: (a) the law's penalty cancelled, (b) death's sting removed, (c) Christ's last foe defeated, (d) a seal of Divine credibility placed on faith and testimony. 3. Four incredible results of disbelief: (a) the Apostles are false witnesses, (b) life and death of Christ in vain, (c) human sin still without a remedy, (d) all dead believers have perished.

OUR DELIVERER FROM THE DREAD OF DEATH.

The Foundation Fact of Faith. "If Christ be not raised, then is our preaching vain." Dr. J. G. Holland has not inappropriately called the proclaiming of the Gospel the world's great business enterprise. He conceives of the Holy Trinity as a firm with headquarters in Heaven, engaged in the business of supplying the world's need and hunger with the bread of the Gospel. He calls every minister and missionary an agent, every church and mission a branch office. The commission reads that they are to go quickly, that they are to scatter broadly, that they are to labor unwearyingly. This commission, as an agent of his Lord, Paul accepted. In the eagerness of his going; in the wide area of his scattering; and in the deathless zeal he exhibited, perhaps he outstripped all the other agents of the enterprise. Yet all he had done in a busy lifetime he acknowledged was undone, might better never have been done, if the resurrection of Christ was a myth. So sure was he of his foundation fact that Christ arose, that he built like one who knows his life work will outlast the years.

Originally, preaching consisted mainly in witnessing to the resurrection. Only those who had seen Jesus after He had risen from the dead were eligible to become Apostles. That they were all competent witnesses is evident, possessing the capacity, the opportunity, and the integrity to establish the fact beyond question. Vain indeed was that preached word and those faithful lives if the resurrection was a myth. For most of the Apostles, like Paul, went to a martyr's death with a resistless testimony that Christ arose. Beheaded on the Appian Way, in sight of the seven hills of Rome, how powerfully did Paul preach the resurrected Christ, declaring, as it seemed, with his last gasp, "It is true!"

First Fruits of the Harvest Home. "Now is Christ risen from the dead, and become the first fruits of them that slept." Beautifully does Paul describe in this Jewish figure from the harvest field how the sleeping dust of dead humanity shall become the glorious harvest of the skies. When the first ripened heads of grain appeared in Palestine they were hailed with rejoicing as the pledge of a bounteous harvest coming later, and were cut off to be borne to Jerusalem. No grain could be harvested, no kernels crushed, no bread made out of the new wheat until this thank-offering was presented at the Lord's house in Jerusalem. The wide fields were consecrated by making Jehovah Lord of the harvests. The first fruits were laid up as a guarantee of all the rest. Then they hurried away to the fields; and all through Judea they thrust in the sickle, the grain was reaped, gathered into sheaves, and borne in an ox cart into their barns. Once more, after their children had eaten bread baked from the new wheat, they came up to the temple. At the national feast of thanksgiving a grateful people shouted "Harvest home."

Christ's triumph over death is only the first fruits. There will be a glorious harvest of resurrection. Christ was the first of all our race to rise by His own power from the grave. The grim reaper Death did not snatch the crown of victory, but Christ as victor seized the deathless crown of immortality and ascended to His Father. He went up amid the shouts of angels to sit upon a throne. And ever since, His angels, like the reapers, have been busy gathering in the ripened sheaves. Christ the first fruits assures us that the sleeping dust of every continent shall be quickened into the glorious golden grain of eternal life. Asia shall send her brown people, Africa her dark-skinned believers, Europe her sons of many tongues, and America her children of the faith. From ocean bed, from mountain top, from desert plain, from deep ravine, from islands of the southern seas shall come the uprising of humanity, the nations waking from their long sleep.

Death's Dread Dragon Destroyed. "He must reign till He hath put all enemies under His feet. The last enemy that shall be destroyed is death." The earliest Christian art, traced upon stone, represents Christ as standing triumphant upon the back of a dragon. The final book of the Bible represents Him with hair white as wool, with eyes like a flame of fire, and with a voice sounding as many waters, standing triumphant, holding the keys of hell and death. This means that when the sinless and resistless Son of God died and entered the underworld the walls fell before His Divine power, the devils fled, the prisoners' chains snapped and the power of death was broken.

In the catacombs underneath Rome, Christ is pictured on these burial walls as coming forth from the grave on the resurrection morning bearing the cross upon His shoulders in triumph. Looking upon this ancient picture one feels like shouting back, "O grave, where is thy victory?" Christ's victory has changed the world's attitude towards death. The gates that lead to the tomb may be beaten iron on the outside, but through the Christian revelation they are beaten gold within. According to the original arrangement of God, and by the conquest of Christ over sin and the grave, "to die is gain." Every personal exception to this is due to the marring interference of personal sin and unfaith. Since Jesus once died, but now lives and reigns above, we can look upon the shadowy king who bears his prey to the tomb and remember the words of a mightier King who said, "Because I live, ye shall live also."

The Fabric of Flesh Exchanged for the Resurrection Robe. "Behold, I show you a mystery; we shall not all sleep, but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump." Paul does not attempt to clear away the mystery of the resurrected body, for it doth not yet appear what we shall be; but this much he knows, that when Christ shall appear we shall be like Him. If the natural body is sown in dishonor, it is raised in glory. Paul had a mounting and ardent soul, a swift and keen intellect, but he conceived of his diseased and sinful body as a groaning load of clay. So he waited almost impatiently the glad hour of exchange and release. It was like the dream in the breast of the worm which feels its old house decaying and dreams a dream of wings, and gardens of beauty, and vaster power soon to be its own. God will not disappoint even a caterpillar, and the worm gets its wings.

Berkley says, "I find in myself a strong natural desire for immortality. I have not observed that natural appetites are wont to be given in vain, or merely to be frustrated." Be sure the unrevealed is better than our best thoughts. And Christ has said that no dream of man is too noble for man's full realization; "If it were not so I would have told you." Thus the silence of Jesus concerning the resurrection life becomes as profoundly significant as His spoken words.

The Steadfast Foundations of Doctrine and Experience. "Therefore, my beloved brethren, be ye steadfast, immovable, always abounding in the work of the Lord." Those who have neither studied the evidences of the New Testament nor entered into the victorious experiences of a Christian life, might wish that the promise of a resurrected body were true, yet feel an insecurity about its fulfillment. To them this lesson might appear as a bright, triumphal arch reaching to the skies, on which Christ has written, "Because I live, ye shall live also," yet almost too good to be true, built on airy and feeble foundations.

But Paul assures the Christian believers at Corinth that the best part of this glorious good news is that it is a truth resting on tried and true foundations. There were plenty of other religions in Corinth. Sacred places had been built yesterday, only to be abandoned today; others would be abandoned tomorrow. But the proclaimer of this resurrection faith declared that the Man whom he preached was Divine, and had proved His divinity by opening the eyes of the blind, stilling the waters of the sea, living a stainless and holy life, raising the dead to life, and, wonder of wonders, raising Himself from the grave. Thus He had accompanied His proclamation by a demonstration, and men must believe that the words spoken were as genuine as the miracles and cures wrought.

Quiz and Study. 1. Name ten distinct appearances of the risen Christ. 2. What object in nature does Paul use to illustrate the resurrection? What condition precedes the new life? 3. To what incident did Christ allude in the Old Testament as a sign of His resurrection? To what object then standing? 4. What two Old Testament characters were translated without natural death? What two returned to this life to talk with Christ? 5. Who in this lesson is represented as bringing death on the race? As the penalty of what? Who removes the penalty? Through what means?

Practical Thoughts. 1. Three voices attest the resurrection: the voice of nature in life from decay; the voice of the inner spirit awakening hope; the voice of Scripture confirming the others. 2. Christ is the last Adam, being the Restorer and last Head of humanity. 3. Our Benefactor offers to build us a better house though not of the same precise materials. 4. Death drops the flower that the fruit may swell.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

Now I say, That the heir, as long as he is a differ eth noth ing from a

though he be lord
of all;
But
is under

and governors until the time appointed of the Even so we,

when we were were in under the elements of the world:

But when the fulness of the time
was come,
God sent forth his made

of a made under the law, To redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons. And because ye are

God hath sent forth the Spirit of his Son into your hearts, crying,
Abba, Father.
Wherefore thou art no more a

but a son; and if a son, then an heir of God through Christ.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS GAL. 4:1-16.

Prayer: I thank Thee, Lord Jesus, that through Thy coming in the fulness of time all the children of men may become the children of God. I would not remain all my days a servant in the house. Impart to me, then, the Holy Spirit, that I may have the inward witness that I belong to the family of God. Let me by simple faith and obedience look up and say Abba, my Father. Show me the Father's love and reconciliation through Thine own life and death, and Thy name shall have the praise. Amen.

"We rear not a temple like Judah's of old, Whose portals were marble, whose vaultings were gold;
No incense is lighted, no victims are slain,
No monarch kneels praying to hallow the fane.
O come in the power of Thy life-giving Word,
And reveal to each heart its Redeemer and Lord;
Till faith bring the peace to the penitent given,
And love fill the air with the fragrance of Heaven."
—Henry Ware, Jr.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: A controversial epistle written by Paul to the churches of Galatia, a Roman district in Asia Minor, for the purpose of refuting the errors of the Judaizing teachers. It was written from Corinth during the winter of 57-58 A. D.

Scripture Setting: The Contrast Between Grace and Good Works. The futility of works, Eph. 2:8-22. Justification by faith, Rom. 3:19-31. Works as a sign of living faith, Jas. 2:14-26. Cain and Abel contrasted, Gen. 4:1-7. Turning back to bondage, Num. 11:4-15. A teacher of good works seeking grace, John 3:1-8.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage teaches that Christ came: 1. "When ye knew not God;" man's inability to save himself either by following conscience or the works of the law requiring a Saviour. 2. "In the fulness of time," the world being at peace, possessing a perfect language (Greek), controlled by a single political system (Roman). 3. "At the time appointed by the Father," the time around which the prophecies of the ages centered. 4. For the purpose of "redeeming them that are under the law," offering them "the adoption of sons." 5. To be a perfect Saviour; filled with Divine power (God's Son), yet possessing a human nature (born of a woman), fulfilling human righteousness (born under the law), submitting to ordinances (circumcision and baptism).

BOND MEN UNDER LAW, BUT SONS IN THE GOSPEL.

Paul Preaches the Gospel in Galatia. "Ye know how through infirmity of the flesh I preached the Gospel unto you at the first." The Apostle dearly loved the church in Galatia, having established it himself as a result of the preaching of his first missionary journey. But now his heart is saddened to know that their first love is turned to suspicion, if not to enmity. They had listened to false teachers who persistently invaded the churches founded by Paul and taught among his converts, Jewish doctrines quite contrary to the Christian faith. They were called Judaizers because, originally Jews, they insisted that the Jewish rite of circumcision in addition to faith in Christ was necessary to salvation. In the Roman province of Galatia they had already obtained so strong a footing that Paul feared lest his work there might be entirely undone.

Binding Burdens on Their Own Backs. "Ye observe days, and months, and times, and years." Paul's labors in Galatia placed him in a position to speak to the church as plainly as a father speaks to his child. He had hoped to find free, spontaneous, and glad service. Instead they gave their minds to petty distinctions and fine discriminations of the laws of Judaism, quarrelling between themselves. Paul was especially fitted to lead them out from all this since he himself was once "subject to ordinances," a slave to Pharasaic observances.

Ruskin describes somewhere in his works the dark and tedious Sunday that was commonly observed in England during his childhood. He declares that the day threw backward a dark shadow for three days whenever it approached. A modern teacher has declared that it is the duty of parents to make Sunday the gladdest and brightest day for their children of all the week. To observe the day religiously is not to fence it in with prohibitions only, but to fill it with delightful memories and exercises worth while.

Servants in Subjection to Law. "The heir so long as he is a child differeth nothing from a servant, but is under tutors and governors until the time appointed of the father." The law, in Paul's view, was a preparatory system, useful for a time, but it has now passed away.

Christianity is itself complete and sufficient and does not need to be supplemented by Judaism. The figure here employed is a home in which the father places over the two youths therein certain teachers or governors. One of these at twenty-one steps forth from this discipline a free man prepared for his broad career, since he is a full son. The other remains in the house, still subject to authority, since he is only a servant.

Now Judaism was in bondage to customs, times, places, apparel, vessels, and ordinances such as circumcision and the washing of hands. Depending upon his own good works the Jew feigned prayers, fasted, kept holy days, contributed to charity, and observed the many ceremonies of religion, but could never expect to inherit all the good things of the Father for this, since he was a servant of works. But the true son had acknowledged his own frailty, confessed his sins, ceased to trust in works, and relied solely on the grace and mercy of God in Christ. The Spirit of God had sealed his sonship, giving him the witness of his justification and allowing him to look up into his Father's face and repeat the old expression of an endearing childhood: Abba or Papa.

Sons in the Freedom of Faith. "When the fulness of the time was come, God sent forth His Son, to redeem them that were under the law, that we might receive the adoption of sons." It was many centuries after Adam's fall that God actually sent forth His Son, though many a faithful one like Abraham by the anticipation of faith availed himself of the atonement in Christ. For the salvation of Christ was more than an event in time; it was the Divine attitude of mind reaching backward as well as forward from the cross. As soon as you believe in Christ He comes to you, a Deliverer and Saviour, and from that moment your bondage is over.

The relation of Cain and Abel, though they were brothers laboring side by side, was that of a servant and a son in the household. "The Lord had respect unto Abel and his offering." Abel was first counted righteous and acceptable to God, and then for his sake his offering was accepted also, and not because of his offering. Cain's offering was not acceptable because God had no respect for Cain. Under law it is vainly imagined that God will accept the worker because of his work; whereas under grace what really happens is that God accepts the work for the worker's sake. The poor prodigal returned to his manhood, his freedom, and his lost sonship; when empty-handed he threw himself on the tender mercies of his father. No doubt he did good work ever after, but that did not restore him; he was restored because he believed in and accepted his father's grace and forgiveness.

Released from the Bondsman, Yet Returning to Bondage. "But now after ye have known God, how turn ye again to the weak and beggarly elements." It was impossible, as Paul points out, to combine two utterly inconsistent theories of salvation. Their return "to the weak and beggarly elements" may have been an allusion to the historic turning back of Israel. In the wilderness they had been fed with manna which fell like the dew fresh from heaven each day. But "they remembered the fish which they did eat in Egypt, the cucumbers, and the melons, and the leeks, and the onions, and the garlick." Freed from Egypt they were not yet free from the appetites and tastes they had acquired there. Travelling to Canaan, where they were to feast on milk and honey, their sensual minds still fed on the leeks, onions, and garlick of Egypt.

To become righteous and acceptable to God is to enter into Canaan. This is done, the Gospel teaches, by reposing wholly in Christ, denying ourselves and distrusting our own strength. To such He gives His Spirit, making them anew, giving them another reason and another will. Could good works produce this change, Jesus need not have died. The inward change described to Nicodemus as the new birth is always the work of Divine grace, never the product of good works.

Paul's Personal Appeal as a Faithful Friend. "I bear you record that if it had been possible, ye would have plucked out your own eyes and have given them to me. Am I, therefore, become your enemy, because I tell you the truth?" In a doctrinal letter full of weighty argument Paul makes a powerful personal appeal. Once when he tarried among them for a long while preaching a pure Gospel under great difficulties, probably afflicted by the serious weakness of his eyes, they would have gladly exchanged if possible their own good eyes for his diseased ones.

Now all is changed. Paul will be their true friend, whatever the cost. He remembers how he suffered with their disease when as a bigoted Pharisee he sought peace through obedience to the Mosaic law. But in the midst of this old life his natural eyes were suddenly blinded by the light of Heaven, and there came into his soul a new conception and a new experience,—the knowledge that the justified are justified not by their own good works but by faith in Jesus Christ. Paul may not have won back all of the foolish and bewitched Galatians, but he became a faithful friend to us all in so forcefully presenting salvation, not as a work achieved by human struggle or deserving, but a gift freely bestowed upon simple acceptance and self-surrender.

Quiz and Study. 1. Whose children are mentioned by Paul as illustrating servants under law, sons under grace. 2. What capacity did the law fulfill in bringing Paul to Christ? 3. In what three respects did Christ become obedient to the law? 4. What distinction is implied in Christ's words, "I return to My Father and to your Father"?

Practical Thoughts. 1. The believer, dying, loses his earthly inheritance, but thereby gains a Heavenly one. 2. The Divine inheritance being "incorruptible," cannot be revoked by law, and, being neither perishable nor transferable, "fadeth not away." 3. Types, sacraments, symbols, and creeds are childhood's alphabet; faith's higher knowledge treats of the spiritual and unseen. 4. "Abba, Father," implies indulgent love, ample provision, sufficient protection, necessary correction, forgiveness, and evokes gratitude, reverence, obedience, and filial affection.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

REAPING THE HARVEST.

Be not deceived;
God
is not for whatsoever

a man

that shall
he also

For he that to his flesh shall

of the flesh reap

but he that soweth to the Spirit shall of the Spirit reap everlasting.

And let us not be in well doing: for in due season we shall reap, if we faint not.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS GAL. 6:1-10.

Prayer: Eternal God, who committeth to us the swift and solemn trust of life, since we know not what a day may bring forth, but only that the hour for serving Thee is always present, may we wake to the instant claims of Thy holy will.

Consecrate with Thy presence the way our feet may go; and the humblest work will shine, and the roughest places be made plain. Amen.

—James Martineau.

"We know that the truth shall triumph,
That evil shall have its doom;
That the cause of right, though subdued by might,
Shall break the strongest tomb;
That wrong, though it seem to triumph,
Lasts only for a day;
While the cause of truth has eternal youth,
And shall rule o'er the world for aye."
—Anon.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Same as last lesson. The Galatians were of Celtic origin and naturally vacillating. Paul varies from tenderness to sternness with an undernote of sadness that they had forsaken their warm-hearted teacher.

Scripture Setting: Human Helpfulness and Its Harvest. Taking advantage of the right season, Eccles. 3:1-11. Returns from seed sown broadcast, Eccles. 11:1-10. Providing corn for his brethren, Gen. 45:3-15. Kindness in the harvest field, Ruth 2:1-12. The right kind of sowing, Eph. 4:25-32. The harvest that crowns the year, Psal. 65:1-11.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage teaches

the effect and accountability of influence. 1. Responsibility for doing good: (a) spreading good-will everywhere, especially to the fallen; (b) spreading good things to support and publish the Gospel, especially in our own town; (c) spreading good seed at all times, especially in favorable seasons and places. 2. Effects of personal influence: (a) good work satisfies the worker and lifts the condition of his fellow workmen; (b) each man must do his own work, but with regard for the rights, needs, and wishes of others; (c) honest work outlasts the worker's own day; careless work tumbles on the worker's head.

THE BEARING OF OUR BURDENS.

The Burdens we Should Share. "Bear ye one another's burdens, and so fulfill the law of Christ." Evidently there are two great classes of burdens, those we should bear alone, and those we should share with others. Sharing the burdens of others is here called "the law of Christ." When some of the Galatian Christians had fallen Paul mentioned the guilty with great tenderness as "overtaken in a fault." With compassion he urges that those who are spiritual should "restore" all such. The technical word he uses describes the setting of a broken bone. The fallen one would have to suffer the pain, but gentleness and sympathy by the church would put strength in the heart the better to endure the suffering.

We approach the likeness of Christ when we make life a little easier for others. The cross under which Christ fainted was not His by desert, but by choice. He suffered in bearing its load that thereby He might share all our burdens. Only one disciple carried himself with honor through the scenes of Christ suffering—the disciple from the country—Simon of Cyrene. Of the others it is written, "They all forsook Him and fled." Staggering up the hill of Calvary in the footsteps of his Lord, easing for a little the Master's overburdened body, we see the spirit of a real disciple shining forth.

If like Simon on our way to the Holy City we find one overburdened and fainting by the way, by bearing his cross and sharing his sorrow we prove ourselves true disciples. Every helpful ministry done to our fellow man Christ recognizes and rewards as done to Him. How rich is the life of Jesus in its instances of overloaded souls eased of their burdens when He took the heavy end. Right well did He liken His Gospel to a yoke, since by His fellowship He divides the load with us.

"It is the lonely load
That crushes out the light and life of Heaven.
But borne with Him, the soul restored, forgiven, Sings out through all the days."

The Burdens We Should Bear. "Every man shall bear his own burden." It is equally true that every man must live his own life. Mrs. Wilkinson has told this beautifully in a story "David."

When David was twelve his father died. One night after this, sitting in the kitchen, he told his mother of his purpose. He had learned to plow already; he would learn to sow; he would take his father's place. Early each evening, after he had urged the horses before the plow all day, he would take his pan of grain into the hen yard and practice, while he could see, the long swinging movement of scattering the grain broadcast. The mother watched and sadly smiled as she saw her David was putting away childish things.

At last the great day came; the twelve acres were plowed and harrowed, even if the little body was worn. That morning the young sower went forth to sow. Before dinner the kind-hearted neighbor came to survey the first acre, and he pronounced it good. After he had gone, David's overtaxed frame gave way. He stumbled forward to the foot of a great tree, his small shoulders rising and falling against his own will. Throwing himself on the warm ground he wept for the first time since the funeral. His mother had hastened out through the garden, hoping to see her son standing with shining eyes in the supreme hour of his pride. She spoke not, but quietly stole back to the house, great mother that she was, leaving David alone. David today is one of the world's strong workers in an ennobling profession. From that day he has taken the part of a man. Character is always strengthened when we take the burdens rightfully our own.

The Solemn Sermon of the Scattered Seed.

"Be not deceived; God is not mocked: for whatsoever a man soweth, that shall he also reap." When the hand flings forth for weal or woe the hidden seed of the heart they are soon scattered beyond our recall. Indeed, if we would we cannot stamp them out or stop their spread any more than we can stop a prairie fire. Even the sowing we do in the ignorance and folly of youth, often called wild oats, grows and grows by the wayside to mock us through coming years. Awful and mysterious is the power packed away in seed-thoughts and ideals. It is a mistake to suppose we shall reap only the sowing of our conscious, intentional acts. All seeds follow that eternal law, "Like produces like." The idle, thoughtless word too often sets another to thinking evil. His thoughts ripen into evil acts, and thus the dangerous seeds of thistles and of tares are scattered down the years. A good life can never be hid nor quite forgotten.

An eccentric character, I am told, once passed down through this section of Ohio planting apple-seeds and dropping quaint sayings full of homely wisdom. Johnnie Appleseed long ago ceased traveling, but the fruit of his planting has survived, and the truths that he uttered remain unforgotten still. The winds of God somehow bear them down to other generations. Paul declared, "Our conversation is in Heaven." That might mean that even while we walk the streets of earth we may be in such a Heavenly frame of mind that words spoken without a thought that they will live may nevertheless grow to be "like apples of gold in pictures of silver."

When Thorwaldsen, the Danish sculptor, returned from study in Florence he brought back to his native Copenhagen some pieces of his glorious marble. The straw which protected them was unpacked and carelessly thrown in the street. Behold, next summer rare flowers from the gardens of Florence blossomed in the dusty streets of Copenhagen! Even the by-products and the unconscious sowing of a Christian life blossom into blessing. Some nameless influence goes out from our least conscious hours, and alters in its little but endless power every man, woman, and child we ever knew.

Burdens that Blossom and Become Blessings. "Let us not be weary in well doing: for in due season we shall reap if we faint not." Every opportunity in life comes like a gracious spring morning, not only to be enjoyed, but to be improved. There is a song in the heart of the young sower as he goes forth with the seed bag suspended from his shoulder. Its burden is lightened as he remembers that in a few short months he shall come in bearing on his shoulder sheaves of gold. Whenever by steadfast service we take advantage of the passing time and of that fructifying principle God has placed in the soul of the seed we are conscious of the fact that we are laborers together with God. Sowing is symbolic of all other acts. Every human life is an enclosure fenced for personal investment, a field for cultivation. All the work therein is a work of faith. We sow hoping to reap in due season. God will send the sunshine and the showers. His wondrous laws will operate even while we sleep. "Hast thou not known? hast thou not heard that the everlasting God, the Lord, the Creator of the ends of the earth, fainteth not, neither is weary." But we, too, must be faithful in our part, bearing abroad the burden of the seed.

The father bends under the burden of providing for a family; the mother under the burden of home cares; the business man under the burden of exacting appointments; the minister under the care of souls. To shun burdens and shy at responsibility is not well. We are here not to grow merry, but to grow strong. The man of wisdom declared, "It is good for a man that he bear the yoke in his youth." It is good to bear it all through life. If we grow not weary in well doing in due season we shall exchange it for a crown.

Quiz and Study. 1. What physical burden oppressed Paul, and how was his prayer answered concerning it? 2. What was the affliction that tried the patience of Job, and how was he finally rewarded? 3. What were the complaints made by the Israelites against Moses, and what work of Aaron further tried his patience? 4. How did Haman reap the reward of his enmity and how was his enemy rewarded? 5. Name three Hebrews who rose to positions of distinction while in captivity because they remembered their God.

Challenge Text. "While the — remaineth, seed-time and —, and cold and —, and summer and —, and day and — shall not cease." Gen. 8: (9).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Human sympathy is a universal language, and kindness is intelligible even to dumb brutes. 2. No man is fitted to restore another who does not recognize the danger of lapsing himself. 3. Since we were carried before we learned to walk, we should not refuse to carry others who are babes in Christ. 4. He who sees the possibilities of the oak in the acorn despises not the littleness of the acorn. 5. God preserves and plants the seed corn; Israel in Palestine, the Pilgrims in America.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

SAVED BY GRACE.

But God, who is rich in for his great

wherewith he loved us, Even when we were in sins, hath quickened us together with

(by grace ye are saved;)
And hath raised us up together, and made us in heavenly places in Christ Jesus;

That in the ages to come he might shew
the exceeding riches of his grace in his toward us through Christ

Jesus.
For by grace are ye saved
through

and that not of yourselves: it is the gift of God:

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS EPHESIANS 2:1-10.

Prayer: O Saviour of the world, God of gods, Light of light, Thou art the brightness of Thy Father's glory, the express image of His person; be Thou my light and my peace. O Thou who didst raise Lazarus from the dead, raise me from the death of sin. Thou who didst heal the sick, and give sight to the blind, heal the diseases of my soul, and cleanse my heart of every desire but that of advancing Thy glory. Amen.—John Wesley.

“Not what these hands have done
Can save this guilty soul;
Not what this toiling flesh has borne
Can make my spirit whole.
Thy love to me, O God,
Not mine, O Lord, to Thee,
Can rid me of this dark unrest,
And set my spirit free.”

—Horatius Bonar.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Written by Paul from Rome some time after his arrival there A. D. 61. It was carried by Tychicus to the Ephesian Christians who under the shadow of the great temple of Diana with its outward grandeur and pomp of ceremony needed to be reminded that salvation was by grace alone.

Scripture Setting: The Freeness and Certainty of God's Grace. Israel's adoption by grace. Ex. 34: 1-10. Our adoption by grace. Eph. 1:3-14. Miracles of grace in days of old. Mic. 7:14-20. Prayer for the continuation of Divine grace. Psa. 86:3-7, 12-17. God's mercy as source and ground of our love. 1 John 4:10-19.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage exalts grace only as the redemptive power in believers. 1. It alters the desires of both mind and body. 2. It alters the conversation of believers. 3. It alters our relationship from children of wrath to children of obedience. 4. It alters our position from graveyard of sin to fireside of reconciliation. 5. It invigorates His church to triumph through ages to come.

THE WONDERFUL WORK OF GOD'S GRACE.

Power That Prevailed Over the Prince of Darkness. “And you hath He quickened; wherein in time past ye walked according to the course of this world, according to the prince of the power of the air.” Paul presents the conditions of both Gentile and Jew, before the coming of Christ, in sombre colors indeed. He calls them “children of wrath,” “fulfilling the desires of the flesh and the mind.” In the theology of the rabbis, which Paul mastered, lost souls were under the control of evil spirits called “Powers of the air.” The prince of these, Satan himself, is represented as in conflict with all mankind, holding them with fatal power, gloating over their anticipated destruction.

It might be compared to Retzsch's famous picture of Satan gaming for a human soul. The young man's case seems hopeless and his doom inevitable, for Satan has robbed him of his white pawns of prayer, and holds the black pawns of doubt. Murphy, the great American chess-player, was shown the picture, and after studying it, called for a chess board. He placed the chess-men exactly as pictured in the struggle, and by one move won the game.

Once our case was hopeless; our prayers were of no avail; Satan's doubts were triumphing, when Christ by one great stroke won back our soul from the fateful snare and saved us from eternal death.

The Disobedient and Disinherited Restored to the Father's Fireside. “But God who is rich in mercy, for His great love wherewith He loved us, hath quickened us together with Christ.” Many believe that when Paul became a Christian his wealthy Jewish parents in Tarsus disinherited him.

This would accord with his own statement that for Christ he had suffered the loss of all things. Orthodox Jews do bitterly persecute their own children for embracing Christianity, turning them out of the home, conducting a mock funeral, and henceforth speaking of them as dead. Paul counts even the children of Abraham as dead in sin, since God had cast them out through disobedience.

But Christ, with the beautiful spirit of an interceding brother, paid the penalty of disobedience; effected a reconciliation; showed them the loving heart of God so rich in mercy, and brought them back under the protection of the paternal roof. The death and resurrection of Jesus brings us all around the fireplace of Divine forgiveness, restored to our original places. “God hath raised us up together, and made us sit together in Heavenly places in Christ Jesus.”

A dissipated son by his waywardness hurried his father to the grave. On the day of the funeral this ungrateful son returned home, but sat unmoved by the pale face of his devoted father. Even on the brink of the new grave he showed no feeling. When the family returned home the father's will was read. In it the wayward boy was given an equal share of the property besides a special gift. As his own name was read this son was overcome with contrition and gratitude, his heart heaved with emotion, his tears came fast, and he was heard to say, “O to think that father would be so kind even to me!”

In the family of Christ we can have no place because of our deserving. But trusting the Father's great love; knowing that He is rich in mercy, we come back to hear His will read in the testament of the Scriptures. Feeling our own unworthiness we learn therein with wonder and gratitude that our name is recorded, an heir of God, a joint heir with Jesus Christ!

Eternity Required to Reveal the Riches of Redemption. "That in the ages to come He might show the exceeding riches of His grace in His kindness toward us through Christ Jesus." The exceeding riches of God's grace can be shown forth only partially. As the ages unfold, continually succeeding each other, we shall have reason for fresh wonder and praise. Paul describes it as "the mystery which hath been hidden from ages and from generations, but now is made manifest to the saints." And the mystery shall grow until it is consummated in the Lord's coming again.

It is well that science is constantly revealing strange surprises for us, since we can use them to illustrate the grace of God so rich in its unfoldings that the poverty of language embarrasses us. An enthusiastic astronomer showed us that the number of known stars had doubled since we were boys, and exhibited photographs he had taken of new world systems in the process of being made. Our Father in Heaven has not exhausted His resources; He has only begun to reveal them.

At Plymouth, Massachusetts, you may read the words that John Robinson wrote in 1620: "I am very confident that the Lord has yet more truth to break forth out of His holy Word. The Lutherans cannot be drawn to go beyond what Luther said. And the Calvinists, you see, stick fast where they were left by that great man of God—who yet saw not all things." Whatever God makes is packed full of infinity, whether it be a universe, a soul, or a religious revelation.

The Sinner's Stricken Name Restored by Grace. "For by grace are ye saved through faith, and that not of yourselves; it is the gift of God; not of works, lest any man should boast." How very hard it seems to learn the Divine order in our religious life. And yet how clearly shines the simple fact that we are saved, not by what we feel, or think, or do, or even are, but by grace—which is God's gift. Oliver Cromwell was a great Christian and a man of iron, but his last words were, "I think that I am the poorest wretch that lives, but I love God, or rather,

I am beloved of God." Paul once corrected himself in the same way, "But now ye have known God, or rather are known of God." So much of the world's religious hope has depended upon human efforts, feeble and intermittent, instead of upon God's love for us, which is stability itself.

Lochlan Campbell was a rugged Scotchman who read stern books of theology till he thought that God had only angry thoughts for the wicked. His daughter, Flora, having no mother, went astray, and wandered to the great city. Then Lachlin went to the kirk and made the motion himself that her name be stricken from the roll. He went home and crossed the girl's name off the record in the great family Bible. To him his daughter now was dead. But in the school of suffering he learned what he did not find in his books. His heart was changed, and he made a pile of his stern Puritan books near the window setting a lamp upon them to shine out upon the pathway home. He wrote a father's letter to his motherless girl. She came back one night, and taking down the great Bible this is what she wrote: "Flora Campbell, missed April, 1873, found September, 1873. Her father fell on her neck and kissed her." In the Heavenly Father's great record book is written even the name of the prodigal. And whenever a wandering son comes back He writes beneath his name, "This My son was dead and is alive again."

Quiz and Study. 1. Whose house and family were saved by a scarlet cord in the window? What according to Heb. 11 did the cord represent? 2. Who tried to purchase God's gift with money. What was Peter's reply to the offer? 3. What general disdained the simple means offered to heal his leprosy? What prophet refused the gift the general urged? What servant afterwards sought the reward? How was he punished? 4. What disciples healed a cripple at Lystra? What did the cripple contribute towards the cure? Why did the disciples refuse garlands and oxen?

Challenge Text. "The wages of sin is —; but the gift of God is — — through Jesus Christ our Lord." Rom. 6:(†).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Walking in sin "according to the course of this world" like walking in sleep is effort without purpose, blindness to duty, imminent peril of death. 2. Salvation resting on our merit rests on doubt; resting on God's mercy rests secure. 3. As moral bankrupts facing Satan the sheriff how desirable the help of One "rich in mercy!" 4. The boast of the Pharisee is self-sufficiency; the Christian only boasts in the love and merits of his Lord.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE CHRISTIAN ARMOUR.

Wherefore
take unto you the whole

of God,
that ye
may be able to

in the evil day,
and having done all,
to stand.

therefore, having your loins

and having
on the

of righteousness; And your shod with the preparation

of the gospel of

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS EPHESIANS 6:10-20.

Prayer: O Christ, Great King of kings, the conquering Captain of my salvation, accept me this day as a crusader for Thee. Assist me to buckle on the whole armor of God, to follow where Thy bugle sounds the charge, to fight the good fight of faith, and to trust Thee for the final victory.

Enable me to resist every wrong in my pathway, and to assist every righteous cause in my power. Be Thou with me while I watch and fight and pray. Amen.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Written by Paul during his Roman imprisonment, which began in Feb. A. D. 61. Sent by Tychicus probably the following year, or four years after his parting with the Ephesian elders, while a prisoner chained to a Roman soldier and in the midst of military sights and sounds.

Scripture Setting: Spiritual Weapons for Soldiers of Salvation. Divine weapons for safety and salvation. Psalms 35:1-10. The doughty warrior of faith. 1 Sam. 17:38-51. Soldiers of salvation. 1 Thess. 5:1-8. Shields of faith in history's battle abbey. Hebrews 11:32-40. Satan subdued by the sword of the Spirit. Luke 4:1-13. The dragon

"Volunteers are wanted! hear the stirring call, O be swift to answer, comrades, one and all; Girding on your armor, haste to march away, For the Lord is calling, 'To the front today!' Away to the battle, away, away! The King calls for soldiers in His ranks today; Hear the bugle calling, into line be falling, Forth to the battlefield, away, away!"

—Mrs. E. E. Williams.

overcome by Christ's blood and the saint's testimonies. Rev. 12:7-13.

Life and Conduct Setting: The Scripture passage presents supplies for all of man's spiritual nature. 1. Truth undergirds and unites all virtues. 2. Righteousness defends the sincere heart from base insinuations. 3. Grace prepares for publishing peace tidings with agility. 4. Salvation lifts up the head and preserves the mental powers. 5. The Scriptures probe iniquity and pierce through hypocrisy. 6. Prayer and watchfulness prevent surprises and covert attacks.

KNIGHTHOOD ARMED FOR THE HOLY WAR.

Fully Equipped for the Foe. "Put on the whole armor of God, that ye may be able to stand against the wiles of the devil."

Paul takes advantage of a favorite thought with the Ephesians that the gods gave armor to mythical heroes. A favorite story among the Greek poets was how the mother of Achilles dipped him when a child in the river Lethe because the oracle had told her that thus he would be shielded from danger during the Trojan war. But when Paris, his enemy, learned afterwards that the heel where his mother held him was vulnerable, he shot him in the heel and so killed him. Satan is sure to hit the least part he finds unarmed, hence the Christian must be armed cap-a-pie as the knights said, that is, panoplied with the whole armor.

The Girdle of Truth. The belt or zona passed round the soldier's body just below his breastplate. It kept the armor in its place, supported the sword, and strengthened the wearer. So truth is the band that girds and binds together Christian character. The passover was eaten with the loins girt and the shoes on their feet to commemorate the beginning of Israel's midnight march out of Egypt. And the Christian warrior is represented in the attitude of alertness and readiness. He must gird up his loins like a man, for the signal to march may come at noonday or midnight.

The Breastplate of Righteousness. "Having on the breastplate of righteousness." In the description of Goliath's armor is found the most complete inventory of a warrior's furnishings found anywhere in the sacred writings. The Philistines were a nation of smiths, expert in wrought iron and bronze. Goliath was covered from his loins to his breastbone with polished metal scales affording freedom of movement and protection to the vital organs. The heart is after all the vital organ. "Keep thy heart with all diligence, for out of it are the issues of life."

The cuirass or corselet of righteousness is composed of nine polished plates of strength which Paul enumerates elsewhere as the separate graces of a Christian life; patience, kindness, generosity, humility, courtesy, unselfishness, good temper, guilelessness, sincerity. But the Christian, unlike the Philistine, need not forge his own breastplate, for a tried and flawless one is offered him from above. In the great test our own righteousness, Paul declares, will be as filthy rags to cover our heart, and he prays that he may put on the perfections of Christ, "not having mine own righteousness, but that which is through the faith of Christ."

The Gospel Sandals. "And your feet shod with the preparation of the gospel of peace." Since the Gospel is a message and every Christian a messenger, his feet are shod with preparedness and winged with speed. Moses promised the Israelites before his death that in their difficulties in conquering Canaan Jehovah would be the shield of their help, the sword of their excellency, and that their shoes would be iron and brass. We know that they wandered forty years in the wilderness, yet as by miracle their Egyptian sandals had not waxed old.

Once in Paul's preaching tour at Lystra the populace mistook him for Mercury, the herald of the gods, the swift, graceful traveler. In most representations of Mercury he is a slender, beardless youth, having winged sandals tied to his feet. Paul was indeed a swift herald of God, and in his impatient eagerness to carry the Gospel to the ends of the world we are reminded of that Scripture utterance: "How beautiful are the feet of them that preach the gospel of peace, and bring glad tidings of good things."

The Shield of Faith. "Above all taking the shield of faith, wherewith ye shall be able to quench all the fiery darts of the wicked." The shield is not only "above all" other defensive weapons in importance, but the meaning here is that with it the soldier may cover and protect all the pieces he has put on before. The Roman shield or scutum was a great door-like piece of metal oval in shape four feet long and two and a half feet wide. The shield was the weapon which would certainly intercept the fiery darts or arrows tipped with inflammable material and shot after being set on fire to burn the enemy's camp. How the fiery darts of temptation aimed by the prince of this world; wrath, lust, revenge, doubt, and despair, do flame and burn when they reach an unguarded Christian heart. When faith is lost the warrior falls.

History tells of a Greek mother who upon parting with her son as he set out for his first war called to him, "Either bring back your shield or be brought back upon it."

To the Greek it was an ineffacable disgrace to lose his shield in battle. He would rather lose his life. So Paul writing to Timothy, his young Gospel soldier, declares that the shield of faith with which he (Paul) has fought all his splendid spiritual victories he has held to the last, and soon they are to carry him out upon it to the place of his burial. "The time of my departure is at hand. I have fought a good fight. I have kept the faith."

There are plenty of Philistines today who whittle out their own man-made creeds, but the warrior saints receive their shields from God. "I exhort you that you should earnestly contend for the faith once delivered to the saints." Live with your shield of faith and be willing to die for it.

The Helmet of Salvation. "And take the helmet of salvation." The military helmet of the Roman, the galea, was a cap made of leather strengthened and ornamented with metallic plates or bosses, and surmounted with a crest or plume. The head was one of the principal parts to be protected, as on it the deadliest strokes might fall. When the head is wounded, the general is wounded, since that part suffers which commands the whole body. Hence Satan assaults the mind most fiercely through ear-gate, eye-gate, and palate-gate. Often he uses strategy as the Greeks did at Troy smuggling in a little band of unholy suggestions who open the gates to a whole army of evil that blackens and burns. So long as the white plume of salvation waves over the seat of our thought and decision we are safe. "He will keep him in perfect peace whose mind is stayed on Thee."

The Sword of the Spirit. "And the sword of the Spirit which is the word of God." Mohammed's religion with the banner of the crescent has been propagated by resorting to the sword. Christ's religion with the banner of the cross has been propagated by the preaching of the Word. Satan fears no weapon like the Bible; it is the Christian's one offensive weapon.

When David spied Goliath's great sword he cried, "Give it me; there is none like that," and he wrought terrible execution with it along the Philistine coast.

In Christ's opening manhood he met Satan in three fierce assaults and in every encounter with His temptations He was triumphant because in childhood He had stored His mind with the Hebrew Scriptures. The trouble with us today is that our Bibles have been hidden. David's search for Goliath's sword led to finding it wrapped in a cloth and hidden behind the ephod. O for a modern David to find all our lost Bibles! What great victories the church would win equipped with the sword of the Spirit and skilful in its use!

When Joab took the national census of Israel and Judah he only counted the thousands that drew the sword. The modern Sunday-school can count in its effective fighting force only those of its 2,500,000 teachers and many million scholars who can hold up their own copies of the Bible and who know its choicest passages by heart.

To sum up then the thought that shines through all Paul's figures of speech is his declaration that the weapons of our warfare are not carnal but mighty, if they be spiritual, in tearing down the strongholds of Satan. Christ says, "Put up thy sword; watch and pray that ye enter not into temptation." So we thank God for our spiritual armor, and for the watch-tower of prayer, the arsenal where our weapons are forged.

Quiz and Study. 1. What in Paul's experience would suggest the soldierly elements of this lesson? Where in Isaiah would he find a model passage? 2. What chapter in Paul's writing renews the figure? What chapter in Hebrews give the record of Hebrew warriors? 3. Where was Paul escorted at night by 200 soldiers? When were his orders to the soldiers obeyed to the saving of many lives? 4. How many soldiers guarded Peter in prison? How many gambled for Christ's seamless tunic?

Challenge Text. "For he put on righteousness as a —, and an helmet of salvation upon his —," Isa. 59:17.

Practical Thoughts. 1. The most soldierly virtues are courage and obedience. 2. No soldier fights alone; the church is a garrison of comrades within call; and angels of God encamp round about him. 3. The sword of the Scriptures is two-edged, sent to relieve all believers from the siege of death; sent to condemn all deniers to court-martial and execution. 4. The sinlessness and consistency of Christ's character has made his seamless robe a coat of mail defying destruction.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS THE EPISTLE TO PHILEMON.

Prayer: We bless Thee, Our Father, for the world in which we live and for that most gracious beauty of the world, the love and loyalty of friends. Make us worthy of them and of Thee, the Friend who loveth at all times, that by integrity of character and purity of life we may enrich the lives of those who love us unto all godliness and happiness: Through Jesus Christ our Lord.

There's a Friend for all God's children
Above the bright, blue sky,
A Friend who never changes
Whose love will never die
Our earthly friends may fail us,
And change with changing years,
This Friend is always worthy
Of that dear name He bears.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time and Place. The Epistle to Philemon was written by Paul from his prison in Rome to a Christian disciple in Colossae during the year 63 A. D. Persons, Paul, the Apostle, now nearing his martyrdom, Philemon, a citizen of Colossae, a convert of Paul's and actively and generously interested in the work of the church. Onesimus, a Phrygian slave who had run away from Philemon, also a convert of Paul's and now being returned to his master.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The Epistle sets forth in beautiful fashion Paul's gift for friendship. 2. The use he makes of it in behalf of the needy. 3. It also shows the power of the Gospel to save both the rich and the poor, both the wise and the unwise. 4. It solves the slave problem by making master and slave brother Christians. 5. It shows how kindness is all the more lovable that it involves self sacrifice.

Scripture Setting: Paul's courtesy, Phil. 1:1-7. Paul's Concern for the Outcast, Phil. 1:10-20. The Advantages of Friendship, Prov. 17:17; 27:9-10. The Danger from Evil Friends, Prov. 22:24-25; James 4:4-11; John 2:15. Jesus As Friend, Luke 12:4; John 15:14. Famous Friendships, David and Jonathan, 1 Sam. 18; Ruth and Naomi, Ruth 1:6-7; David and Ittai, 2 Sam. 15:19-22. Paul and Philemon, Phil. 1:4-5.

THE ART OF ENRICHING FRIENDSHIP.

A Domestic Idyl. One commentator has spoken of the Epistle of Philemon as an "idyl of domestic life," another declares it to shine "among the rich treasures of the New Testament as a pearl of exquisite fineness."

Value of a Letter. Letter writing is at present in decline. And yet next to the spoken word it is an evangelistic instrument of the first order. Carlyle's career as a writer was practically determined by a letter from an unknown admirer who praised his work. There was no tonic for our boys in the trenches like a letter from home.

This letter of Paul's to Philemon speaks from the heart to the heart. Philemon must have been less than a man not to be touched by its friendliness, its intimacy, its pathos. Here was the man who had brought him to God (Verse 19) old and infirm and in prison (Verses 2-9-10-13). Thinking not of himself—of his years, of his bodily infirmities, of his chains, of the approach of death—but of the comfort and happiness of a poor slave whom he had taken from the depths and to whom he had given the chance of a new and better life.

The Fruitful Christian. Philemon, however, was just the sort of Christian with whom an appeal for kindness would avail. Conversion was real in him; discipleship was taken seriously. Paul found "great joy and encouragement in his love," and "the hearts of Christ's people were cheered" by his constancy and sympathy. He believed in a social and helpful religion. In his home the little Colossian congregation could find a shelter for worship where the saints might admonish one another with psalms and hymns and sacred songs and refresh each other's hearts by their witness to the loving kindness of God. (Col. 3:16). Apphia, "our sister," was doubtless his wife, and Archippus, "our fellow soldier in Christ," was probably his son, so that here we have a glimpse of an early Christian home united and happy in the fear of God and earnestly seeking to further the interests of the Kingdom by a consistent life and a benevolent temper. A revival of such home life is greatly needed in our day.

The Living Witness. The best of Christian evidences is a real Christian living the supernatural life on a natural plane. To witness by speech is easy enough, but it is the life that counts. "I am a human being and nothing which pertains to man is alien to me." So said a famous pagan poet who nevertheless advised his wife to make away with their baby because it was a girl.

The Efficient Gospel. It is not easy for us in these days to imagine the degradation of the slave in the days of the Roman empire.

He was simply a chattel in the house of his master. He was sold or killed according to the whims of the man who owned him. He could claim nothing as his own, not even his right to live. No wonder then that he gave himself over to the uncontrolled desires of an animal passion. As nobody cared for him he ceased to have any concern about himself. When, therefore, Onesimus, under the preaching of Paul heard of a new order of things in which every human being was dear to God and in which, under the power of the Spirit, he might become a child of God, it is no wonder he became a convert. Like Philemon he had a real conversion and he took his discipleship seriously. Paul's fondness for him is shown in frequent terms of endearment; he is "this child of mine" to whom in prison "I have become a Father"; to send him back "is like tearing out my very heart," because he has proved himself "of great service not only to you but to me as well"; he is "a dearly loved brother, especially dear to me," and a kindness done to him would be to the apostle a specific "gain" and a source of "cheer," that is the way Christ makes over a man. Onesimus the outcast and worthless became the friend of Paul and a source of blessing.

How Religion Works. This truth is written large and plain in the history of the race. Under Christian influence Augustine the profligate became Bishop of Hippo and the greatest theologian of his day; under the same influence came to high usefulness, John Bunyan, Jerry McAuley, Colonel Hadley, Billy Sunday and a host of others.

The Epistle and Slavery. The Epistle to Philemon used to be quoted in favor of slavery. But Paul has nothing to say about slavery as an institution. He knows very well that when you make a man a Christian you give him a new view of the inherent dignity of the human soul and of the brotherhood of man. To Philemon Paul says, "It has occurred to me that Providence may have permitted him (Onesimus) to be separated from you for a time that he might come back to you in a new character and relation, no longer as a mere slave but as a beloved fellow Christian." In this way Paul started a new conscience about slave holding in Philemon and in the world. The abolition of slavery came slowly but it came. And the power which swept it from the earth was the constraint of the Christian conscience. It is in this way that reforms make surest progress, as we know in the case of bull baiting, gladiatorial combats, the drink curse and other evils. It is in this way that we may hope eventually for a clean world in which Christ is accepted as leader and guide. No reformer needs to be discouraged whose work has God's endorsement.

Evangelistic Tact. The tone and manner of the letter shows the tactfulness of the Apostle in his dealing with men. It is kindly and persuasive. "I might," he says, "with Christ's authority speak very freely and order you to do what is fitting," but he will not do that, he will ask consideration for Onesimus as a personal favor. The ambassador for Christ should cultivate the winning and gracious manner.

Denunciation Hinders. Newman Hall who wrote the beautiful tract "Come to Jesus" wrote also a denunciatory tract for which he wanted a title. A friend upon reading the tract and realizing its repellent tone suggested that he entitle it "Go to Hell," by the author of "Come to Jesus."

Quiz and Study. Study Paul's salutations at the beginning and end of his epistles. 1. Why and where was Paul a prisoner? 2. Learn as much as possible about Paul's friends mentioned in this epistle—Apphia, Archippus, Epaphras, Mark, Aristarchus, Demas and Luke. 3. What is Paul's thought about praying for friends? 4. How were slaves regarded in the ancient world? 5. Did Christianity make any change in their condition? 6. If so, what and how? 7. Did Paul ever see Colossae?

Practical Thoughts. 1. Letter writing is a good way of keeping one's friendship in repair. 2. In letter writing one should strive to say something memorable and helpful. 3. It purifies and nourishes friendship to pray for your friends. 4. One gives thanks for a meal, why not a friend? 5. A Christian in chains is still free; he knows no bondage of the spirit. 6. Paul tho aged and a prisoner knows how to be happy and content. Faith brings and keeps Jesus at his side. 7. The Gospel knows nothing of master and slave. It knows only brotherhood.

DR. CHARLES M. STUART.

Let this mind be in you, which was also in Christ Jesus: Who, being in the form of God thought it not to be equal with God: But made himself of no reputation, and took upon him the form of a and was made in the likeness of men: And being found in fashion as a he humbled himself, and became obedient unto even the death of the Wherefore God also hath highly exalted him, and given him a which is above every name: That at the name of Jesus every knee should bow, of things in and things in and things under the earth; And that every tongue should confess that Jesus Christ is Lord, to the glory of God the Father.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS PHIL. 2:1-13.

Prayer: Our Heavenly Father who didst suffer Thy Son to be humiliated by taking our human nature, subdue the pride of our hearts, and make us to share Thy Divine nature. The remembrance of how little we have and how little we are makes us to dwell low in the deep valley of humility. May we sink then into the humbleness of Christ that we may be raised to enjoy His glory. For His name's sake. Amen.

"He doth give His joy to all:
He becomes an infant small,
He becomes a man of woe,
He doth feel the sorrow, too.
Can I see another's woe,
And not be in sorrow, too?
Can I see another's grief,
And not seek for kind relief?"

—William Blake.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Paul first preached the Gospel to the Philippians, A. D. 51. Eleven years later Epaphroditus is sent by the church to Rome with tidings to Paul from them. His letter in reply is warm and tender, written from the standpoint of a personal friend.

Scripture Setting: Sitting Low at Jesus' Feet. Mary praises God's exaltation of the humble, Luke 1:46-55. The school of the lowly heart, Matt. 11:25-30. Humility becoming old and young, I Pet. 5:1-11. Pleasing others, not ourselves, Rom. 15:1-7. The humiliation and exaltation of Christ, Isa. 53:1-12.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage presents Christ's incarnation as our example of the lowly mind. 1. The cure for the strife of brethren and the glory of self is the spirit of Jesus. 2. Christ was willing to surrender the glory of the Godhead if thereby He might rescue humanity. 3. Christ emptied Himself of Divine attributes, divested Himself of the Divine government, and united Himself to human limitations. 4. Christ assumed the humblest form of human life, born in a stable of obscure parents, choosing humble toil, and foregoing the enjoyment of family life. 5. Christ yielded both mind and body to suffering a death most abject and ignoble. 6. Christ's subsequent exaltation is proof of God's approval of the humble mind. 7. From Christ let us learn the double lesson of humility and obedience.

THE MIND OF CHRIST THE MOTIVE FOR MAN.

The Master's Mind Implanted in Men's Lives. "Let this mind be in you which was also in Christ Jesus." The whole meaning of discipleship was to perpetuate the mind of Christ in the world. And the proof of Paul's apostleship is to be found not so much in historical records of church councils as in his heroic life and his own statement that "It pleased God to reveal His Son in me." The mind of Christ was revealed to Paul first through his conversion, and then through his preaching and epistles to countless thousands. The life and labors of the great Apostle to the Gentiles form a many-sided prism through which the mind of Christ is broken into many wonderful and beautiful colorings.

How much the world owes to Paul for revealing so clearly what love is and all its component parts. Yet the love he describes is but the mind and motive of his Lord. Paul left the study of law and philosophy to give his life to the study of the one great subject, the mind of Christ. The lesson before us reveals the motive of Christ in becoming man, the same motive that should prompt all His followers to a life of service for others.

Christ's Humiliation in Adopting Our Human Nature. "But made Himself of no reputation, and took upon Him the form of a servant, and was made in the likeness of man." The revisers, we think, have more clearly produced Paul's thought, "He emptied Himself, taking the form of a servant."

For Christ to begin human life was to enter upon a discipline of subjection totally unlike His preëxistence "in the form of God." He was born as other children are; He grew as others; His body and mind took shape under human conditions.

The Word, the eternal Christ, was made flesh. He who made the worlds was seen in Judea in the lowliness of His earlier peasant life, and afterwards as the public but humble servant of God. He had spoken and it was done; but as man with labor and pain did He accomplish the Divine purpose. The Man of Bethlehem set His face steadily one way, His life was all of one piece; a perfect life clothed with flesh, but clothed with truth and grace. He who was with God and was God did not renounce His essential nature and cease to be Divine. But to Jesus this earth life was, as ours can never be, an experience of human limitation, human weakness and impoverishment, human subjection and dependence, because of its startling contrast with the fulness of that former glory He enjoyed before taking the form of a servant, "being in the form of God."

The Four Steps of Descending Humiliation. "And being found in fashion as a man, He humbled Himself, and became obedient unto death, even the death of the cross." Before Martin Luther was thirty he made a pious pilgrimage on foot to Rome and crept on his knees up the staircase that was known as Pilate's. But ere Jesus was little more than thirty He journeyed on His knees down a descending stairs that led Him to uttermost humiliation.

The incarnation was the first step He took to rescue us from the power of sin and death. By leaving Heaven and entering into our human life through the helplessness of infancy He bound Himself to our woful fortunes and brought down to us the benefits with which He would enrich us. This was necessary if He would reach us. "It behooved Him to be made like unto His brethren." But to be found in the fashion of a man was not enough; if He would be the strongest, He must be the gentlest; if He would be the greatest, He must be the most humble. His obedience and subjection, therefore, were very special. In mien, in speech, in act, and very spirit He was the fulfillment of all lowliness and obedience. Subject to His earthly parents in childhood and youth, in all His life He entered into a complete subjection to His Heavenly Father's will such as no other life has more than faintly approximated. This was the second step.

The third step mentioned is His obedience unto death. His death at thirty-three was at a time when life was full of zest, not when it was broken by the weight of age or disappointment. And death was in nowise a necessity of His nature. He declared, "I have power to lay it down, and I have power to take it up." Being Divine He might have lived on endlessly in the human form with which He clothed Himself. How rich and costly the sacrifice of His life may be gathered only in part from His prayer of anguish, "If it be possible, let this cup pass."

The fourth and final step mentioned is the manner of His taking off. His obedience extended to the humiliation of the Roman cross. All of the ignominy that clusters round the gallows now, then shrouded like a pall the cross before the flesh of Jesus exalted it into an emblem of purest love and devotion. A dark and sad death it was, so dark that the Son of Man could cry, "My God, My God, why hast Thou forsaken me!" His death, then, sealed with apparent failure and disgrace, was the climax of His self-emptying, but it marks the lowest step in all of human condescension and humiliation.

The Nature and Influence of Our Exalted Lord. "Wherefore God also hath highly exalted Him, and given Him a name which is above every name; that at the name of Jesus every knee shall bow." The name above every name which Jesus now bears is the resultant of His humiliation and suffering, and the prophetic picture of all creation falling before Him in homage is the confident declaration that the world shall eventually be brought back to God through the passionate love wherewith He loved us. In that same resurrected body with which he greeted His surprised disciples on the shore of Galilee

He ascended to be forever our human-divine Intercessor.

Exalted though He be now, He has not surrendered His human nature, He is still touched with a feeling of our infirmities. The tie between the Creator and the created, the bridge between the Infinite and the finite—how natural that to Him every knee should bow in Divine homage and in human supplication. In Paul's thinking a double truth shines clear. The eternal God bowed down to bless mankind in and by His Son, but received Him back possessed with the addition of a human nature to increased glory and exaltation because of His obedience and humiliation.

The Master Mind Working Out in Men's Lives. "Wherefore, my beloved, work out your salvation with fear and trembling, for it is God that worketh in you both to will and do of His good pleasure." Having shown the church the mind of the Master, characterized by lowliness, obedience, and suffering, Paul finally invites all of its members to come into Christ's school and learn the Father's good pleasure for each of them.

The wisdom of Christ is the lowly, loving mind, looking not on our own things, but on the things of others; doing nothing through strife or vainglory; esteeming in all lowliness of mind the other better than himself; substituting kindness, tenderheartedness, and forgiveness for bitterness, wrath and anger. These are the first principles, the A B C's in the Master's school of prayer and discipleship.

At Christ's feet Paul had learned this. It had glowed in his soul. With it he had gone throughout the world, seeking the profit of many that they, too, might be saved. From Paul's epistle and character we are admonished to let the life of Jesus Christ be manifested in our mortal bodies.

Quiz and Study. 1. What reference to Christ's lowly birth is found in Mary's song of praise? What gift from the wise men suggested Christ was a king? 2. Where is the record: that Christ's fellow-townsmen ejected Him from Nazareth? that His brothers thought Him beside Himself? that His brothers lacked belief in Him? 3. What fact in Christ's triumphal entry, foretold by Zechariah, revealed His humility? what fact showed that His lofty character was recognized? 4. What two words which Christ addressed to His disciples reveal His will that all disciples shall imitate His example? What words of Paul refer to himself as an example to be followed?

Challenge Text: "He was —, and He was —, yet He opened not His —." Isa. 53: (?).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Humility, that low, sweet root, from which all heavenly virtues shoot.—Moore. 2. True humility is the ability to forget that in which we may excel our neighbor, and remember only that in which he excels us. 3. Many desire not the beauty of Christ, being too much employed about themselves to penetrate His greatest merit hiding behind greatest humility. 4. The inner life develops the individual; therefore continuous spiritual communion with Christ, not mere imitation of Him, transforms into His image. 5. Salvation is "worked in" believers by the Spirit; it is "worked out" by obedience in progression unto perfection.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

Rejoice in the Lord alway: and again I say,

Let
your moderation be known unto all

The Lord is at hand. Be careful for nothing; but in every thing by and supplication

with thanksgiving let your requests
be made known unto God
And the

of God, which passeth all understanding, shall keep your hearts and minds through Christ Jesus.
Finally, brethren,

W HATSOEVER things True Honest Just W HATSOEVER things Pure Lovely of Good Report

if there be any virtue, and if there be any think on these things

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS PHIL. 4:1-13.

Prayer: Whatever, Lord Jesus, may be my lot in life make me to be content. However far from home I need not be far from Thee. If earthly riches be denied me, may I know the riches of Thy grace. If trouble and confusion be around me, keep my heart staid and fixed on Thee. Thus shall life be joy and death gain. Amen.

"A little bird I am,
Shut from the fields of air;
And in my songs I sit and sing
To Him who placed me there;
Well pleased a prisoner to be,
Because, my God, it pleaseth Thee."
—Madame Guyon.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Written by Paul from Rome to the inhabitants of Philippi, a city of Macedonia. Time, A. D. 63. Contains no word of censure, but much praise. Persons, Clement, Epaphroditus, Euodia, and Syntyche. Nero is also mentioned in the chapter.

Scripture Setting: The Assurances of Faith. Security of the saints, Isa. 45:2-8. Resting in the Divine goodness, Psa. 17:5-9, 17. Casting care upon God, I Pet. 5:2-10. Godliness with contentment, I Tim. 6:6-12. Trusting God, fearless of men, Heb. 13:1-6.

Life and Conduct Setting: We have in this passage the Christian's secret of a happy life. 1

Christ's secret grip and password had introduced the Apostle into the mysteries of satisfying grace. "In all things I am instructed (initiated), both to be full and to be hungry." 2. The Christian church was a closed fraternity; they must all "be of the same mind in the Lord." 3. The Apostle's leadership consisted in preëminent service; he was most worthy because most helpful; the crown of which he boasted was the circle of converts in Philippi. 4. All the rules and by-laws for directing Christ's followers are to be found in contemplating and practicing the mind of Christ. "Think on these things." 5. In the secret of Christ's presence the disciple receives strength to go forth and meet all conditions.

THE SOUL'S SECRET SATISFACTION.

Two Kings and Two Crowns. "My brethren, dearly beloved and longed for, my joy and crown." At the time when our present lesson was written two kings were living in Rome. One was Nero who lived in his "golden palace," which had just been completed. In this very chapter (verse 22) this palace is referred to as housing certain serving maids who had become such devoted Christians as to be styled "the saints of Cæsar's household." Attached to the golden palace was the Praetorian barracks where the second king was held a prisoner under Burrhus, captain of the guard. The prisoner counted himself a king whenever with joyful satisfaction he thought of his converts scattered through many distant cities "my joy and CROWN."

Once in a night vision on the Mediterranean (Acts 27:24) he had received a "night letter" from the skies declaring that these two kings should face each other, "Fear not, Paul; thou must be brought before Nero." (New Version.) Paul and Nero were the two men most talked about, then and now, of any men in Rome. Each wore a crown. Nero's was of gold set with costliest gems, but on his head it was often a heavy weight of guilt and remorse. He had more murders to answer for than any man then living. He gave Burrhus a draft of poison; compelled his old teacher, Seneca, to commit suicide; killed his aunt and seized her estates; murdered his first wife Octavia; kicked to death in a passion his second wife twelve days after he married her; hired an assassin to murder his mother, and finally got one of his slaves to drive a dagger into his own throat, crying as he expired, "Too late, too late!"

How true are the words of Lucretius, the Roman poet, "The greatest riches is to live content with little; for there is never want to the mind that is satisfied." Nero, with a golden palace, died in despair; Paul in prison met death by saying, "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith: henceforth there is laid up for me a CROWN." Paul's crown was a circlet of immortal life; the precious stones which studded it were the converts he had won to Christ, housemaids even in the golden palace of Nero. This crown threw about his path beams of joy and contentment in his prison life and martyr death.

Two Sisters Silence Their Strife. "I beseech Euodia, and beseech Syntyche, that they be of the same mind in the Lord." The contented mind of Paul, instead of being overwhelmed by misfortune and imprisonment, was busied in pacifying differences which has arisen between two women of note in the church at Philippi. Euodia and Syntyche each possessed social standing and personal influence. These warm-hearted Christian women with strong minds and willing spirits had gladly embarked in the Christian service. But about something their views differed. The difficulty had not been well managed, and growing suspicious of each other their differences had grown into distrust and dislike.

Paul may have known the exact difficulty and the merits of the case, but he addresses himself to both women alike, as if both were guilty of self-will, and entreats them to agree in Christ and be done with quarrelling. He even appeals to a third member of the church, whom he names as a "true yoke fellow," to lend a hand. This Christian bystander, a friend of both parties, is to represent Paul. He is to remind them both of those glad old days of Christian effort, when Paul was among them, and these two sisters with other women had been at work, shoulder to shoulder, rejoicing in a common salvation and common service.

The appeal was probably successful, for we hear of no further discord. So that Euodia and Syntyche ought to be remembered with all honor; two sister saints of God who loved and labored for Christ, bearing their cross when woman's work in the church was unpopular, and burying their personal differences that Christ's work might go forward. So that the mind of Christ not only brought to Paul in prison sweet content, but made him a positive force to reconcile differences among church members and to develop harmony out of apparent discord.

Gratitude for Their Gift. "I rejoice in the Lord greatly, that now at the last your care of me hath flourished again." In the school of a rugged experience Paul had learned the mind of Christ, especially the abiding lesson of contentment. "I have learned in whatsoever state I am, therewith to be content." These were great, brave words for a death prisoner to utter who was hourly waiting his final summons. How beautiful that in the lonely winter of Paul's imprisonment their love should blossom forth in a gift to this ambassador in bonds!

Once before at the beginning of his gospel they had sent him either provisions or money when he was in Thessalonica. Of the nature or the value of this gift which the Christians of Philippi now send him by the hand of Epaphroditus we know nothing, but it seemed to the prisoner in Rome to possess an unearthly value. It is to his mind "an odor of a sweet smell, a sacrifice acceptable, well-pleasing unto God." It refreshed him like an unexpected water-spring discovered in the desert. No one can tell how this last gift helped to enable him to testify to the Gospel's power in prison and later to die a martyr death on the Appian Way. Acknowledging their gift, he reminds them that his God shall supply all their needs according to His riches in glory by Christ Jesus.

Final Words Worth Remembering. "Finally brethren, whatsoever things are true, honest, just, pure, lovely, of good report, if there be any virtue, and if there be any praise, think on these things." Paul has had much to say in this chapter of the swift-shifting changes of his checkered life. He was no stoic like the heathen about him, indifferent to pain or surprise. Keenly sensible to even the lower interests, hunger and fulness, pleasure and pain, loss and gain, he was a citizen living for greater ends. Inspired by Christian joy and supported by prayer he tested all his ways by the approbation of his Lord.

To determine what, according to the mind of Christ, was to count for virtue and for praise he gives six short rules. 1. The true things—whatever through veracity and fidelity makes us in conduct and temper God's men. 2. The honest things—whatever in character develops that underlying purpose in life to render to all men their dues, not forgetting what God requires. 3. The just things—whatever cultivates mind and heart to rightly measure in all the relations of life what is ours and what is our neighbor's, not forgetting that we are the stewards of God. 4. The pure things—whatever in thought motive or conduct character can embrace and remain unsullied. 5. The lovely things—whatever is dear or amiable, that feeds pure love as the dew from heaven feeds the white lilies. 6. The things of good report—whatever strikes the heart of the listener with a welcome sound, delighting the ear as a pleasant odor delights the traveler in a path of roses. Study these things, look out for them, learn to recognize them, pursue them as supremely worth while, and whether in prison or palace your heart will be a fountain of perpetual joy.

Quiz and Study. 1. On what voyage did Paul and the passengers suffer hunger; how long were they without food; what was his message of good cheer? 2. From what did Paul separate himself for the Gospel's sake, in family life; in nationality; in early plans and preparation; in personal freedom? 3. To whom did he write for his cloak, books, and parchments or sacred writings; to what three sides of his nature would these items bring satisfaction? 4. What in this lesson does he name as his joy and crown; how did they comfort the Apostle; by whose hand?

Challenge Text: "I can do all — through — who — me." Phil. 4: (?).

Practical Thoughts. 1. The Christian's strength, like Paul's, is manifested in laboring, in resisting, in enduring. 2. The Philippians' gift met the straitened circumstances of an Apostle, provided a beautiful acknowledgment of their indebtedness, left a permanent record to their honor. 3. Present personal blessings that should make us thankful and contented: the gift of life, the freedom of our bodies, associations with Christian people, special privileges of worship and communion.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

obey
your

in all things: for this is well pleasing unto the Lord.

provoke not your children to lest they be discouraged.

obey in all things your masters according to the flesh;
not with eyeservice, as menpleasers;
but in singleness of heart, fearing

And whatsoever ye do, do it heartily, as to the Lord, and not unto

Knowing that of the Lord
ye shall receive
the

of the inheritance: for ye serve the Lord Christ.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS COLOSSIANS 3:12-25.

Prayer: Our Heavenly Father, guard well our home. Let Thy providential care be the secure roof that covers it; let it be warmed and cheered throughout by Thy Divine love; let Christian faith be its sure foundation and Thy promises the protecting hedge about it. Give me a green room where I may read, a red room where I may eat, a blue room where I may meet my friends, a gray room where I may sleep, and a white room where I may think only holy thoughts of Thee. Amen.

“Wanderer, the fire is warm;
Vagabond, the hearth is swept;
Still the little room is kept
Ready for your welcome form!
Oh, return! Here old friends need you!
Is the world more kind than they?
Turn and let our longing lead you Home again, no more to stray!”

—S. M.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: The letter to the Colossians was written by Paul from Rome in A. D. 62 or 63, to admonish and instruct in Christian living. In doctrine and phraseology it resembles Ephesians. Colosse, a city of Phrygia, in Asia Minor, had many Jew and Gentile Christians.

Scripture Setting: An Ideal Home. Husbands and wives, Eph. 5:22-33. Parents and children, Eph. 6:1-4. Masters and servants, Eph. 6:5-9. Advice for all, I Pet. 3:8-12. The lamp in the center, Matt. 6:22-32. Foundation of the home, Mark 10:1-12.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage suggests the rules of a well-ordered home. 1. Children who early obey their parents at home will later bring honor to them abroad. 2. The wife who is faithful to her husband, her children and her home will inspire the first, mould the second, and direct the third. 3. The father who “chums” with his boy now will not be ashamed of his record by and by. 4. Servants who are faithful in their religious life will always more than earn their wages.

SEVEN LAMPS THAT ILLUMINE THE HOME.

The Lamp of Cheerfulness. “Teaching and admonishing one another in psalms and hymns and spiritual songs, singing with grace in your hearts to the Lord.” In the reception hall, the very front room of every home, there should be the bright light of gladness and cheer kept trimmed and burning. The old rabbis used to teach that there were two orders of angels, the angels of service and the higher order of angels, the angels of praise. The Bible is full of music; there are more texts on praise even than on prayer. The first note of Christianity to this world was an angel song to the shepherds at midnight. And Christianity has been the great lamp lighting up the midnights of earth. Paul and Silas kept singing even in their imprisonment, and lo, their songs lifted the prison gates from their hinges.

The Lamp of Thankfulness. “Do all in the name of the Lord Jesus, giving thanks to God and the Father by Him.” How different does the evening meal taste to the whole family if the dining room lamp of thankfulness first be lighted to flood the table with gratitude. In some homes grace is never spoken before the meal. It is much like eating in the dark. I have read of young society women in Washington who retired from the dining hall after an evening banquet to smoke cigarettes together. You may be sure that the father at that table had neglected for long years to say grace.

Contrast such a home with that one pictured by Robert Burns in The Cotter’s Saturday Night, where the gray-haired sire pushes back from the supper table to lead the family circle in prayer and Bible reading. The poet’s younger brother, Gilbert, says that this, the noblest of all his poems, was inspired by the memory of his father’s simple family worship, and that after the father’s death, Robert, the eldest son, faithfully followed the father’s example. Thrice happy and blest is that home where the old ancestral custom of having grace before each meal and family worship once a day still holds sway.

The Lamp of Faithfulness. “Wives, submit yourselves unto your husbands, as it is fit in the Lord.” Perhaps you are thinking that the lamp out in the kitchen is very plain and its light dim compared to the banquet lamp of the dining hall, or the piano lamp of the parlor, but the truth is that after the dinner party is over, after the guests have gone, when the dining hall and the parlor are dark there is still a light in the kitchen, for the housewife must finish her work against the next day. The kitchen lamp is the best lamp after all, for it is the test and proof of wifely devotion. For it is better to be faithful than to be famous in entertaining or brilliant in repartee. The praise of the faithful wife is as old as human literature. Thus does Homer in his Odyssey speak of Penelope, the good wife:

“There is no fairer thing,
No better than a husband and his wife,
When with harmonious heart and purposes
They hold their household.”

Whether you read the Proverbs of Solomon, or the Epistles of Paul, the true wife is pictured as the center and strength of a good home.

The Lamp of Whole-Heartedness. “Husbands, love your wives, and be not bitter against them.” While the wife is busy finishing her evening work in the kitchen the husband may be as hard at work under the student lamp of the study. Such is the division of labor which marriage may bring.

But marriage is something more than a convenient and happy arrangement for dividing the work of life. There must be in every true marriage a loving regard and a desire to serve each other. Only when love is lacking can marriage be called a failure. The wife in the kitchen alone can be happy if she knows that her husband somewhere else at his task is preserving himself entirely for her, is thinking of no other woman in comparison to her, and in his heart extols her virtues above all others. The possession of a fine house, the presentation of silk dresses, or the knowledge that her husband is a genius will not atone for the husband's cruelty, faithlessness, or lack of appreciation. The Apostle, therefore, is right in insisting that love is the husband's foremost obligation.

A courageous wife can be pinched by poverty yet smile; but let her feel that love is failing and she droops like a thirsty violet in time of terrible drought. The true husband not only provides for the larder daily, but daily proves his love, since she feeds more on the affections of her husband than on his daily bread.

The Lamp of Reverence. "Children, obey your parents in all things: for this is well pleasing unto the Lord." Up in the nursery is another lamp of softest rays, a lamp hung low to light the children both in their play and in their preparations at bedtime. It usually falls to the mother to trim and light this lamp, the lamp of reverence. When a little child in his mother's lap looks up into his mother's eyes and recognizes the one who will always do for him what is best, it may be said that the child's education has begun. Learning to give strict attention to what mother says and following her commands with strict obedience is the first step in childhood's education.

The child is humanity in the making, and the parents are God's first priests. A greater responsibility rests on the parent than on the minister or school teacher. In a child's development "an ounce of mother is worth a pound of clergy."

Susannah Wesley not only made her children cry softly but she made them play fair. Her boys in that large family learned to reverence God, at the same time learning to revere their godly parents. The loving labor of teaching them their evening prayers in the old Epworth rectory, the time spent in catechism and religious questioning was well rewarded afterwards when John became the great preacher and Charles the great hymn writer.

The Lamp of Entertainment. "Fathers, provoke not your children, that they be not discouraged." I know a home where they have a great big laundry room in the basement where they often turn the children loose. Whenever father gets an evening off he sets up there his magic lantern and has an evening's entertainment for his children and their friends. The pictures he throws upon the sheet stretched at the farther end are wonderful: little Esquimo people from the far north; brown little folks from India; black little picaninnies from the rice fields; and dusky papooses from the western plains. Aladdin's magic lamp in the Arabian Nights does not compare with this magic lantern to conjure up the weird and wonderful.

The very best fathers are the fathers who entertain as well as educate. No home is quite complete without children, and no child is at his best unless someone under the soft lamplight of evening takes time to tell him the wonderful tales of patriotism, adventure, travel, and knighthood. It is a happy thought that the world is understanding children better than ever before, and they are being encouraged where once they were discouraged.

The Lamp of Solitude. "Servants, obey in all things them that are your masters according to the flesh, in singleness of heart, fearing the Lord." After all the rest of the house is still and all the other lights are out, there burns one lamp high up in the attic bedroom; it is the lamp of devotion and solitude. It is the lamp of Jane the servant girl. We know nothing of her parents or family, and although she is now old enough to have a home of her own, she never married. She has been with us a long time—the best servant we ever had. After she has worked hard all day she goes to her room and under the lamp of solitude she reads her Bible and talks to her Heavenly Father.

Jane is a very simple soul, but we would trust her with anything, our pocketbook or our life. The reason why she pleases her mistress so well is, I think, because she is always trying to please her Lord. Jane is as busy as any, yet she always takes time to read and pray. How ideal would be that home where every member of it entered his closet and shut the door to pray. But if some are careless and jump prayerless into bed, I am glad for a faithful Jane, the last to retire, who bears to a throne of grace each member of the household asleep beneath her attic room.

Quiz and Study. 1. In what home did Christ spend his boyhood? 2. To what home near the sea did He then go? 3. What did He say later concerning His own homelessness? 4. At what home was He frequently a welcome guest? 5. To whose home did He entrust His mother? 6. What is the final Home mentioned in Eccl. 12? 7. To what final Home did Christ invite all believers?

Practical Thoughts. 1. In the perfect music of the family circle there are no star soloists, but one balanced chorus wherein each is subservient to the whole. 2. If on going in we expect a welcoming smile from those who keep the home, we should, on coming in, bring a smile and cheery salutation. 3. "Home, Sweet Home" was composed in a foreign land; why leave home to sing its praises? 4. The face we bring to the breakfast table we wear all day; let it be bright, with cheerful thoughts.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE COMING OF THE LORD.

For the Lord himself shall with a shout,

with
the voice
of the arch-

and with the trump of God: and the dead in Christ shall first:

Then we which are alive
and remain shall be together

with them
in the clouds,
to meet
the

and so shall we ever be
with
the Lord.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS I. THESS. 4:13-18.

Prayer: Lord Jesus, in the soft, downy clouds which float over my head may I read the majesty of Thy promised coming; in the sharp flash of the lightning that streaks the heavens may I read the sign of Thy sudden return; and in the rolling thunder may I hear and heed the voice which tells me that some day the trump of God shall call my body home. Lord Jesus, come quickly. Amen.

"O Church of Christ, behold at last
The promised sign appear,—
The Gospel preached in all the world;
And lo! the King draws near.
The scattered sons are gath'ring home,
The fig-tree buds again,
A little while, and David's Son,
On David's throne shall reign."

Dr. A. J. Gordon.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: This epistle was written, the first of all the letters of Paul we now have, at Corinth, either in the winter of 52 A. D. or the early part of 53 A. D. It is written in the joint names of Paul, Silas and Timothy, the three founders of the church there. Its style is calm, its spirit commendatory, its appeal chiefly to Gentiles, as seen by its omission of Old Testament quotations.

Scripture Setting: Watching for the Lord's Return. Sudden return of the Lord, Matt. 24:23-33. Christ's coming for judgment, Mark 13:14-19. The general resurrection, Rev. 20:11-15. Argument for the resurrection, I. Cor. 15:35-45. Watchfulness required, I. Thess. 5:1-10.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage presents

both the proof and the details of the Lord's coming. 1. Paul based his teaching on two great pillars, "the word of the Lord," and the historic fact "that Jesus died and rose again." 2. Christ delegates not His kingship, ambassadorship, judgment, or priesthood to another. "The Lord Himself shall descend." 3. This universally public scene will be both glorious and terrible, Michael, the tallest angel leading his train, and the fallen Lucifer leading from their dungeons the ruined third of Heaven. 4. We should wait for it, watch for it, welcome it, since His coming means our coronation. 5. The resurrection to the heathen seemed uncertain, to the Hebrews, probable, to Christ's Apostles certain, and by His followers living and dead it will be realized.

CHRIST COMING IN THE CLOUDS.

How His Hand Has Scattered Heathen Hopelessness. "But I would not have you to be ignorant, brethren, concerning them which are fallen asleep, that ye sorrow not, even as others which have no hope." The leading topic of Paul's message at Thessalonica had been the coming Kingdom of Christ. (Acts 17:7.) The truths he then preached were destined to honeycomb the very foundations of the Roman empire. The mighty fact that Christ was coming back in power and glory was a doctrine so fully believed that the church then dared to denounce even kings and despots in their wickedness.

Towards the end of the fourth century a mob sacked the governor's house in Thessalonica and killed him. The Emperor Theodosius was so angered that he sent soldiers into the circus while it was crowded, who in three hours slew seven thousand men, women, and children. After that the Emperor tried to enter the church, when Ambrose, Bishop of Milan, met him at the door. "Back to your palace," he cried, "Repent! repent! and then come. Your hands drip with blood." In the midst of all the people Theodosius did repent, and promised to make new laws for capital punishment.

Paul came to their city preaching something better than this. He described their dead as "them which are sleeping," and "those laid to sleep by Jesus." He said that though their bodies were sleeping in the cemetery or "sleeping place," they need not mourn in hopelessness as the heathen, for Christ by His death and resurrection had taken the sting from death. Most of Paul's converts were won from raw heathendom, and their turning to the gospel of the resurrection was like turning from midnight to noonday. Human life became a precious thing and their dead were buried in the hope of a glad reunion.

The Bridegroom's Return the Basis of the Church's Belief. "For if we believe that Jesus died and rose again, even so them also which sleep in Jesus will God bring with Him." Only one doctrinal topic is touched upon in this whole letter, and that with a purely practical end in view. It was to enlighten and cheer those Christians who had become possessed of the notion that their dead brethren would be at a disadvantage at Christ's second coming in comparison with those then living who should immediately join their victorious Lord. His first great victory over the grave, says Paul, is the pledge of His coming in final, complete victory.

"This same Jesus which is taken up from you into Heaven shall so come in like manner as ye have seen Him go into Heaven." The coming which the Apostle looked for is to be the consummation of all things at the end of the world, when time shall be no longer, when the dead are raised, when judgment is set, and eternal retribution begins. He will return to claim His own. Since in the grave He giveth His beloved sleep, He will return to waken our sleeping forms. Those members of the church who have been "laid to sleep by Jesus" shall be awakened by the same gentle hand. The church triumphant has passed on to be with God. She is the bride of Christ. One thing she lacks which will be supplied. With a mighty shout the Bridegroom will return at the end of the world and first of all clothe the dead with the resurrection garments.

Swiftness of His Second Coming and Suddenness of His Shout. "For the Lord Himself shall descend from Heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trump of God." The twentieth chapter of Revelation with its mystic and symbolic language has been the fruitful source of many sects of Millenarians or Second Adventists. Many, like the Millerites, have given up their secular concerns and waited for the set day when the Son of man cometh. All such presuppositions have failed, and all Millennium Dawn heresies have proved themselves fanciful and unscriptural interpretations.

The Scriptures clearly describe the Lord's coming, but His advent shall be with all the swiftness of surprise. "But of that day and hour knoweth no man, no not the angels in Heaven, but My Father only." "The day of the Lord so cometh as a thief in the night; as the lightning cometh out of the east and shineth even unto the west, so shall also the coming of the Son of man be."

Friends That Have Fallen Asleep First in His Triumphant Train. "The dead in Christ shall rise first: then we which are alive and remain, shall be caught up together with them in the clouds." Even these Christian believers seem to have shuddered when they thought of their dead friends lying in the grave. But Paul was sure of his ground. "This we say unto you by the word of the Lord." They might rest assured that the bodies of their dead friends would take precedence over their own living bodies when the Lord should come in the final resurrection. It was no advantage but rather a disadvantage to escape physical death. Before those then living should be caught up to meet their returning Lord in the air "those laid to sleep by Jesus" should first be clothed upon with their resurrection bodies. The dead raised first, then the changed living followers shall form one joint body, one glorious company making Christ's triumphant train.

But the resurrection of the body means more than the immortality of the soul. It means the resurrection of the identical body which had been buried, even as Christ in His resurrection appeared and was identified by the wounds in His hands and feet. The difficulties involved we may not attempt to explain. We will leave it to the omnipotence of God, as did Paul, when he exclaimed, "Behold, I show you a mystery! We shall not all sleep but we shall all be changed, in a moment, in the twinkling of an eye, at the last trump." Christ has already done enough to assure us of what He yet will do. His part is to come; our part is to wait and believe.

Comforting Words in Conclusion: Christ Will Come. "Wherefore comfort one another with these words." Previous to His death and resurrection, just before midnight, a Galilean Peasant set twelve men, His chosen Twelve, afloat upon a wide, wide sea. They were to perpetuate His name and teachings, carrying them down to nations yet unborn. Leaning down He whispered to them a closing message: "I will not leave you comfortless; I will come again and receive you unto Myself."

It was a sad separation, for outside in the darkness of that midnight Death was lying in wait for Him. Nevertheless He could comfort them,—for He pushed aside the future and saw Himself the victor over death; saw His little boat-load of fishermen disciples in the midst of a great ocean of infidelity, yet triumphing; saw the judgment and the end of time. Rowing away in the awful darkness those fishermen kept repeating His strange, wonderful words, "Not comfortless; He will come."

While the Titanic was sinking that Sunday night, Nadji Narsani, an Armenian peasant, kissed his wife Maria for the last time, and placed her tenderly in the small boat, for she was about to become a mother. On this sinking ship were their accumulated savings, in her little boat was all his life held dear. He remembered the dream of a home in America, then stooped and whispered, "Maria, perhaps we never meet again on earth, but tell our child how I died." So the disciples rowed away, away down the years to tell to all the children of men of the death and the last loving words of Jesus, "Not comfortless; I will come again." In the home in Armenia there may be persecution; in the home in America there may be sorrow; but in the home up in Heaven all burdened hearts will be comforted. Hear it, oh mothers who teach these lessons, and children who study them, "I will come!"

Quiz and Study. 1. What fear occasioned the writing of this lesson? 2. What will be the three signals of His coming? 3. What is to be the order of the resurrection of the quick and the dead. 4. Upon what historic fact rests our belief in the resurrection of our mortal bodies?

Challenge Text: I will come —, and receive you unto —, that where I am, there — may be also. John 14: (?).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Four great events coincident with His coming: The general resurrection; the final judgment; the end of time; the destruction of the world. 2. Christ's coming will be as sudden as the lightning's flash on the clouds. 3. Some will greet Him with joy; some will meet Him with fear and trembling. 4. Vigilance and preparation are the chief duties of life. 5. The expectancy aroused over His coming should fill us with zeal for His service.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

For this is good and acceptable in the sight of God our Savior; Who will have all men to be

and to come unto the knowledge
of the

For there is one God, and one mediator between God and

the man
Christ
Jesus;
Who gave himself
a

for all, to be testified in due time.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS I. TIM. 1:15-20; 2:1-6.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, We thank Thee for the Mediator standing between us and Thee, Christ Jesus who gave Himself a ransom for all. In His name we ask Thee to hear our prayer, that we may live godly lives and war a good warfare. Even as the child Timothy was trained by religious parents and early called to be Thy disciple, so may we learn Thy Word and do Thy will. Amen.

"Thou art nearer than the nearest;
Thou art dearer than the dearest;
No mortal can compare with Thee.
Yet still nearer draw Thou to me;
Yet still dearer be Thou to me:
Until I care alone for Thee."
—Ernest G. W. Wesley.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: I Timothy was written by Paul to Timothy A. D. 65. The Apostle had been the means of the lad's conversion at 15, some twenty years before. This occurred at Lystra on Paul's first missionary journey. Seven years later he returns, and hearing such favorable reports of the young man's faithfulness, circumcises him and ordains him to the ministry.

Scripture Setting: The Gospel Message and the Gospel Messenger. The Gospel revelation to be preached, I Pet. 1:18-25. Duties and perils of a bishop, Tit. 1:5-14. Office of an elder and respect due him, I Pet. 5:1-9. Good example of Paul's ministry, Acts 20:26-35.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage presents Paul's influence on the young man Timothy and his message. 1. Christianity's power transforms the chief of sinners into the chief of apostles. 2. Paul's influence and power calls Timothy and ordains him to the ministry. 3. The call of Timothy is verified by the favorable opinions and the prophecies of the presbyters. 4. Paul gives exhortation, prayer, and instruction that the young soldier may war a good warfare. 5. The message is reconciliation, its end godly living, its provisions for all, to be published everywhere in due time.

PAUL'S SON IN THE FAITH.

The Short Saying that Sums Up the Whole Story. "This is a faithful saying, and worthy of all acceptance, that Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners." In the last nine words of the first verse of this lesson Paul gives to Timothy a condensed, concise statement of what is included in the Gospel story. He had been preaching it so many years and under such varied circumstances that he knew it by heart. Probably he never preached it under greater difficulties than when Timothy first heard him twenty years before. That was at Lystra, near Derbe, the home of Timothy, where the Jews silenced the preacher by stoning him and dragged him out of the city for dead. Now twenty years had tested the faithfulness of that preaching which Timothy that day accepted and Paul is urging his convert to preach the old story without modification, since it is worthy the acceptance of all.

Some sayings we eagerly accept in youth appear silly and shallow in old age. But this saying, "Christ Jesus came into the world to save sinners," fascinated the lad of fifteen as he heard Paul first preach it; it was the very heart of the message which the evangelist of Asia Minor was now himself preaching in his prime; and it was the steadfast hope of "Paul the aged," who had tried it out through a busy life.

An English teacher one day asked his boys, "What is the best news you ever heard?" One said that it was that his father, who had long been at sea, was coming home. Another, that he was soon to have a new Bible all his own. One, who had lived all his life in the country, that he was going to London for a long visit. But one little fellow, the last of all, said: "The best news that I ever heard, teacher, was that Jesus Christ came into the world to save sinners."

Paul the Pattern for Others. "That in me first Jesus Christ might show forth all long-suffering, for a pattern to them which should hereafter believe." In this letter (1:2) Paul speaks of Timothy as "my own son in the faith." And following the example of John, Timothy might have called himself "the disciple whom Paul loved." The beautiful friendship which ripened between the great Apostle and his chief disciple, so different in gifts and in ages, is full of interest. Timothy's debt to Paul was immense. Timothy was the one among his many disciples who had sacrificed everything for Paul and his Master. He left a loving mother and a pleasant home for a task of ceaseless labor, untold anxiety, and worldly scorn, facing oftentimes dangers to life and limb. Humanly speaking he owed his salvation to Paul, and Paul's noble life was in part reproduced in the perils and journeyings which Timothy endured to spread the gospel.

Paul prayed that his life might be a "pattern" life to them who thereafter believe. And through all the succeeding generations God has been answering that prayer, for as young men have read the autobiography and the heroic letters of Paul they have been moved to emulate his heroism and valor. Paul is a pattern from which endless copies have been taken.

The Battle Bequeathed from Sire to Son. "This charge I commit unto thee, son Timothy, according to the prophecies which went before on thee, that thou by them mightest war a good warfare." Certain churches have taken peculiar pride because they could trace down their line of ministers historically from the early Apostles by ordination and the laying on of hands without a break in the succession. But if we will look carefully we will see that the true apostolic succession is a succession of sacrifice and suffering. What is the record? Christ died upon the cross, and Peter gazed upon His sufferings from afar. "I am a witness of the sufferings of Christ." (I. Pet. 5:1.) Under the passion of that cross he became a new man and preached the sufferings of the cross till he, like his Lord, was crucified. He preached Jesus and Him crucified at Pentecost and among the three thousand converted tradition says that Stephen was pricked to the heart and dedicated his life to the ministry.

One day Stephen was preaching on the crucifixion of Jesus saying, "Ye have been now the betrayers and murderers of the Just One." His hearers could not bear this truth and they stoned to death the youthful Stephen. The murderers threw their outer garments at the feet of a young bystander named Saul. He never forgot the look of glory on Stephen's face and his prayer of mercy for his murderers. Not long after this Saul's spirit and name was changed, and he became the Preacher Paul, won by the story of the cross. He preached that same story at Lystra, and for it was stoned and left for dead. But in his audience was a lad of fifteen who said as he fell, "I will take the Gospel flag he drops and bear it on through the world."

Let us follow the history a step further. Eusebius, writing two hundred years later, says that Timothy became the overseer, or bishop, of the diocese of Ephesus, and five centuries later Nicephorus writes that a drunken Ephesian mob beat to death the aged Timothy as he preached to them Christ from the stone steps of one of their heathen temples.

It is most natural to believe that very night some noble Greek youth caught the fire from the soul of the dying preacher and grasping the Gospel torch promised to keep it burning as he carried it down through another generation. Christ, Peter, Stephen, Paul, Timothy, and on down to the remotest generation, the true apostolic succession of sacrifice and suffering! The world will be saved by the cross uplifted two thousand years ago only as it sees the same sacrifice of love and life offered daily by those who are crucified with Christ, "filling up that which was lacking of the sufferings of Christ." (Col. 1:24.)

Christianity as Centering in the Character of Christ. "One mediator between God and men, the man Christ Jesus; who gave Himself a ransom for all." We shall need the important truth of this verse to correct any impression which might have been made by what has been said already of how we are still influenced by those about us whose lives, in sacrifice and suffering, are offered daily. For however heroic are modern examples and however helpful, we have but one Mediator, and we are saved only by one Person, Christ, "who gave Himself a ransom for all."

So great has been the progress of the centuries since Christ that some are led to believe that man's natural condition does not require a mediator or a ransom. We can reform the world, they say, through the machinery of social reform and by recognizing man's remarkable advance.

But a few facts will show that the world without Christ still manifests the depravity of human nature. Every bolt upon a door, every safe with its complicated lock, every check placed on public officials, the multiplication of laws in recent times, the reinspection of weights, efforts to stop the adulteration of foods, the searching of the baggage of every traveler who comes into a port of entry even after he has sworn to a government official, all these are fresh evidences of our belief that the natural tendency of man is toward evil. The unregenerate world is still sold under sin and it can be bought back unto righteousness only by a Divine ransom. The method has not changed, since human nature has not changed. Law, however multiplied, is a dead thing, but Christ after two thousand years is the living Personality who sets new motives at work within.

Paul as a Jew made an honest experiment of the power of law covering years and said: "Therefore by works of the law shall no flesh be justified in His sight." Yet he gives the law the credit of showing him his sin. "The law was our schoolmaster to bring us to Christ" (Gal. 3:24). So as the multiplication of civil law aimed at the reaching of the evil doer shows us that we are "a crooked and perverse generation," we instinctively turn to the Saviour of Paul and Timothy as the Ransom for our sin and the Hope of our world.

Quiz and Study. 1. Who are the two women Paul mentions as first influencing Timothy in matters of faith? 2. What in Timothy's age, temperament and difficulties (1:3, 4) made Paul's counsel necessary? 3. How was Timothy of help to Paul, as a friend; in church discipline; in evangelistic labors? 4. What happened when Paul and Timothy first met; what occurred when they met seven years later; where was Timothy during Paul's first imprisonment (Philemon 1:1); was Timothy ever sent to prison (Heb. 13:23)?

Challenge Text. "Fight the good fight of —, lay hold on eternal —, whereunto thou wast —, and didst confess a good —." I Tim. 6: (1).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Christ is mediator between God and man, between earth and Heaven, between broken law and the law-breaker, between a sinful past and a blissful future. 2. Four points of "good warfare": to avoid surprise, to guard weak places, to keep hostile spies without, to keep in line with fellow-soldiers. 3. This "faithful saying" must be accepted by all our faculties, the belief of intellect, the sympathy of feelings, the action of the will. 4. Some prophecies of Timothy's greatness seen at his ordination: teachableness, faithfulness, purity, modesty, singleness of purpose.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

But godliness with is great gain.

For we brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out.
And having let us be therewith content. But they that will be rich fall into

and a

and into many foolish and hurtful lusts, which men in destruction

and perdition.
For the

is the root of all evil: which while some coveted after, they have erred from the

and

themselves through with many sorrows.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS I. TIM. 6:12; 17-19.

Prayer: Grant me, most sweet and loving Jesus, to rest in Thee above every creature, above all health and beauty, above all glory and honor, above all power and dignity, above all riches and art, above all fame and praise, above all gifts and reward, above all things visible, and above everything which Thou, O my God, art not. Amen.

—Thomas à Kempis.

"Last year my one lone ship came back to me, A ruined wreck of what she used to be, No cargo in her hold, storm-stained and scarred, O Lord, Thou knowest it was hard, was hard, To watch her drifting bulk with hopeless eye. Yet in my desolation Thou wert nigh.

Lord, I give thanks!"

—Susie M. Best.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Timothy, in Paul's absence, superintended the church at Ephesus. This epistle was written to supply Timothy with needed rules and advice. The closing chapter deals especially with those who regarded godliness as a means of earthly gain.

Scripture Setting: The Relation of Godliness and Riches. The Kingdom first, prosperity afterwards, Matt. 6:24-33. A lost soul's lust for gold, Matt. 26:14-16, 21-25, 47-50. Danger of riches; reward of virtue, Mark 10:23-31. Bags which wax not old, Luke 12:33-43. Wise use of money, Luke 19:12-26.

Life and Conduct Setting: Paul's letter presents God's soldier fighting a good fight. 1. The riches of this world entangle and burden. 2. Spiritual riches: righteousness, godliness, etc., are not a burden, but a source of strength. 3. Covetousness is a bundle of arrows, darts that pierce with sorrow. 4. Avarice is a snare, a pitfall set for good soldiers. 5. He who carries godly contentment in his knapsack need carry little else. 6. The good soldier carries little baggage marching towards the final record, the final review, and the final reward.

THE RELATION OF GODLINESS AND RICHES.

Godliness Is Great Gain. "Godliness with contentment is great gain." Between the first and second imprisonment of Paul at Rome, he and Timothy were together in Ephesus. When the Apostle went on into Macedonia he left his companion behind him to oppose certain erroneous doctrines. In wealthy Ephesus, with its abundant commerce, the lust for gold was an absorbing passion. The silver image of Diana represented the avarice which the whole city had personified and set up for worship. The silversmiths were a powerful and wealthy craft who made much gain out of the popular religion. Against all this Timothy was left to preach the simple life.

All temporal advantages, such as large possessions, rank, power, family name, and honors are too often so many worries, anxieties, and obligations. A quiet cottage and a few hundred dollars a year, content with what God has given, offers more genuine happiness than any advancement in mere worldly interests accompanied by a covetousness that is never satisfied. Godliness with contentment makes a man a better master, a better servant, a better citizen, a stronger man in mind and body, and surely no man can be happy in his heart who does not possess a good conscience.

An Empty-Handed Entrance and Exit. "We brought nothing into this world, and it is certain we can carry nothing out." Both of these statements have been abundantly proved by the experience of mankind. One of the earliest books of all literature gives this moral, "Naked came I out of my mother's womb, and naked shall I return thither." In the day of Job's utter ruin, these truths were very evident as they have been to millions since whose riches have suddenly taken wings and flown away. Some who bring no money with them into life find plenty of it heaped up waiting their arrival. Seldom do the babies "fed out of a golden spoon" make as good records as those who must feed themselves out of pewter spoons.

Recently a prominent business man gathered the names of one thousand successful men in America, and after painstaking inquiries traced out how each one started in life. Their first foothold offers a fine study for the boys of today. Three hundred started as farmer's sons. Two hundred started as messenger boys. Two hundred were newsboys. One hundred were printers' apprentices. One hundred were apprenticed in manufactories. Fifty began at the bottom round in railway work. And fifty—only fifty—had wealthy parents to give them a start.

Satan's Silver Snare. "They that will be rich fall into temptation and a snare." Every impulse of the miser is tainted. Whenever a call for sympathy or generosity is sounded he only tightens his purse strings, and his poor, starved soul is caught and strangled in the noose just as a boy snares and strangles a bird with his cotton string in the old apple tree. Judas kept the money bag, but he was never content. He even quarrelled with his Master because a devout follower took her money and with it bought an expensive gift to anoint Christ's body against the burial. He pulled the strings of that old money bag so tightly that with it he finally strangled his own soul. He seemed to see the blood of his Saviour on the pieces of silver that were the price of betrayal, and he threw them back into the face of his bribers declaring, "It is the price of innocent blood;" then went and hanged himself.

Once Paul wrote to Timothy, "Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world." (2 Tim. 4:10.) This looks like another instance of a deserter who went over to the enemy for a gift of gold. How paltry are the bribes which some men take; how small the price that will buy the soul filled with avarice, as they forsake the company of saints and relinquish hopes of Heaven!

"Just for a handful of silver he left us,
Just for a riband to stick in his coat."

Coins of Christian Contentment. "Follow after righteousness, godliness, faith, love, patience, meekness." After Paul warned Timothy to flee the poisoned arrows of covetousness which have pierced so many with sorrows, he urges certain positive virtues which he may well make his life pursuit. Here are six bright coins that shine with permanent worth and beauty because they bear the stamp of Heaven. How shall we earn the coin of righteousness? We shall not earn it at all, but it shall be presented to us by the King just as the badge of the Legion of Honor is pinned upon the friend whom the king would delight to honor. But to be the King's friend and to wear the King's name we must prove ourselves worthy.

A second coin of everlasting worth is godliness. How many lives of ability and opportunity failed to write their names among the permanently great because they were not godly? Not to be vindictive or unjust, let us think of two. There was Daniel Webster, who in native gifts towered above his fellow men like Jupiter. He had a great physique, a great mind, a great voice, but not a consecrated heart. He missed true greatness by being weak where he should have been strong. Colonel Robert Ingersoll had a war record, was so great an orator that his party chose him to make the nominating speech for their candidate for president. But Ingersoll, lacking godliness, left not a name or record that men admire. And what shall we say of the coin of faith? Read the eleventh chapter of Hebrews and you will read the Hebrew heroes of the ages who conquered by faith. A secular newspaper recently said in an editorial: "No man who does not believe in God should be entrusted with the management of public affairs in a great emergency. It is a psychological fact that faith in God gives a man nerve, decision and hope."

But the coin of love is the purest of all. It has no counterfeits. It passes at its face value in all countries beneath the sun. If we should lose all other coins in the collection let us not lose love, for "love never faileth." Two other coins are worth seeking after most earnestly, patience and meekness. They look so much alike they can scarcely be told apart. How rich was Lincoln in these homely virtues. With his scarred visage and homespun suit he towered above others of his time because he was at once so patient and so meek. Let us seek after these six rare virtues as a merchantman crossing seas hunts for goodly pearls. For the possession of them will make us rich indeed.

Heaping Up the Heavenly Treasure. "That they do good, that they be rich in good works, ready to distribute, willing to communicate, laying up in store for themselves a good foundation against the time to come." The wealthy heathen in Ephesus were accustomed to deposit their valuables with the keepers of Diana's shrine, believing that goddess would make her sanctuary stronger than any bank. In the midst of all this depositing and storing up Timothy was to faithfully remind his Christian followers of the heavenly treasures they might store against the great judgment day.

In a very remarkable passage (Luke 16:9) Jesus tells us to make friends by means of the mammon of unrighteousness; that, when it shall fail, they may receive you into eternal habitations. How strangely dissimilar are these two things which Christ so intimately connected, the mammon of unrighteousness and eternal habitations. Money itself has no moral quality whatever. Our financial transactions take on a moral quality, however, from the motive back of the act.

The selfish lust for money is one of the basest of passions, but the charitable and Christian use of money is worthy of heavenly reward. With a dollar I may buy a Bible that may lead to the conversion of a friend and the opening up of a strong life for God. With a dollar I may send the glad tidings of salvation across seas and through another convert a soul I shall never see till I reach Heaven. Great is the power of consecrated money; it will work while you work and will work in your name after you are dead and gone. Then, too, there are so many good deeds we may do that require no financial outlay. They represent the expenditure of forethought, kindness, time and personal ease. Those who thus serve their age live a life rich in satisfaction and die rich towards God.

Quiz and Study. 1. For what purpose was Job dispossessed of his property; how liberally was it restored? 2. What disciple complained because they had forsaken all; what did Christ say would be their reward now and hereafter? 3. Which of the seven churches of Asia was condemned for its riches; what was it urged to buy? 4. What was there in the luxury of heathen worship at Ephesus that cultivated pride; what was Paul's boast regarding his own support?

Challenge Text: "Bring ye all the tithes into the —, and prove me now herewith; if I will not open you the — of Heaven, and pour you out a —, that there shall not be — enough to receive it." Mal. 3: (9).

Practical Thoughts. 1. We cannot serve God and mammon, though we may serve God with mammon. 2. The insatiate love of money is not the only root of evil, but a root whence all evils may spring. 3. The bounties of Providence are for human enjoyment; to be received with thanksgiving to God, to be distributed for human need. 4. The riches of the rich are not to be cast away, not to be trusted in, but to be used "to do good."

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

But continue thou in the things which thou has.

and hast been assured of, knowing of whom thou hast learned them;
And that from a thou hast known the holy scriptures, which are able to make thee wise unto through

which is in Christ

All scripture is given by inspiration of God, and is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in

That the man of God may be perfect, thoroughly furnished unto all good works.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS II. TIM. 3:14-17, 4:1-5.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, make me a diligent student of Thy Word that I may be a Christian workman that needeth not to be ashamed. May I be true to all the religious teachings of my childhood, clinging to that which has been tried, rather than running after that which is novel. May the Scripture teachings, warnings, and promises continue to be the weapons and armor of my warfare, protecting me perfectly and thoroughly furnishing me unto all good works. Amen.

“Laden with guilt, and full of fears,
I fly to Thee, my Lord,
And not a glimpse of hope appears,
But in Thy written Word.”

—Isaac Watts.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: II. Timothy was written by Paul from Rome near the end of his imprisonment, and therefore the last epistle he wrote. At this time Timothy was overseer of the church at Ephesus. He is implored to come and comfort Paul in his last hours, but we have no means of knowing whether he reached the Apostle before his martyrdom.

Scripture Setting: Christian Scriptures in Conflict with Error. Folly of rejecting God's Law, Neh. 9:25-35. Curses written in God's Book, Deut. 29:9-20. Warnings from God's Word, Psa. 19:7-13. Handling God's Word in refuting error, II Tim. 2:14-19, 23-26. Bible prevails over books of sorcerers, Acts 19:13-20.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage discusses the Bible as a reprover of error and champion of truth. 1. Four profitable uses of Scripture: for doctrinal teaching; for refuting error; for correcting conduct; for instruction by example. 2. Four facts that make the Bible's progress inexplicable as a human product: it condemns all ancient religions and supersedes them; it enjoins duties displeasing to flesh and blood; without gratifying the senses, its rewards lie in the future; it predicts persecution for all of its followers. 3. Four marks of the “reprobate concerning the faith”: unwillingness to endure sound doctrine; calling teachers that aim only to please; listening to fables; attracting silly women.

THE IMPREGNABLE ROCK OF HOLY SCRIPTURE.

Time-Honored Truths to which Timothy Sticks. “Continue thou in the things which thou hast learned and hast been assured of.” The greater part of this third chapter of II. Timothy is a denunciation of false sects, which, pretending to be Christian, were nevertheless “reprobate concerning the faith.” The false teachers at Ephesus used magic arts. Around the statue of Diana were unintelligible inscriptions to which wonderful powers were ascribed. The sons of the Jew Sceva had tried to use the name of Jesus as a magical word to drive out evil spirits, making it necessary to utterly destroy large numbers of costly books on the art of magic. (Acts 19:13-20.) Paul declares that these false teachers in Ephesus are resisting Timothy and himself in spreading pure Christianity even as Jannes and Jambres, two brothers who were Egyptian magicians, withstood the two Hebrew brothers Moses and Aaron. Timothy is not to let the wild teaching of his opponents shake his own security.

At the present hour there is need for Christian believers to continue in the things which they have learned and have been assured of rather than to drift away into teachings the truth of which they have not been assured of. Some modern cults use the old Christian terms only to deceive, depriving them of all their Christian meaning. Calling themselves Christian, terming their organization “The church,” insisting that their views are most “liberal,” using the term “God” for a being impersonal and unconscious, not distinguishable from blind force operating in nature, they sometimes deceive the very elect. A little Hindoo philosophy, a pinch of telepathy and mental science, a trace of spiritualism, with excessive charges for absent treatment, and you have an old witch's potion which, starting in New England where witchcraft did, is swallowed by the gullible simply because it is labelled “new Christianity.”

The essential doctrines of Christianity,—the depravity of human nature, the atonement, the witness of the Spirit, holiness, prayer, and Christian stewardship, are slurred over with a passing word to make room for more modern formulas for getting rid of the world, the flesh, and the devil by merely denying their existence. The folly of all these modern substitutes for Christianity must be exposed as were the seducers of Ephesus.

Truthworthiness of Timothy's Teachers. “Knowing of whom thou hast learned them, and that from a child thou hast known the holy scriptures.” Timothy could choose between the teachers of the new “fads” and his old teachers of whom he had learned the truths of the Gospel,—his grandmother Lois, his mother Eunice, and the Apostle himself. The very remembrance of these saintly instructors helped to keep him steady. Learning the doctrines from the time he was a child, best of all he had seen them practiced within his own home,—Christian evidences that could not be refuted.

With the sacred roll open upon her knee and the grandchild Timothy sitting close beside her Grandma Lois had spent many golden hours reading how Jehovah guided the Hebrew nation in its infancy and made the patriarchs to triumph over their enemies. And the gentle mother Eunice had often put her boy to sleep by recounting how Joseph was left by his brethren in the pit, or how Daniel braved the lions in their den, or how young David struck the giant Goliath low. Then came Paul to graft upon the Hebrew teaching the great doctrines of the Gospel as only he had learned them. Surely Timothy was favored in his teaching and his teachers.

What an inestimable privilege and benefit to know the sacred writings from earliest childhood and to know them from godly teachers! Those who acquire this knowledge late in life still cling to old habits of thought and conduct which are not extinguished by their baptism. Even after they enter the church their false opinions and behavior vex the officials and hinder the work of God. O for a church full of young Timothys who from childhood have known the holy Scriptures!

God's Breath Breathed Into Our Bible.

"All Scripture is given by inspiration of God." Paul thus places the sacred writings in a class by themselves. They communicate a saving wisdom to those who read them aright. This power was not exhausted in young Timothy, for our lesson declares they are still "able to make wise unto salvation." Scripture possesses a unique power over all other literature, not by any charm it possesses, not by any magical effect upon the reader, but because God's Spirit breathes through the whole of it, making every passage vitally spiritual. The Apostle said this of the Old Testament; much more can it be said of the New. For as Paul was writing this very sentence the Spirit of God was leading him in his thought and expression, making his words to be a blessing to all future generations.

This inspiration was not mechanical, making the writers mere machines and their writings mere dictation. The Spirit governed the substance of the message, but the individual writer chose his own words. Inspiration did not preserve the writers from occasional bad grammar, nor did it preserve them from possible errors as to dates, facts of history, or points of geology, astronomy, or physiology.

Luke tells us in his preface that he took great pains to obtain the best information for his Gospel. He need not have done so if inspiration would have made error impossible. No theory of inspiration can stand that does not leave room for each writer to freely use his own language, illustrations, personal characteristics, and individual peculiarities. But such inspiration has produced unparalleled literature. In their boundless adaptability to all ages and circumstances, in their lofty spirituality, in their inexhaustible capacity for consolation, and in their ceaseless power to satisfy the deepest cravings and inspirations of the heart the Scriptures prove themselves to be the Word of God.

Permanent Value of the Scriptures. "All scripture is profitable for doctrine, for reproof, for correction, for instruction in righteousness." The Bible is the only Gibraltar in the world which has never been taken. It is thirty-four hundred years since Jannes and Jambres, the critics of Egypt, began to attack the truth which was spoken through Moses, and critics have assaulted the Bible ever since. Five kinds of criticism have tested it out, criticism of text, criticism of history, criticism of archeology, criticism of philosophy, and criticism of human experience.

The nations still need the Bible. Gretius, the founder of international law, was a most diligent student of the Bible, and one of its best commentators. To spread its teachings to all lands he wrote ballads for the Dutch sailors; they remembered the poetry and sang the Bible in all ports. When shall the Bible's exalted peace teachings be international law? "He shall judge among the nations, and shall rebuke many people: they shall beat their swords into plowshares, and their spears into pruning hooks: nation shall not lift up sword against nation, neither shall they learn war any more."

Our cities still need the Bible. Rev. Brooke Herford preached a farewell sermon to cultured, questioning Boston which, of the cities of America, most resembles ancient Athens of which Luke said: "They spend their time in nothing else, but either to tell or to hear some new thing." He said: "I long for the time when, from the fringe and tassels of constantly new studies, Boston shall turn to that old Bible which made the life of the fathers strong and true; and reading it only with 'larger, other eyes'—shall feel the power of the slow unfolding of God's truth and of its culminating life of Christ; and, rooted there, shall grow to nobler heights of thoughtful Christian character than ever before. That is what this community most needs." Gladstone was fond of calling the Bible "The Impregnable Rock." Shortly before he died he reviewed the whole field of Biblical criticism and said, finally, "I see no grounds for fear that the Bible is discredited, its teaching or authority discounted."

Quiz and Study. 1. What godly mother dedicated her boy at birth to religious service, and sent him early to the prophet for training? 2. What answer did Christ give his mother when she found Him in the temple discussing the law? 3. In what way did Jesus use Scripture passages when tempted? 4. What three teachers made Timothy familiar with the Scriptures? 5. What teachers was he compelled to oppose in Ephesus?

Practical Thoughts. 1. The unity of the Scriptures is such that to reject one book is to take a living stone from the arch of truth. 2. Scriptures, like the Saviour, are Divine-human; Divine in source and character, but human in the channel whence they flowed and in the form in which they appeared. 3. The man of God, minister or layman, has in God's Word a spiritual arsenal from which he may draw all needed weapons. 4. The influence of the lessons and teachers of youth is never wholly lost.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

But

thou in all things, endure
afflictions, do the work
of an

make full proof of thy ministry. For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my

is at hand.
I have fought a good

I have finished my

I have kept the Henceforth there is laid up for me a of righteousness, which the Lord, the righteous judge, shall give me at that day: and not to me only,

but unto all them also that his appearing.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS II. TIM. 4:6-18.

Prayer: Heavenly Father, keep me from all morbid thoughts of death by wisely employing all the golden hours of life. May I use my youth as wisely as Timothy did his, and may I be as well prepared for the event of death as was Paul. When I embark on the last voyage may there be no sadness of farewell, but may Jesus be my Pilot and my Friend. Amen.

"Twilight and evening bell,
And after that the dark!
And may there be no sadness of farewell
When I embark;
For tho' from out our bourne of Time and Place
The flood may bear me far,
I hope to see my Pilot face to face
When I have crost the bar."

—Tennyson.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, Autumn, A. D. 65, Paul's second imprisonment. Place, written in Rome, probably in the dungeon of the Mamertine prison. Persons, Timothy, Luke, Mark, Tychicus, Demas, Crescens, Titus, Nero, and others. Style, dying words of lofty tone and Christian courage.

Scripture Setting: Gospel Sailors Nearing Port. The pathway to immortality and light. I Tim. 6:11-16. Lashed to the Gospel ship, I Cor. 9:23-27. Final refuge from storm, Isa. 25:4-9. Eternal comfort against present persecution, Matt. 10:22-28. The voice of many waters, Rev. 14:2-7.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage presents the saint's final thoughts of satisfaction on going home. 1. The glory of God nowhere shines more resplendent than in the faith of His saints at life's sunset. 2. Even the scholar closes up his book with keen satisfaction when the chimes overhead ring out the time of going home. 3. The faithlessness of friends and the injuries of enemies cannot break the calm and repose of the dying saint. 4. Our warfare against sin ceases only when life ceases; eternal wages are paid at the close of the day.

PAUL'S LAST JOURNEY AND FAREWELL.

Ready and Waiting at the Wharf. "For I am now ready to be offered, and the time of my departure is at hand." We can almost hear the swash of the waves against the wharf and the groaning of the great cables chafing to be loosed as the ship weighs anchor, in the words, "The time of my departure is at hand." The moment for sailing has come. Paul is starting across the narrow sea of death that will bring him soon to the heavenly Haven. This world traveller could hardly be caught surprised or unprepared however sudden or out of the usual his departure might be. He had undertaken many remarkable voyages before. Let him tell his own experience. "In deaths oft; thrice I suffered shipwreck; a night and a day I have been in the deep; in journeyings often; in perils of waters; in weariness, in painfulness, in watchings often." (2 Cor. 11.)

Phillips Brooks says of these last words of Paul, "His old age did not come creeping into port a wreck, with broken masts and rudder gone, but full-sailed still, and strong for other voyages in other seas. We are sure that his was the old age that God loves to see."

"And thou must sail upon this sea a long eventful voyage.

The wise may suffer wreck.
The foolish must. Oh, then, be early wise!
Learn from the mariner his skilful art—
To station quick-eyed Prudence at the helm,
To guide thy sail from Passion's sudden blasts,
And make Religion thy magnetic guide,
Which, though it trembles as it lowly lies Points to the light that changes not,
In Heaven."

—Anon.

The Bell of Faith in the Fogs of Death. "I have fought a good fight, I have finished my course, I have kept the faith." It was fortunate that Paul did not die in the old unregenerate days when he was not ready; when he brought men and women of this faith bound unto Jerusalem, "breathing out threatening and slaughter against the disciples of the Lord." He lived to make sad and humiliating confession of his errors, "I did it ignorantly in unbelief."

In prison, with Demas forsaking, Timothy delaying, Luke only remaining, longing for his cloak, his books, and his parchments, the once despised Gospel was his best comfort. He who breaks down faith breaks the compass by which he steers, for life is a voyage around the world, and we pass in at last where first we sailed out.

Southey has told us in a noble poem how the holy abbot of Aberbrothock placed a bell over the Inchcape rock that sailors might hear its warnings when tempest waves hid the rock. Ralph the Rover in sport cut away the floating bell, then sailed on a long journey. He returned at last, laden with wealth, but near the rock his ship was caught in a fog. His sailors could hear the breakers, but could not see the shore. How they longed to hear the Inchcape bell which had been destroyed! Then Ralph the Rover first realized that he himself had destroyed his ship, his cargo, his crew and himself.

Paul through the years had kept the faith, and in death the faith kept him. Like the rhythmic cadences of some great bell upon the sea ringing to cheer and guide him he heard to the last, "Fought the fight, finished seafaring, followed the faith."

Lamenting the Laborer Who Lapsed and Was Lost Overboard. "For Demas hath forsaken me, having loved this present world." Once when Paul was sailing the Mediterranean there came by the wireless telegraphy of faith this message through the storm: "Fear not, Paul; God hath given thee all them that sail with thee?" And as by miracle all of the two hundred and seventy-six were saved that day. But now he is saddened to think of one fallen overboard. As Paul closes forever the record of his earthly diary he makes a hasty roll-call of the heroic band that has labored by his side. Most are accounted for; they are standing at their posts. "Crescens to Galatia, Titus unto Dalmatia, Luke is with me, Erastus at Corinth, Trophimus at Miletum." One entry he chronicles not with ink but with tears, "Demas hath forsaken me."

No Gospel record, perhaps, would be complete, without including the temporary lapsing of a Peter and the eternal perfidy of a Judas. Even the hand that made the morning stars and that held upon the cross in its pierced palm the proclamation of our forgiveness was unable to hold a little group of twelve men unbroken by treachery. In one of the earliest chapters of the ministry of Jesus we read, "From that time many of His disciples went back and walked no more with Him."

The saddest entries of a church record are those which must be made in invisible ink. Opposite one name is written, "removed by letter"; declaring the strength of that life transferred to another field; opposite another is written, "withdrawn," meaning for some unnamed reason a severance from Christian fellowship; after another is written, "died in the faith"; but saddest of all the records is an empty line after the name which to a pastor's heart means affections "removed" from the work of God, hearts "withdrawn" by the shrinkage of selfishness, and early faith that "died" ere it bore fruit. Even Paul the Apostle feared lest the tides of this world might sweep him off his feet—"lest that by any means, when I have preached to others, I myself should be a castaway." (I Cor. 9:27.)

The Last Requests of the Old Captain. "The cloak that I left at Troas with Carpus, when thou comest, bring with thee, and the books, but especially the parchments." Like an old sea captain whose face is scarred and weathered with the storms Paul looked out from gray prison walls towards the Appian Way whence he would soon be led to his martyrdom. Probably he was in the dungeon of the Mamertine prison called the "Bastile of the old world." Here an African king who dared to war against Rome was starved to death about a hundred years before Christ. Paul wrote this last letter in the autumn of 65 A. D. Winter was fast approaching, and in the dampness of the underground prison he felt the need of extra clothing, so he urges Timothy to hasten with his cloak which in warmer weather he had left with his friend Carpus at Troas. Though death was approaching he would take the best care possible of his infirm body.

The last personal service that Paul requests is indicative of the man. "Bring with thee especially the parchments." All the sacred writings were usually written on parchment, the fine skin of a new-born lamb, polished with pumice stone for a writing surface. Many of the Old Testament writings and some of Paul's own original letters to the churches may have made up the collection of parchments. In the last hour of life, often as here the last request the lips frame, the Sacred Writings are asked for. Said that great writer of books, Sir Walter Scott, when dying, "Bring me the Book." After a pause he added, "There is only one book—the Bible." So St. Paul, the old sailor of the Mediterranean, asks to place his fingers once more on the traveler's chart, the pilot's compass—the Sacred Word.

A Through Ticket to the Heavenly Haven. "I was delivered out of the mouth of the lion. And the Lord shall deliver me from every evil work, and will preserve me unto his heavenly Kingdom." Seutenius the historian called Nero "a wild beast." Paul called him "a roaring lion." In July, 64 A. D., he burned Rome and imputed it to the Christians. Then began the bloodiest of persecutions. Christians dressed in skins of lions were set upon by ravenous dogs. Others were burned as human torches. In a cheerful and serene old age Paul leaves his prison for his coronation. Let us forget the headsman's axe and listen to the singing and the shouting and the voice of praise like the voice of many waters. And Paul goes forth on the silent voyage reading his heavenly passport, "I was delivered; He shall deliver me; He will preserve me."

Quiz and Study. 1. For what reasons was Timothy urged to hasten to Paul? 2. What would lead Paul to believe he must die soon? 3. What reasons are there for supposing Nero was the "lion" Paul referred to? 4. Who had mistreated Paul; who deserted him; how many stood by him during his first trial?

Challenge Text. "So He — them unto their desired —." Psa. 107: (?).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Life is a kingly quest across seas towards the heights beyond. 2. Demas sits down to enjoy the present world; Paul traverses the world in quest of goodly pearls. 3. Demas sold out for pleasure, Judas for gold, Paul sails the seas of widest possibilities after one pearl of great price, "the inheritance of the saints in light." 4. The Christian merchantman watches for new markets in new fields, has the telescopic sight, takes advantage of the flood tide and the favoring gale.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

OUR GREAT HIGH PRIEST.

Seeing then that we have a great high priest, that is passed into the heavens,

the Son
of God,
let us
hold fast our profession.
For we have not an which cannot be touched with the feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points

like as we are, yet without

Let us therefore come boldly unto the

of grace,
that we may obtain

and find grace to help in time of need.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS HEBREWS 4:14-16; 5:1-6.

Prayer: "Father, the hour is come: glorify Thy Son, that Thy Son may also glorify Thee. I have manifested Thy name unto the men which Thou gavest Me out of the world. I pray for them: I pray not for the world, but for them which Thou hast given Me, for they are Thine. I pray not that Thou shouldst take them out of the world, but that Thou shouldst keep them from the evil. Sanctify them through Thy truth: Thy word is truth."—Christ's high-priestly prayer.

"More simple and lowly the walls that we raise,
And humbler the pomp of procession and praise,
Where the heart is the altar whence the incense shall roll,
And Messiah the King who shall pray for the soul.
Oh, Father, come in! but not in the cloud Which filled the bright courts where Thy chosen ones bowed;
But come in that Spirit of glory and grace,
Which beams on the soul and illumines the face."
Henry Ware Jr.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Hebrews was written to explain to Jewish readers how the ordinances of Leviticus were fulfilled and done away in Christ. Some believe it was the work of Apollos, but more probably it was from Paul's pen. It was written before the destruction of Jerusalem A. D. 70 to the Jews who had left the city on account of the war and were settled in Asia Minor. It represents the Levitical priesthood as a shadow of which Christ's priesthood is the substance.

Scripture Setting: Christ the Fulfillment of the Priesthood. The priestly garments and breastplate, Ex. 28:1-12. Consecration of Aaron and his sons, Lev. 8:1-13. The eternal priesthood of Christ, Psa. 110:1-7. Christ's priestly supremacy, Heb. 7:22-28. Christ's Scripture proof of sonship, Matt. 22:41-46. Christ's priestly prayer, John 16:1-11.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage presents Christ as humanity's perfect High Priest touching life on all sides. 1. In body He endured toil, exhaustion, hunger, thirst, pain, death. 2. In estate He endured poverty, persecution, contempt, rejection, misrepresentation, desertion. 3. In mind He endured fear, perplexity, disappointment, loneliness, sorrow. 4. In special temptation He resisted ambition, presumption, and promised possessions.

CHRIST OUR UNCHANGING HIGH PRIEST.

Our High Priest Enters Within the Vail.

"Seeing then that we have a great High Priest, that is passed into the heavens, Jesus the Son of God, let us hold fast our profession." In the tabernacle as well as in the temple there hung a curtain or screen between the holy and the holy of holies. Composed of white linen and striped with threads of blue and purple and scarlet it bore the figures of cherubim in gold. In Herod's temple this vail was double and very thick, but on the afternoon that Jesus died it was rent from top to bottom by a mighty earthquake. It was forever done away with, since the death of Christ did open to all a new and more perfect way of access to God. The vail was also rent when Jesus ascended to Heaven, and a cloud received Him out of sight. As Jesus "passed into the heavens" earth receded, the moon and its satellites were left behind, and even the sun and the distant stars faded away as He passed on into the immediate presence of God. Thus the natural heavens became the vail through which He entered into the Holy of Holies.

"He that hath seen Me hath seen the Father." We never would have known the certitude of the resurrection if He had not risen and appeared to His disciples "the first fruits of them that slept." We never would have known the true nature of Heaven if He had not come to earth to declare, "If it were not so I would have told you." And now that He is seated in Heaven upon the throne of grace His priesthood is established forever. Never more shall there be a vail between the needs of man and riches of God's grace.

The Sympathy of Jesus Better Than the Symbolism of Aaron.

"For we have not an high priest which cannot be touched with a feeling of our infirmities; but was in all points tempted like as we are, yet without sin." The Aaronic priesthood was based on the aristocracy of family which tended to develop selfish pride rather than generous sympathy. The law provided that sons, however unfit, were to succeed their priestly father. "The holy garments of Aaron shall be his sons' after him to be annointed and consecrated in them." Hence clothes in that priesthood counted for more than character. Hophni and Phinehas, the corrupt sons of the aged Eli, were cut down in their priestly offices because of their sins.

The selfishness of the priests passed into a proverb. "Every one that is left in the house of Levi shall come and bow down to him for a piece of silver and a loaf of bread, and shall say, Put me, I pray thee, into one of the priest's offices, that I may eat a morsel of bread." Aaron was a majestic figure, bearing on his breast the glittering stones that comprised the breastplate of the high priest. The sardius, topaz, carbuncle, emerald, sapphire, diamond, jacinth, agate, amethyst, beryl, onyx, and jasper were set in a golden frame.

But stones set in gold make a hard pillow for the head of the transgressor. When John leaned his head upon the breast of his Divine Master he felt the confidence and satisfaction of leaning on One who knows all about our troubles. That breast, though stained with blood and tears, is infinitely more dear to man than the breast blazoned and be-studded with glittering gems. Though our great High Priest is now passed into the heavens He once passed our way. He never passed a cot of pain without a prayer and healing touch. He never passed blind beggars on the roadside without giving light and hope. He never passed the sorrowing sisters without words of love and immortality. He ever moved amid scenes of sin, healing its leprosy, yet remaining the sinless One and undefiled.

A Brother on the Throne of Grace. "Let us therefore come boldly unto the throne of grace, that we may obtain mercy, and find grace to help in time of need." Our boldness in coming to God rests on two facts previously mentioned,—that Jesus has ascended into the heavens to become our changeless intercessor and that once He passed our way learning thereby our nature and our limitations.

Six thousand years ago a company of Hebrews, all brothers, journeyed on donkeys to Egypt seeking food in time of the great famine. They called at the governor's house, and lo, they were invited to dine in his banquet hall. With his golden chain of authority about his neck he seated them at the table giving the firstborn the place of honor and each according to his age down to Benjamin youngest of all. After the dinner he could stand it no longer, and he cried "Come near to me, I pray you. I am Joseph your brother. And God sent me before you to save your lives by a great deliverance." The character and conduct of Joseph foreshadowed Christ.

The Divine Ruler is our Brother, for He is of our blood and once dwelt in the tent of our humanity. In our helplessness and need we may with great boldness approach the throne of grace, for He who was left by sinful man to die alone is become the sinner's Friend, the Ruler of the skies. He bids us into His banquet house and seats us round Him as His own. He is clothed with all authority, but He knows us every one. We need not fear, for this Elder Brother in our time of need forgives us the past and provides for our future.

The Priesthood of Aaron Passes Away. "For every high priest taken from among men, is ordained for men, . . . and no man taketh this honor unto himself, but he that is called of God, as was Aaron." The old Levitical priesthood was "from men" and was passed down from one to another. It was an honor conferred. But it was a part of Christ's Sonship to be our High Priest. He was not appointed, but His office springs from His personality. In Aaron was sown a natural priesthood,—sown in corruption, dishonor, and weakness. In Christ it is raised a spiritual priesthood,—in incorruption, in glory, in power. He has power to save completely and continually, for of His government there shall be no end.

When the priesthood after the order of Aaron came to an end, then the entire dispensation of law, the old covenant, was replaced by a new and better covenant. The old covenant is the Old Testament wherein is Aaron as high priest; the new covenant is the New Testament wherein is Christ our great High Priest forever. Christ never formally abolished the old covenant; He came not to destroy; but He fulfilled the most spiritual teachings of its sacrificial types being Himself both priest and bleeding sacrifice.

The Mystery and Meaning of Melchisedec's Priesthood. "Thou art a priest forever after the order of Melchisedec." The above passage is a direct quotation from the 110th Psalm. Christ Himself calls it David's Psalm, and declared that its language was a clear prophecy of Himself (Matt. 22:45).

Melchisedec is shrouded in mystery. Of his birth and genealogy nothing is said. Of his death no man knows. And the sacred silence is significant. He was king and priest, he suddenly appears and as suddenly vanishes. But the old Levitical priesthood acknowledged his superiority. Even Abraham, the patriarch, was blessed by him, and paid to him the tenth, the priest's portion. Melchisedec did not spring from the priestly family of Levi. Neither was Christ of the tribe of Levi but of Judah. In many ways then Melchisedec was the type and forerunner of Christ who had no beginning or end, who was superior to the Levitical priesthood, whose priesthood was not of family descent but through superior personality. The priest of the old dispensation came, stood to offer sacrifice, and went, a mere individual in a passing succession. But Christ does not stand; He sitteth at the right hand of God because He is our Priest forever. "For where there is forgiveness there is no more an offering for sin."

Quiz and Study. 1. How often did the high priest enter the holy of holies; on what day? 2. When was the temple veil rent; what did it signify? 3. What did the high priest wear upon his breast; what did it signify? 4. In what respects did Melchisedec typify the priesthood of Christ?

Challenge Text. "Wherefore Jesus also, that He might — the people with His own —, suffered without the —." Hebr. 13: (9).

Practical Thoughts. 1. Four things that Aaron did: Killed the sacrifices; entered with blood into the holy of holies; sprinkled the mercy seat with blood; kindled the incense whose smoke overspread the mercy-seat. 2. Four things Christ did: Offered up Himself as our sacrifice; ascended into Heaven to the Father; represented His death before the Father as the sinner's substitute; made intercession at the mercy-seat. 3. Four things we can do: Repent of our sins; believe in Christ; be baptized in His name; enter into His service.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

THE SANCTUARY.

Then verily the first covenant had also ordinances of divine service, and a worldly sanctuary. For there was a

made;
the first,
wherein was
the

and
the

and the

which is called
the sanctuary.
And after
the second

the tabernacle which is called the Holiest of all; Which had the golden

and the overlaid round about with gold, wherein was the golden

that had manna,
and Aaron's

that budded,
and
the

of the covenant;
And over it the of glory shadowing

the mercy-seat;
of which we cannot now speak particularly.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS HEB. 9:1-12.

Prayer: Holy Spirit, take the things of Christ and show them unto us. Reveal unto us the things which eye hath not seen nor ear heard,—the things which God hath prepared for them that love Him. Feed us with the hidden manna, and whisper unto us the secret of God's delight. Lead us into the holy of holies where we shall see no one but Jesus only. Shine in the tabernacle of our hearts as the Shekinah lighted the mercy-seat with God's glory. Amen.

"There is a place where Jesus sheds
The oil of gladness on our heads;
A place than all besides more sweet:
It is the blood-bought mercy-seat.
Ah! whither could we flee for aid,
When tempted, desolate, dismayed;
Or how the hosts of hell defeat,
Had suffering saints no mercy-seat?"
—Hugh Stowell.

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: See previous lesson. Perhaps Hebrews is the most helpful of all books to connect the teaching of the Old Testament with that of the New. The types of the Old are treated as shadowy and temporary, but used most powerfully to throw light on the institutions of the New Testament. Analogy, comparison, symbolism, and allegory are extensively used.

Scripture Setting: The Form and Meaning of Worship. A heavenly pattern given. Ex. 25:8-22. The tabernacle consecrated. Ex. 40:1-12. A new spiritual house. I Peter 2:1-10. The highest form of worship. John 4:19-26. God's glory in the New Jerusalem. Rev. 21:10-16, 21-27.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage suggests five great teachings underlying the tabernacle: 1. Its careful measurements, harmony, and symmetry reveal the perfections of God. 2. Its walls, partitions, and furnishings make a dwelling place, suggesting the presence of God. 3. Its furniture and utensils anointed with oil suggest the holiness of God. 4. Its pattern given in the mount and its foundations laid on earth suggest the Divine source and the human application of Christian truth. 5. Its purpose was to provide a meeting between God and man which purpose was more fully accomplished in the union of the human and Divine nature of Christ.

TABERNACLE FURNISHINGS AND THEIR FULFILLMENT.

Ancient Types and Truths of After-Times.

"The first tabernacle, wherein was the candlestick, and the table, and the showbread." Three articles of furniture were placed in the first and larger room of the tabernacle, the table of showbread, the golden lampstand, and the golden altar of incense. Each was a great object lesson, and is therefore worthy of description. The table of showbread was made of acacia wood overlaid with gold. All the dishes, spoons, flagons and bowls placed thereon were made of pure gold. The rite was performed as a thank offering and the eating of the showbread by the priests was the acknowledgment that even the best men were in continual need of God. The golden lampstand holding the seven candles contained a receptacle for pure olive oil. The seven branches and seven lights were fed from a common reservoir. Every individual branch of the church and every separate congregation draws its life and nourishment from the one Spirit of truth.

Titus, the Roman conqueror, carried away the golden candlesticks, but no conqueror nor vandal can ever destroy the assurance of the spiritual union of all believers. The altar of incense was also made of acacia wood overlaid with gold. It stood so near the veil hanging across the entrance to the holy of holies that it is mentioned as if within the latter. The old version by a mistranslation calls it the golden censer. In the sweet incense that floated heavenward from this altar is symbolized the efficacy of prayer. It prepared the high priest to enter the holy of holies even as the soul's pure aspirations and desires expressed in silent or audible prayer prepare the soul to approach the God of love and mercy. Instead of the showbread we now have the messages of the New Testament; instead of the golden lampstand, we now have Christ's wonderful prayer for the unity of believers; and instead of the rising incense, we have a Saviour seated at the right hand of God who ever maketh intercession for us.

The Saint's Blood-Sprinkled Mercy Seat.

"And after the second veil, the holiest of all; which had the golden censer, and the ark of the covenant, and the golden pot of manna, and Aaron's rod, and the tables of the covenant, and over it the cherubim." The holy of holies was the inner room, a perfect cube of ten cubits. Its one article of furniture, besides sacred relics, was the ark of the testimony. It contained the tables of the decalogue or ten commandments. The ark was made of acacia wood covered with gold without and within. Above it was a slab of pure gold on which rested the two figures of the cherubim. This was called "the mercy seat."

The ark held the law, and the law declared the condemnation of sin. But the law is hidden and covered by a mercy seat. That mercy seat is sprinkled with the blood of atonement. The two winged cherubim stood above facing each other at opposite ends, their overshadowing wings extending upward and forward till their points almost touched. Whenever the glory of God was visible it rested upon the cherubim. They were the beautiful symbols of the perpetual and brooding presence of God.

Many of the New Testament writers are fond of comparing the ancient mercy-seat to the throne of grace in Heaven, access to which has been opened by the blood of Christ, and over which broods the benign and watchful care of God. In this religion of types there was no intimation of idolatry. A proper use of symbols enables the mind to comprehend spiritual truths. But the mature worshipper walks by faith and not by sight. Most men, however, are spiritual cripples requiring crutches to lean upon. Forms of religion even in this late day seem necessary, but religion is not formalism.

The First Forms but Figures of Future Reformation. "The first tabernacle was a figure for the time then present, which stood only in meats and drinks, and divers washings, and carnal ordinances, imposed on them until the time of reformation." God adjusts His means of teaching religious truth to the capacities and requirements of a given age. Israel represents the childhood of the race, so He used kindergarten methods, pleasing symbols and bright pictures. The appeal was almost entirely through eye-gate, ear-gate and nose-gate. The flash of lightning, the pillar of cloud and fire, the Shekinah that filled the holy of holies, the crash of thunder, the voice speaking out of the cloud, the smell of roasting sacrifices, and the sweet odor of incense, were appeals to their physical senses. It is true that our modern houses of worship have no such displays of the Divine glory, since those were temporary devices, "figures for the time then present."

The book of Hebrews was written to show us that the tabernacle was only "a copy and shadow of the heavenly things,"—a figure of "the greater and more perfect tabernacle." The religion of Israel was an evolution,—that is, being a living thing, it was a growing, enlarging, developing religion. To borrow the language of Jesus who illustrated spiritual truth by natural law it was "first the blade, then the ear, then the full grain in the ear." It began with a heart yearning, then a stone altar under the open sky, then the tabernacle, a tent of cloth and skins, for temporary service, then Solomon's secure and magnificent temple on Mount Moriah, then the second house whose enduring glory was that of the presence of Jesus in the flesh. When Jesus came all types within the temple were fulfilled in Him, and as He foretold the temple's destruction, He also foretold the passing of both the temple worship on Mount Moriah and on Mount Gerizim, to be superseded by a spiritual, universal worship such as had not been before.

The Greater Glory of God's Later House.

"But Christ by a greater and more perfect tabernacle, by His own blood, entered in once into the holy place, having obtained eternal redemption for us." The tabernacle is the type of Christ. For the tabernacle symbolized the meeting of God and man, thus typifying the union of the Divine and human natures which were united in Christ. There is no longer need for a symbolic meeting and union, for its spiritual reality is proved by our conscious experience. Religion is no longer to be a symbol. It is life, experience, the conscious presence of the Holy Spirit in the heart. In so far as Christ dwells in His visible church does the Christian church in our day feed the moral and spiritual life of the nation.

While Christ was in the flesh He said "In this place is one greater than the temple." At another time He said, "Behold a greater than Solomon is here." The temple that Solomon dedicated with elaborate pomp and ceremony, and Herod's temple to whose beautiful adorning the disciples called Christ's attention, were, after all, but weak symbols of the inward beauty of Christ's own character. As was said by the guests at the wedding feast in Cana that the wine Christ made was the last and best of all, so of all known forms and expressions of worship the best are the prayers, the parables, and the sermons of Jesus. If His words and example were such in life that His hearers said, "Never man spake as this man," what shall we say of the power of His character as it was exhibited in His sacrificial death?

It is the cross and not the cathedral that draws men to worship even in these days. Places of worship do not create the worshipful spirit, but the spirit of worship does create the noblest forms of architecture and the noblest edifices built by man. The death and resurrection of Jesus like the finger of some great church spire point to Heaven and immortal love.

Quiz and Study. 1. What was the simplest and earliest form of worship; what two brothers quarreled over their sacrifices; what father was willing to bind his son on the altar? 2. Of what was the tabernacle composed; where and to whom was its pattern given; why was it not made of more enduring materials? 3. Who foretold the destruction of Herod's temple; what temple did He say would be rebuilt in three days; who conquered Jerusalem and carried off the golden candlesticks? 4. What was symbolized by the showbread; the golden candlesticks; the altar of incense?

Challenge Text. "Look thou that thou make them after their —, which was showed thee in the —. Ex. 25: (1).

Practical Thoughts. 1. If the sacrifices and symbols of the old covenant had been perfect there would have been no new covenant. 2. Not Sinai, Gerizim, nor Moriah, but Calvary is the hope of humanity. 3. The Mosaic economy was sprinkled with blood,—bleeding footprints leading up to Gethsemane and Calvary. 4. The holy of holies was accessible to only one man once a year, but Christ's ministry secured free access for us into the immediate presence of God.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

But Christ being come an of good things to come, by a greater and more perfect not made with hands, that is to say, not of this building; Neither by the blood of but by his own blood he entered in once into the having obtained eternal redemption for us. For if the blood of

and of

and the ashes of an sprinkling the unclean, sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh: How much more shall the blood of who through the eternal Spirit offered himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works to serve the living God?

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS HEB. 9:13,14,24-28.

Prayer: O Lord, Thou who for our sakes became a sacrifice for sin, yet knew no sin, sprinkle the heavenly mercy-seat with the tears of Thy compassion, the blood of Thy atonement, and the prayers of Thy intercession. By Thee and Thee alone do we have access unto God. By Thee and Thee alone is the Spirit of grace and sanctification poured forth upon us. Thou who dost fulfill all types of sacrifice fill us with all grace. Amen.

"Not all the blood of beasts
On Jewish altars slain,
Could give the guilty conscience peace,
Or wash away the stain.
But Christ, the heavenly Lamb,
Takes all our sins away;
A sacrifice of nobler name,
And richer blood than they."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: See the two previous lessons from Hebrews. The author, whose identity has not been proven, must have been fully acquainted with the laws and customs of Jewish sacrifices as well as understanding fully the completeness and universality of Christ's redemption on the cross.

Scripture Setting: Sacrifice for Sin: the Typical and the True. The bullock, the goats, and the ram. Lev. 16:6-16. Sin offering and burnt offering for the leper. Lev. 14:10-23. Solomon's sacrifice of dedication. 2 Chron. 7:1-8. The acceptable sacrifice. Micah 6:6-8. Our sacrifice for salvation. Eph. 1:7-14.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage presents Christ as our perfect and final sacrifice for sin. 1. Redemption includes a valuable consideration, a full discharge of all due the law, a substitute or surety, and a daysman coming between guilty man and Divine justice. 2. The continual sins of men called for continual sacrifices till Christ suffered once for all. 3. All the sins of all men of all ages were in one mass laid on Christ who not only atoned for sin but destroyed sin. 4. The sight of Jesus our Advocate and Intercessor presenting Himself before God for us as our eternally present offering satisfies God's requirements.

THE SAVIOUR THE SUPREME SACRIFICE FOR SIN.

Crude Ceremonials of Cleansing that Center in Christ. "If the blood of bulls and of goats sanctifieth to the purifying of the flesh, how much more shall the blood of Christ, who through the eternal Spirit offered Himself without spot to God, purge your conscience from dead works?" In a most remarkable book, The Blood Covenant, Dr. Trumbull has shown how among the most scattered and savage races linger the traces of a once universal religious covenant in which blood sealed the compact between the worshipper and his deity. It existed among the savage tribes of Africa, the North American Indians, the migrating Asiatic tribes; it is found in Egypt and India; it is practiced by the Bedouin Arabs of the desert of Sinai and the Mussulmen on their pilgrimages to Mecca.

Dr. Edward Walsh describes a certain Indian village in this country in the center of which he found a council-house or temple. A high priest with his pontifical robe and a stomacher bearing religious symbols in beadwork stood by watching the kettle on the hearth. It contained a fat dog which when cooked was divided into small bits and served on a wooden platter. Then the high priest dipped a branch of hemlock pine in the broth and sprinkled it on the wall and over the men and women worshippers. The ceremony concluded with the circular dance and a weird chant. Humboldt heard this same chant in Mexico and supposed it to be synonymous with the Hallelujah of the Psalms.

But arguing from the less to the greater, if the blood and flesh of mere brutes could purify in any degree, how much more shall inward purification and eternal salvation be wrought by the blood of Christ in whom dwelt all the fulness of the Godhead? Christ offered Himself. The animals offered had no spirit or will to consent, but were sacrificed according to law. But from eternity Christ concurred with the Father's will to accomplish humanity's redemption through Himself. The animal victims must be without outward blemish; but Christ was a victim inwardly and outwardly stainless. The Israelite gave a living sacrifice; Christ gave His life; and we are to give, not dead works, but living works prompted by living faith in a living God.

Our Atoning Advocate Always at the Altar Above. "For Christ is not entered into the holy places made with hands, . . . but into Heaven itself, now to appear in the presence of God for us." "Holy places made with hands," that is, earthly sanctuaries and earthly priests by their very nature could be only temporary. The temples were inadequate to hold all the worshippers at once; they were looted by conquering armies, and the high priests were imperfect men subject to sickness and death. The Jews were always in dread lest the high priest should perish in performing the services on the day of atonement. And since it was death for any one else, priest or layman, to enter the inner sanctuary, a cord was fastened to the high priest's foot, the end of which was left beyond the veil, so that in case he should die there, before the Lord, on the great day of expiation, his body might be drawn out without any one violating the sacred place or custom.

Christ seeing clearly how temporary and limited would be his own earthly ministry, said to His disciples at its close, "It is expedient for you that I go away." Through the dispensation of the Holy Spirit He could reach all hearts; and as the ascended Son of God He could hear all prayers, see all human needs, and personally present all cases at the Father's throne.

The Scripture teaches that Moses in the construction of the tabernacle was admonished to make it a copy and a shadow of heavenly things. "For see, sayeth He, that thou make all things according to the pattern shewed to thee in the mount." The vessels, the sacrifices, and the purifying of all with blood were a copy of things in Heaven, the true holiest place. The blood of Christ made Heaven the real sanctuary and constituted the throne of the Most High a mercy-seat for men.

As Heaven is higher than the earth, as the true holiest place excels the typical one, so must the sacrifice of Heaven be more perfect than the sacrifice of the tabernacle. Heaven is Heaven because Jesus is there now to plead for us; will be there to receive us; and from His presence we "shall go out no more forever."

The Tabernacle Atonements but Temporary Types. "Nor yet that He should offer Himself often, as the high priest entereth into the holy place every year with blood of others." The forgiveness of sins under the old covenant of priestly sacrifices was merely the putting off of retribution for one year. The blood of the beasts must be renewed as the annual day of atonement comes around. The reason why the atonement was unreal, and therefore only temporary, was that the blood of bulls and goats cannot take away sin. The high priest entered with alien blood, that is "with blood of others," not his own blood. There was lacking in the sacrifice of the high priest the element of personal suffering, as well as personal righteousness and Divine authority. The most he could do was to keep alive in the conscience of his people the thought that man was sinful and that the Divine law required a penalty to be paid. "Therefore by the deeds of the law there shall no flesh be justified in His sight: for by the law is the knowledge of sin." (Rom. 3:20.)

The condition of the Israelite under law was not unlike the condition of a citizen whose farm and living are under a heavy mortgage he cannot possibly lift himself. His creditor does not foreclose, but allows the debtor to possess the farm undisturbed so long as each year he pays the interest money and keeps the mortgage alive. Unable to pay the debt he is reminded every time the interest paying period comes around that he is under law, a law he cannot fully satisfy. Such a state could not remain permanently. To this temporary expediency Paul referred as "the passing over of the sins done aforetime, in the forbearance of God." The "blood not their own" was efficacious only for the brief period of a year and must then be renewed.

The Finality of Christ's Offering of Himself. "But now once in the end of the world hath He appeared to put away sin by the sacrifice of Himself." To continue the figure which we used in illustration above, Christ came to lift forever by the sacrifice of Himself the mortgage that weighed us down. It was more than a mortgage against property; it was a death sentence resting upon our souls.

His enemies once placed upon the shoulders of Jesus a scarlet robe, and in derision they led Him forth to die. But did not we all by our ingratitude, sin, and folly, place upon Christ a heavier burden and a greater shame than the scarlet robe, the wooden cross, or the humiliating death? As fair Portia came from afar to plead with her winning looks and tender words of mercy for the trembling merchant whose pound of flesh next to his heart old Shylock was bound to have, so Christ came to satisfy broken law, to pay our debt by the sacrifice of Himself,—to set us free from our bond, "having blotted out the bond written in ordinances that was against us, which was contrary to us: and he hath taken it out of the way, nailing it to the cross." (Col. 2:14.)

The high priest once each year entered the holy place and sprinkled the blood of the goat upon the mercy-seat to make atonement for the people. But in Christ's hand was the bond written against us once forever cancelled by the spike driven through his palm and blotted out forever by the sacrificial blood that flowed from His wounds. No more yearly interest to be paid by the flowing blood of bulls and goats! Christ hath himself paid the debt and set us free.

Quiz and Study. 1. What use was made of the blood of the bullock; the blood of the slain goat; what was done with the scape goat? 2. What should the cleansed leper bring to the priest for sin offering; for burnt offering; what other offerings might be substituted by the poor? 3. How many oxen did Solomon sacrifice at once; how many sheep? 4. What spoils of war did Saul save for sacrifice; why were they not acceptable; what did Samuel say was better than sacrifice? 5. Why is Christ called "Lamb of God"; why called "our High Priest"; why called "our Passover?"

Challenge Text. "Christ our — is — for us." I Cor. 5: (?).

Practical Thoughts: 1. Christ's death was symbolized by the slain goat; His resurrection by the living goat sent away. 2. Christ established a new covenant, attested by credible witnesses, ratified and sealed with His own blood, committed to His executors, the Father and the Spirit, commanded to be published universally after His death. 3. Christ's love freely paid our debt of sin; our only debt is a debt of love to Him. 4. In case of poverty doves were substituted as sacrifices; in our poverty Christ became our substitute and sacrifice, the costliest sacrifice ever offered.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

Now

is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen. For by it the obtained a good report. Through faith we understand that the were framed by the word of God, so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear. By faith Abel offered unto God a more excellent than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts: and by it he being dead yet speaketh. By faith Enoch was that he should not see death; and was not found, because God had translated him: for before his translation he had this that he pleased God. But without faith it is impossible to please him: for he that cometh to God must that he is, and that he is a rewarder of them that diligently seek him.

THE SCRIPTURE PASSAGE IS HEB. 11:1-10.

Prayer: "Lord, we thank Thee that we are sublime and eternal. We are not like the fire-fly that dances through the summer evening; but we are eternal past the stars. Our life is fitted in its mechanism to run on forever with the life of God. Great Son of God, thrill us with the majesty of the meaning of ourselves; fill us with the moment of our powers. Help us to fall in with Thyself, so that as we journey we shall have a light growing in our faces, a light that shines more and more unto the perfect day. Amen."—Bishop Wm. A. Quayle.

"After the storms have beat upon our pathway;
After the winds have hushed their awful blast;
Our little bark, though tossed upon the billows,
Will safely reach the harbor-home at last.
O, troubled heart, by faith look o'er the water,
Hope clears the mists, to yonder city's dome,
Where in that land, no storm-clouds ever enter,
After life's journey comes our home, sweet home."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: See three previous lessons. The probabilities are that Hebrews was written by Paul in Rome between A. D. 65 and 68, while the temple was still standing. It was written for the Hebrew Christians of Palestine. Its style is unlike Paul's other writings, though its doctrines are the same.

Scripture Setting. Faith's Record and Requirements. Called and kept by faith. Isa. 43:1-6. Safe through faith. Psalms. 91:1-16. The test of Abraham's faith. Heb. 11:8-12, 17-19. Choice and venture of faith. Heb. 11:23-29. Honor roll of faith. Heb. 11:32-40.

Life and Conduct Setting: The passage presents the pictures of the victors in the battle of faith. 1. The memory and influence of the men of faith never die. 2. The tallest men of every nation stand on faith facing duty. 3. The scars of patriots are honorable, and the arduous records of the patri-archs are full of renown. 4. To die too soon fighting for faith is valiant; to live too long fleeing from service is cowardly. 5. Stretching ourselves up against the heroism of others we grow to greater proportions.

SEVEN STEPS ON A SHINING STAIRWAY.

Point of Contact. Taking but one name on this illustrious list of the Heroes of Faith, let us look at Jacob. While yet a young man he journeyed northward to the hills of Bethel. At sunset he toiled up the rough path which looked to him as a great staircase of rock and rag reaching from earth to sky, so different from the rolling pastures of Beersheba. Darkness comes on, and shepherd-like he lies down with his head upon a stone and covers his face with a corner of his cloak to shut out the light of the moon. The moonlight and the massive stone staircase become woven together in his dream. As he sleeps he sees a vision of angels thronging up and down between earth and Heaven, while at the top of the stairs stands Jehovah Himself. Only a dream, but next morning Jacob made a vow to God, building that dream into the very structure of his life.

Step One: Faith and Definition. "Now faith is the substance of things hoped for, the evidence of things not seen." Here is the massive solid foot of the stairs, a foundation definition of faith that satisfies the understanding. We can never take the first step towards Heaven till we plant our feet on this great foundation stone of faith. Moreover we cannot live the largest and most useful lives here unless like Jacob faith becomes the pillow on which we sleep at night and the stone on which we make our vow in the morning. What a noble modern roll-call of honor we could make out of the heroes of the faith who have climbed upwards to noblest human achievements by following the evidence of things not seen.

There was Leverrier who believed in his calculations and so wrote to Galle, "Point your telescope on the ecliptic in the constellation of Aquarius in longitude 326°, and somewhere within a degree you will find a new planet looking like a star of the ninth magnitude," and sure enough the planet of Neptune which no eye had seen was discovered in the place indicated.

Step Two: Faith and Creation. "Through faith we understand that the worlds were framed by the word of God." This is in reality a summary of the first verse of Genesis, "in the beginning God created." By faith matter was caused to spring from nothing, "so that things which are seen were not made of things which do appear." If the unbeliever finds this hard to think, what has he to offer that is any easier? How impossible and unthinkable it is to behold power and wisdom and plan everywhere, yet deny the existence of infinite Intelligence. It is Topsy denying her birth and parentage, "I just grewed."

Whether we think of creation as marked by distinct periods or as coming through evolution, that is, gradual growths and changes, the worlds are God's work by faith, whatever the mode He used. Says Charles Darwin, "An all-knowing Creator must have seen every effect which resulted from laws which He made." God did what Jacob did, what you and I must do, He dreamed His glorious dream, then proceeded to make it true.

Step Three: Faith and Adoption. "By faith Abel offered unto God a more acceptable sacrifice than Cain, by which he obtained witness that he was righteous, God testifying of his gifts." It is an error to suppose that the sacrifice of Cain was rejected because there was anything wrong with it as such. Nor was his work less acceptable to God because he tilled the soil rather than tended sheep. He did not possess faith in God nor love for man. He refused in any sense to be his brother's keeper, and because of hate became his brother's murderer.

But Abel the child of faith possessed an undying influence. "He, being dead, yet speaketh." He spoke in death to his guilty brother, his blood crying from the ground. He has been speaking ever since through the New Testament in three distinct references: to his faith, his righteousness, and his obedience; once in the present lesson, in Matt. 23:35, and in I John 3:12. Both of these were sons of Adam, but only one became a son of God.

Step Four: Faith and Communion. "By faith was Enoch translated that he should not see death: for before his translation he had this testimony, that he pleased God. But without faith it is impossible to please Him." Standing among those immortal witnesses to faith is Enoch the patriarch. "He walked with God three hundred years, . . . and he was not, for God took him." (Gen. 5:22, 24.) The phrase "walked with God" is best explained by a prophet's life spent in closest converse with the spiritual world. His life and deathless translation taught even in the old dispensation the possibility of immortality.

To all those who please God by a walk of faith death becomes but a trivial incident. Whether like Enoch we shall merely step out of time into the presence of God, or like Elijah we shall be carried to Heaven in a chariot of fire, it matters little. Our steps to God may be slow and toilsome, or swift and glorious, but if we please God we shall not long be separated from Him. And we can please Him best by walking with Him in our daily life and believing in His only Son. Jacob saw a ladder crowded with angels, flooded with light, leading to God, but we may lie down to sleep saying "Good night" to friends of earth and awake saying "Good morning" to God.

Step Five: Faith and Salvation. "By faith Noah prepared an ark to the saving of his house, and became heir of the righteousness which is by faith." Noah lived in an age when wickedness was everywhere, when it was hard to believe. But he had faith in God's warnings of the coming deluge and faith in God's ability to keep him and his family alive in the ark. As year after year he labored at the building of that three-storied craft of gopher wood, in the meantime preaching a warning message to all, the whole world in its unbelief held him in derision. But the world of unbelief perished, while the family of faith was preserved.

We cannot believe that the wife and sons and daughters-in-law were preserved simply because of their relation to Noah. We are not saved by families, nor because of our relation to anyone except our relation to God. Religion is above all else personal.

Step Six: Faith and Obedience. "By faith Abraham obeyed; and he went out, not knowing whither he went. By faith he sojourned in a strange country, dwelling in tabernacles." Abraham proved his faith by his obedience, at the command of God leaving his native land, his friends, his home, going he knew not whither, living in tents, owning not even a foot of ground except a small spot to bury his dead wife.

Pushing out from what seems easy and secure into untried realms at the call of God is never for our injury; it is not to break us but to make us; just as in a pottery each vase is struck by a piece of metal to prove its soundness, so hard conditions overcome certify to the resisting power of our faith. Every great enduring life like Abraham's is made up of a succession of acts of definite obedience.

Step Seven: Faith and the Glittering Goal. "For he looked for a city which hath foundations, whose builder and maker is God." We have now traced faith as a ladder of light reaching all the way from its firm foundation on earth where it satisfies the human understanding to the very foundations of God's city above where the soul is fully satisfied. The hardships by the way amount to little when they are overpast so long as the way leads home to God and Heaven. Whenever we grow earnest about life, whenever with faith we go to God to help us we see this stairway of hope where waits the helping Angel of prayer,

"How erect at the outermost gates
Of the City Celestial he waits,
With his feet on the ladder of light,
That, crowded with angels unnumbered,
By Jacob was seen, as he slumbered
Alone in the desert at night."

Quiz and Study. 1. What Christian virtue does this lesson teach; what were the other two virtues Paul declared would abide? 2. How did Abraham show his faith; Moses; Noah; Joseph; Rahab? 3. To which disciple did Jesus say, "Be not faithless, but believing?" 4. To what woman did Christ say, "Great is thy faith?" 5. Who said, "Lord, I believe, help Thou mine unbelief?"

Practical Thoughts. 1. Where men have little faith in God they have little faith in each other. 2. Faith in God is the corner-stone of modern missions; faith in one's fellow-men is the corner-stone of modern business. 3. The strength of faith is seen in the absence of sight, but faith rests on evidence surer than sight. 4. Faith is born in anticipation but it ends in sight and complete realization.

REV. THOS. B. ROBERTS.

What doth it profit, my brethren, though a man say he hath

and have not works?
can

If a brother or sister be

and destitute
of daily

And one of you say unto them, Depart in peace, be ye and filled; notwithstanding ye give them not those things

which are needful
to
the body;

what doth it profit? Even so faith, if it hath not is dead, being alone.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS JAMES 2:14-26.

Prayer: Grant unto us, O God, the faith that saves and the good works that follow saving faith. Let our faith be divinely bestowed and humanly exercised; and may our lives be fruitful in works of righteousness, not unto our salvation but because by faith in Jesus Christ we have been saved. Amen.

"Stand, then, in His great might,

With all His strength endued;
But take, to arm you for the fight,
The panoply of God:
That, having all things done,
And all your conflicts passed,
You may overcome through Christ alone,
And stand entire at last."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: The Epistle of James is intensely practical, with little purely doctrinal matter. He contrasts with Paul as a writer, though never in conflict with him. James was brother of our Lord, and became pastor of the "Mother Church" at Jerusalem, where he served until his death. He was peculiarly saintly in his life, and because converted Jews in Jerusalem and in all lands whither they had gone as exiles were too much given to discussion of doctrine and too little to diligence in Christian works, James wrote this noble letter of admonition.

Scripture Setting: Faith is: In Christ, Acts 8:12. Given by the Spirit, 1 Cor. 2:5. Works by love, Gal.

5:6. Gives peace, joy and hope, Rom. 5:1. Overcomes the world, 1 John 5:4.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. One is not saved by faith alone, however full and scriptural that faith may be. 2. Nor can one be saved by works alone, however worthy and scriptural these works may be. 3. In the former case, man's righteousness would have no worth and man himself would be a mere automaton. 4. In the latter case, Christ would be dishonored as one who died in vain. 5. The true doctrine, therefore, is that faith and works go together, one leading to salvation and the other always coming after.

HOW GOD AND MAN WORK TOGETHER.

Paul's View. People who shy at doctrine, and are fond of saying that they do not like "doctrinal preaching" or doctrinal Sunday School teaching, should remember that the greatest of all Bible preachers and teachers, next to our Lord, always preached and taught doctrinally. Of the twenty-one Epistles of the New Testament, Paul wrote fourteen. He knew that every Christian should be grounded in the doctrines of the Bible in order to be an intelligent worker in the church, and to resist the attacks of Satan and all those who teach evil doctrine. Paul made much of saving faith in his ministry. He sometimes so preached it and taught it with such prominence and urgency that there went out an opinion that all one had to do to be a Christian was to believe in Christ and do nothing more the rest of his life—a doctrine very far from Paul's mind and heart. The reason for his large emphasis of faith was that he had always in teaching Jews to overthrow their notion that because they were descended from Abraham as Jews they needed no other ground of salvation.

James' View. Then came another great Apostle, next, some think, to Paul himself. He was our Lord's brother, and was held in great reverence, partly for that reason but more for the fact that he was pastor of the great mother Christian church at Jerusalem and was recognized by foes and friends as a pure and devoted Christian. He discovered that there were many fanatical Christian Jews who had the wrong idea of faith, and were going about saying: "All we need is to believe in Christ as Son of God and son of David, as the fulfillment of Old Testament prophecy, and that He died on the cross to save us from our sins. Because He thus died to redeem us from sin we need do nothing of ourselves, Christ having done everything." James took them in hand, saying: "Yes, Christ indeed died for all men, and all who believe in Him with both mind and heart will be forgiven their sins. But that is only the beginning of your salvation. If you are really saved, if you have the right kind of faith, your love for Christ and gratitude to Him, and your strong desire to get others saved, will cause you to work unceasingly to the day of your death. Any other kind of faith than that is no better than the faith of devils, for they believe and tremble."

What Is Faith? The trouble with the Jewish fanatics in their day and with many professing Christians in our time is in their ignorance of what true saving faith is. It believes in Jesus Christ, but it is more than that. It is a belief of the intellect and heart and will, all combined. The intellect or mind accepts what the Bible says about Christ, and especially what Christ said of Himself, but it can believe all this and yet have not a scintilla of saving faith. "With the heart man believeth," and so there must enter into all true faith a heart-trust and confidence and surrender to Christ. Every thought of the mind, every feeling of the heart, must center upon Him as one's personal Saviour from sin. Then must come the final act of faith in a full and perfect surrender of the will, a set purpose, inflexible and life-long, to serve Jesus Christ by every word and work as Master and King. Nothing less than these three elements constitute faith: To know Christ; to trust Him as Saviour; to own and serve Him as Lord.

What Are Works? Whatever a man does for love of Christ is a Christian work. No man can love Christ until he is "born from above," through the regenerating power of the Holy Ghost. Once he is converted or changed into a "new creature in Christ," he cannot help a desire to do whatever Christian work he is capable of doing. The mark of every young convert in a revival is his wanting "to do something" for Christ and the church. His gratitude for the forgiveness of his sins; his love for Christ whose death atoned for his sins; the new life that the Holy Ghost has implanted in him—all of these constrain him to set about Christian work. It may be to go out among his comrades and persuade them to accept Christ. It may be the faithful discharge of the duties of an officer in the church. He may do his work as a Sunday School teacher.

Once Mr. Moody found a young Swede in Chicago who knew two words, "Howdydo" and "Come in," and he placed him at the door of Farwell Hall and gave him that one thing to do—to shake hands with everybody and to say, "Howdydo," "Come in." It was the one work the young man could do, but it was a great work. But note that it is always a work done for Christ, and as an expression of love and gratitude for what Christ has done for us.

Jewish Conceits. God had singled out the Jew thousands of years before Christ came. It was the plan of God, as shown by the Bible, to train and set apart the Jewish nation as evangelists for the world. Out of that nation He purposed that Christ should come and with Abraham, the founder of the nation, He made a covenant that "in his seed all the nations of the earth should be blessed," meaning Christ as the seed through whom the blessing would come.

God manifested Himself to the chosen nation by a thousand miracles and signs, and sent them messages by a hundred prophets, and gave them His Holy Bible to guide them. But the Jew grew worse and worse in his conceits. Because God had covenanted with Abraham, the Jews began to cherish the opinion that God, for Abraham's sake, would never allow a son of Abraham to be lost, and that blood descent from Abraham would save a Jew without any other agency. A saying among Jews was like this: "Father Abraham will follow a Jew to the gate of hell and draw him back from it." So strong was this pride of race and nation that even our Lord Himself could do little to convert the Jew, as Paul also found to be the case later. This is why the great doctrine of faith in Christ had to be constantly preached and taught to the Jews.

Modern Conceits. But Jewish conceit of its peculiar kind was much the same with various forms of conceit among Christian churches of today. One man says, "If I am only baptized that will save me," and he depends upon a little water to save him. Another says, "If I join the church and pay liberally to the preacher's salary and expense account that will do in the judgment." Another says, "If I can enjoy my whist and theatre and dance during the week and go regularly to church and Sunday School and teach a class, that will save me." And many are saying, "Let me alone. Don't urge me to accept Christ and join a church. I am moral. I have no bad habit. I will trust to that." It was needed that Christ and Paul and James should say over and over that man cannot save himself by cold intellectual acceptance of Christ on the one hand, or by trusting to his own works of self-righteousness on the other hand.

The Personal Word. Go to Christ. Believe in Him as you believe in father and mother—in your own existence. Lean upon Him with all your strength of mind. Trust Him with all the confidence and love of your heart. Give yourself to Him wholly by act of your will, for time and eternity, for long life or short life. Then do all the work you can, because you will be happy only in your work and for love's sake, to bring others into the church and Kingdom.

"Work, for the night is coming When man's work is done."

Quiz. 1. Why did the Jew need to be taught as to faith in Christ? 2. Why did James need to emphasize works? 3. Was there any real conflict between the doctrines of Paul and of James? 4. Why will true faith always lead to works? 5. What conceits do some hold in our own day?

Challenge Text. "Ye see then how that by — a man is justified, and not by — only." James 2 — (?)

Summing Up. 1. Love comes first, then follow works. 2. One who is trusting in himself is dishonoring the Christ who died for him. 3. Faith and works are like the two arms a man has, both working together, yet each at times working independently. 4. A genuine Christian cannot help working for his Master. 5. A backslider is one who has quit work.

DR. H. M. HAMILL.

THE SINS OF THE TONGUE.

And the tongue is a fire, a of iniquity:

so is the tongue among our members,
that it defileth the whole body,
and setteth on the course of nature; and it is set on fire of hell. For every kind of

and of things in the is tamed,

and hath been

of mankind:
But the tongue can no

tame;
it is an unruly full of deadly poison.

THE SINS OF THE TONGUE.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS JAMES 3:1-18.

Prayer: Free us, O God, from the tongue of slander, of levity, of social gossip, and of all uncharity. Let no profane or unclean word defile our lips, and teach us and our children after us to hate a lie. Give unto us the firm and steadfast control of speech, and cause our tongues ever to be instruments of worship unto Thee and of love to our fellow-men. Amen.

"Teach me to feel another's woe,
To hide the fault I see;
That mercy I to others show,
That mercy show to me."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: The Scripture lesson, as a part of the Epistle of James, was written at Jerusalem, about A. D. 60, ten years before the destruction of city and temple by the Roman army. James was pastor of the "Mother Church" in that city and the time was one of much luxury and vice without the church and much dissension and hypocrisy within.

Scripture Setting: When to hold one's tongue, Psa. 39:1. The prating fool, Prov. 10:10. A regulated tongue, Eccles. 3:7. The judgment of the tongue, Matt. 12:36. What the tongue is for, Eph. 4:29.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. One's tongue, according to James, if perfectly controlled leads to perfection. 2. It controls the owner or, like bit and bridle, is subject to control. 3. Like a handful of kindling, it can set on fire a whole neighborhood. 4. There are double-tongues, blessing God at church and abusing men in the streets. 5. There are tongues of strife, getting oneself and neighbors into wrangling and hatred.

THE TONGUE A DYNAMO.

Religion of the Tongue. One, after reading the strong and severe words of James as to the power for good or evil of the human tongue, would think at first glance that the case was surely exaggerated or at least, as James exhibits it, an exception to the rule. But the more one studies the sins and weaknesses of himself and his fellows and classifies and foots up the causes and occasions of sin, he will discover that the Apostle has not commended nor condemned the tongue too strongly. It is really a dynamo of good or evil, generating more happiness or pain than all other human instrumentalities. A dynamo gives light, heat and motion, as does the tongue. Men are moved to do the right or the wrong by the power of the tongue. A preacher like Moody with his tongue could turn a hundred thousand men from vice to goodness. Ingersoll with his caustic infidel tongue could blast as many more. In three-score years and ten, what a world of happiness or sorrow a single tongue, set to good or evil, can accomplish! Practical religion is five-fold—a religion of the heart, that loves supremely God and one's neighbors; a religion of the head, that knows the truth as revealed in God's Word; a religion of the hand, that whatsoever it findeth of helpful service to do, does it with all its might; a religion of the foot, that, like the Master, "goes about doing good;" and, last but not least, a religion of the tongue, a never-failing dynamo of pleasure or pain.

A Wise Tongue. Usually a wise tongue is a still tongue, given to a minimum of words and a maximum of thought. Most wise men have been famous for silence. If their speech was silver, their silence was golden. To say just the right thing, at the right time, in the right way, is the mark of a wise tongue, and few there be that have it. Sometimes when one is comforting himself upon what seems to be a wise tongue, thinking to himself that now I am listening to a self-controlled and wise man, there comes a slip of the tongue and the great man falls from the high pedestal. Watch a truly wise man, and he has the proverbial "still tongue."

A Boastful Tongue. So James found in his day. It was the noisy, officious, boastful would-be teachers whom he is after with a sharp stick when he says, "Be not many masters" (or teachers). There were getting into the Jerusalem church certain who aspired to know everything and whose tongues had what John Randolph called a "flux of words and constipation of ideas." They wanted to run things and to set up standards patterned after their own ways of life. How many of us, for instance, in our modern prayer-meetings and Sunday Schools, have had to suffer in mind and body while some good brother (or sister) was boasting of what the Lord had done for him, but especially what he had done for the Lord. The tongue of the boaster is always a silly and irritating thing, and, as "pride goeth before a fall," we are not sorry when the boaster's fall has laid him low in the dust.

The Profane Tongue. Of all evil tongues the tongue of profanity has least excuse for an existence. Yet it has many users, to their shame and confusion be it said. Mere boys, sometimes from reputable Christian homes, are vicious profaners of the name of God. They are not the sons of the dwellers in the slums, but have been reared respectably. How the evil habit is acquired is not easy to explain, one bad user of profanity perhaps leavening the whole lump.

Nothing so degrades a so-called gentleman as a profane tongue, and indeed it is to be doubted if one has a right to be called a gentleman who swears at all. One who defended his habit by saying, "I am a gentleman; I never swear in the presence of ladies," failed to consider that some men detest profanity quite as much as the best of women, and as gentlemen have the right to be free from the presence and speech of the swearing man.

The Gossipy Tongue. Women are generally accredited with gossip, but men are quite as much addicted to the vice. Vice it is, especially in the upper social classes of our American society, and many a heart has been broken and reputation ruined by the gossip's tongue. It grows by what it feeds upon. It begins at first with idle, petty chit-chat about neighbors and friends that means little and hurts little, except as the first step downward. By and by, fed by the evil spirits of revenge and slander and envy, the habit that was silly becomes a cruel and brutal vice, strewing in its path the wrecks of good and honorable names.

At least three of the Presidents of the United States, either in themselves or in their families, were made to suffer worse than death by what was excused and partly palliated as mere gossip. Dr. Barrows, of Chicago, used to liken the gossips—male and female—to "the blue-bottle flies of society," an apt and evil likeness in the world of material filth.

The Tongue of Strife. Here is the "little fire" that kindleth a great matter and sets individuals and nations "by the ear." Many of the great wars of history, among them more than one of our American wars, has been caused by the tongue of strife. The White House itself has echoed the contentions of evil and ambitious politicians who were trying to set two nations at war, as street loafers incite quarrelling curs.

The now almost extinct "code duello" was noted for a hundred years of our republic as a bloody means of silencing what James calls the tongue of venom, likening it to the tiger's claw or the poison-fang of the serpent. Once let the saloon furnish its inspiration to anger and wrath, there will be found innumerable tongues of passion, inflamed by strong drink, to scourge peaceful, law-abiding people. It is not a rash statement that whisky gives inspiration and occasion to nine-tenths of all our strife and bitterness between men and communities.

A Lying Tongue. Last, and meanest in the list of evil tongues, is the tongue of the liar. Dr. H. C. Trumbull, the long-honored editor of the Sunday School Times, wrote a book to show that a lie is never justifiable, no matter what the occasion. It was a good and timely service the writer rendered to the cause of truth. "A lie," says the Bible, "is an abomination to the Lord," and among the objects of Divine hate enumerated in the Old Testament are "lying lips."

No wonder that among decent men, even outside the circle of Christianity, the liar has come to be despised. He deserves contempt heaped upon him. His lying is either to take advantage of another, or in cowardice to shield himself. There are no "white lies"—they are all black, the children of their father the devil.

Recently there appeared a book on child life and training, in which lying by children was excused as the "work of childish imagination, an innocent thing." In a generation, if such foolish and unscriptural teaching obtains, one who "tells the truth and shames the devil" will be the exception and the liar will be the rule.

Bridle and Bit, Helm and Fire. Such are the expressive figures that the Apostle James uses in portraying the tongue. First, the tongue is like the small bit that horsemen put into the mouths of their steeds, by which their big bodies are turned about at the will of the driver. Trifling as the bit appears, it practically rules the mettlesome steed. So the tongue unbridled is like the runaway horse, while the tongue under control is of great and needed service. Next is the figure of the helm of the great ship, which though small and mean in comparison with the ship, directs the pathway and assures the safety of the vessel. Third, James' most striking figure is of a little blaze, easily kindled, which in a brief time becomes a great conflagration. Some of us have known how the tongue on fire with hate and slander has burned its way through entire communities. Perhaps the strongest of the Apostle's figures is that which likens the tongue to the fang and venom of a serpent striking in the dark at a good character and infusing its poison into a home of innocence and happiness. Last but not least is the double tongue, cursing and blessing in alternate motions.

Quiz. 1. Why is James' Epistle called a "practical epistle"? 2. How many different kinds of tongues does it suggest? 3. Of all kinds of tongues, which is the meanest? 4. What kind of tongue is least defensible? 5. Are women the only gossips?

Challenge Text. "If any — offend not in — the same is a — man, and able also to — the whole —." James 3 — (?)

The Gist of It. 1. A little thing can be the instrument of great evil. 2. Childhood is the time to learn control of one's tongue. 3. By God's help one can master his tongue and speak or be silent. 4. A soft answer turneth away wrath. 5. Think thrice before you speak once.

DR. H. M. HAMILL.

For even hereunto were ye called:
because Christ also suffered for us, leaving us an example, that ye should follow his steps:
Who did no

neither was guile found in his mouth: Who,
when he was reviled

not again;
when he

he threatened not; but committed himself to him that judgeth righteously: Who his own self bare our sins in his own body on the

that we, being dead to sins, should live unto righteousness: by whose ye were healed.

For ye were as sheep going astray;
but are now returned unto the

and Bishop of your souls.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS 1 PETER 2:19-25.

Prayer: Thou Thyself, O Christ, art the Way, the Truth and the Life, and Thy perfect example as Son of Man is our pattern. If we fall far short of it, yet lack not in earnest effort, Thou wilt not chide. If sometimes in our ignorance and weakness we wander from the way, constrain us by Thy grace and bring us back to Thee. Amen.

"A heart in every thought renewed,
And full of love Divine;
Perfect, and right, and pure, and good,
A copy, Lord, of Thine!"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Peter, one of the twelve Apostles, wrote two brief Epistles, from the first of which the Scripture passage is taken. The Epistle was written about A. D. 64, shortly before the destruction of Jerusalem. Peter wrote from Babylon, whither he had gone to minister to two million Jews of the dispersion.

Scripture Setting: The sinless Christ, John 8:46. The obedient Christ, John 4:34. The merciful

Christ, Heb. 2:17. The forgiving Christ, Luke 23:34. The Man of sorrows, Isa. 53:3-4.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. The Christian must expect to suffer wrong with patience, for conscience' sake. 2. To suffer for one's own blunders is not Christian suffering. 3. Christ set a sure example of wrong-bearing. 4. Without sin, He suffered all things at the hands of sinners. 5. His one answer to His oppressors was to suffer death for all men.

FOLLOWING OUR GUIDE.

For Conscience' Sake. One of the objects, if not the sole object, of the two Epistles of Peter, is to admonish and encourage Christian Jews everywhere to patiently endure suffering for the sake of Christ. Readers of the Gospels will recall how the impetuous Peter was rebuked by our Lord for foolish speaking, and that Jesus said to him: "I have prayed for thee, Peter, that thy faith may not fail. When thou art cured of thy rashness, then become a strengthener and comforter of thy brethren."

By hard experiences and earnest effort Peter had overcome his grave fault, and now, growing old, he was indeed a helper to the suffering Jews. For their sakes he had crossed the great Syrian desert and made his home among the Jews of the dispersion at Babylon, ministering to their comforts in their afflictions. The sufferings of the Jewish Christians at the time were peculiarly severe, persecution falling upon them both from Jews and Gentiles at once. Their lot was near at all times to martyrdom. Their counsellor, the Apostle, does not attempt to make light of the persecutions, but seeks to turn them into blessings by patient endurance of grief. If you are called to suffer wrongfully, he says, do it "with conscience toward God," letting the peace and comfort of the Heavenly Father fill your souls. Such suffering is "thankworthy."

For Folly's Sake. But if suffering comes upon you, and man oppresses and persecutes you, Peter goes on to say, not because of your religion and your conscience, but by reason of your own folly and blundering, if you take it patiently there is no glory or credit to you from God or man. You are simply paying the inevitable price of your own folly, which all men must pay, whether they will or will not. But when you are doing right before men and God, and are called to suffer for the sake of the right, then is your "patient endurance" accepted with God.

The distinction needs to be made as truly to-day as in the days of Peter. Too often the Christian when called to suffer for his own wrongdoing confuses conditions and charges his suffering upon "Providence" and assumes the role of a martyr for the sake of righteousness. The one whose extravagant living has reduced him to poverty talks of it as though God had swept away his fortune. So the glutton or the breaker of the law of health sometimes charges upon the Almighty the result of his own folly and sinfulness. A mother who in sheer neglect so exposed her child that it died of pneumonia tried to make of it a "Divine providence," and herself a sorely smitten parent.

Christ's Suffering. The one example to all Christians in joy or sorrow, in happiness or affliction, in wealth or poverty, in age or youth, is that of Jesus Christ. Christ suffered not for Himself, but for us. His life, from the cradle to the cross, was a lifelong career of suffering. He suffered in body, in mind, in spirit. There was no depth of suffering He did not fathom. No possible humiliation was spared Him, and no sort of indignity was witholden from Him. He endured the humiliation and helplessness of infancy and childhood for our sake that His example might include every stage of human life. He was homeless and a wanderer on the face of the earth. His countrymen hated Him, taunted Him, sought to take from Him every friend and believer in Him, and at last put Him to death. The twelve men He chose and trained for three years, save possibly one, deserted Him in the saddest hour of His life. The common people to whom He had given love and healing power beyond words turned upon Him at the last and joined the mob that cried "Crucify Him, crucify Him."

After a life of supreme devotion to His countrymen, when choice was given them between His life or that of a murderer and robber, Barabbas was chosen to live. Yet not one word of impatience or resentment escaped His lips or for a moment did His great love and tenderness towards His persecutors relax.

Christ's Sinlessness. Mixed with our own lives at their best is the consciousness and fact of sin. All our days it is a conflict between the good and the evil in us. From our ancestors into our own blood there passes from generation to generation an inheritance of evil, an insistent tendency to wrongdoing. Men prate of childish innocence and of a good or bad "environment," but behind all of their mitigating theories there is born with us a wrong disposition. It is a lifelong war between the spirit and the flesh. Not so with Christ, who, Peter declares, "did no sin, neither was guile found in His mouth." Of all the sons of men, He alone could say, "Satan cometh and findeth nothing in me."

From Bethlehem to Calvary there was no stain of sin upon this "Perfect Pattern" of human life. That we, too, may be perfected (though never attaining His perfection) He has promised unto us as His disciples. Step by step as we follow Him closely, we are more and more transformed into His likeness by the power of His grace. Joy not sinless ourselves, let it be our highest joy that we have a sinless Saviour.

Christ's Patience. Peter adds another golden link to the chain of Christ's virtues when he says of Him: "When He was reviled, He reviled not again; when He suffered (or was made to suffer), He threatened not; but committed Himself to Him that judgeth righteously"—a perfect patience marked our Pattern. Such patience as He had is infinitely beyond us, but there comes to every earnest soul who makes Christ his example a quality of patience that has no counterpart among those who know not Christ. But it comes through suffering, often as the ripe fruit of prolonged affliction.

The word patience denotes suffering. It comes from a Latin verb, "patior," which means "I suffer," and no true Christian patience comes otherwise than through and by suffering. Some people pride themselves upon their patience who do not know its first principles. There are some who think little, care little, feel little and can suffer little because of a natural lack of sensibility. Let these not mistake mere physical good nature for the Divine patience of Jesus Christ or of His human imitators.

Christ's Death. "Who His own self bare our sins in His own body on the tree, that we, being dead to sin, should live unto righteousness; by whose stripes ye are healed." So the Apostle sets before us the supreme event in the life of our Lord. Note the simple, strong, clear statement of how "Christ paid the debt of sin we owe."

There are those nowadays, even in Christian pulpits, who are trying to pluck from the cross of Christ this the most priceless jewel—His death for sinners. He died, they say, not that His blood should atone for the race, but as a noble example of patience and loyalty to His convictions. First they try to take away His immaculate birth as Son of a virgin mother; then they rob the cross of its atoning purpose and power and do despite to the blood of the Son of man. Shame upon them for it!

Christ the Shepherd. The last picture Peter paints of Christ he must have borrowed in part from our Lord's noble words of Himself in the Gospel of John, in which he says over and over, "I am the Good Shepherd," "I know my sheep," "I call them by name," "The Good Shepherd giveth his life for the sheep." Or possibly Peter, as student of the Psalms of David, had in mind that ever-beautiful "Shepherd psalm" beginning, "The Lord is my Shepherd; He maketh me to lie down in green pastures; He leadeth me beside the still waters."

Here too we His followers may imitate His example. Some of us are pastors, which means shepherds and feeders. Like Christ, we can know and lead, and love, and, if need be, die for our sheep. Some of us are Sunday School teachers, and we can shepherd our boys and girls and guide them into lives of Christian usefulness. Some of us have "other sheep" that are not of our church or Sunday-School fold. We can go out after them and bring them home rejoicing, to Christ.

Quiz. 1. Is all our suffering from God? 2. Why do men so often charge their own wrong-doing to Providence? 3. What virtues does the life of Christ set before us as a pattern? 4. In what way is Christ's death an example? 5. Why ought we to emphasize Christ's death as an offering for our sins?

Challenge Text. Who did no —, neither was — found in His mouth; who when He was reviled, — not again." 1 Peter 2: (?)

The Personal Word. 1. When wrongfully treated, in what way can you follow Christ's example? 2. When one suffers wrong patiently for Christ's sake, what is his reward? 3. What does Peter say as to Christ's death? 4. Why is the death of Christ on the cross of infinite value to us?

DR. H. M. HAMILL.

And beside this, giving all diligence, add to your virtue;

and to virtue

And to knowledge

and to temperance

and to patience godliness; And to godliness

and to brotherly kindness

For if these things be in you, and abound, they make you that ye shall neither be barren nor unfruitful in the knowledge of our Lord Jesus Christ.

II PETER I: 5-8.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS II PETER 1:1-11.

Prayer: Whatever we are or have, O God, is Thy gift. Whatever grace of character has come to us is of Thy bestowing. If we have faith as a foundation, Thy word doth declare that it is Thy gift. If, step by step, we climb to purer heights of Christian living, it is Thy gracious Spirit who leadeth the way. Bestow Thy gifts and graces in such measure that our lives may abound unto all fruitfulness in the knowledge of Jesus Christ. Amen.

“Onward, ever onward,
Journeying o’er the road
Worn by saints before us,
On their way to God;
Leaving all behind us,
May we hasten on,
Backward never looking Till the prize is won.”

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: The Apostle Peter probably wrote his second Epistle, from which this passage is taken, at Babylon, about the year 66 or 67 A. D., just before his martyrdom at Rome.

Scripture Setting: Faith comes by God’s Word, Rom. 10:17. Love comes from the Holy Spirit, Rom. 5:5. We are led by the Spirit from grace to grace, Rom. 8:14. Till we come unto a perfect man, Eph. 4:13. Christ our example, John 13:15.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Peter’s own triumph over himself is our encouragement to like victory. 2. The Bible abounds in “precious promises” to help us grow. 3. Faith is God’s gift as our working capital, but we add other graces by our own effort. 4. Christian growth is along all lines at once, and is not “lop-sided.” 5. With Christ as our pattern and His grace to help us, there is no limit to our growth.

THE CHAIN OF CHRISTIAN GRACES.

Simon Peter. Our Lord had called him “Petros,” the rock, and he had lived to make good the title. He had been impetuous, rash, and had offended again and again in these qualities to the point of severe rebuke by his Master, who had said to him: “I have prayed for thee, that thy faith fail not; when thou art turned from thy fault, strengthen the brethren.”

After Peter’s fall, at the time our Lord was on trial, Peter entered upon a new and better life. His old faults dropped away from him as the burden of leadership in the company of the Apostles came upon him. His courage and self-control rang clear, and his counsel was authoritative during the storm and stress of the Apostolic church.

During the severe persecutions he journeyed to Babylon, the home of very many dispersed Jews, and ministered to them and there wrote his Epistles. The old corrupting Gnostic theory, that evil resides only in matter and not in spirit, and the general laxity of religion and fear of persecution among the Jews, led him to write these brave, strong letters to all Jewish Christians. He was near to death as a martyr, but he had won the title of the “Rock” and “Strengthened” of the church.

“Precious Promises.” Peter begins his second Epistle by introducing himself as a “servant and Apostle of Jesus Christ,” as Paul had professed himself to be both “bond slave” and Apostle. He looks backward over the Gospels (part of which had been written a generation earlier, and copies of all but John’s being now among the churches) and he recalls how truly Jesus Christ had taught all things that pertain unto life and godliness. He saw that the story of Christ’s wonderful ministry was sprinkled with the “exceeding great and precious promises” which Christ Himself had made to His people, and he sets forth the remembrance of these promises as a foundation for and incitement to the Christian progress of His Gentile-Christian readers. What were these promises? They were the same that preachers in modern pulpits put forth in Christ’s name to convert and comfort sinners and to build up weak Christians into vigor of life and service.

One of these precious promises, for instance, was “Come unto Me all ye that labor and are heavy laden and I will give you rest.” Another was that “Whosoever believeth in Him shall not perish but have everlasting life.” Another was, “If ye abide in Me, and My words abide in you, ye shall ask what ye will and it shall be done unto you.” Throughout the Gospels these precious promises glitter like stars of hope and assurance to all who are striving for Christian progress.

Faith the Foundation. Faith is the rock on which the Christian life must be built; the precursor to all Christian growth; the pledge of all Christian progress. “Without faith it is impossible to please God.” According to one’s faith, both in quality and quantity, will progress be attained. It is a comfort to know that to every human creature God gives enough of faith to enable the possessor to enter upon the Christian life. When this initial gift of saving faith is put into practice and exercised in ways of Christian devotion and service the faith given at the beginning grows and continues to grow until it may come to be an all-conquering faith that removes mountains and laughs at difficulties. It is a simple, sheer trust in God through the shed blood of Jesus Christ; a faith that takes God at His word against all appearances to the contrary, and obeys Him if need be even to the death. It is faith both of head and heart; both of reason and feeling; always and everywhere full of courage and holy self-sacrifice.

Virtue and Knowledge. Upon the foundation of a living, vitalizing faith in God and Christ and the Holy Spirit, one is to enter upon Christian progress by adding "virtue" to faith. The word virtue has its own Scriptural meaning, which is courage. Not physical but moral and spiritual courage is meant, though physical courage is often essential to success in Christian endeavor. It takes much courage of body as well as of soul to suffer and to die as a martyr for Christ, but it takes more courage to live for Him. Faith would be like a dead, useless capital in the hands of one who had not the courage to hazard and invest and use and multiply it.

But courage is often rash and impetuous and unguarded, as in the case of Peter himself who had large faith and much courage, which, unbridled and misdirected, came near making shipwreck of his faith. Therefore, says Peter (doubtless in part confirmed by his own bitter experience,) to your faith and courage add knowledge of God, of truth, of one's duty, to the end that when one has faith to believe, and courage to undertake, he may also have knowledge to direct his Christian progress.

Temperance and Patience. With faith in God and Christ, with courage to do and dare for the Kingdom and the church, with knowledge of one's duty as a guide to growth, there comes the added need of temperance or self-control, lest knowledge beget conceit and self-indulgence. Temperance, in the Bible, means the control by one's will of all desires and passions and deeds. Not the constraint of food or drink only, as is too often taught and preached, but a steadfast, even control and balance of all one's powers for good or evil—self-mastery, in short. Bible temperance applies as much to one's speech or other habits of body or mind, as to drinking intoxicating liquors. Too often the partisans of temperance in drink are themselves intemperate in their words.

After temperance, but along with it, is made necessary the grace of patience. One who is temperate in all things tends to become pharisaic and intolerant of others who lack self-mastery. Asceticism is given by a noted writer as a peril which often entraps the temperate man. One who has suffered in self-denying discipline needs to add to the other graces that of patient endurance of the imperfections of his fellows.

Godliness and Brotherly Kindness. He who has learned well in the school of patience the lessons of Christian progress has by that fact drawn near to godlikeness, or godliness, which Peter would have us add to our patience. God is eternally and perfectly patient. It was said of Jesus Christ by Isaiah that He would be as a sheep before His shearers, dumb, and opening not His mouth, and when our Lord came in the flesh, men had perfect confirmation of the prophesy in the serene and infinite patience with which Jesus met the persecutions of His enemies even unto the cross.

It behooved Him, the God-Man, to exhibit the perfect union of patience with godliness, as we must, by His grace, endeavor to follow. Then we will need to learn that true godliness—God-like-ness—means a religion filled and running over with the one choicest fruit of brotherly love. Any other godliness which keeps itself aloof from the world and seeks not to flow out in active love for others is an austere "sour godliness," which repels rather than attracts.

Charity. The last and crowning element in Christian progress is charity, or spiritual love to all men, saints and sinners, rich and poor, great and small, bond or free, learned or ignorant. It is the world-wide catholic and cosmopolitan grace that only the religion of Jesus Christ can impart.

Pantheism teaches that everything is God, man or brute or tree or stream. God is so widely diffused throughout creation, material and immaterial, that there can be no personal God. Buddhism holds that human beings are completely absorbed into God and become "nirvana," or nonentity. Christianity teaches that "God is love," that the Divine principle and motive of an all-conquering love for all men is so implanted in us by the Spirit of God—"the love of God shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost"—that we become more and more like unto God in spirit and life, and thereby and therewith draw all men unto God and His most holy religion.

Quiz. 1. Why does Peter call himself a "servant"? 2. What growth in grace did his own life illustrate? 3. Why is faith the starting-point of the Christian life? 4. What is the Bible idea of temperance? 5. What is the crowning grace of Christian progress? Why is it so?

Challenge Text. "For so an — shall be ministered unto — abundantly into the — — of our Lord and Saviour — —." 2 Peter 1: (?)

The Heart Word. Do not look at the end of the Christian life; take the step, do the duty, that is nearest to you. Do not try to begin with faith, then after a time seek to add virtue, and a little later add also knowledge, and so on. Cultivate all graces together, not one at a time. Try to be faithful, bold, knowing, temperate, patient, all at once. Strike every key of the Christ-chord at a stroke. Use the whole chain together, not separate links one at a time.

DR. H. M. HAMILL.

If we say that we have

with him,
and we lie,

and do not the truth:
But
if we

as he is in the light, we have fellowship one with another,
and the blood of Jesus Christ his Son cleanseth us from all

If we say that we have no sin, we deceive ourselves,
and the

is not in us. If we confess our sins, he is faithful and just to forgive us our sins, and to us from all unrighteousness.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS I JOHN 1:5-2:6.

Prayer: Deliver us, O Lord, from the ancient snare of Satan—that one can be a disciple of light yet dwell in darkness. Where Thou art there is no darkness, and Thy saints, like Thee, are dwellers in the light of truth and righteousness. Amen.

“Sun of my soul, Thou Saviour dear,
It is not night if Thou be near:
O may no earthborn cloud arise
To hide Thee from Thy servant’s eyes.”

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: The passage under study is from John’s chief Epistle, written to the church at Ephesus, about A. D. 80, during the time of John’s pastorate over that renowned city of Asia Minor.

Scripture Setting: Christ is the light of the world, John 1:4. Christians are the reflected light, Matt. 5:14. Christ’s disciples shall have the “light of life,” John 8:12. How to escape the darkness, Isa. 50:10. From darkness to light, John 9:25.

Life and Conduct Setting: The tests of the Christian life are set forth in this passage as follows:

1. God is all light, and fellowship with Him excludes all darkness.
2. If we are in fellowship with God we have true fellowship with one another as Christians.
3. When we are in sin we know it, and if we deny our sin we deceive ourselves.
4. Jesus Christ is the Advocate before the Father for sinners.
5. If we keep Christ’s commandments we may thereby be assured of our salvation.

HOW TO SEE OURSELVES.

The Christian’s Lighthouse. One who has sailed on the sea or along the great lakes will understand and appreciate the figure of the lighthouse as applied to our Lord Jesus Christ. He is “the Light that lighteth every man that cometh into the world.” Heathen religions have set up other lighthouses along the great and perilous sea of human life, but Jesus shines on when all pagan lights have gone out. One at sea on a dark and stormy night, filled with fear of the hidden rocks, has his heart wonderfully warmed and cheered as there flashes out of the thick darkness a great piercing light that both warns and comforts. Sleep and peace and quietness of soul come to the fearful traveller as he looks out of the window of his ship at the friendly light that signals safety across the storm-tossed waters.

The Light of the World. Children love to sing a song the refrain to which is, “The light of the world is Jesus.” So says John in the passage we study—“God is light, and in Him is no darkness at all.” He needs no sun or moon or stars to light His glorious and ever-shining way, and when Jesus came to earth as His only begotten Son, He brought His Father’s light in all its brightness.

How is Jesus the Light of the world? There are many answers. First, He opens the Scriptures to us and makes plain many hard things in the Bible concerning our happiness here and hereafter. He has told us how to live, what to believe, how God loves us, and how we can make our way to Heaven. He has lifted the curtain and shown us much of the life to come. He has given us commandments that will bring peace and joy and success to us if we keep them faithfully. He has broken the power of death and made us to know that death is but a gateway into an everlasting life of happiness or sorrow, and He has promised to help us to gain the one and to be saved from the other.

False Teachers. Others, claiming to be leaders and saviours of men, have set themselves up as teachers of the world. In the days of John the Apostle, who wrote much of Jesus as the Light, there were those who taught doctrines full of danger and of such a seductive kind as to tempt many to their ruin. Very many professing Christians were being swept away from lives of purity and loyalty to Christ. These teachers—known as “Gnostics”—taught especially that there could be a perfect purity of soul in the midst of the most abominable practices; that there could be in the same person both sanctity of life and depravity of conduct.

They held that one, in fact, might be an outrageous violator of the law, yet a pure and holy saint. Their contention was that sin was in the body or flesh, not in heart or spirit, and that if one had mental knowledge of God he could abandon his body to any sort of vice and licentiousness. At the bottom of their teaching was the ancient heathen doctrine so corrupting to the old world that sin is in the material body, and not in the mind and spirit of men. Sin being of the body only, they claimed that what the body did was not to be considered as a sin of one’s will.

John the Defender. John was the beloved disciple, the youngest of the Twelve, a cousin to Jesus, the “Son of thunder,” as Jesus called him. He was the only Apostle who had dared to stand with our Lord’s mother beneath the cross, as he had dared to enter the high priest’s judgment hall. He outlived all others of the Twelve and died at the end of the first century, near to a hundred years old. In this time of great heresy it fell to him to defend the Gospel of his Lord against evil and seducing Gnostics. They taught "purity in sin"; John taught "purity from sin" through faith in Christ.

Paul had repeatedly warned Christians against the incoming of this corrupting doctrine, and no one could have been an abler or braver defender of the truth than John, "the disciple whom Jesus loved." Read the entire "First Epistle" written by him as a defense of Christianity, and see how sharply and plainly he denounces the Gnostic doctrine, that one may be rioting in bodily sin yet say, "I have committed no sin of mind, therefore I have not sinned."

John's Defense. How did John go about overthrowing this old corrupting heresy and setting Christian believers upon the foundation which Christ had laid? To get a better idea of the deadly teaching that threatened to ruin the church, a passage from Irenæus, one of the "fathers" of Christianity, concerning the Gnostics is given: "They, the Gnostics," he says, "say that we must do good works in order to be saved; but they will be saved, not by practice, but because they are spiritual by nature, and thus as gold though mingled with mire does not lose its beauty, so they themselves, though wallowing in the mire of carnal works, do not lose their own spiritual essence."

John threw himself, as last of the Apostles, into the battle against error. He uses the plainest words, and does not spare the heretics. There is no mawkish sentimentality in his defense of his Master against the destructives of his day. First, he sets forth God as "all light," and that those who pretend to fellowship with God cannot mix darkness and light in His name. Next he challenges their pretension that they have not sinned, though professing the contrary, and that only the blood of Christ can cleanse both heart and body alike. Lastly, he shows that while professing to be followers of Christ they wilfully and shamefully break His commandments, and that "the truth is not in them."

The Cleansing Blood. John puts his emphasis upon this foundation doctrine of Christianity—that only the blood of Jesus Christ can cleanse and keep one clean from sin. His opposers professed to need no cleansing. They taught—as Irenæus said of them—that they needed no practice in righteousness but were spiritual by nature.

The cross and the shed blood of Christ were nothing to men who counted themselves pure by nature, yet who were defiling themselves with all abominations daily. John set forth a real purity, a genuine cleansing from all unrighteousness, whether of body or spirit, by the blood of Jesus Christ. This was the only remedy for sin, the only possible cleansing. "The Spirit of God, through Christ's real blood, produces a holiness the absolute opposite of all sinful practice, the center of which holiness is love, a Divine love making us one with a perfectly pure God, and ourselves pure both in body and soul."

Christ Our Advocate. John sets forth a great and comforting doctrine for all Christians when he says, "We have an Advocate with the Father, Jesus Christ the righteous." An "advocate" is an attorney; one who pleads in our behalf. So Jesus in the court of Heaven, before the Father Almighty, pleads for us.

As sinners we are on trial before God and the trial lasts as long as life itself, because throughout life there is, to the best of Christians, something of mercy to be pleaded for and of forgiveness. No one can say the Lord's Prayer without a sense of his daily need for pardon and his further need that Christ who is one in person with God, and man—the God-Man—shall become his Advocate day by day before the bar of Heaven's Court.

Christ, the sinless One, has no transgression of His own, and of all the sons of men He alone can stand in the presence of God His Father and make intercession for us. Do we realize that each day of our lives this Mighty Attorney-at-Law with never-failing power has our case upon His heart and tongue pleading for us?

The Final Test. Whether we are walking in the light or in the darkness of sin, is made very plain and simple to us by the final test which John gives in concluding this passage from his First Epistle. It is so simple that a child ought to understand it without comment: "Hereby we do know that we know Him" (Christ the Saviour), "if we keep His commandments. He that saith, I know Him, and keepeth not His commandments is a liar, and the truth is not in him."

The word "Gnostic," as applied to the false and corrupt teachers against whom John was contending, means one who "knows." John again and again turns their own name in shame upon them and tells them how they may really know that they know Him—and this only when they keep His commandments. So Christ Himself had said fifty years before. John reaffirmed it. "If you love Me," said Jesus, "you will keep My commandments." We may profess our love for Him; we may join His church and be baptized with His baptism, but if we do not obey Him our religion is in vain.

Quiz: 1. What dangerous doctrine was held by the Gnostics? 2. Why was John the most proper person to oppose them? 3. What does John say about "darkness?" 4. In what sense is Christ our Advocate? 5. By what simple test may we know that we are walking in the light?

Challenge Text: He that saith he is in the —, and — his brother, is in — even until now. 1 John 2: (8)

The Last Word: 1. Have we anything like the doctrine of the Gnostics today? 2. In what ways is Christ a light unto men? 3. If Christ is our Advocate before God, by what right can a priest assume to take His place?

DR. H. M. HAMILL.

PERFECT LOVE.

Beloved, let us

one another
for

is of God; and every one that is born of God, and knoweth

God. He that

not knoweth
not God;
for

In this was manifested
the

of God toward us, because that God
sent his only begotten Son into the world, that we might live through him. Herein is not that we

God, but
that
he

us, and sent his Son to be the propitiation for our sins.

I JOHN IV: 7-10.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS I JOHN 4:7-16.

Prayer: Thy love, O God, has been the joy and comfort of our lives. Shed abroad in our hearts by the Holy Ghost, that love, in Christ, has banished darkness and doubt and filled the troubled heart with peace. We thank Thee for that love that reached down from Heaven to us in our unworthiness. Help us to love in return with all our heart and soul and mind, for Jesus' sake. Amen.

"Teach us to love each other, Lord,
As we are loved by Thee;
None who are truly born of God
Can live in enmity.
Heirs of the same immortal bliss,
Our hopes and fears the same,
With bonds of love our hearts unite,
With mutual love inflame."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Written about A. D. 80, by John, last of the Apostles, in his controversy against the "Gnostics," the most dangerous perverters of Christianity in the first century A. D.

Scripture Setting: Love greatest of all, 1 Cor. 13:13. Thinketh no evil, 1 Cor. 13:5. Covereth all sins, Prov. 10:12. Love is unmixed with fear, 1 John 4:18. Love is the sum of all commandments, Mark 12:28-31.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. One who loves God

THE GREATEST THING IN THE WORLD.

Amor Omnia Vincit. This is a truer proverb than the one that reads, "Labor omnia vincit," which declares that labor conquers all things. Stronger than labor is love, which is the only power in earth or Heaven that can overcome all things. Henry Drummond, Mr. Moody's friend, the one he thought "the purest and best man he ever knew," wrote a beautiful little book, entitled, "The greatest thing in the world." He began by saying that if one should go as a missionary, to Africa, for instance, there would be years of waiting and hard study before the missionary could tell of Christ in the tongue of the natives. All culture and learning and books would fail him for a time. "But," said Drummond, "from the moment you land on the shore of the Dark Continent the Divine love in your heart will shine out of your eyes and ooze from the tip of your fingers, so that the most ignorant African will begin at once to know and understand in part your message of love."

Love like this, it needs to be said, is not the kind that poets sing of and painters put in winsome faces upon canvas. It is not mother love, the most sacred of merely human kind, nor father love which is quite as good, nor love of brother and sister or of husband and wife. It is these, but vastly more than these, because they are begotten in earth and belong to this life only; while the love that the Apostle John is describing for us is born in Heaven and is the gift of God Himself to man. It is part of Himself, for "God is love."

"God Is Love." It was reserved for the one who as youngest of the Twelve pillowed his head on our Lord's breast and was known as "that disciple whom Jesus loved" to be will also love his neighbor as a result of it. 2. The converse is also true—that one who truly loves his neighbor will also be found loving God. 3. God's love is infinite, and is our pattern in that He loved us as aliens and enemies. 4. God's love is implanted in our hearts by the Holy Spirit when we become Christians. 5. One whose love is perfected has neither fear nor distrust toward God or his neighbor.

the author of this noblest of all word portraits of the invisible God. Coming near to the end of the Bible, it sums up in three short words the character of the Almighty Father. It is more than saying that God is our "Father," for fatherhood in human experience is sometimes generous and just but not strongly characterized by love. It ought to sweep away from the minds of many men that God is an austere Being, enclosing in His hand the sword of justice, intent upon vindicating His power and authority, and sitting high in the heavens apart from His creatures.

Not of their own fault, many poor souls have come up from their mistaught or untaught childhood to think only of a God to be feared and propitiated by our human suffering. So the Indians torture themselves to please God. So the "flagellants" of the dark ages lashed themselves into streaming blood to win the favor of their God. Not so with the picture painted by the beloved disciple. And very far from the truth is it, as Jesus Himself declared when He said: "For God so loved the world that He gave His only begotten Son" to die for it.

God's Son. As this is being written the writer can look out of his window and see the ripple and sparkle of another Christmas, as it fills the hearts of the children with great delight and makes tender and forgiving the hearts of the old. It is only one of the signs that Christ, God's Son, has been given to this old world and as the generations go by, is filling the world with peace and good will.

God is a Spirit, invisible, whom no human eye can behold. We can worship Him in spirit and in truth, but at our best we cannot comprehend Him because He is beyond our finite minds. But when God would reveal His love to the sons of men, because they could not understand His words, He sent His only begotten Son, Jesus Christ, that in Him and His works and words we might know God.

Instead of sending us a written message to tell us how He loved us or dispatching a mighty angel like Gabriel to bring us word of His love, He sent the one "brightest and best of the sons of the morning," the Crown Prince of Heaven, above all angels and heavenly dignitaries, His Divine Son, Jesus Christ.

Christ's Love. The story of Christ never grows old nor loses its charm. He came as a helpless baby, in poverty and loneliness, that He might take full part in human sorrow and want. He gave His life in holy ministry to the poor, the sick, the oppressed in body and spirit. He was untiring in healing the suffering and in comforting and instructing the common people who most needed it. There is not a record of His ever turning away unanswered one who came to Him for healing or help. He fed the hungry, He opened the eyes of the blind and unsealed the ears of the deaf, and loosened the tongue of the dumb. He cast out evil spirits and cleansed the leper and raised the dead. "His miracles were parables and His parables miracles." At last, he gave the supreme proof of His love by dying upon the cross for the sins of the world, His executioners being those to whom He had especially shown His love. There was no other, and is "none other name under Heaven whereby we must be saved."

"Jesus paid it all,

All to Him I owe;

Sin had left a crimson stain,

He washed it white as snow."

Loving One Another. When nearing the end, with the shadow of the cross upon Him, Christ said to the Twelve: "A new commandment I give unto you that ye love one another." In the upper room, the night before He died, He also said: "This is my commandment, That ye love one another, as I have loved you." John, in the study before us, admonishes us that if "God so loved us, we ought also to love one another." As an encouragement and stimulus to our growth in grace, He further says, "If we love one another, God dwelleth in us, and His love is perfected in us."

One of John's hard sayings that cut like a knife, but needs to be severe and plain is this: "If a man say, I love God, and hateth his brother, he is a liar; for he that loveth not his brother whom he hath seen, how can he love God whom he hath not seen?" Even so, sometimes if the reader of these lines be troubled himself, or has a friend in trouble over whether he is a true Christian or not, let him apply this simple, sure test of John's Epistle: "Do I love my neighbor? If I do truly love him, then I know that I love God, and that I am a Christian."

Confessing Christ. John's definition of Divine love is in these words: "Herein is love, not that we loved God, but that He loved us, and sent His Son to be the propitiation for our sins." Our love to God means infinitely much to us, but it is God's own pure and changeless and eternal love to us that is the standard and definition of what love really is. After pointing back to that cross on Calvary whereon the Son of God did die, with John himself as witness, the Apostle says further: "Whosoever shall confess that Jesus is the Son of God, God dwelleth in him, and he in God."

Here is another test of whether one is a Christian — the confessing of Christ as one's Divine and personal Saviour. Mark those italics. It is not enough to have a merely intellectual belief that Jesus is Son of God. One may believe every word literally which the Bible contains, yet be damned. To confess Christ truly is to take Him into one's loving heart as a Saviour from sin, to trust Him wholly as the Divine Son of God, to make Him one's King and Master, as Paul says, "Whose I am, and whom I serve," and to take up his own cross, denying himself, and following Christ to the end of his days. That is confession.

Love without Fear. Most of us love, but most of us fear. We are strange in our religion, stranger than in other matters of life. A son or a daughter in the home who had the habit of loving father or mother one day and drawing back in distrust the next day would be a strange child. Yet a boy said not long ago to the writer: "I trust my mother fully with all my heart, but it's different with papa." The difference was this—with the mother the boy's trust and love was "with all his heart." With his father it was love and fear or distrust comingling.

So it is with us in our relation with the Heavenly Father. We have "torment," as John says, because our love and trust are not perfect towards Him.

Quiz: 1. What is John's definition of God? 2. What does he say as to our neighbors? 3. How did God show His love to men? 4. How did Christ show His love to us? 5. How may we best show our love to God and Christ?

Challenge Text: There is no fear in —, but perfect — casteth out —; because fear hath —. He that — is not made perfect in —. 1 John 4: (?)

The Personal Word. Do you love God? How would you prove that you love Him? Would it be proof by word or deed? How much do you love Jesus Christ? Do you love Him enough to obey His commandments? Would you like to learn to love Him perfectly with your whole heart? Will you ask Him to help you do this?

DR. H. M. HAMILL.

And I turned to see the voice that spake with me. And being turned, I saw seven golden

And in the midst of the seven candlesticks one like unto the Son of man, clothed with a down to the foot, and girt

about the paps with a golden

His head
and his hairs were white like

as white as

and
his eyes were as a flame of

And
his

like unto fine brass, as if they burned in a

and
his voice
as the sound
of many

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS REVELATION 1:9-20.

Prayer: Not in glorious vision do we behold Thee here, O Lord, but by Thy grace we trust to come at last into Thy presence with great joy and thankfulness. Cleanse us and perfect us and make us worthy to stand before Thee among Thy blood-bought saints. Amen.

"O Master, it is good to be
Entranced, enwrapped, alone with Thee;
And watch Thy glistening raiment glow
Whiter than Hermon's whitest snow;
The human lineaments that shine
Irradiant with a light Divine;
Till we, too, change from grace to grace,
Gazing on that transfigured face."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: John, the writer of Revelation, was the last surviving member of the Twelve. During the reign of the Roman emperor Domitian, he was sent into exile, about the year A. D. 95, probably between the 12th and 14th year of the reign. The place of his exile was the island Patmos, about 100 miles southwest of Ephesus, the apostolic home of John.

Scripture Setting. Christ, the image of God. Col. 1:15. Christ the Lord of lords. Rev. 17:14. Our Great High Priest. Heb. 6:20. Christ equal to the Father. John 10:30, 38. Head of the Church. Eph. 1:22. Saints shall behold Him in Heaven. John 17:24. The final Judge of all men. Rom. 14:11.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Like John, the vision of Christ comes to us in the midst of affliction. 2. Christ will ever be found "walking in the midst" of His churches. 3. Even the holiest of men are abashed before the supernatural. 4. Though the vision of the glorified Saviour be seen by the few, all of us may have Him in our hearts. 5. Christ is pledged to be with us even to the end of the world.

"TILL I COME."

The Aged John. After the crucifixion of our Lord, John made Jerusalem his home, going from it on missionary tours into Syria. When Paul returned to the Jerusalem council, A. D. 50, after his first tour into Asia Minor, he found John as one of the "pillars" of the "Mother Church" of the city. Probably upon the death of Paul, John went to Ephesus as an overseer of the growing churches planted by Paul in Asia Minor. His later years, according to all traditions, were spent in Ephesus and Asia Minor, from whence he wrote his Epistles as he had already written his Gospel. Ephesus was the dual Asiatic centre of both paganism and Christianity, and it became the mother of many renowned Christian preachers, leaders and scholars, John being its resident Apostle and the last link between the Twelve and their successors, the Church Fathers. When about ninety years of age or more Domitian banished him to the isle of Patmos, where he was permitted once more face to face to look upon his Lord and to receive His message to the Asiatic churches of which John had the oversight.

Remembering how Jesus more than three-score years before had said on the shore of the Sea of Galilee to the inquisitive Peter, "What is it to thee if he (John) tarry till I come?", there will appear both pathos and significance in this Patmos vision by John of the glorified Saviour. Sixty years had passed between the promise and the coming.

Persecution. Shortly after the death of Christ the fires of persecution began to burn, lighted first by the Jews and later by pagans. The death of James marked the first great persecution begun by Herod. Later came Nero to the Roman throne, and the fiercest of all persecutions was enacted by him, tens of thousands of men and women being put to the most violent and shameful deaths by this monster of cruelty. Among the victims were Peter and Paul, who suffered death about 66 A. D. Again under Vespasian, emperor of Rome, persecution set in, including both Jew and Christian, and the temple and city of Jerusalem were destroyed by Roman armies.

In A. D. 95, or near to that time, the Emperor Domitian surpassed in some respects all previous persecutions, and under this ruler John was exiled to Patmos. The more the persecutions the greater became the strength and spiritual power of the church, the blood of the martyrs "becoming truly the seed of the church." The causes of the ten imperial persecutions that marked the first three Christian centuries were the greed of priests and the sheer hatred of vile men for the pure morality of Christ.

Patmos. The "isle called Patmos" was a great rock jutting out of the southern end of the Ægean Sea, lying southwest of the port Miletus in Asia Minor, a distance of perhaps sixty or more miles from that harbor. Then and now it is marked by desolation and loneliness. How long John was an exile, or who sent him there, is not surely known, but the general opinion from an early age has been that he was a victim of the wrath of Emperor Domitian.

In modern times there has been erected by the Catholic Church a fine group of buildings on the highest part of the rock, near the center of the island, known as the "Apocalyptic Monastery of St. John." A grotto is shown where it is claimed John dwelt when he saw the Saviour.

"The Lord's Day." A parallel phrase to the "Lord's Supper," as given in 1 Cor. 11:20, indicating that both institutions were founded by our Lord. Beginning with the morning of the resurrection of Christ, His church has named as its Sabbath the day on which He rose from the dead, in commemoration of that mighty and crucial event, and because the old order of Judaism had been replaced by the new order of Christianity, and this change was divinely ordered as one of the signs of that transition.

The early church historian, Eusebius, wrote: "Christ translated and transferred the feast of the Sabbath to . . . the Lord's day, the first day of the light in which the Saviour obtained the victory over death."

The Vision. While John was "in the Spirit," that is, under supernatural influence of the Holy Spirit, there came first the voice of an angel bidding him write. The angel was no more than herald to the Lord, who later revealed Himself to the eyes of the Apostle. John first saw the seven golden candlesticks, symbolizing the seven chief churches of Asia Minor; then in the midst of the candlesticks he saw one "like unto the Son of Man"—Jesus Christ, the risen and glorified Saviour.

His wonderful appearance John describes, but the reader will better understand the vision in its completeness if the mental picture given as a summary by a great Bible student is here presented. He says: "Let us form a mental picture of the Personality described. Before the eyes of John stands a colossal figure, robed entirely in white, His face and feet alone bare; the former of sunlike splendor, the latter of a white-heat brilliancy. Locks of snowy whiteness crown His head; He speaks, and His words flash like a double-edged sword from His mouth, and His voice resounds through space like many waters. He extends His arm, and on His palm is resting a circle of seven stars, and He walks majestically between the two rows of lamps blazing upon their stands."

Seeing the vision, John fell as one dead, until aroused by touch and voice of his Lord, who says to him: "Fear not; I am the first and the last and the living One. I became dead, but lo! I shall live forevermore, and I hold the keys of death and hell." Then John is bidden to write whatever words or message shall be spoken to him, the symbols used in the vision being first made plain to him.

The Seven Candlesticks. The "mystery" of these symbols was given as follows: The seven stars in the palm of the outstretched hand of Christ were the angels of the seven churches, to each of whom John would be given a message of warning or comfort.

The seven golden candlesticks were the seven churches of Asia to whom the several messages must go. There is no question among Bible students as to the symbolism of the golden candlesticks. That they were seven in number does not mean that only seven Christian churches had been planted in Asia, but that the scriptural symbol of completeness, the number seven, stood for whatever number there were.

The candlesticks were really lamps, with oil and wick, probably like those in the temple with three lamps of gold on either side of a central lamp and pillar, to which the seven were attached. The lamp symbolized a church; the oil, God's grace; and the flame the light of the church to the world spiritually. The vision of Christ walking in the midst of the lamps signified that He is the head of the church whether in its organic unity and entirety or over the individual and local church.

The Seven Stars. The stars in the hand of the vision were symbolic of the "angels" of the seven churches of Asia, but opinion has widely varied among Bible students as to the meaning of the term "angels." One opinion is that the seven angels were a "collective body of rulers" of these churches, which has little foundation. Another, that they were seven "messengers" sent from the churches and present with John, is incredible.

The better and more commonly received opinion is that the angels represented by the seven stars were ministers set over them severally, just as the pastors of modern churches are the spiritual guides and "overseers" of their respective charges. "Such were appointed, from a need of the times, as a stronghold against heresies and as authentic preservers of the apostolic doctrines and of the sacred New Testament canon." To these administrators of church government and maintainers of orthodoxy the messages committed to the Apostle would most fittingly fall.

Quiz: 1. Why was John an exile on the isle of Patmos? 2. How did persecution affect the apostolic church? 3. What vision did John see on Patmos? 4. What did the Saviour say to John? 5. What were represented by the candlesticks and stars?

Challenge Text: "I am — and —, the first and the —; and what thou seest write in a —, and send it unto the seven —, which are in —." Rev. 1: (9)

What It Means. This strange vision that came to the last and oldest Apostle, in a time of sore trouble and persecution, is not to be studied because it was supernatural, or because it was foretold that the Saviour would come again to John, or that we might know the meaning of golden candlesticks and shining stars. Far from these is the reason of our study. It is to set before the mind and heart of all Christians who shall read these lines that Jesus Christ is in the world, clothed with infinite power, filled with infinite love, walking in the midst of the churches as their great ever-living Head and giving to them His most watchful care.

DR. H. M. HAMILL.

THE MESSAGE TO THE CHURCHES.

He that hath an ear, let him hear what the Spirit saith unto the

To him
that overcometh will I give to

of life, which is in the midst of the paradise of God. He that overcometh, the same shall be in white raiment;

and I will not blot out his name
out of the book of life, but I will confess his name before my Father, and

Him
that overcometh
will I make a

in
the

of my God,
and he shall go no more out:
and I will write upon him the name of my God, and the name of the

of my God,
which is new Jerusalem,
which cometh
down out of heaven from my God: and I will write upon him my new name.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS REVELATION, CHAPS. 2 AND 3.

Prayer: Thy Church, O Lord, is the centre of our hopes, the chief solace of our sorrows, the unfailing fountain of our piety, and the inspiration to our labors. Bless our ministers and church managers; give unction to our teachers; and add many souls to Thy Kingdom through their service. Amen.

"I love Thy church, O Lord,
Her walls before Thee stand,
Dear as the apple of Thine eye
And graven on Thy hand.
Beyond my highest joy
I prize her heavenly ways,
Her sweet communion, solemn vows,
Her hymns of love and praise."

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: Time, A. D. 95. Place, Isle of Patmos. Person, John the Apostle in exile, under the persecution of Domitian of the Roman empire.

Scripture Setting. Precious is the death of His saints. Psalm 116:15. The saints shall take the Kingdom. Dan. 7:18. Christ will be glorified in His saints. 2 Thess. 1:10. A new Heaven and a new earth. Rev. 21:1. The Heavenly City of the saints. Rev. 21:10-27.

Life and Conduct Setting. 1. Every church member is a factor in the church's success. 2. There is no such thing in the Kingdom of God as collective responsibility. The Kingdom rests upon individuals. 3. The weak church members are the measure of a church. 4. Nothing so cripples a church's success as fanatics and faddists. 5. God prefers an outright sinner to a milk-and-water saint.

THE GOOD AND BAD IN CHURCH LIFE.

The Church of Ephesus. Paul founded it, coming first to Ephesus on his second missionary tour and finding only a handful of John the Baptist's disciples. He taught in the school of Tyrannus and on his third tour served Ephesus three years, thus building up the great mother church of Asia Minor. The city was rich, of great commercial importance, a centre of paganism, witchcraft and magic, and famous for the temple of Diana. In three years Paul had broken the power of Diana and wrought a religious reformation. Then came Timothy and John as pastors in succession and the Ephesian church multiplied itself in smaller churches throughout Ionia.

John's message from Christ to this church was one of sadness and warning. The membership had grown cold and neglectful, but for the sake of its former great name and work and its loyalty to the truth, repentance is urged upon them. The Nicolaitanes, whose doctrine was hated by the Ephesian church, held the old corrupting Gnostic doctrine that sin is in matter only and that therefore one could use his body in vile licentiousness yet keep clean in spirit.

The Church of Smyrna. Fifty miles nearly, north of Ephesus, lay Smyrna, on the sea or so near it as to be the finest harbor of western Asia. By whom the church here was founded is not known, probably by some one or more from Ephesus. A great Roman postroad connected the two cities, and it was easy for Christians of Ephesus in Paul's pastorate to have organized the Smyrna church.

Our Lord's message to this church was full of high praise, with not a note of censure, the noblest message received by any one of the seven churches. Full of labor, of persecution and of poverty, nevertheless the Smyrna church was "rich" in spiritual power and service. Greater persecution would follow, but the greater honor and the crown of life should be its reward.

The Church at Pergamos. Sixty miles northeast of Smyrna was Pergamos, once a famous capital. It had a temple to Eesculapius, whose symbol was a serpent, to which very many superstitiously came for healing. The partisans of this god and temple were exceeding bitter against Christianity and slew Antipas, the reputed Christian bishop of Pergamos.

This church is warmly commended, but incurs one rebuke—it had too patiently tolerated within its membership, followers of Baalim and of the Nicolaitanes, the two forms of corrupt and licentious worship. Baal worship was Shemitic in origin, while the doctrine of the Nicolaitanes was Aryan. The former was a kind of nature-worship, with Baal and Astarte as male and female deities. Baal was god of all sexual generation in nature, and his temples were served by prostitutes, and licentiousness was an act of religion. If possible, the worship of Astarte was even more degrading. The Nicolaitanes were different only in their origin and doctrines, chief of which was the doctrine that all evil resided in matter. They grew to be as licentious as the followers of Baal, and were corruptors of the church at Pergamos.

The Church at Thyatira. To the southeast of Pergamos, a little off from the great Roman road that led to Sardis, was the flourishing manufacturing city of Thyatira, planted by Alexander the Great after he had expelled the Persians from Ionia. The city was originally peopled by Macedonians, Alexander's countrymen. The Lydia whom Paul found at Philippi was from Thyatira.

The message to the Thyatiran church strongly commends its charity, service, faith and patience, but sharply condemns "that woman Jezebel," a real feminine personage, styled Jezebel because her infamy as a corrupting teacher and example to the Christians of Thyatira resembled the wicked Jezebel, wife of king Ahab. She had been warned, but had continued her evil course, winning disciples even from the membership of the church, which was now ordered to put an end to her evil and seductive work under the guise of Christianity.

The Church at Sardis. Thirty miles to the southeast of Thyatira was the renowned "Queen of Asia Minor," the rich and prosperous city of Sardis. Here Cræsus, famed for his riches, once ruled, and later came the great Christian bishop Melito, renowned for his learning. A country exceedingly fertile surrounded the city, but not a trace of its ancient greatness remains to our time.

The message to John concerning this church of deadness, that "I will come on thee as a thief," has been abundantly fulfilled. Only the site of the once great city and church can be identified. Warned to "strengthen the things which remain," to "hold fast and repent," they were given time and encouragement, but in vain. The "few names that have not defiled their garments" could not save the church or the city from being "blotted out."

The promise of the Lord that these unsoiled saints should "walk with him in white" has long ago been fulfilled, but the heart grows inexpressibly sad over the failure of the others to heed the warning that came so tenderly to them by the pen of John. Over this memorable city and church can be written the epistle, "Blotted out—the church at Sardis, whose one memory worth keeping is of its few undefiled saints."

The Church of Philadelphia. Due east of Sardis, between river and mountain, the Roman road ran to Philadelphia, the site of another of the seven churches. The name signifies "brotherly love," but it originated with its founder, Attalus II., king of Pergamos. The city lay in the noted earthquake district, and was often a victim of earthquake visits, once being overthrown and well nigh destroyed. The soil of the surrounding district was famous for its production of grapes and other fruits, and the modern city is still noted for wheat, cotton and fruits.

The church had a "little strength," whether in membership or spiritual power is meant seems not certain, yet with singular emphasis the church is commended because it had "kept the word of Christ" and had not "denied His name" amid all persecutions that had befallen it. Their persecutors evidently were from the "synagogue of the Jews" in the city, to whom the message gives warning. Of all the seven churches, this one alone at Philadelphia, while not receiving unstinted praise, yet has the honor of meriting not a word of reproof or condemnation. The comforting promise was made to the church that the Saviour "would keep them in the hour of temptation which should come upon all the world."

Almost alone of all the churches, this least of them in numbers has been singularly preserved throughout the centuries. Gibbons, the historian, says: "The desolation of Ephesus is complete; Laodicea is now peopled with wolves; Sardis is a miserable village; the God of Mohammed is invoked at Pergamos and Thyatira. Philadelphia alone has been saved by prophecy or courage."

The Church of Laodicea. The rich and powerful city of Laodicea, capital of the province of Phrygia, lay sixty miles southeast of Philadelphia, and is the last of the seven churches to whom the Divine message came through the Apostle. It was a magnificent Roman city, founded in the third century B. C. by Antiochus II., and was much favored by Roman emperors. It had its famous theatres and aqueducts, and its ruins in modern times show its ancient splendor. It had a church "rich in goods but poor in faith," a "lukewarm church that was neither hot nor cold." Riches, luxury and ease had begotten neglect of Christian duty, and it was a church of well-to-do backsliders.

Most severe and direct of our Lord's rebukes is His Word to this proud and profitless church: "I will spew thee out of my mouth," or more accurately, "I am about to spew thee out of my mouth." He counsels them to buy gold of character and white raiment of purity, and spiritual eye salve, that they may be saved from their lost and backslidden condition.

Quiz: 1. Which of the seven churches had a spotless name? 2. In what respect was it blameless? 3. Which church was being corrupted by a bad woman, and in what way? 4. Which church was blotted out, and why? 5. Why was the Laodicean church so sharply rebuked?

Challenge Text: "I know thy —, that thou art neither — nor —; I would those wert — or —." Rev. 3: (?)

Summing Up. 1. Out of seven churches, only two are without censure, though not as perfect as they might have been. 2. Two of the churches were careless as to heresies and corrupting teachers. 3. One church was dominated by a wicked woman. 4. Two suffered from the licentious doctrine of the Nicolaitanes. 5. One was dead but for a few faithful souls, and one had lost its first love and zeal.

DR. H. M. HAMILL.

After this I beheld,
and, lo,
a great

which no man could number,
of all nations,
and kindreds,
and people,
and tongues,
stood before the throne, and before the Lamb, clothed with white robes, and palms in their hands; And cried with a loud voice, saying, Salvation to our God which sitteth upon the throne, and unto the Lamb. And all the angels stood round about the

and about the

and the

and fell before the throne on their faces, and worshipped God. Saying, Amen. Blessing, and glory, and wisdom, and thanksgiving, and honour, and power, and might, be unto our God for ever and ever.

Amen.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS REVELATION 7:9-17.

Prayer: For all Thy saints, living or dead, we give Thee thanks, O Lord. For their pure lives and loyal service in Thy Kingdom we are debtors to them and to Thee, in that it has made our love stronger and our labors more abundant. When toil and life are done may we, too, pass from Thy church militant to join the company of Thy saints above. Amen.

"Who are these arrayed in white,
Brighter than the noonday sun,
Foremost of the sons of light, Nearest the eternal throne!"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: A part of the vision of the Apostle John, while in exile for righteousness' sake, on the Isle of Patmos, about A. D. 95.

Scripture Setting: The final judgment. Rev. 20:11-12. The resurrection. Rev. 20:13. The New Jerusalem. Rev. 21:2-3. The judgment of the righteous. Matt. 25:34-36. The judgment of the wicked. Matt. 25:41-43.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. Death is only the gateway to another existence, awaiting the resurrection. 2. There will be to all of us a literal and universal resurrection of the body. 3. Christ will be the final Judge of all men and angels. 4. The judgment will be according to the light each had on earth. 5. All who are saved through Christ will be given entrance into Heaven, and the wicked will be condemned to hell.

A PICTURE OF THE CITY OF GOD.

The Invisible Country. We make too much of what we call the "mystery of death." Our loved ones go from us through the gates of death, and we robe ourselves in black and think and speak of them as if they were wandering to and fro in some strange land, with small prospect of our meeting them again. We cry for the "touch of the vanished hand, the sound of the voice that is still"; and though we profess to be Christians and believers in the promises of Christ we show little real faith in His repeated declaration of a life of infinite peace and joy beyond the grave. There is not much of "mystery" about it, if we take the Bible for it. In both Old and New Testaments, particularly in the words of Christ and Paul, we have abundant testimony to the fact that "in the Father's house are many mansions," and that a "place" has been prepared for each of us who bear the mark of the blood of Jesus Christ.

One trouble has been that the doctrine of the resurrection, of the recognition of and reunion with our loved ones in the world to come, of their real and vital happiness in that unknown land where they await our coming, has been too little preached and taught from pulpit and Sunday School pew in the terms the Scriptures use in speaking of them. We have made a "mystery" too often of what the Bible plainly sets forth.

The Dead in Christ. Between the redeemed and those who die without Christ there is a great gulf fixed, across which none may pass. Our Lord's parable of Dives and Lazarus clearly determines this. Dives sought to send warning to his brothers yet living in the flesh not to come to that place to which he himself had been assigned; and Abraham and Lazarus as types of the saved are represented as in a state of happiness awaiting the resurrection.

That the redeemed do not at death come into the full enjoyment of the blessings of eternity is clearly taught in the Scriptures. At the day of judgment their bodies and spirits shall be reunited and at that day not only the redeemed but the lost shall receive their final reward. To His disciples just before His death Jesus said, "In my Father's house are many mansions. If it were not so I would have told you. I go to prepare a place for you, and if I go and prepare a place for you, I will come again and receive you unto Myself that where I am, there ye may be also." And to the thief on the cross He said, "Today shalt thou be with Me in Paradise."

The Resurrection. Nothing concerning the life to come is more clearly taught in the Scriptures than the doctrine of the resurrection. In the Old Testament are many references to it, and one could construct out of the various passages relating to it a full though less complete and vivid picture of what the resurrection will be. In the New Testament, however, with the word of our Lord, confirmed and elaborated by Paul and Peter and John, there is no warrant or excuse for one misunderstanding or perverting the doctrine.

"The hour is coming," Jesus said, "in the which all that are in their graves shall hear His voice, and shall come forth." When He had risen from the dead, He appeared before His affrighted and skeptical disciples, saying to them: "Behold my hands and my feet, that it is I myself." If it be said that this body of His which He showed was afterward changed in some glorious way at His ascension, the answer is that it was the same body that was crucified, entombed and resurrected and glorified—always the identical body.

The Judgment. The one tremendous tragedy of the world's history was the crucifixion of Christ, but that great day of suffering will find its awful parallel in the day of final judgment, at which all the mighty host of humanity throughout all generations shall come to be judged for the deeds done in the body by Jesus Christ as Judge. Any other day of greatness in the history of the race will be as dust in the balance compared to this last day and scene in human history. Our Lord, with Paul, Peter and John, have painted the picture of this judgment. Paul declares that "the Lord Himself shall descend from Heaven with a shout, with the voice of the archangel, and with the trumpet of God; and the dead in Christ shall rise first; then we which are alive and remain shall be caught up together with them in the clouds to meet the Lord in the air."

Peter fills in the picture with these words: "The day of the Lord will come as a thief in the night; in the which the heavens shall pass away with a great noise, and the elements shall melt with fervent heat; the earth also and the works that are therein shall be burnt up.... Nevertheless, we, according to His promise, look for new heavens and a new earth."

Old Testament Saints. John's vision of the judgment and of the saints who passed from it into Heaven is full of magnificent symbolism. The "four angels," representing the goings forth of Divine power, the "four corners," representing the four points of the compass, command a silence in wind and sea and tree, that there might be peace and quiet while the "servants of our God" shall be "sealed in their foreheads." The mark of redemption is to be put, figuratively, on all the redeemed.

First of the mighty host come all those who constitute the saints of the Old Testament church. They knew not Christ in the flesh as when He was on the earth or in the record of the New Testament as we of later time know Him. With imperfect knowledge, though with obedience and trust, as members of the church of Judaism or of the Patriarchal age, they lived up to the light of revelation given to them and are accounted worthy to stand with the New Testament saints.

The New Testament Saints. Along with the saved Israel and the Jewish church of the Old Testament, is a vast multitude whom no man can number constituting the redeemed saints of the Christian church, together probably with all the saved of all time who are not "of the circumcision" or of Christianity, but who by living up to their knowledge are given place among the redeemed. They are clothed in the white robes that symbolize Christ's righteousness, and in their hands they carry palms in token of the victory they have won through Christ. They represent all time, all classes, all nations, saved by the "blood of the Lamb."

Among them are innumerable children whose little lives went out in the dawn of life; young men and maidens who died before the battle of life had well begun; and many veterans of the cross who had fought a good fight and had finished their course. When one recalls that the two hundred generations of the redeemed are of this vast Old and New Testament multitude, he will realize the truth of the prophecy that Christ "shall see of the travail of His soul and be satisfied."

The Heavenly Chorus. Music, as on earth, will be one of the joys of Heaven, though without the minor notes of pain and sorrow that mar the hymns of the church militant. John's vision of Heaven includes strikingly the great chorus of the redeemed as led by the angels and the twenty-four elders representing the church of Moses and of Christ merged into one. They surround the throne in their spotless robes and with waving palms of victory they sing:

"Salvation to our God,
Which sitteth upon the throne;
And unto the Lamb."

Then the angels and elders falling prone upon their faces join in the refrain:

"Amen.

Blessing, and glory, and wisdom and thanksgiving,
And honor and power and might Be unto our God forever and ever.
Amen."

Then a clear celestial voice rings out the cry,
"What are these which are arrayed in white robes?"

And the answer peals forth:
"These are they which came out of great tribulation
And have washed their robes and made them white,
In the blood of the Lamb."

Quiz. 1. What churches are represented in John's vision of Heaven? 2. Why is the multitude of Christianity so much greater than the other? 3. What are signified by white robes and palms? 4. What great tribulation of the saints is meant?

Challenge Text. "And God shall wipe away all — from their —; and there shall be no more —, neither — nor — neither shall there be any more —." Rev. 21: (?)

Heart Truths. 1. A day in Heaven will compensate for a lifetime here. 2. We will meet many in Heaven we did not expect, and miss some we counted on. 3. Our greatest surprise will be that we ourselves are permitted to go there. 4. Any place will be Heaven which has no death, nor tears.

DR. H. M. HAMILL.

THE GREAT INVITATION.

And I John saw these things, and heard them. And when I had heard and seen, I

before
the feet
of the

which shewed
me these things.
Then saith he unto me,
See thou do it not: for
I am thy fellow-servant,
and of thy brethren the

and of them which keep the sayings
of this book:
worship God.
And he saith unto me, Seal not the sayings of the prophecy of this book: for the time is at hand. He that is unjust, let him be unjust still: and he which is filthy, let him be filthy still: and he that is righteous, let him be righteous

still: and he that is holy, let him be holy still. And behold, I come quickly; and my reward is with me, to give every man according as his work shall be. I am Alpha and Omega, the beginning and the end, the first and the last. Blessed are they that do his commandments, that they may have right to the

and may enter in through
the

into the city. For without are dogs, and sorcerers, and whoremongers, and murderers, and idolaters, and whosoever loveth and maketh a lie.

THE SCRIPTURE LESSON IS REVELATION 22:8-21.

Prayer: From childhood unto age Thou art calling us into Thy Kingdom, O Lord, and none of Thy children are beyond Thy love and mercy. Grant that all we who have heard and heeded Thy invitation may extend it unto others. Hasten Thou the time when all those beyond the sound of Thy Gospel shall have heard the message and turned their steps homeward to their Father's house. For Jesus' sake, Amen.

"Sinners, turn; why will ye die?
God, your Saviour, asks you why;
God, who did your souls retrieve,
Died Himself, that ye might live,—
Will you let Him die in vain, Crucify your Lord again?
Why, ye ransomed sinners, why
Will ye slight His grace and die?"

THE SUBJECT IN ITS RELATIONS.

Historical Setting: About A. D. 95, on the Isle of Patmos, the conclusion of John's vision as contained in the book of Revelation.

Scripture Setting: The call to Abraham. Gen. 12:1. The call to Moses. Ex. 3:4. The call to Israel. Joshua 24:14-15. John the Baptists' call to repentance. Matt. 3:1-2. Our Lord's invitation. Matt. 11:28-30.

Life and Conduct Setting: 1. God sets a limit to His mercy and gives place to justice. 2. Every man will receive judgment according to his light and opportunity. 3. Heaven is for those who "do the commandments" of Christ. 4. No human being, even in heathen lands, will fail to receive Christ's invitation either by the mouth of His ministers or by the call of the Holy Spirit to the human conscience. 5. The last word of the Bible is a warning to those who would pervert it.

THE LAST WORD OF THE BIBLE.

The Last Apostle. Nearly a hundred years had John the beloved lived. He was the last of the Twelve. His brother James had been first to go, under the sword of Herod. Peter had perished at Rome under the axe of Nero, at the same time that Paul had suffered martyrdom. John had been the "baby Apostle," a blood cousin to Jesus, a young man of spirit and temper, and of high ideals. Our Lord had called him and James, Boanerges, "sons of thunder," but John had learned to control his spirit. He was the one Apostle who had dared to stand at the cross while Jesus was dying, and to him our Lord had committed His mother at death. The old tradition is that she lived twelve years more with John, who then set forth upon his great ministry, first at Jerusalem, then at Samaria, later at Ephesus, and last as an exile at Patmos. The "son of thunder" had become in his old age the "apostle of love," who calls upon the church as his "little children" to "love one another."

The Last Book. Nothing could more fittingly close the great Book of God than this vision which John was given to see as last of the Apostles and sacred writers. It bears much the same relation to the New Testament that the book of Daniel does to the Old Testament. That book of prophesy looked forward especially to the coming of the Kingdom of Christ, and its displacement of all other kingdoms. Revelation starts with the close of the first Christian century and carries us in prophetic vision to the end of time, through the ever-changing but all-conquering leadership of Christ. It looks into the world to come, to the "new Heaven and new earth," to the fixing of the last seal upon human history and destiny.

The Last Word. More fitting still is the last word in this last book of the Holy Bible. After the messages of warning, rebuke and commendation with which the book began, and the mighty movements depicted on earth and in Heaven in the middle portion of the book, the last chapter and last words turn away from the battles of the Kingdom as John's vision pictured them and with great solemnity and tenderness renews the invitation to sinning men to come to Christ and be saved before it is eternally too late. By every plea and in many mouths this invitation had echoed through the pages of the Old and New Testaments, and now with greater power it closes this last book of Revelation, as the curtain rings down before the Judgment. Surely the Word of God has not left man in darkness as to his place in this world and his prospects in the next. And if the tragedy of life ends with any soul unsaved it will not be because the man had no chance. From the first book of Genesis to this closing chapter of Revelation there is scarcely a page on which there is not the sign of the blood of Calvary and the plea of God to lost men.

The Holy City. Not the least of the vision of John was the glimpse of the beauty and glory of the New Jerusalem, "coming down from God out of Heaven, prepared as a bride adorned for her husband." Into it, through its gates of pearl, along its golden streets, upon the banks of the river of life and beneath the tree of life, enter the vast company of the redeemed saints, each with the seal of the Lamb upon him. Without, in the eternal darkness and desolation of the lost, are the workers of wickedness and those who rebel against God and reject the salvation provided through His Son—the unclean and impenitent haters of God and man, who can no longer vex and oppress the men and women who by the grace of Jesus Christ spent their years on earth trying to make it the brighter and better for their sojourn. Not the least of the delights of the Holy City will be the unbroken fellowship with the true, the beautiful and the good!

The Morning Star. Then in words of singular beauty and charm Jesus Himself speaks His last word in the closing of His vision to John. The New Jerusalem, a glittering picture, with its light celestial, and its gates and streets resplendent, passes from view, as Jesus points to Himself as the “bright and morning star,” the “root and the offspring of David.” This new world, says one, is the morning of an endless existence, and in its gray dawn happy is the man upon whose faith beams this “bright and morning star,” the promise and harbinger of an eternal day. “I have sent mine angel,” He says, “to testify unto you these things in the churches.” And now that the multi-form vision, stretching through many centuries of time, ushering in eternity and its mysteries, is ending, and John’s Master and Saviour passes from sound and sight in this great apocalypse, the words of the “great invitation” are spoken.

The Spirit and the Bride. Jesus had comforted the hearts of the eleven in the upper room the night before His death by telling them that His going away would be the signal for the coming of the Comforter, the Holy Spirit, who should “reprove the world of sin and of righteousness and of judgment to come.” The mighty Spirit came in great convicting and converting power at Pentecost, and again and again in Jerusalem and Samaria and Judea and to the ends of the earth. Though only two generations had passed since the Cross, millions of men and women had been turned by the Spirit from sin to holiness, and in all the great cities of the world the white standard of the Christian church was uplifted. The Spirit had been saying Come, and very many had heard and heeded the invitation. The church, too, the Heaven-born “bride,” had been organized and extended in all lands, with its houses of worship, its inspired Scriptures, its holy ordinances, its Apostles, evangelists, pastors and teachers, and the Gospel was everywhere proclaimed, and the church’s invitation to lost men had accompanied the call of the Holy Spirit.

The Christian’s Obligation. Not only do the Spirit and the church, its great and Divine Head leading the way, invite men into the Kingdom below, and finally into the New Jerusalem above, but every Christian man and woman, because they have heard and accepted the invitation, are under bonds to reveal and extend the invitation to all who are without the Kingdom and the church. Every saved soul must become a soul-winner.

Whosoever. As if all other invitations to salvation—of Jesus, of the Holy Spirit, of the church, of every individual Christian—were not enough, there rings out like a trumpet the “whosoever will” as the final all-inclusive invitation to “come” into the Holy City. No one hungry for salvation but he shall be filled. No one athirst but he may enter and drink of the river of life.

The Last Seal. Then comes the angel and puts his last seal upon the closed book of revelation and inspiration in these most solemn words of warning: “If any man shall take away from the words of the book of this prophecy, God shall take away his part out of the book of life and out of the Holy City.”

Quiz. 1. Who are within the Holy City? 2. What classes are to be without it? 3. In what sense is Jesus the bright and morning star? 4. From whence does the great invitation to salvation come? 5. How did Jesus warn against disturbing the Holy Bible?

Challenge Text. “And they shall see His —, and His — shall be in their foreheads.” Rev. 22: (?)

Heart to Heart. As you lay down this book, having read of God’s great Book, of His wonderful ways in human history, of His Son Jesus Christ and His death on the cross for sinners, can you say truly: “I have read with gratitude and profit. I have accepted the invitation of the church, I have been born from above, I seek the New Jerusalem as my eternal home.”

DR. H. M. HAMILL.

N. B. — 64 pages are here added to account for the full page half-tone engravings and descriptions of same; also little biographies of old masters and pages in New Testament of this volume not counted in the regular folios making a total of 639 pages.

International Sunday School Lessons Calendar

1925-1927

CONTAINED IN

"The New Bible Teacher"

Before the organization of the International Sunday School Association, every denomination selected its own Sunday School Lessons. This resulted in poor work and much dissatisfaction; hence it was suggested by several great Sunday School workers, that if an arrangement could be made whereby all Sunday Schools would use the same Lessons, a great deal more progress could be made in Sunday School and Church work.

About fifty-three years ago representatives of the different denominations met and organized the INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL ASSOCIATION. They agreed to study the same Sunday School Lessons in all Sunday Schools regardless of denomination and location. So today all Protestant churches whether Methodist, Baptist, Presbyterian, etc., study the same Sunday School Lesson every Sunday throughout the entire Christian world.

During this period of over 53 years the International Sunday School Lessons have covered the Bible about eight times. The International Lesson Committee decided at its meeting held in Chicago, April 6th, 1915, to issue the Sunday School Lessons for an eight year period. We print herewith the LESSONS from 1925-1927 inclusive, giving the DATE of the LESSONS, SUBJECT OF LESSONS AND PAGE IN THE CHOSEN WORD METHOD.

TEMPERANCE LESSONS. For the convenience of Church workers it was thought advisable by the COMMITTEE who arranged the LESSONS to put together under one head all the TEMPERANCE LESSONS whether in the Old or New Testament. These will be found on pages 567-656 in the Old Testament of THE NEW BIBLE TEACHER.

In order to render the greatest service to SUNDAY SCHOOL WORKERS AND CHURCH PEOPLE, the INTERNATIONAL CONSTRUCTIVE S. S. LEAGUE publish every three years a CALENDAR showing the Date, Subject of the Lesson and the Page on which it is found. These calendars are furnished FREE for all time to come to the users of THE NEW BIBLE TEACHER. When the LESSONS in this calendar are exhausted, write the League at the address given below and receive a calendar FREE containing the Sunday School Lessons for the next three years.

INTERNATIONAL CONSTRUCTIVE S. S. LEAGUE
318 WEST WASHINGTON ST.,
CHICAGO.

The International Sunday School Lessons

IMPROVED UNIFORM SERIES: COURSE FOR 1925

PREPARED BY THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON COMMITTEE

The Life of Jesus (Harmony of the Gospels)

FIRST QUARTER

(Third Quarter of a Nine Months' Course)

| Date    |                                                  | Page in the New BibleTeacher where subjectis found. |             |
|---------|--------------------------------------------------|-------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|
| Jan. 4  | Christ's Triumphal Entry (Luk. 19:29-44)         | 242-244                                                     | (New Test.) |
| Jan. 11 | The Last Judgment (Matt. 25:31-46)               | 275-277                                                     | "           |
| Jan. 18 | The Lord's Supper (Luk. 22:7-30)                 | 284-286                                                     | "           |
| Jan. 25 | Jesus Comforts His Disciples (Jno. 14:1-31)      | 293-295                                                     | "           |
| Feb. 1  | The Vine and the Branches (Jno. 15:1-27)         | 290-292                                                     | "           |
| Feb. 8  | Christ's Intercessory Prayer (Jno. 17:1-26)      | 296-298                                                     | "           |
| Feb. 15 | Jesus Gethsemane (Mark 14:32-42)                 | 299-301                                                     | "           |
| Feb. 22 | Good Citizenship (Temp. Les.) (Rom. 13:1-14)     | 626-628                                                     | (Old Test.) |
| Mar. 1  | Christ Before Pilate (Matt. 27:11-31)            | 311-313                                                     | (New Test.) |
| Mar. 8  | The Saviour on the Cross (Luk. 23:33-46)         | 317-320                                                     | "           |
| Mar. 15 | Our Lord's Resurrection (Jno. 20:1-18)           | 324-326                                                     | "           |
| Mar. 22 | The Forty Days and His Ascension (Luk. 24:13-53) | 345-347                                                     | "           |
| Mar. 29 | REVIEW: Closing Period of Christ's Ministry.     |                                                             |             |

The Spread of Christianity (Studies in the Acts and the Epistles)

SECOND QUARTER

(First Quarter of a Nine Months' Course)

|         |                                                            |         |             |
|---------|------------------------------------------------------------|---------|-------------|
| Apr. 5  | The Blessing of Pentecost (Acts 2)                         | 351-353 | (New Test.) |
| Apr. 12 | The Cripple at the Beautiful Gate (Acts 3)                 | 357-359 | "           |
| Apr. 19 | Life in the Early Church (Acts 4:1)                        | 354-356 | "           |
| Apr. 26 | Stephen the First Martyr (Acts 6:1)                        | 372-374 | "           |
| May 3   | The Benefits of Total Abstinence (Dan. 11:1-20) (1 Cor. 9) | 635-637 | (Old Test.) |
| May 10  | Philip and the Ethiopian Treasurer (Acts 8:26-39)          | 378-380 | (New Test.) |
| May 17  | Saul Becomes a Christian (Acts 9:1-9)                      | 381-383 | "           |
| May 24  | Saul Begins His Great Career (Acts 9:20-31)                | 384-386 | "           |
| May 31  | Peter at Lydda and Joppa (Acts 9:32-43)                    | 387-389 | "           |
| June 7  | Peter's Broadening Vision (Acts 10:1)                      | 390-392 | "           |
| June 14 | The Church in Antioch (Acts 11:19-30)                      | 396-398 | "           |
| June 21 | Peter Delivered from Prison (Acts 12:1-24)                 | 399-401 | "           |
| June 28 | REVIEW: Stories Retold                                     |         |             |

THIRD QUARTER

(Second Quarter of a Nine Months' Course)

|          |                                                   |         |             |
|----------|---------------------------------------------------|---------|-------------|
| July 5   | The Beginning of Foreign Missions (Acts 12:25)    | 402-404 | (New Test.) |
| July 12  | The Gospel in Antioch of Pisidia (Acts 13:13-52)  | 405-407 | "           |
| July 19  | The Gospel in Lystra (Acts 14:1-28)               | 408-410 | "           |
| July 26  | The Council at Jerusalem (Acts 15:1-35)           | 411-413 | "           |
| Aug. 2   | The Epistle of James (Jam. 1:19-27)               | 546-548 | "           |
| Aug. 9   | Beginning the Second Missionary Tour (Acts 15:36) | 414-416 | "           |
| Aug. 16  | Temperance Lesson (Gal. 5:13-24)                  | 638-640 | (Old Test.) |
| Aug. 23  | The Macedonian Call (Acts 16:6-15)                | 414-416 | (New Test.) |
| Aug. 30  | Paul and the Phillipean Jailer (Acts 16:16-40)    | 417-419 | "           |
| Sept. 6  | Paul Writes to the Phillippians (Phil. 1-4)       | 508-509 | "           |
| Sept. 13 | Paul in Thessalonica and Berea (Acts 17:1-12)     | 420-422 | "           |
| Sept. 20 | Paul Writes to the Thessalonians (1 Thess. 1-5)   | 519-521 | "           |
| Sept. 27 | REVIEW: Stories Retold.                           |         |             |

FOURTH QUARTER

(Third Quarter of a Nine Months' Course)

|         |                                                                                  |         |             |
|---------|----------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------|-------------|
| Oct. 4  | Paul in Athens (Acts 17:16-34)                                                   | 423-425 | (New Test.) |
| Oct. 11 | Paul in Corinth (Acts 18:1-17)                                                   | 426-428 | "           |
| Oct. 18 | Paul Writes to the Corinthians (1 Cor. 12:1)                                     | 488-489 | "           |
| Oct. 25 | Paul in Ephesus (Acts 18:18)                                                     | 429-431 | "           |
| Nov. 1  | The Fight Against Strong Drink (World's Temperance Sunday) (Isa. 5, Eph. 6:1-20) | 597-599 | (Old Test.) |
| Nov. 8  | Paul's Farewell at Miletus (Acts 20:1-38)                                        | 435-427 | (New Test.) |
| Nov. 15 | Paul's Arrest at Jerusalem (Acts 21:17)                                          | 438-440 | "           |
| Nov. 22 | Paul Before Felix (Acts 23:1)                                                    | 450-452 | "           |
| Nov. 29 | Paul Before Agrippa (Acts 25:1)                                                  | 453-455 | "           |
| Dec. 6  | Paul's Voyage and Shipwreck (Acts 27:1-44)                                       | 456-459 | "           |
| Dec. 13 | Paul in Melita and Rome (Acts 28:1-31)                                           | 460-462 | "           |
| Dec. 20 | Paul's Summary of His Life (2 Tim. 3:10, 11)                                     | 528-533 | "           |
| Dec. 27 | REVIEW: From Athens to Rome.                                                     |         |             |

The International Sunday School Lessons

THE IMPROVED UNIFORM SERIES: COURSE FOR 1926

PREPARED BY THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON COMMITTEE

The Message of the Gospel According to John

FIRST QUARTER

| Date    |                                                                           | Page in the New BibleTeacher where subjectis found |             |
|---------|---------------------------------------------------------------------------|------------------------------------------------------------|-------------|
| Jan. 3  | The Son of God Becomes Man (Luk. 2) (Jno. 1:1-18).....                    | 16- 18                                                     | (New Test.) |
| Jan. 10 | Five Men Believe on Jesus (Luk. 3:15-17) (Jno. 1:19-51)...                | 34- 36                                                     | "           |
| Jan. 17 | Jesus and Nicodemus (Jno. 3:1-17).....                                    | 54- 56                                                     | "           |
| Jan. 24 | Jesus and the Samaritan Woman (Jno. 4:1-42).....                          | 57- 59                                                     | "           |
| Jan. 31 | Jesus Feeds Five Thousand Men (Jno. 6:1-71).....                          | 146-148                                                    | "           |
| Feb. 7  | Jesus Heals and Saves a Blind Man (Jno. 9:1-41).....                      | 179-181                                                    | "           |
| Feb. 14 | Jesus the Good Shepherd (Jno. 10:1-30).....                               | 182-184                                                    | "           |
| Feb. 21 | Jesus Raises Lazarus from the Dead (Jno. 11:1).....                       | 212-214                                                    | "           |
| Feb. 28 | Jesus Teaches Respect for Law (Temperance Lesson)(Matt. 22:7-22)..... | 254-256                                                    | "           |
| Mar. 7  | Jesus Washes His Disciples Feet (Jno. 13:1-17).....                       | 281-283                                                    | "           |
| Mar. 14 | Last Words of Jesus with His Disciples (Jno. 14-17).....                  | 287-289                                                    | "           |
| Mar. 21 | Jesus Dies and Rises from the Dead (Matt. 28) (Jno. 18:1).....            | 324-326                                                    | "           |
| Mar. 28 | REVIEW: The Gospel of John.                                               |                                                            |             |

SECOND QUARTER

|        |                                                                   |         |             |
|--------|-------------------------------------------------------------------|---------|-------------|
| Apr. 4 | Jesus appears to His Disciples (Easter Lesson) (Jno. 20:24) ..... | 333-335 | (New Test.) |
|--------|-------------------------------------------------------------------|---------|-------------|

Messages from Genesis

|         |                                                          |        |             |
|---------|----------------------------------------------------------|--------|-------------|
| Apr. 11 | The Story of Creation (Gen. 1:1).....                    | 27- 29 | (Old Test.) |
| Apr. 18 | The Beginning of Sin (Gen. 3:1-24).....                  | 33- 35 | "           |
| Apr. 25 | The Story of Cain and Abel (Gen. 4:1-26).....            | 36- 38 | "           |
| May 2   | God's Covenant with Noah (Gen. 5:28) (Gen. 6:17-20)..... | 39- 41 | "           |
| May 9   | Abram and the Kings (Gen. 12, 14:1-24).....              | 48- 50 | "           |
| May 16  | Abraham and the Strangers (Gen. 18:1-8).....             | 57- 59 | "           |
| May 23  | Isaac and His Wells (Gen. 26:12-25).....                 | 66- 68 | "           |
| May 30  | Jacob at Bethel (Gen. 27, 28).....                       | 72- 74 | "           |
| June 6  | Jacob and Esau (Gen. 25:19-34).....                      | 69- 71 | "           |
| June 13 | Joseph's Fidelity (Gen. 39:1-33).....                    | 81- 83 | "           |
| June 20 | Judah's Plea (Gen. 44:18 45:1-6).....                    | 87- 89 | "           |
| June 27 | REVIEW: What We Have Learned from the Book of Genesis.   |        |             |

Early Leaders of Israel: From Moses to Samuel.

THIRD QUARTER

(First Half of a Six Months' Course)

|          |                                                             |         |             |
|----------|-------------------------------------------------------------|---------|-------------|
| July 4   | Israel Enslaved in Egypt (Exo. 1:1-14).....                 | 99-101  | (Old Test.) |
| July 11  | Childhood and Education of Moses (Exo. 2:1-10).....         | 102-104 | "           |
| July 18  | The Call of Moses (Exo. 2:11).....                          | 105-107 | "           |
| July 25  | The Passover (Exo. 11:1).....                               | 114-116 | "           |
| Aug. 1   | The Deliverance at the Red Sea (Exo. 13:17-22).....         | 117-119 | "           |
| Aug. 8   | The Giving of the Manna (Exo. 16:1-36).....                 | 120-122 | "           |
| Aug. 15  | Jethro's Wise Counsel (Exo. 16, 18:1-27).....               | 121-123 | "           |
| Aug. 22  | The Ten Commandments: Duties to God (Exo. 19:1).....        | 123-125 | "           |
| Aug. 29  | The Ten Commandments: Duties to Man (Exo. 20:12-21).....    | 123-125 | "           |
| Sept. 5  | The Tent of Meeting (Exo. 32, 33).....                      | 126-128 | "           |
| Sept. 12 | Gifts for the Tabernacle (Exo. 35:4).....                   | 129-131 | "           |
| Sept. 19 | Obedience to Law (Temperance Lesson) (Lev. 10:1-3, 26)..... | 573-575 | "           |
| Sept. 26 | REVIEW: Early Leaders of Israel.                            |         |             |

Early Leaders of Israel: From Moses to Samuel.

FOURTH QUARTER

(Second Half of a Six Months' Course)

|         |                                                                                |         |             |
|---------|--------------------------------------------------------------------------------|---------|-------------|
| Oct. 3  | Israel Journeying Toward Canaan (Num. 9, 10:11-36).....                        | 141-143 | (Old Test.) |
| Oct. 10 | The Reports of the Spies (Num. 13:1).....                                      | 144-146 | "           |
| Oct. 17 | Moses Honored in His Death (Deut. 32:45-52) (Deut. 34:1-8).....                | 159-161 | "           |
| Oct. 24 | Joshua, Israel's New Leader (Num. 27:18-20) (Jos. 1:1-6).....                  | 164-166 | "           |
| Oct. 31 | The Evils of Strong Drink (World's Temperance Sunday)(Prov. 23:29-35)..... | 594-596 | "           |
| Nov. 7  | The Fall of Jericho (Josh. 6:12-20).....                                       | 173-175 | "           |
| Nov. 14 | Caleb's Faithfulness Rewarded (Josh. 14:6-15) (16:10-13).....                  | 179-181 | "           |
| Nov. 21 | Joshua Renewing the Covenant (Josh. 24:14-25).....                             | 185-187 | "           |
| Nov. 28 | Gideon and the Three Hundred (Jgs. 7:1-25).....                                | 193-195 | "           |
| Dec. 5  | Ruth and Naomi (Book of Ruth).....                                             | 199-201 | "           |
| Dec. 12 | The Boy Samuel (1 Sam. 1, 3).....                                              | 205-207 | "           |
| Dec. 19 | Samuel, the Just Judge (1 Sam. 7, 12).....                                     | 211-213 | "           |

OR

CHRISTMAS LESSON: The Saviour's Birth (Luk. 2:8-20). 16- 18 (New Test.)

Dec. 26 REVIEW: Moses to Samuel.

The International Sunday School Lessons

IMPROVED UNIFORM SERIES: COURSE FOR 1927

PREPARED BY THE INTERNATIONAL SUNDAY SCHOOL LESSON COMMITTEE.

Studies in Christian Life

FIRST QUARTER

Page in the New Bible Teacher where subject is found.

| Date    |                                                                 |         |             |
|---------|-----------------------------------------------------------------|---------|-------------|
| Jan. 2  | The Christian a Follower of Jesus (Mar. 1:16-20) (Phil. 2:5-11) | 510-512 | (New Test.) |
| Jan. 9  | The Standard of Christian Living (Luk. 6:27-48)                 | 102-104 | "           |
| Jan. 16 | The Christian's Use of the Bible (Deut. 6:4-9)                  | 156-158 | (Old Test.) |
|         | (2 Tim. 3:14-17)                                                | 528-530 | (New Test.) |
| Jan. 23 | Prayer in the Christian Life (Mar. 1:29-35)                     | 72-74   | "           |
| Jan. 30 | The Christian Overcoming Temptation (Luk. 4:1-13)               |         | "           |
|         | (Rom. 8:31-39)                                                  | 474-476 | "           |
| Feb. 6  | The Practice of Christian Stewardship (Matt. 25:1-30)           | 272-274 | "           |
| Feb. 13 | Making Our Homes Christian (Eph. 5:25) (Jno. 4:7-10)            | 561-563 | "           |
| Feb. 20 | Serving In and Through the Church (Matt. 5:13-16)               |         | "           |
|         | (1 Cor. 12:4-27)                                                | 488-489 | "           |
| Feb. 27 | Making the Community Christian (Temp. Les.) (Gal. 5:13-25)      | 638-640 | (Old Test.) |
| Mar. 6  | Sharing the good news (Acts 8:4-8)                              | 375-377 | (New Test.) |
| Mar. 13 | Making the World Christian (Matt. 28:16-20)                     | 342-344 | "           |
| Mar. 20 | The Christian's Hope (Jno. 14:1-3)                              | 287-289 | "           |
| Mar. 27 | REVIEW: Studies in the Christian Life.                          |         |             |

The Life and Letters of Peter

SECOND QUARTER

|         |                                                           |         |             |
|---------|-----------------------------------------------------------|---------|-------------|
| Apr. 3  | Peter Becomes a Disciple of Jesus (Mar. 1:14-34)          | 72-74   | (New Test.) |
| Apr. 10 | Peter's Lesson in Trust (Matt. 14:22-33)                  | 149-151 | "           |
| Apr. 17 | Peter's Great Confession (Matt. 16:13-24)                 | 161-163 | "           |
|         | OR                                                        |         |             |
|         | The Resurrection of the Lord Jesus (Easter Lesson)        |         |             |
|         | (Matt. 28:1-10)                                           | 324-326 | "           |
| Apr. 24 | Peter at the Transfiguration (Matt. 17:1-7) (Mar. 9:2-10) | 167-169 | "           |
| May 1   | Peter's Denial and Repentance (Mar. 14:53, 54)            | 308-310 | "           |
| May 8   | Peter and the Risen Lord (Matt. 28:3-8) (Jno. 20:1-10)    | 324-326 | "           |
| May 15  | Peter at Pentecost (Acts 2)                               | 351-353 | "           |
| May 22  | Peter Heals the Lame Man (Acts 3:1)                       | 357-359 | "           |
| May 29  | Peter Undaunted by Persecution (Acts 5:17-42)             | 366-368 | "           |
| June 5  | Peter Preaching to Gentiles (Acts 10, 11)                 | 392-398 | "           |
| June 12 | Peter Delivered from Prison (Acts 12:1-17)                | 399-401 | "           |
| June 19 | Peter Teaches Good Citizenship (Temperance Lesson)        |         |             |
|         | (1 Pet. 2:11-17, 4:3-9)                                   | 647-649 | (Old Test.) |
| June 26 | REVIEW: Life and Letters of Peter.                        |         |             |

Early Kings and Prophets of Israel: From Samuel to Isaiah.

THIRD QUARTER

(First Half of a Six Months' Course)

|          |                                                          |         |             |
|----------|----------------------------------------------------------|---------|-------------|
| July 3   | Saul Chosen King (1 Sam. 9 & 11)                         | 217-219 | (Old Test.) |
| July 10  | Samuel's Farewell (1 Sam. 12)                            | 220-222 | "           |
| July 17  | Samuel Anoints David (1 Sam. 16:1-13)                    | 228-230 | "           |
| July 24  | David and Goliath (1 Sam. 17)                            | 231-233 | "           |
| July 31  | David and Jonathan (1 Sam. 18:1-4) (1 Sam. 20:39-41)     | 237-239 | "           |
| Aug. 7   | David Spares Saul (1 Sam. 26) (1 Sam. 24:8-11)           | 240-242 | "           |
| Aug. 14  | David Brings the Ark to Jerusalem (2 Sam. 2:1-4) (6:2-4) | 252-254 | "           |
| Aug. 21  | God's Promise to David (1 Chr. 17) (2 Sam. 7:8-13)       | 255-257 | "           |
| Aug. 28  | Nathan Leads David to Repentance (2 Sam. 11:1, 12:1-15)  |         | "           |
| Sept. 4  | Solomon's Wise Choice (1 Ki. 3:4-15)                     | 270-272 | "           |
| Sept. 11 | Solomon Dedicates the Temple (1 Ki. 8)                   | 276-278 | "           |
| Sept. 18 | The Kingdom Divided (1 Ki. 12:1-24)                      | 285-287 | "           |
| Sept. 25 | REVIEW: The Early Kings of Israel.                       |         |             |

Early Kings and Prophets of Israel: From Samuel to Isaiah.

FOURTH QUARTER

(Second Half of Six Months' Course)

|         |                                                                  |         |             |
|---------|------------------------------------------------------------------|---------|-------------|
| Oct. 2  | Elijah On Mount Carmel (1 Ki. 18)                                | 303-305 | (Old Test.) |
| Oct. 9  | Elijah Hears God's Voice (1 Ki. 19)                              | 306-308 | "           |
| Oct. 16 | Elijah in Naboth's Vineyard (1 Ki. 21)                           | 309-311 | "           |
| Oct. 23 | The Call of the Prophet (1 Ki. 19:19, 20)                        | 306-308 | "           |
| Oct. 30 | Amos Denounces Sin (Amos 2:4, 6:1-4) (World's Temperance Sunday) | 611-613 | "           |
| Nov. 6  | Amos Pleads for Justice (Amos 5, 7)                              | 548-550 | "           |
| Nov. 13 | Hosea Preaches God's Love (Hos. 6, 11, 14)                       | 542-544 | "           |
| Nov. 20 | Micah Champions the Oppressed (Mic. 2-6)                         | 557-559 | "           |
| Nov. 27 | Isaiah Teaches True Worship (Isa. 1:1-20)                        | 488-490 | "           |
| Dec. 4  | Isaiah Teaches Right Living (Isa. 3:1, 55:1-7)                   | 506-508 | "           |
| Dec. 11 | Isaiah Counsels Rulers (Isa. 7:3-8, 31, 36 and 37)               | 491-493 | "           |
| Dec. 18 | REVIEW: The Early Prophets of Israel.                            |         |             |
| Dec. 25 | Christmas Lesson (Luk. 2:1-20)                                   | 16-18   | (New Test.) |

